Somoza assassinated when car explodes

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Former Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza, his driver and bodyguard were killed today by assassins who blew apart his automobile with explosives and automatic weapons fire, U.S. officials here reported.

An Asuncion radio station said a fourth person, unidentified, was also killed.

Some reports, not confirmed immediately, said the exiled leader was attacked by three men who fired a bazooka from a house in central Asuncion as Somoza's Mercedes-Benz passed by. Other reports said the assailants tossed bombs.

"Somoza was killed instantly, and his body is still in the car. The car is really rather blown apart," said Donna Marie Oglesby, a public affairs officer at the U.S. Embassy in Asuncion.

"Somehow bombs were involved. Either the Somoza car had weapons that exploded, or they were bombed as well as bazooka'ed," she said.

An Asuncion radio report said the Nicaraguan's body was "virtually shredded" in the attack.

Paraguayan authorities have not arrested any suspects, and no one claimed responsibility immediately, Mrs. Oglesby said.

Paraguayan radio reports said the explosion occurred at about 10:30 a.m. about eight blocks from the luxurious home Somoza occupied. The site was just two blocks from the U.S. Embassy.

The bodies of Somoza and his two companions, believed to be his chauffeur and a bodyguard, were later taken to a hospital, radio reports said.

The 54-year-old Somoza was overthrown in July 1979 in a revolution led by leftist Sandinista guerrillas. He had been in exile in this South American nation since August 1979, granted asylum by Paraguayan President Alfredo Stroessner.

Former Pampan surrenders to officers on felony charges

A former Pampa resident — wanted on five felony charges — surrendered himself to a Gray County Sheriff's Deputy Tuesday night.

At 10 p.m. Tuesday, Bobby Clarence Crocker, 35, of Sweetwater was arrested by Sheriff's Deputy Kelly Rushing after Crocker walked into the sheriff's office and turned himself in.

Crocker is wanted in Nolan County for four counts of rape of a child and one count of indecency with a child, Rushing said.

Rushing said he did not know what the circumstances were in connection with the felony charges.

Crocker was brought before Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford for arraignment early today, Rushing said. Bond was set by Lunsford at $25,000 — $5,000 for each charge.

Crocker is in the county jail waiting to be transported to the Nolan County Sheriff's Office Thursday, Rushing said.

The deputy said Crocker had been a resident of Pampa for some time before moving to Sweetwater.

New trial for Smith denied by court

A motion for a new trial for Cathy Darlene Smith was denied during an hour-long hearing in 31st District Court Tuesday.

After the denial, Judge Grainger McIlhenny formally sentenced Mrs. Smith to serve from two to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville.

Mrs. Smith, 29, was convicted of shooting her husband, Dennis Lee Smith, 30, at the couple's mobile home at 504 S. Finley on Jan. 13.

On Aug. 22 after a four-day trial, a 10-woman and 2-man jury returned a verdict of voluntary manslaughter in Lipscomb and recommended a sentence of five years in the state penitentiary, non-probated.

Mrs. Smith's attorney, John White of Borger, has filed an appeal to the conviction with the Criminal Court of Appeals in Austin, Assistant District Attorney Penny Burt said.

She is continued on the previous appeal bond of $15,000, Mrs. Burt said.

Brilab trial 'a look at Texas politics'

HOUSTON (AP) — Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Woods told the jury in the Brilab trial of Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton today that secret FBI tapes "will give you an insight into Texas politics and let you hear this crime unfold."

Woods, in opening arguments in the trial of Clayton and Austin attorneys Randall Wood and Donald Ray, said, "You will hear some very interesting tapes. You will hear attorneys Ray and Wood coach L.G. Moore and Joseph Hauser on how to pay money to the speaker of the Texas House of Representatives."

He said that tape recordings also will prove that Clayton had informed Moore, a Deer Park labor leader, that "the insurance thing had been turned around," indicating that an effort would be made to reopen bids on the $76 million a year state insurance contract.

The assistant U.S. attorney said testimony from Russell "Rusty" Kelley, executive assistant to Clayton, would prove that the speaker had lied to FBI agents and had planned on telling the same story to a federal grand jury.

Woods said, "Mr. Kelley is still a loyal employee but he couldn't lie before a grand jury."

The 12 jurors and four alternates were picked Tuesday from an original panel of 104.

One juror is Hispanic, the others Anglo. All of the alternates are women, including one black.

U.S. District Judge Robert O'Connor has ordered that only the jurors' names and occupations would be made available to reporters.

The judge, giving no explanation, refused to reveal ages or hometowns. And he gave an oral order that forbid anyone, "public or press," from contacting "any juror selected in this case."

Gerald Goldstein, a San Antonio lawyer defending Wood, would say only that the jurors ranged in age "from kids under 30 to those over 60."

The jurors are Mary Lou Lesseroux, secretary; Sylvia Solomon, homemaker; Margaret C. Hudock, homemaker; Ronnie R. Rodriguez, welder; Robert J. Blackwell, construction foreman; Sharon Sternadel, clerk; Ruth A. Barton, statistical assistant; Debbie A. Brady, no occupation listed; Tye Yate, Holman, Jr., retired rancher; Charles G. Sivells Jr., retired school superintendent; Lala Mae Messerly, licensed vocational nurse; and James P. Haynes, restaurant manager.

The alternates are Margorie Brown, a supervisor; Peggy M. Burchett, computer and accounting clerk; Dorothy J. Nicholson, clerk; and Mary V. Cook, homemaker.

Goldstein said defense attorneys had examined jurors closely looking "for those with the sophistication needed to sit and listen to the tape recordings, and sophisticated enough to be able to sift through all the news stories preceding the trial."

Each prospective juror was questioned in private, something seldom done in Houston's federal courts. Most of the questioning centered on any possible prejudices developed by the great amount of publicity given the Brilab investigation.

The charges threaten the political future of Clayton who has spent 20 years in the Legislature, served three terms as speaker and once considered running for governor in 1982.

He is accused of accepting a $5,000 bribe, with $500,000 more promised in the future, for his influence in delivering a multimillion-dollar state employees' health insurance contract.

Wood and Ray are accused of conspiring with Moore in an attempt to get Clayton's support for the insurance scheme. Clayton said he received the $5,000 but thought it was a campaign contribution and planned to return it to Moore.

A key prosecution witness will be FBI informant Joseph Hauser, who posed as a representative for a major insurance company and was with Moore and Clayton during that Nov. 8, 1979 meeting when money changed hands.

Hauser taped the conversation and this, along with several other secret recordings, makes up the bulk of the government's case.

Another government witness will be Russell T. "Rusty" Kelley, the speaker's executive assistant.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Woods estimated the government will need about a week and a half to present its case and could be through by Oct. 2.

Defense attorneys indicated they may need up to three weeks.

Sirens tested

Reappraisals of property begin

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

Reappraisal at current market value of the 430-square-mile Pampa Independent School District for ad valorem tax purposes has begun, according to City-School Tax Appraiser Dwayne Walker.

Four city-school tax appraisers will be working in Pampa determining the value of city businesses and residences for the property tax purposes, Walker said.

The appraisers will be basing their judgments on apparent changes to the structure, comparing the appearance of the dwelling with the structure plans, he said.

Walker said if there are changes that need closer inspection, the appraisers will contact the owner before continuing. If the owner is not at home, the appraiser will leave his business card, he said.

Walker emphasized that homeowners feel free to ask for identification if they are approached by someone saying he is an appraiser.

"If you have any doubt about someone looking around your home, ask for identification," he said. "We'll be happy to show you our business cards. Don't hesitate to ask for a driver's license if you feel you need additional identification."

The appraisers are in the process of getting identification cards with photographs, Walker said.

Troy Sloan Tax Appraisal Service of Spearman will begin their appraisal of the school district's rural property within the next two weeks, Walker said.

Both reappraisal projects will be completed by April 1, he said. "It is important for the people to know what we are doing and why," Walker said.

The reappraisal is necessary for establishing an equity of appraised values of real estate in the district and to be certain each property is appraised at the current market value, he said.

"The current appraisals made by the city of Pampa are four years old. With inflation rising at nearly 20 percent every year, they're just not valid," he said.

"We are going by the market values that we determined existed in Pampa at the first of this year," Walker said.

The appraisers are working on the basis of three construction types — masonry, brick veneer and frame, he said.

200 tickets remain for Army concert

Only 210 tickets remain for Sunday's free United States Army Field Band and Chorus Concert to be conducted at M. K. Brown Auditorium, according to Pampa Chamber of Commerce manager Floyd Sackett.

Persons holding tickets for the concert must be at the auditorium by 2:45 p.m. Sunday to be guaranteed a seat, Sackett said.

Pampa Mayor Ray Thompson will officially represent Pampa to welcome the members of the United States Army Field Band and Chorus on behalf of the citizens of Pampa.

A native of Prestonburg, Ky., Major Clark began his musical studies at the age of 12 and earned a Bachelor of Arts and Master of Arts degrees from Marshall College in Huntington, W. Va. A music educator for six years prior to entering active duty, Major Clark taught instrumental music in Kentucky and Ohio and was the bandmaster of the Kentucky National Guard Band.

Prior to his current assignment, he served as commandant of the United States Army Element, School of Music in Norfolk, Va.

First Lieutenant Gary F. Lamb was assigned to the United States Army Field Band as director of the Soldiers' Chorus in January 1980.

Lieutenant Lamb is a native of Montana and has been a musician since the age of six. He is an accomplished vocalist and also plays trumpet.

Lieutenant Lamb received a Master of Music degree in performance from the University of Nebraska.

Stewardess doused with gasoline in hijacking

MIAMI (AP) — A jetliner about to land at Columbia, S.C., with 111 people on board was hijacked to Havana today by two Cubans who doused a stewardess with a liquid and threatened to set her on fire, officials said.

The Delta Air Lines Boeing 727, the 10th airliner hijacked to Cuba in just over five weeks, landed safely in Miami this morning after Cuban authorities took the air pirates into custody at Havana's Jose Marti Airport.

Delta spokesman William Jackson said in Atlanta the jet left Havana shortly after 7 a.m. EDT. It landed at Miami International Airport at 8:07 a.m.

The jet, Flight 470, was en route from Atlanta to Columbia when it was hijacked. It refueled in Columbia after taxiing to a remote spot of the airport while families of the passengers waited for word of their relatives.

Jack Baxter, manager of public services at the Columbia Metropolitan Airport, said "indications were the hijackers doused one flight attendant and the area immediately around where they were sitting with a substance they said was gasoline."

Baxter said one hijacker then "stood up with a cigarette lighter and threatened to set the attendant on fire, or words to that effect." Jackson, asked about reports that bottled gasoline was splashed on a stewardess, refused comment.

"We have decided to make no comment about that," he said. "The least amount of publicity about the method used by the hijackers, the better. We don't want other people getting ideas."

It also was not determined immediately whether the Cubans were refugees who had come to the United States in the "Freedom Flotilla" boatlift.

Another Delta spokesman in Atlanta, Jim Ewing, said the plane was in the Columbia area when the flight captain called at about 1:30 a.m. EDT to report that the jet was being hijacked.

He said the captain gave no further details.

The plane took off from Columbia at 3:27 a.m. EDT and landed safely in Havana at 5:19 a.m., Ewing said. A Delta spokesman said the plane was likely to remain in Cuba for four to six hours.

"We have no word that the passengers have been harmed, so we assume they are all right," Ewing said.

Jack Barker, spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration, said the plane had 104 passengers and seven crew members aboard.

The hijacking came less than 24 hours after an announcement by the Communist Party newspaper Granma in Havana said that "those who abandon the fatherland have no return: they went on a one-way trip."

The announcement warned hijackers of "drastic penal measures" or "return to the United States to be judged in that country."

The hijacking attempt was the tenth to succeed since Aug. 10. Most of the hijackings were blamed on homesick Cuban refugees and containers of gasoline were commonly the weapons used.

While the plane was on the ground in Columbia, the hijackers remained in the passenger cabin and messages were relayed to the pilot by flight attendants.

Delta regional marketing director Jerry McSwain said some cargo was unloaded but no passengers disembarked.

A handful of people were waiting passengers on the flight.

Doris Shadrick of Lexington said she had been waiting for her husband. "You don't expect these things to happen here," she said.

Lila Fisher, of Newberry, said she was waiting for her brother, Burt Fisher, 27, who returning from Texas.

"It was real odd, because he said he was going to be hijacked before he left for Dallas," she said.

Italians opposing Pope's drive against liberal abortion laws

By SAMUEL KOO
 Associated Press Writer
 VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II's campaign to overturn Italy's liberal abortion law has provoked angry personal attacks on the pontiff and rekindled the bitter controversy between the Roman Catholic Church and Italy's secular political parties.
 "The pope's attack (on abortion) is a challenge to the sovereignty of our nation," declared Loris Fortuna, a Socialist member of Parliament, who announced the formation of an inter-party group to "protect" the two-year-old abortion law.
 Enacted over vigorous opposition by the church and the church-backed Christian Democratic Party, the law permits free abortions on demand for women aged 18 or over in the first 90 days of pregnancy. Nearly 200,000 legal abortions were reported in Italy last year.
 John Paul, in an effort to build momentum for a Vatican conference of more than 200 bishops on the role of modern Christian family starting Sept. 26, has mounted new strong attacks on abortion and artificial means of birth control.

"Maternity is sacred," the pope declared during a visit to Siena last Sunday, standing next to Cardinal Giovanni Benelli of Florence, a leader of Italy's anti-abortion movement. "How is it possible to speak of human rights when the life of the unborn is threatened?"
 In a visit to a Rome suburb last week, the pope condemned "attacks on fecundity itself with means that human and Christian ethics must consider illicit."
 "What is euphemistically called 'interruption of pregnancy' cannot be judged from a viewpoint of authentic humaneness by anything except moral laws, conscience," the pope said on another occasion.
 His remarks immediately evoked sharp criticism of the popular Polish-born pontiff from a wide spectrum of liberal and left-wing quarters of Italian politics.
 "This is the same pope who demands absolute respect for sovereignty when it comes to his native Poland," said Parliament member Fortuna, referring to John Paul's appeals during the recent Polish labor crisis.

Korean leader sentenced to hang

By K.C. HWANG
 Associated Press Writer
 SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Dissident leader Kim Dae-jung today was sentenced to be hanged after a military court ignored U.S. and Japanese pleas and convicted him of attempting to overthrow the South Korean government.
 Twenty-three of Kim's followers received prison terms ranging from two to 20 years. The verdicts automatically go to a higher military court for review and then to the nation's supreme court.
 When the sentences were read, some of the relatives of the defendants in the courtroom began singing the national anthem. Plainclothes police quickly pushed them from the room.
 President Chun Doo-hwan, South Korea's new military strongman, could commute Kim's death sentence in deference to the United States, which stated its firm opposition to the death sentence for Kim.
 But informed sources say the Carter administration has little influence with Chun's regime despite its dependence on U.S. aid and trade and the 40,000 GIs here who help guard against an attack from communist North Korea.
 Both the U.S. and Japanese governments have conveyed their opposition to a death sentence for Kim to Chun's regime over the past few months, and today Japan's foreign minister, Masayoshi Ito, told a Tokyo news conference the sentence was "very undesirable" and would "complicate and make difficult" Japan's relations with the Seoul government. He said Japan will continue doing what it can to discourage the sentence from being carried out.
 The verdict against Kim said his "activities sympathizing with North Korea's puppet line, instigating students and creating national and social confusion cannot be forgiven."

In his defense summary Saturday, Kim proclaimed his innocence, declared he never tried to seize power through insurrection, and said he had tried to spur democratic reforms and was not in sympathy with North Korea's regime.
 Kim was convicted of conspiring to overthrow the government by organizing and financing anti-government demonstrations in Seoul and in the southern city of Kwangju in May. At least 260 people were killed in the Kwangju uprising.
 Thirteen of Kim's followers were accused of joining in or helping plan the May riots, and 10 others were charged with illegal political activity.
 Kim was an outspoken foe of the late President Park Chung-hee and continued his attacks on the new martial-law government installed after Park's assassination Oct. 26.
 Kim ran a close second to Park in the 1971 presidential election, and after his defeat

Swiss education advocate dead

By DORIAN FALK
 Associated Press Writer
 GENEVA (AP) — Jean Piaget, the Swiss psychologist whose theories on how children learn helped revolutionize modern education, is dead at the age of 84.
 "The goal of education is not to increase the amount of knowledge, but to create the possibilities for a child to invent and discover, to create men who are capable of doing new things," he once said.
 Piaget died Tuesday of undisclosed causes at the Geneva hospital where he had been for 10 days. He is survived by three children.
 Hailed by many as one of the century's great thinkers, Piaget produced more than 50 books and monographs over 60 years of research into the process by which a child's mind becomes that of an adult. He never got a formal degree in psychology, but his work was often compared to Sigmund Freud's in its influence on the study of human intelligence.
 At various times he held the posts of president of the Swiss Society of Psychology, co-editor of the Revue Suisse de Psychologie, director of the International Office of Education and member of the executive council of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. Aided by the Rockefeller Foundation, he established the International Center of Genetic Epistemology in Geneva in 1955.
 His genetic approach to learning has been considered his greatest contribution to experimental psychology. Piaget believed the tendency toward rational development is innate, but must be developed through a child's interaction with his surroundings.

 He described a child's mental development through three stages. His theories engendered teaching methods that treated the student as much more than a receptacle for information provided by the teacher. The emphasis shifted to the student's discovery of knowledge, with the teacher as a guide.
 His most famous writings, originally published in French, included "Judgment and Reasoning in the Child," "The Moral Judgment of the Child," "Language and Thought of the Child," and "The Origins of Intelligence in Children."
 He himself was a prodigious child. Born Aug. 9, 1896 in Neuchatel, Switzerland he displayed a unique interest in zoology and published an article on an albino sparrow at age 10. By the time he was 15, he had gained an international reputation as an expert on mollusks. He received a doctorate in zoology from the University of Neuchatel in 1918 before turning his attention to psychology and education.
 In private, the tall, pipe-smoking, beret-topped Piaget was unconventional and kept away from the media. The study in his villa outside Geneva was strewn with books and publications, an apparent morass of papers he allowed no one to tidy. To Piaget, it was no mere clutter. "I have a sense of order that helps me find everything," he said.

No charges filed in bomb - mailing case

DALLAS (AP) — No charges will be filed against the woman who mailed a package containing a crude explosive device that ignited while being unloaded at the U.S. Postal Service Dallas bulk mail center, according to a postal official.
 Postal inspector Henry Herrera said Tuesday the U.S. attorney's office refused to accept charges against the woman. She mailed the package for a friend who had recently been discharged from the U.S. Coast Guard, he said.
 "As far as we can tell, there was no criminal intent," Herrera said. "Apparently the person who mailed the package did not know she was breaking the law."
 The Dallas police bomb squad disarmed the explosive device, made from an old clock, a clock radio wired to a speaker and three military-type flares.
 The package also contained a booklet opened to a photo of Max Cleland, the triple-amputee director of the U.S. Veteran's Association.
 A portion of one of the phosphorus flares ignited after the package was jarred while being unloaded from a Houston delivery truck, inspectors said. No one was injured but three other packages were damaged.

Wreck victim in Amarillo hospital

A Perryton man remains in an Amarillo hospital today suffering from head injuries he received in a motorcycle accident at the intersection of Hobart and Kentucky streets Monday night.
 The injured motorcyclist — identified by Pampa police as Edward Samuel McMillen, 33, 1609 Jefferson, Perryton — is listed in satisfactory condition at St. Anthony's Hospital of Amarillo early today.
 According to police reports, the mishap occurred at 9:10 p.m. Monday, when McMillen lost control of his 1980 Harley-Davidson and slid approximately 60 feet into the intersection of Hobart and Kentucky.
 McMillen was reportedly attempting to stop for a traffic signal at the intersection at the time of the accident, police said.
 The injured man was taken to Highland General Hospital Emergency Room. After initial treatment, he was transferred to the Amarillo hospital.
 McMillen was not wearing a helmet when the mishap occurred, police said.

"Red tide" devastating shellfish

By PETER JACKSON
 Associated Press Writer
 AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Gov. Joseph E. Brennan says the worst "red tide" invasion in years already has cost Maine's shellfish industry more than $4 million and he is asking President Carter to declare the state's picturesque coastline a disaster area.
 Red tide, a microscopic organism which can turn water red and sicken people who eat contaminated seafood, forced the state on Labor Day to ban all harvesting of clams, mussels and similar shellfish. Crabs, lobsters and scallops were not affected.
 Brennan said there was no way to predict how long the ban would last. Recent tests indicated that levels of shellfish poisoning were still too high to allow clams and mussels to be harvested, he said.

Maine has 3,500 miles of coastline due to the hundreds of bays, inlets and harbors that pock its scenic shores.
 Its 3,000 licensed clam diggers and mussel harvesters are out of work in the final weeks of the shellfish season's period of high demand, as are 600 employees of shellfish dealers.
 Disaster status, requested by Brennan on Tuesday, would qualify dealers and retailers for low-interest loans and would make diggers eligible for as much as $80 a week in special federal unemployment benefits. Because they are self-employed, diggers do not qualify for regular unemployment benefits.
 The shut-down came at a particularly bad time for the diggers, who were hoping to take advantage of warm weather while it lasted.

DHR to continue in food programs

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Human Resources has backtracked and decided to continue operating two programs that feed poor children.
 About 95,000 children are affected by the Summer Feeding Program and the Child Care Food Program.
 Board Chairman Hilmar Moore said the June 11 decision to turn administration of the program over to the U.S. Department of Agriculture resulted from a desire to reduce the number of employees.
 "I think we made a mistake here," Moore said just before the board voted unanimously Tuesday to cancel the decision and continue running the two programs.

About a dozen persons, some of whom were ready to beg the board to continue administering the program, applauded when Moore announced the new decision.
 More than 27 persons spoke for the programs at a hearing last week, saying the Department of Human Resources was doing a better job than the USDA would.
 The USDA's food program administrator in Texas, H.H. Pulliam, agreed.
 The Child Care Food Program provides nutritious meals to poor children in day care centers, Head Start programs and the like. The Summer Feeding Program "fills in the gaps for the school lunch program in the summer," Moore said.

Insurance Board refuses auto rate hike

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Insurance Board stunned insurance companies and delighted consumer groups Tuesday by refusing to raise Texans' automobile rates.

A 3-0 vote, with Chairman Bill Daves taking the lead, left auto insurance rates at 1979 levels pending an advisory committee study of the entire rate-making process.

It could be as long as a year before the board again considers a rate increase.

At a July hearing, insurance companies requested increases averaging 28 percent while the board staff recommended an 18.9 percent rate hike.

Rates were last raised on Aug. 30, 1979, when the board ordered an 8.9 percent increase.

Daves said that while inflation has made it costlier for insurance companies to settle accident claims, it also has resulted in a higher return on their investments.

"I think this shows a great deal of courage in light of the special interest pressure that can be asserted against regulators. Chairman Daves took a courageous approach, and consumers will benefit," said Jim Boyle, executive director of the Texas Consumers Association.

Dan B. Flemming of Amarillo, president of the Independent Insurance Agents of Texas, also praised the decision and said it would "help reinforce the board's posture as one of the best insurance regulatory bodies in the nation."

David Irons, attorney for the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office, appeared stunned by the board's action.

He said it would be inappropriate to comment until he and the TAIISO board had studied Daves' statement. A lawsuit is possible, he said.

Using unpublished figures from Best's Aggregates and Averages, Daves said stockholder-owned insurance companies showed 1979 after-taxes profits averaging 28.45 percent on equity, 7.85 percent on assets and 15.20 percent on earned premiums.

Insurance companies' net investment income has risen from $1.6 billion in 1970 to $7.9 billion, he said.

"It appears that although inflation has increased the cost of automobiles, automobile repairs and replacements, it has also increased interest rates on those investment assets representing policyholders' reserves," Daves said.

Comparisons are difficult, but a recent study by an investment house showed another regulated industry, electric utilities, earns about 15 percent on equity in Texas.

Rate-making consists essentially of predicting on the basis of past experience how many accidents Texans will have and how much they will cost, then setting premiums high enough to pay for them.

Subcommittee skeptical of witnesses memories

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, testified today that he did not compromise U.S. intelligence by discussing an intercepted cable with the president's brother Billy.

"As (CIA Director) Stansfield Turner is reported to have testified, our intelligence was not compromised in my admonishing call to Billy Carter," Brzezinski told a special Senate Judiciary subcommittee investigating the relationship between Billy and the radical North African nation of Libya.

Brzezinski said in a written report to the panel on Aug. 4 that he learned in late March that Billy was trying to arrange an oil deal with Libya and that he telephoned the president's brother the same day to tell him this could be damaging to the president.

He said Billy replied that he had a right to make a living and that Brzezinski had no business interfering in his affairs.

Henry "Randy" Coleman, a close associate of Billy, has told the panel that when Brzezinski brought up the matter, Billy realized that meant the U.S. government had intercepted one of his cables to Libya involving the unsuccessful effort to become a broker for Libyan crude oil on behalf of the Charter Oil Co. of Jacksonville, Fla.

Brzezinski has since confirmed that the call was based on intelligence information he got from Turner, leading some senators on the subcommittee to suggest that Brzezinski's call to Billy may have shown a laxity in the handling of sensitive intelligence data.

But Brzezinski testified today: "I considered, and to this day consider, it my duty to be careful but not passive with respect to such information," he testified today.

The national security aide was the only witness called to appear before the Senate panel today in what might be the final public hearing in its investigation.

On Tuesday, the panel heard from Phillip J. Wise Jr., the White House appointments secretary, who denied tipping off the president's brother about a Justice Department investigation, but was unable to recall details of several telephone calls to Billy Carter and his associates.

Wise said neither he nor his secretary recalled being told by Joel Lisker, head of the Justice Department's foreign agents registration unit, that a grand jury might be called to investigate Billy Carter's failure to register.

LaSalle County citizens oppose prison

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Residents near a LaSalle County tract being considered for a state prison are gearing up for the kind of fight that enabled Starr County residents to keep a prison out of their community.

A site selection team from the State Board of Corrections, which gave in to local opposition in Starr County in May, visited an 8,000-acre site near Cotulla last week.

Several county officials and business leaders say the prison would give the local economy a needed boost, but some residents are circling anti-prison petitions.

"We're a small town. We leave our keys in our cars. I was raised in San Antonio and I know about living with fear. That's why we live in a small town now," Mary Jo Hinojosa said in a Tuesday telephone interview. She lives on a ranch across a road from the site.

Prison Board Member Harry Whittington of Austin has said several sites are still under consideration. The site selection team also has visited Clarksville in Northeast Texas.

The Cotulla anti-prison forces started their drive with a full-page ad in the local newspaper. It asked questions similar to those posed by the Starr County residents.

"Would you be able to sleep well at night knowing a prison containing 2,000 criminals is just outside the Cotulla city limits?" the ad said. "Did you know that all types of prisoners will be jailed here, including murderers, rapists, homosexuals and dope addicts?"

"Will the prison furnish extra security for the school children who must ride daily on bus routes which circle the prison? They would be targets for hostage plans..."

Mrs. Hinojosa said a petition drive has already collected 600 anti-prison signatures.

"A lot of people say it's just the little old widows here who don't want it. That's not true," she said.

Cheap gas rejected

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Bill Hill figured selling gasoline for 99 cents a gallon in these inflationary times was the perfect gimmick.

But it seems to be backfiring.

Four hours each day Hill's Diamond Shamrock station here pumps gasoline for under a dollar. Hill said he figured the publicity would bring in new customers.

For four hours every day, Bill Hill sells regular gasoline for 99 cents a gallon.

The problem is that not many people are buying it.

Hill's Diamond Shamrock station in Irving will sell gas for under a dollar until Sept. 30, he said. He hopes the price will get him publicity and bring in new customers.

Not only does Hill undersell the other stations, but he and his attendants pump the gas themselves, clean windshields and check water and oil in efforts to keep the new customers.

Hill usually sells regular gas at $1.08 a gallon.

"Saturday we lost $135 but I look at it as an advertising expense," he said.

Hill's gimmick has one catch. He doesn't tell customers which four hours a day the gas will be 99 cents, although it's usually 4 to 8 p.m. to catch rush-hour customers.

It seems that with the lower price and the short lines, cars should be lined up at the pumps.

Woman convicted in death hoax plot

EL PASO (AP) — An El Paso woman convicted of helping fake her husband's death five years ago in Mexico and then collecting life insurance and government benefits could be sentenced to 22 years in prison and fined $30,000.

Jurors deliberated nearly two hours Tuesday before convicting Kathelyn Van Drais Miller on four counts of conspiracy and fraud. Her husband, Clifford Jerome

Miller, faces trial on similar charges.

U.S. District Judge Harry Lee Hudspeeth scheduled sentencing for Oct. 9.

Federal prosecutors said Mrs. Miller knew her husband was still alive when she applied for death benefits.

The government said she collected more than $19,000 from the Standard Insurance Co. of Portland, Ore., and cheated the Social Security Administration out of death benefits.

The government said she also tried unsuccessfully to sue Metropolitan Insurance Co. of New York for $50,000, but did not collect. However, she gave sworn testimony while suing Metropolitan in July of 1977 that was used in her criminal trial.

Mrs. Miller, in her early 50s, said her husband died of a heart attack while the two were traveling in northern Mexico.

Agreement reached on key issue in actors union contract dispute

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

HOLLY WOOD (AP) — Negotiators for striking actors reached tentative agreement with film and television producers early today on the main contract issue in the eight-week walkout, but other issues remained to be settled, a federal mediator said.

The agreement on residual payments to actors for programs shown on pay TV and in video cassettes was reached after 15 hours of talks, which ended at 6 a.m. EDT, said federal mediator Tim O'Sullivan.

Sullivan declined to disclose details of the agreement until leaders of the two actors' unions — the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists — could discuss it with their members.

"There are a number of issues which still remain to be settled, including wage scales," O'Sullivan said. "The unions will wait until the other matters are settled and then vote on the total package."

Talks were to resume later in the day.

SAG spokeswoman Kim Fellner declined to discuss the tentative agreement, but said, "there's still many economic areas on the table" yet to be settled.

"While we've done something for the future of the industry," she said, "we still need to do something for the present of the industry."

Until Tuesday, actors were said to want 54 percent of gross receipts from pay TV after a program has been exhibited nine days within a year. Producers were offering 4.25 percent of the gross after 13 days of showings within a year.

Some 67,000 members of the two unions walked out July 21, virtually halting production of new films and television shows.

Former district attorney awaits verdict in trial

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Former Hidalgo County District Attorney Oscar McInnis is still waiting for the verdict in his federal perjury trial.

Jurors went home Tuesday afternoon after deliberating all day and for two hours on Monday.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela dismissed the jury at 5 p.m. Tuesday and told them to be back at 9:30 a.m. today.

McInnis is accused of lying to a federal grand jury in 1978 when he denied knowing about an alleged plot to murder the ex-husband of his co-defendant, Patricia Parada. He faces up to 25 years in prison and a $25,000 fine for the total of five counts against him.

The 64-year-old former prosecutor has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity and diminished mental capacity.

Police shootings object of panel review in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Two recent South Dallas shootings in which police officers killed black suspects will be reviewed by the newly-impaneled Dallas Police Advisory Committee.

The committee will decide whether to investigate the deaths of Milton Brown Jr. and Patricia Henry after meeting with police chief Glen King Friday in a closed session.

"Chief King has been asked to bring us all of the material that has been gathered in connection with the two incidents," committee chairman Jay Patterson said. "We fully intend to request that an additional investigation be conducted if we don't feel that the reports are adequate."

Brown died Saturday night from gunshot wounds he received Aug. 27 following a high-speed chase involving Police Officer Scott Lane.

OPINION PAGE

Mixing politics and diplomacy

One is hard put to fathom just why Leonard Woodcock felt compelled to jump into politics with both feet by blasting Gov. Reagan's purported China policy. You need a little context to understand just how radical a break with diplomatic tradition is involved here.

Not only is it considered unusual and just a little improper for an ambassador (who is supposed to be representing the whole United States in theory, though most are selected politically) to be so blatantly partisan as Woodcock has been, but this was the first press conference Woodcock has called since he became U.S. ambassador to China 20 months ago. Apparently no facet of Sino-American relations has been as important as the need to denounce Reagan.

The State Department back in Washington also had an interesting reaction. It could have adopted a noncommittal attitude toward Woodcock's statement, noting that as an American citizen he has the right of free speech. Instead, State Department spokesman John Trattner said: "Woodcock is our ambassador to the People's Republic of China and is empowered to express the views of his government. As I read it, they (Woodcock's statements) are our views."

One can only speculate in awe at the combination of fear and arrogance that led to this shattering of protocol. The fiction is that ambassadors and the State Department are supposed to be acting in the interests of the United States as a whole rather than on behalf of the administration that happens to be in power. The ideal is sometimes more honored in the breach than in the practice, but the tradition is strong enough that it is rare for an ambassador to plunge into partisan politics.

How will the interests of the United States have been affected if Gov. Reagan is elected president following such a statement by our ambassador to China? How are the interests of the United States affected when said ambassador urges us to vote not on the basis of what Americans prefer as policy, but on how a foreign power is likely to react to a perceived policy shift?

One can only wonder about the desperation that led to such a break with diplomatic tradition. Woodcock must be terribly afraid that Reagan is going to win. Whether his breach will do irreparable damage to the somewhat shaken tradition that the foreign service represents the interests of the United States as a whole rather than the interests of a party or faction remains to be seen.

The U.S. car co.

It is not terribly surprising to learn that the Chrysler Corp., thanks to the $1.5 billion federal loan guarantee recently voted by Congress, has become little more than a subsidiary of the government to which it had looked for salvation.

Ever since the time the first federal dollar was ever voted for anything, bureaucrats have lain in wait to supervise the spending of it. Sometimes they don't succeed, more often they do, and in Chrysler's case they seem to have triumphed in a singular and rather complete fashion.

Chrysler had wanted the money mainly as a way of staving off bankruptcy until it gets a chance to market its new line of "K" cars in the fall. But almost every production decision and marketing strategy connected with the "K" cars has come under the close supervision of the Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board.

Every purchase agreement of more than $10 million must submit to the board for approval. The board, in turn, before approving any expenditure, must conduct an extensive study of what the money is going for and issue detailed "findings" in accordance with the rules laid down by Congress. And it doesn't end there. When Chrysler, for example, issued a revised operating plan in April, the board raised questions about the new "K" car pricing policy and "advised" an alternative course of action.

The company had assumed that despite the scaled-down body size of the "K" cars customers would continue to demand traditional options, such as power steering and air-conditioning, and devised a pricing schedule to take all that into account. But the federal consultants were quite certain that buyers would no longer be as interested in such options as in the past, since their primary concern would be to save fuel, and that therefore Chrysler's figures on anticipated profits were much too optimistic.

And so it goes. It may be overstating the case to suggest, as Sen. William Proxmire did, that the government has managed to "acquire a car company and is now running it."

But who can say where it will end? Based on the experience so far, it is not unthinkable to suppose that very soon now we will be seeing "K" car television spots written and produced under the auspices of the federal government.

And what, one wonders, will Ford and General Motors have to say about that? Will they argue perhaps that Washington has provided their competitors with an unfair trade advantage?

Possibly it will not come to that. Yet one thing seems clear: the federal loan guarantee, a bad idea in the beginning, has suddenly begun to seem a whole lot worse.

By William Steif

Suppose you wanted to build a house and an agency of your state or local government said: "OK, we'll issue a tax-exempt bond, build the house you want and rent it to you on a long-term lease much more cheaply than you can do it yourself. And at the end of the lease you'll own the property."

Would you agree? Of course you would. But you, the individual, can't operate that way. You've got to go to a bank or savings and loan and negotiate your loan at commercial rates, which now run around 12 percent. If you could knock that down to 8 percent, which is roughly what tax-exempt bonds now pay (because the bond owners don't pay taxes on them), your cost of living in that built-to-order home would be a lot lower. That's exactly how some smart businesses are operating today.

Result: Merchants in places like Dalles, Ore., Hamilton, Mont., and Ottawa, Ohio, are about to see a decline in their main-street business. K-Mart is planning to move into new "shopping malls" on the outskirts of those towns, just as it's done in 40 to 50 other locations in the past three years.

K-Mart isn't the only company doing this. Holiday Inns, Burger Kings, McDonald's, Pontiac dealers, medical clinics, law offices and dozens of other businesses are using a financial instrument known as Industrial Development Bonds to get cheap money. The tax-exempt bonds, known as IDBs, are proliferating like crazy in the 20 states that permit them.

The idea behind IDBs, when they first sprang up, was that they could revitalize rundown areas, permitting state and local agencies to lure labor-intensive manufacturing back to places with high unemployment. Abuses began in the mid-1960s, and Congress cracked down, limiting IDBs to no more than $5 million per issue in 1968. But in the 1970s the limit was raised to $12 million per bond issue, and as interest rates soared in the late 1970s, the IDBs looked better and better. One lawyer's estimate is that a company involved in a $1 million, 20-year IDB can save $300,000.

Early Congressional Budget Office research found that IDBs to finance private industrial and commercial investments more than doubled from 1978 to 1979. In Ohio, for example, there were 19 IDBs totaling $26.9 million in 1978; for 1979 there were 42 issues totaling $54.6 million marketed. Banks just buy these things and tuck them away. The CBO, now doing an intensive inquiry, figures there is a considerable federal tax loss. In short, your federal taxes are making up for the losses engendered by IDBs.

There's another loss, too, as small merchants around the country can testify. A slick new shopping mall opens outside of town, and folks migrate there to shop. The downtown declines, merchants go out of business and in some cases towns are forced to the wall because state and local laws preclude paying taxes on municipally or county-owned property.

Now a new element enters the situation. The National Committee of Small-Issue IDBs, which will testify to the House Ways and Means Committee soon, wants the permissible limit on IDBs raised from $10 million to $15 million per issue. The national committee says its goal is "to preserve and increase the effectiveness of small-issue IDBs as capital-forming mechanisms and as tools for creating new jobs."

Smooth words, indeed, but who's behind the national committee? Well, there are investment bankers E.F. Hutton and Goldman, Sachs, the Marmon Group, Inc., which represents K-Mart, and such giants as Monsanto Chemical, B.F. Goodrich, IT&T, Ralston Purina, Hoover Universal and Anheuser-Busch. Among "development organizations" on the national committee are the Indiana Department of Commerce, the Tennessee Development Council, the Kentucky Development Finance Authority and the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs.

All these people are hot to push cheap money — for themselves. But the question is: Why shouldn't they compete in the free enterprise marketplace, which they so often and so loudly tout, like everyone else?

Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., asks the same question. He's on the House Ways and Means Committee, and you might drop him a note and tell him you think the IDBs are a ripoff, subverting small business. His address is Room 2206, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515. While you're at it, you might also drop a note to the Ways and Means chairman, Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., Room 1136, Longworth House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515.

Your letters can help keep free enterprise fair.

Today in history

Today is Wednesday, Sept. 17, the 261st day of 1980. There are 105 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Sept. 17, 1787, the Constitution of the United States was completed and signed by a majority of delegates attending the constitutional convention in Philadelphia.

High stakes in the next election

by Paul Harvey

Focus of the present political campaign, as in any national election, is the presidency.

From an historical point of view, however, the tilt of the Congress could be even more significant.

For example: The next president will make two — and may make as many as five — appointments to the United States Supreme Court.

The long-range impact of any philosophical shift on the High Court cannot be overestimated.

As one for instance, since the Earl Warren Court — on balance — Supreme Court decisions have gone against lawmen in favor of the lawless. And that is just one for instance.

Many presidents have recognized that their greatest impact on history results from their appointments to the High Court.

However, with a majority of Democrats in the Senate, Sen. Ted Kennedy remains chairman of the powerful Judiciary Committee which must approve any Supreme Court appointments.

Either Carter or Reagan would have a hard time getting any but the most liberal nominees past that committee.

Unless, of course, the next election should reverse the majority in Congress and the chairmanships of those powerful committees.

Twenty-four Democratic senators are seeking re-elections. Ten would have to be replaced with Republicans to alter the balance of power in the Senate.

And there is another fascinating possibility:

Kennedy could be the next president of the United States. Even Gerald Ford could be.

Here's how:
If the Anderson candidacy should prevent either front-runner from winning a majority, then the choice would be left to the House half of Congress — and anything could happen.

In the presidential election of 1824, Andrew Jackson received the largest number of popular and electoral votes. However, Henry Clay and William Crawford — running against him — kept him from getting the necessary majority.

The election was decided in the House, where congressmen turned thumbs down on any of those three and selected, instead, John Quincy Adams.

This fall, though Anderson has no chance whatever of winning the presidency, he could keep Carter or Reagan from winning it.

I've always thought it a shame that the stay-at-home vote is so frequently decisive.

"I can't agree with either of those guys," is often the explanation used as justification for not voting at all.

We do not expect to agree on 100 percent of everything with our own spouses — yet we somehow imagine that our elected leaders must reflect our personal point of view precisely.

What we should instead consider is the track record and the philosophical bent of the available candidates — for the White House and for the houses of Congress.

And the latter in many ways is more important.

The Abbie Hoffman story

By Don Graft

Well, Abbie Hoffman is back among us. Although as it turns out, he never really was away. The clown prince of the radical '60s spent his underground '70s crusading for the environment, testifying before congressional committees, being appointed to federal commissions, tending his tomato garden in full view of upstate New York neighbors and getting acquainted with middle age. The founder of the Youth International Party is now 43.

It just goes to show where a little plastic surgery and a lot of gall can get you. And as if all this weren't enough to keep a fugitive busy, Abbie also found time to keep in touch with the family. He got together regularly with brother Jack, often at baseball games. It seems he has an establishment weakness — he's a Red Sox fan.

For sister Phyllis, the wife of a Mexican government official, there was less fun in the rendezvous game. On one attempt, she had to shake her bodyguards before meeting at a theater.

It was a harrowing experience, she confided in a UPI report: "No one (in Mexico) goes to the movies by themselves... 'Past', a man whispers to me. I didn't know if the guy was coming on to me or if it was Abbie. I was so scared that I left."

Throughout the six underground years, Abbie was also available for interviews at the drop of a newspaper's suggestion to his numerous aboveground contacts. In one of the last, a pre-surrender outpouring to the Washington Post, he made it clear that the nose might be new but otherwise he was the same old Abbie:

"I'm very very upset about the myth of the figure from the '60s... who went cynical in the '70s... I want people to know I'm not coming back embracing the system... I'm coming back fighting..."

If he says so. Still, fighting spirit seems to have less to do with his surrender to New York state authorities on narcotics and bail-jumping charges than sense of timing.

As Abbie sees it, the times they have a-changed. Vietnam is still a sensitive but no longer an inflamed issue. There is hysteria about drugs. And three years of dickering at a distance on surrender conditions apparently have given him some hope of drawing less than the 15 years to life conviction could bring.

Also he has a new book out, ripe for promotion.

Talk about your full lives. And with so much of it still ahead of him, one wonders what Abbie can possibly do for an encore.

Maybe his book provides a clue. It's titled "Soon to Become a Major Motion Picture."

Some enchanted distance

There's news from Libya and for a change it is not connected with Billy Carter.

That country's live-wire leader, Col. Muammar Qaddafi, has called for union with Syria, which has accepted in principle. Never mind that they are separated by a thousand miles of Mediterranean.

The immediate motivation is to strengthen the hard-liners front against Israel, but the impulse is in a long Arab tradition. Syria, as a matter of fact, has just broken off an engagement with Iraq and a few decades back it was actually united with Egypt. That was the United Arab Republic, called off when it turned out to be more Egyptian than Arab.

As for the Egyptians, since the break up with Syria they have talked union with Sudan and that same Libya now courting the Syrians.

As they work out, Arab unions are a lot like Hollywood marriages — eventually everyone gets around to trying everyone else.

In the present instance, Qaddafi's proposal was not unconditional. Should union with Syria not go through, he vowed to carry the battle to Israel alone: "I shall go to Upper Galilee as a commando myself with my rifle."

That might explain the quick Syrian acceptance, overlooking practical experience in these matters. Damascus may find it preferable to keep Qaddafi safely distant in Tripoli in nominal partnership rather than risk his running around with a loaded weapon near its own border.

There are some situations that make even a Billy Carter connection look good.

Names in the news

DICK VAN DYKE

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Actor-comedian Dick Van Dyke has had many proud moments, but when he watched his son, Chris, being sworn in as Marion County's new district attorney, it was "the proudest day of my life."

The elder Van Dyke, accompanied by his wife, Marjorie, said Tuesday his son was no chip off the old block. "Thank God, no," he said. "He's superior in every way."

Chris Van Dyke, 30, assumed the office from Gary Gortmaker, who resigned Monday after nearly 16 years in office. Gortmaker was convicted Aug. 5 on charges of theft and misconduct in office. He awaits sentencing.

NEW YORK (AP) — For playwright Edward Albee's new leading woman, 13 years old is over the hill.

Albee is searching for a "nymphet" to play Lolita on Broadway, but at age 13-and-under most of the aspiring nymphet who applied Tuesday didn't know much about Vladimir Nabokov's child-woman.

"I know it's about a little girl who falls in love with an older man," said Kerri Green, 13.

Albee's script is based on Nabokov's novel about Humbert Humbert, a 30-year-old professor who is sexually obsessed by his 11-year-old stepdaughter.

Albee said the search for his Lolita could continue up to a week before rehearsals begin Dec. 14. He'll know his nymphet, he said, "by a chemical-electric reaction I'll have."

VISTA, Calif. (AP) — The judge who handed a prison term to Paul Kelly, grandson of famed circus clown Emmett Kelly, said the 22-year-old was a "product of an uncaring family."

Kelly received the maximum sentences of 25 years to life for first-degree murder and 15 years to life for second-degree murder. He pleaded guilty in the bludgeon killings of a 68-year-old retired minister last Nov. 15 and a 22-year-old Beverly Hills antique dealer.

Superior Court Judge Michael Greer declined a plea for hospitalization Tuesday and left it up to the California Board of Prison Terms to decide whether the terms are carried out consecutively or concurrently.

Kelly's grandfather and his father, Emmett Kelly Jr., were both famed circus clowns and he periodically dressed in their "Weary Willie" suit and makeup in hopes of following with the act.

"You are partly a victim," Judge Greer told him, "a victim of your upbringing and the product of an uncaring family."

It was not known what prompted the judge's remarks.

Lower grades report heavy alien enrollment

DALLAS (AP) — Three-quarters of the illegal alien children registering for school in Dallas have enrolled in kindergarten or the first three grades, school officials said.

That concentration in lower grade levels has surprised school officials, but Deputy Associate Superintendent Robby Collins said it should make it easier to educate the children.

"An even spread of students through all grade levels would have caused more manpower and equipment problems," he said.

"With a concentration of students in lower grades, we can just go ahead and create new classes where they're needed," he said.

Dallas school officials estimate 1,000 undocumented children will enroll by the end of the week.

Almost 700 students had been admitted by Tuesday. The pace of enrollment slowed Tuesday when only 80 students enrolled. But officials speculated some parents may have held off registering Tuesday to celebrate Mexican Independence Day.

Collins speculated that older students may be working or apprehensive that school records may be used by immigration officials.

Attorneys for the school district Tuesday filed a motion of appeal of the federal court decision to open Texas schools to undocumented children.

Officials said the district was not reneging on its promise not to appeal an order requiring Dallas to open its schools to the alien children. Officials said the move was a routine action to get records of the Dallas case to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which will consider an appeal of the overall Texas case.

Repeat of last year's high fuel bills appears unlikely

NEW YORK (AP) — Heating your home will cost more this winter, but industry spokesmen and analysts say conservation and the world oil glut make it unlikely there will be a repeat of last year's sizable price increases for home heating oil.

The cost of natural gas, which accounts for just more than half of U.S. residential heating needs, will rise moderately into 1981, as will the prices of fuel oil and electricity, which each supply about 20 percent of home-heating fuel, the analysts and spokesmen say.

Propane, coal and wood are used to heat most other homes.

However, heating-fuel price increases could escalate if the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, whose ministers are meeting today in Vienna, Austria, announces sharp production cutbacks or major oil price increases for the next several months. Sources at the conference said that was unlikely.

OPEC prices jumped 132 percent between January 1979 and last June, spurring a worldwide reduction in oil use that pushed inventories of gasoline, heating oil and other products to such high levels that the petroleum price spiral slowed sharply. Helping last year's conservation efforts was warm winter weather in much of the Northern Hemisphere. Analysts say conservation could continue to play a major role in slowing the climb of U.S. home-heating bills despite expected gains in fuel costs.

An analysis of oil consumption and weather data by one major petroleum company indicated home heating oil customers apparently turned thermostats back to an average setting of 60 to 62 degrees in early 1980 as the price of their fuel jumped nearly 60 percent from a year earlier to 97 cents a gallon.

A spokesman for the company asked that it remain unidentified.

Here is the outlook for the coming winter's gas, fuel-oil and electricity costs:

—NATURAL GAS: The Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 has allowed for inflation adjustments in the price of about 60 percent of U.S. natural gas output.

The act and other factors will push the average retail price of 1,000 cubic feet of gas to $4 by the end of 1980, up 9.6 percent from 1979.

Man's testimony reveals he was murder 'hit man'

DALLAS (AP) — A self-confessed "hit man" testified in federal court here that he strangled a New Orleans man for $4,000.

Larry "The Arm" Girard, 33, gave the testimony Tuesday in the murder conspiracy trial of Robert C. Thetford, a Dallas theater operator.

Thetford is being tried on charges that he conspired to have Larry Jones of New Orleans murdered because Thetford thought Jones was aiding an investigation into Thetford's income tax returns.

Charles "Carl" Musick, a former employe of Thetford, has testified that Thetford told him to hire a "hit man" to kill Jones.

Girard testified that Musick paid him $4,000 to kill Jones.

Girard, who is serving a 25-year prison term for armed robbery and has never been charged in Jones' slaying, reportedly told members of his family that he became a devout born-again Christian while in prison and wanted to confess to the slaying.

After driving to New Orleans from Dallas, Girard said, he and Musick forced Jones to get into a car and they drove westward.

Girard said Musick was driving, Jones was sitting in the front seat and he was in the back seat.

"We crossed a bridge, a very long bridge. I was supposed to take care of the hit. But I kept stalling and stalling," Girard testified. "Carl kept looking at me through the rear-view mirror and making impatient facial gestures. Finally I did it."

Girard testified that he wrapped a nylon dog leash around Jones' neck and held it tight while Jones struggled to get free, writhed in agony and finally died.

The man testified that Musick stopped the car and helped him dump Jones' body off a bridge on a state highway about 15 miles west of New Orleans. He said the two men divided $400 they found in Jones' pockets.

Girard quoted Musick as telling him "R.C. will be happy."

Lawyers for Thetford contend that in past statements to them that Musick told Girard "Bob C. will be happy." The defense lawyers contend that "Bob C." is the code name for a business rival of Thetford's.

The defense contends it was the "Bob C." who had Musick hire Girard for the slaying instead of their client. He admitted telling the defense lawyers earlier that he said "Bob C." but claimed it was a mistake.

In earlier testimony, Justice Department lawyer Douglas McMillan established that Thetford was known to some people as "R.C."

Girard also testified that he came to Dallas later and was given a special welcome at a bar owned by Thetford.

"They treated me exceptionally well. There was no charge for anything."

Officials halt outside burning

LUFKIN (AP) — Arsonists and careless burning have placed Texas' timberlands in extreme danger and forced Texas Forest Service officials to order a halt to all outside burning in 19 northeast Texas counties.

TFS spokesman Lou Sloat said relentless heat and a lack of rainfall have created dangerously dry conditions that will persist until the area receives adequate rainfall.

Sloat said a high fire danger alert has been issued for the remainder of the East Texas area.

"We expect this condition to continue in all areas of East Texas until we receive adequate rainfall," he said. "Parts of them haven't had adequate rainfall since the 28th of July—that's 40 days."

Since the July 4th, 1,415 forest fires have burned 14,434 acres, he said.

"The major cause is careless trash burning, but we're still having trouble with arsonists," Sloat said.

Chain store serves large-size women

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) - Great taste for food; no taste for clothes. That's how large-size manufacturers traditionally viewed their large-size woman customer, says Maureen Callahan, national fashion director for Lane Bryant Stores, which serves "special size" women.

"As a result," she says, "heavy women were given body covers, not clothes, so 80 years ago we got into the business of changing that."

These days, the chain's 200 stores are trying to keep step with a different customer. She's still heavy and 5-foot-5 or under, but she's the "contemporary" woman: in college or teaching it; working at making a home or out working to pay for one; dining with her husband or her client; skiing, swimming, dancing and doing all the other things other women do.

Except that other women can roam entire department stores to choose clothes for whatever they're doing. The large woman, says Ms. Callahan, "usually finds one token large-size department tucked behind the ladies' room which indicates the store is saying, yes, we know you're out there and we have to have clothes for you, but we're not thrilled about it."

Lane Bryant is, if not thrilled, conscientious and caring, she says. "Through our JP Collection (the initials are meaningless), we attempt to provide the contemporary large-size customer with everything she needs," to feel in place and at ease, whatever she's doing.

"In our JP Collection, suit dressing is of prime consideration to start a wardrobe," she says, "and this year's suits are mismatched."

They're also timeless and classic which other people are calling "preppie" but which Ms. Callahan prefers not to because of the collegiate connotation.

In any case, to mis-match a suit for a large-size woman, you do it the same way you do it for anyone else. Start with a navy wool flannel classic box blazer with slash pockets and slightly padded shoulders (not extended because the customer doesn't need added bulk) and put it with a tartan plaid pleated wool blend skirt, for $130. A regular pleated skirt with regular set-in waistband because, she says, "We felt an elasticized waist would ruin the mood of the outfit and there was no reason for it. This will lay right and be flattering to a large-size woman."

Now, ruffles she must have to be au courant, for instance on a white crinkle crepe de chine polyester blouse ($30) in the form of a jabot at the throat. But she can wear the neckline open or closed for comfort. "Ruffles are very important as trims on dresses and treatments on blouses," says Ms. Callahan, "but if someone has a double chin and a Pierrot collar will make her uncomfortable, we have to scale it down." To underscore the ruffles she's comfortable in, the customer can put on a soft gray, collarless, unconstructed jacket, and a pink, white and soft gray wool blend "release" pleated skirt. "The pleats fall flat at the stomach and the skirt has lots of swing and movement," she says. At night, since "large women also want to feel feminine and sexy," she can achieve that in a slinky polyester black cocktail dress with camisole top, elasticized waist, and side slit, that

NEW COLORATIONS set the tone for the classic look for fall. Here, a heather tweed trouser with front pleats ($36), a pink oxford shirt with white Peter Pan collar edged in lace ($24), coordinated with azalea V-neck cable-knit pullover ($40). To tie it all together a gray flannel unconstructed jacket ($68) casually flung over the shoulder. All from Lane Bryant's "JP Collection."

THE FASHION focus in holiday clothes for the large-size woman is on understated simplicity and elegant dressmaker details. Typifying the look is this refined rayon crepe shift dress ($49) in a flattering shade of fuchsia, side-pleated and topped off at the shoulder with matching fabric-covered buttons. comes with a short sleeve, peplum jacket decorated with "cracked ice" glitter spray ($60). A cocktail dress any other woman might wear. A woman, say, 5-foot-9 and taller with no weight problem — just a problem finding sleeves and pant legs long enough, and jackets that hit her where they should. Well, says Ms. Callahan, "We also serve that customer whose need is proportion, not styling so much." And even when "styling" dictates escalating hems, she says, "We give her hems that reach below the knee. After all, that woman can always find clothes that are short."

Mystery is slow reading

WHO TOOK TOBY RINALDI? By Gregory McDonald. Putnam, 284 Pages. $9.95.

Who took Toby Rinaldi? Who cares? That's the feeling the reader gets after reading only a short way into Gregory McDonald's novel about a boy and a bad guy with a heart of gold.

The boy is Toby, precocious 8-year-old son of Teddy and Christina Rinaldi. The elder Rinaldi is ambassador to the United Nations for an unnamed Mideast nation. Determined to keep war from breaking out in the Mideast, Rinaldi's leaders order him to present a resolution in the U.N. that will preserve peace. This keeps Rinaldi pretty busy. He neglects wife and son.

Wife, peeved, goes off the West Coast to rest up. Toby is to join her for a short vacation that will culminate in a visit to a giant amusement park that the boy feels he must see or his life won't be complete.

The plot begins: Toby is taken to the airport and it is assumed he has boarded the plane to California. But when the plane lands, the distraught mother waiting at the airport sees no Toby emerge. Thus, who took Toby?

A bad guy, of course. Only he really isn't so bad. His name is Spike, he's done lots of time and he has a violent streak. But Toby, remember he's precocious, manages to tame Spike. But not Spike's bosses, who are some of the silliest villains to appear in a novel.

They don't want Rinaldi senior to put that resolution through the U.N. They want Toby as a hostage to make sure the resolution doesn't pass. There's lots of chasing about, violence, blood spilled and that sort of thing before the book winds — very slowly — to its end.

Tech museum to host Ranch Day

LUBBOCK — Self-sufficiency was a passport for ranchers in early America, and visitors at the 11th annual Ranch Day Saturday will see how those pioneers made do.

Ranch Day, sponsored by the Ranching Heritage Association, takes place on the 12-acre Ranching Heritage Center of The Museum of Texas Tech University. Admission is free to the public. There will be a charge for the barbecue luncheon.

The annual meeting of the Ranching Heritage Association, and the election of officers, will take place immediately following lunch. President Lauro F. Cavazos of Texas Tech University will be guest speaker. Ed Wilkes of KRLB Radio, Lubbock, will be master of ceremonies.

The Ranching Heritage Center, with its score of authentically restored ranching structures, depicts the early history of ranching in America.

On Ranch Day there will be activity in all the buildings so visitors can learn how wool is carded and spun, how rawhide is used to make a chair seat, how tack was cleaned and a variety of other crafts used to make life more livable on the frontier.

Volunteers who will demonstrate will know their 19th century ranch crafts. Betty Mills, Museum curator of costumes and textiles, has copied designs from pillow shams in The Museum collection so that volunteers will be embroidering authentic designs of the past century. They will even be using the turkey red embroidery floss so popular in that time. The embroidery group will be working in the Box and Strip House at the center.

Quilters at Las Escarbas, the large field stone house on the XIT Ranch, will be using a quilting frame from The Museum collection to practice one of the arts that is regaining popularity.

So that even the smells will be authentic, William C. Green, conservator of history at The Museum, has researched traditional German food, and a volunteer Ranch Day occupant of Hedwigs Hill, the double log cabin, will be pickling cabbage and cucumbers.

Tasting and canning and cooking will be other activities so visitors can experience the sights and sounds, as well as the odors, of the past.

Docent-Volunteer Guild members who will be participating include Gladys Martin, Maude Blomshield, John Blomshield, Murriel Landers, Sidney Landers, Mary Ripple, Jan Kimbley, Madge Webster, Sue Nan Merrill, Dodie Patterson, Verna Pistole, Martha Spears and Lena Waters.

Members of the Quilters' Guild serving as volunteers for the event include Margaret Jordan, Nell Peel, Donna Locke, Connie Luger, Mildred Franklin, Iva Barder and Carrie Lou Holtzman. Community volunteers Ali e French, Melvin French and Larry McDonald also will be participating.

In addition to museum staff, teachers for the volunteers have been Madge Webster and T.J. Pearson.

Folksingers will furnish music throughout the day. The site will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 1:30-4:30 p.m.

Handicapped gain access to Yosemite

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) — Sitting in his wheelchair, talking about ways of opening wilderness areas to the disabled, Yosemite National Park Ranger Dennis Almay has a rare insight into the problem he's trying to eliminate.

In many respects, the challenges of Almay's job as the park's "access coordinator" are as high as the peaks around him. Almay says his dream is "to make the whole park accessible" to the disabled visitor.

The dream is close to reality since the passage of Public Law 504 which requires public areas to be open to all people, including the blind, deaf and orthopedically disabled.

"The disabled person has the same desires, emotions and wants as an ordinary person," Almay explains. "The thing they don't have is the choice normal people do."

"The disabled person pays taxes and owns this park as much as anyone. If disabled people come here, they should at least have a choice as to what they can do as a park visitor."

Almay has produced a nine-page guide for the disabled which details all park facilities available for the handicapped. Transportation is the central issue here. Right now, the only way for a disabled person to get to Yosemite is by private car. Even Almay commutes from the park's employee housing in nearby El Portal in his specially equipped van.

"Things are starting to happen," he says. "By 1982, the park's shuttle buses should be totally accessible. The Curry Co. (the park's concessionaire) has agreed to look into the feasibility of long-line buses to see if they can get that needed transportation into the park."

With long-range buses, the disabled could get to the park from Fresno Air Terminal or the Amtrak depot at Merced in the San Joaquin Valley southwest of here.

Ultimately, Almay hopes to see access for the disabled to all buildings, trails, campgrounds and other natural areas.

"I would like to see some type of wilderness program for the disabled, perhaps a place where disabled groups could come as close to the wilderness as possible with a minimum of assistance," Almay says.

He wants park trails classified according to the level of difficulty they pose for the disabled. He already has marked his maps with the paved trails of Yosemite where the disabled can enjoy the same natural treasures most vacationers here take for granted.

Almay was afflicted by multiple sclerosis five years ago while in the Air Force. He joined the Park Service last year as a volunteer, working on a survey of trails for the disabled in the high country around Tuolumne Meadows.

Familiarity with fuse box saves time

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

One of the first things you should do when you purchase a house is to have someone show you the fuse box or circuit breaker panel.

If the builder's electrician or previous owner has done the proper thing, there will be some kind of diagram or chart showing which fuse or circuit breaker takes care of which area of the house. If no such diagram or chart exists and no one can assist you in making one, which is more often the case than not, you should make one of your own.

This may not seem so important at the time, but you'll find out what a nuisance it can be when a fuse blows or a circuit breaker trips and you don't know which branch circuit it controls.

In preparing a diagram to give you this knowledge, first draw a rough sketch of the inside of the fuse box or the circuit breaker panel. Mark each fuse or breaker by number. To open the fuse box or breaker container, you usually have to turn off the main switch. But if, for some reason, you don't have to do this, be certain that the main switch is off. Now carefully remove one of the fuses or turn one of the circuit breakers to the off position. Put back the main switch. This means electricity is coming into the house, but one of the circuits is not operating.

Next, test each fixture and outlet. When a fixture or outlet does not work, write that down. You then will have a list of all the non-working fixtures and outlets. Next to each item, put the number of the fuse or breaker that had been removed or turned off. This list establishes which fixtures and outlets are controlled by the single turned-off branch circuit.

From there on, it is simply a matter of repeating the testing with each fuse and breaker.

The diagram and other information can be taped near the fuse box or breaker panel. You'll be glad you went through this routine when you discover how much time and aggravation it saves you when a branch circuit goes off.

There are variations of electrical connections, but the large majority of houses are protected by the round screw-in fuses or circuit breakers. Should you have some other ar-rangment, such as cartridge fuses, you should have an electrician explain to you how things should be handled in case of an electrical malfunction.

A tripped breaker or blown fuse generally is caused by an overloaded circuit or a short. Try to find the trouble before you restore the electricity to the circuit. If a fuse or breaker continues to blow or trip and you can't find the trouble, call an electrician.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a registered Republican considering marriage to a Democrat who is every bit as loyal to his political party as I am to mine.

We love each other and have music, religion and many other things in common, but I wonder if marriage between us could ever work out. Have any studies been conducted that might give me an idea of what our chances are? If anyone knows, you do, Abby.

GRATEFUL G.O.P.

DEAR GRATEFUL: I know of no studies concerning mixed marriages between elephants and donkeys, but I personally know of very few successful unions between these diversely different political animals. Should you elect to team up with a donkey, I suggest you keep your trunk packed.

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago I took an inexpensive pin from a blouse in a department store. I didn't pay for it. I was even brash enough to wear it for years!

Even though I "got away with it," in the long run I was the loser because it has been on my conscience ever since. The regrets years later are not worth a moment of possession, and that single act could have led to taking bigger things.

Enclosed is a $10 bill. Please donate it to your favorite charity, Abby. It cannot repay for what I have done, but please tell your young readers that stealing anything — regardless of how cheap it is — leaves its mark on a person, even if she is never caught.

NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: I appreciate your desire to clear your conscience and give others the benefit of your experience, but sending me a $10 bill for my favorite charity is not appropriate restitution for the stolen article. Had you told me the name and location of the store, I would have sent the money to them. Perhaps it's not too late.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter you received from the dad whose 15-year-old son hid racy girlie magazines in his room, I decided to share the way I handled the same problem with our three-teen-age sons.

When I find a magazine of that type in their rooms, I remove it and in its place I leave a 3x5 index card with a Bible verse covering that very subject. I've never had a complaint from any of them, as they know from the verses that they are to "abstain from fleshly lusts."

Two or three cards per boy usually get the message across.

Designer likes a comfortable home

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

"One of these days, the public is going to rebel and reject the skeletal and ugly designs being foisted on them by some home furnishings manufacturers," says Everett Brown.

This is not a unique opinion, of course. But, coming from a designer and opinion leader in the home-furnishing industry, the words have more substance than might otherwise be the case.

Brown, whose contributions to interior design have spanned nearly half a century, is in the forefront of the design profession. He was recently named designer of the year by the American Society of Interior Designers (ASID) at its national convention in New York. But he is not necessarily in favor of some of the newest developments in the design field.

"I'm not a booster of high tech or of living rooms that look like factories," he says. "I don't think that's pretty or comfortable. And I am getting tired of eye-popping fabric patterns, too."

In place of the industrial look, he prefers traditional styles in a home that is serene, calm, and free from stress.

As a conservative and a beauty lover, Brown says he operates on the principle that "a rose is prettier than the Eiffel Tower."

Furthermore, most clients he has known are members of the comfort-first school, too. "They want to be comfortable. They want practicality. They do not wish to be offended by the objects in their own homes," he noted.

Brown has had a varied career in home furnishings. Beginning in the furniture department of Marshall Field in Chicago in 1934, he spent a number of years working with retail customers before eventually opening his own design studio in New York.

He has designed home-furnishings products such as rugs, furniture and domestics. He has created room settings for mass-market advertising campaigns. And he has designed model rooms and office, home, hotel and restaurant interiors throughout the United States.

This variety has helped show him that interior design is not for the elite alone. When Brown first entered the home-furnishings field, however, the concept of interior design was not widely accepted.

"In the 1930s and 1940s, most Americans did not seek decorating advice," he says. "There were no design schools. And the only decorators were paper hangers and wall painters."

Of course, there was also little need for decorators, since there were not many choices of furniture available.

After World War II ended, however, the American home-furnishings industry began to grow. The resulting abundance of choice helped create the need for decorating advice. It was abundance plus promotion of the value of decorating help that produced today's demand for interior designers, added the designer.

All in all, Brown finds the American home in much better shape today than it was 40 years ago when he started out.

"People are learning about scale and they are figuring out how to mix things like from different periods," he says. "Technical improvements with synthetic yarns and fibers have led to better home-furnishings products. Consumers are more aware of good design today than they were in the past, and color choices have markedly improved."

Today's colors are brighter and more appealing than they used to be. And, where once there was no coordination of color among home-furnishings producers, there is a high degree of cooperation among manufacturers. This cooperative effort has led to the availability of related products in related colors, Brown added.

Southside Johnny Lyon loves to sing

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Southside Johnny Lyon says, "I'm not in music to make money. Money is just another thing to worry about. Adulation doesn't matter. Commerciality is something the record company has to deal with."

"All that matters is when you get up on stage and you can actually sing."

"The rest of life is just filler."

Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes have made five record albums. The latest, "Love Is a Sacrifice," has been on the best-selling charts all summer.

He was first heard of in connection with Bruce Springsteen, except in his home territory of New Jersey where he was known as the son of jazz cornetist Dick Lyon. Southside Johnny and Miami Steve Van Zandt were with Springsteen for a brief time in Dr. Zoom and the Sonic Boom, in Asbury Park, N.J.

When Lyon formed his own band, he named it in 1975 for Asbury Park and for a 1950s Chicago group led by Little Walter Jacobs. Jacobs played harmonica for Muddy Waters, then set up his own Little Walter and the Jukes, taking that word from juke box.

Lyon loved harmonica playing and Chicago blues. He was given his nickname, Southside, in Asbury Park because blues came mainly from Chicago's South Side.

About Springsteen, Lyon says, "He's trying to expand the roots of rock 'n' roll. We're trying to do the same thing with rhythm 'n' blues."

"I first heard him in 1968. I thought he really had it. He was one of the most natural rock 'n' roll giants I've ever seen. He had charisma. I don't think you'll meet anybody in Asbury Park who didn't believe he was going all the way. To see him live is to believe."

Lyon plays harmonica and sings on stage. He used to play a little guitar, now doesn't. The band has five horns, two guitars, bass, drums, piano and singer. It isn't economical to take that many people on the road. Lyon says, "We do it because we want the sound."

"This is not a very calculating band. That's probably why we haven't had national success. We've had a lot of regional success. We've had it on our own terms, with whatever has worked for us."

"We don't say, 'Is this a good idea?' We say, 'Is this going to be fun?' I want to retain my faith and belief in the music I make and always have a good time doing it. If it's just a job, it's too hard. I'll go work in the Post Office."

"Just last night I was trying to assess what things really mean something to me. What I came up with is that I really love to sing. All the goals that I'm working toward are just to make it easier to sing."

Rolling Stone had a rave review of Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes at Valencia, Calif., in its Aug. 7 issue. It said, in part, "The Jukes have always been a great bar band, but in the past few years they've also become a great concert band. Lyon, a fine R and B singer on record, is a whirling dervish onstage. He was in peak form at these performances."

Lyon's favorite singer is the late Billie Holiday. "I think she is probably America's premiere singer," he says. "If I could have heard her in person, I probably would never sing again. She always has been the ultimate to me."

Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes' last two albums, "The Jukes" and "Love Is a Sacrifice," are on Mercury Records. The first three, "I Don't Want to Go Home," "This Time It's for Real" and "Hearts of Stone," are on Epic, dating from 1976.

The accident that keeps Lyon from playing guitar happened in November 1978 in Sacramento. "Radio station KZAP was having its 10th anniversary and asked us to play at their party. We're not that well known on the West Coast but any time you say party, we're ready."

"Somebody had put a broken glass on the stage. I stumbled over somebody's coat and jammed my hand down on the broken glass. I severed tendons, nerves and an artery and shot a lot of blood into the audience. "It was the most traumatic experience I've ever gone through. I went back on stage after two weeks. I needed to. Otherwise I'd get so much fear built up it becomes a toxin you can't overcome."

"I didn't want to go on stage every night with a cast on. I thought I looked stupid. I wasn't singing up to par; I was tense. The band was afraid I was going to hurt myself again."

Miami Steve Van Zandt, who had been working himself ragged working in both the Jukes and in Springsteen's E Street Band, left to work only with Springsteen. Epic Records dropped the contract. Lyon says, "You had to put your priorities on the line. Stay or go. We lost personnel and our producer."

"It was all for the good, actually. We cleared a lot of e-fluvia from the whole scene. It brought more out of Billy Rush and me." Lyon and guitarist Rush write most of the band's material, editing each other, though as a singer Lyon doesn't mind doing other people's songs.

Lyon says, "I have no bitterness. The spot we were in puts a lot on you. You either come through or you don't. I feel we have and I'm proud about that. "I don't have feeling in my fingertips but I can hold the mike. I enjoy what I'm doing and feel guilty about things I do wrong. I'm proud about this album and I can go on and establish whatever life I'm going to live."

Lyon grew up with two older brothers and a younger sister in Ocean Grove, N.J., a religious community where his parents had visits from the police about playing their jazz records too loud. Lyon's father, an after-hours jazzman, oldest brother and his wife work for the Post Office.

His other brother is a geologist who lives in Santa Fe, works in gold mines, plays gui-

Texas PTA to award teacher scholarships

Edwin E. Robinson, a former truck driver, became blind and partly deaf after a road accident in 1971. Last June 4 he was walking with a cane under a poplar tree outside his home in Falmouth, Maine, when a lightning bolt crashed in on him. When he regained consciousness, he could see and hear well again.

A month later he reported that hair was starting to grow on his once bald head.

"I feel better than I ever did in my life," the 62-year-old former invalid recently said.

"Yes, I can hear you. I can hear like a kid," he tells a caller. "I got hearing that I never had before. And 20-20 vision." Before the lightning struck, he says, he wore a hearing aid and had "no reflex at all to light."

As for the hair that started to grow, "it's coming in thick. My wife is all excited about it," Robinson says, adding, "I

The Texas PTA will again show its support for Texas teachers and students by providing summer study grants for Texas career teachers who wish to continue their education.

The grants will make eight in-service scholarships available in the summer of 1981 — four valued at $800 each for nine hours of summer coursework and four valued at $600 each for six hours of coursework. The scholarships may be used by recipients in any college or university in the continental United States in a field which will improve their teaching proficiency.

To be eligible for the scholarships, an applicant must be a career teacher (having at least three years' teaching experience in Texas immediately prior to application); must currently teach in a school with a local PTA unit in membership with the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers, and must be a member of a local PTA in good standing.

Applications for the Texas PTA 1981 summer study scholarships for teachers may be requested by writing to: Scholarship Grants Committee, Texas PTA, 408 West Eleventh Street, Austin, Texas 78701. Requests must be received prior to Dec. 1. The deadline for receipt of completed applications is Jan. 1, 1981.

Lightening cure works

Robinson had gone to the garage as the summer storm approached to find his pet chicken, Took-Took. He doesn't know if the lightning hit him directly as he passed under the tree. "All I know is that I was out unconscious approximately 20 minutes — that was verified by the next-door neighbor.

"We're going to lose the tree," he notes wryly. "It's dying. And the grass around the tree, there's no sign of it coming back. It's all burned out." The mechanism inside the hearing aid that he was wearing was also "all burned out," he says.

Now somewhat of a celebrity, Robinson is under contract to Drew Cummings Productions of Tarzana, Calif., and Cummings reports that a TV movie based on Robinson's experiences will be made by ABC.

Spinal Curvature Often Mistaken For Bad Posture

"Scoliosis" is the term used to describe lateral curvature of the spine, and it has been a medical enigma since ancient times. Science News in May of 1979 reported that "Recent findings suggest that perhaps as many as 10 percent of the children in that age group (10-13) have scoliosis."

Serious spinal curvature detracts from appearance, can produce psychological stress, and extensive physical consequences like degenerative arthritis of the spine, with increasingly severe back pain and disability. As scoliosis stresses the spine, it may lead to disk disease and sciatica. Preventing the permanent deformity and disability caused by scoliosis is largely dependent upon early detection. Early signs of scoliosis include obvious spinal curvature, one shoulder higher than the other, prominence of one hip and/or shoulder blades, one leg shorter than the other, and body trunk shifted out of balance.

Scoliosis screening tests are quick and simple and highly recommended for children in their formative years. In fact, scoliosis screening tests are required for school-aged children in New York, Florida, Minnesota, New Jersey, and Washington.

From September 15th to September 27th, this office will provide scoliosis screening tests to the public without charge as a public service in conjunction with the Texas Chiropractic Association's state wide screening program.

Murray getting his kicks in NFL

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Lions' rookie Eddie Murray, the hottest kicker in the National Football League, is such a student of the game that he swears the number of people in the stands affects the flight of the ball.

"The air is dead when the stadium is empty," said Murray, who began keeping records on his kicks during his college days at Tulane. "When there are more people, it carries. When I kick in a game, the ball just flies off my foot."

Murray has kicked seven successive field goals without a miss, including five against Green Bay in the Lions' 29-7 victory Sunday, and booms most of his kickoffs into the end zone.

"He's unreal," Coach Monte Clark said Tuesday. "He pumps them through like there's nothing to it. And now, if somebody returns a kickoff to the 30 or 35, we feel like they've rammed it down our throats."

Murray's high school in Victoria, British Columbia, didn't have a football team. He was discovered kicking in western Canada for the Saanich Hornets of the Lower Island Junior Varsity League.

"Playing football never really was a dream of mine," said the man the Lions' have nicknamed Eddie Money. "My dream was to play soccer."

Murray, who says his NFL hero used to be Roy Gerela, who was from Powell River, B.C., was discovered by a Tulane assistant coach at a camp run by Cal Murphy, former coach of the B.C. Lions of the Canadian Football League. Murray paid his own way to the camp.

"In my years in college, my kicking coach (Willard Wells) was high on taking slow motion films," Murray said. "We did a lot of studying. I'd taken some classes where I understood the muscles in correlation with athletic events. I'd record my kicks and note why they went left and why they'd go right."

It all paid off when the Lions made him the first pick on the seventh round of the NFL college draft — on the second day of drafting.

"I just wanted an opportunity to make an NFL team," Murray said. "When those days started getting close to the draft, that's when I started getting excited."

Murray showed a lot of talent right from the start. However, his pro career got its biggest shot when veteran Lions' kicker Benny Ricardo walked out of camp before the first exhibition game in a contract dispute.

Murray hit on 11 of 12 field goal attempts during the pre-season, including a 54-yarder against New Orleans.

He closed the exhibition season by kicking five against Cincinnati and Ricardo was told he could consider his walkout a permanent one.

It was a wise move and "Eddie Money" has become money in the bank for the Lions, who are 2-0 going into Sunday's game with the St. Louis Cardinals, 0-2.

Strateline: Sports

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor

Pampa Head Coach Larry Gilbert says he feels "good to be alive" after the Harvesters routed Dumas, 40-22, last Friday night.

"I think people could see why I was so concerned about Dumas," Gilbert said. "I want to have a good hard-hitting team. I want to complement their coaching staff. They came into the game well-prepared."

Dumas rolled up more offense than Pampa, 327-275, but the Demons turned the pigskin over six times.

Gilbert also tossed out bouquets to his own coaching staff.

"Coach Joe Matulich (offensive coordinator) had a great game plan. The offense did a great job with their blocking schemes and execution."

Lawton High may have the next Thomas Lott, minus the bandana.

Coach Gilbert shares that opinion along with Oklahoma University recruiters after watching Wolverine quarterback Ronnie Douglass in action.

"He looks just like Lott," Gilbert said. "He has the same build and the same speed. OU would take him right now if they could. He's a real blue-chipper."

The Harvesters' defensive crew will be able to judge Douglass for themselves at 7:30 p.m. Friday night in Harvester Stadium.

Panhandle quarterback-linebacker Tod Mayfield was honored by the Amarillo Globe-News sports staff as Class 2A player of the week.

Mayfield, a 165-pound junior, completed 11 of 21 passes for 131 yards in Panhandle's 17-6 win over Wellington last Friday night.

Mayfield also made a game-saving play in the final quarter when he knocked down a Wellington pass in the end zone.

Panhandle is ranked eighth among state Class 2A teams in the latest AP football poll.

Pilot Point is No. 1.

The Gene Howe farm located six miles east of Canadian has been designated as one of nine wildlife management areas where hunters can participate in a public quail-dove hunt.

Quail hunting dates are Oct. 25-26, Nov. 1-2, 8-9, Dec. 6-7, 13-14, 1980; Jan. 3-4, 10-11, 17-18, 24-25, 31 and Feb. 1, 1981. Bag limit is 12 quail per day.

A five dollar fee will be charged for quail hunting only.

Flashback: Sept. 1966. Quarterback Gary Hyatt scored two touchdowns as Pampa defeated Dumas, 20-6. Hyatt scored on one and three-yard runs while Sherman Mitchell had a 10-yard TD run.

L.D. Rowden was Pampa's leading rusher with 76 yards on 17 carries.

Pampa entered the game as the underdog.

Astros edged by Padres

HOUSTON (AP) — A pessimist would look at the Houston's plight and wonder why the Astros haven't gained any ground on the Los Angeles Dodgers, who have lost two straight road games.

Astros Manager Bill Virdon looks at the standings and wonders what everyone is worrying about.

"It means that we are still tied for first place," Virdon deadpanned Tuesday night after the Astros had lost to the lowly San Diego Padres 4-3 for the second straight night.

"I'm sure anyone in our position would say they would have wanted to gain some ground on the Dodgers, but it didn't happen and nothing can change that."

For the second straight evening, the Dodgers lost on the road and the Astros lost at home, leaving the National League Western Division race in a deadlock.

It would have been a good time for the Astros to gain a little cushion on the Dodgers, but nobody is ready to panic.

"We've got 18 games left," Astros spiritual leader Joe Morgan said. "We've got to go out and get them now. We shouldn't be guarding against anything. We can't be defensive, we've got to be aggressive and go out and play the best baseball we can."

"You put pressure on yourself. I don't feel any pressure and I don't think the rest of the team does. We just feel capable of winning this thing."

But for the second straight night, the Astros failed to capitalize on their opportunities.

Starter Vern Ruhle yielded run-scoring hits to Jerry Mumphrey, Randy Bass and Broderick Perkins for a 3-0 lead in the first inning.

Houston tied it on a two-run double by Rafael Landestoy in the second and a single by Gary Woods in the sixth inning.

But the Padres, doomed to last place in the Western Division, rallied once again in the seventh when Gene Richard led off with a single, was sacrificed to second base by Ozzie Smith and scored the winning run on Mumphrey's double down the left field line.

"They hit good pitches in the first inning," Ruhle said. "Two of the five hits were broken bats and a third bounced over my head."

AL roundup

Gossage still throwing goose eggs

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Even after continual use, the New York Yankees are still squeezing Goose eggs out of Rich Gossage.

Good as gold, New York's tireless relief pitcher continued to mow them down Tuesday night as the Yankees beat the Toronto Blue Jays 5-4 and moved a step closer to the American League East title.

Coupled with Baltimore's 8-3 loss to Detroit, the Yankees improved their lead over the Orioles to a solid six games.

"He just comes in and rears back and fires," said Toronto Manager Bobby Mattick. "It makes a big difference when you've got somebody like that to come in and blow you out."

Gossage replaced starter Ron Guidry with one out and two runners on base in the seventh inning after RBI-singles by Lloyd Moseby and Damaso Garcia cut the Yankees' lead to one run.

The big right-hander retired Alfredo Griffin on a pop fly, struck out pinch hitter Al Woods and allowed only an infield single by Moseby with two out in the ninth.

Gossage has not allowed a run in his last 15 appearances, saving 12 of those games and retiring 73 of 85 batters while yielding five hits and six walks. One batter reached on an error.

After winning three consecutive pennants, the Yankees slipped to fourth last year in the AL East in large part due to Gossage's injury-plagued season.

Elsewhere in the AL, Boston walloped Cleveland 9-5; Oakland defeated Texas 4-2 and Chicago edged Seattle 2-1. Rain postponed a doubleheader between Minnesota and Milwaukee and a contest between Kansas City and California.

The Yankees jumped on Jim Clancy, 13-13, for three runs in the bottom of the first after he walked Willie Randolph and Bobby Murcer, the first two batters. Oscar Gamble singled the first run across, and Jim Spencer and Rick Cerone added RBI-singles.

John Mayberry opened the Toronto second with his 25th home run, but the Yankees added two decisive runs in the fifth on a walk to Bobby Brown, a stolen base, Randolph's single, Murcer's sacrifice fly and Gamble's third single of the game.

The victory, the Yankees' sixth in a row and 14th in 15 games this month, improved Guidry's record to 14-10.

Tigers 8, Orioles 3
Steve Kemp drove in four runs while rapping out three hits, including his 19th homer, to lead Detroit over Baltimore.

Kemp's two-run homer in the sixth off Steve Stone, 23-7, forced a 2-2 tie and his two-run single off reliever Tippy Martinez capped a four-run rally in the seventh.

The rally helped Jack Morris even his record at 14-14.

Red Sox 9, Indians 5
Rookie Dave Stapleton collected five hits, drove in two runs and scored two as Boston defeated Cleveland. Stapleton doubled in the first and singled in the second, fourth and sixth innings and doubled in the eighth, improving his average to .323 since being called up for the first time from the minor leagues on May 30.

A's 4, Rangers 2
Dave McKay's RBI-single keyed a two-run rally in the 11th inning and helped Mike Norris post his 20th victory as Oakland defeated Texas.

Nine inducted into hall of fame

NEW YORK (AP) — The new Women's Sports Hall of Fame will provide a symbolic refuge against athletic discrimination while providing inspiration for future female sports triumphs, according to two of its first inductees.

"I really think the establishment of this Hall of Fame is a very important thing," said Janet Guthrie, the pioneer for women race car drivers. "Women tend to lose their history. The result is when an achieving woman, a woman capable of achieving something really remarkable comes along, she's made to feel like a freak."

"She's not; she's just one of a long line of very capable athletes and women in other areas of endeavor."

Wilma Rudolph, the 17th of 19 children, overcame a childhood illness and long odds to become a triple gold medalist as an Olympic sprinter. She also feels the Women's Sports Hall of Fame will make life easier for future generations of female athletes.

"I feel that it's important that we as women have a base for what we do. I think the foundation will create great leverage for young women," Rudolph said. "I've seen it come a long way. I've seen women athletes being called freaks and a number of names. Now we are young ladies involved in the world of athletics, and that feels good."

"We know we're different. I feel good being different because I can still make a major contribution."

Guthrie, Rudolph and tennis star Billie Jean King, three athletes who blazed new trails for members of their sex, were inducted into the Hall of Fame, along with six other women, at the inaugural Sports Foundation Awards Dinner Tuesday night.

Selected earlier for their contributions before 1960 were Patty Berg, golf; Babe Didrickson Zaharias, golf and track and field; Amelia Earhart, aviation; Gertrude Ederle, long distance swimming; Althea Gibson, tennis and golf, and Eleanor Holm Whalen, swimming.

The Hall of Fame will be housed in the New York headquarters of the Manufacturer's Hanover Trust Company, which also sponsors the Hall.

King, who has won a record 20 Wimbledon titles and four U.S. Open singles crowns, helped launch the first successful women's professional tennis tour in 1970. She was instrumental in winning equal purse money for women in many major tournaments.

In 1977, Guthrie became the first woman to compete in the Indianapolis 500. The next year, she became the first woman to complete that famed race, finishing ninth.

Rudolph won gold medals in the 100- and 200-meter dashes and the 400-meter relay at the Rome Olympics in 1960.

Also recognized at the dinner were tennis star Tracy Austin and middle distance runner Mary Decker, who were named by the Women's Sports Foundation as outstanding women stars over the past 12 months.

Austin, 17, the 1979 U.S. Open champion, is the youngest professional athlete, male or female, to win $1 million in prize money. Decker set world records in the indoor (4 minutes 17.55 seconds) and outdoor mile (4:21.7) earlier this year.

Utah State's speed could cause trouble for Horns

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Coach Fred Akers says his Longhorn team is stronger than Utah State — its next opponent — but he fears Utah State may make their game Saturday night "too exciting."

Texas has not played since Sept. 1 when it defeated highly ranked Arkansas, 23-17, in what Akers has described as "the most satisfying opening we've had" since he became head coach in 1977.

Utah State lost to Kentucky, 17-10, and defeated Idaho State, 14-7.

Akers said Monday Utah State — with blazing speed among their receivers and an "absolutely excellent" kicking game — "is better than most folks in this part of the country realize."

He told a news conference receivers Stacy Colbert and James Murphy of Utah State "are as fast or faster" than former Texas star Johnny "Lam" Jones, a 1976

Olympic gold medal winner and the No. 2 choice in the 1980 pro draft.

He said Utah State punter Guy McClure had averaged about 43 yards a kick over the past two years.

A half dozen Texas players are injured, but Akers said the injuries "are nothing we can't overcome."

One exception is freshman bluechip linebacker Jeff Leiding, who will miss a month or more with a slight shoulder separation and a pinched nerve in his neck.

Akers said his young players had taken advantage of the layoff since Arkansas to achieve "noticeable improvement." He specifically mentioned freshmen offensive linemen Doug Dawson, Mike Ruether and Adam Schreiber and first-year running backs Terry Orr, John Walker and Mike Luck.

"For an older group it (the layoff) might have been boring, but the younger guys really did see an opportunity to improve," said Akers.

Akers announced that freshman running back Joe Monroe had been moved to defense as an end-linebacker and also that senior center Terry Adams finally had been put on scholarship.

Akers described Utah State as a "dangerous... wide open" team that used 25 formations in its first two games and probably averages up to 35 passes a game.

"It will be a great test for our young secondary and defenders," he said. "I think we have the strongest football team," said Akers, "but we're going to have to play well to prove that, I'll tell you that."

"Utah State," he added, "is certainly not a team anyone can afford to overlook, because with their style of play, if you give them very many opportunities, they'll make it too exciting."

Texas defeated Utah State, 27-12 in 1972, when Akers was an assistant at Texas, and 61-7 in 1975, when he was at Wyoming. A crowd of 65,000-70,000 is expected for the game, with kickoff at 7 p.m., CDT.

Landry: Look for Eagles in playoffs

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Landry says about the only things that could keep the Philadelphia Eagles out of the playoffs are injuries or fatigue from carrying Dick Vermeil off the field.

The Eagles have jumped a game ahead of defending National Conference Eastern Division champion Dallas, and Landry was asked about fast-start Philadelphia at his weekly press luncheon.

"I've never seen a coach (Vermeil) carried off the field in September before," said Landry. "Usually you wait until a little later in the year for that. I'm just glad we don't play the Eagles for awhile."

Vermeil was hoisted to the shoulders of his players after last Sunday's 42-7 drubbing of Minnesota — the same day Denver blasted the Cowboys 41-20.

"If the Eagles can avoid injuries, they will be a cinch for the playoffs. They are out in front and their schedule isn't real tough," Landry said.

Dallas doesn't play the Eagles until Oct. 19 in Philadelphia.

The Cowboys must face unbeaten Tampa Bay Sunday in Texas Stadium which will be a sauna at the 3 p.m. kickoff if the current Texas heat wave continues as predicted.

"We'll start working out (Wednesday) in the hot weather at 3 p.m. ... we'll work through the heat," said Landry.

Temperatures reached 100 degrees or higher on 68 days in Dallas this summer and Landry has varied the workout schedule to get around the blistering Texas heat.

He said it was tough to condition the team as hot as it has been. He cited tailback Tony Dorsett as an example.

"Tony missed the last two preseason games and, because of the heat, it's been hard for him to get back into condition," Landry said.

Landry also said if it's extremely hot Sunday — the long range forecast says it will — "We will substitute a lot."

He said the Denver whipping was not setting well with his players.

"It got their attention. Not many players on this team have been with us when we get beat that bad," Landry noted.

The Cowboys opened strong with a Monday night 17-3 victory over Washington on the road then had to travel to Denver.

Landry refused to criticize quarterback Danny White, saying "It will take him time to get the feel of things. He's very intelligent. He'll get there."

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

September 18, 1980

A new, exciting year is in the offing, especially where your social life is involved. Your calendar will be filled with many fun events and even a possible trip or two.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The excitement of things going well may lead you to get a little careless with your material possessions. Don't be wasteful or take unnecessary gambles. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph, which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try to be as generous with your tolerance as you are with your pocketbook. Others will cooperate because of the way you treat them, not what you give them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It will be very important to keep busy today. If you have too much time on your hands you are apt to allow negativity to rule your thinking.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Handle your own material affairs today and be wary of any unsolicited sales pitch. Even well-meaning friends offering advice could lead you astray.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Being around aggressive, fun people is necessary for you today, but avoid those who tend to get a little bossy. You won't take orders. You could look horns.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Go after your goals today without broadcasting them to the world. The less attention you call to yourself, the less butting-in you'll have to contend with.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your enthusiasm for a new interest is catchy. You'll have lots of people wanting to share your adventure, but team up only with those who are reliable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll not easily be deterred from your course today once you've set a goal, but it may be difficult to understand why another doesn't have the same drive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Once you've sold someone on your ideas and have enlisted his or her aid, don't be critical of the way the task is performed. Be grateful for the help.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) When helping another today, make sure you don't step over the line and poke into this person's personal affairs. Stick strictly to the task at hand.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) So long as everyone sees eye-to-eye with you today, you radiate warmth and friendship, but let someone say the wrong things and you'll have little patience.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your mental faculties are not up to par today, so stick to working with your hands, rather than your head.

It all started with bike lanes

By JENNIFER KERR
Associated Press Writer
DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — Richard Gertman, once a Ph.D. candidate in geology, now wears the blue uniform of the Davis garbage pickup service.

The evolution of the bearded 36-year-old Gertman from a recycling rebel a decade ago mirrors the recent history of Davis, transformed from a conventional rural town with a small agricultural college to a sort of utopia bursting with optimism about its own solar-powered energy-saving future.

Gertman started collecting newspapers for recycling during the 1970 Earth Day fervor. He kept on when others faltered and now runs the recycling program for Davis Waste Removal, a private garbage firm.

Similarly, Davis' 3,000 townspeople took to all the modern fancies like bicycles and solar energy in a serious way. They made their city policy and found Davis being praised from coast-to-coast as a model energy-saving city.

The transformation began in 1966, when the main issue in the city council election was whether to set up a system of bike lanes. The pro-lane people won. Davis now has more than 25 miles of lanes snaking around town.

Davis' downtown resembles few other downtowns. It has no tall buildings, no vacant lots, few stoplights, no parking meters. Dozens of bicycles are parked in front of all the stores, many of them old houses restored and surrounded by shade trees.

At a market, Ada Drake packed her groceries in the flowered box on the rear of her three-wheeled cycle. Mrs. Drake, 68, has been riding two to five miles a day since she moved to Davis about 10 years ago.

"I didn't want to walk and I don't drive," she said. "I don't like to ride in a car when I can ride a bike. It's cheaper. I can sit and look around. It's beautiful."

She thinks other cities will have to become more like Davis, where she said "people are more considerate" of bike riders.

The 1972 council election was the first after the voting age was lowered from 21 to 18. Three candidates who campaigned on slow-growth, recycling and public transit issues defeated established business-oriented incumbents.

Growth was the first issue tackled. The city had been growing at an 11 percent annual rate and the existing city plan predicted a 1990 population of 90,000.

The new plan sets a 1990 limit of 50,000 people and limits the number of new houses and condominiums that can be built each year.

In 1973, caught up like everyone else with the problems of heating homes and fueling cars, council members turned their attention to energy.

One result was an ordinance establishing energy standards for new homes. It requires attic, floor and wall insulation, light-colored roofs and walls and landscaped shading of most windows.

The newest ordinance, which took effect Jan. 1, requires any homeowner who sells a house to have outfitted it with low-flow showerheads, weatherstripping, insulation and thermal blankets on water heaters.

While the ordinances do not require solar devices, many Davis developers have built big subdivisions and apartment complexes using the sun to heat water or the houses themselves.

The city council also got involved in waste disposal and recycling.

By 1972, Gertman's Resource Awareness Committee had a full-time recycling center on the University of California campus where people could bring newspapers, cans and bottles. But Davis Waste Removal still had the contract to haul garbage.

Two years later, when the council passed an ordinance requiring residents to separate garbage and newspapers, DWR decided it was too expensive to pick up the papers along curbs and turned the job over to Gertman's group.

"The volume went way up," Gertman recalled. "We were doing very well. The decision was made that it was economical for DWR to take the program over. RAC gladly gave the program up."

DWR built a recycling center next to its plant on the town's outskirts with a concrete pit so the cans, bottles and newspapers can easily be dropped into huge boxes and hauled away.

Last year, Gertman came full-cycle — he joined Davis Waste. Now DWR also picks up cardboard, and residents can bring in used motor oil for disposal.

CYCLING AND RECYCLING. Richard Gertman of the Davis, California Waste Removal Co. Inc., stands between two six-foot wooden crates containing aluminum cans. Gertman, 36, one of the three fulltime and one part-time employees, says the center receives about 24 tons of aluminum per year.

Danielle flood damage could top $11 million

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Flooding caused by Tropical Storm Danielle in two Hill Country counties may top $11 million when the tallies are in, officials reported.

The area was inundated with as much as 25 inches of rain last week as remnants of Danielle edged West and Central Texas, shoving the Llano and San Saba Rivers out of their banks and into Kimble and Menard counties.

Officials in Kimble County estimate the swollen Llano River did an estimated $8 million in damage to livestock, homes and fences.

Menard County sustained about $3 million in damage, officials there estimated.

Authorities in both counties said they hoped to ease the flooding impact with low-interest loans from the Small Business Administration. And Frank Cox, head of the state's Emergency Services Administration in Austin, said those loans may be the only source of relief to the two counties.

However, Cox said, property located in a designated flood plain and eligible for flood insurance, would be disqualified from the SBA loans.

Menard County Extension Agent Sam Kuykendall said 5,000 goats, 2,000 sheep and 100 head of cattle were lost.

"It's worse than we thought," he said.

Menard County Judge Otis Lyckman said three homes were destroyed, another 120 suffered about $2.5 million in damage, and three mobile homes were destroyed and 22 sustained about $1.6 million in damage. About 140 miles of fence was destroyed and will cost $700,000 to replace, he said.

Livestock losses should total about $875,000, damage to public property about $179,000, and crop and farm equipment another $200,000, he said.

"I saw one tractor under water that would have cost $20,000," he said. "Most folks who have lived here all their lives say the flood was as bad as the one in the late 1930s."

Kimble County Judge Wilbur Dunk said the about 7,500 head of livestock were lost.

Americans in Britain find television not up to par

LONDON (AP) — Americans, columnist Russell Baker has observed, are a race whose intuitive understanding is shaped by television.

Accordingly, my first act upon arrival here was to turn on a TV set. Sorry, but there it is. A man is stuck with his heritage. Besides, there was jet-lag to be overcome.

There were only three channels on the TV set — BBC1, BBC2 and ITV. I tried BBC1. A cricket match.

Ah, I thought, as my wife unpacked, this should acclimatize me. A foreigner lost in America could do no better than a baseball game. Cricket, after all, is English baseball.

The little screen gave a lovely picture of Lords, the playing ground, vast and green and dotted with players dressed like Sidney Greenstreet at leisure. But my hopes for English baseball were fast broken.

There seemed to be two batters, instead of one, with the fielders situated in no logical positions.

The pitcher — bowler, he is called — threw the ball on the bounce at something called a wicket, while the batter occasionally swung.

But the batter didn't always run after connecting with the ball, and the fielders seemed the very essence of nonchalance after picking up hot grounders. They'd toss the ball back to the bowler, who'd begin again his ritualistic delivery to the same batter, and on it went.

The announcers, gents of the names Michael and Peter, didn't help. They spoke in posh tones of "L-B-W's" and "half-centuries" and so-and-so being "caught at half-leg." I did determine that I was watching the England-Australia Centenary Test, and that it was a very big game — the 100th in the series.

One of the announcers said something that caught my attention. "It's a toss-up whether this is the last ball before lunch," he said. "Pascoe takes off the gloves, and rather fancies that it is. Yes, England is going to lunch."

Grand jury hears from aides

AUSTIN (AP) — A Travis County grand jury reportedly investigating charges that Sen. Gene Jones of Houston misused state employees and equipment, has heard from three of the Democrat's aides.

Two clerks and an administrative assistant went before the secret panel Tuesday for about an hour each.

The allegations — first brought to light by Jones' opponent for reelection — concern a senate subcommittee aide whom Jones admitted used four state employees and a state-owned computer system typewriter to write letters soliciting campaign funds.

Man still awed by giant bird

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was master of the air, casting a chilling shadow over the land below. It was the largest known bird ever to soar above the earth; and 5 million years later man looks upon it with awe.

At a rugged dig in Argentina, scientists have discovered the remains of a giant bird the size of a small airplane — a creature that stretched its wings a full 25 feet while in flight.

The discovery of fossilized bones, announced Monday by the National Geographic Society, has been confirmed by scientists at the Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County, Calif.

The remains are of a bird that measured 11 feet from beak to tail, weighed between 160 and 170 pounds and, when standing, could have looked a 6-foot-tall man directly in the eye.

"This makes it the world's largest known flying bird," said Dr. Kenneth E. Campbell, curator of vertebrate paleontology at the Los Angeles facility. "It's definitely a most spectacular creature."

Campbell said the biggest flying bird today is the Andean Condor, which has a 10-foot wingspan and can weigh about 35 pounds.

The largest previously known flying birds were extinct varieties with wingspans approaching 16 feet. But the biggest creatures known to take to the air were flying reptiles called pterosaurs, some of which had wingspans of up to 35 feet.

In the latest discovery, about a dozen bones from the giant bird were recovered at a site 100 miles west of Buenos Aires by Drs. Eduardo P.

Tonni and Rosendo Pascual of Argentina's La Plata Museum.

While visiting Argentina last year, Campbell saw the fossils and immediately identified them as a new, larger type of teratorn — a Greek word meaning "wonder bird." This was an extinct group of large birds that lived in North and South America.

Although no one knows exactly what teratorns looked like, of all modern birds their bones most resemble those of condors.

"So our reconstructions are patterned after condors and we assume they probably flew similar to condors," Campbell said in a telephone interview. "Because of their size, they probably relied almost exclusively on gliding to fly, rather than wing-flapping."

There may be skepticism about the newest discovery's ability to fly, Campbell said, "but we are sure that it did. ... It's unlikely that a bird would have feathers and wing bones suitable for flight if it didn't fly."

Campbell, whose work is supported by National Geographic, said these predator birds are believed to have evolved in South America and spread to the southern United States.

Teratorns, which existed for millions of years, became extinct about 10,000 years ago, he said. The new fossils have been dated tentatively as being 5 million to 8 million years old, he said.

Although fossils of teratorns have been found in Nevada, Florida and northern Mexico, the vast majority have been recovered from the Rancho La Brea area in Los Angeles. The latest discovery confirms that the birds existed deep in South America.

Urban update tags five Texas cities

DETROIT (AP) — Five Texas cities are among 30 across the nation targeted for federal urban revitalization money in the first phase of the new National Main Streets Center program, says Department of Housing and Urban Development Secretary Moon Landrieu.

Speaking to the International Downtown Executives Association Monday in Detroit, Landrieu released details of the program, which he said would pump $370,000 in federal money into six states.

The Texas cities are Eagle Pass, Hillsboro, Navasota, Plainview and Seguin.

HU is coordinating financial assistance in an inter-agency attempt to extend support for downtown revitalization to small cities, said Landrieu. Also involved are the Department of Transportation, Small Business Administration.

"Main Streets involves a unique partnership, which combines efforts to preserve the architectural heritage of a small community with the goal of restoring the viability of its commercial business district," he said.

The idea first was tried with success in Galesburg, Ill., Madison, Ind., and Hot Springs, S.D., said Landrieu.

Mrs. Gant's restraining order prohibited Gant from communicating with her in any manner, selling any of the couple's property, occupying the family's residence or "doing any act, calculated to embarrass, harass, molest, injure or humiliate" her.

Her affidavit stated that Gant was "capricious and irresponsible" with their money. She also said he was "unpredictable" and that he had committed adultery.

The 30-year-old marriage had "become insupportable because of discord (sic) or conflict of personalities," she said.

Records indicated the divorce case is pending, but neighbors said the Gants had reconciled and that he moved back into their home several weeks ago.
