Iran, Iraq border clashes prompt troop call-up

By The Associated Press
Iran and Iraq reported new ground and air battles along their disputed border Saturday and Iran, describing the fighting as "intense," mobilized a group of army reservists.
In Tehran, the Parliament announced it would meet again Tuesday and was expected to resume discussion of the fate of 52 American hostages, now in their 32nd day of captivity.
The radio announced that President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who took personal command of the nation's military operations, issued orders mobilizing officers and soldiers released from service in 1977-78.
There was no indication how many men would be recalled by the action. Tehran Radio said the call-up was to defend Iran's territorial integrity and those involved were to report before Oct. 3.
The Enghlab Eslami newspaper in Tehran reported that Iranian border villages near Khorramshahr have been evacuated to keep the villagers safe from "the constant fire of Iraqi mortars."
The report said many of the villagers were taken to Khorramshahr on the Shatt al-Arab waterway that defines the Iraqi-Iranian border on the northern tip of the Persian Gulf.
Iranian military communiques broadcast by Tehran Radio said fighting was continuing all along the border and again raised the possibility of "naval warfare in the Persian Gulf and the Shatt al-Arab waterway in coming days."

The radio said the military reported that Iran was also battling Iranian "counterrevolutionaries" in the northern sector near the common border area of Iran, Iraq and Turkey.
The Iraqi news agency in Baghdad quoted a military spokesman as reporting that Iraqi jets repulsed concentrations of Iranian tanks and armored cars that launched an attack at Saoumar under the cover of artillery fire.
Saoumar is on the Iranian side of the border, about 50 miles from the main frontier crossing point of Qasr e-Shirin, about 80 miles northeast of Baghdad.
The Iraqi military said its warplanes inflicted some damage on the attackers.
The fighting has intensified since Wednesday when Iraqi President Saddam Hussein terminated the 1975 border treaty with Iran and vowed to "liberate" frontier territory.
Relations between the two countries have been strained since Iranian revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini called last year for Iraqi Shiite Muslims to overthrow Hussein. Shites, a minority sect of Islam, are a majority in Iran and make up about half the population of Iraq.

A STOLEN PICKUP TRUCK lies on top of a fence two and a half miles north of the Pampa city limits on U.S. Highway 70 where it landed after it was involved in a roll-over at about 4 a.m. Saturday. Investigating officer, Texas Highway Patrol Trooper Johnny Carter said the 1979 Ford truck had been stolen from Steve Easterly of Pampa. The truck was one of three vehicles reported stolen from city residents Friday evening and Saturday morning. A second stolen vehicle was discovered by Pampa Police Officer Rod Bishop when he investigated a 1964 Ford — lights on and engine running — sitting off the roadway at 23rd and Lea streets. The vehicle belonged to Joe T. Daniels of 2124 N. Wells. A third vehicle reported stolen — a 1976 Chevrolet pickup truck belonging to James Wheeler, 2222 Beech — has not been recovered. Officials do not know at this time if the three thefts are related.

Titan explosion renews missile safety debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The explosion that rocked an Arkansas missile site last week has touched off renewed congressional concern over the safety and usefulness of the Titan II, the largest weapon in the nation's nuclear arsenal.
Members of Congress are asking if the Titan missile system, built nearly two decades ago and intended primarily as a threat to Soviet cities, has become an outmoded dinosaur that also poses a threat to Americans.
The explosion Friday in an underground missile silo near the rural Arkansas town of Damascus injured a total of 22 persons, including an Air Force sergeant who later died.
The blast also created political shock waves.
"If it's not safe and effective, I don't know why you need it," said Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., who represents one of the three states which have Titan missile sites. In addition to Arkansas and Kansas, Arizona shares the nation's 54 Titan silos.

Other members of Congress have joined Dole in calling for a thorough study of the missile system.
The Armed Services Committees in the House and Senate may hold hearings on the Titan, although time is running short in the current session. Congress plans to recess for the fall elections on Oct. 4.
The Titan mishap was the second incident within a week that raised concern about a nuclear accident.
Earlier, a B-52 bomber at Grand Forks Air Force Base in North Dakota caught fire. State and local officials complained that there was a thermonuclear device aboard the aircraft or at least nearby.
But that incident caused little fallout in Washington compared to the Arkansas explosion.

The Damascus blast is the latest in a series of accidents involving the Titan. In 1978, two airmen were killed following a leak of toxic fuel gas at a silo near Rock, Kan.
Friday's explosion occurred after a three-pound socket from a wrench fell 70 feet and ruptured the aluminum alloy missile, allowing fuel to escape, Pentagon officials said. The blast took place nearly eight hours after the rupture.
Safety questions aside, some members of Congress question the effectiveness of the Titan, which was developed long before the current generation of missiles which are supposed to have pinpoint accuracy so they can knock out an enemy's defenses rather than wipe out the civilian population.

Two hospitalized after explosion

BORGER — Two men are in a Borger hospital and two others were treated and released for injuries they received in an explosion at the Phillips Petroleum Co. refinery at Phillips Friday — the fifth explosion in the last year.
G. W. White Jr., 62, of Phillips and John Jackson, 62, of Borger were both listed in good condition in North Plains Hospital by a hospital spokesperson late Saturday.
Jackson was first treated and released in the hospital emergency room following the accident at 11:45 a.m. Friday, but was later admitted to the hospital suffering from a concussion, the spokesperson said.
Two other Phillips employees — identified by the hospital spokesperson as Thomas Crawford, 30, Borger, and Jim Brood, 33, Borger — were treated for minor injuries and released from the hospital's emergency room following the mishap.
Phillips Petroleum officials said Saturday the explosion was caused by a natural gas valve on a boiler at a Phillips Petroleum Co. refinery exploding, causing the injuries to the four employees, according to Associated Press reports.
Dick Robinson, a company spokesman at the headquarters in Bartlesville, Okla., said the explosion occurred Friday after workers attempted to restart a boiler after making repairs on a gas valve.

"For some reason, it blew up," Robinson said.
He said there was no fire and none of the workers was burned in the explosion. He said the injuries consisted of cuts and scrapes.
Robinson said the damage was confined to the No. 2 boiler unit, but no dollar estimate was made.
The boiler is located less than one mile from where an explosion on Jan. 20 injured more than 40 persons in the plant area.
The blast will have no effect on production at the refinery since the unit already was shut down for repairs, Robinson said.
Last October, two persons were killed and 13 injured while trying to repair a gas line at Unit 22, near the site of Friday's explosion.
The company was fined $19,500 by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration for violations found during an investigation of that explosion.
A Jan. 20 explosion injured 41 persons, displaced more than 200 families and caused damage to more than 550 homes and businesses in Phillips and nearby Borger.
And in July 23, two chemists were badly burned when a five-gallon cylinder containing pressurized ethylene gas ruptured and exploded. Eight other plant employees were injured when a second cylinder exploded during rescue efforts.
The following day, an employee was slightly injured when a furnace exploded.

Frontiers of achievement

Pampa graduate's research gains wide acclaim

"Science is like fishing. You never know what you are going to catch," said Dr. R. Malcolm Brown Jr., world renowned botanist, during a recent visit with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. R. Malcolm Brown Sr. of Pampa.
"In order to insure a good catch, one needs to use a lot of fishing poles and bait. That is why I have combined electronics, chemistry, biophysics, biochemistry, morphology, anatomy and ecology into a conglomerate," he said.

Dr. Brown is director of the Electron Microscopy Laboratory at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His research on the frontiers of cell biology is receiving international acclaim.
This past spring, Dr. Brown won the George N. Lamb award, presented annually by the University of Nebraska to an outstanding American botanist. The award was a result of his work on the bacteria involved in the manufacture of pure cellulose. He has studied bacteria for 13 years. These microscopic organisms are the same ones that turn wine into vinegar. They make strong, very tough cellulose that has great potential for use in textiles, paper, filters and food. He said, "Pound for pound the microbial cellulose's tensile strength is equal to steel."

In Dr. Brown's lab, the bacteria grow and make cellulose in containers of glucose, or sugar, fortified with certain vitamins. But their productivity is such, that starting from scratch, they can make in 20 minutes "a piece of cellulose that you can see and pick up."
"Our work marks only the beginning for applied research in this field. I hope the public can now better appreciate how an insignificant one-celled organism, coupled with serendipity and creative students, might lead to scientific discoveries that could greatly benefit mankind," he said.
Dr. Brown emphasized the close relationship between scientific discoveries and technology. Just recently he installed in his lab a new television camera capable of detecting extremely small amounts of light. When attached to the electron microscope, he can see bacteria actually making cellulose.
"Right before my eyes, the cell reversed the direction of cellulose synthesis! This had been predicted, but until we had the technology to prove it, this was only speculation. We were able to videotape the process and to replay it in time lapse," he said.
During the last week in August, Dr. Brown flew to Berlin to organize a symposium on extracellular matrix and to present a paper at the Second International Congress on Cell Biology. He has been invited to deliver the keynote address at another international meeting in Stockholm, Sweden, next June.

Dr. Brown has published more than 100 major articles and presently is editing a book on cellulose and other natural polymer systems. A forthcoming issue of "Science," the weekly journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, will carry an article on his cellulose research. One of his photographs will be featured on the front cover in full color.
In December, Dr. Brown will travel to Australia where he has an appointment as a Visiting Research Fellow in the Research School of Biological Sciences at the Australian National University in Canberra.
Dr. Brown first became interested in botany while taking a course in plant morphology under Dr. Harold Bold at the University of Texas at Austin. One day Dr. Bold announced to the class that he wished to hire a student to wash test tubes. Brown volunteered and gradually was given more and more responsibility for preparing and maintaining algal cultures. This led to his being accepted for a summer of study at the famous Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute while still an undergraduate — quite an unusual experience for a "rising junior."
As a graduate student at the University of Texas, Dr. Brown first began to study airborne algae. This resulted in his spending two summers in Hawaii where the active volcanoes and dated lava flows provide an ecosystem ideal for the study of airborne algae and also for the study of how first life forms undergo succession on new soils. He recalls that his graduate research projects were spreading beyond his ability to handle all of them.

At that time, the botany department had just purchased an electron microscope, an instrument that was only then becoming known in the United States. The view of macromolecules through this instrument opened up a new world for him.
"I had to make a decision," he said. "I knew I could not pursue the study of airborne algae and electron microscopy at the same time and so I decided to temporarily hold off on the algae and study electron microscopy. The final outcome was to use both light and electron microscopy to study the structure of soils and airborne algae — and that became my doctoral dissertation."
During his first year as assistant professor of botany at UT, he began searching for an opportunity to pursue post-doctoral studies. He received a grant from the National Science Foundation to study with an internationally known scientist in Frieburg, West Germany. It was during that year that Dr. Brown not only improved his skills in electron microscopy, but also learned a new technique known as "freeze etching." It was through the use of this technique that he and one

DR. R. MALCOLM BROWN, director of the Electron Microscopy Laboratory at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is shown in his laboratory where he studies cell biology. The world renowned botanist has received international acclaim for his work. He is a graduate of Pampa High School and the son of Dr. and Mrs. R. Malcolm Brown Sr. of Pampa.

Turkey has new prime minister

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkey's military rulers Saturday named retired navy chief Bulent Ulusu as Turkey's new prime minister, replacing Suleyman Demirel who was toppled by the military on Sept. 12, the state news agency announced.

Ulusu will form a Cabinet that the military already has approved and will be charged with carrying out the policies of the ruling generals, sources said.
Ulusu, considered a moderate, beat out two others for the job, according to military sources here. They were identified as Gen. Haydar Sadatik, a member of the ruling military National Security Council, and Zayyat Baykara, a former senator.
The 57-year-old Ulusu held the rank of admiral when he took command of the Turkish navy in 1977. Before that he had been commander of the fleet and served for two years at North Atlantic Treaty Organization headquarters. He is a graduate of the Turkish naval academy where he finished first in the class.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Andrew Young, former ambassador to the United Nations, says his ex-boss President Carter is mistakenly perceived as a weak leader because Americans haven't grasped the scope of his accomplishments.

"President Carter has made accomplishments in every area of American life," Young said Friday night in an interview. "Before him we had no energy policy, no African policy. Jimmy Carter has tackled it all and made progress."

Young was in town for a banquet honoring the Rev. Carroll T. Dozier, Bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Memphis, who was awarded the Diakonia Award by the Church of St. Thomas. The award, named for a Greek word meaning service, was for Dozier's contributions to the black community.

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge has reserved decision on Alger Hiss' suit to overturn his 1950 perjury conviction in the "Pumpkin Papers" case.

The former State Department official, who served as an advisor to President Franklin D. Roosevelt at the 1945 Yalta Conference, argued his case Friday before U.S. District Court Judge Richard Owen.

Hiss, now 75, was convicted of perjury for telling a grand jury that he did not give microfilms of classified government documents in 1938 to Whittaker Chambers for relay to the Soviet Union.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Writer Elie Wiesel, a survivor of the Holocaust and a critic of popularized stories about it, says Jews are still not completely safe in the world.

Wiesel, who witnessed his father's death in the Buchenwald concentration camp and lost his mother and a sister in another camp, is considered a leading interpreter of the Holocaust. A former journalist, he has written 20 books and serves as chairman of President Carter's Commission on the Holocaust.

Artist's works reflect love of the Panhandle

Roseylee K. Palmer's art reflects her deep love of the contemporary western scenes in the Panhandle of Texas. Mrs. Palmer will exhibit her work at the 14th annual Top O' Texas Arts and Crafts Festival slated for Oct. 11-12 in M.K. Brown Auditorium. The festival will be from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Oct. 11 and from 12 noon to 5 p.m. Oct. 12.

A native of Henryetta, Okla., Mrs. Palmer is the chairman of the Fine Arts Division of Frank Phillips College. She has lived in Texas 30 years and now feels she is a true Texan.

Her interest in the old West is reflected in her many historical paintings and murals. Her portraits of horses are beautiful examples of her knowledge of the anatomy of the horse.

Indians were a part of Mrs. Palmer's early childhood in Oklahoma and she grew up with a love for the Indian and Indian culture. This feeling is revealed in her Indian portraits and numerous paintings of Indians. She contends the artist must know the subject matter and relate to it in order to produce a painting that conveys those feelings to the viewer.

Trained in almost all art media, Mrs. Palmer uses varied media and techniques. Her paintings are found in collections throughout the Southwest.

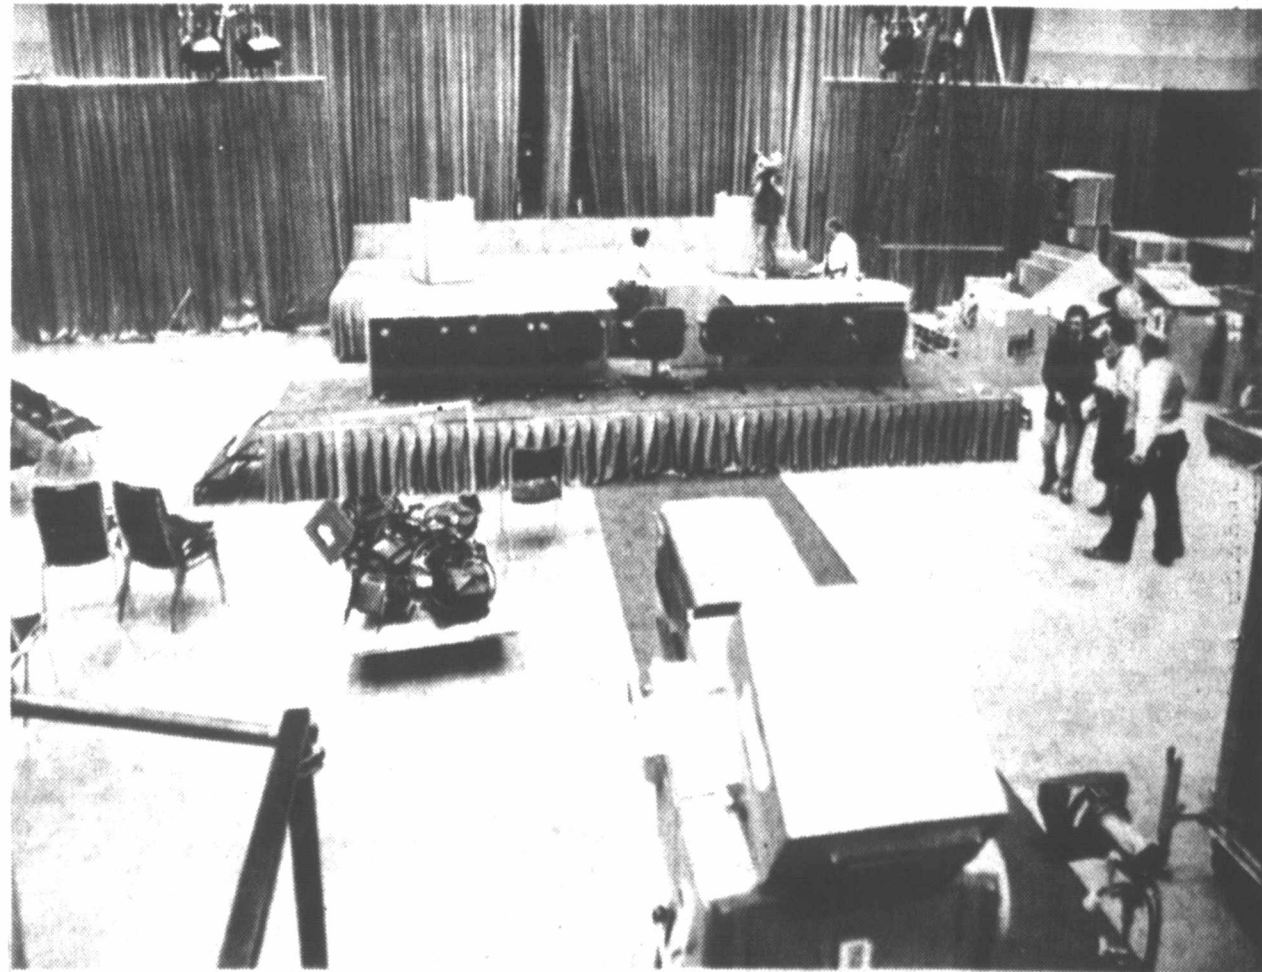

Mrs. Palmer attended Odessa College and has an associate in arts degree from Frank Phillips College. She has bachelor's and master's degrees from North Texas State University and has done postgraduate work at West Texas State University and West Texas State University.

She has had training in commercial art and has worked as a commercial artist and a free lance artist.

The Top O' Texas Arts and Crafts Festival will feature the work of artists from Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and New Mexico. The festival is sponsored by Pampa Fine Arts Association.

League of Women Voters irked with Carter's stand on debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The League of Women voters says if it can't have the real Jimmy Carter in Baltimore for Sunday's campaign debate, it doesn't want a make-believe president, either. With Republican Ronald Reagan and independent John Anderson spending Friday in preparation for their televised weekend clash, the sponsoring league said "no thanks" to the owner of a South Dakota wax museum offering a statue of Carter. "The president will be represented at the debate," museum owner Tom Keller said in making his offer. Carter is boycotting the debate, the first of the 1980 general election campaign, because he wants to square off against Ronald Reagan alone before engaging in a three-way confrontation. While Reagan and Anderson boned up, the president spent his day at the White House, where he was endorsed by leaders of several major consumer groups. Ellen Haas, immediate past president of the Consumer Federation of America, told reporters that "after comparative shopping," there is no doubt that Carter's record and the Democratic Party platform warrant support. Although Anderson had no public appearances on his calendar, his campaign announced it had gathered enough signatures to assure him spots on the Nov. 4 ballot in Arizona and New Hampshire. Aides said that meant the Republican congressman from Illinois had enough signatures for all 50 states. So far, Anderson has been certified in 34 states and the District of Columbia, with a total of 361 electoral votes. North Carolina was added to the list Friday in a ruling by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va. Only in Carter's native Georgia does Anderson still face a legal battle over access to the state ballot, and that case is due for hearing next week in the state supreme court. Georgia Secretary of State David Poynthress ruled last week that Anderson fell short of the required signatures. Libertarian Party presidential candidate Ed Clark got his name on the Georgia ballot on Friday.

Nicaraguan leader interred in Miami

MIAMI (AP) — Anastasio Somoza, the slain Nicaraguan dictator, was entombed in a Miami cemetery Saturday as thousands of his fellow exiles and supporters wept and screamed "Viva Somoza." A solemn prayer service for Somoza, whose family ruled the Central American nation for decades, was held before noon in a chapel at the Caballero Funeral Home in Miami's Little Havana section. Somoza's mother, Salvadora, his Florida-born wife, Hope, from whom he had been estranged, joined his son, Anastasio Somoza Jr., and four other children at the service. The 54-year-old Somoza, whose father was assassinated in 1956, was killed Wednesday in Asuncion, Paraguay. Authorities there said a suspected assassin killed by police in a shootout had been linked to the leftist Sandinista rebels who overthrew Somoza. The Paraguayans said they believed there were four to six assassins and they were holding 60 people for questioning. Somoza, a long-time U.S. ally, had initially sought exile in Miami after his ouster by leftist guerrillas, but he departed after the Carter administration said it could not guarantee his safety. Hundreds filed past the open silver casket on Friday after a 100-car caravan brought it to the Caballero Funeral Home. Shouts of "Viva Somoza" and "Somoza, we will avenge your blood" rang out as the coffin was carried in. The exiles also sang the Nicaraguan national anthem and the hymn of Somoza's Liberal Party. Among those viewing the casket, partly covered by the blue and white Nicaraguan flag, were former Nicaraguan cabinet members, national guard officers and Somoza aides. The mourners, some wearing battle fatigues, were watched by private security guards and Miami police. Killed Wednesday in a hail of bullets in Asuncion, Paraguay, the 54-year-old Somoza was being buried later at Woodlawn Cemetery in Miami's Little Havana. His body was flown here Friday. He had fled Nicaragua in 1979, eventually settling in Paraguay, when Sandinista guerrillas overthrew his government. His followers considered him their leader, even in exile. Somoza's estranged wife Hope chose a mausoleum of Vermont granite with bronze doors for Somoza, near the graves of former Cuban presidents Carlos Prio Socarras and Gerardo Machado Morales, cemetery officials said. A U.S. citizen, Mrs. Somoza has lived here for several years. The Somozas had five children. After viewing the body, some exiles told Somoza's eldest son, Anastasio Jr., they considered him their new leader. "You are the leader now, Chiguin," whispered one exile, using the Nicaraguan slang term for his apparent. Asked by reporters if he would avenge his father's murder, he said: "I think our family will take recourse of the law. I think that the Paraguayan government is interested in finding out exactly who did this and I think our family will function as normal law-abiding citizens. We plan to see that justice is done."

Veteran found innocent on smuggling charges

BOSTON (AP) — A federal court jury has acquitted a Vietnam veteran on drug smuggling charges after he entered a plea of insanity related to combat fatigue. It was the first time Vietnam Syndrome had been used successfully as a defense in connection with a non-violent, pre-meditated crime, said the man's lawyer, Joe Oteri. U.S. Assistant Attorneys Judd Carhart and Janis Berry declined to comment on the ruling Friday. Michael Tindall, 30, a former Vietnam helicopter pilot from Hightstown, N.J., claimed his involvement in a hashish smuggling ring stemmed from Vietnam Syndrome, an emotional malady recognized by the American Psychiatric Association and the Veterans Administration as post-traumatic stress. Defenses based on the syndrome have been used successfully in other trials in California and Pennsylvania, but only when related to violent, spontaneous crimes. "This is a great weight off my shoulders," Tindall said. The verdict was a virtual admission by the government "that it drove boys crazy in Vietnam," he said. Oteri said Tindall's war experiences forced him to seek thrills outside the law. Dr. John P. Wilson, a Cleveland psychologist, last week testified Tindall took part in a plot to smuggle three tons of hashish from Morocco to Gloucester, Mass., because of a need to relieve the excitement he experienced in combat. Last week, another Vietnam veteran, Peter L. Kruttschewski, 35, of Lansing, Mich., was found guilty of taking part in an operation to smuggle 26 tons of marijuana to Gloucester. Kruttschewski unsuccessfully invoked the Vietnam Syndrome defense.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Gerald O. York Jr.

Poor posture often leads to spinal misalignment and nerve irritation. It is important that children, when forming lifetime habits, develop good posture. Check your child's posture. Note that shoulders are held at the same height. Check the hips as well. Watch for rounded shoulders, heads held forward and leading with the stomach. Not only is bad posture considered unattractive, it can sometimes cause many later problems. If you detect problems with your child's posture, consult a chiropractor about possible treatment.

Good chiropractic treatment is essential for a child with a spinal misalignment. It can save the child years of pain and discomfort and possible disability. DR. GERALD O. YORK JR. serves youngsters, young adults, adults, and old adults. In all cases, sensitive and professional service is given. I'm available twenty-four hours. Call if you are in pain and need help. 665-1627. 1121 S. Hobart.

Lipizzans to make Pampa appearance at rodeo arena

One of the great adventure stories of all time is the rescue of the rare Lipizzan horses from the Russian army the last of World War II.

This great adventure will be recalled when the Royal Lipizzan Stallions of Austria prance out into the arena of the rodeo grounds at Recreation Park east of Pampa Thursday, Sept. 25, for a 4 p.m. show and again at 8 p.m.

Tickets are available the Pampa Mall. A living legend, and star of the show, is Colonel Ottomar Herrmann, who smuggled out a group of Lipizzans from under the very noses of the Russians in those perilous times, riding at night and hiding by day.

During the show Colonel Herrmann gives a short speech, with a heavy Austrian accent, telling his experiences. "We move out in the night with nothing," he remembers, "only a handful of horses."

But the horses he saved were more precious than jewels he said. Colonel Herrmann was helping his father, the late Colonel Ottomar Herrmann Sr., smuggle the beautiful horses to the protection of General George Patton.

They smeared the shining white coats of the horses with mud and shoe polish to disguise the fact they were Lipizzans. It was at about this same time that Colonel Alois Podhajsky took out the Spanish Riding School horses. Both sought and received protection from the United States Army through General Patton, who was a great horseman himself and an Olympic rider.

Colonel Herrmann gives a stirring tribute to General Patton and Colonel Podhajsky during the show. Walt Disney made a movie about the way the rare breed was saved, called "The Miracle of the White Stallions." The Lipizzans that Colonel Herrmann saved represented blood lines that had been in his family for generations. The Hapsburg Austrian emperor, Ferdinand II, gave Lipizzans to one of Colonel Herrmann's ancestors, the Knight Ritter von Schoebel. Hapsburgs gave Lipizzans to the nobles leading their armies as a mark of special favor. Von Schoebel fought in the bitter Thirty Years War, which devastated central Europe between 1618 and 1648. His magnificent Lipizzan stallions fought the enemy with their hooves and teeth, while he fought with a sword. Using the "airs above ground," which were originally battle maneuvers, the stallions did caprioles, courbettes, and langades, devastating the enemy. The art of training the "airs above ground" was passed on from generation to generation. When gun powder made the "airs" just one more obsolete weapon, they were refined and preformed for their aesthetic beauty. Colonel Herrmann is considered the greatest trainer of "airs above ground" alive today. One of the Colonel's stallions, Flying Falcon, leaps a hurdle on his hind legs, like a man. He is the only horse in the world that can perform this feat. His rider is Harry Herrmann, Otto's brother. Other of his Lipizzans do the famous triple capriole, the spectacular high capriole, the courbette, langade, levade, and the whole repertoire of the almost lost art "airs above ground" of the middle ages.

Millionaire says he doesn't want son reared in luxury

DALLAS (AP) — Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis says he shouldn't have to give his ex-wife extra millions in child support because he wants his sons "to grow up to have a proper set of values."

Testifying in a lawsuit brought by his first ex-wife, Sandra, Davis said he has paid an average of $42,300 in voluntary child support over the last two years. He said he has paid over and above a court-ordered $150 per month child support "from day one" of the couple's 1968 divorce.

"I don't want my sons to receive the sums of money she has talked about in the last two days," the ex-murder defendant said Friday. "I want them to be bright and I would like them to inherit my business someday. But they will have to earn it and they will have to demonstrate they are qualified to run it."

The first Mrs. Cullen Davis has asked a judge to amend the divorce decree and increase her child support and alimony payments. The 1968 decree ordered Davis to pay $150 a month in child support and $2,000 in alimony.

But the industrial czar said he has contributed at least $1,000 more each month and paid for medical expenses, spending money, bought cars and clothing and taken his sons, Thomas Cullen Jr., 17, and Brian, 15, on vacations.

Mrs. Davis has asked for $15,000 a month in a proposed budget that included payments for a country club membership, a health club membership, $30,000 to buy a Mercedes for the oldest boy, a $1 million house with five bathrooms, six telephones and a swimming pool. She said she also needed $2,500 each month for two maids, $900 a month for food, $1,500 monthly for clothing allowances and $200 a month for gasoline.

"Kids should start working at the earliest age possible," Davis said. "If they loaf around too long in life, they are missing valuable lessons. If money is given to them, they take it out and blow and don't learn how to manage it."

State District Judge Linda Thomas said she will decide on the case by the first week in October.

Mrs. Davis' attorney, William C. Koons, said the boys were "embarrassed and frustrated" by their continual requests for money from Davis.

Davis' attorney, Jack Pate, characterized the suit as an attempt to get "blood money" from Davis because Sandra Davis was angry that he married a third time, to Karen Masters Davis.

Davis was acquitted on a 1976 murder charge stemming from the shooting deaths of his stepdaughter and second wife's lover. He also was acquitted last fall on charges he tried to hire the murder of his divorce judge. That judge had been presiding over the lengthy divorce from Davis' second wife, Priscilla.

Porter requiem offered

NEW YORK (AP) — A requiem was offered at the College of Notre Dame Chapel in Baltimore, Md., on Friday for Pulitzer Prize winning writer Katherine Anne Porter.

Miss Porter, who died Thursday at the Carriage Hill Nursing Home in Silver Spring, Md., had developed friendships over the years with members of the religious community there who attended the service.

A memorial Mass is being planned at the same chapel in coming weeks for friends and family of the author of the 1962 novel, "Ship of Fools."

Miss Porter's body will be cremated and her ashes will be interred in private next to her mother's grave in her native town of Indian Creek, Texas.

In addition, following her wishes, a memorial party will be held on her birthday, May 15, in the Katherine Anne Porter Room at the University of Maryland, according to her nephew, Paul Porter of New York.

Miss Porter, 90, was in failing health since a stroke in 1977. She had made her home near the university in College Park, Md. for more than a decade and moved to the Carriage Hill Nursing Home last spring.

The author of "The Collected Stories of Katherine Anne Porter," which won her a Pulitzer Prize and the National Book Award for fiction, is also survived by a niece, Ann Heintze of Pound Ridge, N.Y.

Bubble boy celebrates ninth birthday

HOUSTON (AP) — David, the "bubble boy", celebrates his ninth birthday Sunday. The family gathering will be the second celebration within a week for the youngster doctors say is the oldest surviving untreated victim of severe combined immune deficiency.

He has lived in sterile isolation since his Sept. 21, 1971, birth because doctors knew heredity would leave David without cells important to warding off infections and without cells that produce antibodies for fighting germs.

At the request of the family, David's last name has never been revealed. Doctors normally brief the news media a few days before David's birthday on developments in the search for a cure. But no briefing was held this year because, they said, there was nothing new to report.

Dr. William T. Shearer, the Baylor College of Medicine immunology professor who took over the case two years ago, said many treatments have been considered but none of the therapies is possible for David at this time.

Meanwhile, he said, David has never experienced sickness and "as important to keeping David alive is the commitment to his involvement as a person and to his quality of life and the enrichment of life experiences."

With his growth, David's old "plastic bubble" has been expanded to three small rooms and he continues to alternate between duplicate isolation systems in his home and at Texas Children's Hospital.

David has outgrown the little "space suit" that once allowed him to walk outside the isolator system but it is to be replaced by a new suit now being developed.

Names in the News

SANTA MONICA (AP) — Pickfair, the 22-room mansion of silent screen star Mary Pickford, has been sold to sports czar Jerry Buss, owner of the Los Angeles Lakers and Kings.

Buss's bid of $5,362,500 for the stately Beverly Hills mansion and its 2.7 acres of walled grounds was accepted Friday at a five-minute Superior Court hearing.

Buss, who also owns the Forum in Inglewood where his teams play, is putting $1,025,000 down on his new home and is taking out a 20-year, 9 1/2-percent loan for the remainder. His monthly mortgage payments work out to $37,261.77.

Under Miss Pickford's will, the proceeds of the sale go to charity through the Mary Pickford Foundation.

Her widower, Buddy Rogers, has 60 days to move into the new $750,000 home he built on part of the Pickfair grounds that were not sold.

In Pickfair's heyday, Anna Pavlova danced there, Maurice Chevalier sang, and Charlie Chaplin, Clark Gable, Joan Crawford and Rudolph Valentino mingled at Miss Pickford's parties.

PORT COQUITLAM, British Columbia (AP) — Terry Fox, the one-legged cancer victim whose attempted cross-Canada run endeared him to Canadians, has won his country's highest civilian honor, becoming the youngest companion in the Order of Canada.

Governor-General Ed Schreyer on Friday presented a medal to the 22-year-old in the council chambers of this Vancouver suburb.

At the end of the short ceremony, Schreyer quoted a poem, comparing Fox to a brave soul who took a long, painful road to help create a dream that could not fail.

Viscious army of mosquitoes kills cows

BRAZORIA, Texas (AP) — The Texas Coast is under siege from swarms of mosquitoes so thick "you can get a handful" and so bloodthirsty they have attacked and killed at least 40 cows here.

Gray clouds of mosquitoes have buzzed along the coast since Hurricane Allen shoved gulf tides inland in mid-August.

"We are in a hell of a mosquito storm right now," said J.C. McNeil, director of Brazoria County's mosquito control office.

Rancher Stephen Perry said a thick swarm attacked and killed some of his cows here one day last month, draining almost half of the blood from the animals.

"We've had mosquitoes before but we've never had a seige like this. You could just reach out and get yourself a handful. It was just terrible and it's still bad," said Perry, who says he has lost 40 cows, three horses and several calves since the first swarm hit Aug. 19, but "we kind of lost count."

"It's the worst thing that ever happened to this coastal country. They came in about four o'clock one evening and the cattle were dead the next morning. It was just like the Bible, you know, with the locusts and all."

Not everyone in this community of 1,800 about 45 miles south of Houston believes Perry's strange tale, but a veterinarian at Texas A&M's Medical Diagnostic Laboratory said, "That's a very strong probability."

Dr. L.G. Gayle conducted autopsies on four cows and one calf and said tests found as much as half of the seven to nine gallons of blood in the animals' bodies was missing.

The animals probably died as a direct result of the large blood loss or later from heat and exhaustion, Gayle said.

He said several of the dead livestock were found by themselves and that they could find no reason "for the severe anemia" since no external or internal hemorrhaging was found.

The crickets are going to town in Texas

DALLAS (AP) — It's the perfect setting for a B-grade horror movie. Call it "Invasion of the Crickets."

Now, mind you, there's not anything particularly terrifying about crickets.

But don't tell that to someone who spends a maddening night trying to locate one of the chirping little buggers in a quiet suburban bedroom.

Or to the showowners who find them knee deep around their storefronts.

"Somebody do something!" cried Barbara Natoli when she discovered her Richardson Heights Shopping Center frame shop covered with the shiny black bugs.

Billions and billions of the hopping, screeching insects suddenly have popped up all over the state. They lurk outside doors in the very best and very worst neighborhoods, waiting for an opportunity to slip inside.

They show up in droves at shopping centers across the city, and a couple have even found their way to the upper floors of downtown office buildings.

"Oh my gosh, they're all over the place," said Dr. Bill Hamman, urban entomologist at Texas A&M University. "I've gotten calls from Corpus Christi, Waco, Houston and all parts in between."

Hamman blames that demon summer heat wave for the massive invasion, probably the biggest crop of the pesky critters in more than five years.

Crickets usually live in pastures, ditches and open spaces far away from urban sprawl. But because of the prolonged summer drought, most of the eggs were not destroyed by a moisture-fed fungus. And the fields the crickets usually feed on have dried up, forcing the black beasts to seek the better life inside city limits.

Exterminators have had field day rescuing shop owners from the leaping bugs, which have a tendency to scare off customers by jumping into their packages and hair.

"We finally got it under control," said Gordon Jackson, manager of the Prestonwood Town Center. "We had them (exterminators) put some stuff called Larva Lure in there and that's supposed to stop them."

Miniseries headed for second - place finish

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC estimated Saturday that 125 million viewers saw all or part of its 12-hour "Shogun," a figure that would make it TV's second-highest-rated miniseries behind ABC's "Roots," which drew an audience of 130 million in 1977.

National ratings from the A.C. Nielsen Co. for the program's first four nights appeared to solidify the second-place position of "Shogun," which starred Richard Chamberlain and Toshiro Mifune and was adapted from James Clavell's novel about 17th century Japan.

Through Thursday night, "Shogun" had a rating of 33, which means it was watched at least in part by an average of 33 percent of the nation's TV-equipped home. That compared to a 45 rating for the eight-day run of "Roots."

NBC's "Holocaust," the previous runner-up miniseries, had a rating of 31 in April 1978.

The national rating for Thursday night was 35, down slightly from 36.9 for Part III on Wednesday.

Overnight ratings for the concluding three-hour episode Friday night dipped slightly in three big cities, as they had for Part IV Thursday evening.

The decline Friday night was attributed to normally lower audiences for Friday night programming as well as to the start of Yom Kippur, the Jewish holiday.

Senators see Quid Pro Quo in Libyan loans to Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the senators investigating Billy Carter's ties to Libya appear convinced that the radical Arab nation regarded its $220,000 loans to him as a reward for his part in a Libyan diplomat's meeting with President Carter.

However, regardless of Libya's motives, the Senate probers have uncovered no evidence that Libya's connection with the president's brother did influence U.S. policy.

Billy Carter denied under oath he ever tried to influence the president or the government.

Five of the nine senators on a special investigating panel stated during public hearings they believe the Libyan payments to Billy started last Dec. 27 because Billy had a hand in arranging the president's meeting with Ali el-Houdari, Libya's Washington emissary, on Dec. 6.

"What may have been a routine meeting to you turned out to be worth a quarter of a million dollars to Billy Carter and Randy Coleman," Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., told Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, last week as the panel wound up five weeks of public hearings.

The panel has called Billy Carter back this week to give a sworn deposition in private on conflicts between his testimony and Justice Department investigators'. It will also take a deposition from Bert Lance, the former budget director.

The panel plans to deliver its conclusions to the Senate Oct. 4.

World's largest airport opens today in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta's new $600 million airport terminal will open its doors to the traveling public Sunday, ready to handle up to 55 million passengers a year.

The terminal, a futuristic complex large enough to cover 11 football fields, is the world's largest airport terminal and serves as the hub of the world's second busiest airport, Hartsfield International.

Contractors putting the finishing touches to the complex even worked through Thursday night's black-tie dedication ceremony.

But officials said the work would be finished in time for the first scheduled airline flight, Eastern's 845, arriving Sunday morning from Denver.

The airport was christened last week when President Carter — visiting Atlanta on a two-day campaign swing Tuesday — toured the terminal before taking off on Air Force One.

Nearly 10,000 invited guests and friends attended the official dedication Thursday night, munching caviar and strawberries and trying out the new underground rail system and people mover.

The terminal — with its modern silent trains, automatic parking areas and computerized information centers — is designed to get passengers in and out as quickly as possible.

The concourses are 1,000 feet apart, but the trip from the terminal to the farthest concourse takes only five minutes by train.

The old terminal was designed in 1961 to handle 18 million passengers a year, but its passenger load had grown to 41 million. The new complex, with 138 aircraft gates, will be able to handle 55 million passengers a year.

The facility can accommodate 120 takeoffs and landings per hour, up from 105 at the old terminal.

Radio record tells of warhead search

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Military radio transmissions monitored by the Arkansas Gazette following the explosion at a Titan II underground missile silo near Damascus, Ark., told the story of a chaotic search for the injured men and a lost nuclear warhead.

One Air Force sergeant died from injuries and 21 other Air Force personnel were injured in the explosion at 3 a.m. Friday, which came hours after a workman dropped a wrench and punctured the missile's fuel tank.

At one point during the confusion that followed, this transmission was recorded:

"Air Force to Command One. Anybody that goes along that area now, have them look around to see if they can pinpoint the warhead."

"Roger, I understand. Is there any danger as far as approaching it and radiation?"

"At this particular point, it's unknown but no one thinks so at this point."

The Air Force won't say what became of the warhead, or even confirm that a nuclear device was aboard the missile, though Air Force Secretary Hans Mark assured the public no radiation was released.

The news in brief

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has abandoned plans for the 1.3-liter four-cylinder standard engine for its 1981 "world cars," the Ford Escort and Mercury Lynx.

The carmaker had not received government approval for the engine because it did not meet Environmental Protection Agency standards for emissions and durability, a Ford spokesman said Friday.

In its place, the No. 2 automaker will use its 1.6-liter engine, which it originally planned as an option. The bigger engine has been certified by the EPA.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — An Orange County jury has acquitted two leaders of a Florida Ku Klux Klan faction in the beatings of three dissident Klansmen. Eight residents of Lake Wales, Fla., testified they saw or talked with John Paul Rogers, grand dragon for Florida of the United Klans of America, and state Klan treasurer Raymond Arthur Turner on the night of the beatings.

The jury acquitted Rogers and Turner on Friday on three counts of aggravated battery in the beatings, which occurred after hooded attackers wielding clubs invaded a meeting of dissident Klansmen.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Members of the North Carolina Symphony have gone on strike, citing the symphony trustees' refusal to commit themselves to specific growth plans.

The walkout, which began at midnight Friday, forced cancellation of performances scheduled for Saturday and Sunday. The 63-1 vote to strike came after the two sides were unable to reach an agreement on a new three-year contract.

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution can't sell newspapers from vending machines at the new midfield terminal at Atlanta's Hartsfield Airport, a Fulton Superior Court judge has ruled.

The temporary order came Friday after Airport News Corp., claimed that the vending machines put a dent in its business.

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has recalled 253,500 1974-model Fords and Mercurys for replacement of plastic radiator fans which may crack and shear away from their shafts.

The carmaker cautioned against opening the hood of the cars with the engine running. The automaker also recalled 36,044 four-wheel drive 1980 F-250 and F-350 light trucks for replacement of nuts that hold the twin drive shafts. Should the bolts come loose, Ford said, a shaft could fall and puncture the fuel tank or cut power to the front or rear wheels.

The Friday recalls were voluntary, Ford said. A spokesman said the carmaker knew of no accidents involving the cars or trucks.

KODIAK, Alaska (AP) — Four crewmen abandoned their 160-foot fishing boat after their vessel tangled with a whale near Chirikof Island, 175 miles southwest of here, the Coast Guard reported.

The crew of the fish tender Teddy reported hearing a cracking noise from the keel and then losing steerage in their vessel, a converted mine sweeper. After radioing that they were sinking, two crewmen bailed out and were picked up by a Coast Guard helicopter.

The captain and engineer, who remained aboard until early Friday, were rescued by a fishing boat.

CRETE, Ill. (AP) — A group of young men on an outing in eastern Will County have unearthed the skeleton of an American Indian who may have lived more than 1,500 years ago, officials say.

County Coroner Robert Tezak said the remains, which were found by four young men driving near Plum Creek on Monday, were shipped to the University of Illinois Circle Campus for examination.

There, he said, Professor Charles P. Warren, a specialist in forensic anthropology, and Dr. Robert L. Hall, an archaeological expert, studied the skeleton.

"From their examination, it is believed that the skeleton is that of an early American Indian, possibly from the Woodland Period," Tezak said. That period lasted from about 200 B.C. to A.D. 200.

HOOPESTON, Ill. (AP) — Fourteen volunteers hunting starlings accidentally shot a number of TV cables, knocking out prime time television reception in 700 homes.

Police Chief Orval Kaag, who led the hunt, said volunteers will be briefed in the future about the cables.

The cables, carried on utility poles, ran near old maple trees where many of the starlings were roosting Thursday evening. When the shooting was over, about 1,000 of the birds were dead — and so were television sets. Service was restored during the night.

The hunt was organized in this west-central Illinois community after residents complained that starling droppings around trees were unsightly.

NARROW ESCAPE. Kenneth Osmond who played the crafty Eddie Haskell in the "Leave It To Beaver" series, relaxes in his Los Angeles home during a 1975 interview. Bumped judges threaten airlines with lawsuits

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airlines received an unscheduled and vocal hearing from 24 Texas judges who were bumped from a flight to Houston Friday.

The civil appeals, state district court and county court-at-law judges had flown here from an annual judicial conference in Amarillo, but were barred from the Houston leg of the Southwest Flight 65, even though they had tickets.

The judges complained that the airline lied and was rude, and threatened to file a class-action suit on behalf of all Southwest Airlines passengers.

The flight left Amarillo an hour and a half late because of mechanical difficulties. When it landed at Love Field, passengers were told to get off because the plane had been rerouted to Oklahoma City.

"When we asked for an explanation, they told us to get off or they would call security," said Judge Paul Pressler, associate justice on the 14th Court of Civil Appeals in Houston.

W. Ervin James of the 127th State District Court in Houston said the judges left the plane only to find the passengers boarding it were going to Houston.

When some in the group asked for assistance in chartering a plane, "we were told to look in the yellow pages," another judge said.

Cities Service Gas Company issues debentures

Oklahoma City - Cities Service Gas Company, a subsidiary of Cities Service Company, has announced that it is issuing $125,000,000 in thirteen percent sinking fund debentures due in 2005.

The issue is priced at par and has received a rating of Aa from Moody's Investor Services, Inc. and AA from Standard and Poor's Corporation. The offering will be underwritten by a syndicate managed by Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb, Inc., and the First Boston Corporation.

The proceeds from the sale of these debentures will be used to retire $56,000,000 of outstanding short-term debts incurred by the Gas Company to construct as major extension of its pipeline system. The balance will be used to finance estimated 1980 capital expenditures and general corporate purposes.

Deadwood bawdy houses closed

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

DEADWOOD, S.D. (AP) — The season's first snowfall decorated the Black Hills last week, an annual omen in this tourist-dry period that big sports with big wallets will be here soon — hunters.

"Maybe not," said Clyde Mitchell, an observant old-timer. "How can there be a hunting season if there aren't any girls?"

As every student of sociology, or of lust, knows by now, Deadwood's storied bawdy houses were swooped down on recently and closed up — not by the local cops, but by federal and state lawmen who lack Deadwood's historic sense of tolerance in civic matters.

"Do-gooders," Clyde Mitchell snorted. His gray head shook in disbelief. "A little sinnin'," he said, "is a necessity."

Clyde Mitchell's views come from a mighty high hill of perspective. He is 95. When he was a boy, his father, one of the first gold diggers to work this gulch, introduced him to Calamity Jane. Ladies of notoriety in Deadwood are not new to Clyde.

Calamity Jane now sleeps under a slab on Mount Moriah, next to Wild Bill Hickok. Preacher Smith rests nearby.

Preacher Smith was bushwacked in 1876. Clyde's Uncle Alex helped haul the body back to town. So Clyde is also aware that, from the beginning, Deadwood's tolerance did not always extend to people who disapproved of a little sinnin'.

It did extend to Jack McCall. McCall shot Wild Bill Hickok in the back, shot him dead in a Deadwood saloon.

McCall explained:

Wild Bill, you see, had killed McCall's brother, who was stealing horses. Since horse stealing was his brother's only trade, Wild Bill deserved what he got. A local jury turned McCall loose. Justifiable homicide. Deadwood justice.

SPEAKING OF SOAPS

BY MARY ANN COOPER

Soaps are so durable that the average young adult could claim that he or she literally grew up watching a particular soap. Such is the case with "General Hospital" star Shell Kepler who plays Amy Vining on the ABC serial. "I love the soaps," says Shell. "I've been watching 'General Hospital' since I was three years old and I really care about the characters." However, it was a full year before that when she decided to become an actress. Seeing "The Wizard of Oz" turned this young thesp's head. Finally at age nine she appeared in the Chattanooga Tennessee Little Theater in "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie" and she became more convinced than ever that she wanted to be an actress.

When Shell was fourteen her mother died. Two years later her father moved back east to accept a position as vice president with a large corporation. At that point Shell and her brother decided to fend for themselves in Los Angeles.

Shell is definitely one of her brother's biggest fans. "Fred was a prodigy in classical guitar but now he's the lead singer in a rock group. Since I'm a frustrated singer, I live vicariously through him."

Susan O'Hanlon, who plays Anne Logan on the same serial, also has a brother who is very special to her. His name is Loring. He is her older brother and he is mentally retarded.

"The doctors suggested we institutionalize Loring," explains Susan. "But we wouldn't consider it. He is a very important member of our family and we learn a lot from him. Loring is one of the happiest people we know."

Loring lives a full life, according to Susan. He lives in an historic New York home where Susan grew up. Part of the home has been converted into an elegant French restaurant, where Loring enjoys participating in the family business. He takes great pride in seeing to it that the kitchen is kept clean and neat. He is also very helpful in the yard, working long hours, taking care of the plants and keeping it beautiful.

Susan can't say enough about Loring, and she smiles when she talks about him. "Loring never regresses, he progresses every day, always."

Now a look at what's been happening and what will happen on all afternoon dramas.

Marketing of little beauties is still a going business

EDITOR'S NOTE — There was a song that said, "You must have been a beautiful baby; you must have been a wonderful child. Why, when you were only startin' to go to kindergarten, I bet you drove the little boys wild." It's more than a song these days. The marketing of little beauties is a going business in Hollywood. Tina Payne is one of them.

By TAMARA JONES
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — She left in the searing heat of a Texas summer and came to Hollywood to become a star.

She dyed her hair bombshell blonde, hired an agent and shed her clothes for a series of provocative promotional ads that shocked a generally unshockable town.

She was 10 years old.

Tina Payne was being groomed for the spotlight from the time she was 3, when she entered her first beauty pageant and came in fourth in a field of four.

But Tina had one thing most aspiring actors don't: money. The Paynes spent nearly $8,000 trying to get Hollywood's attention. They got it.

On Nov. 5, 1979, Tina took what her publicist called a shortcut on the road to fame with a full-page Hollywood Reporter advertisement.

Arms crossed over her chest, a come-hither smile on her fifth-grade face, Tina's photo was coupled with a "Would You Believe I'm Only 10?" slogan that enraged legions of stage mothers-turned-moral activists.

Within weeks, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of the City of Los Angeles had issued two citations against Tina's mother for "taking indecent photographs of a minor" and allowing a minor to model without a work permit.

Dorothy Payne is appealing her $1,100 fine "as a matter of principle. Tina wasn't working; those ads were part of her portfolio. They're saying I violated her in some way."

While saying it was wrong "to have the child stripped nude in front of any man, even a photographer," Labor Department area administrator Colleen Logan concedes it "was not that grievous a violation."

Not when compared to cases like that of a desperate stage mother who fed her 5-year-old phenobarbital to keep the child awake for a nightly stage performance, Ms. Logan says.

Her concern was echoed by clinical psychologist Dr. Thomas Backer, who warned a seminar of stage parents that "sexual abuse on the job is a very real problem which every parent of a child who acts will probably face at one point in his or her child's career."

Tina Payne says she "just knew I could be a child star and an adult star" while studying drama in New York, here exposure to celebrities made her long to be part of that glittery world.

Competition is cut-throat even among the junior league of this industry where dreams of fame all too often awaken to the reality of failure.

"We have about 300 children, but we try not to bring in more than one or two types who are similar," says Jack Rose, head of one of Hollywood's larger agencies.

"We must get 1,000 submissions a week," Rose says, "and of those, we'll probably interview 20 and we'll take maybe two — if we're lucky."

The pinup-style propaganda that fired her career doesn't bother Tina, who says she has learned to shrug off the negative comments. But her mother's wrangle with the Labor Department does trouble her.

Publicist Tom Masters ("Mr. Tom" to Tina) says the appalled critics "actually did us a favor."

"We had over 100 calls that first morning," Masters says of the ad as natural. Tina was bannered in headlines "across the world" and appeared on talk shows in a hype man's dream of unpaid publicity.

She soon landed a coquette's role in the upcoming television miniseries, "Beulah Land."

"It's a dissident's success, to a degree," Masters says. "If there were no controversy, maybe no one would be interested."

Tina's "Beulah Land" coup was followed by a few jobless months trudging to the cattle call auditions and producers' interviews with the rest of Hollywood's young hopefuls.

She now is the star a screenwriter has in mind as he pens a television pilot about a 12-year-old law student, Masters says, and is starring in an independent feature film about a pre-pubescent country singer.

Such projects are exactly what Tina had in mind when she bade farewell to her daddy, horse, cat and two siblings to follow the elusive spotlight west a little more than a year ago.

Stomach makes boy feel whole

By LINDA FRANKLIN
Associated Press Writer
LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — For more than seven of his nine years, Jason White has eaten intravenously, his "meals" a fluid flowing directly into the central blood vessel near his heart.

Jason had no stomach. Surgeons cut it out when he was 18 months old, hoping the operation would solve a chronic digestive problem they diagnosed as Zollinger-Ellison syndrome.

The illness causes "ulcers and ulcers and ulcers, except if you take out the stomach," says Dr. Stanley Dudrick.

But Jason did not have Zollinger-Ellison and his problems continued.

In February, Jason entered the Hermann Hospital operating room in Houston for exploratory surgery. More than 15 hours later, he came out with an artificial stomach, a pouch fashioned from a valve in his body.

The stomach has made Jason "really proud," said his mother, Cindy White, 34, in a telephone interview from Houston. "For some reason, (the absence) made him think he wasn't a whole person," she said.

Dudrick, the Houston surgeon who devised the intravenous hyperalimentation (IVH) system Jason must still use, also fashioned the boy's stomach.

Jason's first taste of real food came in April. He asked for a hard-boiled egg white. He also tasted turkey, chicken, fish and cooked vegetables. But a serious bout with diarrhea ended the parade of food trays and put him back on IVH.

The stomach is fine, but the digestive ailment persists. Dudrick says that some day Jason will be able to eat "darn near normally" and will be taken off the IVH.

"Jason's not sick, he just can't eat," Dudrick said. "He's full of spunk, really an extremely bright young man."

Mrs. White has spent the last two years in Houston with Jason. He has been hospitalized since July 1979; before that, Jason and his mother lived in Houston for a year to be near Dudrick's care.

Ed White, Jason's 48-year-old father, maintains the family home in Texarkana, Ark., and visits in Houston every other weekend.

Mrs. White describes her son's transformation since the operation as "amazing."

"I pull out old pictures of Jason to look at them and it's hard to believe this is the same kid," she said, a hint of joy in her voice.

When he arrived in Houston, Jason weighed barely 40 pounds and was near death, but the Whites had faced that many times before. Once they started making funeral arrangements for their only child.

Now the once spindly child weighs 81 pounds, about normal for a 9-year-old. He is also almost seven inches taller.

Dudrick believes Jason's growth has been spurred by an increased flow of IVH.

"Some people, when they are feeding patients (with IVH), tend to think they are playing it safe and decrease the daily allotment by 10 to 15 percent," he said, explaining that reductions can impede growth and actually be dangerous.

Dudrick didn't criticize Jason's earlier medical treatment but said the doctors at Hermann were willing to take chances because they were more familiar with the IVH technique.

The surgeon compared the boy's plight to a faulty auto engine. Hormones in Jason's gastrointestinal tract can't operate at varying speeds to break down the food he eats, he explained.

"With Jason, it was either stopped or going 100 miles per hour," Dudrick said. There is no accelerator and no brake to pace the digestion.

Dudrick said doctors have to find a way to "slow his gut down." Now they believe the problem is caused by a microscopic tumor, a situation called the VIP syndrome, for vasoactive intestinal polypeptide.

Getting along without dogies, stockyards come back

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid used to sleep here, mostly at Fannie Porter's Place, which was not a pool hall.
Doc Holiday dealt more than a few hands of poker here and Sam Bass, between train robberies, found it a dandy hiding place.
A gambler named Luke Short immortalized himself by gunning down Long Hair Jim Courtright, a notorious U.S. marshal fond of spilling beer and blood.
Tough, lusty cowboys drove thousands upon thousands of longhorn cattle into the stockyards, then squandered their cash on the neighborhood delights.

The stockyards survived, at least nominally so, but the giant Swift and Armour meat packing houses did not. The kindest word for north Fort Worth was suddenly "distressed."
It was a coarse but colorful legacy that, in time, attached itself to the stockyards and the city's north side, both of which fell on hard times.
"The north side saloons were so tough," chuckled an oldtimer, "that bouncers routinely checked customers at the door for weapons."
"If you didn't have a gun they gave you one."
Things have changed a bit in Fort Worth's wild and raucous stockyards area. But the western-flavored rowdiness remains a fixture in a grand new scheme.

A move is afoot to resurrect and restore a colorful segment of Texana and capitalize on the tourist and economic potential therein.
"We've got a unique situation," says Joe Dulle, one of the bright young entrepreneurs pouring time, money and talent into the project.
"People can go out and build plastic western facades anywhere. We got the real thing right here."
Unfortunately, the "real thing" also includes an image only slightly removed from New York's South Bronx or Chicago's turbulent South Side.
"We're not saying it's going to be easy or inexpensive," sighed Jane Schlansker, "but I believe Fort Worth's most distinct and utterly charming selling feature is its rich Western heritage."

She said:
"I've always been intrigued that the Fort Worth business community never has been quite able to agree on whether to sell culture or Cowtown — whether the chowchips should be swept under the carpet or sold for souvenirs."
A non-Texan, advertising-public relations executive, Ms. Schlansker is but one of many investors who contend the so-called stockyards area could become an international showplace.
"After all," she pointed out, "this is a national historic district."
She and Dulle and others renovated and reopened a rustic watering hole called the White Elephant Saloon and more recently a bar and beer garden called the Lone Star Chili Parlor.

Stymied by clues, police turn to psychics for aid

By SALLY CARPENTER
Associated Press Writer
Stymied by scant clues in dead-end cases, some Texas police officers are abandoning skepticism and increasingly are accepting and soliciting help from psychics.
While the extra-sensory aid does not always locate a person or result in an arrest, it has changed some hard-boiled law enforcement attitudes.
"It's opened my mind," said Longview Police Sgt. Mike Maxey, who discovered the body of a murder victim in the spot a local psychic had described. "You've got your non-believers. 'There ain't no way, Charlie.' But a closed mind is not going to see anything."
"There's a lot of things that we don't understand, and never will."
Longview officers spent a week looking for Marilyn Scallish, who disappeared July 18 from the self-service gasoline station where she worked.

"We were at wit's end," Maxey said. "We were sitting in here cutting up and we decided, what the hell, we'd try a psychic."
The officers trooped over to the shop of Audrey Allston, who provided them with target phrases while holding the 40-year-old woman's purse and keys.
The body was found at an isolated spot that resembled the scene described by Mrs. Allston — near a railroad trestle with cross-timbers and cross-ties and water flowing underneath.
Maxey said he might use psychics again in the future.
"Why not? You hate to consider it as a pure investigative tool, but there's a time and place for everything," he said.
Tom Covington, a Dallas police crime analyst in 1976, said he and other officers solicited help from psychic John Catchings in identifying the "friendly rapist," suspected in 75 North Dallas rapes.
"It was a shot in the dark thing," recalled Covington, now a community relations officer. "None of us had ever had any association with a psychic."

"John gave us some leads to follow up on there," he said. "He did tell us a little bit about the individual and his character, which more or less was confirmed after we caught the individual."
Guy Marble Jr., 33, was arrested in February 1977 and is serving a 60-year prison sentence.
Asked if he would consider using a psychic again, Covington said: "Oh, yeah. I really would."
Catchings, 33, and his psychic mother Bertie say they have been involved in several Dallas cases, usually after a call from a family member.

One of Mrs. Catchings' more renowned cases, however, came after she predicted the double murder of a young couple in Austin.
Her predictions, printed in The Austin American-Statesman in January 1972, included the grim forecast that "two young people will be murdered. Their bodies will be discovered in a field near a bridge and some water..."
July 16, 1972, Thomas More Matzilevich, 21, and his wife Kathleen, 18, were found shot and burned beyond recognition in their automobile at City Park on Lake Austin.

Oil use could drop in decade

HOUSTON (AP) — A hydrocarbons publication says two factors could drop domestic consumption of crude oil significantly during the current decade.
"One is the decision by major U.S. refiners to crack the barrel of crude to extinction," reports Hydrocarbon Processing.
"Finally, the U.S. has another card up its sleeve for reducing crude oil consumption which all other nations do not have. The United States can significantly reduce its crude oil requirements by eliminating the production of unleaded gasoline. It is estimated the production of unleaded gasoline has raised crude oil requirements of U.S. refiners by about 6 percent."
The internationally circulated monthly magazine makes the observations while discussing energy trends in its 1981 HPI Market Data Book which annually projects worldwide hydrocarbon industry expenditures.
The publication said it has been estimated the decision to process crude to extinction would enable the U.S. refining industry to increase the yield of gasoline from an average of 42 percent to something like 65 percent of a barrel of crude oil.
"Production of the light distillates, including gasoline, would increase correspondingly from 70 percent to 85-90 percent of the barrel," the publication said.
"Because this trend would essentially eliminate furnace oils and Bunker C (fuel oil) from the refiner's product slate, the direct firing of coal would have to increase in the United States for utilities, industry and marine fleets. Since the main restriction on coal production has been the price of Bunker C, coal should be able to step in and fulfill these end-uses."
Hydrocarbon Processing said it has been estimated 85 percent of the world's refining capacity "is just skimming the barrel of crude to get a yield of 15-22 percent gasoline."

"Increasing the yield of gasoline by installing cat crackers, cokers, alkylation and heavy oil desulfurization units will greatly improve the balance of payments problems for all consuming nations by lowering their dependence on OPEC crude oil. Consequently, we see a continuing boom in worldwide refinery construction activity as each nation follows the lead of the United States."
The industry was said to be entering into a construction boom that will be greater than the 1974-75 boom. Projects in varying stages of development in June were said to total an all-time high of 3,356, including 883 in the United States.
The new HPI Market Data Book projects 1981 worldwide expenditures in excess of $714 billion.
The projections include $34 billion for capital improvements, $13.62 billion for maintenance, and $667 billion in operations costs.
The overall $714 billion total includes $183.98 billion in the United States and $530.64 billion in other areas.
The U.S. capital expenditure estimates include $4.4 billion for refining, $3.3 billion petrochemical, $400 million gas processing and $300 million solid fuels. Estimates for other areas include $9.5 billion refining, $12 billion petrochemical, $3.1 billion gas processing, and $1 billion solid fuels.
"The huge construction activity of the hydrocarbon processing industry offers an expanding market for all types of construction equipment ranging from large cranes to earth moving equipment to trucks to compressors to welding machines and to hand and power tools," the Market Data Book said.

Investigators say cop lied

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas police officer who shot and killed a burglar in his own home has been fired because internal investigators said he lied about the shooting, police said.
Chief Glen King dismissed officer Danny Cain, 28, because Cain made false reports on the shooting, a violation of department rules and regulations.
A Dallas County grand jury Wednesday refused to indict Cain in the July 15 shooting of 18-year-old Samuel S. Stone. Cain said he shot Stone three times in the chest when the handcuffed youth pointed a pistol at him. The officer has been on administrative leave with pay since July 28.
"He submitted three reports that were very different in major and essential details," King said. "My action was not taken because I believe he committed a criminal violation. This was purely for violation of the rules and regulations of the department rather than for any belief that he was not punished for a criminal violation."
Mike Gibson, Cain's attorney, said he thought the dismissal was "a little severe," but said his client had not yet decided if he would appeal.
Cain first told investigators he surprised burglars in his home when he returned from work, and shot Stone when Stone pointed a pistol at him. Cain said then he did not handcuff Stone.

On July 28, he told officers he had chased Stone and another burglar out to the alley behind his house, caught and handcuffed Stone, and led him back to the house.

Hill says his plans are still uncertain

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)— John Hill looks like a candidate and talks like a candidate, but he's not ready to say he will run for governor in 1982.

"No one has to sell me on public service or serving the people of this state as governor," Hill said in an interview. "I'm sure that would be most satisfying."

His decision will come about June 1.

"I would say shortly after the (legislative) session is over that decision would be appropriate," Hill told The Associated Press.

Hill, a 57-year-old Austin attorney, entered politics in 1966 as Texas secretary of state after a successful legal practice in Houston. In 1972 he was elected Texas attorney general. After three terms, he ran for Texas governor in 1978, the dream of his life.

Hill won the Democratic primary with 51.4 percent of the vote, defeating Gov. Dolph Briscoe and former Gov. Preston Smith. But he lost by about 17,000 votes to Republican newcomer Bill Clements in the general election.

"We won the race but we lost the election," Hill said, recalling the historic upset. "We didn't get our vote out at the last."

Others note Hill spent $3.5 million and Clements $8 million.

Two years later, a frequently heard question is "What happened to John Hill?"

"During that first year, Bitsy and I settled down in our Austin home," Hill said.

As a senior partner in the firm of Hughes and Hill, with offices in Austin and Dallas, his law practice has prospered.

The firm won a $19.2 million breach of contract suit against the new government of Iran for Electronic Data Systems, headed by Ross Perot. Hill also is representing Perot in the controversy over computer services for the State Department of Human Resources.

"Speeches? I'd say I made 10 or 12 last year and maybe this year more than that."

Hill has remained close to operations of the Texas Democratic Party through state chairman Billy Goldberg, a wealthy Houston businessman who got the job on Hill's recommendation.

Hill was co-chairman of the Texas delegation to the 1980 national Democratic convention, and in political circles, "John Hill, Democrat" is a common term.

"I'm a Democrat," Hill says, emphasizing the last word. "I love the Democratic Party. I think it's the party through the years that has the interest of every citizen at heart... I view myself as more in the middle of the spectrum on my overall approach. On specific issues I would be very careful with money."

"I'm not a wasteful person. And from that standpoint, I would be viewed as a conservative. But I don't mind spending money for what I view as necessary, desirable and essential projects in government or in my personal life."

He still smarts over some of Clements' campaign claims.

"Clements obviously very falsely labeled me in some of his campaign literature, just short of making a broad sweeping claim that I was a liberal on all issues, which is not a correct assessment at all," Hill said.

Hill said Clements' administration "has not been productive at all. We really are just having to bleed awhile because we obviously have a governor that doesn't seem to be deeply interested in the kind of concerns that I think most of our people have," Hill said.

"The kindest, most charitable thing I could say to make any sense out of his administration is that he must believe that Texas government is somewhat akin to Washington government, and nothing could be further from the truth."

Hill said he will do a lot of thinking before committing himself to another governor's race.

"It's something I have to talk with Bitsy about in a lot of depth."

he said. "I've got to assess what I should be doing and what the Lord frankly would want me to do—if I can discover that through my prayers."

"I very much want to see the Democrats regain the governorship in 1982, because I think it is important for my children and my grandchildren and for my state," he said. "I'll certainly work hard to see that occurs."

If Hill should decide to run, he thinks he is in good shape.

"I have an excellent political organization, I'm happy to say. I would put it up against anyone's. It doesn't have a name. Just the people who have worked with us."

Money would not be a big campaign problem, Hill said.

"Not one penny was borrowed (in the 1978 campaign), and we did not have a deficit of any consequence, particularly when you bear in mind Mr. Clements borrowed $5 million," he said. "I believe those same people who supported me before would be responsive to me again."

But in the end, Hill realizes, a 1982 governor's race depends what Texans think of Clements after four years of his administration.

"After a year and a half, I've been hoping, frankly, that he would chalk up a lot of what he said in the campaign as just campaign rhetoric. I knew at the time he wasn't going to give $1 billion back to the taxpayers of Texas. I knew at the time he wasn't going to be able to carry out those astringent savings he proposed."

Hill glances out the window of his office.

"At this time, it seems fair to say that some of us are going to have to point out the error of his ways... I am not going to be reluctant to speak out. I guess that's what I'm saying."

Food high follows the nicotine low

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

You don't have to quit smoking to suffer withdrawal symptoms. Just go without a cigarette for an hour or so.

Even this small deprivation of nicotine can produce physiological discomfort and cause a slump in performance British psychologists say.

The researchers examined 56 men aged 20 to 32. Half were non-smokers; the rest smoked more than 15 cigarettes a day. The smokers were given drugs that altered the excretion of nicotine. Some smokers experienced an accelerated nicotine excretion in the urine; others retained nicotine in the bloodstream.

For the first 40 minutes, both groups of smokers performed at about the same level of accuracy, but lower than the non-smokers. Then, the smokers who lost nicotine suffered a deterioration in performance.

She may start her binge with two packages of cookies. Then add a loaf of bread, a gallon of milk, half a gallon of ice cream. She'll often follow all this with a basket of fried chicken and handfuls of candy and pastries.

This is the "binge-purge syndrome," as described by researchers at Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago. When the "food high" passes, panic and self-loathing set in, and the woman either induces vomiting or fills herself with laxatives to purge herself.

"This is predominantly a female phenomenon," says Dr. Craig Johnson, explaining that it is related to anorexia nervosa, the emotional disorder in which young women voluntarily starve themselves.

Johnson and Dr. Michael G. Thompson surveyed 123 apparently normal women students and found 39 terrified of being fat and eight "currently using vomiting as a method of weight control."

Johnson says he has started a new research and treatment project for women with the binge-purge syndrome.

Binge drinkers who deprive themselves of food apparently can develop a form of muscle damage previously recognized only in severe alcoholics.

The condition, marked by muscle pain and weakness and in which the muscle breaks down, is known as alcoholic rhabdomyolysis. Untreated, it can cause permanent muscle and kidney damage.

About two years ago, a patient appeared at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore with the symptoms. "When talking with my patient, he told me he had been drinking heavily for a few weeks," says Dr. Daniel B. Drachman, director of the neuromuscular unit.

"But he also told me he hadn't had anything substantial to eat for a day or two," Drachman says.

Foreign tourists invade America

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer

For Tony Crow, who owns a used furniture store in London, vacation always meant a trip to Spain with the wife and three kiddies. This year, the Crows spent their three-week holiday in Florida.

"It's safe to drink the water, Americans are politier, there are no language problems," says Crow. "And you can't beat the weather here, can you?"

North America is in the midst of a foreign tourist invasion that may make this the first year that foreign tourists outnumber Americans going abroad. The latest estimates are that 8.2 million foreign tourists, 20 percent more than last year, will visit the United States compared to 8 million Americans who will vacation outside North America.

Nearly a million-and-a-half of the visitors will be from the British Isles, a million from Japan, 600,000 from West Germany, half a million from Venezuela, and large numbers from France, the Middle East, Scandinavia and Holland. French tourist officials estimate, for example, that a quarter of the vacation money spent by French citizens will be spent in the United States.

The influx stems primarily from the decline of the dollar, which makes it feasible, even advisable, for middle class Europeans and others to vacation here rather than the Costa del Sol or the Riviera. Accommodations and consumer goods in the United States are cheaper than ever, and overseas airlines have begun offering the cut-rate tours and charter flights long available to Americans.

It adds up to a major lift for the U.S. economy. Foreign travelers are expected to spend nearly $6 billion in the United States this year, and the gap between what Americans spend overseas and what they spend here will narrow to $200 million from last year's deficit of $1 billion.

The area reaping the greatest return may be southern Florida, where the economy has always depended on tourism. The state had been losing ground to the Caribbean as an American vacation spot when the British discovered it, and vice-versa.

"A couple of years ago, you could fire a cannon up Collins Avenue at this time of year and not hit anyone," says Sid Luxemburg, manager of the Sea Isle Hotel in Miami Beach. "These visitors have been an incredible shot in the arm."

The weather has a lot to do with it, something Florida tourist officials take advantage of in the increasing amount of advertising they're doing overseas. "What you have to remember is that the weather in Britain is so diabolical," says John Chapman, a British tourist.

Florida also benefits from its increasing Latin character. Most South American tourists enter the country in Miami and many get no farther. Spanish is a second language there, the weather seems like home, and there's plenty of shopping. Appliances and cameras, for instance, cost double or triple at home.

Shopping is probably the main attraction in New York. If the city's standards—the Statue of Liberty, Empire State Building, Rockefeller Plaza—all attract foreign visitors, so do the large department stores. Many items seem such bargains that British tourists say the dollar sign on price tags would be replaced by the pound sign (about $2.30) at home.

Many tourists follow the example of Francois Mariand, a recent law school graduate from Paris. After a four-month tour of North America, largely on a cut-rate, unlimited mileage bus pass, he returned to New York and headed for a jeans store, from which he emerged carrying several dozen pairs at $18 apiece.

"At home they cost twice and sometimes more," he says. "They make very, very good presents for my friends."

Molly Hatchet band claims distinction in music field

LOS ANGELES (AP)— sales mark. Their second album, "Flirtin' With Disaster," has sold in excess of 1.4 million since it was released a year ago.

The speaker is Bruce Crump, 23-year-old drummer for Molly Hatchet, and the subject of the band's musical heritage is about the only matter that came anywhere near to disturbing the curly-haired musician during a recent interview in his publicist's office.

In fact, Crump and the five other members of the Jacksonville, Fla., ensemble have little cause for complaint these days. Their 1978 debut album, "Molly Hatchet," has just broken through the million

All is going well, commercially. But Crump indicated the band is a bit tired of being classified as heirs to the southern tradition established by Lynyrd Skynyrd (the group that put Jacksonville on the rock music map) and the Allman Brothers.

Hurricane damaged, and uncovered past

AUSTIN (AP)— While Hurricane Allen walloped South Texas and destroyed a few million dollars' worth of the present, it also helped uncover part of the past.

The August storm allowed archeologists to look at a Civil War military camp and pieces of several shipwrecks along the coast.

However, State Archeologist Curtis Tunnell says even more artifacts might have been uncovered if the storm had blown through with the 180-mile-per hour winds it carried until it hit the coast.

"We would have been down there a lot faster," said Tunnell, who recently went to the South Texas coast to see what Allen unearthed. Allen's biggest archeological success was at a Union Army supply camp that is periodically uncovered on Brazos Island near Brownsville. Evidence of the camp last was seen when Hurricane Beulah ripped through the area in 1967.

"This time we found a variety of foundations of old structures. There were some wooden barrels they used as shallow wells to get water for animals," Tunnell said.

There also were century-old wagon tracks left in the clay by military supply wagons. Pieces of broken bottles, military insignia, building foundations and barrels from the site have been brought here for study.

Hurricanes are extremely efficient archeologists, according to Tunnell.

"You need to take advantage of that kind of opportunity. It does a thorough job of uncovering and it does it as carefully as an archeologist can do it. It would take months and months to do that kind of work and see that kind of site," said Tunnell.

Parts of several barges and wooden ships also were uncovered by Allen. All, however, had been previously studied, and Tunnell said there's no reason for treasure hunters to flock to the area.

"They always attract interest, however. People say, 'I'm rich. At last I've found me a treasure ship,'" he said.

Most of the unearthed vessels were salvaged when they went down.

The rare opportunity to take a look at Texas' past won't last long. "It gets covered again quickly. The sand is already beginning to cover things we photographed," said Tunnell, predicting the Civil War camp again will be covered in a month or so.

This is a free program sponsored by the TEHA Committee of the Extension Homemaker Council. Everyone is invited to attend.

"SUGAR-FREE" MAY CAUSE DIARRHEA

"Sugar-free" foods may cause diarrhea, if they contain sorbitol or manitol. Sorbitol and manitol are the key ingredients in many "sugar-free" foods designed for use in weight-control diets — and as aids in preventing tooth decay. Sorbitol and manitol are known as "hexitols" or sugar alcohols. They are slowly absorbed from the intestinal tract into the body, and they're slowly acted upon by bacteria in the mouth. Unfortunately, these sugar alcohols do cause problems in some individuals.

Medical authorities are reporting cases of "chewing-gum diarrhea" in patients who consume large amounts of sugar-free gum. Chewing gum isn't the only problem though. Any foods containing sorbitol or manitol can cause diarrhea in some persons. Children are affected, as well as adults, particularly if they eat large amounts of dietetic candies.

Check the label on foods if persistent diarrhea occurs. Foods that contain sorbitol or manitol will say so on the label. If foods you're eating do contain these items, then reduce your intake of the foods. Medical doctors say that 85-170 grams of sorbitol per day will cause diarrhea in persons affected by this problem. If diarrhea persists, be sure to consult your physician.

writer Merrill Shindler's question — "After making 40 films in 20 years, why did you stop 10 years ago?" — is as follows:

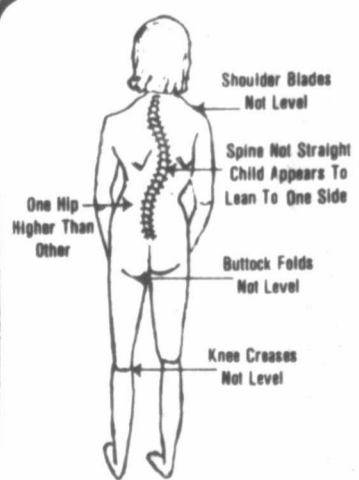

"I didn't want to contribute any of my time, talent or energy to the garbage that was coming out. I was badly burned that last year. In 1970 they started to double-bill my work with 'Deep Throat,' and I said, 'Forget it!' I'm not knocking pornography, but don't put it with my work. It doesn't make any sense. I remember waking up the day I found out I had been double-billed with 'Deep Throat,' and I had to make a very important decision: either to find the man who did that and kill him or to deal with it sensibly. I got so turned off ... I was in the middle of some very heavy negotiations with 20th Century-Fox on a long eight-picture deal ... and I told them to shove it.

"I didn't want any part of anything. I was so down on the film business that I didn't go to the movies. So in answer to your question, I waited until they cleaned house. Everything in this business is a cycle; I figured I'd come back when they'd cleaned the cycle. I think it's about ready."

Spinal Curvature Often Mistaken For Bad Posture

"Scoliosis" is the term used to describe lateral curvature of the spine, and it has been a medical enigma since ancient times. Science News in May of 1979 reported that, "Recent findings suggest that perhaps as many as 10 percent of the children in that age group (10-13) have scoliosis."

Serious spinal curvature detracts from appearance, can produce psychological stress, and extensive physical consequences like degenerative arthritis of the spine, with increasingly severe back pain and disability. As scoliosis stresses the spine, it may lead to disk disease and sciatica. Preventing the permanent deformity and disability caused by scoliosis is largely dependent upon early detection. Early signs of scoliosis include obvious spinal curvature, one shoulder higher than the other, prominence of one hip and/or shoulder blades, one leg shorter than the other, and body trunk shifted out of balance.

Scoliosis screening tests are quick and simple and highly recommended for children in their formative years. In fact, scoliosis screening tests are required for school-aged children in New York, Florida, Minnesota, New Jersey, and Washington.

From September 15th to September 27th, this office will provide scoliosis screening tests to the public without charge as a public service in conjunction with the Texas Chiropractic Association's state wide screening program.

INSPECT YOUNG WHEAT: Seedling stands of wheat are extremely susceptible to the damage caused by the fall armyworm and beet armyworm.

As fall temperatures begin to drop, the foliage of other hosts such as grasses, grain, sorghum, alfalfa, peas, beans and cotton becomes less attractive and increased damage by these armyworms to stands of small grains can be expected.

The larval stages of these armyworms lasts about 20 days and their pupal stages are passed in the soil. Both moths lay eggs in masses on the foliage of host plants.

When large numbers of these armyworms are present, wheat stands can be severely damaged in a period of a few days. To prevent excessive stand loss, young stands of wheat should be inspected every three or four days until frost.

The need for insecticidal control measures should be determined based on the damage caused to the foliage of young small grain plants. Insecticides are most effective when applied against small larvae. Larger larvae $\frac{3}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ inches long are more difficult to control. Insecticide applications are warranted when an average 4-5 larvae per square foot can be found.

Identification of these worms are important in order to select the most effective insecticide. The fall armyworm can reach a length of $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches and is very variable in color. It will have three yellow lines extending down the back with a prominent white inverted "Y" on the head. The beet armyworm is also about $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches long when full grown and very variable in color. On the side above the second pair of legs is a dark spot that helps to separate it from the fall armyworm.

Parathion four pound at $\frac{1}{4}$ pint will give good control of the fall armyworm but will hardly kill any beet armyworms. Lannate R at 1 - 2 pints has provided good control of the beet armyworm.

COTTON DESSICANTS:

This may be an exception this year to the normal practice of not using desiccants or defoliant on cotton in our area.

Desiccants are recommended when 80 percent bolls are open. Area cotton fields may soon reach this level of open bolls. When the remaining unopen bolls are mature, then the time is right. Mature unopen bolls are firm, cannot be dented by pressure exerted between the thumb and forefinger and cannot be cut easily with a sharp knife. At this stage, fiber and seed development is essentially complete, and only minimal reduction in lint yield will be caused by chemical treatment.

On the other hand, too early application of either a desiccant or defoliant can have the following adverse effects: reduced lint yield, reduced micronaire value, lower seed grade, and reduced fiber strength. The maturity of cotton cannot be hastened through use of harvest-aid chemicals. Only time and favorable weather will mature cotton.

However, harvest-aid chemicals will promote more rapid opening of mature bolls and prepare the crop for earlier harvesting. This drought stressed cotton appear to be more stringy as it opens. This is going to cause some yield loss and likely grade loss as well.

Farmers with decent cotton this dry year sure may want to consider using either arsenic acid or Paraquat as a desiccant. Supplies for these products may become in very short supply, so growers may need to line up supplies quickly.

Reference to commercial or trade names is made with the understanding that no discrimination is intended and no endorsement by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service is implied.

GREENS FOR TEXAS GARDENS:

Lowly turnips may not be so lowly after all. Turnip greens are high in vitamin A, vitamin C, iron and calcium and contain only 35 to 55 calories per cup.

So not only are greens good for you, but they're also easy to grow. And they are one of the few vegetables that you can enjoy fresh the year around. When planting turnips, a little seed will go a long way. About one-fourth ounce or so will plant about 100 feet of garden row. Space rows 18 to 36 inches apart. Cover seed only about one-half inch deep.

Plant greens thick so that seedlings are about one-half inch apart. Allow them to grow to about 5-7 inches tall, then thin the plants to about 8 inches apart and eat the thinnings. As plants develop, harvest only the large, outside leaves and the plants will produce new leaves for later use.

You can enjoy greens until a really hard freeze kills them. Recommended turnip varieties for our area are Just Right and Purple Top White Globe, which form both enlarged roots and produce tasty greens.

Make room in your garden for a few rows of greens this year. They are tasty and nutritious and a joy to grow.

One of the problems faced by any farmer keeping laying hens may be solved as the result of new processing a marketing research recently completed in New York State. The problem is the insignificant market value a hen has after her laying days are over. Traditionally, its only been about five or ten cents a pound. Now researchers say they have developed a processing method where a tough old bird becomes a likely candidate for a chicken burger. Frozen Minced Chicken was sold successfully in a test-marketing drive in two areas of New York at prices comparable to hamburger. Promoters of the minced chicken say it can become the main ingredient in dishes such as: chicken tacos, chicken noodle casseroles, chicken burgers and chicken chili. It could also be an important ingredient in increased profits for our egg producers.

I LOST 85 POUNDS

QUICKLY & SAFELY AT DIET CENTER

JoAnn Mack tells how Diet Center has changed her life . . .

"Diet Center worked for me"

I had tried every diet imaginable before coming to Diet Center. None of them had allowed me to lose weight fast enough to keep me excited and motivated to stay with it. Soon, I would lose interest, go off the diet and gain back what little weight I had lost. I was really fed up with the way I looked and I didn't feel like doing anything or going anywhere. One day, I was looking through the phone book for some kind of reducing program and came across an ad for Diet Center. The idea of private daily counseling and sound nutrition appealed to me so I gave them a call. That call was the start of a whole new life for me.

In the first 6 weeks, I lost 26 pounds and a total of 26 inches. I was really pleased with my accomplishment and already I was receiving a lot of compliments from my friends and family. I never even considered stopping short of my goal. I went on to lose a total of 85 pounds, and reduced my dress size from a snug 18 to a perfect 8. That was nine months ago, and since then I have taken up tennis and snow skiing and for the first time in 8 years I can get up on water skis! The Diet Center program is fantastic, I've never been happier or felt healthier and I know I'll never be heavy again!

JoAnn's story is typical of thousands of men and women all across the United States and Canada who have changed their lives at Diet Center. Call your local Diet Center counselor today, it could be the most important call you ever make!

The Ross Collins Band wants to make the top

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The Rossington Collins Band wants to be on top and this time the members want to notice that they're smelling the flowers.

"We want to be the best band in the world and we shall not be defeated," says guitarist Gary Rossington.

Guitarist Allen Collins says, "We were living a dream before and never knew it. I just want to take everything in that I missed before. It went by me too fast. The good times just slipped away. Now I want to grab hold of them, live them out to the fullest.

"I want everybody in the band to take everything in and live this dream, instead of letting it slip away."

"Just take a lot more in, enjoy what you can enjoy, instead of being afraid or bugged about being on the road. It is not so bad. There's more good times than bad. Everybody talks about the road like it's a bad way of life. I love it myself."

The Rossington Collins Band contains four members of Lynyrd Skynyrd — the two leaders, plus Billy Powell, keyboards, and Leon Wilkeson, bass.

Lynyrd Skynyrd gave its last performance Oct. 20, 1977, in Greenville, S.C. The group's plane crashed that night in Mississippi, killing lead singer Ronnie Van Zant, guitarist Steve Gaines, his sister Cassie, backup vocalist, the road manager and pilot. Everyone else in the band was injured.

Rossington and Collins got together about a year ago and thought they'd hire some backup musicians and front a band together. They had the name, they had the bones, before they had the band.

They got together with Powell, Wilkeson and drummer Artimus Pyle from Skynyrd and played a few times. "We didn't want to try and make it off the old band and old name. It would be easy to do that. We wanted to do it ourselves again," says Collins, who bears scars on his left arm, which was broken in three places.

He says two bones in Wilkeson's arm which allow the arm to pivot at the elbow grew together so he couldn't move his arm side to side. "He had those bones removed. Now he has got it all back. I say he can play bass again. He'll set a bass on fire. It took a long time, but everybody is back in shape now."

However, two days before rehearsals started for the Rossington Collins Band, Pyle had a motorcycle accident and broke his leg in 12 places. Rossington says, "It looked like he couldn't play for a year, so he resigned."

He was replaced by Derek

Hess. Guitarist Barry Harwood was added. Both of them, like the rest of the band, are natives of Jacksonville, Fla. Rossington and Collins thought a long time about what to do for a lead vocalist and inevitable comparisons with Ronnie Van Zant.

Weekend at the movies

HEALTH is supposed to be the common concern of the people attending a convention in this Robert Altman film, but — as in most Altman shows — the characters quickly turn into caricatures who mouth ideals and really care only about fame, power, sex and-or money. Some impressive names — Glenda Jackson, Carol Burnett, James Garner, Lauren Bacall — are at each other throats in the campaign for the presidency of the organization, and it's probably no accident that this film is out in time for the real-life U.S. presidential contest. There are some laughs in the characters' various encounters with each other, and in particular with Dick Cavett who plays a brilliant spoof of himself. But these occasional moments don't overcome the unfunny inanity of the other goings-on. Rated PG, but younger viewers may not get some of the verbal innuendos.

liberates the privileged daughter of a city official, also played appealingly by Trini Alvarado. The duo's escapades, mildly amusing at best, quickly become boring backgrounds for a slick package of punk and new wave rock hits. Fans of "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" cult figure Tim Curry, who plays a sympathetic disc jockey, will seek this one out, as will rebels already convinced of the film's otherwise unconvincing message — that enclaves of hookers, dope dealers and porno theaters are fun and safe places for kids to hang out. Rated R for language and a couple of jiggles by a topless dancer.

MIDNIGHT EXPRESS

In one of the most talked-about theatrical blockbusters in recent years, a young American, locked away in a foreign prison where brutality is rampant and escape seems impossible, makes a desperate, life-or-death struggle for freedom in 'Midnight Express,' the true story of one man's extraordinary ordeal, airing in its television premiere on 'The ABC Sunday Night Movie' SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 21.

Brad Davis (pictured) stars as the real-life Billy Hayes, an American college student who made the near-fatal mistake of trying to leave Istanbul with two kilos of hashish concealed under his shirt.

Harvesters 7th at Brownfield

Pampa's cross-country team opened the season Saturday with a seventh-place finish at the Brownfield Invitational.

"We didn't do too bad for our first meet," Pampa Coach Wendell Palmer said. "We didn't run as fast as I would have liked us to, but the kids know what that three-mile distance is like now."

Neal Braswell and Joe Murray finished 14th and 15th respectively for the Harvesters. Don Braswell was 18th, David Whitson, 47th, and Ray Mendoza, 54th.

"I got a good performance from Donald Pena," Palmer said. "He ran a 19:08 the first time he's ever gone three miles. Hopefully, I'll have him ready to go for a better time when our home meet gets here."

The Harvesters enter the Plainview meet Saturday and then host the Pampa Invitational Oct. 4.

"The kids know what they have to do to win now," Palmer said. "It's up to them now to put their minds to it and work hard from week to week," Palmer added.

Wheeler crushes Booker, 49-19

WHEELER—Wheeler's Willie's Valencia rushed for three touchdowns and threw for another to lead the 15th-ranked Class 2A Mustangs to a 49-19 football win over Booker Friday night.

Valencia scored on runs of five, one and 16 yards, then tossed a 31-yard scoring pass to Boyd Waldo.

Benny Baker tied the score at 7-7 in the first period with a 14-yard run. Valencia put the Mustangs ahead, 14-7, on his first scoring run, but Booker quarterback Brett Maxfield hit Rory Wilmoth for their second scoring play. Booker failed to complete the conversion and Wheeler led, 14-13.

Wheeler then scored the next five touchdowns in winning its 16th straight game, dating back over two seasons.

Baker had a six-yard TD jaunt and Ty Henderson found John Harris with a 41-yard TD flip.

Panthers edge past Canadian

CANADIAN—Tod Mayfield hit Ronnie Cordell with a 70-yard bomb in the second quarter to give Panhandle a 7-0 win over Canadian in a non-district prep football game Friday night.

Panhandle, now 3-0, failed to get a first down in the second half, but hung on for the victory.

Canadian, losing for the first time in three tries, had an apparent 36-yard touchdown pass from Bear Schafer to Craig Young called back in the third period because of a holding call.

The Wildcats managed 13 first downs, compared to just four for the visiting Panthers. Canadian also won the total offense battle, gaining 183 yards compared to 133 for Panhandle.

Canadian's Craig Young led all rushers with 82 yards on 30 carries.

Canadian travels to Shamrock Friday night. Panhandle has an open date this week.

White Deer ties Claude, 7-7

CLAUDE—Claude's Lee Brown sneaked one yard for a second-quarter score and Reagan Haney added the extra-point kick as the Mustangs tied White Deer, 7-7, Friday night.

White Deer scored on Steve Abernathy's nine-yard run in the first quarter. Chuck Mitchell booted the PAT.

White Deer threatened in the fourth period, driving to the Claude 15-yard line, but an offensive pass-interference call in the end zone stalled that drive.

White Deer has an open date this week. The Bucks host Sanford-Fritch Oct. 3.

Yankees lose

NEW YORK (AP) — Rookie Chico Walker drove in two runs while boosting his average to .667 as the Boston Red Sox snapped an eight-game losing streak against New York by defeating the Yankees 4-1 Saturday behind Dennis Eckersley's seven-hit pitching.

The Red Sox jumped on longtime nemesis Gaylord Perry, 9-12, for two runs in the first inning and chased the 42-year-old right-hander, who had beaten them 18 times in 22 previous career decisions with two more in the second inning.

Boston's Rick Burleson opened the game with a single and went to third when Dave Stapleton's hit-and-run grounder glanced off shortstop's Bucky Dent's glove into short left field for a double.

Nebraska crushes Iowa, 57-0

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Quarterback Jeff Quinn passed for three touchdowns and Jarvis Redwine ran for 153 yards to lead sixth-ranked Nebraska to a 57-0 victory over Iowa in non-conference football action Saturday.

Redwine scored the first time he touched the ball, racing 69 yards on the third play of the game. The senior I-back gained 100 yards on just seven first-half carries.

Quinn hooked up with Todd Brown for the first of his three scoring passes, a 15-yarder on a 15-play, 73-yard drive near the end of the first quarter. Jimmy Williams' fumble recovery set up the drive.

Iowa fumbled the ensuing kickoff and Nebraska recovered at the Hawkeye 17. Five plays later, Quinn hit Tim McCrady on a 6-yard scoring pass.

Third-string I-back Roger Craig went over from 5 yards out just over two minutes later to cap a 51-yard Nebraska drive in seven plays.

Irish slip past Michigan

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Harry Oliver's 51-yard field goal on the final play of the game Saturday lifted eighth-ranked and undefeated Notre Dame to a 29-27 victory over No. 14 Michigan in a see-saw battle of Midwest football powers.

Only 41 seconds earlier, the Wolverines had scored on a 1-yard pass from quarterback John Wangler that was deflected by Butch Woolfolk into the arms of Craig Dunnaway for a touchdown that seemingly had given Michigan a come-from-behind victory.

Oliver's successful kick touched off one the largest and loudest celebrations in Notre Dame Stadium history as most of the 59,075 fans roared their approval in unison.

Phil Carter's 4-yard touchdown run with 3:03 remaining gave the Irish a 26-21 lead, but Michigan roared back with a 79-yard touchdown drive highlighted by the running of Woolfolk.

Astros drop squeaker to Gaints

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Giants went to their bullpen before the game even began and came up with a winner in Tom Griffin.

"I'd like to see that again," said Manager Dave Bristol, who gave Griffin his first pitching start of the season and saw the right-hander beat the pennant-contending Houston Astros 4-3 Friday night with relief help from Al Holland.

Bristol will look at Griffin, who has 38 relief appearances this year, some more in a starting role. He penciled him in to face Cincinnati next Tuesday night.

Griffin, 4-1, had a rough third inning, walking the first two batters and allowing three runs, including two on a triple by Jose Cruz. But he retired 12 batters in a row after the triple.

"I've been a starter most of my career, and when I was sent to the bullpen three years ago, I considered it a demotion," said the 32-year-old pitcher who was with the Astros from 1971 to 1976.

"I'd like to start again, but only if it was on a consistent basis. If I couldn't do that, I'd rather stay in the bullpen so I could pitch in more games," he added.

Houston's Joaquin Andujar took an awfully tough loss and the Astros remained one game behind the leading Los Angeles Dodgers as they bowed to Griffin and the Giants.

"I think Griffin would be good in their starting rotation," Andujar said of his former teammate.

Andujar, 3-6, gave up four runs in the first inning and three of them were unearned because of errors by first baseman Dennis Walling and shortstop Craig Reynolds. He retired 16 straight batters before leaving for a pinch hitter in the seventh.

"That's baseball. Sometimes you give up one hit and lose," he said with a shrug.

The Giants' first hitter in the game, Max Venable, singled to center and stole second. He scored when the next hitter, Joe Pettini, hit a grounder which went through Walling.

"It was a routine play. I just didn't get over to the ball fast enough," said Walling. "It was my first error in quite a while, and I hated to see what it led to."

Pitt roars past Kansas

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Dan Marino's two touchdown passes enabled mistake-prone No. 5 Pittsburgh to overcome wind gusts of 45 mph and defeat Kansas 18-3 Saturday in non-conference college football.

Pittsburgh, which committed nine turnovers in beating Boston College 14-6 in its opener, spent most of the afternoon dropping passes, missing assignments and committing mental mistakes that let the obviously outmanned Jayhawks stay close.

A 25-yard field goal by freshman Bruce Kallmeyer gave the Jayhawks a 3-0 lead after the first quarter. The Panthers drew even on a 21-yard Dave Trout field goal in the second period, and Pittsburgh went ahead to stay on Marino's short touchdown pass to Benjie Pryor later in the period.

With temperatures in the 90s and the hot gusty winds playing havoc with the ball, neither team could muster much offense.

Pro forecast

Cowboys favored over Bucs

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Will the real Dallas Cowboys please stand up? Are they the guys in the white hats who limited Washington to three points in the opening game of the season? Or are they the renegades who were ripped for 41 points by Denver in Game No. 2?

The Pro Picker thinks the white hats fit better, especially now that Dallas is at home, hosting Tampa Bay this Sunday.

Last week's 9-4 made the two-week total 14-13, 7-20 against the spread. It's still early.

The picks: Cowboys 24, Bucs 6

Tampa Bay's offense is anemic and that's a break for the suspect Dallas secondary. Turnovers doomed the Cowboys last week in Denver. The spread has Dallas favored by 6 points. Oilers 20, Colts 10

Snake Stabler is football's best 2-minute quarterback and the other 58 won't be a picnic either for Baltimore. Houston favored by 7. Bills 23, Saints 14

You won't be able to blame this one on Russell Erxleben. The Saints signed Benny Ricardo for short range field goals this week. Buffalo favored by 1. Rams 17, Packers 13

LA has to start winning some time and this seems like a good place to start, but not by as much as the oddsmakers think. Los Angeles favored by 14. Chiefs 24, Browns 20

Upset Special. Kansas City is too good to keep on losing and the Browns' offense can be controlled. Cleveland favored by 3½.

Dolphins 21, Falcons 17

Give Atlanta an inch and ... well, you saw what happened in New England. Still, the Dolphin quality should overcome. Atlanta favored by 3. Bears 28, Vikings 14

Walter Payton is moving again and Philadelphia exposed Minnesota's weakness on the ground last week. Chicago favored by 6. Seahawks 30, Patriots 14

We know the preseason means nothing, but Seattle did a number on New England in the Kingdome last month. Seattle favored by 2. Steelers 31, Bengals 17

A year ago, Cincinnati at home stunned Pittsburgh. Chuck Noll has a long memory. Pittsburgh favored by 6½. Lions 27, Cardinals 21

Won't Gary Danielson and Billy Sims just love that St. Louis defense? Detroit favored by 7. Chargers 17, Broncos 14

Playing in Denver is no easy task for visiting teams but Dan Fouts and John Jefferson should handle it. Denver favored by 1½. Jets 30, 49ers 10

Time for New York's dormant attack to wake up. San Francisco is unbeaten but won't stay that way. New York favored by 4. Raiders 20, Redskins 14

Playing at home ought to inspire once LA-bound Oakland. Well, maybe not, but playing Washington should. Oakland favored by 3½.

Young, Hamlin tied for lead

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Veteran Donna Caponi Young battled treacherous winds to fire a 2-under-par 71 Saturday and move into a third round tie with Shelley Hamlin for the lead in a $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Young began the day 4 strokes behind Hamlin and Barbara Moxness, but overcame three-putt bogies on two of the first four holes by dropping birdies on the fifth, sixth, ninth and 14th holes.

That sent Young into Sunday's final round with a three-day total of 214, 5-under-par and good enough to match Hamlin, who struggled through another round of erratic putting to post a 75.

Moxness, plagued by a double bogey on No. 8 and four bogies, faltered to a 78 and finished the round three strokes off the pace at 217.

Young, the second-leading money winner on the 1980 LPGA tour, was one of just six players under par Saturday, as wind gusts to 35 miles per hour on the par-73, 6,273-yard Brookridge Golf and Country Club Course.

Hamlin had a double bogey on the first hole and two bogies on the back nine before rallying for the second straight day with a birdie on the 18th hole to grab a share of the lead.

Harvesters capture 17-10 thriller from Lawton High

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor
Quarterback Sam Edwards hit split end Steve McDougall with a 10-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter to snap a tie and give the Pampa Harvesters a 17-10 win over visiting Lawton High Friday night.
Pampa is now 3-0 for the season while Lawton High is winless after three outings.
It was the big plays by the speciality team plus an intimidating defense that sparked the Harvesters.
Lawton compiled more total yardage, 207-190, but the Harvesters were able to deliver in the clutch.
I've never been more proud of a bunch of kids in my life," Head Coach Larry Gilbert said. "It was a supreme defensive effort. I want to praise my special teams. We've worked hard on our kicking game and punt returns and it's paid off for us."

wasn't finished yet.
With the score tied 10-all, Pampa started on its winning drive after Dorsey returned a Lawton punt from the mid-field stripe to the visitors' 20.
"We missed one block on that play or Dorsey would have scored," Gilbert said.
Facing a third and goal situation from the 10, Edwards hit McDougall in the corner of the end zone for the tiebreaker TD with three minutes to go in the third quarter. Coleman's PAT made it 17-10.
"His was a great pass route and great throw," Gilbert said. "McDougall did a good job of keeping his feet in the end zone. We've drilled our receivers a lot on that in practice."
Both clubs became locked in a defensive struggle the remainder of the game. Pampa drove twice to Lawton's 35 before giving up possession, but Lawton never penetrated past the Harvesters' 46.
Arthur Williams was Pampa's leading rusher with 40 yards on a dozen carries while Leroy Kuhn added 30 yards on 11 carries. Dorsey carried only four times for 20 yards.
Edwards, who rushed for 37 yards on 15 carries, completed four of fifteen passes, all to McDougall for 50 yards.
Pampa's defense bent, but didn't break. Douglas and Robert Hall rushed for 91 and 82 yards respectively for Lawton, but the Harvesters stopped them cold when it counted.
Twice, on consecutive drives in the second and third periods, the Wolverines marched to Pampa's 18 and eight-yard stripe and had to settle for field goal efforts.
Douglas, touted as Oklahoma's premier schoolboy player, failed to complete a pass in seven tries. He was sacked four times, once apiece by Landers and senior linebacker Robbie Leffel. Landers was credited with three steps behind the line of scrimmage.
"Landers looked like a linebacker out there," Gilbert said. "He was all over the field, going from sideline to sideline."

Leffel collected 10 tackles while Clifford Anderson and John Schilling had nine and eight stops respectively.
"His was the best game Leffel and Schilling have played," Gilbert added. Schilling and Anderson were great at defensive ends. Lawton switched from a wishbone to a veer on us and both of them put on a lot of pressure on Douglas."
Ruben Ambrey had five tackles while Andy Richardson and Billy Ward had three each.
"Our entire defense looked good," Gilbert said. "It was just a good total defensive effort."
Pampa hosts Berger in the annual Harvester homecoming game Friday night.
"Whenever these two teams meet, it's just like OU and Texas," Gilbert added. "It doesn't matter who's favored. Berger is always fired up when they play us."

Swimmers anxious for first meet

Although no schedule has been formulated yet, the Pampa High swim team could convince anyone that the swimming season is well underway.
The Harvesters have been practicing for several weeks in anticipation of that first meet, whenever it is scheduled.

running two to three miles during sixth period."
Stevens feels the Harvesters will more than hold their own this season since six of ten returning team members advanced to the regionals last year.

"They're really a bunch of hard workers," new coach Jackie Stevens said. "They've been working out in the mornings from 6 to 7 and two events to qualify for the state meet.

"I look for us to have a good team," Stevens said. "I don't know yet what events we will be strongest in, but we have some real fine athletes."
Stevens said a scheduling session would be held later this month in Lubbock to find out where and when the meets are going to be.
Stevens, a Pampa native, had been junior varsity swim coach at Midland for the past three years.

Oilers face internal problems

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers will face a growing internal challenge Sunday when they host the Baltimore Colts in their home opener — who will be unhappy this week that he didn't get to play.

Two weeks ago Coach Bum Phillips went with a one-back offense and Ken Stabler threw 43 passes in a 31-17 loss to Pittsburgh while fullback Tim Wilson watched from the sidelines.
Wilson, in carefully chosen words, said he'd do whatever it took to win, but he'd prefer to contribute on the field.

Last week, the entire Oiler defense felt underworked. Houston returned to a more balanced ball control attack that was so effective the Oiler defense spent most of the second half on the sidelines in a 16-7 victory over Cleveland.
Kickoff is at 1 p.m. in the Astrodome.

"We plan to do what we think we can against the opponent that week," Phillips said. "We thought we had to throw the ball against Pittsburgh and we thought we could run against Cleveland."
Oiler running back Earl Campbell is expected to play despite a groin injury suffered in last week's game and the Oiler offense surely will include Stabler, who completed 23 of 28 passes against the Browns.

The Colts, 1-1 after a narrow 20-17 loss to Pittsburgh last week, will counter with quarterback Bert Jones and versatile running back Joe Washington, a native of nearby Port Arthur, Texas.
Jones goes into the game healthy and the No. 7 rated passer in the American Football Conference and that concerns Phillips.

"Jones can be the difference in four or five victories for Baltimore," Phillips said. "When Jones is healthy, Baltimore can be dangerous. And Jones is healthy."
New Colt Coach Mike McCormack is trying to snuff out the illusion that Baltimore can't win without Jones at quarterback. A healthy Jones led the Colts to three division titles beginning in 1975. The Colts have been 10-22 since Jones started a series of injuries.

McLean shuts out Silvertown

McLEAN—Six Tigers scored touchdowns as McLean blanked Silvertown, 39-0, Friday night.
James Matheny, Jimmy Killham, Terry Todd, Bill Kincannon, Billy Joe Skipper and Brock Crockett each posted touchdowns as the Tigers won their first game of the season against one setback.

Buckeyes roll

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Second-ranked Ohio State forced Minnesota into six first-half errors and Vlade Janakievski tied a school record with four field goals as the Buckeyes crushed the Gophers 47-0 in a Big Ten Conference football opener.
The Buckeyes' 72nd consecutive sellout crowd of more than 87,000 fans and millions more on national television watched Ohio State turn the six Gopher errors into 23 points.

The Buckeyes were ahead 33-0 at halftime.
Janakievski, the nation's leading percentage field goal kicker last season, has hit all seven of his attempts in the Buckeyes' two victories this fall.
The little senior connected from 22 yards and three times from 27 yards to tie the school record set by Tom Klaban against Michigan in 1974.

Tanana evens record as Angels down Rangers, 6-2

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — California's Frank Tanana says he is going to the Scott McGregor School of Pitching. Tanana scattered seven hits Friday night as the Angels downed the Texas Rangers 6-2 and evened his record at 10-10. It was the seventh victory for Tanana in his last eight decisions and gave California its eighth win in 11 games. "McGregor is now my idol," said Tanana, speaking of the Baltimore left-hander who mixes guile and cunning with sharp curve balls to beat his opposition. "My hard-throwing days are gone," said Tanana. He said, with a smile, "What's the difference if you win with BBs or slop?" The only damage Tanana suffered was Al Oliver's two-run triple in the third inning. The Angels got all the runs they needed off loser Jon Matlack, 10-8, in three innings.

Dave Skaggs lofted a sacrifice fly in the second inning and Brian Downing delivered a two-run single in the third. Dan Ford slashed a two-run single in the seventh to send Matlack to the showers and reliever Dennis Lewallyn was touched for the final California run in the ninth on an RBI ground out by Gil Kubski. Tanana, who has been bothered by arm trouble for the last two years, said, "The ball went where it was supposed to tonight, and when it does that we'll usually win."

Alabama romps

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Running backs Billy Jackson and Linnie Patrick rushed for more than 100 yards apiece and led the top-ranked Alabama Crimson Tide to a 59-35 football romp over the Mississippi Rebels for its 23rd straight victory Saturday. Defensive halfbacks Ricky Tucker and Jeremiah Castille set up two touchdowns with interceptions, one a back-breaker opening the second half in support of a bevy of Alabama backs who shared the scoring. The Tide, 2-0 this season, handed Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant his 298th career coaching victory and kept the nation's longest unbeaten streak intact. The Alabama triumph overshadowed a big passing day for Mississippi quarterback John Fourcade, who had four touchdown completions against the usually bruising Tide defense. Fourcade hit 21 of 43 passes for 296 yards.

Physician serves as preceptor

LUBBOCK — Raymond Hampton, M.D., Pampa family practitioner, served as preceptor to Rodney Caldwell, Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center School of Medicine student.

Preceptors are practicing physicians who share their time and experience to help educate future doctors. The preceptor attempts to expose the student to as much clinical medicine as possible, including lab procedures, x-ray technology and office management techniques.

The program is nationwide and is sponsored by a training grant from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. The program introduces freshman and sophomore medical students to family practice in rural areas.

All facets of clinical medicine — from routine office work to surgical procedures — are observed by the student as he accompanies the preceptor each workday. The student acquires a feeling for appropriate approach to each patient from the preceptor.

Although the summer preceptorship program is optional, many students request a preceptorship because it provides an opportunity to observe the actual practice of medicine. Until now, the freshman and sophomore students have concentrated on textbook learning and laboratory experience and have not necessarily observed medicine being practiced. The preceptorship program provides that opportunity, according to Jim Bob Jones, associate dean for student affairs.

Following the summer preceptorship, the student returns to medical school with practical clinical insight to supplement his studies.

The summer preceptorship program is the first time a medical student works with a preceptor but it is not the last. Students are required to serve a family practice preceptorship during clinical training.

Texas Tech medical students served preceptorships in 23 rural Texas towns this summer, and one student served a preceptorship in American Falls, Idaho.

Gray County Red Cross concerned with people

The Gray County Chapter of the American Red Cross is an integral part of a greater national and international organization. In 1981, the National American Red Cross will be celebrating 100 years of service to this country and abroad.

The Red Cross in Gray County has been active 63 of those 100 years and will be part of this celebration.

Looking at the national and international history of this organization, as well as the local history, the Red Cross has been a great initiator of programs concerned with the quality and care of people.

It is said of individuals that if a man is not particularly interested in who gets the credit, an awful lot can be accomplished. This truism can be applied to the Red Cross as an organization. Throughout its history, it has served as a model for a whole network of agencies serving people.

One of the major continuous services in Gray County has been aid to families with relatives in the military. This past year alone, the local chapter has handled 152 cases. In war time, the case load was much greater. Over the years, the Red Cross swimming program has trained instructors who have, in turn, taught the bulk of this community's children to swim.

A total of 1,226 children are recorded on agency records as having been taught swimming in courses taught by Red Cross instructors. Instruction takes place at Girl and Boy Scout camps, the Youth Center and the city pool.

What is true of the extension water safety instructors in our community is also true of First Aid training.

The Red Cross instruction continues in industry along with CPR (Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation) being offered to all interested people. During the past year, there were 39 classes in first aid and CPR with over 400 certificates being issued.

Since the Red Cross Hospital volunteers, once known as Gray Ladies, were organized in 1942 to serve in the hospital at the Pampa Army Air Field, many women of the community have served in this capacity. The women still serve in the hospital with expansion into the nursing centers. There are 47 women putting in hundreds of hours, and the need for this kind of volunteer work continues.

Nursing was the very heart and life of the Red Cross in its beginning, and this service still has an important in Pampa. Preparation For Parenthood, Home Nursing and a new parenting course have been developed and are being offered in modified versions to a selected group of parents.

In disaster work, the Gray County Red Cross Chapter has a real sense of the family tie to the National Red Cross and its services.

Beyond the chapter's own preparedness, the group has the backing of hundreds of trained national Red Cross workers.

During the recent Hurricane Allen and its aftermath in Texas, 323 trained Red Cross personnel were dispatched there to help. A total of 365 Red Cross shelters served 136,000 persons. The assistance to the affected families will continue months after this disaster is no longer news.

Locally, the Red Cross attempts to meet basic needs for families who lose their belongings to fire, if the family's insurance does not handle basic losses.

The Red Cross Youth program began in 1917 when the youth met all day on Saturdays, working in the sewing room. They had an outstanding record for their day. Red Cross has been a part of the life of school children. The grade school children over the years have provided their own hand-made items that have gone to the Veterans Hospital and nursing centers. The high school youth have their own special outreach program that continues year in and year out. A new program being organized is a Red Cross telephone reassurance program.

There are probably few families in this community that have not benefited sometime in their life from Red Cross being in the community. This is true of the 63 years that the Gray County Red Cross Chapter has served in the Pampa area.

Epilepsy group serves 7,000 Panhandle people

The High Plains Epilepsy Association was established in 1972 in response to the need for services to approximately 7,000 persons in the Texas Panhandle with the disorder. The Gray County chapter of the association was chartered in 1976 and became a member of the Pampa United Way in 1977. There are an estimated 540 people in Gray County with epilepsy.

According to the Epilepsy Foundation of America statistics, there are more persons affected by epilepsy than by multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy, cerebral palsy and tuberculosis combined.

Epilepsy is a disorder which affects the brain and central nervous system. Seizures of various types are its major symptom. About 75 percent of the people who develop seizures will do so before they reach the age of 18.

School years are especially important for children with epilepsy — both physically and mentally. The High Plains Epilepsy Association expressed gratitude for the assistance they have received from the Pampa school nurses.

In keeping with its belief that most children with epilepsy can learn to deal confidently with all life situations through early diagnosis and treatment and counseling with parents, the agency offers group meetings which provide speakers with a wide range of expertise in fields related to good health care and allows for a sharing of common concerns. The meetings are conducted on the third Tuesday of each month at the Children's Rehabilitation Center, 1250 Wallace Boulevard, Amarillo. The public is invited, and a baby sitter is provided.

During 1979 High Plains Epilepsy Association delivered services to 55 individuals in Gray County. These services included the purchase of anti-convulsant medications, physician referrals, payment of doctor and hospital bills, transportation, counseling on an individual and family basis, agency referrals and employment assistance.

In addition to free literature for public distribution, the association maintains a lending library of books, films and slides and has staff and volunteers on call for programs and workshops.

Gray County is represented on the High Plains Epilepsy Association Regional Advisory Board by W. A. Morgan and on the board of directors by Ed Sweet.

High Plains Epilepsy Association is headquartered at 806 S. Bryan, Room 214 in Amarillo. The agency's phone number is 372-3891.

For further information on the program or assistance of any kind, persons may contact the agency office or Mr. or Mrs. Ed Sweet, Mr. or Mrs. Bob Carmichael or Mrs. James T. Brown, all of Pampa.

Persons may assist the High Plains Epilepsy Association in being of service in Pampa by becoming informed about epilepsy, by becoming a volunteer and by supporting the United Way.

MRS. JAMES T. BROWN of Pampa is the executive director of the High Plains Epilepsy Association. Among her many duties, she helps to coordinate services for persons with epilepsy in Gray County.

Whitney Museum shows Davis works

NEW YORK (AP) — A concentration of works by Stuart Davis is being shown at the Whitney Museum of American Art through Oct. 12.

The exhibition consists of 19 paintings, drawings and prints from the museum's permanent collection.

The museum says its association with Davis (1894-1964) dates from 1917, the year one of his paintings was included in a group exhibition at Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney's Studio.

While studying in Scotland, Reverend Norman Dressler Dow, Jr., bargained with a bookseller for an old and badly damaged Bible.

Because no title page remained, exhaustive research was necessary to trace the details of paper, typography, spellings, and style but the results showed the Bible to be one of the 1st edition, 2nd printing of the King James Version of the English Bible printed in 1611.

We now have available two pages from this Bible, tastefully mounted and framed to grace your home or office with a strong statement of your Christian faith in the power of God's Word to survive.

PEEKING at PAMPA

Pampa is never in the doldrums, you know it? Always a lot of pleasurable activities going on.

Big event last week was the invitational right-left golf tournament hosted by Ed Myatt. Drew in 58 players with each right-handed man playing with a left-hander as his partner. More fun than any other tournament, the men said.

Men came from Big Spring, Southlake, Houston, Fort Worth, Dallas, Marble Falls, Kingsland, Bryan, Hereford, Corpus Christi and San Antonio in addition to Pampa players. (P.S. Golfers just added Belton, Arlington, Odessa, Seguin and Cameron to the list.)

Seems the right-left type of tournament is a growing get-together across the country and Ed has hosted the one in Pampa before.

Many flew into Amarillo for the tournament and Rosie Myatt met so many planes that she wore a sign saying, "Ed's golf meet" so the arriving golfers could spot her.

Festivities began on Friday night with a scrumptious "nibble" session at the Coronado Inn — and "nibble" was hardly the word for the tasty meal. Likewise delicious, I understand, was the sumptuous banquet on Saturday night. Dr. Joe Donaldson was M.C. for the program. Heard he was up to his usual jokes on those present.

Dinner music was by Sue Higdon. And Heidi Allen sang, delighting her audience with her marvelous voice and lovely personality. Heidi is going to make Pampa famous some day, I'll bet.

Calcutta was held and the brave ones bought themselves. Trophies were awarded — but the players said everybody won because they all had such a good time.

Golfer's wives enjoyed their activities too, planned and hosted by Rosie Myatt with Myrtle Prigmore in charge of card games. Coffee and doughnuts were served every morning, and a luncheon was held on Saturday.

Pampa ladies in attendance were Esther Ruth Gibson (her husband is said to have the neatest mustache in town), Mary Lee Garrett, Velma Lemons, Johnnie Donaldson, Phoebe Reynolds, Renie Price and others.

Renie is a delightful and interesting lady. Lived in Hawaii some years and is conversant with all the customs, scenery, sights and sounds of that island paradise. Several ladies mentioned her lovely hair-do and were surprised when she said that this time she did it herself. Wish I had that kind of skill in my fingers.

Special treat for golfers and wives was a tour of the Myatts' new home east of Pampa, a dream house if one ever existed.

The Fletcher Frenches of Kingsland complimented their Pampa hosts highly. Mary French has a family tie to Atha Wilks of Pampa because her niece is married to Atha's son, Andy. Mentioned Atha's musical ability, well known here.

Heard that another enjoyable party was the one given in honor of DeLea Vicars' 89th birthday. Festivities took place in Joe Gordon's office on Tuesday morning, the 9th. Present were many dignitaries and a crowd of well-wishing friends. DeLea was one of our city's founders and deserves all possible recognition and appreciation.

Two steady hikers are M.Q. and Mary Wilson, who hit the trail every day, walking for health and pleasure. Always act so happy to be together, always smile at each other and at people they meet. Fine couple.

Efficient as well as personable are the Jack Malones. Work so well and hard together, obviously glad to help each other. Understand their teenage daughter also helps when she's not in school.

Heard a shopper in a supermarket insist on carrying her own loaf of bread so it wouldn't be squeezed by herself or a sacker. Kay Mytryk, always equal to any occasion, said, "Hold it easy now. A loaf without a middle is no loaf at all!"

Always planned to go on a diet but never got around to tackling the problem. Resolved to start when I saw Marie Bohlander's youthful figure. Heard a movie star say on TV recently that the way to stay slim is to eat only one meal.

Heard in passing: "Had to cancel my wife's beauty-shop appointment. It was interfering with the golf ladies' bridge!"... "Did you taste that cheese ball? And how about those scallops? Super-delicious!"

Avis Edwards, Lena Mae Woods, Inez Clubb, Florence and David Rice and Della and Marian DeFever recently participated in a 26-day tour of New England and Canada.

Seems Della had to have surgery during the tour and is now recuperating in a hospital in Tennessee. Hope her recovery is speedy. Della's friends can write her at Room 426, Park West Hospital, Knoxville, Tenn.

See you next week, PAM.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

Today I read an article about grinding, gritting or clenching of teeth. It's called bruxism. And it's not conducive to good health, pleasant disposition or happy marriage, informed sources say.

The University of Oregon Health Science professors say that tooth-grinding used to be common only to school teachers — but that nowadays it is found in every profession and sphere of society. If you're a tooth-grinder, consider this information:

One Oregon doctor says, "Grinding of teeth can cause imperfect alignment of teeth, fatigue in the jaw, pain in the teeth, sensitivity to tooth brushing, muscle spasms and headaches."

Other authorities believe that bruxism also contributes to problems in the gums and the bones supporting the teeth.

What has this to do with happy older marriage? Perhaps a great deal. If one mate is frustrated by present circumstances or by life itself, his steaming discontent can boil over into mental incompatibility with the spouse, the more quickly when you are older.

You can't act happy and affectionate and cooperative if you ache all over. And grinding your teeth can, apparently, make you feel that way. How long can a healthy spouse endure that kind of nerve-racking partnership? You can't count on its being forever. Sometimes the mate will become a mental case too — or else leave you for more pleasant surroundings.

Why do we do this to ourselves and our spouses? Oregon University says that the syndrome is closely tied to stress. And much of our stress is of our own making.

We let little things, or big ones, upset us when they don't need to. We can anguish over world conditions when we should realize we can't change them. The same is true of inflation or recession, of the weather, of many phases of our lives. So why should we grind our teeth in frustration about conditions over which we have no control — and then risk the loss of health and home and happiness?

If you give your teeth a fit because you're annoyed by your mate, tell him so. After half a lifetime together, we should all be able to discuss our good and bad points with each other. Of course the discussion has to be kindly, never vituperative.

Don't land on him with both feet and shout, "Don't drum on the table that way! It's driving me out of my mind!"

Give him something to hold — a paper, a magazine or your hand. Then discuss what habits annoy each other. Talk calmly, sensibly, but realistically. It has saved countless older marriages. It can save yours.

DEAR LOUISE: My wife is testing my patience by humming half way under her breath all the time. I don't think she even knows she does it. But she does, at the dinner table, at friends' houses, even in church. People laugh at her and imitate her behind her back. And it's real embarrassing to me.

I've told her and told her that it bothers me and she always promises to quit. But the next day she's at it again.

I could stand it better if it was a tune. But it's just a kind of hissing sound without any real melody to it. Sometimes I go downtown and spend the day just to get away from that stupid noise. What else can I do? K.B.

DEAR K.B.: You might start your own defensive technique, but a better suggestion would be to carry on interesting conversations with her, encouraging her to talk about the news, the town activities or your shared plans for the future. Even a habitual hummer can't talk and hiss at the same time.

Write problems to DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

THE Hub

You can bank on the looks this fall from the Hub.

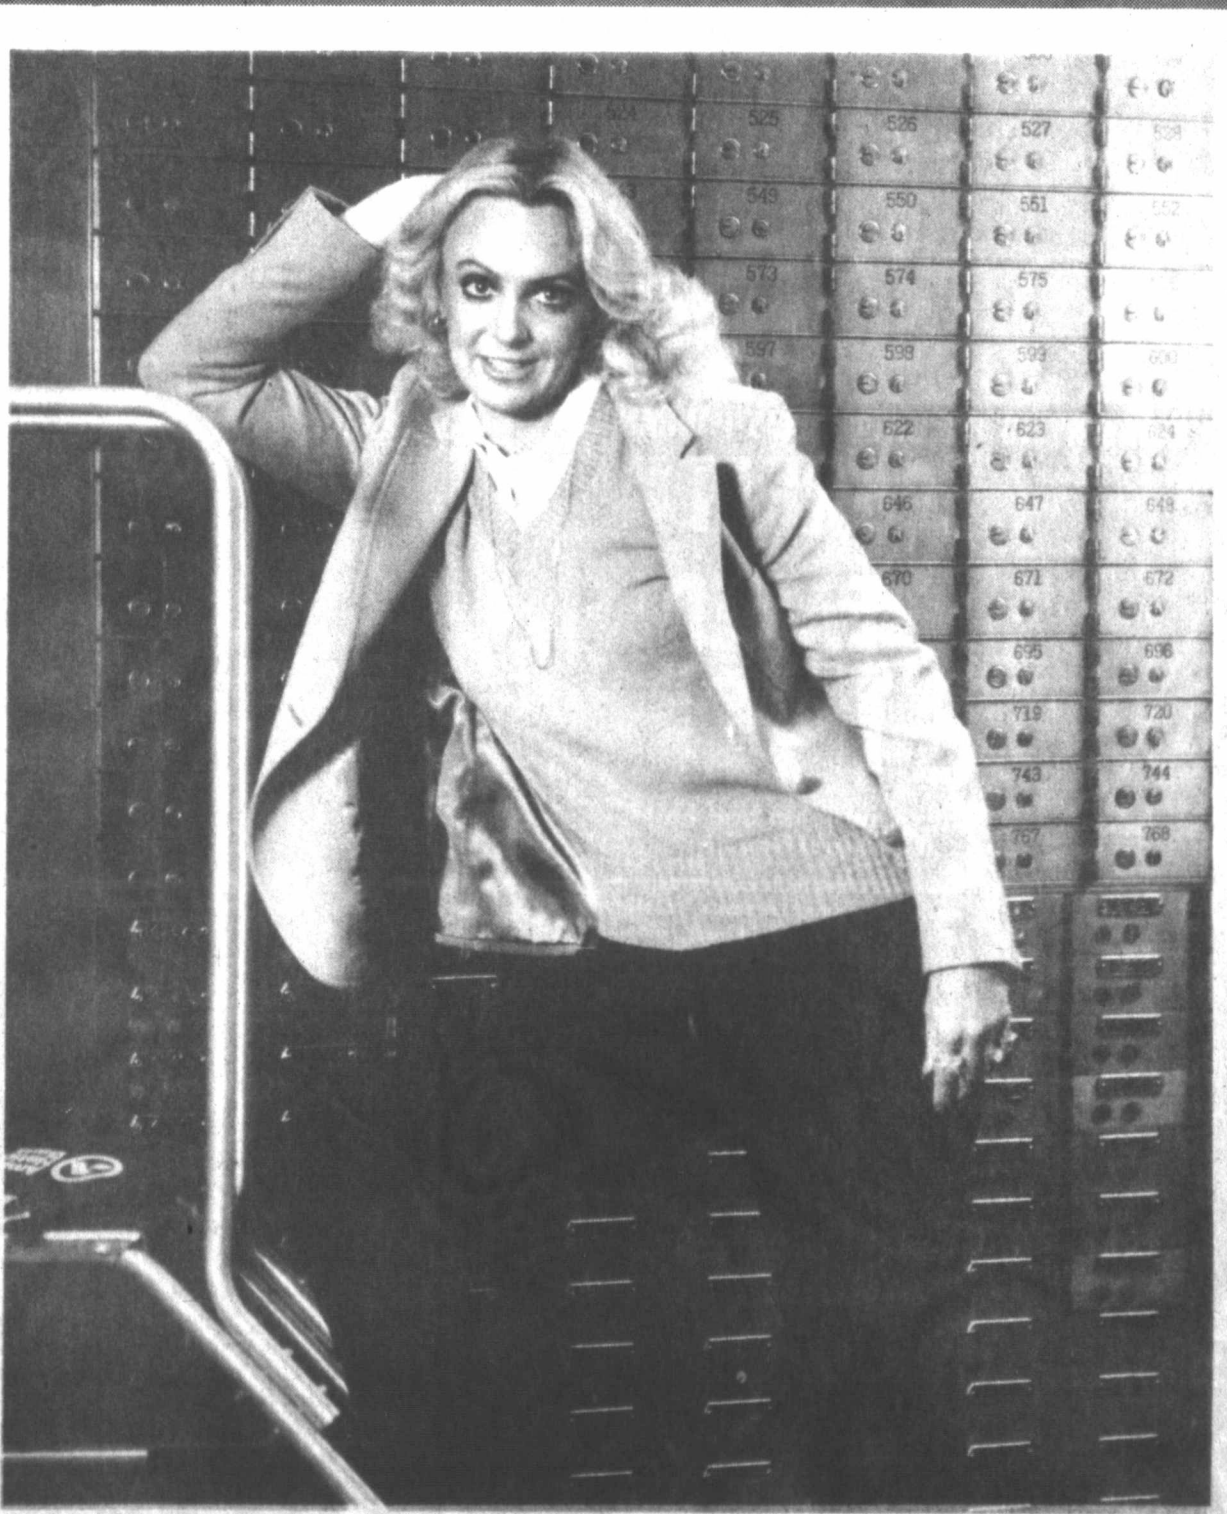

Their long distance appeal. Their well tailored quality. Their versatile textures and colors. All fashions that go the distance to autumns beyond. Because this year's new level of feminine dressing is one that borrows from menswear the quality and fit that the Hub has built its reputation on. In fact, many of the pieces we've assembled are tailored by our already famous men's lines (like the camel blazer right from Kingsridge). This fall's confident, flattering fashions are simpler, easier, still soft, still very romantic. This fall nothing else is quite so fitting than an ensemble from the Hub.

- Camel hair blazer from Kingsridge, 8 to 14, 256.00
- Navy poly/wool belted trouser from Janet Norwood, 5 to 13, 32.00.
- Oxford button down shirt from Charleston in beige, white or blue, 5 to 13, 16.00.
- Shetland V-neck sweater from Garland, S-M-L, in all the great fall colors, 17.00.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: We recently got cable television, and our 12-year-old daughter has been watching R-rated movies even though we would prefer that she not do so.

She said there is nothing wrong with it because she knows what is going on in the world. We're afraid that she'll soon think that the behavior portrayed in these movies is the norm.

Are we square in believing that a 12-year-old really doesn't need to watch a constant stream of sex and violence?

What do you think? And what should we tell her? She is a very level-headed girl.

IN A BIND IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR IN: Responsible parents would not permit their children to eat garbage, so why tempt them with intellectual garbage by making it so handy and accessible? If you believe you are exposing your daughter to "a constant stream of sex and violence" with cable TV, you shouldn't have it in your home.

Do I think you're "square?" No. However, I do think you're unrealistic to have R-rated movies available on TV at home, while telling your 12-year-old you prefer she didn't watch them.

DEAR ABBY: The last three times we have been invited to a wedding, I have called the bride's mother and asked if her daughter was registered, or if she had some suggestions on what the bride could use.

All three times, the mother has hemmed and hawed, and ended up saying, "They have so many things already," or, "She's been on her own for some time and has everything she needs, so why don't you just give them the cash instead? I'm sure they can use it."

Abby, I have never given money for a wedding gift, and I don't intend to start now.

I plan to send a gift, and I don't care if it's the only gift they receive. Am I wrong?

DISGUSTED IN WISCONSIN

DEAR DISGUSTED: No. You asked the bride's mother for some "suggestions." She offered one. But you are not obligated to accept it.

...

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.
