

Doctors fight to save Sellers

PETER SELLERS

LONDON (AP) — Doctors fighting to save movie star Peter Sellers said today they are using breathing equipment to keep him alive after he suffered his third major heart attack in 16 years. A hospital bulletin said the 54-year-old Sellers "remains critically ill" 24 hours after he collapsed in his suite at London's plush Dorchester Hotel.

But Middlesex Hospital spokesman David Johnson stressed that it was not just the machines in the intensive care unit that are keeping the British actor alive. "There's also his strong will to live," he commented. Sellers has starred in more than 40 movies and was a top British comedian and character actor long before he achieved international fame with his portrayal of the bumbling Inspector Clouzot in the Pink Panther series.

A noon bulletin issued by the hospital said that although Sellers still is gravely ill, "his condition is basically unchanged from Monday night."

"He is still requiring all the professional expertise and specialized equipment of the intensive care unit, including breathing assistance."

Johnson reported that the hospital has been flooded with flowers, cards and telephone "get well" messages from show business celebrities around the world.

Actress Brit Ekland, who was married to Sellers when he suffered his first heart attack, arrived from Stockholm with their 15-year-old daughter, Victoria.

Lynne Frederick, the actor's present wife, was reported flying to London from California. She is his fourth wife, 29 years his junior, and they were talking divorce last year. But they got together again and recently completed a movie in Paris.

Miss Ekland, who was divorced from Sellers in 1968, said she brought their daughter to see her father but didn't plan to visit him herself.

Sellers suffered his first heart attack in 1964 and was said then to have "clinically died" eight times. After another attack in 1977, he was fitted with a pacemaker to regulate his heartbeat.

He had a mild attack in Dublin in May and was hospitalized for six days. Shortly afterward, he appeared, looking strained and exhausted, at the Cannes Film Festival, reportedly against the advice of his doctors.

Sellers' raved-about movie "Being There" is currently being shown in London.

FCC removes 'regulatory debris' of a decade

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission is repealing the last major rules limiting what cable television systems can show their subscribers, a decision that came despite protests from the broadcasting and movie industries.

By a 4-3 vote, the FCC decided Tuesday that local TV stations are not adversely affected when a cable system offers subscribers the signals of TV stations from other cities.

"By today's action, the FCC has removed the regulatory debris of a previous decade; we have thus expanded the choices that consumers will have in the future," said FCC Chairman Charles D. Ferris.

"These rules, when subjected to thorough analysis, lack the slightest hint of justification in terms of the overall interest of TV viewers," he said. "Cable has not and will not destroy broadcasting, as was once feared. In fact, our staff has found that cable has in many cases improved the profitability of broadcast stations by improving the reception of an otherwise weak UHF signal."

The FCC decision means it will junk its distant-signal and syndicated-exclusivity rules. The former limited the number of TV signals from other cities that a cable operator can show. The syndicated-exclusivity rule lets a local TV station which has bought the exclusive rights to a program force a cable system to black out the program should it appear on a distant station.

According to FCC officials, both rules were adopted in 1972 only as a means of compensating for the lack of a copyright law covering cable systems. Such a law was finally passed by Congress in 1976.

Texas officials will appeal ruling on alien education in schools

HOUSTON (AP) — While Hispanic leaders voiced enthusiastic approval for a federal judge's order that allows illegal alien children to enter school this fall, Texas officials say they will appeal the ruling.

The decision by (U.S. District) Judge (Woodrow) Seals is a landmark decision bringing Texas back in line with the concept of equal opportunity. Ruben Bonilla, national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said Tuesday.

Bonilla said he would ask the state to support Seals' ruling Monday that struck down a 1975 Texas law barring undocumented children from public schools because "an appeal would reflect an attitude of indifference."

Mark White, Texas Attorney General, said Tuesday the state will appeal the ruling and is researching the possibilities of filing a lawsuit against the federal government for not enforcing federal immigration laws.

"Now we're being told to pay for the failures of the Justice Department," White said, adding that the federal government "caused the problem and they're the ones who should pay for it."

"They're calling upon the taxpayers in the state to pay for undocumented workers' children who are unlawfully in the country," White said.

Seals ordered the state to stop enforcing the law and said Texas schools must begin admitting the students Sept. 1.

Texas officials estimate there are about 110,000 illegal alien children in the state, but the plaintiffs during the trial said the figure is closer to 20,000.

Robert Byrd, executive director of the Gulf Coast Legal Foundation, said Tuesday the Houston Independent School District may enroll no more than 1,000 undocumented children this fall, instead of the 7,000 estimated by HISD officials.

White said the appeal would attack the extension of certain constitutional rights to illegal alien children.

"It's a very broad issue and we think our position is backed by the facts we presented," White said.

Seals' ruling upheld the plaintiffs contention that they were entitled to an equal educational opportunity under rights guaranteed in the fourteenth amendment.

White emphasized that the state was acting on the children's behalf during the five-week trial, saying "I think people should be aware that the Justice Department is taking a position supporting illegal alien children when they (the government) are the cause of the problem in the first place."

Attorneys for the plaintiffs called a press conference Tuesday to dispute what they called "gross exaggerations" and inflammatory statements made by state and school officials after the ruling was announced Monday.

Several of the attorneys said the remarks had "racial overtones" and charged that the reaction to the ruling may keep undocumented children from attending school.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements, in Waco Tuesday to address a National Guard gathering, voiced his disapproval of the ruling by saying, "the main issue we must solve is the problem of undocumented aliens, not education."

"There is a contradiction of terms," Clements said, "in that illegal alien children can get our free education." He added he felt the problem of illegal aliens could be handled by temporary work visas.

White said he was not against educating illegal alien children, but added "the big problem is who is going to pay."

"There are two losers in this," he said. "First, the children of Mexican-Americans who are trying to use the bilingual program. It is going to spread too thin. There are not enough teachers."

"Second, the taxpayer who is going to be required to pay for the expenses of these children, who should be paid for by the nation as a whole."

School officials across the state, particularly those from cities along the U.S.-Mexican border, have said the ruling will trigger a flood of undocumented children that will cause the schools severe economic problems.

Billy Reagan, HISD superintendent, said he will ask HISD board members to push for federal impact funding to help schools defray the cost of admitting the students.

Judge dismisses suit filed by woman against parents

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed a $33 million lawsuit filed by a Michigan woman who claimed her parents abandoned her in a home for the mentally retarded because of a birth defect.

Karen Multack Boldt of New Haven, Mich., last year sued her parents, Hyman and Lorayne Multack of East Chicago, Ind.; the Chicago doctor who delivered her, Dr. Allen Schultz; and two Illinois medical institutions.

The suit charged that her parents succeeded in having her diagnosed as mentally retarded and committed her to a state institution, telling relatives she was dead.

Because the 27-year-old woman is of normal intelligence, the suit contended, her commitment to the home amounted to illegal imprisonment.

But U.S. District Judge Thomas McMillen ruled that a two-year statute of limitations on the claims of false imprisonment and medical malpractice had run out.

He said in the decision earlier this month that since Mrs. Boldt discovered her identity when she was 14, she should have filed suit within two years after that time.

In the suit, Mrs. Boldt contended her parents decided to abandon her when they learned she was born with spina bifida, a defect that leaves the spinal cord exposed.

Billy's roll with Libya entangled in foreign policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's national security adviser capitalized on Billy Carter's controversial relations with the Libyan government by using him as a go-between in seeking Libya's assistance in an effort to gain release of the American hostages in Iran, White House officials say.

The revelation marks the first acknowledgment by White House officials that the president's gregarious, plain-spoken younger brother, who reluctantly registered with the Justice Department last week as an agent of the Libyan government, played any role in U.S. foreign policy.

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell, in a lengthy briefing Tuesday on the controversy swirling about Billy Carter, said national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski asked him to set up a meeting on Nov. 27, 1979, with Ali el Houderi, Libya's chief Washington representative.

A written statement released by Powell's office noted that the meeting between Brzezinski, Houderi and Billy Carter took place "three weeks after the seizure of the hostages (in Iran), and the United States was exploring every possible avenue of contact with the Iranian leaders."

Powell said he didn't know whether the president was aware of the meeting. But he also insisted, "There can hardly be any serious thought that the president's brother is in a position to advise the president on foreign policy matters."

While the meeting was unsuccessful in winning the hostages' freedom, Powell said Brzezinski was informed a few weeks later that Col. Moammar Khadafy, leader of Libya's leftist Arab government, had sent a message to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in Iran calling for their release.

President Carter, in a two-paragraph statement on the controversy, said it was not "appropriate for a close relative of the president to undertake any assignment on behalf of a foreign government," and he called for a full public disclosure of "the existence of any such relationship."

The president did not mention his brother's receipt of $220,000 from the Libyans, which Billy Carter and the Libyans have characterized as part of a $500,000 loan.

Billy Carter was surrounded by reporters as he left a restaurant at a New York hotel, where he was staying Tuesday night. When a reporter held up a newspaper with the headline, "White House Says: Asked Billy Aid on Hostages," the president's brother said: "Paper's right." He refused further comment.

The Senate Judiciary Committee was deciding today whether to investigate the Billy Carter-Libyan ties.

Report contends inflation slowing; consumer price up

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the unemployment picture gets gloomier, consumer price increases are expected to fall below a double-digit annual rate over the last half of this year, the Carter administration and private economists say.

Continued evidence of this easing inflation rate may show up in the government's Consumer Price Index for June, being released today.

Consumer prices rose 0.9 percent in May, the same as in April. This translates to a 10.9 percent annual rate, far less than the 18 percent-plus pace in the first three months of this year.

That rampant rate led President Carter to revise his fiscal 1981 budget and propose a $16.5 billion surplus that since has disappeared under the weight of recession. The administration now estimates a $29.8 billion deficit next year, largely because of rising unemployment, which increases government spending but cuts tax revenue.

The Federal Reserve Board says the jobless rate could exceed 9 percent this year and the Carter administration expects it to remain at about 8.5 percent through 1981.

The administration also estimates that consumer prices will rise 12 percent between 1979's fourth quarter and 1980's fourth quarter. This means an average 8.75 percent annual rate through the rest of this year, says Charles Schultze, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

At the same time, Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass., predicts that consumer prices will rise at an annual level only slightly above 8 percent through December.

Despite moderating prices, Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker said Tuesday that monetary policy will continue to be used to further curb inflation and warned that a tax cut now is "premature" and should not be considered before late this year or 1981.

"Neither the decline in interest rates nor the removal of (credit controls) should be interpreted as an invitation to consumers or businessmen to undertake incautious or imprudent borrowing commitments," Volcker told the Senate Banking Committee.

The Federal Reserve is prepared, if necessary, to see the growth of currency and all kinds of deposits such as checking accounts "fall significantly short of the mid-point of their specified ranges for the year," he said.

At the same time, Volcker said the board's open market committee plans to continue reducing the growth of money and credit next year, although no specific goals have been set.

IRA commander near death in hunger strike

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Convicted Irish Republican Army commander Martin Meehan, on a hunger strike for 66 days, was reported "close to death" today.

Meehan's attorney, Oliver Kelly, who visited him in the military wing of Belfast's Musgrave Park Hospital for three hours Tuesday night with a doctor, said the guerrilla refused appeals to abandon his self-imposed fast.

Meehan's wife, Briega, said he received last rites by a Roman Catholic priest in his guarded ward late Tuesday.

Meehan, 35, intensified his hunger strike a week ago by refusing all liquids. He began the strike May 18 to protest his 12-year prison sentence for kidnapping.

He claimed the sole prosecution witness at his trial last March was his alleged victim, a self-confessed British Army informer with a record of mental disorders. Meehan claims he was framed.

NEW YORK (AP) — Two ostrich-feather fans that once shielded burlesque dancer Sally Rand have become part of a museum exhibit dedicated to "feather arts."

The feathers, on loan from the Chicago Historical Society, were put on exhibit at the Museum of Natural History here Tuesday with a bit of fanfare. Dana Moore, a member of the cast of the Broadway musical "Sugar Babies," did a dance with them.

Miss Rand became a national sensation with her appearance at the Chicago World's Fair in 1933. Despite sporadic charges of indecent exposure, she continued fan dancing into her 70s and died last year at the age of 75.

LONDON (AP) — An unidentified dealer in rare books has paid $237,000 for a notebook containing the final draft of Alfred Lord Tennyson's poem "In Memoriam," a tribute to Arthur Hallam, the Victorian poet's friend and his sister's fiance, who died in Vienna in 1833.

Sotheby's auction house called it "the most complete manuscript of the most distinguished literary work of the Victorian age," and said the price paid at Tuesday's sale equaled the world record for an English manuscript, paid last month at rival Christie's for the Rev. Gilbert White's "The Natural History of Serne." The manuscript runs 2,596 lines in 649 four-line stanzas.

Richard Egan: an academic actor

RICHARD EGAN

BY SALLY ROGERS
Of the Pampa News

Richard Egan, a native San Franciscan, approaches acting from an academic standpoint. He believes the academic theatre embraces the history of the development of civilization and embodies the customs and mores of the time.
"If you know scholastic philosophy, it helps you," says Egan, who is starring in the comedy "Broken Up" showing through mid-August at the Country Squire Dinner Theatre in Amarillo.

Egan studied acting at Stanford and Northwestern Universities, where he appeared in graduate theatre productions of "Othello," "The Miser," "Richard III," "Twelfth Night," "Of Mice and Men," and others. He knew it would be difficult to get into acting, but "you don't get to be an actor by standing in a soup line. It takes study and endeavor."

While at Stanford, Egan went to Hollywood to make a screen test. "I fell flat on my face," Egan remembers. However, studying gave him a feeling of being substantial. "At least I hadn't wasted time wandering the streets or trying to get into commercial theatre."

After he had made several "B" pictures, Egan got the lead in a major motion picture, "Underwater," with Jane Russell. He had not yet established himself as a star, and "until you establish yourself, everyone knows you're not right for the part." A makeup man wanted to improve Egan's appearance by taping his ear back. "You'd look better," he told the actor.

Egan finds his profession exciting and likes all mediums of acting. "I like stage work for the immediacy of it. There's a gratification that you might not get in film. One thing about motion pictures, though, is recognition." However, Egan's choice of roles depends upon the quality of the script rather than on the medium.

Egan has a high opinion of actors, but believes young actors need more training. "It's difficult if they don't have a background to sustain them. They lack experience and then are suddenly thrown into the limelight." Egan regrets the passing of movie heroes like Gary Cooper, Clark Gable, Tyrone Power and Humphrey Bogart. "The hero concept doesn't occur anymore. There's still a need for it, though."

Robert Redford, Burt Reynolds and James Caan are actors Egan admires. He also thought highly of Elvis Presley, with whom he worked in "Love Me Tender." Presley's death deeply moved Egan, for "he was a joyous person who had himself in proper perspective without arrogance."

Robert Mitchum is another actor Egan respects. "Bob Mitchum is an excellent actor. He's a learned fellow, a voracious reader," Egan noted that Mitchum also writes poetry and song lyrics.

Egan's motion picture credits include "A Summer Place," "The Three Hundred Spartans," "Esther and the King," "Chubasco," "The View from Pompey's Head," "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue," "These Thousand Hills," "Demetrius and the Gladiators," and many others.

Egan starred in two television series, "Empire" and "Redigo." His television movies include "The House That Wouldn't Die" and "Shootout in a One Dog Town." He has appeared in episodes of "Police Story" and an episode of "The Quest."

In 1958 Egan won the Laurel Award and in 1964, was voted in the top ten percent of all entertainers worldwide by Good Housekeeping magazine.

He was a captain in the U.S. Army, where he taught judo, bayonet and knife fighting. He served in the Philippines. Egan and his wife, actress Patricia Hardy, have five children: Tricia, Kathleen, Colleen, Richard, Jr. and Maureen.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I can't stand cigarette smoke, but two years ago I married a three-pack-a-day man. I knew it would be hard for Jim to give up smoking altogether, so I told him I'd appreciate it if he wouldn't smoke in our bedroom.
He promised, and for a long time he kept his promise. Then he started to "forget" once in a while, and now he's been smoking in our bedroom regularly.
One night his cigarette rolled off the ashtray and burned a big hole in the nightstand. That did it! I finally said, "OK, Buddy, there are going to be some new rules around here. There will be no lovemaking in the same room you smoke in!"
Knowing Jim, I thought for sure that would cure him, but it didn't. Jim is still smoking in the bedroom, and I'm...
HUNGRY FOR LOVE

DEAR HUNGRY: You overplayed your hand. Give Jim another chance and remind him of his promise. And insist that he owes it to you to honor that promise. Should he "forget," remind him, and remind him, and remind him. But never withhold marital relations as a means of punishing him.

DEAR ABBY: HEARTSICK PARENTS wrote: "Recently our 25-year-old daughter decided to follow in the ways of the times. She took to living with her boyfriend, and now they have a child. They say that marriage may or may not come later. God knows how upset and brokenhearted we've been, but we thought it best to tell our wonderful friends of many years that we were new grandparents."

HEARTSICK PARENTS' complaint was that not one of their friends had written or kept in touch since. They wrote: "How it would have helped to ease our heartache if they had responded. Do they think that we condone our daughter's lifestyle? (We do not, but we're making the best of it)." You replied, "Wonderful friends should be supportive, loving and non-judgmental, so perhaps your friends were not so 'wonderful' after all."

THE WEEDERS GUIDE

By Earl Aronson

France won first place for its exhibit at the outdoor Florales at Montreal, and Italy won the top indoor award at the international event being held for the first time in North America this summer. Italy was second and Great Britain was third in the outdoor displays, which will continue until Sept. 1. Holland was second and the United States third in the indoor competition which concluded in May.
More than a score of nations, Canadian provinces and private companies competed in the indoor exhibits and about 30 outdoors.
The French display contains thousands of flowers and large trees. It is described as classical, "glorifying intelligence and symmetry," and was designed by the international landscape architect, Serge Chateil. It consists of nine pergolas occupied by nine cities or regions, around a large, cascading water basin, in turn surrounded by trees, shrubs and a rose garden.

How to get ready for guests

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures
Years ago, spring and early summer issues of decorating magazines often included articles on furnishing the guest room.

Editors knew such articles would be in demand since Americans are a traveling and a sociable people. And summer was sure to herald the arrival of visitors from afar.

Nowadays, stories on furnishing the guest room are few and far between. The reality is that space for a once-in-a-while room is lacking in the one- and two-bedroom apartments and small tract houses many Americans live in today.

However, the social impulse need not be stifled, even if space is tight. A walk through any large furniture store shows there is a wide variety of furniture that solves the problem of providing a bed for a night or two in rooms that usually serve other purposes.

The most obvious way to accommodate guests is to outfit the living room with a dual-purpose sofa. Convertible sofas open out to become single, double or queen-sized beds at night. Extra-large chaise lounges, daybeds and foam lounges also are comfortable enough to provide a night's sleep for a guest while integrating well into a conventional living-room decorating scheme.

A recent development in dual-purpose sitting and sleeping furniture is the sofa or seating system composed of a number of all-foam pieces which unbuckle, fold out or otherwise separate to provide a flat surface for sleeping.

Furnishing a living room or a family room with seating components of this type can provide enough sleeping room for a family reunion.

Look for such pieces in the casual-living departments of stores, where you also will find such useful items as storage ottomans, inexpensive cubes, folding screens and other accessories to provide temporary and convertible storage and privacy for guests.

Solutions to the question of where to put guest children are easily found through bunk beds and trundle beds or even the inexpensive expedient of foam pads and sleeping bags.

If purchasing new furniture is not in the cards, there are methods of converting what is already on hand into comfortable accommodations for a guest. You can offer someone a pallet on the floor. It would have been unthinkable in the past to offer guests the floor as a sleeping place, but the advent of the modern, carpet-covered platform has helped to make the floor an acceptable place for lounging.

Consider this do-it-yourself idea: Take an old mattress and cover it with a fitted, printed sheet. Or, if you are a good home sewer, upholster the mattress with an attractive, heavy-duty fabric. Add some throw cushions and set the pillows and mattress on a carpeted platform for height, or on the floor itself, if appropriate. At small expense you have created space for a guest.

For privacy, add a folding screen upholstered at home in the same fabric.

'Rage of Angels' a soap opera

Power — how it corrupts. Love — how it destroys. And life — how it goes on despite the corruption and destruction.
Sidney Sheldon, who has brought us such themes before, brings them to us again in "Rage of Angels."
Jennifer Parker, a bright young attorney who's beautiful as well, is at the center of this opus. Within 24 hours of her bascent career on the staff of the Manhattan District Attorney, Jennifer finds herself disgraced and facing disbarment.
Within five years, she is one of the most sought-after defense attorneys in the country.
She loves and is loved by Adam Warner, an attorney with a brilliant political future. But fate — as usual in these novels — loses a few curve balls. While Adam continues on his honorable path to the top, Jennifer is forced to sell her soul and body to Michael Moretti, the head of one of America's organized-crime families.

Poor Jennifer becomes torn between love and power and is compelled to put her integrity on the line.
"Rage of Angels" is a 500-page soap opera, with occasional forays into social issues that are really battles of Good (Adam) vs. Evil (Michael) with Jennifer caught in the middle.
But Sheldon is a remarkably good writer for the genre and, despite the cliches and trite situations, his skill makes "Rage of Angels" readable and even, to an extent, enjoyable.

Woman surgeon recalls training

By CAROL DEEGAN
NEW YORK (AP) — There were only seven women among 90 men when 20-year-old Elizabeth Morgan entered Yale Medical School in 1967. It was the beginning of 11 years of training for Dr. Morgan, who now has her own private practice in plastic surgery in the Washington, D.C., area.

Dr. Morgan estimates there are some 2,000 women surgeons in the United States, including some 200 female plastic surgeons.

How does it feel to be in this unique position?
"I think of myself as a woman and a doctor and then a surgeon," the 33-year-old Dr. Morgan said with a smile. "It's what you're good at, it's what you're trained to be, and the fact that you're one of a few doesn't mean that you walk around all the time saying, 'oh, here I am, one of a few.'"

Dr. Morgan studied at Radcliffe, Yale and Oxford and did her internship and residency at major metropolitan hospitals in the United States. She describes her years of training in her book, "The Making of a Woman Surgeon."

"When I applied to medical school, I decided I wanted to be a surgeon and ... I was told that really, as a woman, it wasn't the right field for me. They'd never had a woman surgeon; they said they'd had a woman resident who hadn't been able to make it and she'd had a nervous breakdown, just couldn't take it. I didn't see any reason that made it so mysterious and impossible and uniquely male. And it isn't," Dr. Morgan said.

She said Harvard's admissions policy and attitudes toward women led her to turn down a spot in that medical school and accept placement at Yale.

"I think the figure is about 10 percent of people who start training in general surgery drop out to something like radiology or pathology," she said. "I've never known a woman who has dropped out, they've all been men. And I don't know whether that's because the women who go in, it's more of a challenge, or whether there's just too few women."

Dr. Morgan said the most difficult part of her training was the long hours she had to work. "My internship was absolutely grueling...to start work Saturday morning and not sleep until Monday night and then go back to work Tuesday morning for another 36 hours, that's terrible," she said.

Dr. Morgan said she had encountered some difficulties during her training because there were so few female students but, she added, "most of the people who trained me were just great."

"On the two times when I worked with doctors who really didn't like me, they didn't like me as a person, they didn't like me as a woman, they felt I was rejecting them sexually, that was horrible. But that only happened twice," she said.

Dr. Morgan said she began writing her book when she was an intern "because so many things were happening to me, I just wanted to write them down. And a lot of them were very emotional. Patients were dying, patients had diseases I'd never seen before, and it was very exciting."

She has been in private practice in plastic surgery for two years.

formed hands and so forth, there's a lot of surgery but there is a lot beyond surgery that you can do to help them."

She does about 20 percent cosmetic surgery "but it's such an expensive thing to undertake that I really try to talk people out of it. I think it's a bad investment. You don't get interest on it and you can't take it back to the manufacturer."

Dr. Morgan said she stopped taking new patients for a time after her book was published "because I would hate to find that I was advertising myself through my book."

For the future, Dr. Morgan plans to change from solo private practice to group practice because "it's a 24-hour-a-day, 365-days-a-year job, otherwise."

She also plans to write another book about her experiences as a woman surgeon and someday hopes to marry and have children.

She makes it very clear that she enjoys her work. "The great thing about surgery is that things happen all the time, and there are so many fascinating things that are just going on, it's like a mini movie theater," she said. "It's very exciting, there's a lot of drama, a lot of action...It's a great field and very satisfying."

Check pension plan now to avoid trouble

How much money would you have if you retired tomorrow? Would your pension be big enough for you to live on?

"If you don't know the answers, you could be in trouble. Just because you are covered by a pension plan does not mean that you will automatically get a pension — you must meet the requirements of your plan," says a guide from the U.S. Department of Labor. "If you don't know what your plan requires, you may fail to qualify for benefits."

The department guide, "Know Your Pension Plan," is available, at no charge, from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 534H, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

There are two basic types of pensions: the defined benefit plan and the defined contribution plan. With a defined benefit plan, the amount of money you will get when you retire is fixed in advance, but your contributions vary. With the defined contribution plan — also known as an individual account plan — it's the other way around; the contribution is fixed in advance, but the amount of money you will get varies.

It is important to know how your benefits are vested. Vesting protects you against losing your entire pension if you change jobs. ERISA sets minimum vesting requirements for all plans covered by the law. There are three options:

—Cliff vesting, which provides full vesting after 10 years of service and no vesting before that.

—Graded vesting, which provides 25 percent vesting after five years of service, 5 percent vesting for each additional year up to 10 years, plus an additional 10 percent for each year thereafter.

—Rule-of-45 vesting, which provides 50 percent vesting for an employee with at least five years of service when his or her age and years of service add up to 45, plus 10 percent for each additional year up to five years.

Before you start calculating your pension, check to see how your employer measures a year of service and what happens if there is a break in employment. In most cases, the Labor Department says, you get credit for a year of service if you work at least 1,000 hours in a period of 12 consecutive months.

Ghosts, killings blended in murder mystery

GHOSTS. By Ed McBain. Viking, 212 Pages. $9.95.

It is four days before Christmas in the city of Isola. It is snowing. The time is 7 p.m.

Police detectives are standing in the swirling snow in front of an apartment house. At their feet, sprawled on the sidewalk, is the body of a woman. She has been stabbed in the chest.

Detective Steve Carella arrives at the scene and a new Ed McBain 87th Precinct murder mystery begins — to the delight of readers hooked on these books — to gather momentum and surge forward.

Within half an hour after the body of the woman has been found another body is discovered in the apartment house. The dead man is Gregory Craig, author of the best-selling book "Deadly Shades." Craig, like the woman on the sidewalk, has been stabbed. Are the two murders connected? Carella doesn't know, but he intends to find out.

And he does — though it takes him a while. McBain is too skillful a writer to give his plot away in its early stages. He has hooked the reader and he intends to keep him dangling until the bang-up ending when all is revealed, which he does.

Although these disparate elements would seem to work against each other, they don't. McBain knows what he is about and he very nicely blends ghost story and murder story into a satisfying unity.

Climber recalls eruption

By DAN LIEFGREEN
Scottsdale Progress

SCOTTSDALE, ARIZ. (AP) — Although the spirit of adventure that spurred James J. Hall to twice walk up the side of Mount Vesuvius during its March 1944 eruption has waned with the years, his curiosity about volcanoes has been rekindled by the Mount St. Helens eruption.

"There was a terrific, roaring noise when it (Vesuvius) erupted. It looked like a crown of fire," recalled Hall, a Scottsdale resident who photographed Vesuvius' eruption March 18, 1944, from the balcony of an Allied officers' club overlooking the Bay of Naples. Hall was stationed in Naples with the Air Force.

"Curiosity and adventure" led him to travel up the side of the simmering mountain during its six days of eruption, he said.

"It was a sight unparalleled to my eyes... ash could be seen from the entire bay," said Hall. Two days before Vesuvius erupted, Hall flew over it and remembers peering into its gigantic crater.

"There was no indication of an eruption... It looked like Sunset Crater (near Flagstaff)."

The night after the 3,060-foot-high mountain erupted, Hall and five other officers crowded into a command car and drove about half-way up the side of the mountain. They abandoned the car and walked to take a closer look at the lava gushing an estimated 45 mph and 100 feet wide.

A piece of lava lodged in one of his untied boots, he said, and he found it to be "uncomfortably hot." Standing next to the molten lava reminded Hall of working inside a Birmingham, Ala., blast furnace.

The next day, Hall guided two truckloads of thrill-seekers and shutterbugs to view the volcano that was belching ash 22,000 feet into the air. But the men quickly found themselves caught between flak and falling ashes as a German air raid disrupted their sightseeing trip.

"We were in the midst of both man and nature working destruction," he wrote his wife. Surprisingly, the eruption — the volcano's last reported activity — did not claim a life. (In 79 A.D. a Vesuvius eruption buried the Roman cities of Pompeii, Herculaneum and Stabiae, killing an estimated 10 percent of their residents.)

"People knew to get out of there," Hall explained, as opposed to those who remained on the sides of Mount St. Helens.

Bell ringers

American League baseball roundup

By HERSCHEL NISSENON AP Sports Writer
Two Bells—Buddy and Kevin—and all's well with the Texas Rangers and Chicago White Sox.

The Rangers continued their smooth sailing of recent days and ran their winning streak to four games when Buddy Bell again tormented the Boston Red Sox, collecting three singles and scoring twice—including the winner in the ninth inning—in Texas' 4-3 victory Tuesday night.

Meanwhile, Kevin (no relation) Bell rapped a two-run double and eventually scored as the White Sox defeated the Kansas City Royals 6-1, ruining another comeback attempt by off-injured Steve Busby.

In other American League action, the New York Yankees defeated Milwaukee 3-0 in the opener of a two-nighter but the Brewers bounced back to take the nightcap 4-1, the California Angels beat the Detroit Tigers 6-4, the Baltimore Orioles trounced the Minnesota Twins 8-4, the Oakland A's defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 5-1 after dropping the opener 6-2 and the Cleveland Indians blanked the Seattle Mariners 4-0.

Texas third baseman Bell is making a career of hitting against the Red Sox, especially in Boston. Bell, who singled ahead of Rusty Staub's fourth-inning homer, led off the ninth with his third consecutive hit, was sacrificed to second and scored the winner on a single by Pat Putnam. The triumph lifted the Rangers to the .500 level and left them 9½ games behind Kansas City in the AL West. White Sox 6, Royals 1.

Kevin Bell's double continued his hot hitting since White Sox owner Bill Veck sent him to a hypnotist. Bell was hitting "about .080" when Veck convinced him to start working with Chicago furniture magnate and amateur hypnotist Mort Cohen.

"I've been talking to him every day, even on the road," said Bell. "You count to five, then you close your eyes. Your eyes get tired. Each session lasts about seven or eight minutes. He mostly works on self-confidence and thinking positively."

"The first night I was 2-for-4. I've been hitting the ball pretty well. He just tells me to go up there and be comfortable, that I'm going to make solid contact and have good knowledge of the strike zone. He doesn't charge me anything for it; he's a multimillionaire and doesn't need the money."

Busby, who has been trying since 1976 to bounce back from shoulder surgery and was recently recalled from the minors, lasted 42-3 innings, giving up nine hits and six runs in his first big league start in almost a year.

Yankees 3-1, Brewers 0-4
Paul Mitchell pitched eight innings of one-run relief and Don Money hit a two-run homer, pacing Milwaukee to victory in the nightcap. The Yankees took the opener as Tommy John, 15-3, hurled a four-hitter for his sixth shutout and tied Baltimore's Steve Stone and Philadelphia's Steve Carlton for the most victories in the majors.

Mitchell relieved starter Bill Travers following a rain delay of two hours and nine minutes after the first inning. He went the rest of the way, scattering five hits, striking out six and retiring the last 13 batters. The Brewers scored on Ed Romero's two-run single in the second inning and Money's homer in the third.

In the opener, Johnny Oates, Buckey Dent and Bobby Murcer rapped RBI hits off Lary Sorensen in the fifth inning. The split left the Brewers 7½ games behind New York in the AL East. Angels 6, Tigers 4.

Larry Harlow singled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and Mark Clear recorded his eighth save to help Andy Hassler snap a personal 17-game losing streak in a California uniform. Hassler last won as an Angel on April 29, 1975. He pitched for Boston, the New York Mets and Pittsburgh before the Angels reacquired him last month.

Jason Thompson, who opened the seventh with a double and scored on Harlow's hit, provided an insurance run in the eighth with an RBI single. Lance Parrish hit two home runs to rally the Tigers from an early 4-0 deficit. Orioles 8, Twins 4.

Dan Graham drove in four runs with a homer and a double to help Mike Flanagan win his 10th game with a seven-hitter. Graham, a former Twins player who drove in six runs against his old club Monday night, clubbed a three-run homer in the first inning off Roger Erickson and doubled home another run in the fifth.

Graham wasn't gloating. He wasn't doing much of anything. "I really don't have anything to say," he said. "It's not anything out of bitterness or toward reporters. It's just the way I am." Indians 4, Mariners 0.

Len Barker pitched five perfect innings and finished with a four-hitter as Cleveland ended a four-game losing streak. Barker struck out eight and didn't walk a batter. Ted Cox singled to lead off the sixth inning, breaking up his perfect game bid. The Indians, sparked by Toby Harrah's two-run triple, scored all their runs in the first inning.

Angry Parker wants out of Pittsburgh

By NORM CLARKE AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — All-Star outfielder Dave Parker, upset that he's become a target of homepark fans, says he's "reached the point of no return" in Pittsburgh and wants the Pirates to trade him.

His trade demand came two days after the latest fan abuse incident involving the National League's 1978 Most Valuable Player and two-time batting champion.

Parker, who took a .284 batting average with 12 home runs and 52 runs batted into Tuesday night's game, walked off the field in the eighth inning of a doubleheader opener last Sunday in Pittsburgh after a spectator nearly hit him with a transistor radio battery. The 29-year-old outfielder sat out the second game, won by Pittsburgh 8-7 over Los Angeles.

"It is in the best interests of both parties — the city of Pittsburgh and myself — to complete my career without bodily harm," said Parker. "Whoever feels that strongly about Dave Parker, we can eliminate that problem."

Pirates' Manager Chuck Tanner said Parker has become the target of "a sick person."

Parker said he's informed the Pirates' front office that they "have to get me out of town, period."

If traded, terms of his contract confine the list of potential team to nine, including Cincinnati, his hometown. Other teams he identified Tuesday are the Los Angeles Dodgers, California Angels and Atlanta Braves.

"I was hit in the back of the head with a gas valve from a pellet gun last year. Sunday it was a battery. Earlier this year somebody tossed a sock full of nuts and bolts that weighed five pounds. A couple of years ago it was a bat," Parker told The Associated Press.

"Maybe it's the money. But everybody else in baseball respects me. It hasn't happened all year except in Pittsburgh and I find that hard to digest because that's where I live."

Parker entered Tuesday's game against San Diego batting .285 with 52 runs batted-in and 12 homers.

"Hey, I love the city and I'd love to stay there. Fact is I've got to go out everyday and put my career on the line. I'll do everything I can to help the Pirates win, but I've reached the point of no return."

"He's right in everything he says about the abuse," said Tanner. "But, for every one that tries to do something to him, there's 100 that love him. I sure don't want to see him leave. He's the best player in the game. He's the guy that makes the wheel go around for the Pirates."

Harding Peterson, Pittsburgh's executive vice president, said in Pittsburgh that he has not spoken to Parker or his agent Tom Reich, about the trade talk.

Peterson said he is "sorry to hear Dave feels that way, adding, "other players have experienced the same problem, but "it seems to happen more to Dave."

Yugoslavia unbeaten

MOSCOW (AP) — In the absence of the boycotting Americans, Olympic basketball fans are looking to Yugoslavia for the most creative, U.S.-style play in the men's tournament.

Boasting such players as center Kresimir Cosic, a former star at Brigham Young University, and silky smooth Drazen Dalipagic and Dragan Kicanovic, Yugoslavia is already through to the semifinals after an impressive 129-91 victory Tuesday over Poland. Earlier, Yugoslavia beat Senegal 104-67.

"In Montreal we played the Americans in the finals and learned much from their play," said Yugoslav Coach Ranko Zeravica, recalling the 1976 contest that the U.S. won 95-74 en route to a gold medal.

"Many teams in Europe have tried to imitate the Americans, but now we're trying to find our own style, maybe not very disciplined, but giving freedom to players to be creative and use their skill," he said.

In the Poland game, this meant behind the back passes by Kicanovic, dribbling through the legs and bank shots from Dalipagic and Mirza Delibasic.

Poland's loss meant that Spain, looking for its first Olympic medal in basketball and inspired by Minnesota-born forward Wayne Brabender, now a Spanish citizen, also went through to the semifinals. Spain beat Senegal Tuesday 94-65.

Spain and Yugoslavia qualified from group B of the preliminary round-robin competition. The tournament includes three groups of four teams each.

In group A, the heavily-favored Soviet Union plays Czechoslovakia Wednesday to qualify and challenge for Olympic gold, while Brazil looks to have the best chance of joining the Soviets — if it can defeat winless India.

Neslage wins honor Pampa defeats Friona 6-1 in tourney

Fred Neslage became only the fourth Pampian in the 46-year history of the Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament to win the Colonel Bogey award.

Neslage received the honor during Tuesday night's senior banquet at M.K. Brown auditorium.

Past Pampa winners were Art Aftergut, 1979; Mark Heath, 1966; and R.J. Hagan, 1944.

Pampa Americans defeated Friona, 6-1, Tuesday night in the second round of the 11-12 District Tournament at Optimist Park.

Pampa meets the Friona-Childress winner at 8 p.m. Thursday night in the double-elimination tournament. Pampa has yet to lose in the tournament.

Childress clobbered Dumas, 15-4, in one other game played last night. Dumas was eliminated from the tournament.

Spartacus revered in USSR

MOSCOW (AP) — One of the priceless bits of trivia one picks up from mingling with the masses is that the Soviet Union and America share a legendary hero.

It isn't George Washington or Daniel Boone. It isn't Karl Marx or Vladimir Lenin. It isn't Bruce Jenner or Vasily Alekseev.

It's a guy who lived 2,000 years ago and whose favorite sports were wrestling lions in the Roman Colosseum and tossing javelins through the hearts of Caesar's legions.

His name: Spartacus.

Everybody who went through the sixth grade in the United States a generation or two ago is familiar with the name. Sixth-graders were forced in elocution classes to recite the stirring oration of "Spartacus to the Gladiators."

After that, their interest waned.

Not in the USSR. The dauntless gladiator who freed the slaves and waged virtual bare-handed war against Rome's might in the century before Christ is held here as a model of the Soviet revolutionary spirit.

"He was a very strong and courageous," explained Tanyan Petrova, a student at Moscow State University. "He symbolized the downtrodden who rose up against their oppressors."

The Spartacus theme is woven through the USSR's competitive and cultural life. Practically any school kid in this vast land of 262 million people can relate Spartacus' life story without a single hitch.

"One of the country's most revered ballets is "Spartacus," which has been made into a film featuring Vladimir Vasilev in the title role and Natalie Bessmertnova as his wife, Frigia. The American movie version, starring Kirk Douglas, has filled theaters throughout the USSR.

A book on Spartacus, written by the Italian Dzavanoli, has been translated into Russian and can be bought at the corner book store.

Without searching through references, any of these students can tell you that in the century before Christ — around 73 BC — Spartacus was wrested from his home in Frakia, in Bulgaria, near the Yugoslavian and Greece borders, and brought to Rome as a slave in chains.

Because of his great strength he was converted into a gladiator to fight and kill for the amusement of emperors.

"Spartacus organized a successful revolt among the gladiators," explained Yuri Mareev. "About 50 of them escaped. Then they made war on the Romans. At that time Julius Caesar was involved in a power struggle with Krass and Pompey, both later killed."

"After two years, Spartacus was captured and crucified like Christ," said Tanya sadly.

Beyond the 1980 Moscow Olympics: Los Angeles, 1984

By Murray Olderman

LOS ANGELES (NEA) — Not one official American observer will be present to observe the XXII Summer Olympiad in Moscow despite the fact that four years from now the city of Los Angeles will host the Games and has committed $400 million for the purpose.

The Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, responsible for staging and planning the 1984 summer festival, did decide to send a seven-person delegation to Moscow. But it was to depart from the Soviet capital the day before the official opening ceremonies on July 19.

The seven were solely to attend the regular mandatory meetings of the International Olympic Committee and to make the first official report on their city's progress in preparing to host the rest of the world in '84.

Why not stay for the "fun and games"?

"We're on record as supporting President Carter's boycott," says Los Angeles spokesman Hank Rieger. But he makes it clear that his city is going ahead gung-ho in keeping the Olympic movement going four years hence.

Money is actually the name of the Games, present and future, and that ironically is why this supposedly purest amateur athletic competition is ordained to continue.

The USSR has already spent a total of $900 billion (that's billion) in anticipation of the 1980 Olympic Games. This includes new hotel construction, the building of a new airport, enlargement of its subway system and a general upgrading of all facilities in the Soviet capital.

"Their facilities for the Games are unbelievable," says Rieger, director of communications and public relations for the LAOOC.

Rieger and Peter V. Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles group, are the only officials from the LAOOC who have inspected the Moscow sites.

They marveled at the new sports hall that seats 45,000 spectators. It can be split down the middle by an iron door, separating the facility so that a basketball game and boxing matches can be held simultaneously.

They were similarly impressed with the other Soviet preparations.

Yet in Los Angeles and elsewhere through the United States, reaction to the current Games is apathetic. There is little interest in the competition.

At first, some 28,000 American visitors were expected to make the trek to the USSR for the Olympics, but that number has been reduced to 2,000. The U.S. press contingent, which would normally have been enormous, received early clearance for only a minuscule 35 persons.

Out of the 145 countries that belong to the IOC, only 83 were expected to have team representation in Moscow because of the influence of the American boycott. And many of them — such as New Zealand, which scaled its squad down from 150 to three — have merely token participants.

By contrast, the Los Angeles organizers envision a big turnout in 1984. They expect as many as 130 nations to send teams to the California extravaganza.

Russia has already assured the Americans that its Olymp-pic athletes will make the trek to Los Angeles despite the fact that the United States shunned the Moscow proceedings.

"We know the Eastern bloc countries will be there," says Ueberroth, "because sports is important to them, and they want to display their prowess on American soil. It's a way of depicting their life to us."

And from a practical point of view, Los Angeles welcomes all of them.

By March of next year, all the required venues for 1984 will have been contracted. Los Angeles will use existing facilities to stage most of the events, with only two new structures on the drawing boards.

DeLong claims medalist title for second consecutive year

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor

For the second year in a row, Harold DeLong of Shawnee, Okla. claimed medalist honors in the Tri-State Seniors Tournament at the Pampa Country Club with a one-under-par 70 during Tuesday's qualifying round.

DeLong, who has won the Tri-State championship three times, found his putter working for him on the fast greens.

"That's the way I like them," DeLong said. "I don't think I could have asked for better greens to play on. In fact the entire course is in the best shape I've ever seen it."

DeLong, who slipped past early leader J.B. White of Lubbock by one stroke, won the tournament title in 1977, 1973, and 1971. He tied for second with San Antonio's Web Wilder a year ago.

DeLong pined exactly half of the 18 holes and birdied four. He was even on the front nine and finished one under on the back nine.

Ironically, DeLong's lack of putting practice in recent weeks helped rather than hindered him.

"Back home we've lost a lot of our greens to the weather. I was practicing at a small course near Shawnee where they let the grass grow high on the greens. Instead of putting I just worked on my shots up to the green. I think that helped me more than anything," DeLong explained.

DeLong, who shot 69 last year to win the medalist title, didn't spend the entire day free of problems. He bogied No. 14, No. 2, and No. 4 holes, but his clutch putting made up for the mistakes.

"I had a bad second shot on No. 14 and went over the green. Then on the front side, I had trouble getting the ball up from the edge of the green on No. 2 and then I hit a bad chip shot on No. 4. However, I made some good par putts. I made three that I just had to have to win," DeLong said.

Tied for third at 72 are Dick Roden of Dallas and Roy Peden of Kermit.

Last year's champion, Bob Giese of Amarillo, is deadlocked for fourth with Amarillo's C.L. Dunivern, and Bill Winslow of Bartlesville, Okla. at 73.

Pampa High golf coach Deck Wolft was challenging DeLong for the lead, but instead wound up in a six-way tie at 74 after a bogey and double bogey on the back nine.

Mel Shaffer, Van Alstyne; W.W. Gray, Del City, Okla.; Harvey Eshelman, Kemp; Oliver Waters, Canadian; and J.T. Webb, Miami, are also at 74.

At 75 are J.F. Tracy, Sinton; Cecil

Cornelius, Amarillo; Web Wilder, San Antonio, and Haskell Graves, Oklahoma City.

Ray Dunkin of Alva, Okla. is alone at 76.

Dr. Foster Elder and Ed Myatt, both of Pampa, are tied with eight others at 77. Hart Brooks, Grand Prairie; Bill DeFoe, Amarillo; Bud McKinney, Dallas; Jay Satterwhite, Sinton; Glenn White, Amarillo; Hugo Lowenstern, Amarillo; D.D. McBride, Allen, and Wendall Berry, Granite, Okla. came in at 77.

The championship flight, which includes the low 28 scorers, will have three more rounds of stroke play with the flight to be cut again to 16 plus ties after today's round. Tuesday's 18 holes will be included in the 72-hole total score.

The final two rounds of the president's flight will include non-qualifiers after today's round is finished.

The remaining golfers, who were grouped in seven regular flights, started match play this morning. Those in the championship flight are scheduled to start second-round action this afternoon.

National League baseball roundup

By BRUCE LOWITT
 AP Sports Writer

It's a long, long way from April to July. But Bob Horner admits it's a long way from July to October, too.

When Horner, Atlanta's shaggy-blond, slightly pudgy third baseman, started the season, it looked as though it would be a long one, indeed — batting .059, making one error after another and getting into a lengthy row with Ted Turner after the Braves' owner tried to ship him to the minors.

But he's hitting like a major leaguer now. On Tuesday night he slugged two home runs, driving in four runs to help the Braves beat Montreal 7-5.

More important, perhaps, the homers were Horner's 15th in his last 23 games, the 19th and 20th of the season and gave him 13 in July, two short of the major league record shared by Joe Adcock and Hall of Famers Hank Greenberg and Joe DiMaggio.

"I've never seen a hitter that hot," said Braves Manager Bobby Cox. "The hottest home-run hitter I've ever seen."

In the rest of the National League Tuesday night, Cincinnati edged Philadelphia 3-2, Houston shaded New York 6-5, St. Louis trimmed Los Angeles 3-2 and Pittsburgh nipped San Diego 4-3. In the completion of Monday's darkness-suspended game, San Francisco beat Chicago 2-0 in 15 innings, then the Cubs won the regularly scheduled game 3-1.

His homers helped the Braves to a 5-3 lead, but when Horner kicked away a grounder in the eighth inning, it helped Montreal tie it. In the bottom of the inning, though, Glenn Hubbard got the winning hit off loser Stan Bahnsen, a two-run single up the middle.

Reds 3, Phillies 2

Ray Knight doubled and tripled and Dan Driessen drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly as the Reds handed Philadelphia its fifth successive loss and eighth in the last 11 games.

It also ruined Steve Carlton's bid for a major-league high 16th victory. He's tied at 15 with American Leaguers Steve Stone of Baltimore and Tommy John of New York.

And Carlton also is sixth on the all-time strikeout list. His five strikeouts in six innings gave him 173 this year, tops in the NL, and 2,856 for his career. Astros 6, Mets 5.

Pinch-hitter Jeff Leonard crashed a two-run homer in the sixth inning to start a three-run burst that gave the Astros their victory over New York and widened their West Division lead over Los Angeles to two games. Consecutive singles by Terry Puhl, Danny Heep and Jose Cruz accounted for Houston's winning run. Cardinals 3, Dodgers 2.

Dane Lorg, who hit a three-run homer to beat the Dodgers Monday night, doubled and came around on a Ken Reitz sacrifice fly to break a seventh-inning tie and give the Cardinals their triumph.

St. Louis' other runs against Don Sutton came on homers by Ted Simmons and Leon Durham. Ron Cey homered for Los Angeles. Pirates 4, Padres 3.

Steve Nicosia drove in two runs and Jim Bibby notched his 12th win, but it wasn't easy.

After Bibby silenced the Padres on five hits for seven innings, Enrique Romo started the eighth in relief. Dave Winfield greeted him with a homer, then Dave Cash tripled and Jerry Turner singled in the ninth. On came Grant Jackson — and out he went after singles by Gene Richards and Ozzie Smith cut the lead to a run. Kent Tekulve finally put down the uprising and earned his 13th save. Giants 2-1, Cubs 0-3.

Larry Herndon's home run in the 15th inning gave San Francisco a victory in the game halted by darkness after 12 innings Monday, then Chicago came back to win the regularly scheduled game as Mike Vail drove in two runs with a fourth-inning double.

"It's been a tough year," said Vail, a spot starter and pinch-hitter despite being the owner of a .300 average all season. "I've been struggling and swinging at some bad pitches lately, but it's very difficult to play under these circumstances and very hard to prepare mentally."

SPORTS

Soviets, East Germans dominating Olympics

MOSCOW (AP) — A bald British swimmer stopped the Soviet-East German juggernaut for one race and then stood under the flag of the International Olympic Committee in a medal ceremony that was unusual for the Moscow Games — and historic for the modern Olympic movement.

Duncan Goodhew, whose English tones picked up a southern twang during three years at North Carolina State University, won the 100-meter breaststroke Tuesday, beating silver medalist Arsen Miskarov of the Soviet Union and Peter Evans of Australia.

When the medal ceremony was held, there was no Union Jack, nor any "God Save the Queen," which was the way Great Britain has chosen to protest the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. Earlier in the day, when an Italian won a gold medal in shooting, the IOC banner and hymn also replaced traditional national symbols at the award presentation.

It was believed to be the first two times since the Games were reborn in 1896 that the Olympic hymn has been played at a medal ceremony.

But Goodhew's awards presentation was particularly unique for the Moscow Games because, when he was joined on the stand by the Australian bronze medalist, it marked the only time all day that East Europeans were outnumbered on the medal podium.

There were 10 award ceremonies Tuesday, and in nine of them East Europeans occupied at least two of the spots. Most of the time, those positions were taken by Soviet and East German athletes, which, for these Games, is the dominating flip-side story to the American-led boycott.

After three days of competition in this two-week sports festival, the host Soviets had 10 gold and 21 total medals. The East Germans totalled 18 medals, five of them gold. Hungary was a distant third with two gold and five total medals. The best the non-communist bloc could manage was Australia's four bronze and Britain's one gold and two silver.

It was a relatively quiet day on the political front. Tight Soviet security has been placed around the Afghan athletes, some of whom had approached western journalists about defecting. And the Italian who had protested Soviet laws against homosexuality returned to Italy with his tour group Tuesday after being detained overnight by Soviet police.

Vladimir Popov, deputy chairman of the Moscow Organizing Committee, raised a fuss by accusing western reporters of delaying their transmissions from the Games. Citing communications slowdowns to Italy, Sweden, France, the Netherlands and Latin American countries, via New York, Popov said the problems were being caused "by the other side."

The East European medal onslaught was not expected to slow down today.

Nadia Comaneci and her Romanian teammates were to take center stage tonight against the Soviets and East Germans for the women's gymnastics team title.

Comaneci and the Soviets' newest acrobat, Natalia Shaposhnikova, were captivating on Monday. The two teen-agers each scored a perfect 10.0 and three 9.95s in the compulsory exercises for one of the most breathtaking gymnastic exhibitions of all time. The Soviets led after the compulsories.

Four swimming medals were up for grabs today, including the women's 200-meter breaststroke. The East German women, winners of all four swimming events contested, would be favored to sweep all 13 if they can win tonight's 200 breaststroke, in which the Soviets have the world record-holder, Lina Kachushite, and the owner of this year's best time, Svetlana Varganova.

Goodhew carried on in the tradition of great British breaststrokers. David Wilkie, a Scotsman, won the 200 breaststroke at Montreal four years ago, the only swimming event out of 13 that America's supermen didn't win.

Goodhew's winning time of 1:03.34 was slower than the American record of 1:03.06, set this year by Steve Lindquist of Southern Methodist University.

Unlike many male swimmers who voluntarily shave body hair from head to toe for added speed, Goodhew didn't have a choice. A fall from a tree when he was a youngster caused a freak nerve dysfunction and stopped hair growth.

"I was playing Tarzan. I hit my upper lip and it affected the whole nervous system," said Goodhew. "It's an integral part of my person now. I don't want any hair. It's a nuisance."

Boycotts and political protests in sports aren't for him, either, but he would have liked to have had the British flag waving above him.

"I'm still British and I still believe in my country, and that I swam for my country," Goodhew said. "I agree with my federation that politics should be kept out of sports. So it was worth the sacrifice. I made the sacrifice with regret to keep politics out of sport."

No swimmer has a tougher time than the 1,500-meter man. The pain of swimming the 1,500 meters is said to be comparable to doing a marathon. On Tuesday, Vladimir Salnikov of the Soviet Union became the first man to swim the grueling distance in under 15 minutes. His time of 14:58.27 smashed American Brian Goodell's 4-year-old standard of 15:02.40, established at the Montreal Games.

"I don't think it (the 15-minute mark) was a psychological barrier for me, or that the limit has been achieved," Salnikov said.

Only one man could have pushed Salnikov today, and that was Goodell, who hasn't been swimming all that well since easily winning the 400 and 1,500 meters at Montreal.

"If they (the Americans) were here, I'm sure I would swim as I did today," Salnikov said.

Only the American women would seem to be able to seriously challenge the East German swimmers. Ines Diers led an East German sweep in the 400 freestyle, clocking an Olympic record 4:08.76, but the time was slower than American Kim Linehan's best time of the year, 4:07.84.

High costs, low prices put the squeeze on most fishermen

GLoucester, Mass. (AP) — For as long as most of them can remember, New England fishermen had the same complaint: too few fish.

Three years ago, the United States imposed a 200-mile fishing limit and eliminated competition from the Soviets and Europeans whose voracious fleets swept the seas clean.

Now New England fishermen have a new complaint: too many fish.

Prices have crashed during the past few months, and the dream of profitable rebirth for their ancient industry has been wrecked by the forces of supply and demand.

At 4 a.m. every day, Charles Frontiero and his son and a mate churn out of Gloucester Harbor aboard the old wooden Madrugador. And at 4 p.m., they return with their day's catch of flounder.

At the end of a week, each man took home $188.

"A hundred and eighty-eight dollars," Frontiero repeated with disgust. "A week's pay. What can you do with that?"

For hundreds of other fishermen in Gloucester, a city that has lived on fishing for 357 years, the story is the same. It is the same at other big and little fishing ports along the New England coast.

The United States assumed jurisdiction over all fishing within 200 miles of its shores in 1977. Virtually all foreigners who had dominated these fishing grounds for decades were banned.

For the first time in memory, the crusty, antiquated New England fishing fleet began to grow. Backed by federal loans, shipyards turned out big, gleaming steel ships that cost $1 million or more. The number of fishing boats based in the region increased 30 percent to almost 800. New fishermen joined old fishermen on the seas.

But while the catches of fresh fish have steadily increased, demand has not. So when the recession struck, fish prices abruptly fell.

Around February, the price of fish on the docks dropped from about 40 cents a pound to about 10 cents.

"The fish prices go up and down, but mostly down," said Frontiero, who has been fishing for 47 of his 60 years. "We're making a third of what we should be making. There's too damned many boats. That's the cause of all our problems. The more boats there are, the worse it's going to be."

Jeff Tutein, 24, stood on the wharf sewing new nets for the Stella G. Like most New England fishermen, he works for a share of the catch, not an hourly wage.

Until recently, he and his mates were getting 30 cents a pound for whiting, enough to make a decent living. "But then the price went to eight cents, just like that," he said.

So they were outfitting the boat to catch bottom-feeding fish — mostly cod, flounder and haddock. The price of these fish is depressed, too, and in recent weeks they have been scarce.

"You have to do something," he complained. "The ground fish haven't been around either, but you have to try it. You can't stay home."

Nearby, skipper Salvador Albano was getting the Annie Marie ready to sail for Georges Bank.

"We're working for nothing," he lamented. "We stay out eight, 10 days. Then we come back to Gloucester and get 10 cents a pound."

As on all boats, the Annie Marie's mortgage and insurance payments and other expenses must be met before the crew is paid. And the price of diesel fuel, ice and food have risen steadily.

"I don't know what's going on in America," Albano said. "Everything else is up, and the price of fish is down. It's futile."

Last month, 50 scallopers and 130 druggers in New Bedford stopped fishing for a month to protest the low prices. But there was still so much fish available that their catches were not missed. And the low prices never budged.

NEW STAMPS highlight a design featuring coral reefs. The 1980 commemorative stamps were released Tuesday in Washington by the United States Postal Service. The stamps, which are in 15-cent denominations, feature corals found in waters of the United States. They will be issued beginning August 26, following a ceremony at Charlotte Amalie, the capital of the U.S. Virgin Islands. (AP Laserphoto)

Non-political viewing attracts fans during GOP convention

NEW YORK (AP) — The networks devoted more than half of last week's prime time to coverage of the Republican National Convention, but it was non-political programming that attracted the most viewers, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

"The Jeffersons," a consistent hit on CBS, was the highest-rated show for the week ending July 20, followed by five other CBS shows, including "60 Minutes" in second place and "Alice" in third.

CBS beat the opposition by a narrow margin in the three-way competition for convention viewers, and with help from the half-dozen non-political programs, finished first in the weekly ratings race.

CBS' rating for the week was 11.3 to 8.7 for both NBC and ABC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 11.3 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to CBS.

Poor, though not necessarily unexpected, ratings for the convention contributed heavily to the extraordinarily low marks for the week.

More than half the viewers during the four nights of the convention, Monday through Thursday, chose alternate programming on independent or public stations. CBS' coverage of the convention finale Thursday night was the highest-rated of the programs from the Joe Louis Arena in Detroit — 24th in the ratings.

The three networks carried 13 hours of simultaneous convention coverage in prime time, and CBS had the highest rating, 7.7 to 7.6 for NBC and 6.5 for ABC. That means in an average minute during the convention, 7.7 percent of the country's homes with television were watching CBS.

A special Monday night edition of CBS' "60 Minutes," featuring an interview with the eventual GOP presidential nominee, Ronald Reagan, scored in the ratings — 17th place — as did two convention-oriented editions of ABC's "20/20." A Tuesday night installment was 23rd for the week, while a Monday night program finished 25th.

In a non-prime time sidelight, ABC's "World News Tonight" finished No. 1 in the weekly evening news sweepstakes for the first time ever. Twice in the week, however, CBS began its convention coverage at 7 p.m., bypassing the regular "Evening News" broadcast.

Here are the week's highest-rated programs: "The Jeffersons," with a rating of 20.7 representing 15.8 million homes, "60 Minutes," 19.6 or 15 million, "Alice," 19.4 or 14.8 million, "Trapper John, M.D.," 19.1 or 14.6 million, "Dallas," 18.6 or 14.2 million, and "Dukes of Hazzard," 17.7 or 13.5 million, all CBS, "CHiPs" 16.2 or 12.4 million, NBC, "Love Boat," 15.9 or 12.1 million, and "Fantasy Island," 15.4 or 11.8 million, both ABC, and "The Awakening Land," Part I, NBC, and "Archie Bunker's Place" and "One Day at a Time," both CBS, all 14.2 or 10.8 million.

The rest of the Top 20: "Moonrunners," ABC; "The Islander," CBS; "Ed Clark for President" spot, and "240-Robert," both ABC; "60 Minutes," Monday edition, and "The Incredible Hulk," both CBS, and "Diff'rent Strokes," Friday edition, and "Me & Maxx," both NBC.

College costs continue to spiral upward in '80

NEW YORK (AP) — The cost of a four-year college education at a private school is now higher than the median income of all U.S. families, and the worst is yet to come.

A student who attends a four-year, private college or university and lives on campus will face a bill of over $6,000 for the coming academic year, up from about $5,500 last fall, according to a new study.

Joe Paul Case, director of program administration for the College Scholarship Service, says the $20,000-a-year college education is approaching.

The College Board on Tuesday released its annual estimate of college costs for the 1980-81 academic year, based on a survey of 3,200 schools. Case said the increase from last year's figures was lower than the boost in the preceding year and lower than expected "considering the way inflation has escalated." But he painted a gloomy picture for students and parents struggling to pay the bills.

He said Congress is unlikely to increase federal aid for college students this year. "Without increased appropriations," he said, "more students will have to share the same financial-aid pie."

Case said college costs have gone up about 90 percent since 1970. If the rate of increase continues, he said, "we'll see college expenses approach $20,000 a year at high-cost colleges by the end of the decade."

Students and their parents now pay 56 percent of the college bill, according to the College Board. The rest comes from scholarships, Social Security and Veterans' Administration benefits, etc.

Case said, however, that the proportion may change in coming years. "If parents' incomes don't keep pace with inflation, the gap between the amount they are able to pay...and the rising cost of college will widen," he said.

The board survey indicated that total annual costs — tuition, room and board, transportation, books and personal expenses — during the 1980-81 academic year will average $6,082 at private, four-year colleges and universities. At that rate, a four-year education would cost $24,328. The Conference Board, a non-profit, business research organization in New York City, calculates that the median family income for 1980 is $21,350. (The median is the exact midpoint; half of all families have a higher income; half have a lower income.)

According to the survey, the 1980-81 cost of a year at a private, four-year college for a resident student will be 10.3 percent higher than it was last year. From 1978 to 1979, the cost rose 10.6 percent.

Costs for resident students at public, four-year colleges will be an average of 8.1 percent higher this fall — $3,409 for the year — than they were last fall. During the preceding year, costs at the four-year, public institutions went up 8.5 percent.

Actors unions wrangle over strike issues

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Larry Hagman took a vacation from "Dallas" and union telegrams told movie and television stars to stop working as negotiators for producers and two actors unions wrangled over issues blocking a settlement to a two-day strike.

The striking actors, many of whom are expected at a demonstration Thursday, say picketing may begin if talks with studio and TV network producers do not produce a new contract soon.

If this goes on much longer, there will be many more such demonstrations. Screen Actors Guild spokeswoman Kim Fellner said Tuesday just before negotiations ended for the night.

As the dispute continued here, actors and film crews were idle on locations all over the country. Telegrams telling actors to stop work arrived at dozens of sets.

Although closed talks with studios and networks continued on a virtually around-the-clock basis, the strike has halted shooting for almost all U.S. theatrical film and prime-time television productions.

Ms. Fellner said some progress was being made as the strike entered its third day today, but SAG and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists were still wrangling with producers' representatives for what the unions view as a crucial stake in the lucrative pay-TV and videocassette market.

"There are just real major differences," she said.

SAG, which represents actors in movies and filmed TV shows, walked out early Monday. AFTRA, whose striking members appear in taped prime-time TV shows, followed

Waldrep testifies U.S. can conquer spinal injuries

WASHINGTON (AP) - Kent Waldrep, bound to a wheelchair after being injured in a collegiate football game in 1974, told Congress today the United States has the technology and scientific expertise to conquer spinal injuries. He called on Congress to commit the country to a stepped-up effort in research on spinal cord regeneration.

Waldrep, a former Texas Christian University running back, created a medical controversy in 1978 when he traveled to the Soviet Union to receive experimental treatment not available here.

He told the House subcommittee on health and environment today that he saw "substantial improvement in my arm and hand function along with return of sensation to my lower body and increased bladder control."

"I was by no means cured, but I had experienced substantial improvement some four years after my injury," he said.

Waldrep said the American medical community has accused him of being a carrier of false hope to the more than half million Americans who suffer from spinal injuries.

He said if medical officials had taken time to listen to him, "they would have realized that the message I was bringing back was not that Soviet technology in this area was superior to ours, but rather that their approach and treatment to this injury was to stress the positive and not impose limitations on someone's future."

"The treatment they administered to me originated in the United States during the mid-50s, but died because the federal funds supporting the work were cut off. The Soviets duplicated this work and continued to improve upon it over the years."

Waldrep and others suffering from spinal injuries testified on legislation, introduced by Rep. Doug Walgren, D-Pa., which would provide $16 million for spinal cord regeneration and research.

Walgren said almost 500,000 Americans are paralyzed by back, neck and spinal cord injuries. "Most are not famous football players, but the injuries are just as severe and traumatic," Walgren declared in a prepared opening statement.

He said the life-long cost and loss of earnings for each person is about $700,000.

"For too many years, our paralyzed citizens have lived without hope," said the congressman. "But certainly, with proper funding, this nation can develop the medical technology so that paralysis, if treated quickly, need not be permanent."

Others expected to ask Congress to step into the funding of spinal cord research include Don McKnew, a Yale University student from Washington, D.C., who was injured in an automobile accident; Susan Steele, an Alexandria, Va., high school senior also hurt in a car mishap; and James Lewis of Los Gatos, Calif., who was paralyzed in a fall from a tree.

Ironically, Lewis is a cousin to champion skier Jill Kenmont, whose devastating, paralyzing fall on the slopes was the subject of the movie and book, "The Other Side of The Mountain."

A chief sponsor of the bill is Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., a former quarterback for the Buffalo Bills of the National Football League. Backers of the bill, for the most part, agree that chances of passage in Congress are slim this year because of the crush of other business. But they say hearings focus attention on the need for more money to be spent on spinal cord treatment.

Hot lead cool-off marks demise of filler writing

WASHINGTON (AP) - Time and technology have had their fill of the filler and the filler writer.

In the newsrooms of your large American dailies like the Washington Post and the Los Angeles Times you no longer find, off in a monastic cell behind the clipping morgue, reclusive scholars grinding out terse graceful facts on the order of:

-Lake Nicaragua is the largest lake in Central America.

-Nineveh, the ancient capital of Assyria, attained its greatest glory in the 8th and 7th centuries B.C. under Sennacherib and Assurbanipal.

-Babe Ruth struck out 1,330 times.

-The Macaronies, whom Yankee Doodle emulated with that feather in his hat, were a Maryland regiment famous for their flashy uniforms in the American War of Independence.

-Margaret Roper was buried with the head of her father, Sir Thomas More, in her arms.

-Torquemada, a Dominican friar of excessive zeal, was the Inquisitor General of Spain in the late 15th century.

-The three wonders of Babylon were the Hanging Gardens, the royal palace which was eight miles in circumference, and the Tower of Babel, said by some Jewish writers to be 12 miles in height.

-The Great Wall of China is the only man-made object visible from the moon.

Facts like that were hand hewn and precision-pared not to fill minds but to fill space. The writer's shtick was not to dazzle, like the Guinness Book of World Records, but to fill a stick or two of type to even off a column at the bottom of the page or between stories.

The Random House Dictionary of the English language defines the craft of the filler writer indirectly by providing this explanation of the filler: "In journalism, material considered of a secondary importance used to fill out a column or page." The Oxford English Dictionary is even more concise and precise: "To put in what will fill a vacancy or blank space."

In the days of hot type, which are numbered but not completely vanished from newspaper backshops, it was not always easy to gauge the length of a story as it was coughed out of the linotype machine. One, two, three or three and one-half line facts were used to fill in empty spaces at the bottom of the page, based on the cold calculation that three and one-half lines of hot type measured an inch.

Now, with cold type technology brought about by the marriage of the computer with the printing process, the laying out of a newspaper page can be predicted right down to the final pica or one-sixth of an inch. The computer tells the layout man exactly how much space a story sent down by the city desk or coming over The Associated Press wires will occupy. He no longer has to reach for one of those filler facts about the Nile being the longest river in the world if you count the tributaries.

Queen aware of remaining hostages

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Richard Queen emerged from Iran with a medical problem, but spiritually with his head held high.

He may feel like Rip Van Winkle, but there is nothing sleepy about him. Queen is acutely aware of the 52 Americans left behind in Iran. He is doing nothing to risk their safety.

He refuses to yield to temptation by publicly scolding his captors. He describes them, for the most part, as devout Moslem students who made no real effort to turn him against the United States.

Indeed, Queen says there were "a few S.O.B.s," but he doesn't think they were communists, and once they decided his work as vice consul wasn't terribly sensitive, they left him alone.

Early in the crisis, some administration officials suggested darkly that hard-core communists, members of the Iranian Tudeh Party, were prominent among the militants, even if they were not the dominant force.

But Queen rejects this notion. He also says "there was no brainwashing," that he was left alone to read scores of books from the embassy library, to play penny-poker with two roommates and to teach himself French.

"Living in that basement was pretty grim," Queen admits. But with tact that belies his brief career as a diplomat, the bearded young man is not about to hurl thunderbolts at the Iranians.

He remembers in each of his public appearances to focus on the 52 left behind. In fact, he says he feels a little guilty about coming home ahead of them.

Because of their continuing imprisonment, Queen probably is measuring his remarks carefully.

One result may be a bit of a public relations triumph for Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the Iranian revolutionaries.

Queen's release was a humanitarian gesture in the first place. He evidently got good medical treatment while he was in Tehran, and apparently was not abused physically or mentally as a hostage.

Therefore, as he tells his story, he is unintentionally dispelling some of the monster image attached to Khomeini and the militants.

Relief and gratitude over Queen's liberation could serve to diffuse some of the anger Americans feel over what remains an inhumane act: the holding of hostages.

July 24, 1980

Your social circle could grow this coming year, but with growth will come added responsibilities and obligations. Treat all persons equally and don't forget your old pals.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Interpreting an action by someone you care for as a slight stems from hypersensitivity on your part. Don't make too much of any situation. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph, which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your zeal in attempting to satisfy some of your desires today could make you difficult to contend with from other people's point of view. Don't be pushy or self-seeking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You could allow moodiness to take you over today when something you've been planning on doesn't work out as well as you had hoped. Try to shrug it off.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Continue to be as prudent as possible when it comes to financial dealings today. The aspects are not in your favor. You could come out on the short end.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Patience and tolerance are not your long suits today, especially with those who give orders. Take care you don't oppose those in a stronger position than you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Relying on others could prove disappointing today. Rather than being let down in a matter important to you, take care of it yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Opposing viewpoints with a friend could arise today. Unfortunately, neither of you is in a mood conducive to resolving the matter. Handle it tomorrow.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone could get upset today if he or she feels you are holding something back. Don't hide any facts, even if you think you're protecting this person.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Where yesterday you may have viewed things too optimistically, today you could go to the opposite extreme and become pessimistic. This is wrong, too.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Ignore the feeling today that others are better off than you. In reality, what you see in most cases is a lot of fancy gift wrapping over an empty box.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Delicate and sensitive handling of a close relationship is a must today. This person's feelings could be deeply hurt and he or she might have a difficult time forgetting it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone with whom you're associated today could make you feel extremely uncomfortable because of this person's coolness. Don't react in kind.

Officials test for Agent Orange

POINT, Texas (AP) — Dallas and Longview have turned off their water pumps at Lake Tawakoni while federal and state officials test for possible contamination from a chemical dump near the lake.

At the Texas Department of Water Resources in Kilgore, federal and Sabine River Authority officials began testing topsoil and water from the lake for traces of Agent Orange, a powerful herbicide that may have leaked from chemical canisters buried nearby.

"We don't even know in fact if that's (Agent Orange) what it is. We're talking about a very limited amount. This has gotten blown all out of proportion," said Jack Tatum, SRA technical services manager.

City spokesmen for Dallas and Longview said they expected no problems, but were shutting down pumps as a precaution.

Tom Taylor, director of Dallas Water Utilities, said the shutdown would be only for "a few days" and would not effect the city's overall water supply.

"We have four other water supplies we will use until the chemical is identified," Taylor said. "In a very few days, a decision will be made (on reopening Tawakoni)."

In Longview, city manager Ray Jackson said pumps were being shut down because "it's better to be safe than sorry."

However, officials in Greenville, a city which receives its entire water supply from Lake Tawakoni, refused to shut down pumps, saying that the reports of possible contamination were "just rumors."

Maynard Nelson, director of the Iron Bridge Division of the Sabine River Authority, the site of the chemical dump, said several chemical containers were buried about 150 yards from the lake in 1978 "just to get them out of the way."

Inflation devastates life insurance

NEW YORK (AP) — Inflation has devastated some personal life insurance plans, but Jarrett Davis says that's reason to buy more.

You might expect Davis to defend insurance, since he is president this year of the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters, a rather exclusive group of life insurance sellers and advisers.

What you might not expect to hear is Davis' assertion that life insurance is a bargain, even if 12 percent inflation would, within six years, cut in half the effective face value of a policy.

"Why have insurance at all?" he was asked. He answered with more questions:

Without insurance, how can you protect your heirs from the taxman? If you leave a business, how can your heirs pay taxes in dollars without dissolving that business? How else but through life insurance?

Q. But if the relative coverage of that insurance — the buying power — falls with inflation, doesn't that mean it is a bad buy?

A. "Don't forget, you're also paying for that insurance in cheaper dollars. Besides, premiums have been falling. You now pay less per thousand dollars of insurance, and you pay in cheaper dollars too."

Q. Premiums have been falling — in real terms?

A. About five years ago the annual premium on $1,000 of whole life insurance for a 30- to 35-year-old person was about $20. Now it's closer to $14.

Q. Why have rates fallen?

A. Because people are living longer, and because the interest return on investments has been higher. In addition, companies have been able to operate more efficiently, in part because of computerization.

Q. With the value of the dollar declining, with the size of one's estate growing, and with family matters, such as the age of children, always changing, how does a person obtain insurance advice?

A. By relying on trusted friends to recommend an agent with whom they have had experience. Talk to a lot of people. That's one way.

"We also like to think a CLU is one of the best qualified to advise, although there are many qualified people who aren't CLUs."

Q. Why should a person have faith in a CLU?

A. "Because he's undergone 10 rigorous examinations about a broad base of information dealing with personal financial problems."

Q. What are these exams?

A. Davis refers to the wallet-size, CLU personal identification card, which lists exams in life and health insurance, pensions, law, trusts, taxation, finance, economics, business and estate planning.

In addition, the card states that members have met "stringent ethical and experience requirements," before being permitted to use the CLU designation and to wear the CLU key.

"Our code of ethics is one we think is significantly important," said Davis, a 51-year-old general agent for Provident Life & Accident, in Atlanta. It is the Golden Rule: Do unto others as you would have done unto you."

Davidson is talk-show master

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Davidson has only been on the air with his new talk show for a few weeks, and already he's mastered the form. At asking the inane question, singing the vapid song and shamelessly plugging his guests' products, he is as able as the man he replaced, Mike Douglas.

You'll recall that Group W Productions hired Davidson to replace Douglas in the hope of attracting a younger audience, that 18-49 group advertisers so dearly covet.

But Douglas landed on his feet in a new show, making it possible, in some markets, to test Group W's wisdom by watching Davidson AND Douglas. Why anyone would willingly do that, I don't know, but it's possible.

Davidson, as Douglas, has a weekly co-host (called a "co-star" in the new Westinghouse format, though Davidson keeps forgetting that.) The co-host's role is to help the star kill time. I tuned in last Friday, and caught the final day of Bonnie Franklin as Davidson's co-host.

"We've really gotten into some heavy things this week," Davidson told her, making me wonder what I'd missed. Davidson dissolved that curiosity quickly enough, with a word game he played.

He read a word to Miss Franklin, and she said whatever came to her.

"Divorce," said John.

"Sometimes it's the most creative and wonderful thing a person can do," Miss Franklin responded.

Within a few minutes, we heard Bonnie Franklin's views on politics, single parenting (though she's childless), test-tube babies and co-habitation — a package of dubious value, unless you're planning to address a convention of talk-show hosts and need a speech.

Such is the staple of most talk shows, information that isn't really information at all, just blabber posed as information.

A proper talk show host must be able to shovel out heaps of servile flattery upon his guests, and Davidson seems to grasp that. One of his guests was songwriter Burt Bacharach, who teamed with Hal David for a string of cute, catchy little pop hits a decade or so ago.

"People use those songs to express universal thoughts," Davidson said in his introduction. "When you want to say something big, you say it with a Bacharach song." Yes, of course. Especially if you need directions to San Jose.

As it turned out, Friday's show was a sort of talk-show case study. After Bonnie and Burt, Valerie Perrine appeared. It was classic.

First, they ran a clip from Miss Perrine's much-hyped disco movie, "Can't Stop the Music," a bit of film that has been shown on television more often than "Casablanca." After Davidson told her "You're mind-boggling...you must have men beating down your door," he turned serious and asked, "Can people get close to you?"

Sounds like a Burt Bacharach song, you muse. Miss Perrine answered the question, sort of, and eventually got to the subject of her psychoanalysis, a talk-show must.

Yes, Davidson is doing just fine. Ninety minutes of conversational Muzak, and he didn't break a sweat.

Suit hits liquor store owners

LUBBOCK (AP) — A federal court jury has awarded nearly $1 million in damages to patrons of some Lubbock County liquor stores that jurors said conspired to fix prices.

Jurors ruled Tuesday that the eight defendants in the four-year-old lawsuit must pay $927,000 in overcharges to customers who patronized the stores between 1970 and 1974.

Defendants listed in the suit included Pinkie's Inc., Cecil's Inc., The All Star Co., Cross Keys Package Store Inc., the Lubbock County Beverage Association, Bob Grimes, Hubert Odum and Kenneth Odum.

The lawsuit, filed by then Texas Tech University law student David Greenhaw, contended that several liquor store owners and operators had conspired to set and maintain county wide liquor prices and alleviate competitive marketing.

The decision marks the third time a federal jury has found the eight defendants guilty of conspiring to set prices along

"the strip," a portion of county road lined with liquor stores outside of Lubbock.

Aliens, defense, Clements topics

WACO, Texas (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements told National Guardsmen he approves of draft registration, but opposes a peacetime draft.

"I think we definitely need to have it (draft registration), but I'm opposed to a peacetime draft," he said Tuesday during a visit to Fort Hood.

Clements also took to task an ongoing controversy over a recent federal court ruling allowing the children of illegal aliens to attend Texas schools free.

Genes determine smiles and frowns

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A smile is a smile all over the world, but be careful where you stick out your tongue.

Psychologist Paul Ekman says he has hard scientific proof that, regardless of country or culture, human faces use the same expressions to show the same basic emotions.

"If you go anywhere in the world and you smile," he said in an interview, "everybody's going to know that either you are happy or you want people to think you're happy. That's quite apart from culture."

He said his and others' research on nonverbal communication shows that happiness, sadness, surprise, anger, fear and disgust produce the same expressions — smiles, frowns, wide eyes, clenched jaws and so on — in any culture.

These universal expressions, said the University of California-San Francisco psychologist, seem to be programmed into our genes.

But if expressions are the same from culture to culture, gestures emphatically are not.

These symbolic signs with hands or faces "are really like a language," Ekman said. "They have a vocabulary that's different from place to place and the same movement can mean entirely different things."

He said the circled thumb and forefinger that means "A-OK" in the United States is "a real insult in Southern Europe — an unpri."

And where an American youngster might stick out his tongue to show defiance, "in some cultures that's a sexual invitation."

Even the head shakes for "yes" and "no" and the shrugged shoulders that mean "I don't know" are not found everywhere.

While Americans have 60 or 70 common symbolic gestures, Ekman said, Israelis — the champion gesturers — use more than 200. Southern Italians are close behind.

Social scientists have argued for decades whether emotional expressions are products of our genes or of our culture.

Charles Darwin sparked the debate 100 years ago by contending such expressions grew out of man's evolutionary past. Many psychologists argued in this century that, as one said, "What is shown on the face is written there by culture."

Ekman, after nearly 25 years of research including two expeditions to an isolated village in New Guinea, contends both groups are partly right.

"We've got these biologically based expressions (for) the primary emotions," he said. "But culture teaches us to control our emotions — to manage our faces."

The universal expressions, Ekman said, are controlled by each culture's "display rules," which can be so strong they are violated only at great peril. Politeness is an example.

"In this culture," he said, "we teach little boys not to show fear or distress because it's not considered manly. You see people struggle with that."

"We have the famous case of (Secretary of State) Edmund Muskie losing his credibility because he cried. I think it's a tribute to his humanness; his wife had been insulted and he was very moved."

Muskie, seeking the Democratic presidential nomination in 1972, appeared to weep slightly after a newspaper printed innuendos about his wife. Many observers felt the incident ended his candidacy.

Ekman said television, movies and jet planes are shrinking the world so rapidly that few cultures are unexposed to the expressions and gestures of other societies. And exposure raises the possibility that one culture's expressions may have been learned from another.

But Ekman visited a South Fore village so isolated on a New Guinea mountain that villagers didn't know the purpose of the camera that recorded their expressions — expressions as familiar as those of Iowa farmers or Japanese businessmen.

In a series of experiments, the villagers almost always correctly identified the emotions displayed on pictures of American faces.

Ekman contends the research, published this year as a book called "The Face of Man," was "very decisive."

The origin and value of these universal expressions is subject to considerable debate, Ekman said. Answers are mostly speculation.

"I think one of the most important roles for a happy expression," he said, "is to get parents to take care of their kids."

Execution nearing, Candy Man maintains innocence

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer
HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — He is a big man, bordering between stout and fat. His eyes are pale blue, so light that when the morning sun reflects on his face, they seem to have no color at all.

He is Ronald Clark O'Bryan, called by his fellow inmates on Texas Death Row as the "Candy Man", known to others as "the man who killed Halloween."

He is sentenced to die for the death of his 8-year-old son Tim, who O'Bryan said in a recent interview, "Was very close to me. I never did anything to that boy. I loved him. I taught him to ride his bike, and we did a lot of things together: fishing, playing ball, just wrestling around."

When Tim died, O'Bryan said, "I felt anger and then sadness and then depression. I wanted somebody to pay for the death of my son. The police were looking for somebody to convict. I became the scapegoat. I was convicted of something I didn't do."

O'Bryan was sentenced to death by a jury after his conviction of murdering his son with cyanide-laced Halloween candy to collect insurance benefits.

A former resident of Deer Park, a Houston suburb, and an optical company employee, O'Bryan has been on Death Row for almost six years.

On that Halloween night in 1974, O'Bryan allegedly gave the deadly candy to his son and daughter and three other children.

Tim was the only one of the five children to eat the candy. He became sick immediately and was rushed to a hospital.

He died one hour later. In a recent appearance before State Judge Frank Price, O'Bryan was formally sentenced to die by lethal injection on Aug. 8.

During the hearing, O'Bryan said to the judge, "As Jesus said to Judas, What thou do, do quickly."

O'Bryan said he in no way meant that he wanted to die soon, only that the sentencing be done quickly so he could appeal "to a higher court."

"And, that higher court simply meant a higher legal court, not to God as some writers thought I meant. I hope and pray the higher courts of this nation will see that I have been done an injustice."

"There has been so much publicity on my case, I believe it has influenced the courts. The courts just won't get down and look at my case."

O'Bryan insisted, as he has for years, "I had nothing to do with the death of my son. The police wanted to convict somebody and I was convicted. Now, everybody says leave it alone, we have our scapegoat. We have someone to blame."

"But if one judge, just one, would take the time to read the transcripts, he would understand there is not testimony based on facts. It is all circumstantial."

When you have only circumstantial evidence, O'Bryan said, each link "must be put together before you can make a noose. That noose, in my case, is non-existent. Even the key witness for the state couldn't identify me. I can prove I was never in some places where witnesses said I was. If some judge would just take the time, he would know I need a new trial."

O'Bryan was chairman of the parent-teacher organization in his neighborhood. He was active in the Baptist church, one of the those who handled a bus ministry project. He was a volunteer for youth programs at the church and was a teacher for a Baptist training class.

O'Bryan said, "I don't like being on Death Row because I don't deserve to be here. You know we had a big chinaberry tree in our yard and Tim and I and some other kids in the neighborhood would get together and have chinaberry fights, like I did as a kid."

"I never drank, never smoked, never took any drugs and never went anyplace I couldn't take my son and my daughter. The honky-tonk life wasn't for me."

"I am a Christian."
