Striking workers ignore order

Police reinforcements flown into strike area

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Police reinforcements were reported flown to the Polish strike area as angry workers rejected Communist Party chief Edward Gierek's back-to-work appeal and promise of pay raises.

Acek Kuron, the leader of the dissident Committee for Self-Defense, told reporters in Warsaw helicopters flew more police to the Baltic coast industrial area around Gdansk, where the strike began last Thursday in protest against the removal of subsidies that had kept the price of meat down.

Diplomatic sources also reported police reinforcements arriving in the strike area, and said they were dispatched after striking Gdansk shipyard workers rejected an ultimatum from the local Communist Party chief, Tadeusz Fiszbach, to leave the yards by 4 p.m. Monday.

By late Monday night, the government had still made no attempt to end the strike by the use of force. But the local party committee said in a communique early today "decisive repulsion must be taken" because the striking workers had been joined by "anti-socialist elements, whose objective is to create chaos and disturbance."

With dissident sources reporting more than 100,000 workers on strike at 150 plants in the neighboring cities of Gdansk, Gdynia and Sopot, the nation's 67-year-old party boss told the workers in a nationally televised address they would be given pay raises "spread out over a period of time," but "there are limits that must not be overstepped by anyone."

He rejected the strikers' demands for sweeping liberalizations in the country's communist system, saying Poland "can be a free and independent state with inviolable frontiers" only through socialism, an obvious reference to the possibility of Soviet military intervention if the communist system was endangered.

"Actions that are aimed against the basic foundations of the socialist system will not be tolerated — and nobody can count on compromise on this issue," said Gierek. "If there is no internal peace, all other matters will lose their meaning. ... Let this truth be present in the minds of every Polish woman and man."

"He acts as if he were talking to children. The speech doesn't change anything," said Anna Walentinowicz, one of the strike organizers at Gdansk's giant V.I. Lenin Shipyard, the center of the strike movement.

"He says we just want money. He does not say anything about how we say we want our rights," said another striker, identifying himself only as Andrzej Z.

"We have nothing to lose. I have six children and I am risking a lot here. But we do not care," said Lech Walesa, a leader of the strike committee named to negotiate with the government.

He and the others said they would not abandon their demands for free trade unions, an end to censorship, release of political prisoners and other political reforms as well as an increase in average monthly wages from $170 to $236 to offset the increases in the price of meat that took effect July 1.

Gierek's speech was broadcast over loudspeakers at the shipyard's administrative building. Just before he went on the air, thousands of workers and their families gathered in front of the shipyard gate, said prayers, and sang the hymn "God Save Poland."

The strikers festooned the steel gates with hundreds of flowers, a picture of Polish-born Pope John Paul II and portraits of Our Lady of Czestochowa, revered by Polish Catholics as the inspiration for resistance to 17th century Swedish invaders. But though 90 percent of Poland's 35 million people are Roman Catholics, the pope has made no public comment on the current trouble in his homeland, and the Vatican newspaper has noted only that the church is concerned.

Deputy Premier Tadeusz Pyka flew to Gdansk Monday at the head of a special government negotiating committee, but instead of meeting with the strikers they met with the local Communist Party committee.

There were unconfirmed reports of labor unrest at a turbine factory in Elblag, another Baltic coast industrial center.

Strikes in other cities have already won sizable wage increases for workers there since the July 1 increase in meat prices. But the strikers in the Gdansk area are the first to demand sweeping political reforms.

Similar increases in government food prices in 1970 touched off riots at the Lenin Shipyards in Gdansk in which about 50 workers were killed. As a result of the riots, Communist Party chief Wladyslaw Gomułka was replaced by Gierek and the price increases were cancelled.

STRIKING POLISH WORKERS gather outside an administration office building in Gdansk Monday as their ranks swelled dramatically. They rejected the Communist chief Edward Gierek's back-to-work appeal and police reinforcements were reported flown to the strike area today.

Jury selection underway in Smith murder trial

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

LIPSCOMB — Lawyers began jury selection in the court house of this small east Panhandle community at 9 a.m. today in the first phase of the murder trial of Cathy Darlene Smith — accused in the gunshot slaying of her husband, Dennis Smith, last January.

Over a hundred Lipscomb County residents had been called for the selection, according to Penny Burt, assistant district attorney Penny Burt.

At noon today 51 prospective jurors were left for questioning prior to a final jury selection.

Among those present in the District Court Room of the three-story brick building set in the center of a sprawling lawn dotted with huge cottonwood trees, was the defendant, Ms. Smith appeared very quiet as the courtroom proceedings went on around her. She was wearing a brown sleeveless dress as she sat with her attorney, John White of Borger.

District Attorney Harold Comer and investigator for the district attorney's office, Kirven Roper, was also present.

Proceedings in the trial moved without any delay today, prompting officials to believe the trial could move at a more rapid pace than first believed.

A motion made by Smith's attorney, John White, for a change of venue was granted by 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhenny during a pre-trial hearing in April.

White told the court in the hearing that evidence released during the pre-trial proceeding concerning a confession to the murder by Smith after she underwent a lie detector test in Lubbock were his reasons for the venue motion.

Smith failed the examination and then confessed to the murder to him, Ronald Rogers, a Department of Public Safety polygraph examiner, testified in the hearing.

McIlhenny designated at the time of the hearing that any further legal proceedings would be conducted in Lipscomb County.

Prosecuting attorneys, Burt and District Attorney Harold Comer, are not sure how long the trial will last. Comer had said earlier he believed it will last at least a week.

"It won't take us long to put on our evidence," Burt said. "A couple of days or so, I'd guess depending on the cross examination by White," she added.

"More than 15 witnesses" have been subpoenaed by the DA's office, Burt said.

"I don't think we'll use all of them," she said. The 29-year-old Mrs. Smith was arrested and charged with first degree murder on Feb. 11 after a month-long investigation of the Jan. 13 shooting of her 30-year-old husband.

The shooting occurred at midnight in the Smith's mobile home located at 504 Finley, according to police reports.

Arriving on the scene at 12:10 a.m., city police officers called for Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford who pronounced Smith dead at the scene.

An autopsy was performed by Amarillo pathologist, Dr. Jose Esquivel-Diaz. Physical evidence from the scene of the murder was taken to the Criminal Investigation Laboratory (CIL) in Austin.

Evidence from the CIL tests and the autopsy report will be heard during the trial.

The initial Aug. 4 trial date was delayed to Aug. 19 because a state's witness, Dr. Diaz, was on vacation.

Judge hears Brilab tapes

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge labored through hours of secretly taped conversations Monday and began hearing more today before ruling on a motion by lawyers for House Speaker Billy Clayton and three other Texas Brilab defendants.

U.S. District Judge Robert O'Connor, who must rule on his own jurisdiction over the bribery case, listened to more than seven hours of tapes Monday before he recessed the marathon pre-trial session until 9:30 a.m. today.

Ronald Woods, an assistant U.S. attorney, said five to six hours of the tapes recorded by an FBI informant remain to be heard.

Attorneys for the four defendants had filed about 50 pre-trial motions, but O'Connor restricted the hearing's opening phases to the jurisdiction question saying that "without jurisdiction there would be no point of proceeding."

Defense attorneys argued that federal authorities "artificially manufactured" jurisdiction and keyed the case to an FBI informant the lawyers called a "pathological liar."

Clayton, L.G. Moore, a Deer Park labor leader, and two Austin lawyers, Randall B. Wood and Donald W. Ray, were indicted June 12 in the FBI undercover operation prosecutors say linked labor with bribery offers to public officials.

Defense attorneys are seeking the dismissal of the indictments, which charge the four with extortion, racketeering, fraud and conspiracy, on grounds that the government controlled, orchestrated and artificially executed the conspiracy.

The dominant figure in the six tapes heard Monday was Joseph Hauser, the FBI informant who operated a fictitious insurance firm out of Beverly Hills, Calif.

The indictments allege Hauser and Moore gave Clayton $5,000 and promised $600,000 more for assistance aimed at helping Hauser's fictitious firm receive a $52 million state employees insurance contract.

Clayton has acknowledged receiving the $5,000 on Nov. 8 but said he planned to return the money.

The Monday tapes involved Hauser's activities in Texas from Aug. 14 through Oct. 2, just a month before Hauser and Moore met with Clayton. Included were early meetings with Moore and other labor officials and his first meeting with defendants Wood and Ray, who briefed him on the state employee insurance program.

O'Connor reluctantly ordered the tapes be played after Woods objected to the use of transcripts, which he said included inaccuracies and did not reflect "the manner" in which words were spoken.

Prosecutors have submitted transcripts of more than 100 tapes to the defense.

One defense attorney said the tapes represent hundreds of hours of sometimes-unintelligible conversations but Woods said they are the only evidence in the case.

The Monday tapes began with Hauser meeting Harold Grubbs, education director of a Pipe Fitters Union management-union apprenticeship program committee.

It was Grubbs who introduced Hauser to Moore in a Houston hotel room on Aug. 30. After Moore departed, Grubbs was quoted as telling Hauser that Moore will do "whatever we demand."

During a Sept. 20 meeting, also in Houston, the voice identified as Moore told Hauser during a discussion of the state insurance contract that Wood and Ray had told him "you're good friend with the speaker. Said you get a commitment out of the speaker."

Hauser then told Moore he was ready to make a commitment, "We could lay 25 to 50 on the speaker easy."

Moore later said he would arrange a breakfast meeting with Clayton.

"... I can cut a deal with him," Moore said. "Can say, look Billy, you get this deal and you get this, OK?"

Hauser: "Beautiful." A poor quality tape of Sept. 21 had Hauser telephoning Moore in Houston from Albuquerque. Moore said he had talked with Clayton by telephone "and am going to set up a meeting between you, the speaker and myself."

Columnist claims Carter planning military move to free hostages

CHICAGO (AP) — Syndicated columnist Jack Anderson says he reached the "anguishing" decision to disclose the details of an alleged U.S. plan to invade Iran because he is convinced the mission would fail.

"Because of the political nature of this plan, because it almost certainly would not succeed, I decided to expose it," he said in a speech Monday night.

Anderson has reported that President Carter is planning a military operation aimed at freeing the U.S. hostages in mid-October, timed for maximum advantage in his re-election campaign against Ronald Reagan and John B. Anderson.

The White House and Defense Secretary Harold Brown have flatly denied the allegation, and the White House labeled the story "grotesque" and "irresponsible." Several newspapers that normally carry Anderson's column, including the Washington Post, the New York Daily News and the Atlanta Constitution, did not run the column Monday.

In his speech, Anderson claimed Carter ordered last April's rescue attempt of the American hostages in Tehran because his ratings had slipped in the public-opinion polls. That effort was aborted because of helicopter failure, and eight soldiers died in an aircraft collision during the withdrawal from the Iranian desert.

The columnist noted that Carter's standing in the polls has dropped again and said the president has ordered plans be prepared for the "limited invasion" because "it just comes naturally to him to react politically."

However, Anderson said unidentified experts believe the plan — which he did not describe in detail during his speech — would fail. He said it was only because these experts believe the plan is flawed and that Carter's motivation is political that he and his staff were able to learn details of the alleged mission.

"We would have a very difficult time carrying this (mission) out," and for that reason, he said, he decided to publish his findings. "I can assure you it was an anguishing decision," Anderson added. "I don't think newsmen should pry into military secrets except in special circumstances."

Anderson said that while Carter has not actually "ordered" the invasion, "he has started preparations for a limited invasion of Iran" and that one "control point" in the operation already has passed. He said a final decision whether to carry out the plan will not be made until two more "control points" are passed.

Anderson said one thing that would make another rescue attempt very difficult is that many of the hostages were removed from the occupied U.S. Embassy and taken to other locations in Iran as a result of the aborted mission last April.

The columnist's remarks were delivered at the annual convention of the Barber and Beauty Supply Institute.

Agreement nears on Somalia base

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has apparently almost reached an agreement with Somalia that would provide U.S. military forces with a new staging grounds for actions in the Persian Gulf. The agreement, which would permit U.S. forces to use a naval base at Berbera, could involve the U.S. in an ongoing dispute between Somalia and its Soviet-supported neighbor, Ethiopia. But U.S. officials have said that any U.S. arms that might be included in the deal are not to be trained on Ethiopia. "The countries have been fighting over the Ogaden for some time."

David Passage, a State Department spokesman, said, "We do not wish to be involved."

The two nations are on the Horn of Africa, a strategic spot across the Gulf of Aden from Arab oil fields and shipping lanes critical to the United States and other western nations.

Explosion kills 90 in Iranian province

By The Associated Press
At least 90 people were killed and 35 wounded when a warehouse containing explosives blew up in Iran's oil-rich Khuzestan province, the official Pars news agency reported today.

Pars said the explosion occurred Monday night at a warehouse for a road construction company in Gachsaran, and that the blast was sparked by a fire in an adjacent building that was caused by an electrical short-circuit.

Khuzestan province, in the southwest, has been the scene of frequent anti-government sabotage attacks for over a year by autonomy-seeking Iranian Arabs.

In another development, the newspaper Azadegan reported that Gen. Hassan Yazdi, sought for involvement in last month's aborted coup, committed suicide Monday as revolutionary guards were about to arrest him.

Meanwhile, the 52 American hostages spent their 290th day in captivity today, their prospects for being visited or freed no better following another appeal from representatives of nations allied with the U.S. government.

After the latest meeting Sunday with envoys from Holland, Italy, Belgium and Japan, the speaker of Iran's Parliament, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said he was reluctant to allow a visit.

He contended that during previous visits by foreigners the captives had "leaked" information that was used in the U.S. rescue effort in April that failed, Japan's Kyodo news service reported from Tehran.

Rafsanjani told the envoys Iran hoped to have better relations with their governments, but added, "It is our understanding that the U.S. superpower influences these countries."

Dutch Ambassador Willi Campaigne, speaking for the delegation, said the seizure of the hostages and the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4 violated international law and asked Rafsanjani to try to get the Americans freed.

Rafsanjani said he would discuss the matter with Parliament, adding, "You referred to the question of U.S. spies and international law. I must reiterate that these international laws favor the big powers."

This was the same position he took Thursday when he met with ambassadors from eight Western nations who appealed for help in getting the hostages released.

The appeals appear to be part of the new diplomatic initiative to get the Americans freed. The campaign was announced a week ago by Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie.

Representatives of the International Red Cross last visited the hostages in April, several weeks before the aborted rescue.

Drilling begins on geothermal well in Louisiana rice field

By JANET McCONAUGHEY
 Associated Press Writer

SWEET LAKE, La. (AP) — One of the country's biggest rigs is ready to begin drilling today for fizzy, boiling hot salt water in Charles Precht's rice field here.

The well will be the first of at least three designed to see if water trapped in sand miles beneath Louisiana's rich black soil can become an important new source of energy.

"We'll spud in probably some time Tuesday," C. David Mitchell, site manager for Magma Gulf-Technadril, a three-company joint venture that is drilling the well, said Monday night.

When it's done, brine filled with rushing bubbles of natural gas will rocket through a hole nearly three miles long and 20 inches across at the top.

Project manager Bob Rodgers estimated it will take about three months to drill the well — called a geopressured-geothermal well — and at least another six months before officials know if the heat and gas will pay for bringing the water to the surface.

The federal Department of Energy is paying Magma Gulf-Technadril $8.4 million over two years to drill and test the well as part of an $88 million, three-year geopressured-geothermal program.

If the well makes a profit, the department will get its money back. "We're certainly doing it to see what it has as far as commercial value," Rodgers said. "If it's not commercially feasible, we'll back off and do something else."

Another $400,000 for testing is coming from the Gas Research Institute, headquartered in Chicago.

The institute is interested because vast amounts of natural gas — nobody knows how much — are dissolved beneath a unique 200-mile-wide area stretching along the Gulf of Mexico from New Orleans to Brownsville, Texas.

As O. Carroll Karkalits, dean of McNeese University's School of Engineering and Technology, explains it, the water was once part of the Gulf of Mexico. Sudden deposits of oil trapped it in sand and sealed it between layers of clay. The heavy soil above the water and heat rising from the earth's core create a huge pressure cooker where temperatures range from 240 to 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

Woman could see turn of century while serving life sentence

TITUSVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A 35-year-old woman has been sentenced to life imprisonment for her part in the slaying of her former employer, who was beaten to death with a frying pan.

Janice Gould pleaded guilty and was sentenced Monday, becoming the third woman to plead guilty or be convicted in the March 28 slaying of optometrist John Bradford.

Bradford's widow, Priscilla, 36, pleaded guilty to murder charges Aug. 4 and was sentenced to life imprisonment. Joyce Cummings, 18, was convicted by a Seminole County jury last week, but has not been sentenced.

"They will see the turn of the century behind bars," said Assistant State Attorney Doug Cheshire.

Miss Gould is not eligible for parole for 25 years. In exchange for her guilty plea, the state dropped charges of conspiracy to commit

Senate committee searching for 'minor mystery or major misdeed'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the Senate investigation of Billy Carter's ties with Libya says that so far, he sees no bombshells and no "major breach of public trust" by President Carter or his advisers.

But Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said Monday his investigating committee will probably find cases "where judgement can be questioned." He said evidence will be followed wherever it leads.

"We will make a judgement whether there is a major misdeed or a minor mystery," Bayh told reporters.

His assessment came as his special Senate judiciary subcommittee headed into full-scale hearings today on the dealings of President Carter's brother with Libya, and the Carter administration's handling of the affair.

The leadoff witness is Billy Carter's business associate, Henry "Randy" Coleman. Billy Carter is expected to testify Thursday and Friday.

Both registered as foreign agents for Libya under Justice Department pressure after Billy Carter got $220,000 from Libya. Coleman picked up the checks for $20,000 and $200,000 from the Libyan diplomatic station in Washington, according to published reports.

Billy Carter said the $220,000 was part of a $500,000 loan he needed to pay debts and sources who have seen the checks say the word "loan" is written t money.

But Billy Carter told reporters last week that Libya made no commitment to supply the oil. "They said we'd talk about it," he said.

The White House says it also briefed Coleman on Libya's effort to take delivery of eight U.S. C-130 cargo planes, but says that neither Billy Carter nor Coleman tried to influence U.S. policy on the planes.

But Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said Monday his investigating committee will probably find cases "where judgement can be questioned." He said evidence will be followed wherever it leads.

Both registered as foreign agents for Libya under Justice Department pressure after Billy Carter got $220,000 from Libya. Coleman picked up the checks for $20,000 and $200,000 from the Libyan diplomatic station in Washington, according to published reports.

Billy Carter said the $220,000 was part of a $500,000 loan he needed to pay debts and sources who have seen the checks say the word "loan" is written t money.

But Billy Carter told reporters last week that Libya made no commitment to supply the oil. "They said we'd talk about it," he said.

It took a lot of pressure to dissolve the gas, and that same pressure hurtles the water up through the well. When it reaches the surface, natural gas bubbles out for the same reason club soda and champagne fizz when they're uncorked.

Ideally, Rodgers said, the water will be hot enough and fast enough to drive a turbine for a small power plant, in addition to carrying methane. The heat — expected to be about 300 degrees Fahrenheit — could also be used to heat or cool buildings, he said.

But it will take both the heat and the gas to produce enough energy to make the well worthwhile, he said. And he's not making any bets on the results.

"You have a lot of people who will say this or that, but we're scientists. ... We would prefer to maintain a sort of noncommittal attitude. We can't make prognostications until we have the water," he said.

Rodgers said he is a geology professor at Pan American University in Edinburg, Texas, as well as an employee of Technadril — a Houston energy company. The other two companies in the joint venture are Gulf Geothermal Corp. of Baton Rouge and Magma Power, a California company involved in geothermal energy projects in the western states.

Only one other well — in Brazoria County, Texas — has been drilled especially to see whether the geopressured-geothermal program will work. Tests there are just beginning, officials say.

Three Louisiana wells abandoned by oil and gas companies have been used to test the water, but such wells are smaller and less durable than one designed for the job, Karkalits said.

"You want to produce 40,000 barrels of water a day. In an oil well, if you produce 500 to 1,000 barrels a day of liquid, that's a nice producing well. This well has to be bigger, it has to be more extensive, it has to last 15 to 20 years. Oil wells have four, five, six years producing and they're through," he said.

Besides, they're generally close to the edge of the water-bearing soils, he said.

Karkalits said at least two more geopressured-geothermal wells — one in Parcerdu, near Lafayette, and the other in Lafourche Parish near Raceland — are planned for Louisiana in the next couple of years. Four others are planned for unspecified locations in Louisiana or Texas between 1981 and 1984, he said.

Woman could see turn of century while serving life sentence premeditated murder and of conspiracy and solicitation to murder trial witness Tracy Smith.

Mrs. Bradford said she enlisted the other two women's help to ambush her husband. They lured him into the kitchen to look at "beautiful steaks" and pummeled him until he suffocated in his own blood, prosecutors said.

Bradford was beaten to death with a cast-iron frying pan, apothecary jars, a bottle capper and a bar stool, they said.

A key prosecution witness has been Mrs. Bradford's 14-year-old daughter by a previous marriage, Eden. She said the women had planned for weeks to kill her stepfather and posted her as a lookout the night he was beaten.

The three women all were employees at United Optical Laboratories, Bradford's eyeglass manufacturing firm.

Ex-convict held in girl's death after Dallas party

DALLAS (AP) — An ex-convict who had been released from prison only a month ago was being held in the brutal rape and strangulation of a 14-year-old girl during a party early Sunday.

The suspect was released from prison July 13 after serving three-and-a-half years of an eight-year sentence for the 1976 rape of a 51-year-old Dallas woman. The woman died two weeks later of injuries sustained in the attack.

The man was being held without bond in the slaying of Tonna Maria Longan, an eighth-grade honor student at Rusk Middle School whose partially nude body was found in the backyard of her former boyfriend's house about 12:40 p.m. Sunday.

Homicide investigator John Landers said she had been raped, sexually mutilated, beaten with fists and strangled. Police and medical authorities placed the time of death about 1 a.m.

Friends told police Miss Longan had met the suspect at the home of her former boyfriend, 19-year-old Gerald Friend. The three were among about 35 guests at a party across the street Saturday night, friends said.

Miss Longan's death was reported about 1 p.m. Sunday by the ex-convict, who had returned to Friend's home, saying he wanted to help take out the garbage.

"He had been over several times and watched us do remodeling work without lifting a finger. It was real unusual for him to offer to do anything," Friend said.

Friend said the man returned to the house and said, "There's some girl laying in your back yard. I think she's dead."

Friend, who dated Miss Longan for four months before they broke up three weeks ago, said he "grabbed him and said, 'You're staying here.'"

Landers said the suspect had scratches on his forearms and dried blood under his fingernails.

The suspect has been convicted on three drug charges, police said.

Miss Longan was described as a "beautiful girl" who aspired to be a model.

The victim had planned to enter Thomas Jefferson High School this fall. She was an honor student at Rusk, where she was enrolled in the advanced student program and active in soccer, said her mother, Lou Longan.

Former Rusk assistant principal Joe V. Davis said he had noticed changes in Miss Longan after her seventh grade year, however.

"She would be absent a lot, and would skip classes and leave the campus," he said. "Some of her friends said she was hanging with an older crowd than she should have. ... I was a little concerned about her, like we would be for all our students. Hearing this, though, this is awful."

Hurricane victims turn to Uncle Sam

By SUSAN STOLER
 Associated Press Writer

HARLINGEN (AP) — Hundreds of South Texans held out their hands to "Uncle Sam" in the wake of Hurricane Allen's destruction, as two more federal assistance offices opened today.

A little more than a week ago the storm destroyed 620 residences and severely damaged another 3,200 homes in nine counties.

Damages are estimated to reach $600 million, says Texas Gov. Bill Clements.

Offices opened last week Corpus Christi, Alice, Kingsville, Port Aransas, and Harlingen, without enough trained staffers to handle the heavy turnout.

More than 1,500 persons sweltered in the 90 degree heat for up to eight hours until the Corpus Christi office opened. Many fainted and only 350 people were processed the first day.

"Over 5,000 people have registered through the centers and have received applications," said Heather Schoen, of the federal emergency management agency in Corpus Christi.

New offices open today in Edinburg and Port Isabel, and a Brownsville center opens Thursday.

Hurricane victims, from the homeless to those needing help with minor repairs, were encouraged to come by the centers where representatives of federal, state and local disaster relief agencies would be available. Agencies include the Small Business Administration, Internal Revenue Service, Farmers Home Administration and temporary housing programs.

Centers do not give out money immediately but instead take applications and later send someone to verify the claimed loss.

The Red Cross operates 16 assistance centers throughout South Texas that are separate from the federal offices. Persons needing immediate, but temporary help should apply, said Phil Gaddis of the Red Cross in Corpus Christi.

He said the latest totals show almost 13,000 were displaced or otherwise affected by the storm.

"It's kind of interesting that we are getting into seven days after Allen made landfall and we still have 25 mobile aid units out in the field," Gaddis said. "It shows the freaky kind of flooding in patches it caused."

Edinburg in Hidalgo County suffered a week of four-foot flooding. City officials used water pumps from the State Highway Department to drain 95 percent of the water this weekend, Edinburg Acting City Manager Romeo Villarreal said.

"My biggest problem is mosquitoes. We've had machines out but it seems like they're not doing anything to help and we're using the strongest stuff allowed for populated areas," Villarreal said.

Five disaster shelter remain open in the Edinburg area and are housing 291 persons, Gaddis said.

Red Cross shelters at one point numbered 443 with 252,000 persons throughout South Texas, he added.

Residents of nine counties — Cameron, Willacy, Kleberg, Jim Wells, Nueces, San Patricio, Aransas, Hidalgo and Brooks — are eligible for disaster relief under a presidential declaration.

Cameron and Hidalgo County officials complained last week that only one center — in Harlingen — had been opened for the three counties declared disasters in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Acid fumes leak from derailed train car

EUNICE, N.M. (AP) — An engineer and two brakemen were treated for injuries after two locomotives and three railroad cars — one laden with acid — derailed two miles north of here, state police say.

Acid spilled from the tank car Monday when the Missouri Pacific freight train derailed after a section of the base under the railroad tracks washed away, officers said.

State police said the fumes were from hydrochloric acid and could be lethal. But officials at Lea Regional Hospital in Hobbs, N.M., where the injured men were taken, said the substance was sulfuric acid.

One officer said the fumes could be smelled "pretty strongly" within 300 feet of the wreckage.

A couple who lived near the site of the derailment were evacuated from their home. Officers said it was the only house within two miles of the derailment.

All three were treated for exposure to acid and remained at the hospital for observation, a hospital spokesman said.

The engineer, Robert Waddell, 55, of Monahans, Texas, also suffered a fractured hip and pelvis and multiple lacerations, a hospital spokesman said. He was listed in stable condition.

The other two men — brakeman K.R. Cook, 43, of Monahans, and brakeman John Tovas, 33, of Big Spring, Texas, received cuts and bruises, officials said.

The two engines powering the train and the three cars behind the engines derailed Monday morning, state police said. Most of the approximately 45 tank and bulk cars in the train were empty, authorities said.

The train was en route from Monahans to Lovington, N.M.

A heavy rain Sunday night saturated a portion of the track bed, causing it to give way, state police said.

The tank car carrying the acid tipped over, allowing some of the substance to flow out on the ground. Officers said the tank did not rupture and there was no fire.

A backhoe tractor, a bulldozer and a front-end loader were called in and built a dike around the tank car to contain the spillage, state police said.

Authorities said clay was being sent from Hobbs to put on the acid to neutralize it.

A sheriff's department spokesman said the wreckage would be moved today.

State police said the track would be blocked for a couple of days until the track can be repaired.

Man injured in Good Samaritan act

DALLAS (AP) — An unemployed drilling rig worker remained in serious condition today after he suffered massive injuries while helping pull a woman from a burning automobile.

Michael Boyd, of nearby Lewisville, father of a 12-day-old son, was enroute to Baytown late Friday with his brother, Terry Boyd and a friend, Brian Christy when they drove upon a multi-car accident on Stemmons Freeway.

Lori Adams, a 20-year-old legal secretary, was trapped inside her overturned car.

"Terry was standing behind the car, directing traffic when they hollered and told me to hold on," Ms. Adams recalled Monday.

"The car hit me from behind. My car inside was completely on fire. The doors were jammed shut. I was pushed over to the passenger side. I rolled down the window and somebody pulled me out," she said.

"Seconds later the car blew up," she said.

"The guy that ran into the back of me put it into reverse and floorboarded it to try and leave the scene. He pulled around the side of the car and that's when he hit Mike," she said. "He must have been going faster than 60 mph."

Michael Boyd was struck by the car and thrown about 20 feet into the air. He landed face down on the pavement and slid about 60 feet before stopping beside another car.

The driver of the car that struck Boyd fled the scene, leaving his automobile behind.

Ms. Adams considers herself lucky. She suffered second-degree burns on an arm and some singed hair.

A team of surgeons worked on Boyd at Parkland Hospital for more than nine hours Sunday. He suffered two broken legs, a broken right arm, a crushed right wrist, a crushed right knee, serious head injuries and lost all his teeth.

"The doctor doesn't think he'll ever use his right wrist like he did before," said Claire Robinson, a sister of the seriously injured man.

At the time of the accident the Boyd brothers and Christy were going to Baytown to pick up Boyd's belongings. He had lost his job on a drilling rig near Baytown and planned to look for work at Lewisville.

Boyd has no job and no insurance to pay for the costly hospital bills, according to relatives.

Mrs. Robinson said that even semi-conscious Boyd wants to hear about his infant son.

Airport, paving considered by Gray Commissioners Court

County Judge Carl Kennedy would write to the Thomas Y. Pickett Company stating the county commissioners would like to consider a contract for just one year.

In reference to a letter from the Cabot Corporation requesting improvements to a county road west of Cabot, commissioners considered several alternatives.

"We will try to do everything we can in the interest of continued employment in Gray County," Judge Kennedy said.

Upon information from Barber, the commissioners tried to find a way to pave the road which would meet state standards, the county budget, and the needs of Cabot.

"The utility lines under the road will have to be lowered, and that could be very costly," Commissioner Rice said.

Gene Barber reminded commissioners the amount of traffic on the road would have to be considered in any paving project. "The road is used quite a bit now the way it is. If it were paved there would be even heavier traffic," Barber said.

The request from Cabot was tabled until commissioners could gather further information.

Commissioners also approved paying $83,000 in monthly bills as recommended by the county auditor.

Commissioners considered several items pertaining to the Perry-Lefors Airport, including the airport manager's contract and the contract for improvements to the airport.

The managers contract was approved by the Airport Board and by manager Roy Smith of Pampa Aircraft.

Commissioners also approved the contract.

Gene Barber of Merriman and Barber Consulting Engineers, Inc., said to the commissioners, "Airport projects have been continuing for the past ten years with several grants from the Federal Aeronautics Association and the Texas Aeronautics Commission."

The current projects, as recommended by the Merriman and Barber, firm were for the improvement of the airport entry road and installation of improved runway lighting for the safety of landing aircraft.

Commissioners approved the updating of grant applications to the various aeronautics commissions. The updating was necessary to include several improvements at the airport which have already been made, according to Barber.

Commissioners also discussed renewing the appraisal contract currently held by the Thomas Y. Pickett Company. "The company has asked for the sum of $23,000 for the two year period starting in 1981," Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said.

Commissioners and Judge Kennedy expressed their appreciation for the excellent work done by the Thomas Y. Pickett firm. "However we need to see that the amount is in line with other firms," Commissioner Ronnie Rice, Precinct two, said.

Texas candidate for Miss USA announced

EL PASO (AP) — Diana Durnford, 21, of El Paso, who likes to cook and dance and someday wants to host a talk show, is the new Miss Texas USA and will represent Texas at the Miss USA Pageant next spring.

"One of my big idols is Phyllis George. I think I'm good at talking to people and bringing out their best qualities," said Miss Durnford, a junior at Texas-El Paso studying communications. "I would like to host a talk show."

A panel of nine judges gave the brown-eyed, brown-haired, 5-foot-7 coed 28 points Monday night, making her the winner in the statewide pageant over Miss Dallas County, Lu Ann Caughey, who scored 22.

The other three runners-up, in the order the judges placed them, were Miss Humble, Debbie Maffett; Miss Sandia, Bambi Hamm; and Miss Dallas, Randi Hall.

The five finalists were chosen out of 15 semi-finalists selected from 99 contestants in the pageant, which was broadcast live on television stations in 15 Texas cities.

Miss Durnford, who entered the contest as Miss Sun City, came in third in last year's pageant. "Don't ever quit—that's what I've been telling the other girls," she said.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Presenting: the 1980 Edsel

John Anderson has been advocating a 50-cent-a-gallon tax increase throughout his presidential campaign. The idea is as absurd as Anderson's candidacy. And now one of the biggest names in American auto making has endorsed Anderson's folly. No wonder the auto industry is falling apart.

Last week in a speech before the prestigious Swiss-American Chamber of Commerce in Zurich Henry Ford II proclaimed his support for massively increasing the federal gas tax. According to the auto mogul, increasing the tax 50 cents a gallon would reduce domestic consumption of gasoline, now about 7 million barrels a day, by 650,000 barrels. That nine percent reduction would, according to Ford, save about $8 billion a year from the $80 billion now spent on importing oil.

An enormous increase in the gas tax, as outlined by Ford, is supposed to do much more than cut consumption. He emphasized that the $50 billion raised annually by the increased gas tax could — you guessed it — finance a multitude of new government programs. Ford listed things like saving Social Security from bankruptcy, new weapons projects, aid to ailing cities, and — predictably — aid to ailing industries. One wonders why he didn't include solar electric plants for every city, new national parks and lifetime medical protection for all citizens. If one is going to dream, why not dream big?

Ford, like Anderson, seems to be living in never-never land. The private sector is already teetering on the brink of a government-created financial disaster. Sucking $50 billion more dollars out of the consumer's pockets could shove American industry right over the edge. Of course Ford and Anderson have a solution for that eventuality: even more government.

One of the first side effects of increasing the gas tax would be a drop in the sales of new cars. Ford suggests it would be only a 3 to 4 percent decrease. But even shrinking the market by that limited amount could throw the industry into a tailspin from which it might not recover. Ford has an answer to this problem too: further restrictions on imported cars. Now that makes sense. Not only will the public pay $50 billion in new taxes, but it will also be forced to buy domestically produced cars — and those cars will not have price or quality competition from overseas. Thanks.

Undoubtedly, Ford will support any other government steps he thinks necessary to counter the repercussions of a massive increase in the gasoline tax. Apparently he hasn't thought out what all those repercussions will be. Nonetheless, he has figured out the list of new government programs that can be financed with all that new tax revenue!

The idea is, in short, a fantasy. Like other quick-fix schemes, it won't solve the problems it is intended to solve and will likely result in a host of new ones. Certainly the energy crisis is not going to be solved by increasing taxes by $50 billion.

Mozambique turns from marxism?

In 1975, after ten years of armed struggle, Mozambique became an independent country. The Texas-sized East African nation had been a Portuguese colony since 1505 and as in many emerging African nations Mozambique's new leaders were anxious to give communism a try. After five years they have found Marxist reality far different from what was expected.

Mozambique President Samora Machel was, perhaps, one of the most dedicated Marxists to assume power in Africa. He vowed to build a new communist state by stamping out individualism and capitalist or traditional values. Within a year of taking power, he closed all private schools and conducted a massive nationalization of property and business.

Predictably, Machel's communization destroyed Mozambique's once-thriving economy. There was a near-total emigration of the country's 160,000 whites and with them went many skilled blacks who were justifiably fearful of Machel's ideology.

The new nation then turned to the Kremlin for help and discovered, as many emerging nations do, that Russia has little to offer except guns. And, oh yes, the Soviets gave Machel the bill for all the help — guns — they provided during his struggle for independence.

Payment was in the form of a treaty giving the Russians, with their huge fishing factory ships, the right to fish in Mozambique's territorial waters. The Russians are now vacuum-cleaning every living thing from those coastal waters and it is doubtful that many fish will remain once the treaty has run its course.

Five years of independence under Marxism has turned the once prosperous colony of Mozambique into an economic catastrophe. At first President Machel, never at a loss for rhetoric, blamed colonialists and imperialists for his nation's troubles.

It seemed to Machel that all the world's capitalists were plotting against him. That is why he couldn't get the sewer system in the capital to work, or anything else for that matter.

The years have passed and it appears that Machel may have found the culprit who is ruining his country's economy. Recently in a five-hour tirade to a crowd of 40,000 in Maputo, the nation's capital, Machel admitted the country's problems were not caused by capitalists or foreign plots.

Without conceding that socialism is the problem, Machel announced a dramatic denationalization program. Small industry and business will be, if Machel is to be believed, returned to private ownership. Apparently most of Mozambique's once profitable light industry and commercial enterprises became a drain on the nation's treasury under government management.

It is still impossible for Mozambique's president to confess that all his past Marxist rhetoric was wrong. Yet he is moving to privatize his country's economy. We hope that someday he will have the courage to admit publicly what he by now must know with certainty: socialism doesn't work.

Wage price controls invitation to disaster

By George Hagedorn
(Editor's note: Mr. Hagedorn is chief economist and vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers.)

We have recently seen a number of well-publicized conversions to a position in support of wage-price controls by persons who had previously been opponents of the idea.

Apparently the underlying thought is that the arguments against controls, however compelling they may be in more ordinary times, must be overridden by the severity of the present inflation. Put simply, "controls are more justifiable now because they are needed more."

Plausible as this may sound, all experience with controls leads to the opposite conclusion. Controls are never a good idea. Under ANY circumstances they produce adverse consequences for the economy: misallocation of resources, impairment of productivity and shortages of essential goods.

But the very worst time to impose controls — the time when their adverse effects will be felt most promptly and most acutely — is a period like the present, when inflation has reached an unprecedented intensity.

The reason for this isn't hard to understand. When prices are not pushing hard against the price ceilings, the controls don't do too much harm because they don't make too much difference. When strong inflationary forces put heavy upward pressure on prices which are held down by controls, the resulting strains on the economy become unbearable and the productive system is severely crippled.

The experience with controls during the 1971-74 period provides a perfect real-life example of this difference. There were actually two "freeze" periods during that interval.

The first began in August 1971 and extended over the next three months. Difficulties in administering the freeze were minimal and no serious economic disruption resulted. The annual rate of increase in consumer prices, which had been 3.6 percent in the eight months prior to the freeze, fell to 1.6 percent during the three-month freeze period.

The second "freeze" was imposed in the near-panic atmosphere of rapidly accelerating inflation in June 1973 and was scheduled to last 60 days. It was a fiasco from the start. The freeze order had to be quickly adjusted to allow for wholesale exemptions of products which threatened to disappear from the market.

Nevertheless, market disruption was so severe that the freeze had to be hastily abandoned a month before its scheduled end, and prices then rebounded at a rate which more than made up the difference. In the subsequent period of managed price controls, widespread shortages of critical items developed. The whole control effort had to be dropped as a counterproductive failure in early 1974.

Why the difference between an apparently successful freeze in 1971, and an obvious failure in 1973? Clearly the difference lay in the contrast between the strength of underlying inflationary forces in the two periods.

The freeze had a temporary but misleading appearance of working in 1971 when inflationary forces were relatively mild. It didn't work at all, even in appearance, in 1973 when underlying inflationary forces had gained double-digit strength.

The relevant point is that, in respect to the strength of inflationary forces, 1980 is much more like 1973, when the freeze was a counterproductive disaster, than it is like 1971, when a freeze gave at least the temporary appearance of working. An attempt at freezing prices in present circumstances would be an invitation to quick calamity.

The paradox is that when controls apparently are not needed very badly, they are least damaging and may even appear to work temporarily. When they seem to be badly needed, they don't work at all and produce chaos in the economic system. The present is about the worst time for imposing controls we have seen in recent years.

We "need" controls now about as badly as we need any other kind of national disaster!

"These mixed marriages can be a problem. Let's look for a compromise — now who wears the Willie Nelson jeans and prefers the Gloria Vanderbilt?"

A 'don't know' taxi driver

by ART BUCHWALD

NEW YORK — I almost had an interview with the man in the street last week. The proverbial taxi driver was taking me to Madison Square Garden. I was counting on him for the proverbial column on what the New York man in the street was thinking about the Democratic National Convention. The name on his dashboard was Alfred Mancuso. I waited for Mr. Mancuso to start the conversation, but there was dead silence in the taxi.

Finally I lost my patience. "Cat got your tongue, Mr. Mancuso?"

"How's that?" he said, stopping for a red light.

"I've been in this taxi for three minutes and you've yet to tell me what's wrong with the country."

"Don't see nuthin' wrong with it as far as I'm concerned — everything is hunky-dory and A-OK."

"Surely you jest, sir," I said. "Are you

happy with the choice for president this year?"

"Yep, I really am. When you think there are over 100 million people to choose from, and they managed to find three such outstanding candidates it seems a miracle."

I looked into the mirror to see if Mr. Mancuso was putting me on.

Finally I said, "At the same time you certainly must be looking for someone to find a solution to rampant inflation that cuts through your take-home pay like a knife."

"I'm not for inflation," Mr. Mancuso said. "Or against it. I believe in freedom of choice. Some people may want inflation and others may not. It should be a matter of conscience."

We were only 10 blocks from Madison Square Garden and I felt my "man in the street interview" falling through my fingers.

"If the economy doesn't bother you, Mr. Mancuso, then what does?"

"That's a tough one. When you drive a taxi, see, it's very hard to get upset about something. But I'll tell you one thing about this country that bugs me."

My pad and pen were poised.

He said, "I'm not sure everyone who says to you, 'Have a nice day' really means it. Some people, when they tell you to have a nice day, are sincere, but others just say it out of habit. You can't imagine how many people get out of my cab and none of them remember a half-hour later whether they wished me a nice day or not."

"And you feel that's the thing the man in the street worries about the most?"

"I would think so. No one likes to be lied to."

We were getting terribly close to the convention hall. I made one more stab at Mr. Mancuso. "Do you have any objection to telling me whom you favor in the upcoming election?"

"Let's see. I like Reagan — always have, ever since I saw him on 'Death Valley Days.' He seems to care for the little people in spite of being a movie star. Carter's a good man, too. He goes to church every Sunday and he loves his brother. Anderson is also a fine person. I always trust a man with white hair. But I don't think it's the role of a taxi driver to tell people what he thinks. That isn't what he's paid for. We don't know any more than anybody else — maybe even less."

We arrived at our destination. "As spokesman for the man in the street, you're a dud," I told him.

Mr. Mancuso said, "You're the fourth reporter I took to Madison Square Garden today who said the same thing."

Fight for political life

By Robert J. Wagman

ATLANTA (NEA) — The primary election is still two months away, but seldom does a prime-time quarter-hour pass without a political commercial on one of the local television stations here. Those commercials are getting more and more shrill as a 23-year veteran of the U.S. Senate fights for his political life.

In a rare act last Sept. 14, the Senate Ethics Committee recommended that the Senate "denounce" Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., for "gross neglect of his duty" in mismanaging Senate and campaign funds and in filing inaccurate reports on his campaign and personal finances. The committee also recommended that Talmadge be required to pay the Senate back more than $12,000 that had been channeled into a secret bank account.

The full Senate endorsed the committee's recommendations by an 81-14 vote last Oct. 10. Meanwhile, the Justice Department was also investigating the Talmadge case; the department recently announced, however, that it would not bring criminal charges against the senator.

Many predicted that the allegations against Talmadge would effectively end his political career. But it now appears that they substantially underestimated the feisty Talmadge and his bedrock support in his home state. He is running for an fifth term in the Senate, and his first hurdle is the Aug. 5 Democratic primary.

One thing Talmadge doesn't lack in that primary is company. So far, 14 rivals have signed up and the filing date has not yet passed. The challengers range from serious politicians such as Rep. Dawson Mathis, Lt. Gov. Zeli Miller and Norman Underwood, a former state appellate judge, to John Collins, a 57-year-old businessman who used to be Talmadge's part-time pilot.

Rather than ignore the charges against him, Talmadge is trying to turn them to his advantage. He calls his Senate censure "a personal victory" because it was not censure, the Senate's strongest punishment short of expulsion. "The Senate found no evidence of personal wrongdoing," Talmadge tells Georgia voters. He has begun to cite the Justice Department's decision against prosecution as further evidence of his innocence.

In an expensive television campaign, Talmadge is concentrating on his 35-year record of public service. His ads show him busily at work in his Senate office or at the White House or in meetings with Georgians. In the commercials, Talmadge tells the voters that he deserves to be returned to office "because the Talmadge family has given its lives in service to the people of Georgia." (His father was governor of the state at the time of his death in 1946.)

Earlier in the campaign, Talmadge's opponents stressed their own records of public service. But more and more in recent weeks, they have turned to the findings of the Ethics Committee. In a new round of ads running statewide, Underwood attacks Talmadge's "tarnished record" and asks voters "not to throw away $350,000 of your tax dollars that were spent to investigate the charges of misconduct (against Talmadge)."

But political observers here warn never to underestimate Talmadge. A new private poll seems to bear them out. Talmadge currently leads all his challengers with 40 percent. In second place is Miller with about 28 percent, followed by Underwood and Dawson with a little more than 10 percent each. The remaining candidates have little or no support.

It is likely that Talmadge will lead the primary but fail to get more than 50 percent of the vote. That would force a runoff election between him and the second-place finisher.

The same poll asks voters who they would choose given various runoff combinations. The results predict that Talmadge would easily defeat Underwood or Dawson in a runoff but would finish in a virtual dead heat if paired with Miller.

About the only thing that is certain now is that it will be a long, hot summer in Georgia. But don't bet against Herman Talmadge's returning to Washington for six more years.

Solar classes set for W.T.

Ways to save with solar power will be the highlight of a Monday evening class at West Texas State University this fall. "Solar Energy: Residence and Rural Systems" will look at applications of solar, wind and biomass alternative energy sources for the Texas Panhandle and the types and design of energy systems for residence and rural use.

Course instructor will be Dr. Vaughn Nelson, head of WTSU's Alternative Energy Institute who has been involved in wind energy research since the early 1970's.

The interest in solar energy applications in the Texas Panhandle has been increasing over the past few years, according to Nelson.

"People in this area are much more aware of the limitations of fossil fuels that they were before," Nelson said. "Even though we still have fairly cheap gas and electricity."

Students in the course will become familiar with the often puzzling solar industry terminology, and learn about energy systems they may use in their own homes, such as solar hot water heaters, or more extensive systems they may wish to incorporate in their homes of the future such as passive and underground designs.

"It is just good architectural design," Nelson noted. While the cost of purchasing solar systems initially may seem prohibitive, Nelson said.

"Individuals incorporating such systems into their houses are eligible for a maximum tax credit, Nelson warned. "The things we do now may help save us later."

"Solar Energy: Residence and Rural Systems," which will be taught Monday from 7 p.m. to 9:50 p.m., also is available through non-credit continuing education for a registration fee of $25 at the first class meeting.

Bodies recovered from lost plane

TAOS, N.M. (AP) — The bodies of five members of a family who crashed in a single-engine aircraft in the mountains near here in February were being flown today to their home in Mesquite, Texas.

GLAUCOMA
High Pressure In The Eyeball

Glaucoma is a disease where there is high pressure inside the eyeball. Sight may be damaged if the pupil of the eye is dilated. It is, therefore, necessary to keep the pupils contracted at all times. Medications such as pilocarpine are effective in achieving this. Atropine and other medications that dilate the pupils are often given prior to surgery and to patients with an abnormal heart beat.

Unless the presence of glaucoma is known to the doctor, such treatment could make the condition worse. Going without the drug even for a day may lead to blindness or other eye damage.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Presenting: the 1980 Edsel

John Anderson has been advocating a 50-cent-a-gallon tax increase throughout his presidential campaign. The idea is as absurd as Anderson's candidacy. And now one of the biggest names in American auto making has endorsed Anderson's folly. No wonder the auto industry is falling apart.

Last week in a speech before the prestigious Swiss-American Chamber of Commerce in Zurich Henry Ford II proclaimed his support for massively increasing the federal gas tax. According to the auto mogul, increasing the tax 50 cents a gallon would reduce domestic consumption of gasoline, now about 7 million barrels a day, by 650,000 barrels. That nine percent reduction would, according to Ford, save about $8 billion a year from the $80 billion now spent on importing oil.

An enormous increase in the gas tax, as outlined by Ford, is supposed to do much more than cut consumption. He emphasized that the $50 billion raised annually by the increased gas tax could — you guessed it — finance a multitude of new government programs. Ford listed things like saving Social Security from bankruptcy, new weapons projects, aid to ailing cities, and — predictably — aid to ailing industries. One wonders why he didn't include solar electric plants for every city, new national parks and lifetime medical protection for all citizens. If one is going to dream, why not dream big?

Ford, like Anderson, seems to be living in never-never land. The private sector is already teetering on the brink of a government-created financial disaster. Sucking $50 billion more dollars out of the consumer's pockets could shove American industry right over the edge. Of course Ford and Anderson have a solution for that eventuality: even more government.

One of the first side effects of increasing the gas tax would be a drop in the sales of new cars. Ford suggests it would be only a 3 to 4 percent decrease. But even shrinking the market by that limited amount could throw the industry into a tailspin from which it might not recover. Ford has an answer to this problem too: further restrictions on imported cars. Now that makes sense. Not only will the public pay $50 billion in new taxes, but it will also be forced to buy domestically produced cars — and those cars will not have price or quality competition from overseas. Thanks.

Undoubtedly, Ford will support any other government steps he thinks necessary to counter the repercussions of a massive increase in the gasoline tax. Apparently he hasn't thought out what all those repercussions will be. Nonetheless, he has figured out the list of new government programs that can be financed with all that new tax revenue!

The idea is, in short, a fantasy. Like other quick-fix schemes, it won't solve the problems it is intended to solve and will likely result in a host of new ones. Certainly the energy crisis is not going to be solved by increasing taxes by $50 billion.

Mozambique turns from marxism?

In 1975, after ten years of armed struggle, Mozambique became an independent country. The Texas-sized East African nation had been a Portuguese colony since 1505 and as in many emerging African nations Mozambique's new leaders were anxious to give communism a try. After five years they have found Marxist reality far different from what was expected.

Mozambique President Samora Machel was, perhaps, one of the most dedicated Marxists to assume power in Africa. He vowed to build a new communist state by stamping out individualism and capitalist or traditional values. Within a year of taking power, he closed all private schools and conducted a massive nationalization of property and business.

Predictably, Machel's communication destroyed Mozambique's once-thriving economy. There was a near-total emigration of the country's 160,000 whites and with them went many skilled blacks who were justifiably fearful of Machel's ideology.

The new nation then turned to the Kremlin for help and discovered, as many emerging nations do, that Russia has little to offer except guns. And, oh yes, the Soviets gave Machel the bill for all the help — guns they provided during his struggle for independence.

Payment was in the form of a treaty giving the Russians, with their huge fishing factory ships, the right to fish in Mozambique's territorial waters. The Russians are now vacuum-cleaning every living thing from those coastal waters and it is doubtful that many fish will remain once the treaty has run its course.

Five years of independence under Marxism has turned the once prosperous colony of Mozambique into an economic catastrophe. At first President Machel, never at a loss for rhetoric, blamed colonialists and imperialists for his nation's troubles.

It seemed to Machel that all the world's capitalists were plotting against him. That is why he couldn't get the sewer system in the capital to work, or anything else for that matter.

The years have passed and it appears that Machel may have found the culprit who is ruining his country's economy. Recently in a five-hour tirade to a crowd of 40,000 in Maputo, the nation's capital, Machel admitted the country's problems were not caused by capitalists or foreign plots.

Without conceding that socialism is the problem, Machel announced a dramatic denationalization program. Small industry and business will be, if Machel is to be believed, returned to private ownership. Apparently most of Mozambique's once profitable light industry and commercial enterprises became a drain on the nation's treasury under government management.

It is still impossible for Mozambique's president to confess that all his past Marxist-rhetoric was wrong. Yet he is moving to privatize his country's economy. We hope that someday he will have the courage to admit publicly what he by now must know with certainty: socialism doesn't work.

Wage price controls invitation to disaster

By George Hagedorn
(Editor's note: Mr. Hagedorn is chief economist and vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers.)

We have recently seen a number of well-published conversions to a position in support of wage-price controls by persons who had previously been opponents of the idea.

Apparently the underlying thought is that the arguments against controls, however compelling they may be in more ordinary times, must be overridden by the severity of the present inflation. Put simply, "controls are more justifiable now because they are needed more".

Plausible as this may sound, all experience with controls leads to the opposite conclusion. Controls are never a good idea. Under ANY circumstances they produce adverse consequences for the economy: misallocation of resources, impairment of productivity and shortages of essential goods.

But the very worst time to impose controls — the time when their adverse effects will be felt most promptly and most acutely — is a period like the present, when inflation has reached an unprecedented intensity.

The reason for this isn't hard to understand. When prices are not pushing hard against the price ceilings, the controls don't do too much harm because they don't make too much difference. When strong inflationary forces put heavy upward pressure on prices which are held down by controls, the resulting strains on the economy become unbearable and the productive system is severely crippled.

The experience with controls during the 1971-74 period provides a perfect real-life example of this difference. There were actually two "freeze" periods during that interval.

The first began in August 1971 and extended over the next three months. Difficulties in administering the freeze were minimal and no serious economic disruption resulted. The annual rate of increase in consumer prices, which had been 3.6 percent in the eight months prior to the freeze, fell to 1.6 percent during the three-month freeze period.

The second "freeze" was imposed in the near-panic atmosphere of rapidly accelerating inflation in June 1973 and was scheduled to last 60 days. It was a fiasco from the start. The freeze order had to be quickly adjusted to allow for wholesale exemptions of products which threatened to disappear from the market.

Nevertheless, market disruption was so severe that the freeze had to be hastily abandoned a month before its scheduled end, and prices then rebounded at a rate which more than made up the difference. In the subsequent period of managed price controls, widespread shortages of critical items developed. The whole control effort had to be dropped as a counterproductive failure in early 1974.

Why the difference between an apparently successful freeze in 1971, and an obvious failure in 1973? Clearly the difference lay in the contrast between the strength of underlying inflationary forces in the two periods.

The freeze had a temporary but misleading appearance of working in 1971 when inflationary forces were relatively mild. It didn't work at all, even in appearance, in 1973 when underlying inflationary forces had gained double-digit strength.

The relevant point is that, in respect to the strength of inflationary forces, 1980 is much more like 1973, when the freeze was a counterproductive disaster, than it is like 1971, when a freeze gave at least the temporary appearance of working. An attempt at freezing prices in present circumstances would be an invitation to quick calamity.

The paradox is that when controls apparently are not needed very badly, they are least damaging and may even appear to work temporarily. When they seem to be badly needed, they don't work at all and produce chaos in the economic system. The present is about the worst time for imposing controls we have seen in recent years.

We "need" controls now about as badly as we need any other kind of national disaster!

"These mixed marriages can be a problem. Let's look for a compromise — now who wears the Willie Nelson jeans and prefers the Gloria Vanderbilt?"

A 'don't know' taxi driver

by ART BUCHWALD

NEW YORK — I almost had an interview with the man in the street last week. The proverbial taxi driver was taking me to Madison Square Garden. I was counting on him for the proverbial column on what the New York man in the street was thinking about the Democratic National Convention. The name on his dashboard was Alfred Mancuso. I waited for Mr. Mancuso to start the conversation, but there was dead silence in the taxi.

Finally I lost my patience. "Cat got your tongue, Mr. Mancuso?"

"How's that?" he said, stopping for a red light.

"I've been in this taxi for three minutes and you've yet to tell me what's wrong with the country."

"Don't see nuthin' wrong with it as far as I'm concerned — everything is hunky-dory and A-OK."

"Surely you jest, sir," I said. "Are you

happy with the choice for president this year?"

"Yep, I really am. When you think there are over 100 million people to choose from, and they managed to find three such outstanding candidates it seems a miracle."

I looked into the mirror to see if Mr. Mancuso was putting me on.

Finally I said, "At the same time you certainly must be looking for someone to find a solution to rampant inflation that cuts through your take-home pay like a knife."

"I'm not for inflation," Mr. Mancuso said. "Or against it. I believe in freedom of choice. Some people may want inflation and others may not. It should be a matter of conscience."

We were only 10 blocks from Madison Square Garden and I felt my "man in the street interview" falling through my fingers.

"If the economy doesn't bother you, Mr. Mancuso, then what does?"

"That's a tough one. When you drive a taxi, see, it's very hard to get upset about something. But I'll tell you one thing about this country that bugs me."

My pad and pen were poised.

He said, "I'm not sure everyone who says to you, 'Have a nice day' really means it. Some people, when they tell you to have a nice day, are sincere, but others just say it out of habit. You can't imagine how many people get out of my cab and none of them remember a half-hour later whether they wished me a nice day or not."

"And you feel that's the thing the man in the street worries about the most?"

"I would think so. No one likes to be lied to."

We were getting terribly close to the convention hall. I made one more stab at Mr. Mancuso. "Do you have any objection to telling me whom you favor in the upcoming election?"

"Let's see. I like Reagan — always have, ever since I saw him on 'Death Valley Days.' He seems to care for the little people in spite of being a movie star. Carter's a good man, too. He goes to church every Sunday and he loves his brother. Anderson is also a fine person. I always trust a man with white hair. But I don't think it's the role of a taxi driver to tell people what he thinks. That isn't what he's paid for. We don't know any more than anybody else — maybe even less."

We arrived at our destination. "As spokesman for the man in the street, you're a dud," I told him.

Mr. Mancuso said, "You're the fourth reporter I took to Madison Square Garden today who said the same thing."

Fight for political life

By Robert J. Wagman

ATLANTA (NEA) — The primary election is still two months away, but seldom does a prime-time quarter-hour pass without a political commercial on one of the local television stations here. Those commercials are getting more and more shrill as a 23-year veteran of the U.S. Senate fights for his political life.

In a rare act last Sept. 14, the Senate Ethics Committee recommended that the Senate "denounce" Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., for "gross neglect of his duty" in mismanaging Senate and campaign funds and in filing inaccurate reports on his campaign and personal finances. The committee also recommended that Talmadge be required to pay the Senate back more than $12,000 that had been channeled into a secret bank account.

The full Senate endorsed the committee's recommendations by an 81-14 vote last Oct. 10. Meanwhile, the Justice Department was also investigating the Talmadge case; the department recently announced, however, that it would not bring criminal charges against the senator.

Many predicted that the allegations against Talmadge would effectively end his political career. But it now appears that they substantially underestimated the feisty Talmadge and his bedrock support in his home state. He is running for an fifth term in the Senate, and his first hurdle is the Aug. 5 Democratic primary.

One thing Talmadge doesn't lack in that primary is company. So far, 14 rivals have signed up and the filing date has not yet passed. The challengers range from serious politicians such as Rep. Dawson Mathis, Lt. Gov. Zell Miller and Norman Underwood, a former state appellate judge, to John Collins, a 57-year-old businessman who used to be Talmadge's part-time pilot.

Rather than ignore the charges against him, Talmadge is trying to turn them to his advantage. He calls his Senate denunciation "a personal victory" because it was not censure, the Senate's strongest punishment short of expulsion. "The Senate found no evidence of personal wrongdoing," Talmadge tells Georgia voters. He has begun to cite the Justice Department's decision against prosecution as further evidence of his innocence.

In an expensive television campaign, Talmadge is concentrating on his 35-year record of public service. His ads show him busy at work in his Senate office or at the White House or in meetings with Georgians. In the commercials, Talmadge tells the voters that he deserves to be returned to office "because the Talmadge family has given its lives in service to the people of Georgia." (His father was governor of the state at the time of his death in 1946.)

Earlier in the campaign, Talmadge's opponents stressed their own records of public service. But more and more in recent weeks, they have turned to the findings of the Ethics Committee. In a new round of ads running statewide, Underwood attacks Talmadge's "tarnished record" and asks voters "not to throw away $350,000 of your tax dollars that were spent to investigate the charges of misconduct (against Talmadge)."

But political observers here warn never to underestimate Talmadge. A new private poll seems to bear them out. Talmadge currently leads all his challengers with 40 percent. In second place is Miller with about 28 percent, followed by Underwood and Dawson with a little more than 10 percent each. The remaining candidates have little or no support.

It is likely that Talmadge will lead the primary but fail to get more than 50 percent of the vote. That would force a runoff election between him and the second-place finisher.

The same poll asks voters who they would choose given various runoff combinations. The results predict that Talmadge would easily defeat Underwood or Dawson in a runoff but would finish in a virtual dead heat if paired with Miller.

About the only thing that is certain now is that it will be a long, hot summer in Georgia. But don't bet against Herman Talmadge's returning to Washington for six more years.

Solar classes set for W.T.

Ways to save with solar power will be the highlight of a Monday evening class at West Texas State University this fall. "Solar Energy: Residence and Rural Systems" will look at applications of solar, wind and biomass alternative energy sources for the Texas Panhandle and the types and design of energy systems for residence and rural use.

Course instructor will be Dr. Vaughn Nelson, head of WTSU's Alternative Energy Institute who has been involved in wind energy research since the early 1970's.

The interest in solar energy applications in the Texas Panhandle has been increasing over the past few years, according to Nelson.

"People in this area are much more aware of the limitations of fossil fuels that they were before," Nelson said, "Even though we still have fairly cheap gas and electricity."

Students in the course will become familiar with the often puzzling solar industry terminology, and learn about energy systems they may use in their own homes, such as solar hot water heaters, or more extensive systems they may wish to incorporate in their homes of the future such as passive and underground designs.

"It is just good architectural design," Nelson noted.

While the cost of purchasing solar systems initially may seem prohibitive, Nelson said, "Individuals incorporating such systems into their houses are eligible for a maximum tax credit. Nelson warned, "The things we do now may help save us later."

"Solar Energy: Residence and Rural Systems," which will be taught Monday from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., also is available through non-credit continuing education for a registration fee of $25 at the first class meeting.

GLAUCOMA
High Pressure In The Eyeball

Glaucoma is a disease where there is high pressure inside the eyeball. Sight may be damaged if the pupil of the eye is dilated. It is, therefore, necessary to keep the pupils contracted at all times. Medications such as pilocarpine are effective in achieving this. Atropine and other medications that dilate the pupils are often given prior to surgery and to patients with an abnormal heart beat.

Unless the presence of glaucoma is known to the doctor, such treatment could make the condition worse. Going without the drug even for a day may lead to blindness or other eye damage.

Post-traumatic stress plaguing Viet veterans

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer
HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — Don Wilks has a vivid, deeply etched mental picture of that day, back in 1970, when he returned to the States after serving his hitch in Vietnam.

"There was nobody there to meet us," he says. "They didn't even bother to send a colonel. One of the guys on the plane had lost both legs and some old woman walked up to him and said, 'You should have been killed for what you did,' or something like that. I was shocked. I couldn't believe it."

Wilks enlisted in the Air Force shortly after his 19th birthday.

"I was in air rescue and recovery," says the lean, dark-haired man, now in his early 30s. "Helicopters. You know, Hueys. We went in and picked up Green Berets and pilots who had been shot down, things like that."

Seventy-two hours after leaving Vietnam, Wilks says, he was sitting on the sofa at his parents' home in Logan. He was 22 at the time and he had just survived a year of unmitigated hell.

"You could say I went through a period of readjustment after I got back home," he says, smiling wryly. "I had flashbacks. Everything that everybody else has had. I kept thinking about the time when a guy standing beside me took a direct round. It had to be heavy stuff, probably a .50-caliber. It blew out his spine and spattered his guts all over the other side of the Huey."

Wilks pulled himself together after a few months. He got married and went to college. Today, he owns his own business and teaches at Marshall University. He also has begun helping other Vietnam vets deal with the stresses and tensions they've never been able to put behind them since they returned to this country.

"In essence they're still 'in country,'" Wilks says, using the term the U.S. soldiers used when referring to being in Vietnam.

Wilks is a counselor at Huntington's Vet Center, which officially opened May 23. Administered by the Veterans Administration, it is one of 91 such centers across the country and is funded by a $9.9 million congressional appropriation. Authorized by the Veterans Health Care Amendments Act of 1979, the nationwide outreach program is designed to provide readjustment counseling for Vietnam veterans and their families.

Steve Giles heads the Huntington center. He says he and his staff had seen about 100 people, including veterans and members of their families, since the center opened.

"Our studies have shown that up to 50 percent of all Vietnam veterans are continuing to suffer symptoms of post-traumatic stress, and the figure may run as high as 60 percent with combat veterans," says Giles, a psychologist.

This stress shows up in many ways. Some of the veterans explode in rage, others are hamstrung by guilt.

"Vietnam vets have a higher incidence of alcoholism, divorce and suicide than do other groups," says Wilks. "Some of them live with Vietnam every day."

Wilks is quick to add, however, that he feels society has contributed to these problems by hanging negative labels on the Vietnam vets.

"You know what I'm talking about," he says. "We're all 'dopers' and 'baby killers,' of course."

The ree on for the outreach progra, he says, is that the VA has found that, for many of the veterans, time has not healed their psychological wounds. Now, as many of them approach middle age, fears, guilt and anger are nally beginning to surface.

Giles says he has found that some of the men are still trying to deal with what happened in Vietnam while others are nursing wounds inflicted after their return to this country.

"I was talking to a guy the other day and he broke down and started crying," he says. "He said he just wanted somebody to thank him for what he went through over there. He said nobody had ever thanked him."

In addition to individual counseling, Giles and his four staff members conduct "rap sessions" and help veterans and their wives work out domestic problems. They also help the vets obtain their benefits and have begun to try to help some of them find jobs.

The Vet Center also has begun to assume an advocacy role for those Vietnam veterans whose problems led them into legal trouble long before the VA set up this program.

"We've talked with Ashby Leach's wife about trying to help with his parole," says Giles, referring to a Huntington native who is serving a prison term in Ohio for taking hostages at the Chessie System's Cleveland headquarters several years ago.

Alaska: one of history's greatest real estate deals

WASHINGTON - National Wildlife Federation - Back in 1876, when the U.S. bought Alaska from the Russians for $7 million, critics of the purchase branded it "Seward's Folly."

The phrase expressed their contempt for Secretary of State William H. Seward who negotiated the deal, as well as his scheme to acquire more than half a million square miles of cold, barren, "worthless" land, an area one-fifth the size of what is now the "lower 48" states.

Today there is no dispute about Alaska's worth. Seward's deal ranks with the purchase of Manhattan for $24 in trinkets as one of history's greatest real estate bargains.

But Alaska is still controversial. There's a battle raging over the vast "land beyond" as Congress attempts to decide the fate of millions of acres of Alaska that belong to the American people. On July 21 the Senate will begin an Alaska lands debate in an effort to settle a question that has been called the most important conservation issue of this century.

The question, oversimplified, is: How much of Alaska should be developed and how much protected from development.

The argument is a bitter one. Some developers are accusing the conservationists of trying to put Alaska's riches in a "deer freeze" while some conservationists are calling the developers "rape and run" exploiters.

Some major conservation groups, such as the National Wildlife Federation, insist that a balance between those extremes is attainable.

Battle lines for the Congressional debate were drawn last month when in separate press conferences on the same day, a coalition of 53 conservation and other public interest groups called for passage of a bill sponsored by Senators Paul Tsongas (D-Mass.) and William Roth (R-Del.) while Alaska's Gov. John Jay Hammond demanded adoption of a bill reported by the Senate's Energy Committee.

At their press conference the conservationists dismissed oil, gas, and timber developers' claims that the Tsongas-Roth measure would "Lock up" vast acres of Alaska's natural resources. In fact, they pointed out, under Tsongas-Roth, which is similar to the Alaska lands bill overwhelmingly passed by the House in May 1979.

Ninety-five percent of all favorable potential oil and gas areas in Alaska would be open to private leasing for exploration and development.

Sixty percent of Alaska's mineral potential would be outside of protected parks, refuges, and wilderness areas.

A timber harvest adequate to sustain Alaska's forest products industry would be allowed.

The conservation groups complained that the Senate Energy Committee's bill would cut 38 million acres of wildlife refuges from the House-passed bill thus opening up priceless wildlife habitat to mining and other development.

In addition, they argued it would allow oil and gas exploration in the fragile caribou calving grounds of the Arctic National Wildlife Range, would open three areas in national parks and preserves to hardrock mining and would mandate overcutting of the magnificent southeast Alaska forests.

By opening up millions of acres of vital wildlife habitat to surface mining exploitation, said Thomas L. Kimball, executive vice president of the National Wildlife Federation, the Senate Energy Committee's bill threatens the future of healthy wildlife populations in Alaska.

"Alaska's caribou, grizzlies, wolverine, musk-ox and Dall sheep—mammals which are found in almost no other state—are dependent on undeveloped habitat for survival," he explained.

"In addition, millions of waterfowl that migrate throughout the world depend on Alaska's pure and undeveloped wetlands for nesting and breeding.

The Tsongas-Roth measure guarantees a safe future for these precious wildlife species," Kimball said.

Kimball ridiculed the idea that Tsongas-Roth was an "anti-hunting" bill as it has been labelled by developers, pointing out that the bill would leave 91 percent open to sport hunting. The areas left open to hunting contain the vast majority of Alaska's big game species.

At a session with journalists following the conservationist briefing Alaska's Governor Hammond, speaking for the Senate Energy Committee's bill, defended his state's record on environmental problems and argued that it must develop a diversified economy.

Answering the conservationists' report that Alaska will soon have the highest per-capita income in the nation, he complained that it also has the highest federal income tax burden per capita and the nation's highest cost of living.

Hammond insisted that there would be a "little hazard" to caribou on the Arctic National Wildlife Range as a result of oil exploration under the Energy committee bill.

"The Company to Have in Your Home"

The cashless society: one step at a time

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Push buttons and plastic are taking over for people and paper at your neighborhood bank.

The cashless society isn't here yet. And financial experts say paper money — and checks — will be around for a long time to come.

But computers are gaining a firmer and firmer foothold. Electronic transactions are cheaper than paper ones. They often are more convenient for customers. And bankers say there are fewer errors and threats to privacy with machines than with humans.

"No question about it," said Henry Vasquez of Hollywood Federal Savings & Loan in Hollywood, Fla., when asked if electronic banking was the wave of the future. "It's only a matter of time... We benefit because it makes our banking more efficient and more economical. You benefit because it makes managing your finances more convenient and in today's world, that means a lot more inexpensive."

At Hollywood Federal, you can have your paycheck deposited in your savings account — automatically. You can telephone the bank or its computer to pay your bills. You can take money out of or put it into your account at terminals in supermarkets and drug stores. You can shop with a debit card. "The customer does not need a checking account and never needs to come into our lobbies," said Vasquez.

State laws on electronic banking — commonly called electronic funds transfer or EFT — vary. Some ban automated teller machines. Others limit the kinds of services that different types of financial institutions can offer. On a nationwide level, federal legislation passed in 1978 gives users of debit cards the same kind of protection provided for credit card holders. There is a ceiling on the amount you can lose if someone steals your card and there are controls over the issuance of cards.

For many people, EFT means automated teller machines (ATMs). The money machines were introduced in the mid 1970s, and Linda Fenner Zimmer, a researcher in the field of bank automation, estimated there are about 14,000 today. "At long last, it can be stated that the ever-elusive ATM boom is finally under way in the United States," she said.

Machine services vary. In general, you can, at a minimum, withdraw money from your account, make a deposit and check your balance. Bill paying by telephone is another step in the march to electronic banking. The customer calls a number provided by the bank, gives his or her identification number and lists the bills to be paid and the amounts. The bank or savings institution withdraws funds from the customer's account, writes checks and pays the bills. In some cases, customers dial directly into a computer; in others, they speak to an operator at the bank.

Herb Wegner, a banking consultant and vice chairman of a federal commission that investigated electronic banking, said 235 financial institutions offer telephone bill paying and the number is growing. "Once the customer tries it, he seems to like it," Wegner said.

Prices for telephone bill-paying vary. Hollywood Federal charges 15 cents per bill if the customer talks to an operator; 10 cents if he or she deals with the computer. Hollywood Federal introduced the system in May 1975. At the end of the first year, the savings and loan association was paying 28,000 bills a month for its customers. Today, it pays over 150,000 bills for holders of 25,000 accounts.

Debit cards that can be used instead of checks also are gaining popularity. They are not credit cards, although many of them are associated with the Visa credit-card system.

A customer presents a debit card for payment to a merchant who inserts the card in a validation machine and writes up the purchase. When the charge clears the cardholder's bank — usually within a few days — the money is deducted from his or her account.

Cynthia Chaddick of Visa said there are one million holders of Visa debit cards issued by about 140 banks. The cards have names like "Quick Cash" and "Money Card" and can be used at any of the three million outlets that accept Visa credit cards.

Debit cards have been viewed with some suspicion by consumers who feared instantaneous deductions would do away with what is known as the "float." No longer could you give someone a check, then go to the bank the next day to deposit money to cover the payment.

Tom Honey, Visa's senior vice president for membership development, said the Visa debit card does not eliminate the float. "In no case are transactions automatically deducted from one's account immediately," he said. "It's too expensive to do that."

Some local debit cards, including the one issued by Hollywood Federal, do provide instantaneous deductions. Vasquez said that in exchange for giving up the float, customers get a bonus of 2 percent of all debit card transactions added to their savings accounts.

Wegner said debit cards will become more attractive as banks increase checking fees. "When they begin to charge what it actually costs for checking, then the debit card is going to look a little better," Wegner said.

One way to keep checks and still cut costs is with a system known as truncation. Instead of returning cancelled checks, banks store them electronically. A customer who needs a payment record can get a photocopy.

Robert V. Saybeck, executive vice president of the Valley National Bank of Arizona, which is testing a non-return system, said savings to the bank average $1.75 to $2 per account per year. In the first year, Valley National stored 1 1/2 million checks. It got requests for copies of only 847. "Customers have developed such a love affair with checks that they could be considered a paper security blanket," Saybeck said. It is up to bankers, "to help them relax that grip."

Wegner said there is still some suspicion. "I think there's an age level that will always have some difficulty dealing with the machine. Young people, however, 'have grown up on learning machines in school' and are comfortable with them."

He said horror stories of massive computer errors reflect "isolated examples... blown out of proportion. 'You've got a paper trail created at every step which backs up an electronic system,' Wegner said. Fewer people have access to private files; fewer people have the sophisticated knowledge to tamper with accounts. "The reliability has gone up in direct proportion to the time we've had to perfect the machinery that's involved."

William D. Plechaty, senior vice president for personal banking services at Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. in Chicago, said: "If you read a history of money, it would start with barter and then it would follow through with the development of trinkets that had some value, and that led to currency and then to a check and then to a credit card... 'Today, we still have barter. We still have currency. We still have checks and we still have credit cards. Now we're going to have debit cards. We're probably continue to have all of them for a long time in the future...'"

Cashless? No, said Plechaty. "But I think we're headed for a less and less cash society."

Navy board discharges teenager

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) —

A Navy board ruled Monday that a Chicago teen-ager had engaged in lesbian activities aboard the USS Norton Sound and recommended that she be given a general discharge.

Alicia Harris, 18, was the third woman sailor accused of lesbianism aboard the missile test ship in violation of Navy regulations but was the first who did not get a favorable ruling in the case.

Ms. Harris denied she was a homosexual, but she said she had planned to leave the Navy regardless of the hearing's outcome.

"I'm not a homosexual. I'm straight," she told reporters. "I figure just had to start with someone," after the first two women received favorable rulings.

She added: "I regret that I ever joined (the Navy). I'm glad to be out."

However, American Civil Liberties Union attorney Susan McGreivy said Ms. Harris' case would be appealed to the secretary of the Navy.

The hearing by the Administrative Discharge Board was not a trial or court-martial, and the recommendation of the board was for a general discharge under honorable conditions — the most serious penalty the panel can recommend. It remains up to the ship's captain to decide whether to follow the recommendation.

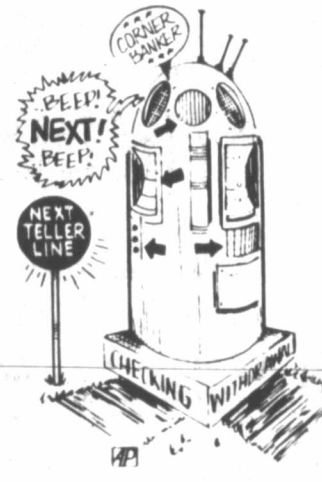

Ms. Harris said she believes the rumors about her sexual preferences started "because I had a real close friendship" with another woman sailor, Wendi Williams, 25, of the Bronx, N.Y. Ms. Williams' hearing was to begin next.

Desk and Derrick Clubs participate in seminar

Region V Association of Desk and Derrick Clubs was represented by 13 clubs at the "Town Hall" seminar hosted by the Amarillo Desk and Derrick Saturday in the Hilton Inn. Martha Sublett, region V director, conducted the workshop on issues to be voted on by the general assembly during the 1980 association convention Sept. 18-20 in New Orleans.

Association members assisting were Nola Havins, welcome address; Dena Gallacher, general arrangements chairman; Emma Sell, timekeeper; Claudia Deupree, secretary; Billie McKenzie, transportation and Ernestine Jarnigan, credentials.

Panel members were Kelly Spanabel of Odessa, ADDC region V rules committee representative; Nancy King of Artesia, N.M., 1981 candidate of association treasurer; Lilly Wright of Ponca City, Okla., 1976 ADDC president; Jo Johnson, Hobbs, N.M., parliamentarian; Carol Rollin of Roswell, N.M., ADDC legislative information committee chairman and Doris Thomas of Amarillo, speakers bureau member.

Delegates, alternate delegates and members from 13 of the 19 clubs in region V participated in the open forum discussion of the proposed changes to the bylaws and rules for the Association of Desk and Derrick. The proposed changes were presented by Kelly Spanabel. Martha Sublett updated association and regional directives. Esther McAddo issued an invitation to the Pampa Desk and Derrick Club's industry appreciation night banquet Aug. 26 at the Pampa Club, and an invitation to the region V get-together Sept. 19 at the Fairmont Hotel in New Orleans.

Fifty-eight members attended both sessions of the workshop.

Pear pie is delicious American dessert

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Although we have sung the praises of fresh Bartlett pears for some time, cookbook writers still neglect this American dessert. We have just checked recent editions of three comprehensive cookbooks published in the United States and nary a recipe for it did we find. Never mind. If you haven't a recipe of your own for pear pie, you may want to try the following one.

ORANGE PEAR PIE
Orange Pastry, recipe follows 1/4 cup granulated sugar 1/4 cup firmly packed light brown sugar 3 tablespoons flour 2 teaspoons finely shredded orange rind 4 cups sliced pared Bartlett pears 3 tablespoons orange juice 2 tablespoons butter

Prepare the Orange Pastry; divide it almost in half and refrigerate the smaller portion. Slightly flatten large portion; on a pastry cloth with a stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out to a 12-inch round; fit loosely into a 9-inch pie plate. Roll remaining pastry into a 12-inch round; with a pastry wheel cut in eight 1-inch wide strips.

Thoroughly stir together the granulated sugar, brown sugar, and flour; stir in the orange rind; add the pears and orange juice and fold in well; turn into the pastry-lined pie plate. Dot with the butter.

Place 4 of the pastry strips across filling; weave lattice crust with remain ing strips by folding back alternate strips as each cross strip is added. Fold edge of lower crust over ends of strips; seal and flute.

Bake on the rack below center in a preheated 425-degree oven until pears are tender and pastry is a golden color — 35 to 40 minutes. Good served slightly warm.

Orange Pastry: Stir together 2 cups fork-stirred flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 t easpoons sugar and 1 tablespoon finely shredded orange rind. Cut in 1/2 cup solid white shortening until particles are fine; cut in 1/4 cup solid white shortening until the size of large peas. With a fork, lightly toss mixture as you sprinkle it with enough ice-cold water (4 to 5 tablespoons) to be able to press it into a ball.

If you use a packaged pie crust mix instead of the home recipe for orange pa stry, you may want to stir 1 teaspoon sugar and 1/2 tablespoon finely shredded orange rind into the mix before adding water as the package directs.

Note: There is usually a small amount of dough left over making a lattice-top pie. To use extra Orange Pastry roll it into a square or rectangle, sprinkle it with a cinnamon-sugar mixture, fold it over so edges meet and press them together; with a pastry wheel cut into strips and bake to make snacktime dividends.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a very small chest. I don't want plastic surgery and bust expanders don't work. I've tried them. I read somewhere that if you rotated your arms around in circles, it will help your chest grow. This exercise didn't help much. Is there any advice you can give me?

DEAR READER — You might as well forget about all those claims of enlarging the breast itself. Almost all of them are totally false. In my opinion, almost without exception such advertised claims border on being fraudulent and are really not to help the public but to exploit the public for money.

Now, of course, you should see a physician to make sure that you don't have an underlying endocrine problem. If you happen to be low in certain hormones, a normal amount will help you develop a normal bosom. If you're in good hormone balance to begin with, additional hormones aren't going to help either and could be harmful.

Now about rotating your arms. You probably read that in relationship to exercises that enlarge the muscles over the front of the chest. It is true that the two major muscles (the pectoralis major and pectoralis minor) that lie behind the breast can be enlarged with exercise. The kinds of exercises that are required, however, are strength exercises, those that develop strong muscles.

This is why if you put the palms of both hands together in front of your face and push one against the other with strength that you can sometimes improve your bustline. That straining exercise strengthens the chest muscles behind the breast.

Weight lifting-type exercises or even the use of weight training machines that put a load on these muscles will work. The trouble with swinging your arms in a circle is that there's not enough resistance against the muscles and unless there is a resistance, the size of the muscles will not grow. The other thing you could do is gain body fat. Much of the breast tissue itself is fat but that's not necessarily physically appealing either. In addition, it's not very good from a health point of view.

So he paid $3,500 for a kit to make his own electric organ for his wife's 25th wedding anniversary.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend and I were all set to get married when I pulled overseas duty. (I'm a private in the U.S. Army.) We decided that since I would be gone for a year, we should postpone the marriage until I got back home.

Well, three weeks after I got here (please don't say where), I got a letter from my girlfriend back home (don't mention the town), telling me that she is in a family way!

She can't afford to come where I am to marry me, and I am not able to get back home, so we are in a fix!

I have heard that there is a way to get married by "proxy." I think it's by telephone with a clergyman on both ends. Anyway, I would sure appreciate it if you could tell me if it's possible, because I love this girl and she loves me, and we want our baby to be legitimate. Thanks for any help you can give me. Please don't tell me I should have thought of this before. Love is sometimes stronger than logic.

WORRIED SOLDIER

DEAR WORRIED: Only 12 states recognize proxy marriages. Find your chaplain on the double, soldier, and tell him what's on your mind. Your chances are 12 in 50. Here's hoping you're luckier now than you were then.

DEAR ABBY: The following is a special message recently published in the Wall Street Journal. Feel free to use it.

"The most creative job in the world involves: taste,

"Anyone who can handle all those has to be somebody special."

"She is. She's a homemaker."
RAYMOND D'ARGENIO, UNITED TECHNOLOGIES CORP., HARTFORD, CONN.

DEAR MR. D'ARGENIO: Beautiful. But homemakers are no longer exclusively female. Would you consider amending the last two sentences by changing the "she" to "person"?

DEAR ABBY: One of my fellow workers is planning an outdoor wedding and reception. Everything she has ordered for the occasion will be colorful and symbolic of this occasion, but she plans to carry a bridal bouquet of black roses.

Is this proper? After all, don't they symbolize death?

AT WIT'S END

By Erma Bombeck

The trouble with me is I've never had a lifetime goal. My goals last for about 15 minutes or whenever I get hungry...whichever comes first.

A few years ago, I promised myself that every September I would enroll in something to improve myself. Last year it was Bread Baking I and Slimnastics. (Which proved counter-productive.)

However, my interest in informal classes brought to my mailbox an avalanche of brochures and schedules guaranteed to "challenge my interests, sharpen my skills and made me a legend in my own time."

SEX AND NUTRITION: Is it true what they say about oysters? A frank look at male-female relationships with emphasis on energies. Bring a notebook, pen and floor cushion. Six weeks: $8.

LIGHTING A TORCH FOR BURNED-OUT PARENTS: Children driving you up the wall? Learn how to deal with feelings and pressures. Includes lectures, group interaction and stress release. Babysitting provided. Six Thursdays: $20.

VENTRILLOQUISM FOR THE BEGINNER: It's easier than you think. Learn the basics from handling your dummy to developing material, stage presence and projection. Dummy or hand puppet provided. Classes by arrangement: $20.

SUCCESS FOR THE NO-NONSENSE WOMAN: Do you panic in a social situation? Maybe it's because you are insecure about your speech, your dress, makeup, hairstyle, conversation, or personality. Learn how to handle important meetings, parties and interview. The first session will be on walking. Wear comfortable shoes. Mondays: $15.

FIGHT STRESS WITH BATON-TWIRLING: A basic course for beginners that teaches eye, hand and body coordination. Relaxation for the entire family. Tennis shoes, stretch shorts or leotard required. Hair should be tied back. Six sessions: $20.

READING THE FINE PRINT CAN SAVE YOU MONEY: A common-sense approach to stocks, bonds and annuities. Instructor offers imaginative tax shelters. Your outdated insurance program reviewed without charge. Fee: $300.

GOURMET COOKING AU NATUREL: Discover an exciting world of foods, herbs and spices. Learn what foods have medicinal value (see Sex and Nutrition). At the end of each class, enjoy your creation. Wear loose-fitting clothes. Fee $30.

I don't know. After looking through a couple of hundred of these courses, maybe I'll go back to my original goals: World peace and five pounds lighter by Christmas.

Woman seeks to become mine foreman

HARROGATE, Tenn. (AP) — While millions of women are carving out new careers for themselves, Carol Daniels is digging for one.

Ms. Daniels, 26, divorced and the mother of two small children, is the only woman enrolled in an unusual four-year degree program in mining and land reclamation offered by Lincoln Memorial University in Harrogate.

Upon graduation in a year or two, she plans to become, as she puts it, "coal mining's first woman foreman."

"As an Appalachian woman living in the heart of Appalachia where woman's work remains synonymous with home-making and child-bearing, I suppose I'm aiming high," she admits.

"But Daddy has been a foreman in the mines for more than 30 years. I'm from three generations of coal miners and the only other member of my immediate family to have worked in the mines. So carrying on the family heritage is important to me, even though I'm not considered the right sex for it."

With her goal more readily reachable through the unique program at LMU, Ms. Daniels, a full-time student there since January, has plunged into a maze of tough, technical courses that include geology, drafting, mine engineering and a battery of basic sciences.

Ms. Daniels is hurdling the problem with help from her father, Ellwood Robbins, a coal mine foreman at Lejon Corp. in Middlesboro, Ky., and from LMU instructor George Mears.

"I finally got the hang of studying again and am pulling a solid B average. But," she adds, "I still like subjects that have immediate practical application: mining codes, health and safety regulation and those dealing with disasters, especially cave-ins."

The 5-foot-2, athletically inclined woman could receive her Bachelor of Mining degree as early as next year, thanks to a number of credit hours LMU is awarding her for 14 months of practical experience as a coal miner. According to LMU president Dr. Frank Welch, she already has been awarded 18 credits and could, pending further action by the university's Board of Academic Review, receive as many as 40 credits.

Recounting her coal mining days, Ms. Daniels explains that "today there are about 2,000 women coal miners in the United States; but that's only 1 percent of the total mining work force. It's the nature of the job, I suppose."

Even today, she points out, most women coal miners work above ground as surface miners. That's why the coal miner-

Exhibit features variety of art forms

LUBBOCK — "The many Expressions of Art" opened at The Museum of Texas Tech University Sunday to celebrate the opening of a new permanent gallery for art.

Construction of the gallery was made possible by the West Texas Museum Association and will, in the future, be in constant use as an art gallery.

The new exhibit features selections from museum collections in anthropology, historical textiles and costumes, art and historical furnishing. The something-for-everybody exhibit is arranged to show the many forms artistic expression can use.

Highlighted will be, for instance, a century of quilt making; 45 purses created with needlework, mesh and beads; basketry representing primitive work of Eskimo, Canadian and western United States Indian artisans; pottery of this century and last, made by Indians of the southwest; Chinese ivories; Navajo rugs; two elegant pieces of 19th century furniture; and art to hand — a block print on satin by Sister M. Remy Revor and a tapestry, "Summer's Children," by Jean Goodman Ames.

Cross," "New York Beauty," "Wreath of Roses," "The Antique Rose" and "Wheel of Fortune." One coverlet was made in 1828. A "Crosswise in Ireland" coverlet, made about 1850, is of hand-loomed cotton. Another is a combination of linen and wool, known as linsey-woolsey.

Furniture on display include a buffet in Renaissance Revival style carved oak and a meridiennne, or couch, of carved walnut. Both are 19th century, the buffet from Germany and the lounge American.

Indians whose work is represented in the basket collection include the Seminole, Pomo, Hupa, Salish, Ute, San Carlos or White Mountain Apache, Hopi, Papago, Navajo and the Mescalero Apache. Most of the pottery was created in this century in New Mexico, although the Hopi Pueblo in Arizona also is represented.

Sculpture acquired

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Extended Forms," a sculpture by contemporary Chicago artist Richard Hunt, has been acquired by the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

The museum says the work "displays the artist's continuing fascination with linear-spatial configurations."

turned-student recalls with particular pride how she overcame a host of hardships beginning in October 1978, when she was hired by the Bell County Coal Company in Middlesboro, Ky., her hometown, as a "deep miner."

The job involved working 200 feet below the earth and sharing every day all of the cave-in risks as well as back-breaking work of her male co-workers.

"Because I worked in a non-union mine, I wasn't protected like a woman in a union mine would be. Many times I got the worst jobs to see how much I could take; like spending the entire day on my hands and knees shoveling mud in a 3-foot-high shaft."

She also worked a roof drill and operated machinery usually handled by men. "And always you were being tested, to see if you could survive in what traditionally has been a man's world."

Ms. Daniels' initiation "rites" proof that a mining rookie is worthy of the job — consisted of being sent down a mine shaft in a bucket used to sift coal immersed in deep water, then bobbed up and down "like an apple until I was soaking wet."

Although ultimately accepted by her male peers as "one of the gang" and even praised for her mining skills, Ms. Daniels Refugees aided by U.N.

NEW YORK (AP) — To escape the fighting between rival political factions in the central African country of Chad, an estimated 100,000 people have fled to the neighboring country of Cameroon. Eighty percent of them were women and children under 15.

To meet the emergency needs of these refugees, the U.N. Children's Fund and the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees have allocated a total of $700,000 for the purchase of tents, blankets, medicines and foods.

Many of the refugee children suffer from malaria, tuberculosis, dysentery and measles. Some were wounded during the fighting in the Chadian capital of N'djamena.

Gilbert banking on defensive secondary

Before Pampa's season opener with Hereford, head coach Larry Gilbert will be striving to make the Harvesters' defensive secondary as stable as possible.

"The secondary is really going to have to jell for us," Gilbert said as the Harvesters enter the first week of football practice. "I really believe the secondary will be a key to how successful our entire defense will be this season."

With Bobby Dorsey the only returning starter in the secondary, the new coach has reason to be concerned.

Other top prospects joining Dorsey are Andy Richardson, Clay Coffee, Leroy Kuhn, John Kadingo, Steve McDougall, Sam Edwards and Rick Hagerman.

"I'm expecting Richardson to start at weak safety and I need a good year out of him," Gilbert said. "These other guys are going to be a factor for us also."

Versatile Tam Bailey, who saw starting action at center-linebacker in addition to kicking extra points and field goals, is recovering from a hernia operation and will be out several weeks.

"Tam's doctor says he is recovering real good," said Gilbert. "I'm just hoping he can come back as quick as possible. We're going to need his help."

Billy Ward appears to have Bailey's center position nailed down while Rodney Lefel, Gwinn Greenwood, Rod Walker, Marc Royce and Kelly Leach are all after the linebacker spots. Lefel has the inside track on one of the linebacking positions, left vacant by the graduated Mark Jennings.

"Rodney has some big shoes to fill," Gilbert said. Jennings was a first-team all-district defensive pick last season.

Ward, Harold Landers, J.B. Taylor, Ted Hutto, Ruben Ambrez, Jerry Cantrell and Joe Ryzman are the leading candidates for down linemen positions.

"Our down linemen are really going to be tested this season," Gilbert said. "I'm really going to be looking for some good play from these guys."

Pampa's running game will be dependent upon Bobby Dorsey, Leroy Kuhn, Mark Kotara, James Borchardt, Clifford Anderson and John Kadingo.

"I feel like we've got some quality backs, but they're going to have to have a great year for us to be successful," said Gilbert.

Gilbert said it was much too early to tell how the 1980 Harvesters would stack up against last season's 6-4 club.

"I can see some positive signs, but we'll just have to wait and see how things go further on down the line," Gilbert said.

Pampa hosts Lubbock Estacado in a scrimmage at 4:30 p.m. at 29. Estacado is ranked No. 1 in Class 4A pre-season polls.

Pampa's Sept. 5 opener is at Hereford. The Harvesters open home the following week against Dumas.

It's volleyball tonight

Pampa meeting Hereford there

Pampa gets the volleyball season underway tonight against Hereford, a characteristically weak opponent for the Lady Harvesters.

However, Hereford's days as a pushover may have come to an end.

"Hereford has usually been pretty easy for us, but their height could make it difficult for us to win," Pampa coach Lynn Wolfe said. "Their coach (Helen Reed) seems pretty optimistic about her team this year." Reed is a Pampa native.

Both teams have had only one week of volleyball practice since the University Interscholastic League moved the season up two weeks to avoid a conflict with Thanksgiving and basketball.

Pampa, which lost the District 3-5A title to Amarillo High last year in an extra-game playoff, has four regulars back this season.

Jeanette Britt, a second-team all-district pick last season, and Deanna Porter are expected to carry a good part of the load.

"I'm probably be taking a look at a lot of girls tonight and try to play different people in different positions to see where they play best," Wolfe said.

Hereford, third a year ago in District 4-5A, has one of its tallest teams ever. Debbie Simons, at 5-9, and Ginny Coronado and Jolynn O'Leary, both at 5-8, give the Whitefaces plenty of height.

Wolfe won't predict the type of season the Lady Harvesters are going to have since they haven't played together before as a team.

"This year we've been having trouble on our serve receptions and that was our strength last season," Wolfe said. "But I don't think I've ever had a larger or more enthusiastic group."

Tonight's action at Hereford begins with the junior varsity match at 6:30 p.m.

Brett extends hitting streak

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — George Brett isn't answering the phone in his hotel room any more.

"I had calls today from South Carolina, South Dakota, California, you name it," the hot-hitting Kansas City third baseman said.

"They all say the same thing. Do I have time to talk with them a few minutes for a story? I told them, 'No. I don't. Come to the park and I'll talk to you.' To be honest, I've been upset a few times because I haven't been able to have any privacy in the locker room before or after the game."

Kansas City manager Jim Frey says the swarm of writers who descend upon Brett —like the dozen or more who besieged him after the Royals' 6-3 victory over Texas Monday night — doesn't surprise him a bit.

"Who else would you talk with, when you've got a man hitting over .400 and getting two or three hits every night? He's having a tremendous year," Frey said.

Brett singled his first three times up and scored each time to key the Royals' sixth straight victory and pad their lead in the American League West to 14 1/2 games.

Brett's 3-for-5 night extended his club record hitting streak to 30 games, one short of Ken Landreaux's streak for Minnesota earlier in the season. It also pushed his batting average to .404. Over the past 30 games, Brett is hitting .467 with 57 hits, 29 runs and 42 runs batted in.

The last time a major leaguer averaged .400 or more in a season was 1941.

"My teammates are pulling for me to keep getting hits, and I'm busting my rear to get every hit I can. But it's not because of the streak or the average. There's enough pressure without me putting added pressure on myself," Brett said.

"I'm doing everything I can because I want Kansas City to have the best record in baseball. That's the incentive I have. I want to win the World Series and walk down the street wearing a big diamond ring with green emeralds in it," Brett said.

ACU gridder dies

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Preliminary autopsy reports revealed an Abilene Christian University football player's death was the result of factors caused by a sickle cell anemia trait, a college spokesman said.

The linebacker died from strangling on vomit, and doctors are running further tests to determine why the sickle cell trait would have caused the 19-year-old's death, the spokesman added.

Gregg Pratt, of Miami Beach, Fla., was pronounced dead at 2:10 a.m. Monday at an Abilene hospital.

Pratt complained of leg cramps after undergoing a physical and running a mile with the rest of the team Sunday. He finished the run in the middle of the pack, with a time of about 6:30, said head football coach Ted Sitton.

When an ice pack failed to ease the pain, Pratt was taken to the emergency room, where he was given muscle relaxant pills and intravenous medication for dehydration, said team trainer Wes Speights.

Pratt was returned to his dormitory room about 9 p.m., but complained of cramps again about 11 p.m., said his roommate, Lyle Leong.

Leong said Pratt took two more pills, but when he began complaining of stomach pain, Speights was called to take him back to the hospital. He lost consciousness en route, and efforts to revive him failed.

The 5-foot-9, 197-pound linebacker was all-state during his two years at Taft Junior College in Taft, Calif.

Major League baseball roundup

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Today's American League headlines again deal with the New York-Baltimore East Division pennant chase and the assault of Kansas City's sizzling George Brett on the 400 mark. But something new has been added — the Milwaukee Brewers.

While the Baltimore Orioles edged New York 6-5 and pulled within 2½ games of the Yankees in the AL East, and while Brett went 3-for-5 in Kansas City's 6-3 triumph over the Texas Rangers, boosting his average to .404 and giving him a 30-game hitting streak, the Brewers quietly sneaked to within 6½ games of the top with a noisy 12-5 rout of the Detroit Tigers.

"I think it has been on the verge of happening for a long time and now it is kind of snowballing. The momentum is there. The more it rolls, the more it's going to gather," said Gorman Thomas, who crashed a grand-slam homer to help the Brewers to their seventh consecutive victory.

Elsewhere, the Minnesota Twins downed the California Angels 8-3 while the Cleveland Indians took the opener of a two-night doubleheader from the Chicago White Sox 4-2 but dropped the nightcap 7-2. Boston, Oakland, Seattle and Toronto were not scheduled.

In the only National League contest, the St. Louis Cardinals mauled the Cincinnati Reds 10-1.

Milwaukee's Ben Oglivie hit a bases-empty homer, his 30th, one pitch after Thomas' sixth-inning grand slam. That put the game out of reach after Milwaukee converted three Detroit errors into a five-run fourth inning.

"Six-and-a-half out with a month-and-a-half to play — that's plenty of time. We're right back in it," said Brewers Manager George Bamberger. "All year long we have not had a big winning streak. It looks like maybe we've got something going now."

Royals 6, Rangers 3
Brett singled his first three times up, running his string to seven straight hits over two days as he became the 28th player in major league history to hit safely in 30 consecutive games.

"I'm not worried about the hitting streak," he said. "There's enough pressure just in the pennant race without putting extra pressure on myself."

Over his 30-game streak, Brett has 57 hits in 122 at-bats for a .467 average with six homers and 42 RBI.

"I'm busting my rear to get every hit I can, but not because of the streak," he said. "I want Kansas City to have the best record in baseball and win the World Series and be able to walk down the street wearing a big diamond ring with green emeralds in it."

Meanwhile, Willie Aikens drove in four runs with a two-run homer in the third inning and a two-run single in the fourth while Rich Gale won his 10th game in a row with help from Jeff Twitty and Dan Quisenberry, who picked up his 28th save.

Al Bumbry, Rich Dauer and Mark Belanger drove in two runs apiece and the Orioles held off an eighth-inning rally to tighten the race in the East Division. The victory enabled the defending AL champs to take the five-game series 3-2 and register their sixth victory in eight games against the Yankees in the last 11 days.

Oscar Gamble's homer gave the Yankees a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning but Baltimore came right back and took a 3-2 lead in the bottom of the fourth on Doug DeCinces' double, a walk, Belanger's RBI-single, Bumbry's double and Dauer's sacrifice fly. The Orioles added three more in the fifth on Belanger's double, Bumbry's single and Dauer's infield out.

"I felt that if we came out of this stretch — playing in New York, then in Kansas City and then coming home against New York — four, five or six games out, we'd have a shot said Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver. "We're 2½ out, but I'd rather be zero."

The crowd of 51,528 pushed the total for the five games to 253,636, the largest single-series attendance ever recorded for in the major leagues.

Twins 8, Angels 3
Jose Morales had three hits and John Castino and Bombo Rivera homered to lead Minnesota's 15-hit attack. That made it easy for Fernando Arroyo, who scattered eight hits. Castino hit a two-run homer off Don Aase in the seventh inning and Rivera connected off Dave Lemanczyk in the eighth.

Indians 4-2, White Sox 2-7
Kevin Bell ripped a three-run homer during a six-run fourth inning that powered Chicago in the nightcap behind Steve Trout's nine-hit pitching. In the opener, Cleveland's Len Barker yielded just three hits and struck out 12, a career high, while Toby Harrah homered for the Indians.

No stars, but Sooners still team to beat

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Oklahoma, one of only two schools to notch 100 victories in the 1970s, is strapped with what seems, for the Sooners, a glaring weakness entering the 1980s.

For the first time since Greg Pruitt's junior year in 1971, Oklahoma has no all-America type running back to spark its wishbone. But despite the graduation loss of 1978 Heisman winner Billy Sims and All-America linebacker George Cumby, nobody in the midlands is feeling sorry for Barry Switzer's boys.

"Nothing's changed in the last 35 years," Kansas Coach Don Fambrough says. "It's still Oklahoma and Nebraska."

Oklahoma, with 14 starters back from last year's 11-1 campaign, was a solid choice of writers in a preseason poll to retain its Big Eight title. Nebraska returning 10 starters from a 10-2 season, finished a close second in the poll. Missouri, 1979's biggest disappointment, was rated a solid third, followed in order by Oklahoma State, Iowa State, Kansas State, Kansas and Colorado.

"I think every coach uses them as the standard," Fambrough said. "Nothing's changed."

"I can't speak for Nebraska, but Oklahoma isn't as good as it's been in the past," Switzer said. "I don't think we'll be as powerful a football team. The defensive strength of our team won't allow it."

"I've had more talented teams, but it's relative to who you play," added Switzer, whose seven-year record at Oklahoma is 73-7-2. "I said the '79 team wasn't as good as '78 and it wasn't. But the '79 team was 11-1 and won the Orange Bowl and won the Big Eight title."

Although they've lost Sims, perhaps the greatest runner in Oklahoma's illustrious gridiron history, the Sooners return an experienced, proven quarterback in senior

J.C. Watts along with running backs David Overstreet and Stanley Wilson.

Jarvis Redwine tops a swarm of talented Nebraska running backs.

"Our running back situation is probably as good as any year I can remember, and that goes back 18 years," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said.

Missouri finished 7-5 last year, including a 24-14 triumph over South Carolina in the Hall of Fame Bowl, and welcomes back 15 starters. The Tigers' hopes are bolstered this year by the presence of senior quarterback Phil Bradley, who will likely become the Big Eight's all-time offensive leader this season.

Bradley also could become the first player in history to lead the league in total offense three years in a row.

"When he's on," Switzer said of Bradley, "they can beat anybody."

The return to his sophomore form of running back James Wilder could be critical to Missouri's success. Wilder gained 645 yards last year in nine games and Tiger Coach Warren Powers noted, "You don't realize how much you miss him until he's out for a while."

A big surprise — for the second year in a row — could be Oklahoma State. The Cowboys launched Jimmy Johnson's head coaching career with a 7-4 record, and now that they're off probation and returning 16 starters the Pokes might be ready to challenge for the top spot.

If they stay healthy, the Cowboys might have the toughest defense in the Big Eight. Nine starters are back on defense, including all-star types in tackle Curtis Boone, linebacker Ricky Young, and safety Gregory Johnson.

"If we can keep our top players on the field, we'll be a factor in the Big Eight," predicts Johnson, who won Big Eight Coach of the Year laurels in '79. However, the Pokes will be tested early with a non-conference schedule that includes Washington, Arkansas and San Diego State.

Fambrough's Jayhawks are coming off what might be one of the finest recruiting years in Kansas history. But the folksy, philosophical head coach is badly in need of a quarterback since last year's starter, Kevin Clinton, has decided to forego football and concentrate on a baseball career.

"Last year I kept bragging about his strong arm, so he decides to become a pitcher," said Fambrough with a wry smile. The top candidates are junior Steve Smith, senior Bill Lillis and freshman Frank Seurer, a prep star from southern California.

Befitting Colorado's lowly position in the preseason poll was this comment from head coach Chuck Fairbanks: "We'll be more dependent on young players than a good major college football team should be. It will probably be a very difficult year for us."

Lack of experience also is a thorn in the side of Donnie Duncan, in charge of the Iowa State program for the second year.

"We're young, but we're not green," said Duncan. Injuries last year wiped out any hope the Cyclones had of continuing the momentum built up by the now-departed Earle Bruce. But Duncan has ample talent in quarterback John Quinn, tailback Rocky Gillis and defensive tackle Shamus McDonough, who were all injured last year.

"The difference between us and teams like Nebraska and Oklahoma," said Kansas State Coach Jim Dickey, "is that we have to put some players on the field before they are ready."

First woman honored

Lopez-Melton breaks golf barrier

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The roster of the All-American Collegiate Golf Foundation's Hall of Fame reads like a Who's Who of the sport.

Among the players honored have been Arnold Palmer, Hale Irwin, Johnny Miller, Billy Casper, Deane Beaman, Tom Watson, Andy North, Ken Venturi, Lanny Watkins and John Mahaffey.

All that was missing was a woman, but now you can add a lady to the list. Nancy Lopez-Melton was inducted last week, the first female named to the college golf shrine which annually honors the nation's top collegiate players, current and past.

Melton played the game at Tulsa University and golf's gain was engineering's loss. "I was spending so much time playing golf that I realized I couldn't do that and keep up with my studies, too," she said. "So, I decided to go on the tour."

Many fans view the pro golf tour — both men's and women's — as a glamorous way of life but Melton knew better. Nancy had finished tied for second as an amateur in the 1975 U.S. Open and second again in the 1977 Open, her first pro tournament. That gave her a taste of tour life and she wasn't so sure it was for her.

"I grew up seeing it in the Open," she said. "It's a lot of travel and hard work. I didn't know if I wanted that type of responsibility."

When she decided to try the tour, Melton burst on the scene like no rookie ever has in her sport, or perhaps in any other sport for that matter. She won nine major tournaments in 1978, her first year, and five of them came in a row, a dazzling debut that earned her rookie of the year and player of the year honors — the first time a golfer has swept those two awards.

She was Nicklaus, Palmer, Trevino and Watson all rolled into one lovely package. Women's golf had never seen anything like her. And, at age 21, it was the best of times and it was the worst of times for Melton.

"It was difficult," she said. "I had to grow up quickly to cope with it. I didn't get to enjoy that time. All I did for those five weeks was play, practice and do interviews. I never had time to say, 'Hey, look what I've done!'"

Two weeks after the streak ended, Melton decided she owed herself a vacation. "I hadn't stopped before because, well, you want to see if you can keep on winning," she said. "But I was so tired, my game had gone downhill, I couldn't concentrate mentally and physically. I just took off."

The break refreshed her and Nancy came back for four more tour victories before the season ended and eight more in 1979. There have been two victories this season, giving her 19 for her career.

Melton's impact on the women's tour won widespread attention for the LPGA. People began discovering that professional golf wasn't played only by men. Still, however, Nancy says comparing the two isn't entirely fair.

The gap in golf includes money, too. There's considerably more cash on the line in the men's tour.

Cowboys roasted

HOUSTON (AP) — It didn't take Houston Oilers center Carl Mauck long to begin his annual roasting of the Dallas Cowboys.

"Well, we're playing the Cowgirls this week," Mauck said moments after Sunday's 20-17 victory over New Orleans. "I was a little rankled about a comment Reverend (Tom) Landry made when he said the Rams were the big preseason test for the Cowboys."

"I guess he feels like their preseason is over now that they've beaten the Rams. Well, I'll tell you, I'm real serious about this game this week."

Three seasons ago, when the Oilers defeated the Cowboys in Houston, Mauck invited all Cowboy fans living in Houston to move to Dallas.

While Mauck moved into action against the Cowboys, Oilers wide receiver Ken Burrough remained in Houston with a knee injury that will keep him out of Saturday's game.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

August 19, 1980

New, pleasurable interests will be found this coming year to help provide you with much enjoyment and also expand your circle of friends. They could be in sports, artistic or creative realms.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Look for social involvements today where you'll have the opportunities to communicate with persons who stimulate your imagination. Good ideas can result. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't leave any loose threads hanging today in dealings which mean something to you, either materially or financially. Take time to complete things properly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're especially adroit today in situations where you have to deal with a group or clique. What you have to say will be heeded and acted upon.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In matters relating to your career or finances, things could go better than expected today. Some factors you're not aware of will grease the wheels.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your powers of observation are very sharp today and you'll learn much by closely watching others. Later, you'll draw upon this knowledge.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your intuition today will serve to back up your common sense and logic. When you apply both your chances for success are greatly increased.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Solutions can be found to a situation which has recently had you stymied. Explore all the alternatives, regardless of how outlandish they may seem.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This should turn out to be a successful day in more than one area. If you have two important projects, work on them simultaneously.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Base your actions today on things which you know from personal experience will work. By repeating a proven formula, you can duplicate success.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You have the knack today of being able to piece together bits of information from various sources and to transform them into something personally profitable.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Because you place the needs of others above your own concerns today your behavior will do much to strengthen bonds in relationships you deem important.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your particular talents or expertise will bring a better price than usual in the marketplace today. Don't sell short your skills.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A spokesman for one of the nation's most enduring screen stars says "there's no cause for alarm" about the condition of James Stewart, who is being treated in the coronary care unit of St. John's Hospital here.

The 72-year-old actor was admitted to the hospital last week after suffering an irregular pulse. He was resting comfortably Monday.

John Strauss, a spokesman for the actor, said Stewart had not suffered a heart attack and appeared to be "in great shape" when he saw him last week. A hospital spokesman said there was no word on when the actor would be released.

Stewart, who appeared in such films as "Rear Window" and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," won an Academy Award for "The Philadelphia Story" in 1940.

NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes you can get a scoop on someone's personality by knowing his favorite ice cream.

For instance, the favorite flavor of Felix Rohatyn, the financial whiz of Municipal Assistance Corp., the overseer of New York City's finances, is Baskin-Robbins' "Rocky Road."

Mayor Ed Koch, a survivor of many political battles, prefers burnt almond.

THE FROG

Then there's Kermit the Frog. When asked to name his favorite, the Muppet responded: "Green fly. Especially the kind with real green fly particles, not synthetics."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hong Kong moviemaker Raymond Chow, credited with introducing the public to the genre of martial arts films, has been given the "International Showman of the Year" award by the National Association of Theater Owners.

Chow, president of Golden Harvest Productions, is best known for the movie "Enter the Dragon," starring Bruce Lee, and completed a series of martial arts films with Lee and Jackie Chan.

"Enter the Dragon" grossed $100 million worldwide. The award will be presented at the association's annual convention in New Orleans on Oct. 22. The association represents 8,000 movie theatres in the U.S.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — After two years as a weekly newspaper publisher, Jack Ford has joined a group vying a downtown San Diego building for $300,000.

JACK FORD

The two-story building will be renovated in a tourist-oriented Gaslamp District. Ford's partners include George J. Gorton, with whom he owned the Del Mar News Press before selling it recently for an undisclosed sum.

NEW YORK (AP) — Gilda Radner, who created a series of wacky comedy characters on NBC-TV's "Saturday Night Live," has taken a role in a play bound for Broadway.

Miss Radner begins rehearsals Friday on "Lunch Hour," a new comedy by Jean Kerr that will be directed by Mike Nichols. Sam Waterston will star as a famous marriage counselor whose own marriage is disrupted by Miss Radner. It will try out in Delaware and Washington before beginning previews here Nov. 4.

"Mike Nichols told me they were looking for a Gilda Radner type to play the part," said the young comedian, who appeared last year in a Broadway revue centered on her television characters, including Emily Litella and Lisa Looper.

AUSTIN (AP) — One-stop centers for coordinating aid to Hurricane Allen victims will open this week in Port Isabel, Brownsville and Edinburg. Gov. Bill Clements' office reported Monday.

The Edinburg and Port Isabel centers were scheduled to open at 10 a.m. today. The Brownsville office is set to open Thursday at 10 a.m.

Officials from state and federal agencies will be on hand to process applications for any form of available assistance.

Income tax forms, flood insurance policies, car titles and other materials which could help prove losses should be brought to the centers.

Assistance available includes disaster unemployment compensation, loans for farmers, small business loans, food, and temporary housing.

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Police Association contends that Police Chief Glenn King violates the civil rights of his officers with an order restricting their access to an attorney after a shooting.

The association filed a federal court suit Monday against both King and the City of Dallas in response to an order by the chief that allows only "authorized" persons to talk to an officer involved in a shooting until after he is questioned by investigators.

THE FIRST BABY PANDA BORN IN CAPTIVITY outside of China is dead due to an apparently tragic accident. Officials at the Mexico City Zoo believe the mother, Ying Ying, rolled on the tiny eight-day-old cub in her sleep sometime Monday night.

Mother smothers first Panda born in captivity in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The first giant panda born in captivity outside China was apparently smothered by its mother eight days after its birth, but the director of Mexico City's Chapultepec Zoo hopes the parents will try again next year.

Zoo director John Schoch said keepers discovered early Monday that the tiny cub had been dead for several hours. He said it was believed Ying Ying, the mother, accidentally suffocated it.

"It may have been because this was Ying Ying's first baby and she didn't know what to do," he told a news conference. He said one of the three panda keepers noticed the mother was holding the cub in an awkward position and licking the body. The keeper tried to revive the baby, but it apparently had been dead for several hours, the director said.

The cub weighed three ounces and was three inches long when it was born Aug. 10, but Schoch said these dimensions tripled during its brief life. The zoo's veterinarians were afraid to examine it while it was alive, fearing the mother might harm it, so its sex had not been determined. But an autopsy was to be performed today to establish the sex and the cause of death.

The parents were separated the day before Ying Ying gave birth, and the zoo had not planned to reunite the family for several months to protect the baby. But after the cub was found dead, Pe Pe was allowed to reunite with his mate. Schoch said he hoped Ying Ying and Pe Pe would mate again next spring.

Mexico City's pandas were gifts from the Chinese government to then-President Luis Echeverria during a trip to Peking in 1975. The rare animals, who when mature stand about 5 feet in height and weigh 250 to 300 pounds, come from the bamboo forests in the higher altitudes of central China and Tibet. There are believed to be about 300 in the wild, and about 40 are in captivity, including 11 outside China.

Zoos in Washington, D.C., London and Tokyo have failed to mate the animals, and the surgeon of the Chapultepec Zoo, Dr. Juan Tellez Giron, claimed Ying Ying's baby was the first to be born in a zoo as a result of natural conception in captivity. Officials of the Peking Zoo dispute this, however.

Tellez Giron said one panda cub was born in a Chinese zoo in 1963, but the mother was believed pregnant when captured. He said another panda was artificially inseminated in China in 1978 and gave birth to two cubs, one of which died. But the Peking Zoo says 10 cubs conceived naturally were born there, seven are still alive, two were born in the zoo as a result of artificial insemination, and one of them is alive.
