CREATES YEAR'S MIGHTIEST ROLE

Rose-Petal Cheeks Are Coming Back

LONDON, March 14. (P)—"Baby-face" make-ups will be fashionable this summer instead of sunken or haggard, according to Stephen Peltzer, a continental beauty expert here. Pink skins, rose-petal cheeks and delicately rouged lips are his prescription for the smart.

when local feeling was high. Evelyn upholding him. Marjorie came up alone, a little out of breath, explaining that she had just had a run in the garden. Had Jimmie not witnessed the ardent caresses of her lover, he might have thought this explained the brightness of her eyes and the flush of her cheeks. A few moments later Stirling arrived, and almost immediately behind him came Bill Netherton. Stirling apparently had entered the house at the front and had been shown through by the maid. He was cool enough.

"How do, Evelyn? Sorry I am late. Then he nodded to the men. Jimmie was not surprised that he and Marjorie pretended to be meeting for the first time for two days, nor that their greeting was so studiously indifferent. But what reason lay behind it?

The young doctor's words, when he joined them, had no particular warmth in them. He did add to Marjorie, with something of a smile, how well she was looking. She flushed and smiled in return, but made no reply.

Bill looked tired and worried, the hard lines of his mouth a little more pronounced, possibly because he was aware that the police might be observing his movements.

They all went into the house and found bridge tables awaiting them. Ten is not a very convenient number for the game, and there was the usual offer to wait, with suggestions of cutting out.

"Lionel is not keen," said Evelyn. "Nor am I. He has some new songs to try over. So we will go into the next room. That will just leave eight."

Nancy's suggestion that Duckworth sing found general favor and Lionel readily complied. Evelyn was a pianist of undoubted ability and she played two or three well-known songs for him. Then they gave "To the Desert," his voice and her accompaniment doing justice to its galloping lilt.

"One of you two will have to cut in presently," Netherton told Evelyn and Lionel as the singing concluded and the eight of them left the couple sitting in the music room. "I cannot stay very long."

Jimmie drew Marjorie as his partner, against Vincent and Nancy. The four men, Donald, Gresham, Stirling and Netherton, made the other table. The music could still be heard from the adjoining room, but it did not distract the players. Jimmie was more interested in his companions than in either the cards or the melodies.

Marjorie never betrayed the least interest in any of the men at the other table, while Stirling's face was expressionless. He showed no interest in Marjorie or in anything but his game. At Jimmie's table, Vincent's restless playing was annoying. He would leave his partner in an impossible situation and would jump from his chair and wander around the room or into the garden. Once or twice they were thus kept waiting.

"I will find him," said Marjorie. "Anyway we can listen to the music," said Jimmie. "They are back to the desert again."

"Awfully sorry," he said. "Got a bit of a headache. Meant to take a few steps and lost myself. Don't know the garden in the dark."

Soon after 10 o'clock there was a break at the other table. Netherton, who had been playing with Donald against Stirling and Gresham, and had been winning, got up and said he must go. "I've rather a lot to do."

Marjorie fetched Evelyn, and Bill departed.

A moment later Gresham went out saying he was not certain he had not left the engine of his car running. When the major returned, Stirling declared he must go. Marjorie said less than the others in the general protest.

"You and Duckworth have had enough music," he told Evelyn, "and I have some writing to finish." Marjorie slipped from the room when he left, but her absence was too brief to arouse comment.

Jimmie, Nancy, Evelyn and Donald had finished one rubber and were about to begin a second when Janet, the maid, handed him a note which she said a man had just brought to the house.

Asking permission, and wondering what it could be, Jimmie tore it open. It was written in pencil on a sheet of folded paper. He hoped that he had not betrayed his surprise at the contents.

This strange note, with a car out of gasoline, leads to another tragedy, disclosed in tomorrow's installment.

THE CRIME IN THE DUTCH GARDEN

SYNOPSIS: Jimmie Haswell is convinced that Dr. Netherton is not the murderer of Annabelle Querding, after Audrey Winford has told him that she and the physician are engaged. Police Superintendent Richmond had contended that Netherton hoped to share the Querding estate through marriage to her niece, Marjorie Blake, and the Doctor's nearness to the scene of the murder, first reported by Marjorie, increased his suspicions. Disappearance of a will disinheriting the nieces, should they marry, hints at its theft. Vincent Blake, a brother, has established a partial

Chapter 21
LOVE IN THE GARDEN
When Jimmie joined his cousin Donald and Nancy at dinner after leaving Richmond there was something to which he might look forward, as he and the Wades were to go over in the evening to Merrow Craig.
He had accepted the invitation despite his feeling that perhaps a detective might not be particularly welcome, since he did not wish to get to Merrow Craig across the links or by the road. When Jimmie declared for the links he did not realize how vital to the case his choice would later prove to be.

They set out at the same time after placing a five-bod bet, Donald and Nancy taking the road, while Jimmie went through the Fairways gate and made a straight line across the deserted course. There was enough light to avoid what would have been a perilous journey in the dark. He soon reached the opening in the Merrow Craig fence where he had entered with Donald on the day after the murder. He had started up the path when through a gap in the hedge he saw a girl hurrying towards him. It was Marjorie. On her face there was an eager happy expression.
He paused. It was not to meet him she had come. Then a dozen yards from where he stood, a figure stepped from out of the shelter of the trees. With a glad cry the girl ran forward.
"Darling!"
The word she whispered was audible in the evening stillness, and she was folded in the arms of her lover. Yet not in his arms. His one arm was put around her and she was pressed to his heart. For her lover was Richard Stirling.
Jimmie's footsteps, as he passed out of the garden, back to the links, were not heard by the two, engrossed in the rapture of their stolen meeting. He decided to approach the house through the gardens, so as to avoid the explanations inevitable should he be seen entering by the front.
Certainly, since the case against Netherton was predicated on his love for Marjorie, it was blown sky high. Bill was engaged to Audrey and Marjorie loved Stirling secretly.
Crossing the silent Dutch garden, Jimmie reached the lawn and found a small party already gathered there. Naturally enough, Donald and Nancy had beaten him in the race, and Donald gleefully demanded his five shillings, which Jimmie paid amid considerable banter.
Evelyn was there. In a simple black gown, her face showing little trace of the anxiety through which she had passed, Marjorie, she explained, would be out soon, when Jimmie inquired, "Where is your sister?"
While Duckworth was explaining to Jimmie that he had canceled his engagement in Bradford because of the unpleasantness of appearing

Evelyn says it is his favorite song," remarked Nancy.
Marjorie was away for some minutes; the song had changed to "September Roses" before she returned, bringing the apologetic Vinnie with her.
"Awfully sorry," he said. "Got a bit of a headache. Meant to take a few steps and lost myself. Don't know the garden in the dark."

Age of Power Machinery Brings Tremendous Development to Plains

CENTENNIAL OF REAPER FINDS LEVEL LAND AT PREMIUM WITH PANHANDLE FORGING TO FRONT

CYRUS McCORMICK DID MUCH TO PROMOTE FARMING

The centennial of the reaper invented in 1831 by Cyrus Hall McCormick finds these modern machines at a high stage of perfection, with the "combine" capable of doing about everything but turning out biscuits. It also comes at a time when these machines have played a large part in the development of the plains territory of the Panhandle.

McCormick conceived the plans for his reaper, built and tested it, then remodeled it for a public trial all within six weeks' time. He was assisted only by a negro helper. The wood was hewn and shaped by hand and the iron was beaten to form in the farm forge shop near Steele's Tavern, Va.

Tools were few and simple at that time. The secret of the machine was a reciprocating knife to cut the grain. Not even members of McCormick's own family believed his new-fangled contraption would work. But the first reaper cut as much grain in a day as four or five men could cut with cradles. At first it was necessary, however, for a man to walk along and rake the grain off the machines.

Seeds Are Added

With the first reaper the driver rode the reaper which pulled the machine, but later seeds were added, the machine was lightened and improved, the swath was widened, and the elevator was added. The self-raker was used up to 1867 and the mower principle was incorporated to add to its usefulness.

The harrow and wire binder were built in 1875. Thousands of these machines and reapers were made from 1877 to 1885. Invention of the farm tractor and efficient gas engines made possible the modern harvester-threshers which cut, thresh and deliver the grain to the wagon. The grain is cleaned at the same time.

McCormick established his factory in Chicago in 1847 and after the famous fire moved to the present location on the southwest side of the city.

West Texas owes much to the McCormick harvester and similar machines made by other firms.

Concerning this marvelous growth West Texas Today says:

The development of west Texas is the outstanding fact in the growth of rural America during the last 25 years. It sheds more light on the future of agriculture than all the speeches of farm board members—and their critics.

West Texas Grows

Small areas of the United States ideally fit for special kinds of production have grown in a striking way in the same period—but west Texas is big enough to make two Missouris or three Pennsylvanias. Yet in this vast area devoted to the production of staple crops just seven counties out of 117 failed to gain population during the last 10 years, although the loss of population in agricultural regions in the preceding decade affected more than half the counties in the states like Kansas, Illinois, and Missouri.

In order to understand the real meaning of this we must reflect on the fact that only 12 of the 94 American cities reporting 100,000 or more people in 1920 grew faster in the 10-year period than the 117 counties of west Texas did—yet the growth of the metropolitan cities has been the wonder of America's population development in the last 25 years.

What is the secret of this tremendous transformation? True, the development of west Texas oil fields has made interesting history and contributed not a little to the growth of some flourishing young cities. But an examination of the west, county by county, shows how impossible it is to account for more than 20 per cent of the region's growth in terms of oil and gas development.

At the bottom it was agriculture—the oil and gas have simply placed on the disposal of the settlers of these new regions the power to make their agricultural development more rapid and more solid.

Age of Machinery

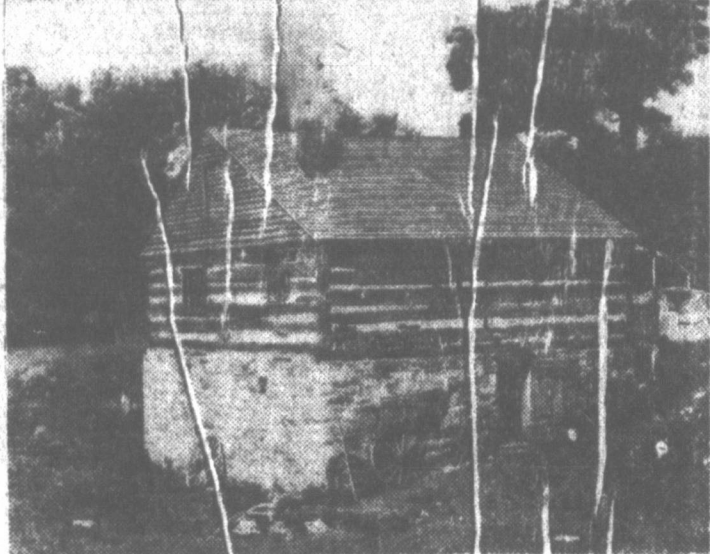

The development of west Texas is the sign and seal of the second great forward movement in the history of agriculture. As the former age was the age of the steel plow, the self-binding harvester and the horse-drawn mower, planter, and cultivator, so today is the age of the heavy tractor, the gas plow, and the combined harvester and thrasher. The oil-burning trac-

HISTORY OF SUSPENDED TERMS RECALLED IN HOUSE ARGUMENT

RESTRICTION MAY BE LIFTED FROM LAW

By HARRELL E. LEE, Associated Press Staff Writer.

AUSTIN, March 14. (AP)—Arguments in the Texas house of representatives on the bill by Representative Weinert of Seguin to give liquor law violators over 25 years of age the benefit of a suspended sentence, brought up the question of why the benefit of the suspended sentence law originally was denied to Dean law violators.

The suspended sentence law applies to nearly every other offense where the penalty is not more than five years imprisonment. Weinert said the restriction against the liquor law violator was imposed in 1917 when the people were "prohibition crazy."

Representative Forbes of Weatherford led the opposition to the bill in the house. He admitted that in a few cases men guilty of liquor law infractions should not be sent to the penitentiary. The governor can extend clemency in such cases, however, he pointed out. He called attention to the fact that Weinert was an anti-prohibitionist and stated this was only another effort to break down the liquor laws.

Says Change Needed

Weinert stated that district attorneys had advised him such a change was needed. Juries are prone to acquit guilty persons because the only alternative is the penitentiary, he said.

CONSERVATION BIG SUBJECT BEFORE STATE

POWER OF REGULATION IS ISSUE BEFORE SOLONS

AUSTIN, March 14. (AP)—Conservation of the natural resources of the state, especially oil and gas, is causing more than passing concern to state officials and the legislature. Especially those gentlemen of the legislature who represent growing oil communities.

Several snags have been struck in an effort to devise some practical and legal method to adequately conserve the oil and gas, prevent its wastage and obtain the maximum yield possible. Discussion has centered on a bill by Representative Long of Wichita Falls, giving the state railroad commission the right to set the oil-gas ratio, or the amount of gas that may be produced in lifting a barrel of oil to the top of the ground.

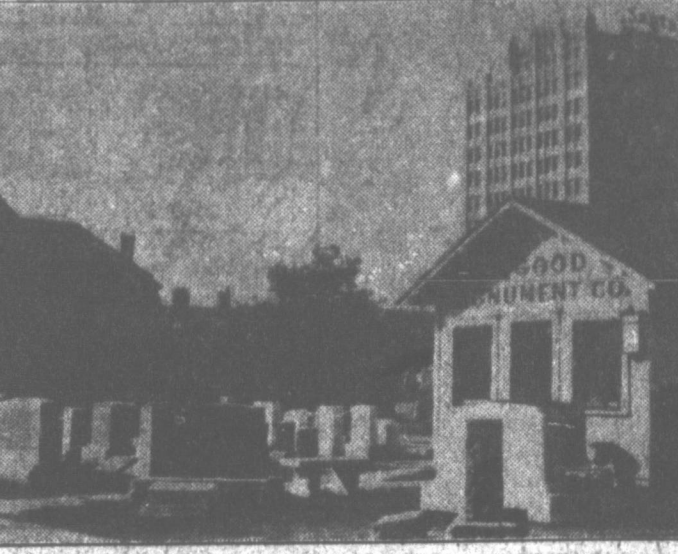

Technical experts appearing before the committee have advised against giving the commission authority to set a fixed ratio claiming that variances in the different sections of the state and in the fields in a given section make such a plan impractical and unfeasible. They have tendered their services to the committee to work out a bill that will satisfy all interests and be workable in the bargain.

They advocated passage of a law giving the commission the right to determine the oil-gas ratio for a field or area and would not tie the commission down to a fixed ratio.

This is one of the few bills on which the major oil companies and the independents have united. All producers are in accord in the conservation movement. One oil concern representative said that one field, where his company had exclusive control, had been made to produce 65 per cent more oil than it would have had not the gas been conserved. Whenever the company brought in a well with a high gas pressure and small oil volume, it was closed in to preserve the rock pressure. The result, he said, has been that the company not only has increased its yield from the field but has produced it economically.

Some reports of the Texas railroad commission have declared that millions of cubic feet of gas are being wasted daily in Texas oil fields. Several operators, according to officials, apparently have little or no regard to conservation of the gas, seeking only to produce as much oil as possible in the smallest time. The commission has ordered several wells in the Reagan county field to be closed so that the gas can be forced back into the ground to maintain the pressure and conserve the gas.

25TH ANNIVERSARY IS REACHED

TEXAS FRUITS AT NEW MARK FOR FEBRUARY

FIVE THOUSAND CARS SHIPPED FROM STATE

AUSTIN, March 14.—Shipment of 7,250 cars of fruit and vegetables from Texas during February set a new high record for the month, according to the bureau of business research at the University of Texas. This figure shows a substantial increase over the January movement of 5,607 cars, which also established a new high figure for that month. Shipments in February, 1930, amounted to 5,210 cars.

The most important individual commodities were mixed vegetables with 1,945 cars, spinach with 2,077 cars, and cabbage with 1,800 cars, respectively, the bureau report showed. In each case, February shipments exceeded those of either the preceding month and of the corresponding month of the preceding year. Grapefruit loadings of 261 cars were unusually heavy for February, comparing with 180 cars in the month in 1930 and 232 in 1929, but the early fall movement was too far below that of the preceding year for improvement this late in the season to make a material change in the comparatively unfavorable showing of the 1930-31 harvest.

Other commodities in the February list were lettuce, 20 cars; oranges, 40 cars; potatoes, 20 cars; string beans, 2 cars; mixed citrus fruits, 14 cars; peppers, 2 cars; carrots, 366 cars; beets, 236 cars; turnips and rutabagas, 46 cars; and greens, 119 cars.

EAST TEXAS INCREASE MORE THAN OFFSETS STATE SLUMP

NEW FIELD THROWING PRODUCTION OUT OF GEAR

AUSTIN, March 14.—An increase of 20,000 barrels in the daily average production of petroleum in East Texas during February was sufficient to raise the state average 1.9 per cent from 670,625 barrels in January to 682,463 barrels in February, in spite of declines in five of the six remaining sections of the state, according to the bureau of business research at the University of Texas.

Daily average production in the Panhandle during February was 54,336 barrels, compared to 60,383 in January and 66,575 in February, 1930, according to the bureau's report. In North Texas it was 59,387 barrels in February, compared to 60,262 barrels in January and 61,200 barrels in February, 1930. In West Central Texas, it was 24,425 barrels in February, compared to 26,550 barrels in January and 54,175 barrels in February, 1930. In West Texas it was 244,712 barrels, compared to 242,625 barrels in January and 355,050 barrels in February, 1930. In East Central Texas it was 42,250 barrels in January and 22,863 barrels in February, 1930. In Southwest Texas it was 18,030 barrels in February, compared to 78-

Twelve Speed Records for Chrysler!

Chrysler Imperial Eight now holds all A.A.A. Contest Board Stock Car Speed Records in its Class for one to five miles

At Daytona Beach, Florida—February 13, 14, 15—A Chrysler Imperial Eight captured all twelve stock car speed records in its class that are recognized by the A.A.A. Contest Board for one to five miles. Closed car and open car records—new records for one to five miles from a standing start—new records for one to five miles from a flying start—under strict supervision and electrically timed by A.A.A. Contest Board officials.

The cars were selected, checked and certified by A.A.A. representatives as being stock models in every detail—and the runs were made fully equipped, even to spare tires, with nothing removed, nothing added, nothing changed whatsoever.

Twelve official records. Let us mail you a folder giving full details of these records, or tell you the story in our showroom. Drive a Chrysler and learn the difference between Chrysler performance and the performance of all other motor cars.

In every one of the

NEW BUICK EIGHTS

... you shift silently and expertly with Buick Syncro-Mesh.

Everyone who drives a new Buick Eight is an expert gear-shifter—for, with Buick's Syncro-Mesh, you can shift instantly without the slightest dash, effort or hesitation.

With Buick Syncro-Mesh transmission you shift smoothly through all gears without pausing an instant in neutral. The result is not only more pleasant, more confident driving, but faster getaway in traffic.

Furthermore, Syncro-Mesh enables you to shift instantaneously from high to second gear, thus giving you complete control of the car on slippery roads, or when descending steep hills.

Come... take the wheel of the new Buick Valve-in-Head Straight Eight... a luxurious car so easy to drive, so powerful, safe and dependable that it outsells the 13 other eights in its price range combined!

Consider the delivered price as well as the list price when comparing motor car values.

Owing to their popularity, the present models of 1931 Buick Straight Eights will be continued throughout the coming summer and fall.

governor's outer office, says his chief function is talking people out of seeing the governor, rather than getting them in for an audience.

"About 75 per cent of those who enter the governor's office really have business for the attention of some one else," Wigninton said. "The governor is a busy man and he has little time to give persons who have no business with him. My job is telling these persons to whom to go with their troubles."

Sterling Scribbles

A change in the correspondence from the executive office has been noted since the state changed governors early this year.

Former Governor Moody was in the habit of dictating long letters, often revising them. Governor Sterling merely scribbles a few words on the bottom of the letter he is answering, and leaves it to his stenographers to put these ideas into the proper shape for a reply. Usually these letters are only five or six lines and hardly ever are they over 20 lines.

Needless to say, the stenographers in the governor's office won't veto the change.

The present session of the legislature is half over and the governor has not yet vetoed a bill. That may set a record. In any event, it reflects the remarkable harmony so far between the legislature and executive.

This policy of "no vetoes" likely can't keep up forever. Governor Sterling already has indicated he would veto the legislative act on bills to create any more district courts unless he should be convinced beyond all doubt that the new court was absolutely necessary. The governor knows that each additional court costs a lot of money and he believes that the present courts could take care of all the business.

if the work were more evenly distributed among them. Accordingly he favors redistricting, not more courts.

The governor broke his long silence, a silence which existed since his original message to the legislature, by asking the lawmakers to redistrict.

Who Services Your Car?

A Factory Trained Man Who Knows It's Every Detail Or A "Jack Of All Cars" Who Is Game To Try Anything?

• The satisfaction, or lack of it, which you are experiencing with your car depends greatly upon just who is doing the service work on it. Probably this is something that has never been called to your attention before. You stop at the handiest service station for gasolene and oil, have your greasing done there (whether they have a grease chart for your car or not) and it comes to it you may even take their easily given opinions as to the cause of mechanical troubles. Is it fair to your car? Did the factory that made it ever think it would fall into such unskilled hands for service? Absolutely NO! In fact the factories by regular bulletins keep the DEALERS informed on all service points, but no one else gets this information. The regular automobile dealer is the only one who stocks genuine factory-made parts—and surely you would not put "bootleg" parts on if you could help it.

• The only place to take your car for real satisfaction is back to the dealer who sells that line of cars in your city. His workshop is equipped with tools made to fit YOUR car; his men are trained at the factory to know every nut, bolt and grease-cup on YOUR car; the dealer is interested in the service that you get from the car he sells. Isn't it only logical that he is most interested in keeping your car in proper shape. And, beyond all this, remember, you have the Factory which made the car absolutely responsible through the local dealer. The Engineering Departments and Service Departments at the factories are maintained solely for the purpose of seeing that you get proper service from your dealer. The service station (so-called) has distinct limitations; the "one-man" garage that undertakes to repair all makes of cars is not properly equipped or trained. Take your car to its HOME for really satisfactory service.

OLDSMOBILE
PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

By Percival Christopher Wren Author of MYSTERIOUS WAY BEAU GESTE BEAU IDEAL

SYNOPSIS: The mysterious John Wayne is a problem to Dr. Charters. Because he knows of the physician's criminal career, he forces from Charters an affidavit for the murder of "Spider" Schiltz and is admitted to his nursing home. There he meets Marjorie Lauderell, pursued by her lingering illness. Her son, Mrs. Lauderell, was formerly a companion of Charters' American days. Perhaps, fears the doctor, Wayne knows how he robbed Schiltz and Charters of their shares of the St. Clair diamond "job." Dr. MacAdoo's suggestion to "bump him off" is rejected by Charters, who decides to have Wayne's presence subjected to a certified as innocent and remove him. Wayne, encountering MacAdoo, reveals his knowledge of his past life of crime and asks him what he is getting out of the Marjorie Lauderell business. Startled, MacAdoo offers to put his "cards on the table" if Wayne will do the same.

Chapter 9 A NIGHT VISIT Again John Wayne's peal of laughter expressed more of amusement than of compliment. "Look here, Manoel," he said, resting a hand on Dr. MacAdoo's shoulder, "you tell that good Dr. Charters that you want a half share of the Lauderell 10,000 pounds." And turning, John Wayne unlocked the door of Dr. MacAdoo's consulting-room. "Don't go!" cried Dr. MacAdoo. "What do you mean by a drink?" "No, thank you," replied John Wayne as he opened the door. "God bless us from a doctor who tries experiments and from an ass that brags—as we say in Brazil, eh?" From the consulting-room of Dr. Emmanuel MacAdoo, the eccentric Dr. Wayne went in search of that gentleman's colleague, Dr. Studley, the third and best-beloved of the doctors who, with undeniable skill, aided with varied genuine and imaginary ills to which the minds and bodies of the inmates of The Infirmary were heir. Dr. Studley was engaged as two ladies were leading their luggage to the train. Seated in the corridor which led to Dr. Studley's consulting-room, they gossiped and exchanged scandal. "Substitively, John Wayne drew near. "My dear doctor," said Mrs. Platte, a tall, dark, good-looking woman of some 40 summers, thin to the point of emaciation, with coal-black hair and burning eyes. "No, my dear. You don't say! Drugs and drink and vice? But you're a splendid doctor, too. And Mrs. Skinner, are you sure?" "Sure, my dear," interrupted the narrator, a small insignificant woman with rather untidy hair, dowdy clothes and a total lack of any kind of distinction—a woman whom John Wayne watched with great interest. "Why, my husband's a doctor, and was at Edinburgh university with him. He could have climbed to any height. Absolutely brilliant, but he drank even then like a fish. He went his round absolutely drunk and when people told him their ailments he laughed so that he fell off his chair. And then one day they brought a street accident into his surgery, and though he was so drunk that he hardly seemed to know which was the patient, he performed what all the doctors said was absolutely the most marvelous operation that had ever been done. "And then he got six months' imprisonment for going to some poor working-woman and falling into a drunken sleep while she died from want of attention. That was the ruin of him—and he took to drink as well as drink. My husband ran into him and knew him at once. He put him on his feet. "It was he who brought him here to Dr. Charters, you know, one of the first patients when The Infirmary was turned into a nursing-home. . . . been here ever since." "Just think of that now," said Mrs. Platte. "Drink and drugs. You said vice, my dear." "Oh, yes, my dear, terrible. His power. It is the only power that will lead you to know Jesus Christ and the forgiveness of your sins." If it is your desire to hear the gospel and the gospel only, and you do not have a way to come to church, just telephone 1283 and transportation will be furnished you both to church and home absolutely free. Services will be held as follows: Bible study, 9:45 a.m. Preaching, 11 a.m. Subject: "A popular church." Communion, 11:45 a.m. Bible study, 6:30 p.m. Preaching, 7:30 p.m. Subject: "Jesus Only, or Christ Is All." Come to every service. Your presence will be appreciated. JESSE F. WISEMAN, Minister.

CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE We are glad for all the churches in town, and our community would be much more beautiful if the people would become a greater part of the church life. You are urged to attend services complete Sunday, and there is a glad welcome awaiting you. Our services are as follows: Sunday school, 9:45 a.m. Preaching, 11 a.m. Subject: "Stewardship of Holiness." Societies meet at 7 p.m. Preaching, 8 p.m. Subject "An Unusual Invitation." Come and hear the message. W. V. NIELL, Pastor.

FRESHYTERIAN CHURCH With spring drawing nearer our thoughts naturally turn to the growing of plant life. Some plants come forth with rapid progress which can be noted from day to day, while others are slow growing taking weeks or even months to note the progress made. Our sermon Sunday morning will be in accord with this time of our year. We invite you to worship with us in our 11 o'clock service and it will be the only sermon for the day. In the evening we will attend service at the Methodist church, Sunday school at 10 a.m. Sermon, "Growing", 11 a.m. Junior C. E., 3 p.m. No service in the evening. A. A. HYDE, Minister.

FENTECOSTAL CHURCH OF GOD Sunday school, Sunday morning, 10 o'clock. Services at 11 o'clock. Sunday evening services, 7:45 o'clock. Friday evening services, 7:45 o'clock. Cottage prayer meeting, Monday evening, at the home of Rev. Roth, 847 South Somerville. Everyone is invited to each of these services.
