Texas Governor
BILL CLEMENTS

Clements, Connally set pace for Reagan rally

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

Texas Governor Bill Clements and former Governor John Connally are expected to arrive at Perry-Lefors Airport at 4:30 p.m. today for a Reagan-Bush Roundup barbeque and rally scheduled at 7 p.m. in M. K. Brown Auditorium.

The "Reagan-Bush Roundup," a 23-city tour through the state of Texas, is the first major campaign effort for Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan and vice-presidential candidate George Bush since their nomination in the Detroit convention in July.

Clements and Connally are conducting the series of rallies in order to stimulate voter registration, get-out-to-vote efforts, volunteer recruitment and leadership identification, campaign officials said.

"It is part of an extensive effort to get out the vote being conducted by the Texas Victory Committee on behalf of the Reagan-Bush ticket," State Chairman John B. Armstrong said in an Associated Press interview.

The local activities will include a reception for the visiting governors and a barbeque and political rally.

Heading the "roundup" from the local angle will be Jim Campbell and Bobbie Nesbit.

A local rancher, Campbell said he has worked as a volunteer in politics since the early '60s. During this time, he said, he has been the campaign coordinator for Barry Goldwater when he ran for president in 1964, was the campaign manager for Senator Bob Price when he ran for Congress and most recently, was state campaign director for John Connally during his unsuccessful bid for the Republican presidential nomination.

An active volunteer in Reagan's primary campaign, Mrs. Nesbit has been district committeewoman for the 31st senatorial district. The Panhandle and South Plains region of the Reagan-Bush campaign will be headed by Amarillo Mayor Jerry Hodge, according to Ernest Angelo Jr., deputy chairman.

Assisting Mayor Hodge as vice-chairman will be State Representative Bob Close of Perryton and John Ryan of Lubbock. Jim Brandon, an Amarillo businessman, will serve as a member of the statewide Reagan-Bush steering committee.

Hodge previously served for two terms on the Amarillo City Council. He currently serves as chairman of the Mayors Advisory Committee to Governor Clements. A pharmacist, he is past president of the Texas Municipal League and the Panhandle Pharmaceutical Association.

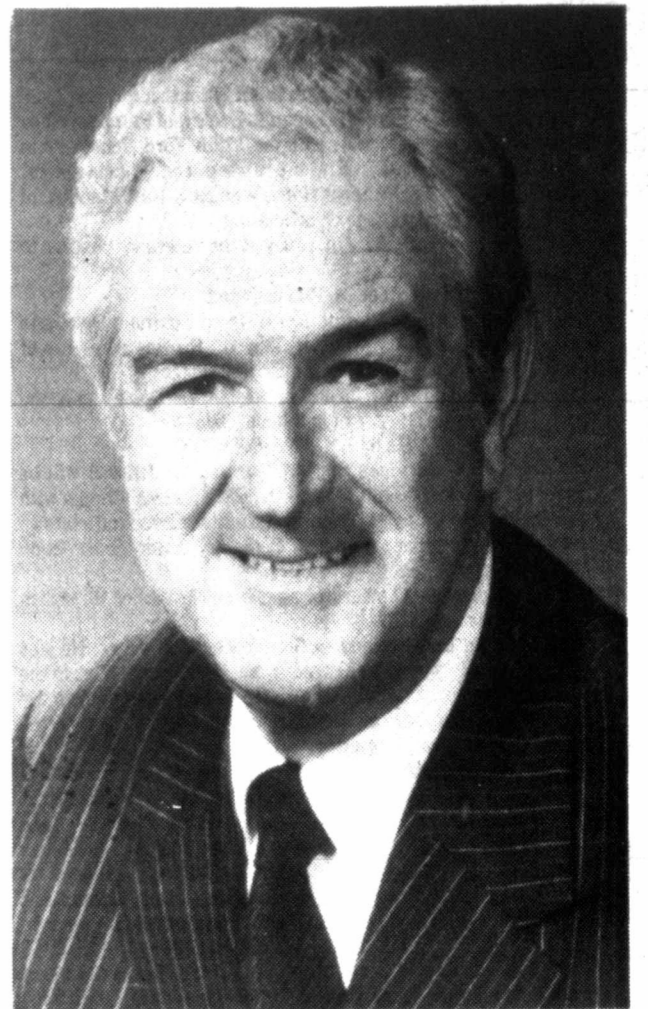

Representative Close is an attorney and is currently serving as a Republican representative in the state legislature.

Ryan served as a delegate to the Republican National conventions of 1976 and 1980. A former resident of California, he was active in the 1966 and 1970 gubernatorial campaigns of Governor Reagan. He is a graduate of UCLA and works in product management and data systems.

Brandon, a certified public accountant, attorney and businessman, is currently a member of the state Republican Executive Committee. He has served in leadership positions in the Reagan for President effort in 1976 and 1980.

State chairman Armstrong is also expected to be present at tonight's "Reagan-Bush roundup" activities.

Armstrong is managing partner of the John B. Armstrong Ranch, Kingsville; administrative supervising consultant to the Big B Ranch, Belle Glade, Fla.; and executive vice president of the King Ranch Inc., Kingsville. He is a director of National Finance Credit Corporation and Texas Livestock Marketing Association.

Oil spokesman blasts politicians, news media

By LYNN HUNTER
Managing Editor

Florine Messall, a Phillips Petroleum spokesman, blasted politicians and news media as the source of the public's misunderstanding of the oil and gas industry and traced the history of the oil industry during Tuesday night's Industry Appreciation Banquet, conducted by the Desk and Derrick Club of Pampa at the Pampa Club.

"The oil and gas industry has been singled out for punishment by government, activists and the media," Mrs. Messall said.

"From 1960-80, we have seen an eccentric attempt to change the basic American philosophy from a free enterprise economy to one of Socialistic dominance. Politicians have attempted to take over the lives of the American public — aided and abetted by the media," she said.

"More and more programs which deliver more and more services to the American public and outrageous federal spending have become a way of life," she said. "The media under the guise of the first amendment to the Constitution have become the fourth branch of our government."

"Low productivity and a lethargic society are the root of inflation, and the oil and gas industry has become the target of 'lost-purpose' actions," she said.

Tracing the history of the industry, she said the first energy crisis occurred in the 1840's when whale oil, used for heating and lighting, became scarce because of an extreme short supply of whales.

"The price of whale oil soared from 43 cents a gallon to $2.55 a gallon, but private enterprise was already at work," she said, developing alternative fuels of turpentine, coal oil and kerosene.

She said in 1859, Edwin Drake drilled the first oil well in Titusville, and the oil industry got its birth.

"At the turn of the century, when the automobile entered the scene and demand for gasoline was high, the United States began importing large quantities of oil from Russia," she said.

Under the "risk and reward system," a rash of exploratory drilling began.

By the end of World War I, however, a worldwide shortage of petroleum existed.

"The petroleum industry was free of controls, and government strengthened the depletion allowance, and oil became plentiful once again," she said.

"But our philosophy has been changing," she said.

"In 1954, price controls were imposed on natural gas producers. This action brought the search for natural gas practically to a standstill, but the worst was yet to come," she said.

"Politicians and newscasters alike began an undeclared and unholy war against the petroleum industry. Rules and regulations, beyond a sane imagination, were enacted," she said.

She said the government responded to the Arab embargo in 1973 by repealing the depletion allowance and reducing the capital to find new reserves. She said the government also has declared lands "off limits" to the search for oil and gas the size of the United States east of the Mississippi.

"The Iranian Revolution in January 1979 showed us just how vulnerable we are," she said. "Government reacted again in a negative way," by levying a windfall profits tax against the petroleum industry.

"Powerful politicians and national news media people led the public to believe that that shortage was contrived," she said. "John Q. Public actually believed that there was a conspiracy in the industry."

"The media could have developed a pretty good story on the cost of oil exploration," she said.

Mrs. Messall said in the next 10 years, the petroleum industry will have to invest $1 trillion to maintain current supplies.

"But that wasn't suggestive or racy enough for the front pages," she said.

"We have heard the words and seen the headlines — 'contrived shortages,' 'conspiracy,' 'rip-off,' and 'exorbitant profits,'" she said.

She gave the results of an investigation of the gasoline shortage by the Justice Department, begun in May 1979 and released July 17, 1980.

She said reasons for the shortage included loss of Iranian crude oil, harsher than expected weather in exploration areas, decreasing quality of crude oil imports, increased demand for unleaded gas, "magnified by the Department of Energy's price and economic controls."

"That story fell on deaf ears," she said.

She said the windfall profits tax is not a tax on industry, but an "excise" tax, which will ultimately be paid by the public.

"This tax will cost the American public $227 billion over the next 20 years," she said.

"There's going to be an avalanche of misunderstanding about the legislation," she said, and she foresees lawsuits and legal battles over points in the law.

"The tax was a feeble attempt to fool the people and get more revenue," she said. "This tax should be repealed."

"We must become the captains our own ship," she said. "The industry must be allowed to perform in a favorable economic climate."

"There are vast coal deposits that just must be used," she said. She said coal now accounts for 90 percent of the nation's total energy resources, while its usage accounts for only 19 percent.

"Government and industry must move ahead together. The government sets the national policy and the industry is given the freedom to bring that policy about. Only the government can open up the lands that are now locked away. Only the government can bring an end to the endless red tape that is impeding the industry. Only government can provide the atmosphere for private industry. Only industry can risk private capital — not the taxpayers' money. Only industry has the technological expertise. Only industry can put more than 100 years in exploring for oil, producing new industry supplies," she said.

"We can do it. We have done it before, and we have the resilience to do it again," she said.

FLAMES ENGULF PLANT. Flames and smoke engulf a chemical company plant during an early morning fire Wednesday on Chicago's south side. Fire officials said the blaze required more men and equipment than were used to fight the fire that destroyed Chicago's McCormick Place in 1967.

Eastern flight becomes seventh hijack

MIAMI (AP) — Ten days after federal officials announced that armed marshals would take to the air to ward off potential hijackers, three Spanish-speaking men, possibly carrying gasoline, commandeered an Eastern Airlines flight to Cuba with 241 people aboard.

The hijacking — the first since new security measures were imposed to stem a new wave of sky piracy — was the seventh in the last two weeks.

There was no immediate word on whether the hijackers were Cubans. Frustrated Cuban refugees were blamed in the earlier hijackings this month.

An airline spokesman said he presumed the hijackers were taken from the plane before it left Havana for Miami, but that could not be confirmed.

The hijackers were carrying containers of an unidentified liquid, but officials said it was not clear that the liquid was gasoline.

There were no sky marshals aboard the New York-to-Miami flight Tuesday night when the men — shouting "Cuba, Cuba" — commandeered the plane as it flew over an area near Cape Charles, Va., said FAA spokesman Jack Barker in Atlanta.

"We are investigating now what security measures were used (at New York's Kennedy International Airport)," Barker said today.

Eastern flight 401, a wide-bodied L-1011, took off from Kennedy about 9:30 p.m. EDT Tuesday with 228 passengers and 13 crew members aboard, Barker said.

The plane, which had been due to land in Miami at about 11:59 p.m. EDT, landed at Havana's Jose Marti airport at 12:20 a.m., according to Eastern spokesman Jim Ashlock in Miami.

The plane left Havana about 3½ hours later, at 3:48 a.m., and finally reached Miami at 4:25.

It was the first hijacking since an announcement that armed federal marshals would ride on selected commercial flights. That move came after six airplanes were hijacked to Cuba in the seven-day period that ended Aug. 16. All those hijackings were committed by disenchanted Cuban refugees, officials said, and several of the refugees threatened to ignite bottles of gasoline.

One of those planes was an Eastern Boeing 727, ordered to fly to Cuba on Aug. 17. It was en route from Miami to Orlando, Fla., and the plane was returned to Miami a few hours later.

During the same week, six Cuban refugees were arrested at Florida airports in two separate incidents and charged with attempted air piracy after containers of gasoline were found on their persons or in their carry-on luggage.

In addition to the "sky marshals," the FAA said it was reviving use of a behavior profile intended to help airport security personnel spot potential hijackers.

Since mid-June 1979, 12 aircraft have been diverted to Cuba. During the 12-year period beginning in 1961, 87 airplanes were commandeered to the communist island nation 90 miles south of Miami.

Gravel loses Alaskan renomination bid

By The Associated Press

Georgians voted to give Sen. Herman Talmadge a chance to run for re-election despite his Senate censure for financial misconduct, but in Alaska, Sen. Mike Gravel was defeated in his bid for renomination for a third term.

Oklahomans, meanwhile, set up runoffs by denying majority support to any candidate in U.S. Senate primaries.

In Alaska, incomplete returns from Tuesday's balloting showed voters split on a proposal to set up a commission that would review the state's relations with the federal government. The commission would study the possibility of changing the state back to a territory or even seceding from the union.

With 387 of Alaska's 421 precincts reporting, Gravel had 26,783 votes or 30.2 percent, far behind Clark Gruening, who had 33,694 votes or 38.1 percent. Gruening is the grandson of Ernest Gruening, one of Alaska's first two senators who lost to Gravel in a 1968 primary. A third contender for the Democratic nomination, Michael Beasley, trailed distantly.

Gruening, an Anchorage attorney, will face Frank Murkowski, a Fairbanks banker, in November. Murkowski won the Republican nomination by crushing five opponents. With 387 precincts counted, Murkowski had 14,291 votes and his nearest rival had 4,847.

In Alaska's lone House contest, Democrat Kevin "Pat" Parnell defeated Richard Whittaker for the right to take on Republican incumbent Don Young, who was unopposed for renomination. With 387 precincts in, Parnell had 14,293 votes to Whittaker's 8,942.

Talmadge, a Democrat who has spent 23 years in the Senate, faced Lt. Gov. Zell Miller in a runoff election that was set up when none of the six candidates received a majority of the vote in the Aug. 5 primary.

With returns in from 2,183 of the state's 2,251 precincts, Talmadge had 58 percent of the vote with 530,489 to 42 percent or 385,057 and 42 percent for Miller.

Talmadge, who was censured by the Senate for mishandling office-expense funds and campaign money, will face Republican Mack Mattingly, a Saint Simons Island businessman, in November.

With 387 of the 421 precincts reporting in the Alaskan referendum, there were 39,473 no votes and 37,028, yes votes.

Congress is considering legislation to place more than 100 million acres of federal land in the state under protection as conservation areas. The legislation has been bitterly criticized by proponents of greater development, who maintain the federal government is meddling in the state's affairs.

The proposal would require the governor to set up an 11-member Alaska Statehood Commission to study "alternative forms of association possible between the United States and the people of Alaska."

One alternative would be for the state to demand that the federal government give it more control over land policy.

In the Oklahoma senatorial contests, former Oklahoma County District Attorney Andy Coats and Oklahoma City oilman Robert S. Kerr Jr. won spots in the Democratic runoff, while state Sen. Don Nickles of Ponca City and John Zink of Tulsa will compete in the Republican runoff. Sen. Henry Bellmon, a Republican, is retiring from the seat.

With 2,676 of 2,774 precincts reporting, Kerr had 147,878 or 33 percent, while Coats had 147,197 or 33 percent. On the Republican side, Nickles had 46,229 or 33 percent, while Zink had 45,920 or 33 percent.

There were also primary contests for four of the state's six congressional seats. The only incumbent to be challenged was Rep. Wes Watkins, a 3rd District Democrat, who beat Leland Kelly of Sulphur.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
 Thundershowers began moving northward into East Texas from Southeast Texas early today.
 Forecasts also called for widely scattered shower activity over the Panhandle, South Plains and the mountains of Southwest Texas.
 The remainder of the state was to have clear to partly cloudy skies.

Highs were to be mostly in the 90s, ranging from the lower 90s along the coast to as high as 105 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. Highs were expected to be 100 or slightly above across much of North Central Texas.

Probe continues in collision

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Transportation Safety Board will attempt again Thursday to pinpoint all the causes of the collision between the oil tanker Capricorn and the Coast Guard cutter Blackthorn that killed 23 Coast Guardsmen in Florida's Tampa Bay last Jan. 28.

The board spent Tuesday discussing a report on the accident written by the agency's staff. While there was agreement with the report's chief conclusion — citing the Blackthorn as the principal cause of the mishap — there was debate over whether the Capricorn's pilot could have made greater efforts to avert the collision.

The board concluded its session by instructing the staff to redraft the report's "probable cause" section and to have it ready Thursday.
 Under the law, the board has no disciplinary responsibilities. Its function is to study causes of major accidents and recommend ways to avert similar mishaps.

Board member Francis H. McAdams, chairing the meeting, called the Blackthorn a "rogue vessel" in Tuesday's session and said, "I feel the Capricorn pilot did everything that he could to avoid the collision."

But other members questioned whether the Capricorn's hired pilot, Harry Eugene Knight, might have sounded a warning signal before he did.

The collision occurred at night under the Sunshine Skyway

Bridge over Tampa Bay. Four months later, 1,400 feet of that bridge collapsed into the bay after it was struck by the freighter Summit Venture, sending 35 people plunging to their deaths from the span.

In the Capricorn-Blackthorn accident, the two vessels were moving toward each other. No one aboard the 665-foot Capricorn was injured in the collision. The Blackthorn, a 190-foot buoy tender, was pulled over by the Capricorn's anchor and sank to the bottom of the bay in a few moments.

A Coast Guard board of inquiry said in May, after weeks of hearings, that Ensign John Ryan, 29, who was at the helm of the Blackthorn when the accident occurred, used his "seaman's eye" instead of taking exact bearings to negotiate a crucial turn just before the nearly head-on collision.

The report also said the ensign, fresh out of officer candidate school, did not know the proper whistle signals.
 Ryan took over the helm five miles before the crash occurred as the cutter steamed out of port en route to its home port at Galveston, Texas.

In June, the Coast Guard convened a second board of inquiry to investigate what transpired on the bridge of the Blackthorn the night of the accident. The Coast Guard said it would investigate the conduct of Lt. Cmdr. George Sepel, the Blackthorn's commanding officer, and of Ryan.

Compromise possible on deregulation bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Bob Eckhardt claims he's willing to compromise on the stalled railroad deregulation bill, if anyone would ask him.

"I would consider any of these things an opening point," he said of the several attempts the bill's sponsor has made to put the bill back on the track. "But nobody has presented me with any of these proposals."

The Texas congressman said the bill's sponsor, Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., instead has attempted repeatedly to break up the coalition that passed by a narrow margin Eckhardt's amendment designed to protect so-called "captive shippers."
 Florio pulled the bill from further House consideration last month after the amendment passed, claiming it would increase regulation.

The latest twist in the bill's lengthening history took place Tuesday when Florio left a White House meeting claiming he had President Carter's support for a new compromise proposal.
 He said the bill was set for another go on the House floor Sept. 4 and he was optimistic he could attach the compromise to it.

The New Jersey congressman only last week said the bill apparently was dead for this session, but he made another attempt over the weekend at White House request to come up with a new proposal.

Texas groups fight for ERA

AUSTIN (AP) — Any effort to take back Texas' 1973 ratification of the national Equal Rights Amendment will face united opposition from a group of Texas' womens organizations.

Representatives of seven Texas women's groups told a news conference Tuesday they are ready to fight any attempt in the 1981 Legislature against the ERA.

"We have joined hands in urging the American people to demand ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment — a matter of simple justice for all men and women," said Kathy Barrett, representing the Texas Women's Political Caucus.

Others represented at the joint news conference, marking the 60th anniversary of the Susan B. Anthony amendment to the U.S. Constitution which gave women the right to vote, included the American Association of University Women, Texans for ERA, the National Organization for Women, Business and Professional Women, Zonta and the League of Women Voters.

"We will protect the ERA in Texas. We are all agreed to fight any effort to rescind our ratification of the amendment as such attempts have been made in the past," said Ms. Barrett. "We are prepared if there is another attempt."

"We are betting on the future of ERA and we intend to be winners," said Jan Albers of the League of Women Voters.

"Our daughters and granddaughters shall not only vote but shall be free and equal citizens of these United States," said Phyllis Tucker of the Texas State National Organization for Women.

Each representative at the news conference indicated her organization would send lobbyists to Austin if a resolution tis offered to rescind the ratification. Several efforts in the past to rescind have been defeated.

Texas voters approved in 1972 an equal rights amendment to the state constitution.

Dimmitt residents honor Clayton

DIMMITT, Texas (AP) — House Speaker Billy Clayton said he is eager for the chance to prove his innocence in an upcoming September trial on his alleged involvement in the "bribery-labor" scheme.

Speaking Tuesday night as guest of honor at a reception 25 miles from his birthplace in Springlake, Clayton said he was "totally pleased" with the Sept. 8 trial date set on his alleged involvement in the Brilab investigation.

He told the crowd of 200 he has "really seen a new side of life" during pretrial hearings in the Texas Brilab investigation.

Clayton said he wanted to "prove" he was not guilty of accepting bribes for political favors. He said dismissal of the charges against him would have been disastrous for his political future.

"We're confident we'll be vindicated because we know we did no wrong," he said. "We're going to win this battle and in doing so I believe we're also going to retain the speakership which will enable us to serve this area better."

Clayton needed too little persuading, however, since organizers arranged the gathering to show support for the former hometown boy.

"We want you to know we are your friends and neighbors, Bill, and we want to help you," said Ray Joe Riley, a former classmate who introduced Clayton.

Roy Minton, Clayton's attorney, also took the opportunity to praise his client, summarizing the Brilab case for the crowd and telling of Clayton's refusal "to buckle or lose hope."

"I've represented all kinds in my career as a defense attorney," Minton said. "But I have never met a man like Bill Clayton..."

Energy assistance given Panhandle area residents

As of mid-August over 1100 Panhandle area citizens participation have benefitted in the Energy Crisis Assistance Program (ECAP).

The federal program is focused on poor Americans who are behind in their energy bills or need some assistance in keeping their credit rating. Much of the help provided by the PRPC was applied on energy bills accumulated during cold winter weather.

During the four month period, interview teams from the Planning Commission took information from potential ECAP participants at county courthouse and senior citizens centers. Those whose income level qualified them for assistance then begin receiving help with their electrical and fuel bills. All payments are made directly to the utility or fuel supplier involved. They average $200 per person. If the recipient is living in an apartment, the payment is made to the landlord.

Fifteen hundred applications were taken during the process and PRPC officials say funds were only available for 1131 applicants. The average payment has been $200 with a legal ceiling of $400.

During the three and one-half weeks the payments have been made, about $100,000 has been paid out. The remaining $150,000 has been obligated and will be sent out some time in September. Potter County had the largest participation in the program with 583 getting assistance. It is possible more will be served before the end of the project.

Murder suspect in Huntsville

Potter County authorities have confirmed that Paul Berry Bush has been transferred to Huntsville to begin serving a life term in the Texas Department of Corrections after being convicted of a drug-related charge.

"Bush was transferred to TDC Wednesday," Potter County Sheriff T. L. Baker said, "to start the term he was recently assessed (by an Amarillo court)."

The 27-year-old man was arrested on July 12 of this year and charged with capital murder in connection with the shotgun slaying that same day of a Hemphill County Sheriff's deputy, M. L. "Corky" Guthrie.

Bush's trial for the murder charge — which could carry the death penalty — is scheduled for Oct. 6 in Wichita Falls, according to the 31st District Attorney's office.

A pretrial hearing for the accused man has not been definitely set, Penny Burt, assistant district attorney said today, but is expected to be held in Canadian sometime during September.

It may possibly be held on Sept. 12, she said.
 An Amarillo jury — after a 10-minute deliberation — convicted Bush of attempting to gain possession of a controlled substance by telling an Amarillo pharmacist he had a prescription.

A pharmacist for K-Mart testified during the trial proceedings that Bush had given him a prescription for Quaalude with the forged signature of an Amarillo physician.

The life prison term was assessed after the jurors heard evidence of the man being convicted of three felony charges previously.

Guthrie was killed when he was shot three times with a .12-gauge shotgun in the early morning hours of July 12 when he responded to a silent alarm at La'd's Pharmacy in Canadian.

Bush was arrested and charged with the murder in Dumas by city police approximately 15 hours after the shooting.

Meredith officials have employment information for '81

Packets of information regarding the 1981 seasonal employment opportunities in the National Park Service will be available at Lake Meredith Recreation Area Headquarters in Fritch after September 1.

The National Park System encompasses 320 separate areas in the United States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

Besides assisting the permanent staff during periods of peak activity, seasonal employment introduces young people to the professional opportunities which the National Park Service offers.

But, these jobs are difficult to get because:

1) Applicants far outnumber the positions, particularly in the larger, well-known national parks.

2) Many positions are filled by people returning from previous seasonal employment.

3) Civil Service Commission regulations require that veterans be given preference among qualified applicants.

Lake Meredith Recreation Area recruits for the following type seasonal positions: park ranger, park technician, park aid, recreation aids, (lifeguard), laborers, maintenance workers, motor vehicle operators, boat operators, and dispatchers.

All but three of Lake Meredith's 1980 seasons will be leaving by the end of August.

Sheriff's office investigates theft

Investigation is continuing in connection with the theft of $13,000 of tubing and rod line by Gray County Sheriff's deputies today.

A spokesperson for Atlantic-Richfield Oil Company reported the theft Monday morning of 3,000 feet of two and seven-eighths inch upset tubing and 3,000 feet of rod line from the Powell Lease located 13 miles south of Pampa, Sheriff Rufe Jordan said.

The items were valued at approximately $13,000.

The tubing and rod line were believed to have been stolen sometime during the night of Aug. 24 or the early morning of Aug. 25, the sheriff said, and the thieves probably used a large truck or trucks to move the stolen property.

The sheriff asks if anyone observed anything in that area during that time, to please call the sheriff's office and report it.

Carter's program would create new jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's new economic recovery program, to be announced Thursday, would create about 900,000 additional jobs in the next two years, administration sources say.

Carter's election-year program also is expected to seek tax relief for individuals and businesses, including a tax credit to offset virtually all the $13 billion increase in Social Security payroll taxes in 1981.

The plan, which will total about $30 billion in fiscal 1981, is "basically long-term, but that doesn't mean there won't be short-term benefits," one top administration official said Tuesday.

One long-range initiative, administration sources said, will be a proposed 3 percent annual increase in federal spending, instead of tax incentives, for research and development. Most of the money would go to private firms, not government agencies.

But to battle the current recession and stimulate new jobs, Carter reportedly will propose:

—$500 million to $1 billion in "countercyclical revenue sharing" funds that would go to localities where unemployment has reached a certain high level, administration sources say.

—A 13-week extension of unemployment benefits for jobless workers, according to congressional sources briefed by the White House. Benefits currently run up to 39 weeks.

—An extra $1 billion in loans and loan guarantees for the Economic Development Administration in fiscal 1981 and another $2 billion in fiscal 1982. This money would go to revitalize distressed companies and localities.

—Additional spending for job retraining programs through the Department of Labor and for energy conservation and weatherization programs run by the departments of Energy and Housing and Urban Development.

Carter aides have refrained from the president's own promise three weeks ago that his program "will put millions and millions of people back to work in new jobs, exciting jobs and stimulating jobs."

But a top administration official said Tuesday the program probably would create "450,000 jobs next year over and above what we would otherwise get, and probably another 450,000 (jobs) the following year."

About 8 million Americans now are unemployed. Total spending authorization for these programs could reach $5 billion to $7 billion, but actual outlays in fiscal 1981 would be about $2 billion to $4 billion, these sources say.

This will increase the projected fiscal 1981 deficit beyond $30 billion, far from the balanced budget proposed by Carter only last winter.

Military strongman gains Korean presidency

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea's new military strongman, Gen. Chun Doo-hwan, was elected president today without opposition or debate just eight months after he emerged from obscurity.

Chun, virtually unknown to Koreans outside the military and to foreigners before the coup he led in December, was elected by 2,224 members of the nation's rubber-stamp Electoral College.

Fifteen members were absent and one vote was declared invalid.

Chun, who has effectively controlled the country since the coup, was the only candidate for president. He did not appear at the election ceremony, officials reported.

Later he issued a brief statement saying he would fulfill his new duties "without selfishness," and that the election was "national call for me to devote my body and soul to the creation of a new history."

Chun said his government would be "an honest and efficient one, listening to the people's voice all the time, and based on the people's confidence."

The election was a foregone conclusion following Chun's resignation from the military as a full general last Friday. His retirement was necessary because the constitution bars active-duty officers from becoming president.

Chun is South Korea's third president in two weeks and the fourth in a year, succeeding acting President and acting Prime Minister Park Chung-hoon, in office for 11 days since the Aug. 16 resignation of Choi Kyu-hah. Choi became president when President Park Chung-hee was assassinated Oct. 26 by his chief of intelligence.

The 49-year-old Chun, a balding, 5-foot, 6-inch tall career officer, was a protégé of Park and at the time of his assassination was a major general in charge of the Defense Security Command, which controlled all military intelligence activities.

Chun took control of the investigation and defying orders of acting President Choi ordered the arrest of his superior, Gen. Chung Seung-hwa, known to have been 30 yards from Park when he was shot.

On Dec. 12, Chun and a small group of officers carried out a coup to topple a group of older officers and quickly placed men loyal to him in key posts. For a time he also took over as acting head of the Korean CIA despite a prohibition against army officers holding the job.

Over the next few months, the military publicly proclaimed loyalty to the civilian government but quietly reserved power for itself.

In May, when thousands of university students took to the streets of Seoul and Kwangju to demand lifting of martial law and rapid, free elections, Chun cracked down.

Extending a stricter martial law nationwide, he arrested dozens of top politicians, students, journalists and dissident leaders including Kim Dae-jung, now being court-martialed on sedition charges which carry the death penalty.

U.S., Germany call for early cutback in missile programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and West Germany, the bedrock of the NATO alliance, have joined in a call for early negotiations with the Soviet Union on cutting back nuclear missiles in Europe.

A communique was issued here late Tuesday after Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev sent a message to President Carter and other western leaders suggesting that they were stalling on opening talks.

The question is now whether the two sides are moving closer to the bargaining table or are simply trying to match each other in registering concern over the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

The communique said a "preliminary exchange" between the United States and the Soviet Union is expected to occur "at an early date."

That appeared to refer to the talks Secretary of State Edmund S. Muckie and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko are likely to have next month in New York when they attend the United Nations General Assembly session.

They have not met since May when they were at ceremonies in Vienna commemorating the neutrality and independence of Austria.

The communique was issued after Muskie talked for two hours with Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the West German foreign minister. The meeting was scheduled before Brezhnev sent his message to Carter, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and other western leaders.

Brezhnev's letter was his second major move in the arms field this summer. In early July, he told Schmidt in Moscow he no longer insisted that NATO rescind its decision to deploy American medium-range nuclear missiles before negotiations could begin.

25 percent may not have registered for the draft

BOSTON (AP) — A spot check of several cities indicates that as many as 25 percent of the eligible young men there may have failed to register for the draft, the Boston Globe says. A spokesman for the Selective Service System called the survey invalid.

Under legislation approved by Congress in June, men born in 1960 and 1961 were required to register for the draft in late July and early August at any post office. Congress did not authorize a resumption of the draft itself.

There have been reports that many men failed to comply with the law, but the Selective Service System, which administers registration, has not released any figures.

Selective Service spokeswoman Joan Lamb said the Globe's figures did not take into account that the men required to register are a "mobile group and didn't have to register in their area."

"We don't want to talk from incomplete data," she said, calling the data invalid.

The Globe said it obtained registration figures from regional offices of the U.S. Postal Service serving areas in which more than 10 percent of the nation's population lives.

The newspaper said it tried to make sure that urban, suburban and rural areas were represented. Reporter Alan MacRobert, who conducted the survey, said there were no results from the Deep South or New York State.

The newspaper said it used a projection based on 1970 census figures to calculate the number of men born in 1960 and 1961 living in the postal region, then compared it with the number who actually registered. Men from the area who were in the military were adjusted for, the newspaper said.

The Globe's calculation did not take into account the possibility that there may have been population shifts that would affect the estimate of the number of men who should have registered, MacRobert said.

Freak accident kills youngster

WAXAHACHIE, Texas (AP) — An 8-year-old boy accidentally hanged himself when his neck was caught in a rope attached to a tree.

Charles David Crumpton was playing with friends Monday afternoon after the first day of school, where he made a perfect score on a math test, his grandmother said.

"He was just as happy as he could be," said Louise Bell. "He told his teacher that he was going to be a real good little boy this year and that he was going to learn a whole lot, and he'd never been happier."

"He had been playing after school with some other kids from the neighborhood, just the way kids are always playing, and he was climbing a tree at his house," she said. "He just fell and the rope caught his little neck and snapped it."

A 16-year-old cousin and 19-year-old woman who had been supervising the children tried to resuscitate the boy.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Carter crew plays hardball

By Robert Walters
NEW YORK (NEA) - Behind the facade of President Carter's call for respect and magnanimity in dealing with his critics in the Democratic Party lies a petty, mean-spirited campaign organization unwilling to compromise with Carter's foes.

"Please remember that we have strong, good Democratic Americans who support Sen. (Edward M.) Kennedy for president," Carter told his backers prior to the opening of the Democratic National Convention here.

"Give them respect and a hand of friendship and a right to express themselves," the president added. "That's a part of the democratic process. I do not fear it. After the convention is over... they will be our political allies."

But Carter's political operatives repeatedly substituted perversity for generosity during the pre-convention maneuvering between opposing forces at sessions of the Rules, Credentials and Platform committees.

One of the numerous missed opportunities for a reduction of intra-party rancor came after the Rules committee voted 87% to 65% to rebuff the Kennedy forces on the crucial issue of binding convention delegates to the presidential candidates they initially endorsed.

Because the matter had been considered by the committee in a broad, unwieldy format, the Kennedy supporters sought a quick follow-up vote — which they publicly acknowledged they would lose — on a more precise defined version of the same issue better suited for convention floor debate.

Consenting to that procedural modification was the committee chairman, Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, selected for that post by Carter's agents at the Democratic National Committee because he has been an unwavering supporter of the president's bid for re-election.

But Carter's intransigent floor managers promptly disputed the ruling of their hand-picked chairman, then unnecessarily humiliated Inouye by sustaining that challenge in a committee vote.

"This wasn't a good one to try to reconcile on," said Timothy W. Smith, counsel to the president's campaign committee. Another Carter leader, who earlier had called for "good sportsmanship," said that "this really wasn't the time to be magnanimous."

The strict discipline enforced at the Credentials Committee meeting, requiring Carter delegates to vote mechanically according to hand signals from the president's operatives regardless of their personal views, produced a nascent rebellion that was quelled only after a personal visit from Hamilton Jordan, the president's principal political adviser.

Similarly, the president's aides insisted upon selecting Carter loyalists to fill all four co-chair posts at the convention, rebuffing Kennedy pleas for at least one of the honorary positions as a gesture of accommodation.

At one point in the Rules Committee's deliberations, the Kennedy forces won a vote, by a slim margin of 71% to 70, because numerous Carter delegates had temporarily left the room.

The issue wasn't especially important, but the give-no-quarter Carter operatives promptly demanded a roll-call vote, rounded up their wayward delegates and defeated the proposal by a margin of 80% to 71%.

The president's agents at the Democratic National Committee were so anxious to rewrite the convention rules to eliminate the possibility of defections among Carter's convention delegates that they inadvertently endangered one of the party's most fundamental reforms of recent years — the prohibition against use of the unit rule on the convention floor.

"What we have here, intentional or not, is a miscarriage of basic legal draftsmanship," said one Kennedy backer. The Carter forces acknowledged the error, claimed it was accidental — but refused to restore the original language.

"If they're going to fight us on every imaginable platform, rules and credentials issue," said one typically graceless Carter aide, "we'll fight them on this one."

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Wednesday, August 27, the 240th day of 1980. There are 126 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Aug. 27, 1945, American troops began landing in Japan at the end of World War II. It was the first foreign occupation of that country in modern history.

On this date:
In 55 B.C., Roman forces under Julius Caesar invaded Britain.

In 1776, British forces were victorious in the Revolutionary war battle of Long Island in New York.

In 1859, the first oil well in the United States was drilled near Titusville, Pa.

Ten years ago, a federal judge in Miami ordered an all-white cemetery to bury a black American soldier with full military honors.

Five years ago, Emperor Haile Selassie, Ethiopia's ruler for decades, died in his palace.

Last year, war hero Earl Mountbatten — uncle of Prince Philip — was killed in a boat explosion off the coast of Ireland. Irish terrorists claimed responsibility for that attack.

Today's birthday: economist Walter Heller is 65 years old.

OPINION PAGE

NOPECS' need help

Although the tenfold increase in oil prices by OPEC has shaken the world's developed nations, these rich countries have managed to maintain economic stability through their exports and because OPEC has deposited or invested billions of petrodollars with them.

But the oil-baren developing nations, sometimes called "NOPECS" are being driven to the brink of bankruptcy. Despite repeated warnings from bankers and economists, this gathering catastrophe is being underreported and largely ignored.

Having piled up debts of about $300 billion during the last six years, the poorer, developing nations now require at least $35 billion a year just to service their creditors — almost 20 percent of all their foreign exchange. Their oil bill, which has jumped from $4 billion in 1972 to $60 billion this year, now equals their current-accounts deficits.

The NOPECS have become such poor risks that they can't borrow any more. International bankers are being forced now to red-line the world's ghettos. In South America, only Brazil and Venezuela, an oil producer, can count on big loans. No nation in black Africa is considered a good credit risk, except Nigeria, an oil exporter. And practically all of Asia is circled except for a handful of industrialized nations.

This summer, the developing countries are getting by as a result of loans negotiated earlier but not disbursed and using their foreign exchange reserves. But by this fall borrowers and lenders will be up against the greatest difficulties.

The worse-case scenario would be for a country with a paralyzing debt load to default, causing its creditor banks to fail and spreading financial panic.

Tolstoy on selective service

With the campaign to register millions of young men for conscription rumored to be crashing down around him, the director of the reborn Selective Service System last week threatened his targets with felony prosecution unless they signed up for Jimmy Carter's paper army to fight the Russians.

We're not in any position to offer legal advice to those under the gun of this potentially monstrous intrusion into their lives. But we suspect that some, listening to the bluster of this man who wants their names and perhaps someday their bodies, would find countervailing force in the following passages. They were written by Russian pacifist Leo Tolstoy, in dissent from Tsarist rule at the beginning of this century:

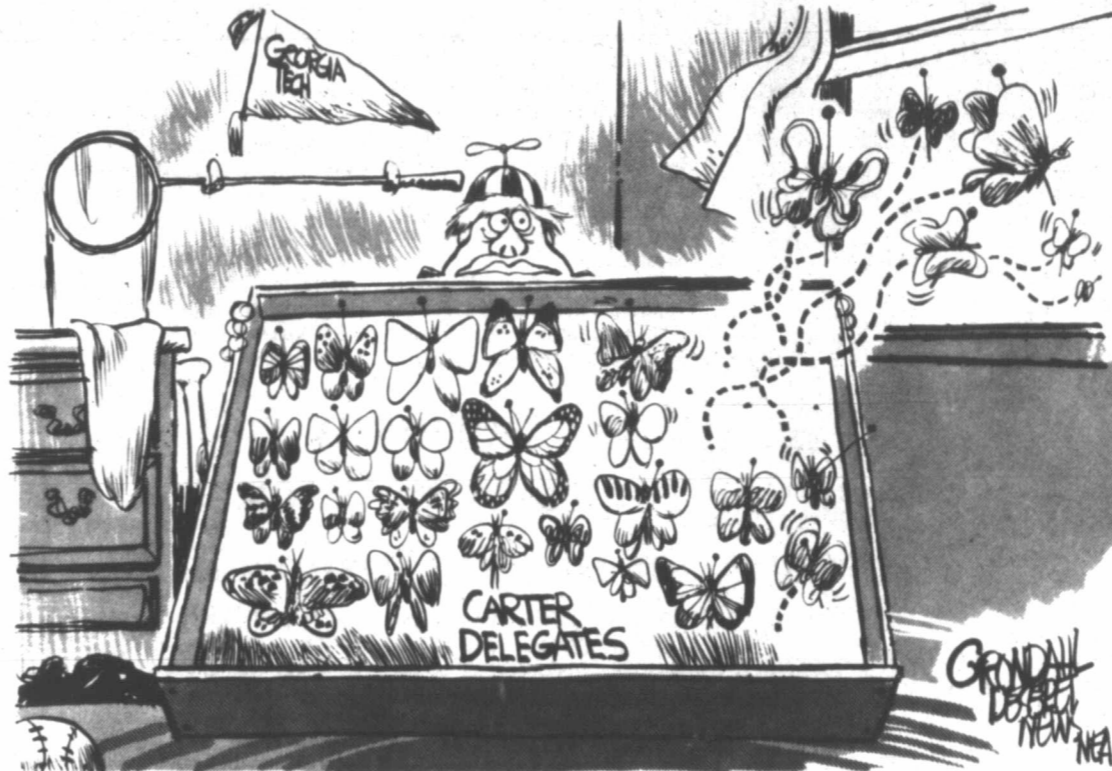

"The people of every nation are being deluded by their rulers, who say to them, 'You, who are governed by us, are all in danger of being conquered by other nations; we are watching over your welfare and safety, and consequently we demand of you annually some millions of rubles — the fruits of your labor — to be used by us in the acquisition of arms, cannon, powder and ships for your defense; we also demand that you yourselves shall enter institutions, organized by us, where you will become senseless particles of a huge machine — the army — which will be under our absolute control. On entering the army you will be cease to be men with wills of your own; you will simply do what we require of you. But what we wish, above all else, is to exercise dominion; the means by which we dominate is killing, therefore we will instruct you to kill.'

"Notwithstanding the obvious absurdity of the assertion that people are in danger of being attacked by the governments of other states, who, in their turn, affirm that they — in spite of all their desire for peace — find themselves in precisely the same danger; notwithstanding the humiliation of that slavery to which men subject themselves by entering the army; notwithstanding the cruelty of the work to which they are summoned — men nevertheless submit to this fraud, give their money to be used for their own subjugation, and themselves help to enslave others....

When we see trained animals accomplishing things contrary to nature: dogs walking on their forelegs, elephants rolling barrels, tigers playing with lions, and so on, we know that all this has been attained by the torments of hunger, whip and red-hot iron. And when we see men in uniforms with rifles standing motionless, or performing all together the same movement — running, jumping, shooting, shouting and so on — in general, producing those fine reviews and maneuvers which emperors and kings so admire and show off one before the other, we know the same. One cannot cauterize out of a man all that is human and reduce him to the state of a machine without torturing him, and torturing not in a simple way but in the most refined, cruel way — at one and the same time torturing and deceiving him....

"It is true that a soldier, if he be a Christian, can and should be Christ's warrior, but he will be Christ's warrior, not when, obeying the will of those commanders who have prepared him for murder, he kills foreigners who have done him no harm, or even his own unarmed fellow countrymen, but only when he renounces the ungodly and shameful calling of a soldier, in the name of Christ — and fights not with external foes but with his own commanders who deceive him and his brothers, and fights them, not with a bayonet, nor with his fists or teeth, but with humble reasonableness, and readiness to bear all suffering and even death rather than remain a soldier — that is, a man ready to kill any one whom his commanders indicate...."

Many may find Tolstoy outdated and simplistic. His clear perception of the immorality of war transcends time and changing combatants, however. And among the young, his message may at last be stronger than the emperors and kings.

What makes your government grow?

by Paul Harvey

Politicians of both parties propose less taxes, less government — but more government services. We can't have it both ways.

When we ask government to perform for us some function which heretofore we have performed for ourselves, government has to get bigger.

To support the bigness, it has to tax the individual more.

Then why do we do it?

In New York City in 1829, the mostly immigrant population had mushroomed — creating so much garbage that tens of thousands of pigs were allowed to roam the city freely as scavengers.

The accumulating filth bred flies and fleas, and cholera became pandemic.

Obviously, the situation called for a Department of Sanitation to be created — and so one was. Government grew.

When there was a fire in the wooden buildings in 1835 there was nothing to stop its spread. Wooden water pumps were located every four blocks for filling the horse troughs.

But the tragic 50-acre fire taught the city the need for a proper city water system. By 1842 they had one. But it was expensive.

Few of our problems are new ones. In the 1830s in New York, the homeless roamed and slept in the streets. More than a thousand under 16 were arrested for drunkenness in 1837.

Ethnic suspicions flourished. There were anti-Irish demonstrations, anti-German riots.

The city had to hire more policemen.

Thus government grew.

In 1837 inflation was rampant. Brooms went from 25 cents to 50 cents. Flour went from $10 to $15 a barrel. And a head of cabbage, formerly almost free, suddenly cost 3 1/4 cents.

The well-to-do were property poor, lost their homes. The rich went bankrupt.

In March and April of 1837, 260 businesses in New York closed.

Rebuilding after the fire, construction was so shoddy that much of it collapsed. When the large Phelps and Peck store roof collapsed it killed five people.

Obviously, the city needed to establish a construction code, require inspection, employ inspectors.

Which it did. And so government grew.

Inevitably, greedy men discovered ways of making themselves rich at the expense of others — Fisk, Drew, Gould, Vanderbilt.

So it was necessary for government to institute controls over banking, railroading, finance... and to hire "controllers." Thus government got bigger.

Retracing the evolution of government — from small to big to bigger — inevitably one is reminded that most government growth results from lack of self-discipline.

In recent generations, however, government has tended to encourage do-nothingness. Abraham Lincoln said the criterion should be: "Government should do for people that which needs to be done — and which they cannot possibly do for themselves — and leave them otherwise free."

Getting back to that philosophy would cut our public payroll appreciably.

What after Viking?

By Don Graft

They've pulled the plug on Viking.

The spacecraft that has been orbiting Mars for four years, returning a stream of photos and quantitative data on the planet, finally and literally ran out of gas — the steering gas that kept cameras and scanners pointed at the Martian surface and antennas trained at distant Earth. And so, in response to a final radio signal from NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., it turned itself on.

Down on the Martian surface, in the area earthbound astronomers have named Chryse Planitia, the Viking lander will continue to operate for another 10 years or more, but on an infrequent schedule. Deprived of its orbiting relay station, it will be limited to radioing back a weekly weather report and an occasional picture.

More than the end of a highly successful mission, it is the end of an era. For the first time in more than a decade, scientists on Earth are not receiving a regular flow of radioed information from the planets.

It is also the beginning of a new era, one of considerable uncertainty in the American space program that has advanced from success to greater success during almost two decades since the first Mariner flyby of Venus in 1962.

There is one more planetary probe to be heard from in the immediate future — Voyager II's rendezvous with Saturn in August 1981. After that, it will be several years — at best — before we are back on the line with our solar neighbors.

That will come, barring further postponements, with the International Solar Polar mission in 1985, a joint European-American venture to make the most intensive study yet of the life-giving heart of our system. The following year may see launching of the Galileo orbital mission to Jupiter.

Both orbital-projects are already two years behind schedule, thanks to the delay-plagued space shuttle upon which they are dependent and which currently preoccupies NASA's attention and consumes the bulk of its curtailed funds.

Only one other project is now on the drawing boards — the Venus Orbiting Imaging Radar mission (VOIR) to map the bright planet, Earth's nearest neighbor other than the moon, through its perpetual thick cloud cover. If Congress can be persuaded to approve funding, possibly next year, a launch date as early as 1986 is possible.

Beyond that, there are only hopes for a return to Mars sometime in the 1990s, this time with robot laboratories roving the surface to collect soil samples for return to Earth, and fears that the probing of space will lose out to pressures for economy and other priorities on Capitol Hill.

Funding for the new fiscal year has already been cut back from the previous $80 million and NASA spokesmen admit to concern that recurrent spasms of budget cutting may mean further cuts.

Money is already a problem in wrapping up the unexpectedly productive Viking program — the mission was initially programmed as a 90-day operation. Data received from orbit and surface is still being processed and, according to NASA, all of it will eventually be converted from radio signals to figures stored in the computer banks.

But analyzing this wealth of information is another matter, one for which the funds are not now in sight. Some private help is forthcoming to meet the public problem through the organization of the Viking Fund to receive contributions. The goal is an eventual $1 million (one-tenth of one percent of what was spent getting Viking to Mars) to underwrite completion of the analysis of information returned.

Concerned citizens are also seeking to assist in the longer term. The Planetary Society has been formed by astronomer-author Carl Sagan and several other space-oriented notables for the purpose of keeping the public aware of the importance of the space program and to encourage Congress to maintain the funding.

As finances go, it is not all that much of a big deal. Writer-editor Ben Bova notes that Americans spend more on pizza annually — $7.5 billion — than they have on the entire space program.

State fights worst fires in 15 years

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — "Tinder-dry Texas forests and grasslands are igniting 'just like a bomb' as a relentless heat wave sparks the highest number of August forest fires in 15 years, a state fire official said.

An "extreme fire danger" warning for 52 counties — 24 million acres — from the Oklahoma and Louisiana borders to the Gulf Coast and into the Hill Country of Central Texas has been issued by the Texas Forest Service.

A 15-year record of 607 blazes over 7,524 acres this month was boosted by 325 wildfires burning 5,243 acres of forest and rangeland in the past week, said spokesman Lou Sloat from a special Texas Forest Service command post here.

He blames the Texas Heat Wave.

"The thing that scares us is that we have this high pressure system that dominates the entire Texas area," Sloat said. "And it could last through September."

"We're just going to burn East Texas up if we don't get some relief. The weather patterns have been extremely erratic and unusual," he added.

"The top of the trees are so hot already that anything that the fire touches it kills," he said.

"We've had 30- to 40-foot walls of flames, just like a bomb," Sloat said. "The fuels are now just extremely powder dry. The other problem is that the heat tells on people. We've had several (firefighters) out from heat exhaustion and heatstroke trying to fight fires in those temperatures."

At this point in 1978, the last bad fire year, 2,992 fires burned 40,000 acres, he said. So far this year, 2,100 fires have destroyed about 31,000 acres.

"But it's not over yet," Sloat said, adding the forest service is also fighting arsonists. He said they are responsible for 40 percent of the fire load, compared with the normal 17 percent, he added.

Arsonists are being sought in Houston, Shelby and Nacogdoches counties, he said.

Officials have requested that there be no outside burning of any kind "until further notice," Sloat said.

Water shortages have not presented a problem for firefighters because the forest service primarily uses plows to stop the fires' spread and let the blaze burn itself out, Sloat said.

The forest service has 90 two-man crews to cover East Texas, with help from city, county and volunteer fire departments but "we had more fires than we had men," Sloat said.

Areas heavily populated by seed-bearing trees will naturally regenerate within about 18 months, he said, but in the meantime, there is the danger of erosion.

The government probably will replant devastated areas "just as soon as it's feasible, probably this winter," he said. Private landowners can receive government assistance in replanting, he added.

Lubbock schools curb prayers

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Even a sign-carrying, prayerful crowd of 400 students and parents did not prevent the Lubbock school board from voting to curb prayers in school.

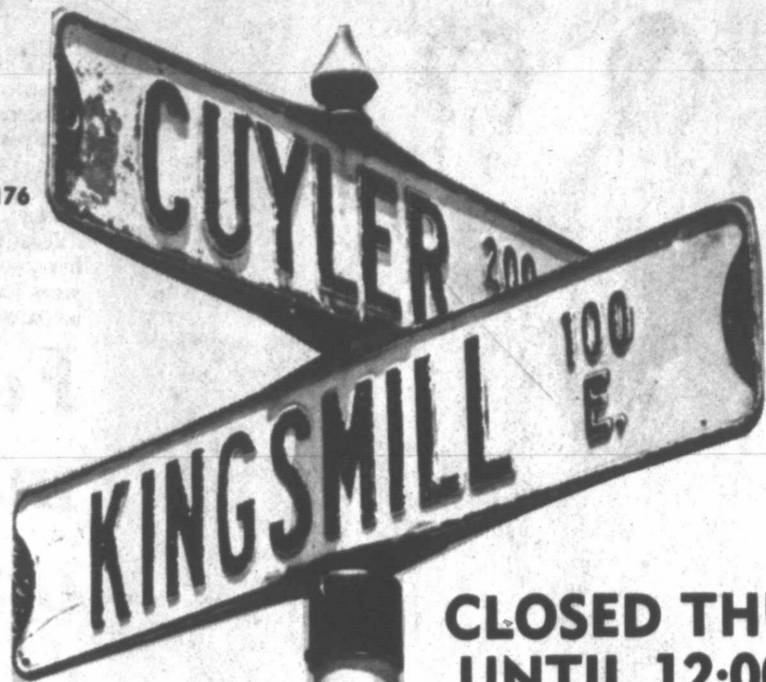

About 400 people rallied Tuesday at 6 a.m. on the parking lot of the Lubbock Independent School District building, carrying signs promoting prayer at the public schools.

"Practice what you teach — freedom of speech," "You vote out prayer, we'll vote you out," the placards read.

But during the regular board meeting, school trustees voted 6-0, with one abstention, to cut back the prayer policy in schools.

Terrorist members sentenced 8 years

CHICAGO (AP) — A Circuit Court judge on Tuesday sentenced Carlos Alberto Torres and seven other members of the Puerto Rican terrorist group FALN to eight-year prison terms for possession of a sawed-off shotgun and conspiracy to commit armed robbery.

The eight, all convicted earlier this year, were among 11 arrested April 4 in suburban Evanston. Judge Francis J. Mahon sentenced each defendant to five years for the possession convictions and three years for the conspiracy convictions, ordering them served consecutively.

Torres, 27, was ranked No. 1 on the FBI's list of most-wanted criminals before his capture near the home of Rep. John Porter, R-Ill., when neighbors reported suspicious activity near a parked van. He was considered a top leader of the FALN.

Two other members, Luis Rosa and Alicia Rodriguez, were sentenced Aug. 4 to 30-year prison terms after being convicted of armed robbery and conspiracy.

An 11th member, Marie Haydee Torres, was extradited to New York, where she was convicted in connection with a bombing at the Mobil Oil Corp. headquarters that killed one person. She was sentenced to life in prison.

The FALN — Fuerzas Armadas de Liberación Nacional, or Armed Forces of National Liberation — has claimed responsibility for a number of bombings in major U.S. cities. It demands independence for Puerto Rico.

The others sentenced Tuesday were Alfredo Mendez, Elizam Escobar, Ricardo Jimenez, Adolfo Matos, Ida Luz Rodriguez, Dilycia Pagan and Carmen Valentine.

Fort Worth may vote on 'R' movies

FORT WORTH (AP) — Fort Worth residents may get a chance to go to the polls to decide if the city's cable television franchise winner will be permitted to show R-rated movies.

Mayor Pro Tem Dick Newkirk said Tuesday he is considering asking the city council to hold a special election to determine the content of movies shown on cable television.

A similar election was held at Mesquite. Residents of the Dallas suburb turned out in record numbers to reject a proposed ban on R-rated movies. That election involved a hard-fought campaign between groups in favor of the R-rated movies and a church-oriented group opposed to them.

Newkirk made the remark about a possible special election after Morgan Woodruff presented the council with a petition bearing the signatures of 212 persons who want the R-rated movies banned. It was the second such petition presented to city officials.

Inflation, drought taking heavy farm toll

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — A scorching summer heat wave, soaring interest rates, rising production costs and sinking profits have many West Texas farmers ready to throw in the towel.

"Many of our farmers and ranchers are borrowed up to their necks, and there is very little margin for a producer to have a bad year," said Texas Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan Brown in an interview with the San Angelo Standard-Times.

"The level of farm debt is up substantially this year, with much of the increased borrowing due to higher operating costs," he said. "What they need now more than anything are commodity prices that reflect the true value of the products."

A senior vice president at Bank of the Southwest in Amarillo said farm loans for first quarter of 1980 are up 22 percent over last year.

Poor harvests resulting from the Texas heat wave mean much of that debt won't be repaid soon, said Lee Russell, president of the Texas Production Credit Association.

"Normally, by this time of year, milo crops are in and we begin collecting hundreds of thousands of dollars in debts," Russell said. "This year we're collecting very little."

Most farmers have given up on their cotton and milo fields, saying rain from Hurricane Allen was the last hope for their wilting crops and it failed to materialize.

"It's really tough and some farmers have just about had it," Russell said.

"We'll try to stick by them even during their hardest times, but we have certain limits, too," he said. "We can't drop the strong to take care of the weak."

Russell said the current situation is the worst he's seen since the drought of the middle and late 1960s, "but in the drought of the late '60 we didn't have the inflation or high cost of products we have now."

Loans from federal land banks, commercial banks and production credit associations, which account for 90 percent of the credit to farmers, increased by $11.4 billion in the first quarter of this year, Brown said.

He is urging farmers to seek federal assistance from the Small Business Administration, the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, and the Farmers Home Administration.

"In 1980, fuel prices and farm equipment prices — the highest ever — along with dry weather, caused unusual problems," Brown said.

Farm equipment prices are two to three times higher than five years ago and everything has soared in price — except farmers' profits, Russell said.

Prices for cotton and grain are up, but low harvest yields are keeping profits down, he added.

House votes to override Carter veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to override President Carter's veto of a bill raising salaries of Veterans Administration doctors and dentists.

The vote was 401-5, with only a two-thirds majority required. Carter vetoed the legislation last Friday, saying it amounted to $80 million in "unwarranted salary bonuses."

If the Senate — expected to act later Tuesday — follows suit, it will be the second Carter veto overridden. In June, Congress forced into law over a Carter veto legislation repealing the president's proposed 10-cent-a-gallon gasoline "conservation fee."

The Senate vote was expected to be closer than the House margin. Nonetheless, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the bill's prime Senate author, predicted that the Senate would complete the override process.

The bill would increase salaries for Veterans Administration doctors and dentists by up to 38 percent and establish a new VA health care personnel scholarship program to help train VA doctors and nurses.

Sponsors said the legislation is needed to attract more health professionals to work at VA hospitals, where there are 723 physician vacancies.

Texas Marine killed

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — Two Marines, including a Texan, were killed and 13 others injured when a troop-carrying truck collided with a privately owned vehicle driven by another Marine, authorities said.

A Marine spokesman Tuesday identified the dead as 2nd Lt. Thomas A. Mitchell, 24, of Phoenix, Ariz., and Pvt. Richard P. Lloyd, 19, of Grand Prairie, Tex.

Mitchell was driving his pickup truck on Las Pulgas Road when it struck the troop truck, flipping it over, investigators said.

Lloyd was the driver of the 2½-ton truck which had 13 Marines aboard.

Ten of the 13 injured Marines were treated and released from the Naval Regional Medical Center.

Hospitalized were Lance Corp. Lance L. Goble, Lance Corp. Charles R. Ritter, and Pvt. First Class Robert D. Bohannon. They were reported in good to stable condition.

Carter progeny recalls when Legion was fun

WASHINGTON (AP) — Take it from James Earl Carter Jr.: American Legion conventions were more fun for father.

His would have been the salad days of practical jokes and water-filled balloons, of late-night parties with old pals.

And besides, he wasn't president of the United States, trying to convince a skeptical crowd of Legionnaires, now middle-aged and more, that American defenses remain No. 1, the world's strongest arsenal.

Like almost every American politician, Carter is a member of the Legion; for a few moments in Boston last Thursday he put on the campaign hat of Post 2 in Americus, Ga. And like almost every recent president, Carter had his hands more than full as he tried to convince the generally conservative, hawkish veterans that he is doing everything he should to keep U.S. military might unsurpassed.

GOP presidential nominee Ronald Reagan already had been through, drawing repeated cheers as he accused Carter of running a faltering defense program that has left the United States second in strength to the Soviet Union. Reagan said that as president, he would reverse that, and the Legion's 62nd annual convention cheered some more.

The reception for Carter was respectful but reserved. Carter never has been a big man with the veterans. He ran four years ago on a platform that called for $5 billion to $7 billion in defense cuts.

Now he boasts of having increased defense spending, and said in Boston that he'd keep boosting it in a second term. He's for higher military pay, he's for the MX missile, for the Trident submarine.

The American military is unmatched and will stay that way, he said.

Reagan says otherwise, and promised the Legion that he would reverse Carter policies he said have made a shambles of U.S. defenses. That is not a new theme for Reagan, nor is it reserved for Democrats.

Four years ago, challenging President Gerald R. Ford for the Republican nomination, Reagan said that administration had let defenses slip, and claimed that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger had described his role as one of negotiating an acceptable second place situation for the United States.

Reagan's defense slogan now is "peace through strength," a rather ironic echo of 1976. Ford adopted that phrase as a substitute for the word "detente" after Reagan campaign criticism of administration policy toward the Soviet Union.

Carter was applauded for his stand on the draft.

"With great help from the American Legion, we have won the fight for peacetime draft registration. We need the ability to mobilize quickly and effectively and we have shown our resolve to both friend and foe alike."

On that, at least, he is more in tune with the veterans than is Reagan, who has said that draft registration won't save enough mobilization time to make it worth doing.

Consumer mood improves amidst economic tumbles

NEW YORK (AP) — As measured by various researchers, the consumer mood has improved amidst one of the sharpest economic tumbles ever, but hedge your bets on a continuation — of the optimistic mood, that is.

It may continue, say some economic seers, their fingers crossed as they warn that "on the other hand" things may not be as they seem. And another group warns we could be entering phase two of the downturn.

There are clear reasons why consumer optimism grew, chief of them being that some discipline was restored to personal finances: credit buying became restrained; bills were reduced; savings were built.

The personal savings rate, which fell under 3.5 percent late in 1979, is now back to 4.7 percent, far below the 6 percent to 8 percent range that had prevailed since the 1950s but headed in the right direction.

At the same time, interest rates fell and mortgages became available. Some prices stabilized. And forecasts of sharp increases in the jobless rate didn't materialize. So why shouldn't depressed spirits have risen?

The trick now is to maintain the mood, and some economists think only magic could turn the trick. They point to rising interest rates, less mortgage money, higher food prices and forecasts of more unemployment.

Even the Carter administration, which knows as well as anyone that jobs and votes may be synonymous, holds to a jobless forecast of 8.5 percent early next year. And independent economists go as high as 9 percent.

But nobody — optimist or pessimist — seems to have the assurance he displayed a few months ago. The signals, never very clear even to those with advanced degrees, are more confusing than ever.

What, for example, do you make out of the administration's bad news forecast of 8.5 percent when some independent forecasters see nothing of the sort. And when, for example, the "Help Wanted Index" rises?

Well, what's it going to be? During the past few days there have been reports of companies unable to find sufficient skilled workers and reports of automotive and other companies laying off employees.

There have been announcements of higher interest rates and assurances from some housing people, deeply concerned about mortgage availability, that rates will fall again before the end of the year.

Pork chop recipe for a small family

As lifestyles change with trends toward more women working away from home and smaller families, today's meal planner is faced with new challenges. Needed are recipes that are quick and easy and are tailored to provide fewer servings.

Panfried pork chops and vegetables is an exciting new dish that satisfies today's trends deliciously. It features flavorful pork chops, cut 1/2 inch thick or less for quick cooking. The recipe takes a cue from the Chinese in that the vegetables are cut in thin slices so that they, as well as the chops, are table ready in just minutes.

To prepare the fast-paced dinner, the chops are spread with mustard to accent that fine pork flavor, then panfried to brown and cook through. They then are removed to a warm platter and kept warm while Chinese cabbage, celery, green onion, water chestnuts, bean sprouts and pimiento are briefly stir-fried in the pan.

If your family is a twosome, this recipe is sized ideally to your needs. It is flexible, however, and can be double easily for a family of four. Recipes in quantity to match family needs mean less waste and result in good budget savings.

PAN-FRIED PORK CHOPS AND VEGETABLES

4 thin pork loin chops, cut 1/2 inch thick or less
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
2 tablespoons lard or drippings
2 teaspoons cornstarch
1 teaspoon sugar
1/2 cup water
2 tablespoons soy sauce
2 cups bok choy or Chinese

THERE'S NO leftover problem with this quick and easy recipe that provides plenty for two.

cabbage, cut in 1/2 1-inch strips
1/2 cup diagonally sliced celery
1/2 cup sliced green onion
1/2 8-ounce can water chestnuts, drained and sliced
1 cup bean sprouts
1 tablespoon pimiento, cut in 1/2-inch pieces

Spread chops on both sides with mustard. Panfry in hot lard or drippings in large frying-pan at moderate temperature, turning occasionally, 10 to 12 minutes, until done. Do not overcook. Meanwhile, combine cornstarch and sugar in a small saucepan; stir in water and soy sauce. Bring to a boil and cook, stirring constantly until thickened; cook 1 minute. Keep hot. Remove pork chops from frying-pan to warm platter and keep warm. Pour off all but 2 tablespoons drippings. Stir-fry bok choy or Chinese cabbage and celery in hot fat 2 minutes. Add green onion and water chestnuts and stir-fry 2 minutes. Fold in bean sprouts and pimiento and stir-fry until heated through. Pour hot sauce over vegetables and serve with chops. 2 servings of 2 chops each.

Note: Recipe may be doubled for 4 servings.

Because the pork platter combines meat with vegetables, little else is needed to complete the meal. A lettuce and tomato salad and a side dish of rice compliment the meat nicely. For a dessert sure to please, serve slices of pound cake topped with your favorite flavor of frozen yogurt.

Terrorism described in Clancy novel

BLIND PILOT. By Ambrose Clancy. Morrow. 384 Pages. $10.95. This story of terrorism in Ireland deals only lightly with the fight against the British. The main theme is a bitter power struggle pitting the Provisional Irish Republican Army against a pro-communist faction billing itself as the Irish Socialist Army.

Much of the action takes place down south in the Irish Republic. The principal figures in the I.S.A. are a motley group including Terry O'Connor, a young American drawn to Ireland by an urge to express himself through political violence, and Gudrun Bohm, beautiful daughter of a wealthy West German industrialist who got her grounding in terrorism with the Baader-Meinhoff Group.

She went to Ireland after becoming weary of what she considered the aimless violence of the German terrorists. Ireland, she said, at least had a genuine revolution.

The I.S.A. is led by Joseph Walsh a frail, aging intellectual who detests violence but who realizes he must resort to it if his group is to survive.

Ambrose Clancy portrays the characters with objectivity and restraint. Particularly effective is his description of a rebel who turns informer, betraying his former comrades to the authorities. The turncoat is so overcome by what he has done that he undergoes mental torture that finally costs him his sanity.

If the rebels receive fair treatment in this book, so do those on the other side, particularly Garrett Costello, an Irish security chief hunting down I.S.A. members who staged a bloody raid to free Walsh from prison and killed six persons, including a child.

Despite his determination to bring the guerrilla to justice, Costello feels a grudging respect for them and their devotion to a cause.

As the killings multiply, Walsh finally becomes revolted by the senselessness of much of the violence and counts the days until he can turn the command over to someone else and get out.

It is an excellent picture of a savage conflict.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In your answer to KNOWS TOO MUCH, who resented the tell-it-all aunt who had compiled the family history, exposing all the skeletons in the closet, you supported the aunt with, "Facts are facts!"

Come on, Abby. My family learned the hard way. Our family history was written around 1910 and contained all the "facts." That wonderful record, dating back to the 1700s, was so factual that it was "lost" for 70 years because a few grandmas gave birth a few months early.

I am now rewriting and updating our genealogical records, but omitting some current details. Those facts can be sealed in a safety deposit box to be opened 50 years after my death. In a few generations, an illegitimate baby, a suicide, a family feud, a prison record, etc. will be understood as human experiences. Right now, they may be regarded by some as an embarrassment. When those "facts" are revealed, I hope I will not be regarded as a brittle old uncle who placed accuracy and truth above sensitive human emotions. Far too many valuable family historical facts have been lost because at the time they were considered embarrassing.

FAMILY HISTORIAN

DEAR HISTORIAN: You're right. While facts are indeed facts, keeping them buried until all the "horse thieves" are dead seems reasonable and fair.

DEAR ABBY: Is it considered good manners, upon being invited to a party, to ask, "Who else are you having?"

This has happened to me several times, and I am always annoyed but don't know quite how to handle it, so I go ahead and recite the guest list.

When I extend an invitation I always give the details, such as what kind of party it will be, approximately how many are invited, etc., but I don't think I should have to tell who else will be there. What is your opinion?

L.A.

DEAR L.A.: It is not good manners to ask who else will be there. And you're right, you are not obligated to recite the guest list.

DEAR ABBY: I'm almost 18 and have a strange question. My boyfriend and I are on the brink of a breakup. We've simply lost our love — but that's not the problem. We gave each other expensive graduation gifts, and now that we're breaking up, he insists on giving back the gifts. I spent about $100 for his gift, and he spent even more on mine. I want him to keep my gift, because when I gave it to him I loved him. However, he wants me to return the gift he gave me.

What is proper?

GIFT PROBLEM

DEAR PROBLEM: A high school graduation gift is a gift — unlike an engagement ring that carries with it a commitment to marry. Tell Big Spender that you do not want your gift returned, and you want to keep his. Period.

Pyramid clubs: check them out first

A variation on the old chain-letter type of get-rich-quick scheme is sweeping the nation, especially the west coast and the midwest, bilking countless thousands of unsuspecting investors of millions of dollars. The Better Business Bureau warns that the current versions of pyramid buying clubs are illegal in virtually all states in the country.

Pyramid schemes may take many forms, but they can be recognized by three clear warning signals: total reliance on funds from new investors, need for an inexhaustible supply of new investors, and the absence of a profitable product or productive work. In addition, the plans are invariably touted as the chance to "get in on the ground floor" of a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to obtain a very high yield and quick return on an investment opportunity.

In a typical pyramid club, 32 people are asked to buy slots on the bottom row of a pyramid-shaped chart having 16 slots on the second tier, eight on the third, four on the fourth, two on the fifth, and one at the top. Each of the 32 newcomers pays half of the "investment fee" to the person at the top and the other half to one of the 16 players directly above him on the second tier. If the fee is $500, the person on top receives 32 times $250, or $8,000. But $4 more "investors" must be found before the next two people each can collect the same amount.

Some games are played for much higher stakes. In one case in Ohio, organizers boasted that each individual would receive $304,800 through participation, a mathematical impossibility. In order for one person to receive that amount, 4,096 people would have to pay $50 — and in some of the rural counties where the scheme has proliferated, only five of those 4,096 people could ever conceivably receive the promised amount.

Pyramid clubs flourish because most people do not comprehend the astronomical number of new investors required to pay off even those who have reached the second tier. Indeed, in a hypothetical case where a promoter induces six people to join such a club, each of whom brings in an additional six investors per month, by the tenth month the numbers of players would exceed the population of the United States, and by the thirteenth month would more than triple the population of the entire world!

By contrast, there are multi-level selling plans which are not pyramid buying clubs. Some door-to-door companies sell distributorships and provide employment to people who sell products. Reputable firms in this category stress that the only way to success is to sell the products, establish repeat business, and provide the kind of service that keeps customers happy. Pyramid plans, however, use the pretext of selling products to engage in a pyramid or chain distribution approach which concentrates on bringing people into the organization rather than on the sale of a product. Their promoters conduct "opportunity meetings" to convince friends, neighbors and business associates how easy it is to realize fabulous profits by recruiting others, who in turn recruit others, and so on.

Anyone approached to participate in a questionable investment scheme, or who thinks he or she has invested in such a scheme, should check with the Better Business Bureau. Prospective investors also should notify the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) at a regional branch office or at its Investor Services Office, 500 North Capitol Street, Washington, D.C. 20549. Of course, illegal pyramid plans are not likely to be registered as securities with the SEC because such registration requires full disclosure of financial and other information by which the plan's merits can be appraised.

Independent investment advisers, many of whom are registered with the SEC, may also be in a position to assist with information and advice, though usually for a fee. Still another source of information might be a state regulatory authority such as the State Securities Commission, the State Corporation Commission, or the Secretary of State. Even if a particular plan is not registered, these agencies can help potential investors ask the right questions about the proposed deal.

Once money has changed hands in a pyramid transaction, there is virtually no chance of getting it back. But a person who feels he or she has been defrauded should report the experience to the local Better Business Bureau.

"Stars" begins third season Friday

CANYON — To celebrate fall, the theatre in the Palo Duro Canyon will have a new show opening Aug. 29 and running through Sept. 14. It will be the third edition of "Stars in Palo Duro Canyon," dance and song and sound and light exploding and gliding on the stage against the magnificent cliff of the theatre in the canyon, presented by the Lone Star Ballet Inc.

Tractors will form the background for the western number. The use of clowns and their antics will be the basis for another. The fantasy on a child's story this year will be "Beauty and the Beast." And by request, the company will repeat the can-can from the famous Offenbach show about a Paris cafe "Gaiety of Paris" (Gaiety Parisienne).

After the intermission the mood will change. The focus will lift from the stage to the wall of the great canyon and Paul Green's story of the abyss, told in sound and light, will unfold. The great lights will focus on the cave where prehistoric man is chipping flint, and on the battleground where the Indians were finally defeated and their horses killed. And the sounds of the Indian drums, the Spaniards' horses, and the jet-age planes will tell the story. In these moments, free of human diversion, the canyon has a voice.

Guest stars from the ballet companies of New York, Utah and Los Angeles will join the company and will present numbers of their own.

Dancers for the Lone Star Company form the dancing corps for "Texas" which plays in the same theatre in the summers. The artistic director is Neil Hess, whose dancers have been delighting audiences for many years in this region and who has more than 40 students appearing with professional companies. He is working intensively in New York with the eight members of the company who are there this summer, while his assistant, Cora Mueller, does the preliminary preparation of the western number and "Beauty and the Beast" in the canyon. In the last two weeks before the opening, they will begin to put the parts together.

"Stars" plays nightly except Wednesdays. Enjoying a fall diversion in the open air, audience members may sit where they choose. Performances will be at 8 p.m. Dinner will be served each evening by the company which caters for "Texas." There will be several different menus. For information and tickets write "Stars," Box 268, Canyon, Texas 79015, or call 806-655-2181.

Change your thinking about fear

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) - Knowing why you're terrified doesn't always help. You can know and still be unable to face escalators, dogs, height or a thousand other things that don't scare others.

Perceiving that, Dr. Manuel Zane, a psychoanalyst at White Plains Hospital Medical Center in White Plains, N.Y., devised a method in 1971 to help phobic people contend with their phobias.

Doreen Powell, now program director for the hospital's Phobia Clinic, was one of those people.

"I had elevator phobia," she says. "I would not ride alone in an elevator because I was terrified that it might get stuck. After I went through Dr. Zane's first phobia clinic, he asked if I would like to be a helper, so I worked in further clinics, and when people began writing to us, I volunteered to answer letters. Finally, we formed the Phobia Clinic program, and since '71, we've treated perhaps 250 people in our eight-week phobia clinics. They cost $450 and consist of weekly 2 and a half hour sessions."

One of those hours is an actual encounter with each person's phobia "to teach them," she says, "that they don't have to run away from it."

And run they have, in the past, because they couldn't do anything else.

Says Mrs. Powell, "When the average person gets a pain, he or she leaves it alone or sees a doctor if it doesn't go away. The phobic person will have a pain and say, oh, my goodness, it's near my heart, and then build that thought up to, I'm going to have a heart attack any moment. Their feelings become a danger to them, but usually what they fear will happen doesn't."

They don't faint in the plane or scream in a crowd; they do hyperventilate or tremble or experience other anxiety symptoms that are so distressing, they panic and rush to a safe place, usually home.

But if they can change their thinking, which changes how they feel, she says, they can endure what they fear. That's what the Phobia Clinic teaches them to do.

"First," she says, "we teach people to expect and allow their fear to arise, to accept that they have a phobia so they're not frightened by the feeling. For whatever reason, that fearful thought comes automatically. If you compound it, though, anxiety increases and the panic sets in. So we say, OK, you have fear (fir) n. [ME. fer < OE. fer, lit., sudden attack, akin to OHG. fira, ambush, snare, G. (fer), danger, peril; basic sense, "trap" < IE. base **per-*: see PARSE] 1. a feeling of anxiety and agitation caused by the presence or nearness of danger, evil, pain, etc.; timidity; dread; terror; fright; apprehension this first thought. Let it be. You don't have to go beyond it."

Even if they do, however, they can learn to remain in the situation "until they realize they don't faint or throw up. That's because," she says, "we grade fear on a scale of zero to 10. Zero is when you're quite comfortable, 10 is when you must leave the situation and in between you have various stages. You can't do much about a 10, but we help people to see the situation through various levels, and to prevent those levels from going up and to take them down."

To that end, she says, "We teach them to concentrate on the present, to touch or look at something very real so they stop anticipating what will happen. Anticipation is what causes the fear to spiral."

When they do succeed in riding the elevator or passing a dog on the street, at any level of fear, they're taught to appreciate what they've done.

"I don't know why but phobic people are very negative," she says. "A person who can't drive on a thruway might go one exit and you say, how do you feel? 'Great!' and then, but that was a very small exit. So I say, last week you couldn't even look at the thruway and now you've done an exit. Feel good about it."

Finally, she says, "We teach them to expect and allow the phobia to reappear after they've overcome it. You may get better for a few months and one day a level of fear may return. Deal with it the same way you did before."

Recently, Mrs. Powell put these principles into action with a woman who couldn't ride buses. "She was afraid that after the door shut and she couldn't get out, she might scream or pass out. So first we sat and watched buses and talked about them. I said, can you imagine getting on the next bus and deal with the level of fear you're at? Can you reduce the level by concentrating on something real?"

She didn't. She got on the second bus, with Mrs. Powell who says, "We kept some conversation in reserve so we could be involved in the present on the bus and when we got off at the next stop, the woman was absolutely thrilled."

Eventually, she rode farther and farther, but she never would have ridden at all without believing she could get off. "When the patient says she wants to go home, you say, can you stay a little longer, and if she says no, then we leave."

THE WEEDER'S GUIDE

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

This has been a summer of severe heat and drought, and in many areas water has been rationed. Your trees, a vital source of oxygen, shade and wind protection, may have suffered. Even if they survived, they may need years to recover from damage.

An economical and effective way to conserve water while giving trees needed nourishment during difficult — and normal — times is through root feeding. A regular monthly root feeding during the growing season will expedite drought recovery, or prevent damage if done before severe weather conditions occur.

Deep feeding while root systems seek water will cause roots to grow downward. This will establish a stronger tree, less apt to be a pushover for the wind.

With a root feeder you don't have to wait until water seeps down to the vital area. In clay loam, it takes four hours to soak one inch into the ground, notes Ethel Daniels of West Des Moines, Iowa, whose firm (Ross Daniels) has been making root feeders for many years.

A root feeder poked into the ground sends a controlled supply of water and nutrients to the root zone, where it goes to work immediately. The water and specific, formulated food in solution are absorbed by hair-like feeder roots. The nutrients need water to carry them to the feeder roots at the extremities of the root system and about halfway inward to the trunk. Nutrient cartridges are inserted into the hose-attached feeder chamber.

Insert the feeder into the ground in a circle at the extreme outer edge of branch growth. Inserting the feeder at the base or crown of the tree won't help much.

Properly-cured gourds make excellent fall and holiday decorations. Pick them from your garden or buy them when the rinds are hard and the stems have begun to shrivel and they'll stay bright and firm. Don't allow the gourds to be exposed to frost because this will damage the flesh, which will decay rapidly.

Wash gourds in a solution of nonbleaching household disinfectant and dry thoroughly. Discard bruised ones. Cure by hanging gourds in mesh bags in a cool, well-ventilated place not exposed to direct sun or artificial heat.

When the gourds have dried and hardened, coat them with transparent furniture wax. The bright colors of ornamental gourds will last a few months. They look nice in fall flower arrangements, as door decorations, or as a centerpiece in a fruit bowl.

Fancy flounder is recipe for busy chefs

FANCY FLOUNDER
2 pounds flounder or other thick fish fillets
¼ cup margarine or cooking oil

1 teaspoon salt
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
1 can (10½ ounces) condensed cream of shrimp soup
¼ cup half and half or milk
2 tablespoons dry sherry (optional)
¼ teaspoon rosemary
¼ teaspoon paprika
chopped parsley

Place fish in shallow two-quart baking dish. Drizzle two tablespoons melted margarine over fish and sprinkle with salt.

Bake at 350 degrees F. for 25 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork.

Baste with pan juices several times during baking. While fish is baking, cook mushrooms until tender in remaining two tablespoons melted margarine.

Add soup, half and half or milk, sherry, rosemary and paprika. Stir and heat thoroughly. Spoon sauce over fish and sprinkle with parsley. Makes 6 servings.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

August 28, 1980

Opportunity may come your way this coming year regarding something another has started but doesn't have the means or skill to carry out. It could prove to be your cup of tea.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is not a good day to become involved in the financial affairs of pals or to let them become immersed in yours. Either way spells trouble. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Normally you work very well with partners or associates, but today could be an exception. Skip team efforts for the present.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Unless you have a definite plan on how to handle a difficult task today, you're apt to go off on tangents. Draw your blueprint up before going to work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do not speculate or gamble financially today on anything you don't personally control. Banking on others may put you in the red.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Indecision is not one of your characteristics, but today you may not be able to make up your mind on an important issue, thus impeding your progress.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Instead of having faith in your own ideas today, you may put too much stock in those of others and accept thoughts inferior to yours.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be a wary shopper today. Something that may appear to be a bargain at first glance may prove to be anything but that once you purchase it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your mate may require a bit more understanding and patience than usual today. Even though you think you're right, try to appreciate his or her views.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do not let down one who loves you and is counting on you today. Do what needs doing, even if it costs you a degree of inconvenience.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If your budget's a bit out of balance at this time, it may be because of too many frivolous interests. Find ways to trim the fat.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Challenging situations could intimidate you today, although they shouldn't and you might back off before really trying. Be tenacious, not timid.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Rather than assessing things in a logical fashion today, you may let your emotions impair your judgment. Think realistically.

Pampa News Sports Editor

Tri-State Senior Golf Association officers and directors should stand up and take a bow.

Although the Tri-State tournament won't return to Pampa next year, I'm sure the operation of it will not diminish.

Enclosed is a letter from Mr. and Mrs. J.H. Freeland of Lubbock addressed to Association secretary J.R. Brown.

I'm sure it sums up the feelings of the majority of the participants.

It reads:
"Our first year to attend the Tri-State Senior Golf Association Tournament was one of the most enjoyable events I've ever experienced."

"We want to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to all the members who gave so much effort and time to coordinate this very efficiently run tournament."

"We were very pleased to find that God had been given a place in the events through the beautiful invocations, and we were impressed with the warmth, friendliness, and helpfulness of the Association members, Pampa Country Club, and the citizens of Pampa."

The unusual is supposed to happen in the District 3-5A volleyball race this season.

Amarillo Caprock is the pre-season favorite to win the district crown in 1980, not Pampa or Amarillo High as is usually the case.

Either Pampa or Amarillo High have won the district title since the sport was made a part of the University Interscholastic League.

The Longhorns are supposed to win because they've got two starters and two varsity regulars back from an 18-10 club that placed third a year ago.

I just don't see it happening this season.

Pampa has four returning starters and four varsity regulars back from a team that shared the loop crown with Amarillo during the regular season.

Overall, the Harvesters were 24-3 last season and they're already off to a 3-0 start.

The Sandies won't be a slouch even though they only return one starter. There's two others that saw varsity action, plus AHS always seems overloaded with talent coming up through the ranks.

Caprock will be a challenger, but I still look for them to finish third again.

First in war, first in peace, and first in the National Football Conference.

That could be the battle cry for the Washington Redskins, who I favor to win the NFC title.

The Redskins would truly be America's Team by making it to the Super Bowl. What would be more appropriate for a team headquartered in the nation's capitol.

Distance runners from hereabouts may be interested in the third annual Empty Saddle 5,000 Meter Race to be held Sept. 6 in Dalhart.

Flashback: Aug. 1947. Lefthander Al Johnston pitched a two-hitter as the Pampa Oilers blanked Lamesa Lobos, 4-0. First baseman Bob Bailey led Oiler hitting with a single and double in three trips to the plate.

American League roundup

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

George Brett is back in the exclusive '400 Club' again, after practically breaking down the door.

Kansas City's blond bomber continued on his amazing streak with five hits in five at-bats Tuesday night to help the Royals beat the Milwaukee Brewers 7-6 and raise his average to a sizzling .407.

Even enemy fans are applauding his performance.

"It gives you a lot of confidence and makes you feel good knowing the people in Milwaukee are behind me," said Brett after getting several ovations Tuesday night. "People all over want to see me hit .400."

Brett's eighth-inning single gave him seven hits in his last seven official at-bats. He started the game hitting .398, and he has hit safely in 43 of the Royals' 46 games since the All-Star break.

Elsewhere in the American League, Oakland beat New York 3-1. Seattle tripped Baltimore 2-1; Minnesota stopped Cleveland 5-1; Texas blanked Toronto 8-0; Detroit edged Chicago 5-4 and Boston turned back California 5-1.

Brett singled in his first three times at bat, then tipped his cap when he received a standing ovation from many in the crowd of 16,824 at County Stadium after he doubled to right-center leading off the sixth inning.

Brett singled again with two out in the eighth for the first five-hit game of his sensational season and received another standing ovation. An RBI raised Brett's total to 93 in just 91 games so far this year.

Hal McRae also was instrumental in the Royals' offense, knocking in four runs with a triple and a single and Willie Wilson added four hits.

A's 3, Yankees 1
Rick Langford pitched his 19th straight complete game and earned his first career victory over New York, leading Oakland past the Yankees with a seven-hitter.

The Yankees out-hit the A's 7-to-4, but lost a second straight time to the team managed by former New York Manager Billy Martin.

Langford, 14-10, shut out the Yankees after the first inning, retiring the last 10 batters. It was Langford's 22nd complete game in 25 starts this season and he has won 10 of his last 11 games.

Mariners 2, Orioles 1

Bruce Bochte smashed his 10th home run leading off the ninth inning to lift Seattle over Baltimore. Bochte's home run broke up a pitching duel between Floyd Bannister, 7-10, and Baltimore's Scott McGregor, 15-7. Bannister wound up with a four-hitter.

The Orioles scored a run in the fifth inning on Mark Belanger's RBI-single and the Mariners tied it in the sixth on Bochte's sacrifice fly.

It was Seattle's second straight victory over Baltimore, keeping the Orioles one-half game behind the Yankees in the AL East.

Twins 5, Indians 1

Roy Smalley's bases-loaded single keyed a five-run fifth inning and Roger Erickson scattered seven hits in eight innings to pace Minnesota over Cleveland.

Astros belt Cardinals to stay two games up on LA

By PAUL LeBAR
AP Sports Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) — Much to his credit, Joe Niekro made no attempt to muscle up against a pitching opponent who took him downtown for a home run.
Instead, the Houston Astros knuckleballer settled for a single Tuesday night. The result was just as devastating, touching off a six-run rally which included Cesar Cedeno's grand slam and carried the leaders in the National League West to a 7-2 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I just tried to get up and put the ball in play," said Niekro, 34, who two innings earlier yielded a solo homer to Jim Kaat, 5-6.

"He hit a knuckle ball up. He's a pretty good hitter," the Houston hurler said of the 41-year-old Kaat. "I've got a brother that's 41, and he hits home runs. It's not the first time I gave up one to a pitcher, and it probably won't be the last."

Against Niekro, whose older brother Phil pitches for the Atlanta Braves, St. Louis grabbed a 2-1 lead on Kaat's 16th career homer and first in four years.

But in the fifth, the Astros right-hander responded with his 17th hit of the year, a single up the middle. After three more singles in a row produced a 2-2 tie, Cedeno teed off for his ninth homer of the year and first with the bases loaded since 1974.

"The last time I remember anything big was when I hit for the cycle right in this park three years ago," Cedeno said.

"I'll take another any time. I think it was a slow breaking pitch. You have to be patient. He (Kaat) knows how to pitch. Not everything he throws is slow. He just happened to throw a pitch that I could handle."

After Kaat departed, John Urrea restored order to no avail as the Astros, winning an 11th time in 12 games, remained two games ahead of the Los Angeles Dodgers in their division.

Niekro, who started the night with a .262 batting average, said, "I'm hitting better than I'm pitching. Any pitcher can go up there and put the bat on the ball."

Cedeno's grand slam was the first by a Houston hitter since Bob Watson teed off with the bases loaded on Sept. 4, 1977.

It left the Astros with a 71-54 record, duplicating a record they owned 12 months ago before faltering in September. Then, despite Niekro's 21 victories, they finished 1½ games behind the Cincinnati Reds.

Niekro said he anticipates a lively final five weeks, with Los Angeles looming as Houston's chief challenger.

"We're not the (Ron) Ceys and the (Steve) Garveys, but we've got a lot of good ballplayers," he said of his teammates. "We're the (Rafael) Landestoy, the (Terry) Puhls and the (Enos) Cabells. You haven't heard much about them, but you will."

Hearing set for Jenkins

TORONTO (AP) — Texas Rangers pitcher Ferguson Jenkins is scheduled to appear Wednesday in provincial court for a hearing on three counts of possession under the Narcotics Control Act.

The Chatham, Ontario, native was scheduled to pitch Tuesday afternoon against Toronto Blue Jays but was replaced in the starting lineup by Charlie Hough. The Rangers are in town for a three-game series that ends Wednesday.

Jenkins was charged by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, after two ounces of marijuana, four grams of cocaine and two grams of hashish were found in a team bag at Toronto International Airport.

Jenkins did not appear at the stadium Tuesday.

Pat Corrales, manager of the Rangers, said he talked with Jenkins Monday night and the right-handed pitcher told him he wanted to pitch.

Corrales, however, did not make the decision to lift Jenkins from the lineup.

Veck remains hospitalized

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago White Sox President Bill Veck remains hospitalized in fair to good condition in Illinois Masonic Medical Center with respiratory problems.

Veck, 66, was hospitalized Sunday night and has received oxygen in the intensive-care unit since then, a hospital spokesman said. He added that Veck is receiving inhalation therapy and remains in the intensive-care unit.

Eagles favored to win NFC East

DALLAS (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles can no longer draw on the intangibles that drive an underdog.

The Eagles are the ones on the spot this year in the National Football Conference Eastern Division, not the defending champion Dallas Cowboys.

"Based on their performance last year, you would have to pick Philadelphia," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "We have too many question marks and a new quarterback."

National magazines, preseason newspaper articles and other media are putting the favorite role squarely in the lap of Coach Dick Vermeil and his talented Eagles, who compiled the same 11-5 record the Cowboys did last year.

The Cowboys benefited from a favorable tie-breaker situation to earn the NFC East title. Both teams lost in the playoffs.

Dallas players, normally burdened with the role as the critics' choice, are relishing the forecasts of doom for the Cowboys, who lost quarterback Roger Staubach and free safety Cliff Harris to retirement.

"This team worked harder in the offseason than any I've been around," said veteran linebacker D.D. Lewis. "We have a lot to prove. We intend to prove a lot of people wrong."

What the Cowboys have to prove is that Danny White can effectively replace Staubach; that Dennis Thurman or Benny Barnes can play free safety now; that Randy Hughes is lost to surgery; that strong safety Charlie Waters can make a successful comeback from surgery; and that defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones can make a comeback from pro boxing.

The Cowboys have question marks after question mark. Can smallish running back Tony Dorsett carry the load of a Landry-projected 25 to 30 runs per game? Can Aaron Kyle overcome surgery to be a factor at cornerback? Can Mike Hegman or anybody play strongside linebacker with the big play ability of the departed Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson?

The Eagles have exclamation points where the Cowboys have question marks.

Wilbert Montgomery can handle the heavy-duty running for the Eagles. He proved it with 1,515 yards last year. Philadelphia's secondary was the fourth best in the National Football League.

The Eagles have a veteran, confident quarterback in Ron Jaworski.

They are deep and talented at linebacker and that's without counting middle linebacker Bill Bergey, who is back and seems to have conquered knee surgery which kept him out in 1979.

Vermeil tries to downplay any king of the hill notions:

"We're definitely a playoff contender...but with the schedule we have, playing nine games against teams that won nine games or more and another against a team that was 8-8, it will be very hard to prove won-lost-wise that we're a better football team. But I definitely think we will be."

Washington, the New York Giants and the St. Louis Cardinals all possess trouble-making ability in the division with perhaps the Redskins owning the best legitimate chance of passing the Eagles and the Cowboys.

Quarterback Joe Theismann is coming into his own for the Redskins with such excellent receivers as John McDaniel and Ricky Thompson as sure-handed targets.

John Riggins walked out of camp but the Redskins could still be salty overland behind Clarence Harmon and Buddy Hardeman.

Coach Jack Pardee's crew will be pesky if not dominant on defense with such big play makers as strong safety Ken Houston, defensive end Coy Bacon, cornerbacks Lemar Parrish and Joe Lavender and linebacker Brad Dusek.

The Redskins (10-6 in 1979) also get to open the season on a Monday night at home against the Cowboys. Washington is 8-0 in RFK Memorial Stadium on Monday nights.

Landry says Harris will stay retired

DALLAS (AP) — Don't look for retired Cliff Harris to abandon the oil business to play free safety for the Dallas Cowboys.

At least that's the opinion of Coach Tom Landry, who has talked to Harris about the possibility of replacing the injured Randy Hughes, who will miss at least two months following shoulder surgery.

"In a general way, Cliff confirmed what I feel (on the matter)," Landry said Tuesday. "Cliff has given his heart and body to the Cowboys for 10 years and he was regarded as the best in the business."

"Now he has a new career and he likes his job. Of course, he has been bombarded by people wanting to know if he plans to comeback."

Landry said he got the feeling Harris "wants to continue on the road he is on. I would never do anything to make him do something he doesn't want to do...I would not want to jeopardize his new career."

Landry said flatly "There's nothing to be done at this moment."

Pressed about the future, Landry said "I'm not expecting it (Harris' return)."

Landry praised the current free safety, Dennis Thurman, saying "he has played extremely well—as good as any of our defensive backs. The only limitation is his size (170 pounds)."

The Cowboys axed veteran backup fullback Scott Laidlaw Tuesday to make room for rookie fullback Tim Newsome and halfback James Jones, who have made the squad.

"It was difficult to cut a veteran who had contributed to the success of the Cowboys, but we had to do what was best for the team," said Landry.

Jones, a third round draft pick from Mississippi State, and Newsome, a sixth round pick from tiny Winston-Salem College, both have been impressive during training camp.

Landry also said that No. 1 tailback Tony Dorsett, who suffered a bruised thigh last week against Houston, may not play Saturday night in an exhibition game against Pittsburgh in Texas Stadium.

"Dorsett should work this week but I'm not sure he will play," said Landry. "He would play if it was a regular league game. The decision will be made by the doctors. He needs playing time but we also want him ready for next week."

Landry said the Cowboys are looking for a punter and added "there is a chance" quarterback Danny White could punt in the league opener against Washington.

He said that strong safety Charlie Waters, who missed last week's Houston game with a sore knee, will play against the Steelers.

DEFENDING CHAMPION Tracy Austin defeated Anne Smith, 6-2, 7-5, Tuesday night in the first round of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships. Austin, at 17, is the world's top women's player.

Austin, Lloyd win opening rounds

NEW YORK (AP) — It will take more than unusual conditions, a tight arm and the pressure of being the defending champion and No. 1 seed to get Tracy Austin upset.

Austin beat Anne Smith 6-2, 7-5 Tuesday night in the first round of the U.S. Open tennis championships, then described the match as difficult and somewhat bizarre.

"Now that it's over, I'm glad it was tough," said Austin, at 17, the world's top women's player. "You have to get used to the planes flying over. I didn't realize how much you go by the sound of the ball. It's hard to judge how hard it's hit when you don't hear it. It's weird."

Tracy took today off but one of her main challengers, second-seed Martina Navratilova, had an evening match with Lena Sandin of Sweden. The only other seeded women scheduled for today were No. 6 Dianne Fromholtz of Australia, who also played under the lights, against Zina Garrison, and No. 10 Virginia Ruzici of Romania vs. Nina Bohm of Sweden.

Jimmy Connors, rated third, was pitted against Marcel Freeman at night, while in day matches, sixth-seed Gene Mayer played Gianni Occeppo of Italy, seventh-seed Harold Solomon tangled with Kevin Curren of South Africa, No. 10 Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia played Tim Mayotte, No. 12 Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina opposed Bernie Mitton of South Africa, No. 13 Brian Gottfried took on David Carter of Australia, and Victor Amaya, the 16th seed, played Larry Davidson.

Austin noted the difficulty of her portion of the draw in the $654,002 tournament.

"My draw is unbelievable," said the youngest player ever to win the Open. "Anne Smith is a tough first round match. I have Rosie (Casals) next. The others don't have that tough a draw."

Still, Austin must believe she can win again, even if she wouldn't come right out and say it.

"I would never say that," she claimed. "Then everybody would expect me to win and it would be in the papers that Tracy is cocky. No one expected me to win last year; I didn't think I'd win."

"I don't think the pressure bothers me. My arm muscles are a little tight and that might bother me a bit but I didn't swing my hardest tonight."

While Austin struggled a bit against Smith, No. 3 Chris Evert Lloyd barely had a workout in demolishing Kim Sands 6-0, 6-0.

"I would have liked a tougher match than that; there's no way I can tell how I'm playing from a match like that," said Lloyd, who won here from 1975 through 1978. "I think the No. 1 position is up for grabs if Tracy, Martina or I win here. And I'm comfortable as No. 3. The pressure is off my back."

"It was the same at Wimbledon," added Lloyd, a loser in the finals there, where she also was ranked third. "The focus was on No. 1 and No. 2."

Two women's seeds were eliminated in the opening round. No. 7 Greer Stevens of Australia was ousted by Kate Latham 6-4, 7-6 and No. 15 Betty Stove of the Netherlands fell to Anne Hobbs of Britain 6-4, 6-0.

Things went rather routinely among the men. The top two seeds, Bjorn Borg of Sweden and John McEnroe, eased to victory.

Borg, looking for his first U.S. Open title as well as the Grand Slam — he won the French and Wimbledon, each for the fifth time, earlier this year and needs victories here and in the Australian Open to complete the feat — overwhelmed Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-1, 6-4, 6-1. McEnroe, the defending champion, slammed Christophe Roger-Vasselin of France 6-3, 6-4, 6-1. Neither player seemed bothered by injuries that forced each to withdraw from the Canadian Open two weeks ago.

"My knee felt fine," said Borg. "After Toronto, I rested it for a few days and since then, it hasn't bothered me."

McEnroe, playing on heavily taped ankles, said he was conscious of the injury — a sprain.

"It was irritating, especially at the net," he said. "I can't jump around at net. And on serve, I'm afraid of it and not jumping off."

"I have to tape it tight but it won't get any worse."

Other seeded men to advance included No. 4 Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, a 6-0, 6-1, 6-2 winner over Warren Maher of Australia; No. 5 Vitas Gerulaitis, who topped Vince Van Patten 6-3, 6-4, 6-0; eighth-seeded Eddie Dibbs, who saved two match points before he beat Bob Lutz 5-7, 2-6, 7-5, 6-0, 6-2; No. 9 Peter Fleming, with a 6-4, 6-1, 3-6, 6-2 victory over Billy Nealon.

SWC tour Aggie quarterback still learning

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M quarterback Mike Mosley, who grew up running the wishbone offense, had a few things to learn last season when coach Tom Wilson installed the "I" formation — like reading defenses.

"In the wishbone we never had to worry about reading the secondary or the linebackers. We just looked at the tackle and the end," Mosley said Tuesday. "But I got a lot of help from coach (Greg) Davis in the spring, and it's all starting to come together."

"Now I go up to the line and I know where the opening is going to be and where to throw the football."

The development of Mosley as a passer, coupled with his 4.3 speed in the 40-yard dash, gives Wilson cautious optimism.

"Nobody is jumping up and down making cocky predictions. But we've all got a feeling that we can be very competitive," Wilson said. "We have a football team that has character enough to do whatever it wants to do."

Mosley, possibly the fastest quarterback in college football, had always been feared as a runner but never developed as a passer. Wilson says opponents will be unpleasantly surprised this season.

"He's made more progress this year than at any time since he's been at A&M," Wilson said.

"Most of the pro scouts have looked at Mike as a wide receiver or defensive back in the pros because of his speed. But now a few of them are starting to consider him as a quarterback."

During his first three years at A&M, Mosley gained a reputation as a big play quarterback and that also presented a problem.

"My only criticism of Mike has been his lack of consistency," Wilson said. "He may have tried for the big plays too often. Sometimes he made them, sometimes he didn't."

Mosley confirms the criticism. "I'd try to make something happen on every play," he said. "I'd drop back, look at one receiver, and if he wasn't open I'd start trying to get out of there."

"This year I won't be scrambling as much. I'm learning I can dump it off to a back like Johnny (Hector) and he can take it 40 yards on any play."

Mosley's receivers also have noticed a difference.

"I've never seen him stronger than he is this fall," fullback David Hill said. "I don't know what he did in the spring, but he's really come along as a passer. It'll really open up our offense."

Flanker David Scott said, "It's not going to be surprising that we pass the ball more this season. It is going to be something happen on every play of the football."

Rice defense shuffled

HOUSTON (AP) — Rice University's new secondary coach, Tim Marcum, shuffled his starters after Tuesday's preseason football workouts.

Marcum, coach of last year's National Junior College Athletic Association champions at Ranger Junior College, promoted David England of Houston to first-team safety and boosted Odie Mack of Rockdale to starting cornerback.

The Owls, in the process of changing from a passing game to a run-oriented offense this year, are in their second week of fall drills. They open the season Sept. 13 at Clemson.

Head coach Ray Alborn also ordered some position changes on offense, moving starting guard Skip Garret to a backup center position.

Kate Smith's niece accused of getting 'free ride'

NEW YORK (AP) — A North Carolina woman has charged in court that her sister transformed what should have been a dignified and quiet retirement for their aunt, entertainer Kate Smith, into "a horrible disaster."

Suzanne Andron of Raleigh, N.C., asked Tuesday in Manhattan's state Supreme Court that her sister, Kathryn Rodriguez, be removed as a conservator of Miss Smith's estate, contending she was getting "a free ride" from the ailing singer's financial assets.

Mrs. Andron charged that Kathryn Rodriguez and her husband, Guillermo, illegally moved into Miss Smith's three-bedroom house in Raleigh earlier this year.

Miss Smith, a diabetic, went into temporary insulin shock in August 1979 and the court appointed the two sisters and attorney Richard S. Becker as conservators to handle her financial affairs. They sold her apartment here and used the money to build her house in Raleigh.

Miss Mandrell, appearing at the Oregon State Fair here, agreed to do a free performance at the prison after she received several requests from Stilling, chairman of the prison's Jaycee chapter, and a petition signed by nearly all of the institution's 1,500 inmates.

During Tuesday's performance, Stilling presented Miss Mandrell with a hand-carved woodcut of her, carved by inmate Homer Dennison. The statute was inscribed with the words "Oregon State Penitentiary."

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Although Gov. Ella Grasso still suffers from the after-effects of radiation treatment, her doctor says X-rays indicate she's had no recurrence of the cancer that prompted surgery four months ago.

Dr. Joseph N. Russo described the X-ray examination Tuesday as a routine followup to the governor's April 3 hysterectomy, performed to halt uterine cancer. News of the X-rays, taken Sunday at St. Vincent's Medical Center in Bridgeport, surfaced only after a local radio station heard that Mrs. Grasso was at the hospital.

Forum magazine editor Albert Z. Freedman said his publication had planned to use a photo of Miss Harry's face, by photographer Mick Rock, for the cover of its October issue. But the star demanded Forum run a full-length picture by photographer William Coupon, he said.

"She used all kinds of expletives and said she would sue if the switch wasn't made," said John Lombardi, Forum's executive editor. Miss Henry said she'd allow the magazine to use the Rock photo if it paid her $30,000, Lombardi added.

Martians aid space program

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — The Martians are coming to the aid of the U.S. space program.

More precisely, Martian Metals here is donating money to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to help save the Mars Viking project.

The Viking project receives readings of Mars' weather patterns from instrument packages that landed on the planet. The program is in financial straits because NASA is about out of money to pay for processing the data received.

Martian Metals, which manufactures lead figures used in war-gaming and fantasy games, has promised to donate 10 percent of its gross sales for July and August to the project.

A company spokesman said he couldn't give a dollar estimate of the contribution. But an advertisement placed by the company says there's another reason to give money: To stave off interplanetary conflict.

"Your Viking landers are the funniest things we've ever seen," the ad says.

What's a new TV season, anyway?

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Well, it's certain now that there won't be a new television season this September. Or will there be? Come to think of it, what is a television season, anyway?

Used to be, according to those who remember, that the TV season was a period of time, shaped by viewing patterns, during which networks would compete for viewers with original programming. A network would introduce a lineup in the fall, and stick with it until the end of the season, when reruns began.

The season started in mid-September, when kids are back in school and families spend more time in front of the set, and ended in late March, when viewing began to dwindle. Another reason sometimes given for the fall start is that the season was geared to coincide with the automotive industry's season, carmakers being television's biggest advertiser back yonder.

Anyway, the television season was once a real thing, with a proper beginning and end, like a baseball season.

What changed it all was a revolution in television ratings, which enabled the networks to spot and cancel a turkey immediately instead of having to hold onto a show until mid-season.

Brandon Tartikoff, NBC's president of entertainment, said last week that the season is now year-long, since new programs are introduced into a network's schedule these days with no regard to the calendar, creating many miniseasons. However, he said this while introducing the new NBC schedule for the 1980-81 season.

That's the problem. TV folks, observers and principals alike, will tell you there's no such thing as a season anymore. A myth, carried on for tradition's sake.

Yet, the TV season is still very much the heart of the television industry. The intensely watched ratings competition begins and ends with "The Season." And the season, still, begins in September and ends in late March.

Why? Because, says Bob Knight, veteran television analyst for the Daily Variety and traditional pronouncer of the season's boundaries, the only factor remaining of the many factors that once defined a television season is the most important one — viewer patterns.

Even though a network's fall schedule is apt to be completely revamped by Christmas, viewership still begins to rise in September, it still reaches a peak in February, and drops back down in March.

In this peculiar season, this actor-struck season that one network (NBC) says will begin on schedule September 15, but which the other two networks say will only start when the strike is over.

NBC hopes that calling its mixture of repeats, originals, specials and cartoons a genuine new season lineup will make it one in viewers' eyes, thus giving that network a leg up when the actors strike ends. "We're saying the ball game is starting right now," said one NBC executive. "If CBS and ABC want to join in after the third inning, they can't complain about not having any runs."

ABC nudges CBS for top Nielson ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS had seven of the week's 10 most-watched shows, including No. 1 "Circus of the Stars" and back-to-back episodes of "Dukes of Hazzard," but ABC won the prime-time competition for the third week in a month, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

ABC's triumph was by the narrowest of margins — one-tenth of one point. Limited to three of the week's Top 10 shows, including the premiere episode of "Those Amazing Animals" in second place, ABC bounced back with seven of the top 10.

ABC's rating for the week ending Aug. 24 was 15, to 14.9 for CBS and 11.3 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 15 percent of the country's TV-equipped homes were tuned to ABC.

"Those Amazing Animals" was one of two new prime-time series unveiled during the week. The ABC show finished second to CBS' repeat of "Circus of the Stars," which registered a rating of 22.2. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 22.2 percent saw at least part of the show.

The other new show, NBC's "Games People Play," finished the week in 30th place.

As is common this time of the year, the week was dominated by reruns, and only a handful of original shows were even moderately successful in the ratings. "That's My Line" on CBS was No. 35.

Texas briefs

DISASTER COUNTIES

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Federal authorities have declared three more South Texas counties eligible for disaster assistance following Hurricane Allen, Gov. Bill Clements announced Tuesday. The counties are Duval, Kenedy and Jim Hogg.

The federal declaration makes available such assistance as temporary housing, limited home repairs and Small Business Administration low-interest loans.

PETROLEUM TAXES

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Talk about possible new taxes on gas and oil is based on faulty reasoning and could put exploration efforts in a cost-price squeeze, the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association said Tuesday.

L. Frank Pitts, TIPRO president, said representatives of the governor were told last week that TIPRO would fight increased taxes "by concentrating more effort to educate the public about the impact of such taxes on explorers, royalty owners and consumers." Ed Vetter, the governor's special energy advisor told TIPRO directors in a meeting at the Woodlands that studies of state revenues into the year 2000 indicated that oil and gas severance taxes probably would have to be increased because oil and gas production is expected to decline.

Scott Anderson, a staff analyst for TIPRO, said future projections of increased prices should bring more revenue into the state automatically and more than offset projected production decline without new taxes.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate Subcommittee on Consumer Affairs will hold a hearing Sept. 4 on the effect of last year's legislation weakening the state's Consumer Protection Act.

"There was considerable discussion over these amendments prior to their passage in 1979, and the subcommittee hopes to provide all interested parties an opportunity to assess the impact of the Legislature's action," said Sen. Ron Clower, D-Garland, subcommittee chairman.

Clower said the panel also would review the way Attorney General Mark White's office is handling consumer complaints.

White instructed his Consumer Protection Division to turn most routine complaints over to Better Business Bureaus for preliminary investigation and, if possible, resolution.

The subcommittee will meet in the Senate Chamber of the Capitol at 9:30 a.m.

FUNERAL REGULATIONS

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Undertakers may not charge time price differentials when customers prearrange funerals and pay for them over several months or years, Attorney General Mark White held Tuesday.

White said a prearranged funeral contract is not a retail installment transaction, for which time price differentials are allowed.

"Clearly, the initial transaction is not a sale of tangible property; it is but the sale of a privilege to acquire it later," White said.

BEAUTY PAGEANT

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who organized a "Miss Black Texas" beauty pageant that folded for lack of money was indicted Tuesday for theft after allegedly writing checks for the contest on a closed bank account.

Ricky Karl Thurmond, 24, who said he was a law student at Texas Southern University, was charged by a state grand jury after $10,000 in credit cashier's checks from a Houston bank failed to clear a bank in Nacogdoches, Texas.

Thurmond said he organized the pageant because he "thought it would be real uplifting for the black culture."

Several contestants said they spent $350 to enter the contest, but were told after they arrived in Houston that there was not enough money to continue the pageant.

WILD WEST SHOOTING

HOUSTON (AP) — A "Wild West" style shooting incident that left one man dead has been referred to a grand jury, police said Tuesday.

Darrell Eugene Porter, 25, died Monday night after he and a 21-year-old man apparently held a "shoot-out," according to officers.

Detective Vann Knox said the victim and the suspect got into an argument and that Porter left after telling Edwards to "be here when I get back."

Officers said Porter returned with a .22 caliber pistol and the other man apparently drew a pistol and fired when Porter reached into his pocket.

Police said the man gave a statement regarding the shooting.

ALLEN DAMAGES MUSTANG

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Mustang Island State Park suffered the worst damage of any state park from Hurricane Allen, according to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Officials said Tuesday damage from Hurricane Allen was estimated at $659,000, with an additional $133,000 damage done to the water exchange pass near the park.

The park headquarters building and other structures suffered minor damage. However, there was severe damage to roads, parking areas and utility systems when the hurricane pushed 12-foot tides across the park.

The undeveloped beach area on the northeast end of the park remains open to the public but the rest of the park will be closed for some time.

The department also said the Queen Isabella state fishing pier near Port Isabel is closed pending repairs to the utility system and parking areas.

RAILROAD SUIT

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — The Missouri-Pacific Railroad has filed suit against the city government and school district here, claiming the company's property has been placed on the tax rolls at an inflated value.

The railroad asks that the city and school district be prohibited from enforcing their tax bills because "the method used to determine the market value is based on an arbitrary, discriminatory and fundamentally erroneous plan of valuation."
