SCENE OF CHEMICAL EXPLOSION — This outside view of the Philtex Plant appears relatively calm despite the fact that hours before ten employees were injured in an explosion of two ethylene gas cylinders. Two of the injured were sent to the burn center at Dallas Parkland Hospital suffering from chemical burns to 30 to 40 percent of their bodies. (Photo by Ed Sackett)

Explosion injuries increased to ten

PHILLIPS — The number of injured in the explosion Monday morning at the Philtex plant here has increased to ten with two employees listed in stable condition at a Dallas burn center today suffering from burns to 30 to 40 percent of their bodies.

The badly burned men were identified by Phillips spokesman Norm Berkley as 62-year-old Ed Huxley, Box 1292, Fritch and Martin (Marty) Nash, 60 of 656 Evergreen in Borger.

Also hospitalized from injuries sustained in the two blasts were Bruce Gordon, 28, of Box 762 Borger and 29-year-old Mary Chavez of 1113 Elmore of Borger.

Gordon is in satisfactory condition today after undergoing surgery at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, according to a hospital spokesperson.

Kept for observation at North Plains Hospital in Borger, Chavez was released today. She was reported by Vernell Meador, head nurse, to have been suffering from shock when admitted to the hospital.

Kathy Balsler, 29, of 205 Wilhelm, Stinnett, Gilbert E. Williams, 58, of 301 Butadeno, Borger, Roger Sepulveda, 30, of 410 Baylor, Borger and Randy Dillard, 27, of 1 S Lamp, Phillips were treated and released for minor injuries.

Some of the injured were treated and released at the Phillips Medical Center, Berkley said. David Blakemore, 36, of 1417 Bluebonnet in Borger was sent to an Amarillo ophthalmologist as an out-patient after he sustained an eye injury in the accident, Berkley said.

Phillips officials do not know the cause of the explosion which injured the ten employees Monday.

"The two people we need to talk to to find out what happened are in Dallas," Berkley said. Huxley and Nash, employed by Phillips Petroleum as chemists, were apparently attempting to fill a five gallon cylinder with ethylene (ETO) gas at 9 a.m. Monday when the cylinder exploded, Berkley said. He said he did not know how they were filling the cylinders.

The cylinders were described by Berkley as like those used to hold helium for balloons or perhaps, like a diver's air tank.

"As I understand it," the Phillips spokesman said, several other plant workers from various departments ran to the scene to help the injured men when they heard the explosion.

"As the would-be rescuers arrived, he said, the second cylinder exploded, injuring at least six others.

"This has not been confirmed by anyone who was actually there," Berkley added. There were about four minutes between explosions, he said.

The cylinders were pressurized, Berkley said, but he did not know to what degree. Damage to the area was minimal, he added. Daniel Brown, 18, was working about 50 yards from the plant when the explosions occurred. "I heard it first," he said, "then I saw white smoke coming up over the building, then after the next explosion it was mixed with black smoke."

"I was about ready to run," he said. Roofers repairing the roof of a building near the explosion, began jumping off the roof or climbing down a nearby ladder, he said.

There was a "real strong smell," Brown said, "like chemicals."

"You still can get a whiff of it now and then," he added.

Investigation of the accident — the fourth at the Phillips complex in nine months — by officials from Phillips and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) has already begun, Berkley said.

Two men from the Phillips' main office in Bartlesville, Okla. arrived Monday afternoon, he said.

Berkley said a spokesperson from OSHA called at about 11:30 a.m. Monday and said a representative of the organization from Lubbock would be arriving today.

The Philtex plant — located across the street from the Phillips refinery — makes about 500 chemical products, plant officials said.

Several dozen residences are located near the chemical plant. No damage from Monday's explosions was reported, however.

Residents of the houses were notified by Phillips officials earlier this year to have the company houses moved to make way for expansion of the refinery.

One resident, Ethel Moore of 14 N. Addinsell, said she and her husband, Joe — a retired Phillips employee, have a lot, but are only thinking about moving.

The roof, ceiling and several windows of the Moore's home were damaged in the Jan. 20 explosion at the Phillips Refinery, she said.

Asked whether living near the unstable plant bothers her, Mrs. Moore replied, "I don't worry about it. I've been here 26 years."

When she heard the explosions Monday, Mrs. Moore said, "I just wondered what was going on again, wondered if it was another big one."

"You get like this after the first one," she said. Two persons were killed by a deadly gas released in an explosion in October of 1979. Another 14 people were injured in the mishap.

The Jan. 20 explosion of a cracking unit at the refinery injured forty-two persons, many residents of Phillips. Another explosion was reported on Jan. 24, but no one was injured.

Two fines levied against Phillips Petroleum are still being disputed by the company.

The October explosion cost Phillips $19,000 in fines from OSHA who charged the company did not enforce the use of gas masks.

The company also was fined $1,000 after the January explosions by OSHA who stated the Phillips failed to provide a safe work area for its employees.

56 Pampans register for draft

The registration in Pampa for the possibility of a future draft was completed the first day with 56 local 19- and 20-year-olds filling in the green federal forms.

"If this is what they want us to do, I don't mind at all," registrant Kevin Hall said.

Opinions expressed in the post office registration center sounded the same. There were no draft protests, and the local men, called upon to give their names for unknown future situations, did just that.

"It just has to be done," 19-year-old Larry Ketchum said.

"Some of the older Viet Nam veterans may be speaking out against the draft, but they have some bad memories connected with the war," Mark Langford said.

"But if they want us, it is my duty to go," Langford added. Postmaster J.D. Williams said that the registration process had not inconvenienced the postal workers at all. "We just count them and send them off."

In a rare government move, the registration forms were made simple to understand, and easy to fill out.

Registrants were reminded on the forms that this was not a draft and there were, at this time, no plans for the reinstatement for such a system.

The accompanying form, however, did explain how the registrant could file a deferment or exemption.

"There is no good answer to the problems of military manpower, we can only make the best out of a bad situation," according to George E. Reedy, former presidential assistant and member of the Selective Service Advisory Board.

The Selective Service form also reminds registrants that no men have been drafted since 1972.

Rain follows Carter on campaign trail

DALLAS (AP) — President Jimmy Carter returned to the campaign trail Monday, capping a three-state fund-raising swing with a stop in conservative, Republican Dallas where he surveyed a drought-stricken farm and helped local Democrats fatten party coffers.

Arriving at Dallas Love Field 30 minutes late due to the area's first rainstorm in 29 days, Carter and reporters boarded a squadron of Marine helicopters and flew to a farm outside Justin, about 30 miles north of Dallas, where the president saw crops ruined by a searing heat wave.

"My heart goes out to you and I wanted to come here to dramatize for the rest of the nation the practical effect of the intense heat wave that has stricken most of Texas," he said.

Carter assured farm owners Olen and Myrtle Range he would hasten the flow of federal dollars to the sun-scorched Lone Star state, then called on the Almighty for additional relief from the blistering heat.

"We'll be praying for rain and cooler weather," the president told the Ranges.

He then traveled to Union Station, a renovated train depot in downtown Dallas, to be greeted by a handful of anti-draft protesters and about 1,000 supporters who each paid $10 and waved signs that read "Thanks for the rain, Mr. President."

Obliquely acknowledging the anti-draft protesters, Carter said, "Today is the first day of registration for our young men to make sure that in the future that if we are challenged, we will be able to defend ourselves. We do not anticipate departing from a full volunteer military force. We are registering, just in case we are challenged in the future."

The president also noted the United States has "respected the rights of all peoples throughout the world. Our commitment to human rights will never change and that is what we believe in," he said.

At that point, a 29-year-old member of the American Communist Workers Party was dragged from the meeting hall by a Carter supporter after shouting denials of the president's statement.

"All is not right with American today," Oran McMichael yelled. "Today marks the day that the American working class youths are called on to give their lives for a few rich folks."

Draft protests small but widespread

By The Associated Press

Anti-draft demonstrations were small but widespread and noisy as young Texas men wandered into post offices for the first military draft registration in five years.

Chanting, hand-holding picketers lined up at the postal stations Monday to protest the draft and heckle those registering, while a small crowd conducted a demonstration outside a Dallas train station where President Carter was addressing a fund-raising rally.

Pickets were up in Austin, Houston, San Antonio and Dallas. The Dallas protest was held at Union Station downtown where Carter was to address a Democratic Party voter-registration drive. The protest was led by the Committee Against Registration for the Draft, and involved about 13 people at its height.

But CARD spokesman Greg Preston said, "This is just the beginning. We realize through what we read in the papers and what Carter has said that the U.S. is gearing up for war."

Another CARD member, Floyce White, 19, said, "I do plan to register but only because of heavy penalties of law if I don't."

When Carter arrived, the protesters began chanting, "No draft, no war," but few members of the slightly hostile crowd joined in.

In Austin four demonstrators were arrested in a downtown post office by General Service Administration officers while about 100 people outside joined hands and chanted, "Hell, no, we won't go."

The four allegedly refused to move when two construction workers wearing hard hats tried to register.

They were arrested and charged with obstruction, impeding and disrupting, and were arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Phil Sanders who released them on $500 bond each.

In San Antonio, about 20 picketers marched in front of the downtown post office.

Convenience stores hit by gun-wielding bandits

Two local convenience stores were robbed at gunpoint early today, hours after city police had arrested a Pampa man in connection with a false report of an armed robbery of another store on July 19.

At 1:45 a.m. today the night clerk, Margaret Roy, of the Allsup's located on Highway 152 and Price Road reported an armed robbery to the Pampa Police Department.

Being located out of the city limits, the report was referred to the Gray County Sheriff's Department.

A young man — described by the clerk as about five feet-seven inches tall and wearing a ski mask and a sweatshirt with the hood pulled up — entered the store, holding a blue steel handgun. The clerk was handed a sheet of green paper on which the words "Give me all the money fast" were printed with blue ink, according to the deputy's report.

While she was getting the money, the report says, the suspect kept saying, "Hurry up, lady."

The man then fled from the front door of the business.

A witness told investigating officers that a small white pickup was parked on the west side of the store, and left the scene at a high rate of speed.

Approximately $73 in currency and $5 in change were reported taken in the hold-up.

At 2:25 a.m. — while officers were still investigating the earlier armed robbery report — Jimmy Lewis, the night clerk for the Allsup's located at 309 N. Hobart reported that the store had been robbed at gunpoint.

A slender white male, approximately five feet-five inches tall entered the store and walked around. The suspect then reportedly displayed a blue steel revolver and pointed the weapon at Lewis. The man then said, "Money."

The clerk put the money from the cash register into a sack which was grabbed by the suspect. The man then left the scene, running north.

Approximately $32.50 was reported taken in the robbery. The descriptions of the two suspects in the robberies are similar and police believe the two hold-ups may be related.

"There's a strong possibility that they could be related," Sheriff Rufe Jordan said, but added there was no actual proof that would connect the two.

No suspects are in custody at this time, officials of both departments said.

The report of the robbery of the Allsup's located at 1900 Hobart was solved Monday afternoon after city police officers arrested Howard Qualls, 19, of 2113 N. Faulkner and detained a 16-year-old boy.

Qualls was charged with theft over $200 and making a false report to a police agency. Bond for the man was set at $2,000 for the theft and $1,000 for the false statement. The juvenile was referred to the Gray County Probation Department for further disposition.

Investigation of the incident proved the report made Saturday morning was unfounded, according to Chief of Police J.J. Ryzman.

First report of the theft, he said, indicated two black males had entered the store and demanded money at gunpoint.

Urschel kidnap marked by drama and bravery

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Machine Gun Kelly, "G-Men," a wealthy oilman — all characters in a made-for-television movie. They could be, but in this case, they were the central actors in one of the country's most sensational kidnappings — which occurred 47 years ago today.

Oilman Charles Urschel and an associate, Walter Jarrett, and their wives were playing bridge at Urschel's palatial northwest Oklahoma City home about 11:15 p.m. July 22, 1933, when two men burst through a screen door into the home.

One was carrying a machine gun and the other a pistol. "Keep quiet or we'll blow your heads off. Which is Urschel?" No one answered.

"We'll take both of you, come along," one of the intruders said as he pointed the way with his machine gun.

Urschel and Jarrett did as they were told. The kidnappers were George "Machine Gun" Kelly and Albert Bates.

After the kidnappers roared off in a car, Mrs. Urschel and Mrs. Jarrett ran upstairs, locked the door and called police.

Within an hour, the men had taken $60 from Jarrett and released him. Jarrett later said the kidnappers behaved "like gentlemen."

Urschel, a tight-lipped, handsome six-footer, was worth a pretty penny to the kidnappers and 18 other people convicted in connection with the case.

The oilman had united his fortune with that of the vast Tom B. Slick estate when he married Mrs. Slick in St. Louis Oct. 17, 1932.

Slick was called the "King of the Wildcaters," and Urschel was his protege and eventual heir to his vast fortune and widow after Slick's death in 1930.

Urschel's first wife, Slick's sister, died of heart disease about a year after Slick.

After snatching him, the kidnappers drove Urschel to a farm near Paradise, Texas, and held him there blindfolded for nine days.

The kidnappers instructed E.E. Kirkpatrick of Tulsa, a friend of Urschel, to place a blind classified ad in the Daily Oklahoman of Oklahoma City, advertising a farm for sale.

Kirkpatrick did as instructed and, using the post office box number listed in the ad, the kidnappers worked out a ransom for their prize.

Kirkpatrick was ordered to catch a train and take the ransom to Kansas City.

Kelly collected a $200,000 ransom on a dark Kansas City street. Urschel, whose wealth was estimated at $75 million, was released July 31 at the north edge of Norman and took a cab into Oklahoma City.

Despite threats from the kidnappers to keep quiet, Urschel told the entire story to the FBI.

"Well, they threatened me. Several times they had made the statement that I was not to see or hear anything. They said if I did, I'd never come back, they would kill me," Urschel later testified at Bates' trial.

The FBI was able to identify the location of the farm where the oilman was held because he kept track of the time an airliner flew over each day. By checking airline schedules, the federal agents pinpointed the site. Urschel also put his fingerprints on every likely surface to prove he had been there.

On Aug. 12, FBI agents raided the R.G. "Boss" Shannon farm. They found Harold Bailey, leader of a notorious Memorial Day break of 11 convicts from the Kansas prison. Bailey was asleep in the backyard with a Tommy gun by his side. His pockets contained some of the ransom money.

The remaining members of the gang were rounded up in several weeks.

Kelly was arrested in Memphis, Tenn., on Sept. 26 after sending threats of "slaughter" to Urschel and Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph B. Keenan during Bates' trial in Oklahoma City.

Federal agents and Memphis police burst in on Kelly, who was armed and waiting. With an officer pointing a shotgun at his heart, the notorious badman dropped his gun without firing a shot.

"Don't shoot G-men, don't shoot," Kelly cried.

"The FBI says that was the first time that anyone had ever heard the term 'G-men' applied to its agents. Kelly later told reporters he meant 'government men'."

Kelly and his wife, Kathryn, were transported under heavy guard to Oklahoma City in an armored car. Both were handcuffed and Kelly was heavily manacled.

Bates' trial was the first important test of the federal "Lindbergh Law" providing for life imprisonment for convicted kidnapers. Bates got life, as did Kelly and his wife about two weeks later.

Three years after the kidnapping, the 20th person implicated was sentenced. Of the $200,000 ransom, an estimated $124,000 was recovered by federal agents.

The top "G-man," J. Edgar Hoover, praised Urschel's bravery in testifying despite the threats against his life.

"As a result, the citizen no longer fears gang retaliation if he talks, and the public is ready, willing and able to aid us," Hoover said. "His cooperation alone was responsible for their arrest and conviction. He did a great public service."

U.S. District Judge Edgar S. Vaught, who sentenced Bates, said of Urschel, "He walked up and pointed out the kidnappers, though they had threatened him with the worst of deaths if he told. He ended kidnapping in the Southwest before it got started."

In addition to Kelly, Mrs. Kelly and Bates, three other persons received life terms. They were Robert George "Boss" Shannon, Ora Lillian Shannon and Harvey J. Bailey, described as hide-out operators.

"Boss" Shannon was Mrs. Kelly's stepfather.

Ben B. Laska, a lawyer representing Bates, was sentenced to 10 years for accepting some of the ransom money for his legal services.

Others received suspended sentences to terms of five years for their part in the kidnapping.

Bates died at Alcatraz on July 4, 1948, from a heart ailment.

Six years later, at Leavenworth, Kelly died of a heart attack. It was his 59th birthday.

Kelly got his nickname after boasting he could write his name on a signboard with a machine gun as easily as he could write with a pencil.

The outlaw was buried in Paradise just two days short of the 21st anniversary of the kidnapping.

Shannon reportedly had the coffin opened and remarked, "Well, George, you sure do look good."

Shannon died a few years later and was buried in an unmarked grave next to Kelly.

Urschel, a shy, retiring man, refused to talk about himself or the abduction after it was over.

"If the public is as sick of hearing about it as I am, I can see no reason to keep bringing it up," he said.

The oil baron retired from active business after the trial and moved to San Antonio, Texas. He died there Sept. 27, 1970, at age 80 after a lengthy illness. His wife had died a few months earlier.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

Self-interest dictates continued free trade

Import curbs on Japanese cars might give American automakers some temporary help. But they would certainly lead to reprisals and damage our trade relations over the long run.

The United Auto Workers appealed recently to the International Trade Commission to order restrictions on imports of Japanese-made cars and trucks into the United States. The union wants a high tariff on imported cars and quotas based on 1975 or 1976 levels.

With 300,000 of 1.5 million members of the union laid off because of a sharp drop in domestic car sales, UAW concern about imports is understandable.

But the steps the UAW advocates could cost the rest of us dearly. We cannot disrupt our trade with Japan without disrupting our trade with other nations also.

If it were not for the heavy cost of importing oil, this country would have a favorable balance of trade with other nations. Erecting tariff fences could and probably would hurt us more than it would hurt any other nation.

It was 50 years ago that President Hoover signed into law the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill, an infamous measure that provoked 26 other countries to establish retaliatory tariffs, and the world plunged into the Great Depression.

Today U.S. industries and their workers face fiercer competition than ever before from European, Japanese and Third World manufacturers. But we are confident that they can cope with such competition, provided that government and labor unions join with business in a new partnership aimed at improving productivity.

The world has changed in half a century and become more international, more interdependent, economically and politically. We cannot go back to high tariff barriers. They were disastrous then. They are unthinkable now.

US must curb foreign oil usage

When a cartel is controlling the market in a vital commodity, any sign of a falling-out among members of the cartel takes on the luster of good news. The failure of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to reach a unanimous agreement on a new price formula for oil is such a straw.

But it is grasping only at a straw to take comfort in the disunity evident at the recent OPEC meeting in Algiers. True, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates refused to go along, at least for now, with a new "benchmark" price of $32 a barrel for oil — $2 higher than the previous price. This is music to Western ears, but the fact remains that the other 11 exporters are determined to squeeze still more dollars out of our pockets.

The $2 price increase is expected to add two to three cents to the price of a gallon of gasoline in the United States and have a corresponding effect on utility bills and all other prices sensitive to the cost of fuel. We have no choice but to pay the higher prices as long as we choose to send abroad for tankers full of oil.

That choice is the joker in the deck, a card which cannot be played as long as the demand for oil by the importing nations remains as high or higher than OPEC's production levels. Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, may have been thinking of that wild card when he warned the exporters that a worldwide oil glut by next fall could undermine the ability of OPEC to sustain its $32 a barrel price.

The approach of such a glut should be evident to OPEC members even if it does not dissuade them from raising prices. Fuel inventories are sky-high in the United States and other industrial countries. During the four weeks ending June 6, U.S. imports of crude oil and refined products were running 20 percent below the levels of a year ago. The gathering recession in Western economies can be expected to reduce demand for fuel to an even greater extent than what already has resulted from conservation measures triggered by rising prices.

The OPEC ministers still hope to "unify" their prices at their next meeting in September. The ministers who are the most hawkish on prices may hope to unify them at even higher levels than the present range, which goes from the Saudi's $27 up to $37 at the top. To do so in the face of falling demand would be difficult — unless OPEC takes the more drastic step of cutting back on production.

There are significant forces at play in the world energy market. Even discounting the temporary effects of recession, the inexorable upward curve in petroleum demand has been tempered. Europe and Japan are mounting major nuclear power programs. Although nuclear development remains virtually frozen in American, something resembling an energy policy is finally emerging from years of fitful debate in Congress.

Our dependence on OPEC oil is still great enough to be our overriding energy problem and a serious drain on our economy, as well as a potential threat to peace. But the progress made so far in curbing that dependence should encourage greater efforts. A year ago imported oil was meeting 42 percent of our requirements. Today the figure is 37 percent. It can go significantly lower. To the extent that it does, the less we'll have to worry about what OPEC does or doesn't decide to do.

By Robert J. Wagman
WASHINGTON (NEA) - For the last several weeks, the president and his staff have been bitterly attacking Sen. Edward Kennedy for his attempt to woo away Carter's delegates through a rules change at the Democratic Convention. The Kennedy proposal would free delegates from voting at the convention for the presidential candidate they were chosen in their states to support.

This is unfair, say White House aides. The Massachusetts senator should accept his defeat gracefully instead of "trying to change the rules in the middle of the game."

But at the same time that Carter's forces are crying foul over Kennedy's effort to change the rules, they are quietly trying to do the same thing themselves. They are attempting to amend the convention rules to prevent their delegates from defecting to Kennedy.

Carter's representatives have managed to insert a short paragraph into the proposed temporary rules of the convention that would allow them to kick out of Madison Square Garden any of their delegates who are about to bolt to Kennedy and to replace them with alternates loyal to Carter.

The proposed rules reads: "All delegates to the national convention shall be bound to vote for the presidential candidate whom they were elected to support for at least the first convention ballot unless released in writing by the presidential candidate. Delegates who seek to violate this rule may be replaced with an alternative of the same presidential preference by the presidential candidate or the candidate's authorized representative(s) at any time up to and including the presidential balloting at the national convention."

Democratic rules fight

Adoption of this rule would obviously end any hope Kennedy has of stampeding the convention and convincing Carter delegates to defect. If the Kennedy forces are to have even the slightest chance of a convention victory, they must somehow prevent this proposed rule from being adopted as permanent.

The Rules Committee is already beginning work on a set of "temporary" rules for the August convention. The convention will operate under these rules until the delegates, in one of their first votes, adopt "permanent" rules for the remainder of the gathering. The Carter-backed rule so far is classified as a "proposed temporary rule."

The Kennedy forces will try to defeat the Carter proposal in the rules Committee, but forces loyal to the president appear to have more than enough votes there to include the measure in the temporary rules. Thus, the best chance Kennedy has of defeating the rule is to stage a floor fight at the convention to prevent its inclusion into the permanent rules.

But here arises a Catch-22 situation: Any debate and vote on the permanent rules of the convention will likely be held under the temporary rules. If the exclusionary rule is part of those temporary rules, the Carter forces could simply boot out and replace any delegates who might vote with Kennedy on the issue.

Heading Kennedy's effort to prevent adoption of the rule as permanent is Jim O'Hara, a member of the Rules Committee. He says the attack on the proposed rule will be built around its "seek to violate" phrase.

"What does that mean?" asks O'Hara. "Can a duly elected delegate be disenfranchised on the whim of some candidate's man because he is seen talking to an opposing candidate's staffer?"

"I don't think delegates to this convention are going to buy a rule that strips them of any free choice. They are, after all, delegates to the Democratic National Convention, not the Supreme Soviet."

According to O'Hara and others, you can look forward to a great deal of parliamentary maneuvering as the permanent rules of the convention are debated and voted on. Almost without doubt, any hope Kennedy has of winning the nomination will die if the Carter-backed rule is adopted.

Letter to editor

Dear Ms. Hunter:

In my opinion you were wrong in your attempt to support your editorial position as you did in your June 26 editorial about payroll deductions for state employees.

You say that payroll deductions "would entail extra payroll costs", thus "showing that I am short on fiscal responsibility. You are overlooking the fact that fully 50 percent or more of the time in the courtroom on the case was devoted exclusively to our proposed plan to charge ALL deduction groups for ALL COSTS of operating the system."

Our cost recovery plan was well documented and Judge Jones in his decision registered no opinion to the contrary.

You say further that payroll deduction would "weaken the Texas right to work law". Again, that is not true and Judge Jones went out of his way at the opening of the suit to point out that the right-to-work law was not at issue in the case.

You need to go back to where this started. I said in July, 1979, that I would recognize any group of my employees who approached me about their jobs, working conditions, pay or anything else that concerned them. I said that because that was and is the law—the same which covers the Governor's office, the Attorney General's office, the Railroad Commission and all state agencies. The law says that an agency administrator must hear any grievance brought by his employees or any party designated by the employee for that purpose.

A group of my employees asked for payroll deductions, and I asked the Attorney General if I could legally do so. The Attorney General said yes, because that's how he read the law. Then a suit was filed and the Judge said no. It was that simple—the same way hundreds of state government administrative processes are carried out every year.

At NO point have I advocated the right of public employees to strike. That is well-settled in law—it is prohibited, and you should know that.

I am not "running interference", as you put it, for the unions. Nor am I running interference for business or newspapers. I am working for the people of Texas—all of them, not just a chosen few be they newspapers or unions.

In the final analysis on payroll deductions, I proposed nothing more than the University of Texas and the entire United States federal government already does for its employees, nothing more than all agencies already do in the way of savings bonds and insurance for their employees, and nothing more than most private business does for its employees. Shame on the Pampa Daily News if it hasn't done this for its employees.

Sincerely

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — When Ronnie offered me the vice president's job on the Republican ticket a few weeks ago I was sorely tempted to take it. But at the last minute I told him, "I could do it, Ronnie, but it would be wrong."

I knew he was disappointed. "But you're the only one in the party who thinks the way I do, except of course for Nancy. We could make a great team," he pleaded.

"It's true," I said, "that we both believe in the same things and a strong dollar and a weak Soviet Union, but I think you have to balance the ticket with someone more liberal than either one of us, if we hope to get back the worldwide respect America has lost in the last four years."

"Do you have any suggestions?" he wanted to know.

"I do. But I don't know if you'll go for it."

"Try me," he said.

"I believe you should have a Japanese person for vice president."

"Do you mean a Japanese-American?"

"No," I told him. "I mean a Japanese-Japanese. You see, the Japanese are taking over anyway and they might as well have a say in our government. You just read where the Ford Co. was going to become partners with Toyota. The Chrysler people are in bed with Mitsubishi and Hitachi has announced they soon will start building computers in the U.S. It would be very helpful to the American economy to have a Japanese businessman as our vice president."

"I don't know if it's such a great idea. There are still some people who remember Pearl Harbor," he said.

"There are a lot more people riding around in Hondas, Ronnie," I said. "Look, the Japanese have the image of efficiency, productivity and discipline. That's what this country needs more than anything else right now. A Japanese vice president of the United States would serve notice on the world that you intend to make America No. 1 again even if it means dumping Sony TV sets all over the globe."

"But I don't know any Japanese businessmen. How would I be sure that I could work with one in the White House?"

"That's the beauty of it. You never would know. They are very polite and very quiet and would kill themselves rather than complain about not being anything as vice president. But there's no one like them when it comes to making a single reflex camera. The Japanese are going to bail out every U.S. business in the next 10 years, so why not select one of them that can help us now?"

Ronnie said he needed time to think about it.

Well, it's obvious he didn't take my suggestion, because not one Japanese-Japanese name ever came up in the vice presidential selection process. Some say the conservatives balked at the idea, while others maintained that the only way they could get a Japanese businessman to run on the Reagan ticket was to get the White House to buy 1,500 Datsun cars.

On second thought

By Don Graff

There are no women sitting on the United States Supreme Court — a sore point among many others, with the equal rights forces. But that has not stopped that distinguished body from exercising what is said to be a woman's prerogative.

It has changed its mind. Sort of. And in so doing, for the first time in some time it has given the press cause to praise its wisdom in a First Amendment case.

In the latest of a lengthening series of landmark free speech tests, the court ruled 7-1 against closed criminal trials, holding that in general such proceedings must be open to press and public because otherwise "important aspects of free speech and of the press could be eviscerated."

The words are those of Chief Justice Warren Burger, speaking for the majority, which makes the decision even more notable. Burger in the recent past has not been notably well-disposed toward the press, and vice versa.

The case in question reached the high court in a challenge by Richmond, Va., newspapers of a judge's decision to conduct a murder trial in secret.

In finding for the papers, the court cleared up much of the murkiness surrounding a 1979 landmark decision that went against the Gannett newspaper chain. It seemed to say that judges not only had the power to bar press and public from pre-trial criminal proceedings but that this authority could extend to the actual trials.

"Seemed to say" because nobody, least of all the decision's authors, could agree on what was actually intended. The justices were semantically bumping into each other trying to explain what they had decreed.

The chief justice said closure applied only to pre-trial hearings, not trials. Not so, said his esteemed colleague, Associate Justice Potter Stewart, who ought to know because he wrote the majority opinion, in which Burger concurred, and which made no such distinction: "The Constitution nowhere mentions any right of access to a criminal trial on the part of the public."

Wait a minute, chimed in Associate Justice Lewis F. Powell, Jr., to make the point that that point was still to be decided because the Gannett case was decided on the language of the Sixth (fair trial) Amendment rather than the First (free press) Amendment.

The press, in near pessimistic unanimity, saw Gannett as one of the severest threats to the First Amendment yet, a sweeping authorization of secret trials. A great many judges on lower courts agreed, judging from the rash of post-Gannett trial closing requests granted.

Under the circumstances, the Supreme Court agreed with something like relief to hear the Richmond case when it shortly came down the appeal pike. It presented the ideal opportunity for the justices to square themselves with the press, the lower courts and each other.

The Richmond decision is technically not a reversal but an amplification of Gannett. But it is likely to have the effect of the former.

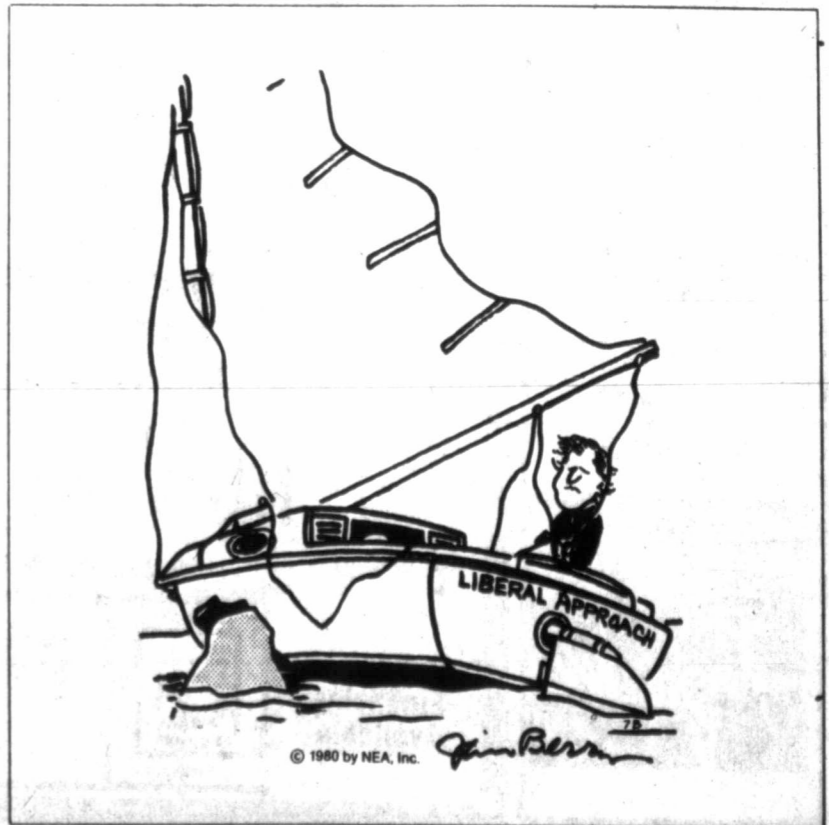

And coming from the hand of the chief justice, the majority opinion amounts almost to an apology. His observation that the "unbroken, uncontradicted history" of open trials in America presumes that "openness inheres in the very nature of a criminal trial under our system of justice" could not have been more satisfactorily phrased by the most outspoken champions of press rights.

Richmond does not, however, establish the principle of open trials as absolute. The decision notes that it exists in the absence of "an overriding interest" that might justify closure. But the majority studiously avoided specific definition of such interest.

It is just as well. As the justices so memorably demonstrated in Gannett, specific for this court can be another way of spelling confusion.

Carter wants Congress to resist tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is asking Congress to resist the appeal of an election-year tax cut despite new forecasts of rising unemployment.

The House Ways and Means Committee arranged to hear from Treasury Secretary G. William Miller as it opened hearings today on the need for a tax reduction that would take effect early next year.

The hearings were scheduled after Republicans and their presidential nominee, Ronald Reagan, called for passage this summer of a $36 billion tax cut which would reduce individual income tax rates an average of 10 percent starting Jan. 1.

President Carter and his advisers say any action to reduce taxes should be delayed until next year, when they predict the current recession will have reached bottom and a recovery will have started.

That position was repeated Monday when the administration released its mid-year economic review.

"The administration believes strongly that the last months of a congressional session, in an election year, are not the time to make the judicious decisions needed for a skillfully designed tax program to improve economic performance," said James T. McIntyre Jr., director of the White House Office of Management and Budget.

Unless a tax cut is of the kind that will increase investment and productivity, Carter's advisers say, it is likely to worsen inflation.

In the new review of the economy, the administration said unemployment is likely to reach 8.5 percent of the work force by the end of 1980 and remain near that level most of 1981. The rate was 7.7 percent in June.

A tax cut traditionally has been the federal government's basic prescription for fighting unemployment. But the situation is different this year, say Carter's advisers, because of persistent inflation.

The growing recession is denying the government one big weapon that had been intended for use in the battle against inflation: the balanced budget. The administration's new figures forecast a deficit of $60.9 billion in fiscal 1980, which ends on Sept. 30, compared with $36.5 billion forecast earlier this year.

And for 1981, instead of the earlier forecast of $16.5 billion surplus, a $29.8 billion deficit is predicted. The deficit would grow even larger if taxes were cut.

The Republican Party platform adopted last week calls for a 10 percent reduction in individual tax rates and faster tax write-offs for businesses that buy buildings, machinery and cars.

After Reagan and congressional Republicans seized the tax-cut issue last month with their call for an immediate reduction, Senate Democrats hurriedly instructed the Finance Committee to prepare a Democratic plan by Sept. 3.

The Finance Committee opens hearings on tax cuts Wednesday.

Texas drivers could feel crunch of giant rate hike

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Insurance Board statisticians will recommend an 18.9 percent average increase Wednesday in private passenger car insurance rates.

If approved by the three-member board, the increase would raise Texans' total premiums by an estimated $257 million a year.

Board staff members will present their detailed recommendations to the board Wednesday at the annual automobile insurance hearing.

Insurance companies are expected to request an even larger increase.

"It looks like the worst in 10 years," said Clint Dare, manager of the Texas office of the Insurance Information Institute.

The board trimmed or avoided rate increases in some past years by tinkering with deductibles or the formula for predicting future accident costs from past experience.

But board member Lyndon Olson Jr. indicated there was little chance of that this year.

"My expectation has been that we are not going to play games with people for any political purposes. ... If the economy is this bad and the data is this bad and justifies that big a rate increase, ... we'll just have to bite the bullet."

Olson said Monday. Last year, the board raised rates an average of 8.9 percent.

Rates are based largely upon statistics on the number of insured accidents and the cost of fixing cars, treating the injured and burying the dead.

A driver's premium increase probably will differ from the average because of variables in his or her age, hometown, amount of coverage and automobile usage.

Board staff recommendations would raise premiums in all 40 rating territories, with increases ranging from a low of 2.9 percent in Tom Green County (San Angelo) to a high of 25.5 percent in Rockwall County northeast of Dallas.

Sample premiums provided by board statisticians are for a male driver over 25 or a female over 21 who owns a new low-priced Ford, Chevrolet or Plymouth and drives it to and from work but does not use it in business. Coverage consists of $200-deductible collision, $50-deductible comprehensive, $5,000 in no-fault "Personal Injury Protection" and liability insurance that would pay $5,000 for property damage and $10,000 for each injury or death, up to $20,000 per accident.

Worldwide Church of God book ban decision due

TULSA (AP) — A ruling was expected today in a controversial lawsuit by the Worldwide Church of God involving the right to worship and freedom of speech.

The $2 million lawsuit filed by a minister and an accountant affiliated with the church attempts to prevent distribution of a book by author David Robinson. "Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web" the suit claims the contents of the book would invade their privacy and have an impact on the church members' freedom of worship.

During testimony Monday, one of the ministers seeking to ban distribution of the book was characterized as a busybody with an "inability to keep secrets."

Jim Sturdivant, attorney for the former Worldwide minister Robinson, said one of the plaintiffs in the case, Washington, D.C., minister Sherwin McMichael, is "a church gossip" who repeatedly has "breached the very confidence at issue."

McMichael and Henry Cornwall, a Worldwide accountant, filed the $2 million lawsuit.

Armstrong is the founder and leader of the California-based Worldwide Church of God. Robinson's book allegedly details the church's inner workings and has chapters on Armstrong and other church leaders.

Tulsa County District Judge Richard Comfort was expected to issue a ruling in the case today. He kept proceedings open to the public Monday despite a warning last week he might close his courtroom to spectators to hear portions of the book relevant to the suit.

A temporary injunction barring the distribution of the book was issued June 2 by District Judge William Means. The present hearing is to determine if the order will be lifted or made permanent.

"People would find no confidence within the ministry, because they would fear whatever they would tell their minister could at any time be published," McMichael testified in an attempt to prevent the book's distribution.

"It would hinder people from pursuing religion as we teach it."

Texas Tech coed wins college rodeo crown

Gina Burns of Coleyville, Texas, was crowned Miss College Rodeo 1980 at the College National Finals Rodeo, and was presented with a $500 Copenhagen-Skoal rodeo scholarship recently in Bozeman, Mont.

First runner-up was Lynda Fries of Boise, Idaho, a sophomore at Boise State University; second runner-up and voted Miss Congeniality was Dale Holliman of Buckhorn, N. M., a senior at New Mexico State University, and third runner-up was Michele Burgard of Huntington Beach, Calif., a junior at Cal-Poly, Pomona.

A junior at Texas Tech University, Gina Burns is majoring in animal business. The 20-year-old brunette was voted Miss Tarrant County when she was ten years old and, in her junior year at high school, was crowned first runner-up to Leslie Walker, the current Miss Rodeo Texas. In 1978, Gina represented the North Fort Worth Businessmen's Association as their Pioneer Day Queen.

Earlier this year, she represented Texas Tech as a member of the Horse Judging Team in the National Intercollegiate Judging Contest at the National Quarter Horse Congress in Ohio.

A snow and water skier, Gina is also an able horsewoman and competed successfully against 23 contenders for her new title of Miss College Rodeo. She made the top ten in her region in goat tying in 1978 and 1979. Her present grade average is 3.54.

Low calorie treat comes in many forms

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

From now through August, apricots, the famed "golden apples" of Greek mythology, should be available in the market place.

First cultivated in China about 4,000 years ago, this delicious fruit has been acclaimed not only for its taste but as an aid to good health and longevity.

The Chinese believed the apricot tree was endowed with prophetic powers and noted that the famed seer Lao-tse was born beneath one.

From Asia the apricot, which belongs to the peach family, traveled by stages westward to India, Persia, Armenia and Egypt.

It is said that Alexander the Great brought the golden-yellow fruit from Persia to Greece, and from there it reached Italy.

In the 16th century, Spanish explorers brought apricots to the new world. But it wasn't until 200 years later that apricot seedlings planted at Spanish missions in California gave birth to that state's apricot industry. Today California produces about 98 percent of America's apricot crop.

Apricots are a staple food in many countries. The people of Hunza, a remote country nestled high in the Himalayas, have attracted attention because of their longevity. The average life expectancy in this land is 90 years and many inhabitants live to be 100.

Scientists who made a study of this hardy people found that they have a passion for apricots. In warm weather they eat the fruit fresh off the tree and in the fall and winter they use dried apricots in their cooking. The fruit is low in calories. Two fresh apricots or four dried halves total only 40 calories.

Today, apricots may be found throughout the United States in four forms: fresh, canned, dried and frozen. They also appear in such roles as apricot nectar, apricot jam and apricot brandy. Canned and dried apricots are used most often in cooking, as in this recipe for Shrimp Scampi.

Ingredients:

- 1/4 pound butter or margarine
- 2 pounds large shrimp, shelled and deveined.
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 2 cans (16 or 17 ounces each) apricot halves, drained
- 1-3rd cup chopped parsley
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice.
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper

In large skillet, melt butter or margarine and add shrimp and garlic. Sauté, stirring constantly till shrimp turn pink, about 3 to 5 minutes. Stir in drained apricots and remaining ingredients. Cook, stirring gently till apricots are heated through, about 3 minutes. Serves 4 to 6. Good with chilled rose wine.

Airline pilot flying in different seat

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Debbie Archer had flown professionally for years before being hooked on becoming a pilot.

Now, at 29, she's believed to be the only woman to make the transition from the flight attendant's galley to a pilot's seat.

She joined Western Airlines as an attendant in 1969. But about six years ago, she says, a friend took her on a flight in a small private plane and let her handle the controls on the return trip.

"I was all over the sky in the little plane, but I was hooked on being a pilot," she says.

Nonetheless, when she set out to get her license, she wasn't thinking of commercial airlines, she says. She sold a luxury car to get the money for flying lessons, making do with "a clunker" on the ground to gain time in the air.

Later she managed to save enough money to buy a small plane. In that, she built up flight hours for additional step-ups in license ratings.

At the same time, she also took every cross-country flight she could get. When she won her instructor's rating, she took teaching jobs at the same airport at which she had learned to fly. She also became a charter pilot.

After getting her commercial rating, she flew one summer for commercial fishermen who were looking for swordfish. She would fly low enough to spot the fish, then would radio the fishermen and direct them to the location.

Today, with 2,200 flying hours, she's one of seven women pilots for Western—ranked as second officer. She's based in Denver, and one of her flights brings her to Phoenix. She handles all of the pre-flight checks, takeoff and landing calculations, instrument checks and in-flight radio on a Boeing 737.

Under Western's senior system, she estimates it will be about two years before she can become a first officer.

Other pilots have given her nothing but help, she says: "They seem to feel that if you have made it to the cockpit, you're qualified and that is what counts in flying."

Meanwhile, she works out with weights—not because of the effort in handling the 104,000-pound plane but because on the job "all we do is sit, fly and — on every third leg — eat.

"I don't need the muscles," she explains, "but I do need the exercise to avoid pilot's spread."

Managing paperwork the easy way

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

A few years ago, the question of organizing one's papers would hardly have seemed a suitable home-furnishings subject.

But the paper explosion has changed that. Today, the home office, whether planned or there by default, is a fact of life for most people who pay taxes, buy products (and then must keep the receipts and warranties), receive and write letters, and have investments and hobbies and vacation plans to deal with. Inability to handle paperwork has become a liability for homemakers even greater than a heavy hand with the pastry.

But, according to Stephanie Winston, whose business is counseling individuals and companies on handling paperwork and record-keeping, anyone can learn to become an efficient manager of papers.

Ms. Winston, who has written the book, "Getting Organized: The Easy Way to Put Your Life in Order," gave a group of editors tips on how to organize paperwork at a recent seminar on the subject in New York.

"First of all, get rid of the idea that being organized is the same thing as being neat and is a moral issue. It isn't," she told her listeners. "You are organized if you can accomplish what you wish in the time you have available."

Some people are well-organized when it comes to managing time and people or work, but they fall down when it comes to dealing with paper.

However, by making a time and a place to deal with paper, the householder is well on his or her way to an increase in efficiency. First of all, find the place. If you don't have a desk, buy one or designate a table as your desk. Add a large wastebasket, a cork bulletin board, a desk calendar, a small, spiral notebook, some file folders and a file cabinet if the desk has no file drawer. These supplies will add more than they will cost in terms of convenience and time saving.

Next, designate a certain time as your paperwork time. Ms. Winston suggests at least an hour at the same time every week. Depending on how complicated a life you lead, you will perhaps need less or more time.

Remember that simply opening a letter and putting it aside is a form of negative action. Instead, set up a simple system that will enable you to deal with all the papers that are likely to come across your desk. A four-file system that works well for many families, according to Ms. Winston, is to have files labeled "to do," "to file," "spouse," and "financial."

Sort your mail and other papers into these files each day. Then, once a week, take up your files and work through them. Having placed all paper on which some additional work is needed in your "to do" file, work through it from top to bottom, paying bills, answering letters, further sorting the material as needed. The next week, start working on your "to do" file from the bottom up. This way, nothing will ever get buried until it is too late.

Use your bulletin board to tack up reminders of chores which need to be done later. Write down dates of importance — parties, appointments — on your desk calendar. Make lists of what you have to do each day in your spiral notebook.

Then, when you have completed your day's list of chores, cross them off the list. "It's a good feeling," said Ms. Winston.

Filing seems to terrify many people, says Ms. Winston. They fear they will lose valuable papers in their file system and never find them again. This won't happen if you develop a subject file properly, she said.

For each piece of paper, find the broadest and most important association and use that as your file heading. If it has to do with finances, file the paper under financial. If it is a warranty file under warranty. Medical records go under medical. Material for tax purposes can be filed under financial or under taxes, whichever seems to make most sense to you.

AT WIT'S END

By Erma Bombeck

I come from a family of pioneers. My mother invented guilt in 1936. My dad dedicated his life to trying to get nail holes in the wall to heal themselves.

And according to my children, I introduced the word "No" to the Western world. (Before that time parents used "We'll see.") Their theory is that at first I only used the word to get attention. Then I started to enjoy it and today it's such a habit I say "No" before they even ask the question.

It's a distinction I don't deserve. I am not the first mother in North America to use the word "No." In fact, there is no doubt in my mind that when historians decipher cave markings of prehistoric cave dwellers and discover etched in a rock a plaintive, "Mom! Can I eat the leftover bear?" her response chiseled below will translate into, "No! I'm saving it for lunch!"

The word "No" is finally gaining the respectability among child psychologists it has so long deserved. Some of them are at last spreading the word that "No" means love and character building.

When I told my kids this, they said they already had more character than Mt. Rushmore.

They never understood me. They always thought I got some kind of cheap thrill out of saying, "No, you can't drift down the Ohio River in a plastic dishpan," and watching them fall around over furniture staring at me with the contempt usually reserved for a mother who picks her children up by the ears.

I don't expect anyone to ever fully appreciate that a mother makes more decisions in one morning than the Supreme Court makes in three years.

"Can I borrow your camera to take to a beach party?"
 "You wanta chaperone our three-day-two-night prom?"
 "Can I pierce the dog's ears?"
 "Will you tell me where you hid the book that condenses every novel ever written so I won't have to read this whole book tonight for my report?"
 "Can't I stay here for a week by myself?"
 "Do you want me to grow up hating you?"

I went shopping with my daughter the other day and as I pulled on a bathing suit I turned around and said, "What do you think? Should I buy it?" She shook her head and said, "No."
 "Why not?" I demanded.
 "Because your entire body looks like it needs pressing in it. I'm saying no because I love you and it will build your character."
 Somehow, it sounded better when I said it.

Handicapped trained to achieve in world

By JOHN NOLAN
 Associated Press Writer
 CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — He isn't the type of athlete to attract college recruiters, but John Pleva is still an award-winning performer in his own class.

He competes in track and field, bowls, golfs and swims. He is fresh from a tournament in which he won first-place ribbons in the 50-yard dash and softball throw, and a third in the high jump.

Pleva, 29, is retarded. He has spent most of the past 16 years at the Orange Grove Center, a Chattanooga facility for the handicapped and retarded. His athletic accomplishments came recently in a regional Special Olympics tournament in which more than 700 persons from 10 southeast Tennessee counties participated. Deborah Dixon of the center's staff, who works with Pleva, says he is remarkable in a facility where some of the 131 clients, as they are called, are less motivated or have less ability.

"I have some that have no initiative at all, some that are just here," she said. "Then I have some like John, who are outgoing and willing to try new things."

"His desire to learn new things is fascinating," Leonard Pleva, John's father and a retired chemical engineer, attributes his son's success to his sports participation since age 6. He has a model in his brother Joe, 31, who shoots a round of golf in the 70s.

John Pleva also studies music and speech and is in an adult basic education class, where he does some reading and writing.

The clients attend classes, participate in leisure activities and work at jobs, for which they are paid.

They must undergo advanced employment training before leaving Orange Grove, a step for which the facility is preparing John Pleva.

Cod salad makes a savory lunch

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

 SUMMER LUNCH

Cod Salad Rolls
 Melon Iced Beverage

COD SALAD
 A savory combination for those who enjoy the firm texture of cod.

1 1/2 pounds fresh cod fish or a 1-pound package thawed frozen cod fillets
 1/4 cup mayonnaise
 3 tablespoons chili sauce
 2 teaspoons lemon juice

1/4 cup finely diced sweet pickles
 1 small scallion, finely chopped
 Lettuce, sliced cucumber and lemon wedges

Poach or steam the cod fish. If fresh, skin and bone; cool and flake. Whisk together the mayonnaise, chili sauce and lemon juice; stir in the pickle, scallion and cod. Chill to blend flavors. Serve on lettuce and garnish with cucumber and lemon. Makes four 1/2 cup servings.

Shipyard preserves 'corking'

DORCHESTER, N.J. (AP) — At the old Dorchester Shipyard on the banks of the Maurice River, the creaking oysterboats still chug in for repairs by skilled ships' "corkers," guardians of a fading maritime art.

The small shipyard, more than 150 years on the lazy Cumberland County river, serves a handful of wooden oyster and clamboats that work Delaware Bay.

Some of the wooden boats, like the Robert C. Morgan and the Alert, more than 80 feet long and 20 feet wide, have been sailing the bay for a half-century or longer.

Another bay boat, the Cashier, was built before the Civil War and is believed to be the oldest working oysterboat in American waters.

Since steel and fiberglass have become the predominant materials for construction of hulls, the Dorchester Shipyard in Maurice River Township is one of few remaining on the East Coast with the skill to keep the older wooden vessels shipshape.

And one of the rarest of maritime skills is caulking, referred to in these parts as "corking." Simply put, corking is stuffing a rope-like section of hemp into the seams of a boat's wooden hull to prevent leaks.

Earl Polhamus, 55, has been corking since 1946, when the same wooden boats he works on now were being converted from sail power to diesel engines.

"It's almost a lost art," Polhamus says. "Not much future in it."

Robert L. Morgan, who runs the shipyard for Wheaton Industries, a South Jersey glassmaker, says there will be work for his four corks as long as the oyster industry holds on.

The old wooden boats have lasted, he says, partly because there has been work for them in the Delaware Bay oyster and clam industries.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Concerning your advice to the Richmond man who asked what could be done about barking dogs: Calling the police won't work. A barking dog was driving me crazy, night and day, so I called the police. An officer came to my house and told me there was nothing I could do about it. He then suggested I simply trap or shoot it! Personally, I don't think it's very sporting to hunt domesticated animals, so what's my next move?

PERPLEXED IN PLAINVILLE

(P.S. Abby, Plainville, Kan., has a population of about 3,000, and there's an ordinance here against discharging firearms inside the city limits, where I live.)

DEAR ABBY: If you want peace and quiet, away from the noise of barking dogs, don't move to Bel Air, Calif! They will investigate your complaint by coming out to see if the dog is being neglected or abused in any way. And if it is, they will help the dog and fine the owner!

NO DOG LOVER

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to the Richmond, Va., man whose peace was disturbed by barking dogs wasn't worth much.

"Call the police," you say. Really now, Abby, I don't know where you live, but here in Santa Rosa, the police will do nothing. Believe me, I know.

We've been forced to move twice because of barking dogs — once in San Francisco and once in Hayward. I've called the police, the Humane Society, Animal Control and the SPCA, and learned that dogs have more rights than people.

CALIF. DOG HATER

DEAR ABBY: You are naive when it comes to trying to get relief from barking dogs by calling your police department. We had that problem. I called the police and they refused to come out.

I called my lawyer and even my county prosecutor. I was informed by both that there is no law about barking dogs. If a person disturbs the peace or creates a nuisance, the police will come out, but they won't come out for a complaint against a dog unless it has bitten someone.

At first I talked nicely to the dog owner. That didn't work, so I talked nastily to him. He vandalized my property and has trained his dog to bark whenever he sees me.

HELL IN ERIE, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to stick in my 2 cents' worth concerning one of the most frustrating of all frustrations — barking dogs.

I seem to recall that a few years ago, Johnny Carson was going crazy because one of his neighbors had a couple of dogs who took to barking late at night and early in the morning. I think Johnny said he asked his neighbors in a nice way to please keep their dogs quiet, but the dogs kept on barking, so Johnny took his neighbor to court. If I'm not mistaken, I think Carson lost the case.

So, if Johnny Carson with all his clout can't get anywhere, that poor guy down in Richmond, Va., doesn't have a prayer.

INSOMNIAC IN LONG BEACH

DEAR INSOMNIAC: A few years ago, Johnny Carson did have trouble with a neighbor's barking dogs, but the case never went to trial.

A ruling was handed down that either the owners of the barking dogs had to keep them indoors at night and during the early morning hours when the prolonged barking took place or hire a trainer to keep the dogs under control.

Since nothing further has been heard from Carson, I assume that nothing further was heard from the dogs.

Do you wish you had more friends? Get Abby's booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby, Popularity, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Commuter paddles canoe to work

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — Richard Gillet has stopped putt-putting and started paddling.

"It's invigorating," said Gillet, who commutes via canoe and from his job as head operator at Houston Lighting & Power Co.'s Cedar Bayou plant.

"The exercise makes you feel refreshed and you save money — all at the same time."

Gillet, 36, started his daily glide about three weeks ago, "when I was looking out over the bayou from the plant and I noticed that my house was just about half a mile away by water, but it was five miles by car."

"It seemed like such a waste," he said.

Gillet says the trip — which requires about 10 minutes of actual paddling time and a 5-minute walk to and from the canoe — takes no longer than it did on his motorcycle.

He docks his canoe at a boat slip near his home on a small stream that feeds into the bayou. When he arrives at work, he nestles the canoe next to a wooden walkway on HL&P property.

The only traffic he sees during his trip is an occasional tugboat chugging by the bayou.

His daily routine is interrupted only when bad weather is predicted and he plans to continue canoeing as long as the weather will allow.

"I won't use the canoe when a bad thunderstorm is forecast or if it gets too cold. But I've known it to be 85 degrees here at Christmas time," Gillet said.

Although the canoe trips started out as daylight journeys, Gillet now paddles through the dark of night because he is working the "graveyard" shift.

"I just bring some lights so the tugboats can see me," he says.

His only problems have come from a couple of arguments with makes over right-of-way and "Sunday water skiers who get a few beers under their belt and think they're King Kong."

Value of solar energy varies

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Solar-energy heating systems are probably more economical in off-snowbound Minnesota than in sunny Arizona because heating needs are much greater in Minnesota, says an economist.

"The small size of the heating load combined with high fixed costs of the system may make solar energy more expensive in Arizona than in Minnesota," said Frank W. Geary.

Conversely, solar-energy systems might not become economically feasible in Arizona until their use for home cooling is made practical, said Geary, an economics professor at St. Olaf College in Northfield, Minn.

Geary analyzed solar-energy costs in the current issue of "Arizona Review" magazine, a business and economics publication of the University of Arizona.

In a complex review of the costs of solar energy vs. the costs of conventional heating methods, Geary said that both in Arizona and Minnesota, conventional methods are cheaper.

"...in both locations at present, solar costs more than any conventional fuel per million Btu (British thermal units) delivered," he said.

Even taking average fuel cost increases into account, it would take 10 years or more for conventional energy costs to equal the costs for installing and operating a solar heat system, he said, with the time period longer in Arizona than in Minnesota.

"For all fuels, the rate of price increase required to break even in a specified number of years is larger in Arizona than in Minnesota," Geary wrote. "This fact reflects the high fixed cost of a solar-energy system combined with low heating-load requirements in Arizona."

But he said factors that would make solar heating systems more attractive and affordable included sharp increases in conventional energy costs and continued inflation.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm 72 years of age and according to my laboratory report my blood count is 31. I've been advised to eat liver but with a high cholesterol, I'm not supposed to eat liver. Will you please advise me what foods are high in iron?

About 43 years ago I was very low but shots and pills brought it up to normal. I had a mastectomy eight months ago which might have brought my count down.

DEAR READER — I'm not sure what blood count you're referring to but I presume that you're talking about your hematocrit, the amount of red blood cells you have. There are many different ways to do blood counts. That includes the number of red blood cells that are present (a reading given in the millions), the amount of hemoglobin in grams and the volume of your blood that's occupied by red blood cells. In any case, if you are low in iron you can take iron tablets. For this purpose, you could take one of the daily vitamin tablets that also contains iron. Or you can ask your doctor which iron medicine he would like you to take.

There are several different forms of anemia. Some are caused by inadequate amounts of iron, others are caused by failure of the bone marrow and still others are caused by inability to absorb vitamin B-12. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-3, Understanding the Anemias. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

If you have a vitamin B-12 deficiency or pernicious anemia, just taking iron alone isn't going to solve your problem.

It's important to establish the cause for an anemia. For example, if an anemia is caused by bleeding and is sufficiently severe, the blood can be replaced.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently I read in a magazine that a virus had been found to cause diabetes. Does that mean that they'll soon have a vaccine to prevent diabetes? Would you comment about this?

DEAR READER — Yes, there was a case reported of Coxsackie virus causing destruction of the islets of Langerhans in the pancreas and resulting in diabetes. This has also been demonstrated in animals.

That's very important research but you have to keep in mind that it may not be a frequent cause for diabetes. The truth is that diabetes can be caused by anything which damages the islets of Langerhans in the pancreas. They are the tiny organs that produce insulin.

Mumps also has been identified as a possible factor in diabetes in some people.

Not all forms of diabetes apparently are even related to the pancreas but to certain other complex metabolic defects. There appear to be several different types of diabetes. Therefore, there are probably many different causes for diabetes. It may well be that some of these types of diabetes, if they are proved to be related to virus infections, could be prevented in the future. But we still have a long way to go before this can be done.

Designer may doodle transmission, easing boredom

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — He was born the son of an auto worker on Detroit's near East Side. At the age of 8, he was taking cars apart and putting them back together again. Today, listening through a dull meeting, he is liable to doodle himself a new transmission.

Yet, looking at John Zachary De Lorean, casually urbane at 55, one wonders if his nails were ever black with automobile grease.

His office is modern and simple, dominated by a large, busy desk at one end, a white settee sitting area at the other, the walls spiced with pictures of cars and his third wife, Ford model Cristina Ferrare.

It's a far cry from General Motors and its austere executive offices on the 14th floor of its own building in Detroit, where DeLorean used to maneuver.

Now, of course, he's said goodbye to Detroit, and his mind is geared to a longtime dream, his own car, in production by August, as yet unnamed, unpriced, but intended to compete with Porsche and BMW. Intended to last, with or without guarantee, for 25 years. Stainless steel, riding on oversized tires that should last 60,000 miles, and maybe 40 percent more fuel efficient than some similar cars.

"This is the car I've always wanted to build," he says. "It's very conservative of resources. It takes one-and-a-third fewer barrels of oil to fabricate than a car made by conventional techniques. More importantly, it's designed of materials whose life is virtually eternal."

Now, a lot of people have tried to build cars, but they've always gone into mass production competition with Detroit. Not John De Lorean. He'll be doing well, he says, if they can sell 30,000 of his DMC-12s a year worldwide.

The price? One journal mentioned $15,000. John De Lorean says probably less than $25,000. He's sunk $200 million into the DMC-12 to date.

"We are incorporating an awful lot of features. Air conditioning is standard, aluminum wheels are standard, everything you can think of in a car. We're including a 50-watt stereo which is more powerful than the one in my house."

At 6-foot-3 and a lean 180, De Lorean exudes a rugged elegance. General Motors, with its gray-flannel executive image, never could get quite used to his European-cut clothes nor his brisk life style, which included getting photographed with movie stars or marrying models. His second wife was fashion model Kelly Harmon.

While both De Lorean and his present wife, Cristina, are in the public eye, they keep their marriage and their children sheltered. They have a son, Zachary, and a daughter, Kathryn, named after E Lorean's parents.

De Lorean was once also married to General Motors. He turned the Pontiac division around with a number of engineering changes, from the wide track look to the radio antenna in the windshield. And he reorganized the Chevrolet division, put it on a computer footing condensed the product line, boosted dealer profits more than 300 percent and made Chevrolet the first automaker to sell more than three million cars and trucks in a single model year.

GM beckoned him to the inner sanctum, as vice president and group executive for North American cars and trucks.

But the closer he got to the top, the less enthusiastic De Lorean became. He found many management decisions capricious, and his long battle is documented in J. Patrick Wright's book, "On A Clear Day You Can See General Motors," which is written in De Lorean's voice from long tape-recorded sessions.

He quit GM and served as president of the National Alliance of Businessmen, trying to generate jobs for the minorities and disadvantaged. He formed his own consulting firm, and finally followed his dream, establishing the De Lorean Motor Company in 1975, headquartered on a few floors of a Park Avenue office building.

He's building his car in Northern Ireland, both because there is a pool of unusually skilled people at bargain wages, and because he hopes that the business might improve the economics of the area and so reduce the tension there. He is considering building a European-designed bus in Miami, both to offer an alternative to General Motors and Grumman which make the only U.S. buses now, and to bring employment to that city which recently endured racially and economically triggered violence. Besides, he says, his buses would be built lower to the ground, have wider doors, be easier for old people and children, and save gas.

The DMC-12 carries his personal signature. He's having fun with it. It takes him back to his first real engineering job at Packard where one man was responsible for an idea from its inception through the manufacturing process.

"Unfortunately, today major organizations tend to want to compress you into a mold, so that you become one of the standard these-or-those," he says.

"No great car was ever done by a group. Almost all the great cars in the world were individual efforts. The Bugatti was a man. Ferrari is a man. The car is an accurate expression of what he thinks it should be.

"In a big company you don't even have a guy who is responsible for the whole engine. He may have the block. Another may have the carburetor. Another the starter. It gets hard to get very proud about the whole thing when you only have a little part of it."

Lawton pharmacist says drug prescriptions for 'syndicate'

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A Lawton pharmacist testified Monday he conspired to obtain drugs on forged prescriptions, but he told a federal judge he became involved only to help an alleged co-conspirator break free of "the syndicate."

Robert E. Torbert, 33, pleaded guilty in federal court here to a scheme that led to the illegal dispensing of at least 800 narcotic pills from a Lawton pharmacy between March 1979 and February 1980.

The pharmacist, a 1971 graduate of the University of Oklahoma pharmacy school, could face up to four years in prison and a $30,000 fine. He was not charged with distributing the drugs.

Torbert is the third state pharmacist this year to plead guilty to federal drug charges, and Assistant U.S. Attorney Mike Ringer said more Oklahoma pharmacists are under investigation.

Torbert, who worked at his father's pharmacy, told U.S. District Judge Lee West he began dispensing narcotics last year to a man who allegedly said he needed the drugs to satisfy the syndicate in Dallas.

The pharmacist identified the man as John L. Bunting, 50. Bunting and Andrew Russell, 26, have pleaded innocent to the alleged forged prescription conspiracy and are scheduled for trial in August.

Torbert said Bunting told him "he was trying to break away from the syndicate. He said this was the only way he could set his life right," Torbert said. But the pharmacist said he knew he was violating the law.

The pharmacist said he first met Bunting in 1979 and loaned him $150. The man returned and told him the syndicate was interested in doing business, Torbert said.

"I told him he was crazy. I had too much at stake," Torbert testified. But Torbert said he relented and met with Bunting numerous times at a Lawton motel and also at a local golf course.

He said he learned from Bunting a Lawton doctor was allegedly supplying him blank prescription forms. Federal agents would neither confirm nor deny they are investigating the doctor, whom Torbert named in court.

Torbert said Bunting came to his pharmacy in late June 1979 wanting to get drugs. Torbert admitted he knew the prescriptions were forgeries and said he told Bunting, "I'll help you this one time, but this is it."

He said Bunting came in during the July 4 weekend and pleaded for more drugs, saying the syndicate would kill him if he didn't get them. Torbert said he again relented and filed forged prescriptions.

Torbert said Bunting also told him, "You help me this one time and it will be all over with." Torbert said Bunting also told him, "They know who you are, too."

Three-way race could end in House

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In this period between the Republican and Democratic conventions, political strategists on Capitol Hill are beginning to ponder seriously the prospect that the next president may be chosen by the House of Representatives.

With three candidates expected to be listed on most state ballots in November, all it would take to bypass the Electoral College and toss the election into the House would be for none of the three to receive 50 percent of the electoral vote.

And the stronger independent candidate Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., gets in the polls, the greater seems the likelihood of this happening.

House and Senate leaders, who have seen Congress nearly paralyzed in recent times by comparatively simple energy and economic bills, shudder at the thought of having the weight of such presidential and vice presidential decisions on their shoulders.

And the political fireworks that would be set off would more than make up for any lack of drama at this summer's political conventions.

With an eye to the possibility of the election going to the House, both the Democratic and Republican parties are developing strategies for the 1980 congressional elections.

The Congress seated next January, not the present one, would be the one that would decide — following the meeting of the Electoral College in early January.

Both parties are trying to map ways to win — or retain, in the case of the Democrats — majority control of 26 state delegations in the House.

For, unlike a bill that requires a simple majority of those voting at the time in the 435-member House, each state gets to cast only a single vote when it comes to picking a president.

Thus, whichever candidate among the top three finishers gets 26 votes in the House goes on to the White House.

In the current Congress, Democrats control 29 House delegations and the Republicans control 12. The remaining nine are equally divided.

So the congressmen from single-member states like Delaware, Vermont and Wyoming individually would have as much clout as, for instance, the 42 members from California.

Even if they fail to win majority control of the House, Republicans could gain control of a majority of state delegations by picking up 28 carefully targeted seats.

There are now 275 Democrats and 179 Republicans in the House, with one vacancy. So picking up those 28 specified seats could be accomplished with Republicans remaining the minority party.

But that's just the beginning. The Senate gets to pick the vice president from the top two finishers by simple majority vote. And the vice president would become acting president in the event that none of the three contenders gets 26 votes in the House.

Dogfight trial postponed

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Charges against three men indicted in connection with a dogfight near Trumann have been reduced and the trial postponed indefinitely.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Terry L. Darden said Monday he had filed informations reducing the charges in the indictments. All three originally were charged under a gambling statute. The reduced charges are under the Federal Animal Welfare Act.

Wendall "Butch" House, 30, of Houston, Donald Walton, 37, of Trumann and Johnny Green, 34, of Memphis, Tenn., were scheduled to go on trial today in Little Rock.

The three were indicted by a federal grand jury May 19 on charges of participating in the dogfight Dec. 8 on a farm near Trumann.

House, originally charged with traveling in interstate commerce to participate in an illegal dogfight for gambling purposes, has asked to have his venue transferred to Houston so he can plead guilty.

Childhood lost in prison cell

By NANCY SHULINS
Associated Press Writer
EDDYVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Arrested at 15 and convicted at 16, Simon Sylvester Hayden has come of age in the shadow of the guard towers that rise above the haunted gray walls of the Kentucky State Penitentiary.

Here, locked in his cell, he dreams of teen-age pleasures beyond his reach — of french fries and fishing holes, baseball and burgers.

Three winters and four springs have passed since he ran from the arms of his family, into the arms of the state.

"The hardest thing is missing out on life," he says. "Christmas isn't Christmas in here, and birthdays aren't birthdays. I missed out on my brother's child getting born, on my father getting remarried."

"I missed out on a good education and getting my driver's license. I missed out on my first date."

"It's hard to judge yourself," Hayden says. "I understand and realize I did wrong. But I've spent three years in here. That's part of my child life gone."

He's 19 now, square-shouldered and deep-voiced. But the pale, pinched face and light blue eyes belong to an edgy child one minute, a weary man the next.

He says he still doesn't know why he pulled the trigger the night of Nov. 15, 1976, killing a 19-year-old Vietnamese refugee and his 16-year-old girlfriend.

"I didn't want to kill them. They were my friends," he says. "But I was lost that night, just plain lost."

"I heard voices telling me to shoot them, and it just happened. I shot both of them."

"I wish I'd never done it. I still don't know why."

When he gets out of prison, Hayden says, he wants to get a job. Sometimes he'd like to be a forest ranger, other times a preacher.

"I just want a regular job like anyone else. I won't drink and I'll settle down. It would be real nice to get married and have kids."

"One thing I do know," he says softly. "When I get out of here, I won't ever hurt anybody again."

Hayden lives in 2 Cellhouse, the prison's protective custody unit. He was put there, he says, to escape the homosexuals who bothered him because of his age and small stature.

During the day, Hayden studies for his high school equivalency test. An eighth grade dropout, he hopes to earn his diploma.

A good day is when he can go to the prison church, where he serves as an altar boy, or when he can go to the canteen to buy cookies.

On the other days, the bad ones, there's only boredom. "I talk to myself sometimes. I write letters and draw. I do OK."

He landed here because of what happened in the autumn of his 15th year.

His parents had been divorced, and a Vietnamese family was living in the farmhouse he shared with his father and brothers in Geneva, a tiny farming community in western Kentucky.

Hayden quit school and began drinking heavily. He had his first encounters with the law: first for hitchhiking, then for drinking, and once for breaking and entering. He was placed on probation.

On Nov. 15, 1976, he argued with the Vietnamese woman. "She accused me of hitting her son. She came at me with a steak fork."

He slammed the kitchen door, the glass shattered and he started drinking. Hayden says he'd drunk about a quart of wine when his friends Truong Huy Do and Shirley Ann Yates came over. He asked them for a ride.

"I just wanted to get away," he says. "I ran upstairs for my pistol. I carried it with me all the time. I was drunk and everything, and without even realizing it, I just got the gun out of my pocket and in an instant..."

Three months later, Hayden went on trial in Henderson County Court on two counts of murder and one count of armed robbery. His lawyer, Carlton Buchanan, used "a defense of mental disease or defect."

A psychiatrist and a psychologist testified that Hayden could have been mentally deranged when the shooting occurred. They said they believed Hayden suffered from a long-standing schizophrenic disorder marked by a distorted sense of reality.

ROMANIA'S TOP gymnast, Nadia Comaneci, goes through a routine on the balance bar that won her a perfect score of ten from judges during women's gymnastics compulsories Monday night at the Moscow Olympics. Of four exercises in the program, she received a ten and three scores of 9.95.

Comaneci: A study in perfection

MOSCOW (AP) — For an athlete whose sheer perfection has given so much joy to the world, Nadia Comaneci sure doesn't seem to be having any fun.

There she was again Monday, being told that nobody could do it better because how do you top perfection? And what did Nadia do? She didn't crack a smile after her flawless trip over the balance beam. She remained expressionless after the perfect 10.0 was flashed on the scoreboard.

It wasn't until her Romanian coaches crowded around her, offering congratulations, that she allowed a smile — short and sweet — and then it was back to the business at hand.

The business Monday was compulsory maneuvers on the balance beam, vault, uneven parallel bars and the floor exercises — the first half of the two-day team competition that also serves as qualifying for the individual all-around title later this week at the 1980 Summer Olympics.

Watching Comaneci perform, one is struck by the intensity of her concentration. There is no room for emotion when all that inner strength is directed toward the perfect performance. It's been said that other special athletes, Ted Williams and Ben Hogan, had that same icy demeanor — and that same quest for perfection.

One slip of that steely determination, and her last four years of practice and sacrifice will seem unfulfilled. One little mistake, and there's always someone waiting to take your place at the top of the sport. There's always somebody.

Comaneci knows. She's been there. Four years ago at the Montreal Olympics, when she was 14, she replaced Olga Korbut of the Soviet Union as the sport's superstar. Now, maybe it's Natalia Shaposhnikova as her apparent.

Comaneci did her little miss perfect act on the balance beam, chipped in with 9.95s on the other three apparatus — and she still couldn't shake Shaposhnikova.

The 19-year-old Soviet star, who like Comaneci was injured for the 1979 world championships, also was perfect. She picked up a 10.0 in the vault, added 9.95s on the other pieces of equipment and tied Comaneci with 39.85 out of a possible 40.0.

"Such high marks are unheard of in international competition," said a Soviet gymnastics expert. "It has happened in national meets but never at the Olympics or world championships."

Nelli Kim, the Eurasian from the Soviet Union who was supposed to be Comaneci's main rival here, slipped to fourth in the compulsories behind Maxi Gnauck of East Germany. But the depth of the Soviets was evident as they tallied 197.75 points. East Germany was second at 196.80 and Romania one-tenth of a point further behind.

The women's free exercises deciding the team medals will be held Wednesday.

The men returned to gymnastics competition today, bidding for medals with the second half of the team competition. The Soviets, with a commanding lead, were expected to win the gold on the strength of performances from all-around champion Alexander Dityatin and Nikolai Andrianov, a quadruple gold medal four years ago who seems to have recovered from last year's chest injury.

So far, the host Soviets have been having the most fun at their Olympic party with six gold and 11 total medals. East Germany actually has one more medal overall but three less gold after two days of competition at the first Games in modern history without an American team.

These two East European sports powers were expected to pick up more medals as swimming finals in the men's 1,500 freestyle, women's 400 freestyle and men's 100 breaststroke were to be contested today.

The U.S. absence, due to its boycott in response to the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, has been felt the most at the swimming pool. At Montreal, American men won 12 of the 13 events, and the U.S. women have held their own against the East Germans in the past two years.

Except for one Swedish interloper, the East Germans and Soviets have taken all the gold medals in swimming and diving.

Barbara Krause, who set a world record in the 100-meter freestyle Sunday, lowered the mark again to 54.79 seconds in winning the event Monday. "Yes, I am sure I am the fastest female freestyler in the world today," she said.

Teammate Ines Geissler won the women's 200-meter butterfly in Olympic record time of 2:10.44.

Sergei Kopliakov of the Soviet Union won the 200-meter freestyle in an Olympic record 1:49.81 and countrywoman Irina Kalina took the gold medal in the springboard diving.

The biggest swimming surprise came from Bengt Baron of Sweden, who confounded the experts as well as himself in winning the 100-meter backstroke in 56.53 — more than one second faster than his lifetime best.

"I would never have thought I could win an Olympic gold medal, at least not here and today," Baron said.

Krause's world record was one of three that fell Monday, the other two coming in weightlifting.

Expos take lead

National League baseball roundup

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Beanball? A menace to baseball? Don't talk nonsense. It's just a brushback pitch — and it has its purpose. So says Dick Williams. And his Montreal Expos and the Atlanta Braves offered a pretty convincing case Monday night.

In that launching pad called Atlanta Stadium, Gary Carter crashed a grand-slam home run in a six-run first inning and a two-run homer in the seventh while the Braves unloaded five home runs in their 8-6 loss.

"Now do you see why it's good to use the brushback pitch a little?" Williams, the Expos' manager, offered after the fireworks had ended. "There are no more now than there have been in the last 105 years. The beanball isn't the term. It's brushback pitch."

And, with a laugh, he added, "Evidently they didn't establish that tonight."

Elsewhere in the National League, Houston edged New York 3-2, St. Louis downed Los Angeles 5-2 and Cincinnati shaded Philadelphia 5-4. Chicago and San Francisco played 12 scoreless innings before darkness suspended play. The game was to resume today.

"It was probably one of the best nights I've had in the major leagues," Carter said. "But more than anything else, I'm pleased we won the game. I remember the last time we were in here, Larry Parrish hit three home runs and drove in seven runs, and the final score was Atlanta 8, Parrish 7."

Williams, too, admitted he had to hold his breath a bit. "A few rockets out there tonight. Quite a few...It's a good thing we had a six-run lead. I felt pretty safe — except it didn't work out that way."

His counterpart, Braves Manager Bobby Cox, added: "Six runs down, especially in the first inning. I wasn't too worried because we had 27 outs left to score, and the way we've been hitting the ball lately, I figured we had a chance."

Rick Matula gave up Carter's grand slam and Gene Garber allowed what proved to be his winning homer, enabling the Expos to edge two percentage points ahead of idle Pittsburgh in the East Division.

Winner Scott Sanderson allowed homers by Glen Hubbard and pinch-hitter Biff Pocoroba, then Chris Chambliss, Bob Horner and Jeff Burroughs jolted Montreal reliever with seventh-inning homers.

Astros 3, Mets 2
Some guys would be nervous, standing at the plate with the bases-loaded, two outs and the score tied in the bottom of the ninth. But not Terry Puhl. He calmly stroked the single up the middle that gave the Astros their victory and widened their NL West lead over the Dodgers to 1½ games.

"Pressure? I felt no pressure," Puhl said. "It was a rather calm task." Frank LaCorte, 6-0, got the victory with two perfect innings, his first since being sidelined last week by a case of strep throat. "I don't think I'll get him sick anymore," Manager Bill Virdon joked.

Cardinals 5, Dodgers 2
A few good words of advice from St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog woke up Dane Iorg's bat after 83 homerless games as his three-run blast in the sixth inning carried the Cardinals past Los Angeles.

"It was obvious by the way I wasn't hitting that something was wrong," said Iorg. "I just had to get my weight back in my stance. I was too much on my front foot."

Ted Simmons also homered for St. Louis and Rick Monday homered for the Dodgers.

Reds 5, Phillies 4
Ken Griffey and Johnny Bench doubled to break a seventh-inning tie and, after a rain delay of nearly an hour, Dan Driessen singled Bench home with what proved to be Cincinnati's winning run that handed the Phils fourth consecutive loss and seventh in their last 10 games.

Cowboys compete for record purse at Frontier Days Rodeo

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — For some 233 bull riders at Cheyenne Frontier Days Rodeo, Jim Newton's opening day score of 84 is proving hard to beat.

The Colorado Springs, Colo., cowboy was one of the first bull riders out of the chutes Saturday, and his score still stood after 12 sections of bull riding at the 84th annual "Daddy of 'em All."

Some of the best bull riders, like five-time world champion Don Gay, have been thrown on their first outing.

Other early leaders also have proved hard to topple, but Olie Smith roped his way into a tie for the calf roping lead Monday, and Rick Bradley emerged as the new leader in steer wrestling.

More than 1,400 wranglers are competing for a record $425,000 in prize money in the nine-day-long rodeo, which is billed as the world's largest outdoor rodeo.

Smith, a Del Rio, Texas, cowboy, roped his calf in just 12.1 seconds to tie Richard Stowers of Tatum, Okla., for the first go-round lead in the race for nearly $79,000 in calf roping prize money.

Smith and Stowers are less than one second off the record of 11.3 seconds set in 1978 by Charly Lowry. Times are slower than in some rodeos sanctioned by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association because calves and steers get a 30-foot head start at Frontier Days.

Dean Woodward of Miles City, Mont., moved into third place with a 12.4-second clocking, third best at Frontier Days this year.

In other action Monday, Bradley threw his steer and pinned it in 9.3 seconds to take the lead in steer wrestling. The Addington, Okla., cowboy's time was nearly two seconds ahead of the time posted Sunday by Randy South of Logmont, Colo.

Byron Walker of Ennis, Texas, moved into third place with a time of 11.5, and Paul Hughes of Kim, Colo., took fourth with 11.8. The Frontier Days record of 6.8 seconds was set in 1976 by R.G. Kekich.

Jim Newton of Colorado Springs, Colo., still leads bull riding with an 84. David Bothum of Redmond, Ore., is the best saddle bronc rider so far with a score of 77, and Sonny Davis of Kenna, N.M., still is tops in steer roping by a fraction of a second at 16.3 seconds.

In bareback, nobody could break into the four-way tie for first place shared by Chris LeDoux of Kaycee, Wyo., George Mesmer of Mocksville, N.C., Buck Taylor of Inola, Okla., and Bob Wilfong of Rio Vista, Texas.

Three straight Rangers trim Red Sox, 5-3

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Manager Don Zimmer of the Boston Red Sox says that in baseball "you take anything they give you."

Somehow that bit of philosophy has eluded his players this year. The Red Sox are doing the giving, American League rivals the taking.

The Red Sox failed to capitalize on a first inning scoring threat once again Monday night and went on to a 5-3 defeat at the hands of the Texas Rangers before 24,953 fans at steamy Fenway Park.

Boston appeared to have veteran southpaw Jon Matlack on the ropes as Rick Burleson walked, Dave Stapleton singled and both runners took an extra base on an error.

However, with Burleson on third and Stapleton on second and none out, the Red Sox came up empty. Fred Lynn lined to short, Burleson was thrown out at the plate on Tony Perez' grounder to short and Fisk grounded out to third.

"I don't know whether he (Matlack) was that good or the fact we're just not hitting."

Zimmer said. "We had our chance to get him, but couldn't."

The Rangers, winning their third game in a row for the first time since mid-April, shelled starter Dennis Eckersley, 5-9, on six hits and three runs in less than three innings and added two more runs against Bob Stanley in the seventh.

Matlack, who underwent left elbow surgery last year, blanked the Red Sox on two hits until Carlton Fisk drilled a 2-2 pitch for his 12th homer with one out in the sixth.

Matlack gave up one more hit before retiring the side and turning over the pitching job to reliever Danny Darwin, who surrendered a two-out infield hit and Dwight Evans' eighth homer in the ninth.

Zimmer was puzzled by the Red Sox failure to hit southpaws in Fenway Park, once considered a graveyard for left-handers, after the club's home record against lefty starters this year dropped to 2-8.

"For six years I watched clubs come in here and bypass their left-handed starters."

Zimmer said. "Now they're rushing them in at us. You figure it out, I can't."

The Red Sox hardly can rejoice in facing a right-hander tonight. Old nemesis Gaylord Perry is down to start for the Rangers against Boston's Mike Torrez, 5-10. Perry is 5-7 this year, but his lifetime mark against the Red Sox is 18-4.

In the only lineup change, Zimmer said All-Star catcher Carlton Fisk will start at third base for the first time in his career. Ailing Butch Hobson will be benched "until he's healthy" and weak-hitting utilityman Larry Wolfe will sit down.

High Plains ousted by Graham

A High Plains rally in the seventh inning was nipped in the bud as Graham held on for a 5-2 win last weekend in the State Babe Ruth Tournament in Lubbock.

The loss eliminated High Plains, who had won their last three games in a row before meeting Graham. High Plains was held scoreless by Graham pitcher Lynn Grimes until the seventh when Johnny Furgason of Skellytown and Justin Webb of Claude crossed the plate for High Plains. Kevin Powers of Panhandle had knocked them both in, but that was all the runs High Plains could muster.

Jerry Blount knocked in two runs and scored one himself for the winners. Grimes, Barry O'Dell, Spencer Street, and Bryan Ranger scored for Graham.

High Plains opened the tournament with a 5-4 loss to North Plains, but came back for a 13-2 vengeance victory in the semi-finals. In between, High Plains had defeated Lubbock, 10-11, and Staton, 11-1.

Pottery artist's life ends at home

SAN ILDEFONSO PUEBLO, N.M. (AP) — Services were held Monday for famed potter Maria Martinez, who died Sunday at her home at San Ildefonso Pueblo. She was 94.

She had been hospitalized recently in Espanola, but had returned to her home.

"She wanted to die at home," said a family friend.

Mrs. Martinez and her late husband, San Ildefonso artist Julian Martinez, began a strong pottery tradition when they revived the technique of making black ware in 1918. She became known for her black-on-black pottery and for shaping perfectly balanced pots although she used no potter's wheel.

Pottery bearing Maria's name is among the most coveted of all Indian art, and museums throughout the world display her work.

According to one account of her life, "The Story of Maria's Pottery" by Margaret Chase, she learned the art of red clay pottery making in her childhood from an aunt, Tia Nicolasa.

Mrs. Martinez, who was best known by her first name, began to pursue pottery-making seriously in 1907. That year, her husband joined an archaeological excavation at Frijoles and Pajarito, near the pueblo, and she became interested in black potsherds he brought home from the site.

Encouraged by Dr. Edgar Hewitt, director of the School of American Research, who was conducting the archaeological dig, Maria began reproducing the early Indian pots.

Julian Martinez is credited with discovering the process of making black pottery, which was achieved by firing the clay pots with dried horse manure. The carbon in the heavy black smoke colored the clay throughout.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

July 23, 1980

This coming year you can expect an increase in your social interests and activities. A word of warning, however: Be yourself. Don't try to keep up with the Joneses because the price would be exceptionally high.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) No matter how good a bargain looks, be certain you really need and can afford any items before you buy. You have a tendency to be extremely wasteful today. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your biggest enemy today is thinking the world owes you something. If you fall prey to this type of attitude, you'll be one unhappy person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Embellishing the facts to make a story interesting could turn out to work against you. You'll be held responsible for everything you say today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Unnecessary outside expenses should be curtailed today, especially those involving activities with groups. Somehow, the heaviest burden will end up resting on you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A goal you're attempting to achieve will not be won through chance alone. It's going to take some sweat from your brow to make it a reality.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be sure any person to whom you reveal important facts today can be trusted. The wrong type could carry tales where you don't want them to go.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The action or extravagance of a friend may draw you into an expense you didn't count on today. Maintain control of your activities and pocketbook.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't agree to something you're doubtful about just because it may be the easy way to handle it. The only person who'll benefit is the other guy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Wishful thinking may buoy your spirits, but it will do little for the actual task at hand. Take off the rose-colored glasses and do your job.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You have a tendency today to decide yourself, so be careful when dealing with those who might take advantage of you. You could misinterpret what they're offering.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Paying too little attention to family issues today could allow the problems to mushroom on you. Don't think they'll disappear if you ignore them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It may require some mental discipline to keep your mind on what you are doing today. Attending to tasks carelessly could prove costly.

Death topic on kid show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One afternoon not too long ago, Fred Rogers walked onto the set of PBS' enduring childrens' series, "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood," and decided it was time to tell his little viewing pals about death.

Death? On "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood," where Fred Rogers, singer of happy songs and teller of happy-ending tales, has dispensed more sweetness to kids than the Good Humor man?

Alas, the Grim Reaper had cut down one of Mr. Rogers' goldfish. Mr. Rogers' seized the dark moment.

"I discovered that the fish had died in my tank, and I buried him," Mr. Rogers recalls. "In the process of doing so, it evoked my feelings of when I was a little boy and my dog had died. So, I talked about how I cried, and how that was okay."

"I talked about being sad, and how my aunt gave me a stuffed dog and how I played with that stuffed dog. I played that he died, and then that he got up again, and then died, and got up again. What I'm doing is encouraging children to play with their feelings, which is one of the greatest things we can do for children, to help them to know the full range of feelings is fine."

In 26 years of doing television shows for children, starting with "The Children's Corner" for the Pittsburgh public TV station in 1954 and the long run with the "Neighborhood," Fred Rogers has established himself as television's primo baby sitter. He lasts not only because he so obviously savors the role, but because there is something about this schoolteacherish fellow that shines through, a childlike openness so unabashed it might cause the jaundiced adult eye to wince.

"It's real, you can be sure; kids know a phony. And knowing that kids know a phony has helped Fred Rogers keep the "Neighborhood" an honest place.

"It took me a long time before I could do any work on death because I didn't feel I had worked it through in my own life," Rogers says. "I feel that ours is such an honest communication that I couldn't go on and deal with something in a superficial way. Children can sense that."

Fifteen new episodes will be added this season to the standing "Mister Rogers Neighborhood" library (it comprises about 700 shows now), and Rogers is taping another dozen episodes of his adult interview series, "Old Friends, New Friends." Featured guests for the series' second season will include the Pittsburgh Pirates' Willie Stargell and acting teacher Lee Strasberg.

"Adults watch the "Neighborhood,"" he says, "and I wanted to see if we could do something particularly for adults. I wanted to bring the same kind of honesty to the interview as we had in the "Neighborhood."

Natural gas prices climb

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Valero Transmission Co. contends its latest price increase for natural gas will have a minimal effect on the city's 330,000 utility customers, but a City Public Service spokesman terms the hike "a serious situation."

Valero announced the six cents per thousand cubic feet increase on Monday to the consternation of CPS officials who are being hit with higher costs for generating electricity from both coal and natural gas.

Officials of Valero, the spin-off firm created in an out-of-court settlement of a multi-million lawsuit against LoVaca Gathering Co., said the increase from $2.59 to $2.65 would have a minimal effect on utility bills.

However, a spokesman for City Public Service termed the latest increase, "a serious situation because gas keeps going up and up and up. There's no relief in sight."

With federal price regulations being removed from natural gas, the cost will continue to rise, the CPS spokesman said.

The natural gas price increase follows another increase in railroad rates for hauling coal from Wyoming to fire generators which were converted from natural gas. Forty five percent of the city's electricity is generated from natural gas and the rest from coal.

TEXAS BRIEFS

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Police today were hunting for an assailant who killed Victor I. Rapanotti, 26, in a reported rifle-shoot duel.

Investigating officers said Rapanotti, operator of a stereo firm, was shot to death with a rifle in a neighborhood near Trinity University about 9 p.m. Sunday. An unfired 12-gauge pump shotgun was found beneath his body.

Two men, who identified themselves as friends of the victim, told police Rapanotti was beaten earlier in the evening. They said the angry man returned to his business, retrieved the shotgun and was struck by a single rifle shot as he left his business.

UVALDE, Texas (AP) — The state's pecan crop is experiencing serious water shortages, particularly in Southwest Texas, according to a horticulturist with the Texas Agriculture Extension Service.

Dr. George R. McEachern said mature trees may have reduced crops or produce smaller than usual pecans this year.
