ANCHORAGE, Alaska
(AP) — An earthquake of magnitude 7.7 shook the Aleutian Islands, and hundreds of people rushed to high ground because of a threat of a high sea wave.

The highest wave at Adak, closest island to the quake's epicenter, was only about 3 feet above normal tides, said Guy Urban, a spokesman for the Alaska Tsunami Warning Center.

The quake was centered in the Pacific about 60 miles west-southwest of the Aleutian island of Adak, or 1,250 miles west-southwest of Anchorage, said geophysicist John Minsch of the U.S. Geological Survey National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

The tremor struck at 8:04 p.m. ADT.

Bell said the quake lasted about 30 seconds and he felt numerous aftershocks.

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Indian groups accused the government today of mismanaging trust funds worth an estimated $450 million and demanded a full accounting.

A class-action lawsuit filed in federal court here seeks an accounting for 300,000 trust funds allegedly mismanaged by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

No one knows exactly how much money is in the accounts, the groups said, because of the BIA's haphazard control. The agency has been criticized in numerous government audits and reports.

"They have no idea how much has been collected from the companies that use our land and are unable to provide even a basic, regular statement to account holders," said John Echowhawk, executive director of the Native American Rights Fund, which prepared the lawsuit.

Among those named as defendants in the suit are Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, who oversees BIA, and Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin.

AUSTIN (AP) — One ticket bought in Pasadena correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $4 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 4, 5, 6, 10, 41 and 46.

There were 84 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $1,745. There were 5,217 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $102. And there were 104,131 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $4 million.

Court allows ban to stand on doctor-assisted suicide

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today let Washington state authorities continue to ban doctor-assisted suicide while they challenge a ruling that said the law is unconstitutional.

The justices, extending an order by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor last month, blocked the effect of a San Francisco-based federal appeals court's ruling.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals declared the Washington law unconstitutional on March 6, the first such assisted-suicide decision by any federal appeals court.

Today's action means doctor-assisted suicide remains illegal in Washington until the state files a formal Supreme Court appeal and the justices say whether they will grant review. Such action likely won't come until next fall at the earliest.

In other action today the court: — Ruled that companies may offer early-retirement incentives that require employees to give up job-related claims against the firm. Imposing such conditions does not violate employers' financial duty under a federal pension law, the court said.

— Unanimously upheld the drug convictions of two men who said District of Columbia vice officers wrongly stopped them on a traffic violation as a pretext to look for drugs.

— Refused to revive Exxon Shipping Co.'s lawsuit over an oil tanker that ran aground in Hawaii seven years ago. The justices ruled that Exxon's own negligence caused the tanker Houston to run aground near the island of Oahu after breaking away from its mooring March 2, 1989.

— Ruled that people who flee the country to avoid prosecution still have the right to defend themselves against related lawsuits in which the government tries to seize their property.

The Washington law, part of a ban on promoting or assisting suicide first enacted by the territorial government in 1854, was challenged by three terminally ill patients, a group of doctors and an organization called Compassion in Dying.

The three patients have since died.

A three-judge panel of the 9th Circuit court upheld the law last year, saying the ban on doctor-assisted suicide protected the poor, handicapped and elderly and prevented doctors from becoming "killers of their patients."

An 11-member 9th Circuit panel reversed that ruling in March and said the law violates the constitutional "right to die" of mentally competent, terminally ill patients.

In April, the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals cited different grounds when it struck down two New York state laws banning doctor-assisted suicide.

That court said it would be discriminatory to allow some people to end their lives by disconnecting life-support systems but bar others from committing suicide by taking prescribed drugs.

In urging the high court to continue blocking the 9th Circuit court's ruling, lawyers for Washington state said the public interest would be served by maintaining the status quo until the justices decide whether to hear the case.

Attorneys for the doctors who challenged the law said such action would "deny mentally competent, terminally ill patients the choice to die certain, humane and dignified deaths."

Authorities question four in church fire

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Separate suspicious fires damaged two black church buildings in this North Texas city, and authorities were questioning two white men and one Hispanic man today.

In North Carolina, a white juvenile was arrested Sunday night and charged in connection with a fire Thursday that destroyed the old sanctuary of a black Charlotte church.

That fire does not appear to be directly linked to about 30 other fires that have struck predominantly black, Southern churches in the past 18 months, Charlotte police spokesman Keith Bridges said.

However, first word of the Charlotte arrest came today from Washington, D.C., where clergymen and federal officials have been discussing the series of fires. (See related story, Page 3.)

In Texas, the origin of the fire Sunday night at the New Light House of Prayer and one reported about 4 a.m. today at the Church of the Living God were undetermined. Agents from the FBI and the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms were heading to Greenville, about 40 miles northeast of Dallas, officials said.

City officials also reported today that KKK was spray painted on a wall at a car wash that was burglarized early Sunday and that some greens were vandalized at the Wright Park Municipal Golf Course about 10:30 p.m.

"The individuals used the flag poles to carve KKK into the greens," according to a memo from the City of Greenville.

Officials don't know if any of the incidents are related but said they planned to question the three men about them.

The fire at the Church of the Living God, which did moderate damage to exterior siding and an interior wall, was reported about three hours after the suspects in the first fire were detained by police, said Fire Chief Robert Wood. He termed both blazes "acts of local vandalism."

At the New Light House of Prayer church, which has about 150 members, a rear classroom and the attic area suffered extensive fire damage, while the sanctuary suffered heavy smoke damage, Wood said.

Gas prices take plunge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices took their first nationwide plunge of the year, dropping by more than a penny a gallon, an oil industry analyst said.

The average price for all grades, including taxes, was $1.37 per gallon Friday, according to the Lundberg Survey of 10,000 gasoline stations nationwide. That's down 1.21 cents from the last survey on May 24.

"Prices are falling in virtually all cities nationwide," analyst Trilby Lundberg said Sunday.

The exceptions were some Midwestern cities, where prices rose slightly after bottoming out, Lundberg said.

Lundberg attributed the drop to lower crude oil prices and the end of a supply shortage. More price reductions are possible.

Prices had been on the rise since Nov. 17, when the average price was $1.15. They began falling in some cities last month.

The steep price hikes of the previous months were attributed to a variety of factors, including a shortage caused by higher production of heating oil during winter months.

California was especially hard hit because of a state-mandated switch to cleaner-burning gasoline that caused short supplies.

Those problems have been resolved, Lundberg said. On the international front, OPEC has decided to raise crude oil production after an agreement that lets Iraq sell oil for the first time since the Gulf War.

Forecast calls for a high today near 90 increasing to the mid 90s on Tuesday.

Hezbollah guerrillas ambush Israeli patrol

MARJAYOUN, Lebanon (AP) — Hezbollah guerrillas ambushed an Israeli patrol in south Lebanon today, killing five soldiers and wounding eight in the deadliest clash in the area since a U.S.-brokered cease-fire two months ago.

Three of the wounded were reported in serious condition.

The casualties, which were confirmed by the Israeli army, were the worst since a cease-fire halted Israel's 16-day bombing blitz against Lebanon-based guerrillas that killed at least 165 people, mostly Lebanese civilians.

Security sources in south Lebanon said a Hezbollah guerrilla also died in the clash, which drew swift retaliatory shellfire.

Israeli forces shelled Shiite Muslim villages and guerrilla infiltration trails near the market town of Nabatiyah, which faces the occupied area that Israel calls a "security zone."

A Lebanese army sergeant was killed and a civilian man was wounded in the shellfire, according to police in Nabatiyah.

Israeli military sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the attack violated the U.S.-brokered truce of April 27. That was because Hezbollah guerrillas, they said, mounted the attack from a civilian area and fled back to it.

The cease-fire prohibits both sides from attacking population centers or shielding themselves behind civilians. The agreement does not rule out military confrontations.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres and the armed forces chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Amnon Shahak, met with army commanders in northern Israel following the dawn ambush. Peres was to discuss the south Lebanon situation later with Prime Minister-elect Benjamin Netanyahu.

The Iranian-backed Hezbollah claimed responsibility for the hit-and-run ambush between the villages of Dabshe and Ali Taher in the south Lebanon border enclave occupied by Israel.

"Our (holy warriors) ambushed and raked an Israeli patrol with rocket and machine gun fire at Dabshe area, killing and wounding all enemy soldiers of the patrol," said a Hezbollah statement.

Hezbollah guerrillas are spearheading a campaign to dislodge Israel from the zone it has held since 1985 to protect its northern towns from cross-border guerrilla raids and rocket attacks.

Kellogg cuts cereal prices

DETROIT (AP) — Kellogg Co. today announced price cuts averaging 19 percent on popular cereal brands like Frosted Flakes and Rice Krispies Treats, following price-slashing by competitors.

The price cuts should show up on U.S. store shelves in a couple of weeks, chairman Arnold Langbo said.

"It responds mainly to consumer expectations," Langbo said. "It's also a good business decision for Kellogg, and it's the next step in a value-for-pricing strategy that we've been pursuing for a couple of years."

The cuts include 27 percent on Froot Loops, 22 percent on Frosted Mini-Wheats, 18 percent on Frosted Flakes and 17 percent on Rice Krispies Treats. The cuts affect 16 Kellogg products, about two-thirds of its U.S. cereal business, Langbo said.

Earlier this year, prices were cut on some Post- and Nabisco-brand cereals by Kraft Foods Inc. and its parent, Philip Morris Cos., in efforts to boost market share in the $9 billion industry.

A typical box of cereal cost about $4, and the Post cuts averaged around 20 percent.

Langbo said the Kellogg reductions are the result of two years of cost-cutting, which included eliminating 1,200 jobs last year.

Kellogg's will continue to use coupons, which many manufacturers have complained cost more to design and distribute than they are worth. Langbo said the company plans to produce and distribute them more efficiently, but would not elaborate.

Damp weather tames Alaska's wildfire

HOUSTON, Alaska (AP) - Cool, damp weather helped tame a week-old wildfire that burned more than 37,000 acres and caused nearly $10 million in damage, but it was still too dangerous for evacuated residents to go home.

Firefighters had contained 60 percent of the blaze by Sunday night. It was expected to be fully contained by tonight, but won't be safely out for weeks, said Fire Commander Dave Liebersbach.

"With high winds, it would only take a little pocket to start this thing up again," he said.

The fire, which burned through an area about 50 miles north of Anchorage, charred more than 360 buildings and forced at least 1,800 evacuations. Dixie Dies of the Alaska Division of Forestry said today that people have been allowed to visit their property for three-hour intervals, but flames and hot spots make it too dangerous for people to return permanently.

"We're trying to get people back home," said Kevin Koechlein, who's coordinating rescue operations for the Matanuska-Susitna Borough.

"We're trying to make sure residents can drive the roads safely, have power, and they are not in danger."

Fire cut electricity to many of the affected areas, and crews were still working to restore power.

About 1,300 firefighters put in 12-hour shifts around the clock to root out hot spots Sunday. Ten helicopters, about 70 fire engines, 20 water tankers and more than 20 bulldozers also fought the fire. The cause of the blaze was unknown, though investigators had suspected fireworks.

James Lee Witt, director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, led a team of federal and state officials on an inspection tour of the fire-damaged areas Sunday.

A federal disaster declaration Friday allowed residents to apply for loans to rebuild their home. The Small Business Administration said it would set up a center to process government loans.

Armstrong museum to feature Clarendon native's artwork

Western artist, Don Ray of Channing, is the featured exhibit in the Armstrong County Museum and Culture Center in Claude during June. Since the artist was born and reared on a ranch near Clarendon, his paintings and bronze sculptures are reminders of the early ranching period in Donley and Armstrong counties.

His work has been shown by Hudson Valley Art Association in White Plains, N.Y., Abercrombie and Fitch, and in New York, N.Y. He has been featured in the Mountain Oyster Club at Tucson, Arizona; Haley Library of Midland, Panhandle Plains Historical Museum in Canyon; Square House Museum in Pahrhandle; the XIT Museum in Dalhart and the Moore County Art Association Center of Dumas. Ray's paintings and bronzes are found in various galleries in the Southwest.

Publications featuring his work include the 1975 publication of The XIT American Cowboy; Persimmon Hill, The Western Horseman, Southwest Art, Accent West, Grain Producers News, and the Dallas Morning News "Scene" - a supplement to the newspaper.

In the 1960s, Ray served as an officer in the U.S. Army. He has a master's degree from West Texas State University, Canyon. For several years he taught graphic arts until he began working full time in his Channing studio housed in the old Channing Bank building.

Arrangements for a group showing of Ray's exhibit in the museum may be made by calling Komar Beryl Fields, arts coordinator, at 806-226-2278.

The museum is open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Friday; noon to 4 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday. It is located on US 287 in Claude.

Pastors praise media attention; pray for end to church fires while continuing to minister

WASHINGTON (AP) - A rash of fires at predominantly black churches in the South has brought their people together, say pastors gathered to meet with federal officials and comfort each other.

More than 100 people, including a 40-member choir and more than 30 visiting ministers, sang gospel songs, displayed charred remains from their church buildings and prayed Sunday night at a service in a church near Capitol Hill.

The clergymen were meeting today with Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin to discuss efforts by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, a Treasury agency, to solve suspicious fires that have struck 30 Southern churches in the last 18 months.

The church leaders met Sunday with Attorney General Janet Reno on the involvement of the FBI and other Justice Department units in the expanding investigation, which officials said now involves more than 200 federal agents.

"The entire administration is committed to putting an end to these fires, and we will continue to pursue these matters vigorously," Reno said in a statement afterward. "Acts of violence against the spiritual centers of our communities must be stopped. We will devote whatever resources are necessary to solve these crimes."

President Clinton made the same vow in a national radio address Saturday.

"Many, if not most of these fires are driven by racial hostility. That's got to be faced," Deval Patrick, assistant attorney general for civil rights, said today on CBS.

"It comes from the climate that is part of this nation, a racial polarization," added the Rev. Mac Charles Jones of the National Council of Churches. Jones, speaking at the service Sunday night, said, "We are here to be in solidarity with (members of burned churches)."

"This is a chance for the pastors to share with each other and draw strength from each other before going back," said Rev. Terrance Mackey, whose North Carolina church was destroyed last June. "This is to show the unity, that people are pulling together. That we will not take this lying down."

The council of churches, a New York-based interdenominational group, arranged the meetings with the federal officials, to let pastors vent frustrations with the fire investigations, which they say have focused more on the church members and clergy than on outside suspects.

"The sense of dissatisfaction (among pastors) is not around the amount of the investigation, but the sense of intimidation that they feel from investigators," Jones said Sunday on CNN's "Late Edition With Frank Sesno."

"They feel that they are the targets of the investigation. What has happened is the victims have also become the suspects," Jones said. He cited examples of investigators requiring lie-detector tests to pastors, issuing subpoenas for church records and telling congregations that everyone is a suspect.

A top Justice Department official defended the investigations. "Our responsibility is to solve these crimes, and we are determined to do that. That includes whatever investigative tools are at our disposal and then some," assistant attorney general Patrick said Sunday on CNN.

Perot stand-in running mates declare lack of interest

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Ross Perot's "stand-in" running mate in the West is a high-tech businessman who says he has no interest in the job. "Absolutely not," says James S. Campbell.

Ross Perot's stand-in running mate in the East is a high-tech businessman who says he has no interest in the job. "Absolutely not," says Carl Owenby.

The Reform Party says it chose two running mates to emphasize that both of them and Perot himself - are just holding a place on state ballots until the party decides on its ticket at a nominating convention this summer.

But Perot has not ruled out running himself. In 1992, James Stockdale also was initially billed as vice presidential stand-in before he became the official No. 2.

Campbell, 69, said he's just doing his old pal Perot a favor by lending his name to the ballot drive.

"I'm a friend of Ross Perot's and he needs stand-ins for some states in order to petition to get on the ballot," says Campbell, who was Perot's boss at IBM in the early 1960s.

Campbell, who lives on the Palos Verdes Peninsula southwest of Los Angeles, is the stand-in running mate in Western states, including Washington, Hawaii and Texas. He was surprised when a reporter told him he is also listed as No. 2 in South Dakota. "That's quite possible," he said.

Owenby, 44, of Quincy, Fla., became the East Coast stand-in after first getting involved in Perot's 1992 campaign and the Reform Party petition committee. He has worked with the campaign and been involved in Perot's United We Stand group, which was organized after the 1992 elections.

The Reform Party expects Owenby to be on the ballot in Florida, Georgia, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Tennessee, Illinois and Iowa. He also is likely to be listed in Mississippi, Connecticut, Kentucky, Vermont and Alabama.

Owenby - like Campbell and Perot himself - made his career in computer technology. He co-owns a computer consulting business and says he has no political ambitions.

"Mine is strictly a name on a piece of paper as a stand-in until the party can nominate their presidential and vice-presidential candidates," Owenby said. "I have never been interested in running for any political office. The older I get, it diminishes below zero."

Perot's name, or the Reform Party he built, is on the ballot in 13 states so far. The running mates are being tacked on in states requiring that a vice presidential contender also be listed on campaign documents.

Russ Verney, national coordinator for the Reform Party, said there is "absolutely zero chance" that Campbell or Owenby will ultimately be the vice presidential nominee.

Nation briefs

UAW, big three begin long summer of contract talks

DETROIT (AP) - The Big Three automakers are once again lean, innovative, money-making machines. And the 420,000 union workers who helped stave off Japanese competitors are ready to share in the wealth.

Today, representatives of those workers will begin to tell General Motors, Ford and Chrysler what they want in a new national contract - the largest, most closely analyzed labor pact in the United States.

The talks were set to get under way with negotiators for the UAW and Ford ceremoniously shaking hands across a long table at the automaker's headquarters in suburban Detroit.

Similar ceremonies will be held Tuesday and Chrysler and Wednesday with GM. The big negotiating committees then will break into subcommittees, which will meet privately throughout the summer to narrow the issues in dispute.

Australian swimmer stops swim twelve miles short

MIAMI (AP) - Battling fatigue, dehydration and hallucinations, Susie Maroney's unassisted Havana-to-Key West swim came down to a few struggling strokes 12 miles from shore, and she decided she had accomplished enough.

After 39 hours and 89 miles of swimming in choppy waters that at times battered her in a shark cage, Maroney called it quits Sunday when she crossed into U.S. waters to the sounds of boats blowing their horns in celebration.

The 21-year-old Australian marathon swimmer was attempting to be the first person to make the unassisted trip across the Florida Straits. She said she got depressed along the way and occasionally cried, but managed to keep up her spirits.

Maroney left Havana before dawn Saturday. The plan was that she would swim inside a 24-by-8-by-6-foot wire cage pulled attached to a motor boat to protect her from sharks.

During her swim, Maroney was not allowed to grab the side of the cage, touch the bottom or get on board the boat for a break. She did not sleep, treading water while taking breaks in the cage. Her diet consisted of liquid protein, mashed bananas, yogurt and Twinkies.

Hundreds gather in tribute to Timothy Leary

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) - In a hot airplane hangar, over a sound system that rumbled like a bad acid trip, hundreds gathered to remember Timothy Leary, the 20th century's guru of self-indulgence.

At Sunday's memorial service, actress Winona Ryder remembered Leary as a loving godfather, stepson Zach Leary recalled him a patient teacher, and former Harvard colleague Ram Dass called him a lifelong spiritual friend.

Leary, 75, died May 31 in his hilltop home. Diagnosed with prostate cancer in January 1995, the prophet of better living through drug chemistry had embraced dying as the ultimate trip.

Cemetery thefts fuel black market

TERRELL, Texas (AP) - The theft of cemetery ornaments in Northeast Texas is fueling a thriving black market across the state, authorities say.

"A lot of people want that kind of stuff and are willing to pay for it," said Terrell police Detective Richard Peavey, who has been investigating the thefts there.

"A dealer can buy a piece for $200 or $300, or even go to a cemetery and get it himself for nothing, and then turn around and sell it for $1,700-$1,800 or more. This is happening all over Texas."

Terrell police say they want to question two Dallas-area antique dealers about the removal of statues, marble urns and wrought-iron fences in Terrell as well as the appearances of similar angel statues from cemeteries in Paris and Jorney.

A warrant was issued late last month for the theft of an angel statue from Evergreen Cemetery in Paris, but police say they fear the dealer named in the warrant and his business partner may both have left Texas after a spate of publicity about the cemetery heists.

Similar thefts have been reported elsewhere in the area, but officials say the snatching of cemetery gravestones and art is not unique to the Terrell case or to any part of the state.

Karen Thompson, president of Save Texas Cemeteries, a state preservation group founded in 1994, said her organization receives reports of thefts and vandalism each month.

Waco farmer posts five hundred dollar reward for stolen hay bales

WACO (AP) - The last straw for David Kerr came last weekend when someone stole 11 bales of hay off his property.

Kerr, who farms 500 acres in Bosqueville north of Waco, is posting a $500 reward for the arrest and indictment of the thief.

"I just got through baling Saturday night," Kerr said. "We went back Sunday to load it out, and the bales were gone. The drought probably has something to do with it, but good people are not going to steal, regardless of the weather."

"I'll probably never hear anything, but enough is enough."

With cattle prices down and hay prices up, some law enforcement officials wonder if more hay thefts will occur. Only a couple have been reported.

"Hay is getting pretty scarce," McLennan County sheriff's deputy Ronnie Turnbough said. "When everyone was talking about auctioning their cattle off, I was expecting to have a rash of thefts like this."

Forget the needle; you can't even hardly find a haystack locally, said Carol Manly, owner of Lorena Feed Supply.

"These are desperate times," she said.

Kerr said he's had a few square bales stolen in the past, but he never reported the thefts.

This time, though, the thief took 11 round bales, which are selling for as high as $80 because of supply-and-demand.

"I just don't have the heart to charge those kinds of prices," Kerr said. "I've got regular customers whom I supply hay, and they're up against it. Anyone who has cattle is hurting. At best, they're breaking even."

With hay so hard to find, Kerr has gotten calls from farmers and ranchers in South Texas, even though he doesn't advertise.

"How the people in South Texas found out that I sell hay, I don't know," Kerr said. "I guess that shows how desperate people really are."

But Kerr was keeping his hay for himself and a few customers.

"My wife made up some posters, and I'm going to put them in stores," Kerr said. "I will prosecute the thieves if I can find them."

Houstonites advised not to eat berry

HOUSTON (AP) - This time of year, David Tinney normally sells 1,200 pint-sized baskets of strawberries a week to restaurants and country clubs on the city's west side.

But after health officials tied an outbreak of diarrhea in Houston to a parasite they believe is on fresh strawberries, Tinney said Sunday he won't be providing any for now.

"I would feel better not selling them until they find out for sure what the problem is," said Tinney, owner of Country Fresh Fruit and Vegetables. "Even though they haven't outright banned them, I'd rather be on the safe side."

Health officials think the parasite, called cyclospora, is on and possibly inside the fruit.

On Saturday, the Texas Department of Health and the Houston Health and Human Services Department began advising area residents not to eat fresh strawberries until officials can guarantee their safety.

Officials stopped short of asking grocery stores to remove the berries from their shelves.

Some shoppers continued to buy fresh strawberries at local markets despite the warning. "We're selling a lot of them," said Jim Dickey, manager of a Randall's grocery.

"We haven't had any problems with anything we've sold so far, and we've had a sale on our strawberries throughout the weekend," said Miles Payan, manager of a Rice Epicurean market.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Democratic goals are nebulous

You've got to hand it to the congressional Democrats. They surely have learned a few tricks from President Bill Clinton as they develop an agenda to help them regain control of both houses of Congress.

On Capitol Hill last month, Democratic leaders announced five bold "principles" that wait from the heart of the party's election-year agenda.

Are you sitting down? The Democrats promised to honor work, fight for children, protect families, promote responsibility and encourage basic fairness.

Now compare these unspecific feel-good strategies with the Republican Contract with America. Agree with the GOP's contract promises or not, at least Newt and company outlined a nuts-and-bolts agenda with items including anti-crime measures, a balanced-budget amendment and tort reform.

Then, by the way, the House earnestly (the Senate a bit less so) went about fulfilling its charge by bringing these issues to a vote. In some cases, bills passed over fierce Democratic objections, but were squelched by a president opposed to conservative measures.

In the ensuing public relations tussle, the Democratic Party has clearly prevailed. The most recent Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll showed registered voters approving of Clinton's performance by 52% to 40%. Even more telling, voters disapprove - by an enormous 68% to 25% - with the job the GOP Congress is doing.

For years, voters had complained about business as usual in the nation's capital. Skyrocketing deficits, ever-increasing government spending and Congress' refusal to tinker with sacred cows were reportedly the causes of much angst among a cynical electorate.

Granted, the GOP was far too timid in dealing with some issues, such as slashing corporate welfare. But Congress seriously tried to rein in federal spending and restrict growth of bureaucratic power. Congress was even willing to revamp Medicare, Social Security and other middle class entitlements facing looming fiscal problems.

The Clinton administration, congressional Democrats and the liberal media succeeded in casting Congress as in the clutches of far-right extremists intent on throwing Grandma on the streets and giving tax cuts to the country club set.

Whatever its flaws or lack of popularity, the GOP agenda is far more serious than the Democrats' principles, which are as hard to pin down as the president himself.

Most likely, these five points translate into policies that can be summarized in two words: more government.

Republicans need to point out that government expansion is one key reason that families break down, children are at risk, and responsibility and work are flagging virtues. And those who count on government to provide basic fairness are barking up the wrong tree.

These facts might go a long way toward countering cynical Democratic rhetoric.

Berry's World

"Ah! Wilderness - at last!"

Rage against the machine

In his hilarious new book, Enemies List, P.J. O'Rourke writes, "It would be hard to put Sinead O'Connor on an enemies list too many times. She is the entire left-wing thought process: The world faces difficult and horrendous problems - war, famine, disease, poverty and injustice. We could ask scientists and scholars what to do about these problems or pray to God for guidance, or we could study the problems ourselves and try to discern solutions, but fortunately, we don't do any of that because there's a bald girl in Dublin who has all the answers."

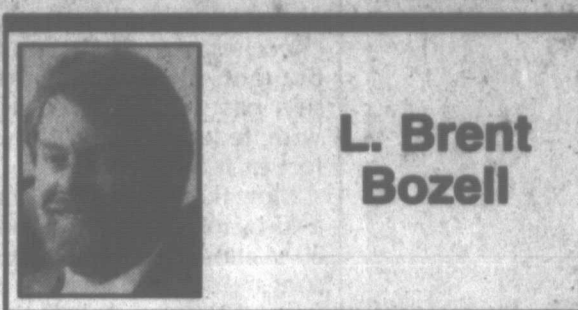

The same might be said of Rage Against the Machine, a band whose LP Evil Empire (Epic) recently topped the Billboard chart. They're not only popular, they're so aggressively leftist that next to them, Sinead O'Connor makes sense.

Rage's music is obnoxious rock/funk/rap of the headache-inducing sort, but even more inane are the group's lyrics, written by lead singer Zack de la Rocha. The eleven tracks on Evil Empire are screeds condemning conservatives, America, capitalism and Western civilization in general, all of which constitute some form of machinery worth raging against.

"Bulls on Parade" is an anti-military rant that calls the Pentagon a "rotten sore on the face of Mother Earth" because:

"Weapons, not food, not homes, not shoes
"Not need, just feed the war cannibal animal ...
"What we don't know keeps the contracts alive and movin'
"They don't gotta burn da books, they just remove 'em
"While arms warehouses fill as quick as the cells.

"Vietnow" is Rage's commentary on conservative talk radio and the 1994 elections:
"Shock around the clock, from noon 'til noon

L. Brent Bozell

"Men grabbin' (their) mics, and stuff 'em into the womb
"Terror the product (they) push ...
"Undressed and blessed by da Lord
"The same devil that ran around Managua with a sword
"Check the new style that Ollie found
"I tune in wit a bullet ta shut down the devil sound ...
"Tha sheep tremble and here come tha votes."
"Snakecharmer" denounces the American dream as "a selfish, horrific vision" that is "passed on like the deadliest of viruses, crushing you so have no illusions, boy, vomit up all ideals and serve."

Then, there's "Down Rodeo," a reference to Beverly Hills' affluent Rodeo Drive. "The structure is set, ya neva change it with a ballot pull," the song states, "so make a move and plead the Fifth 'cause ya can't plead the First ... I'm rollin' down Rodeo wit a shot gun - these people ain't seen a brown skin man since their grandparents bought one."
"Wind Below" opines that the problem with the media isn't liberal bias but rather those evil, evil corporations:
"GE is gonna flex and try to annex the truth
"NBC is gonna flex and cast their image in you

"Disney bought the fantasies and piles of eyes
"And ABC's new thrill rides of trials and lies."
The disc's final track, "Year of the Boomerang," hysterically declares, "It's dark now in Dachau and I'm screamin' from within cause I'm cell locked in the doctrines of the right."

What else should one expect from de la Rocha, who, at a 1993 Los Angeles holiday benefit concert for the homeless, stated that he wouldn't "celebrate this lie that is Christmas?"

Throughout "Evil Empire," Rage trashes and vilifies its enemies. Who are its heroes? The liner notes contain a list of the band's "comrades," among them cop-killer Mumia Abu-Jamal, FBI agent-killer Leonard Peltier, the Committee to Support the Revolution in Peru, the Zapatista guerrillas in Mexico and the nuts that think there's a right-wing media conspiracy over at Fairness and Accuracy in Reporting. Surprised?

Also in the LP package is a photo of some of Rage's favorite books, including Che Guevara's Guerrilla Warfare, The Marx-Engels Reader, The Black Panthers Speak, The Anarchist Cookbook and Frantz Fanon's anti-Western diatribe The Wretched of the Earth. Evil Empire isn't just an album; it's an indoctrination kit for every revolutionary movement that's been flushed down the toilet of history.

As with most leftist musicians, Rage is part of the very machine it rages about. Its record label, Epic, is owned by mega-corporation Sony. The band last month appeared on "Saturday Night Live," which airs on NBC, which is owned by General Electric, which paid Rage to spit on it.

Rage is hypocritical and calculating, writing "Evil Empire" to fame and fortune. So here, P.J., is another candidate for your Enemies List. We could go even further by making the likes of Sinead O'Connor repent for past sins by forcing her to listen to this CD.

Today in History

Today is Monday, June 10, the 162nd day of 1996. There are 204 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 10, 1935, Alcoholics Anonymous was founded in Akron, Ohio, by William G. Wilson and Dr. Robert Smith.

On this date:

In 1801, the North African state of Tripoli declared war on the United States in a dispute over safe passage of merchant vessels through the Mediterranean.

In 1865, the opera "Tristan und Isolde" by Richard Wagner premiered in Munich, Germany.

In 1892, the Republican national convention in Minneapolis nominated President Harrison for re-election and Whitelaw Reid for vice president. (Harrison, however, lost the election to former President Cleveland.)

In 1922, singer-actress Judy Garland was born Frances Gumm in Grand Rapids, Minn.

In 1940, Italy declared war on France and Britain; Canada declared war on Italy.

In 1942, the Gestapo massacred 173 male residents of Lidice, Czechoslovakia, in retaliation for the killing of a Nazi official.

In 1946, Italy replaced its abolished monarchy with a republic.

In 1964, the U.S. Senate voted to limit further debate on a proposed civil rights bill, shutting off a filibuster by Southern states.

In 1967, the Middle East War ended as Israel and Syria agreed to observe a United Nations-mediated cease-fire.

In 1977, James Earl Ray, the convicted assassin of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., escaped from Brushy Mountain State Prison in Tennessee with six others; he was recaptured June 13.

In 1981, in Frascati, Italy, 6-year-old Alfredo Rampi fell down an artesian well; the story ended tragically as efforts to rescue him proved futile.

Ten years ago: Jesse Dean Sepulveda, a 16-day-old infant with a severe heart defect, underwent heart-transplant surgery in Loma Linda, Calif., after a nationally televised announcement that a donor was available.

Five years ago: New York City staged a celebration for U.S. veterans of the Persian Gulf War.

One year ago: U.S. Air Force Captain Scott O'Grady, rescued after being shot down over Bosnia, described his six-day ordeal at a news conference at Aviano Air Base in Italy, saying he was no Rambo and no hero. A bomb blamed on drug traffickers exploded in Medellin, Colombia, killing 26 people.

Thunder Gulch won the Belmont Stakes.

Bob Dole is on the cutting edge

Has anyone noticed that, suddenly, Sen. Robert Dole is doing everything right?

In a remarkable transformation, the presumptive nominee has shed the dull, predictable language of Capitol Hill for the arresting and morally engaging issues of a great campaign.

Throughout the primary season, Dole failed to do this. He permitted Pat Buchanan to define the issues and found himself issuing tepid, me-tooish statements on corporate responsibility and economic security. Dole's weakest moment came later, during an interview on "Face the Nation," when - asked about the minimum wage - he first responded with a prediction about congressional action and then wandered all over the ideological map. It was, to say no more, a confusing performance.

Republican conservatives could be forgiven for weeping.

But they have cause for cheer now. The Dole campaign, by all reports economically strapped, is showing itself to be substantively rich.

On May 23, in a speech to the Catholic Press Association, Dole demonstrated that the clarity he achieved in his resignation speech would not be lost on the campaign trail.

His pointed criticism of President Bill Clinton's veto of the partial-birth abortion bill got the headlines and deservedly so. But he did more in that speech. He spoke of the "moral drift" in America. "Look around," he said. "Americans are all too often faced with schools that don't teach, courts that don't punish, welfare policies that impoverish, a popular culture that undermines our most cherished values ... Instead of instilling hope and discipline, too often, our schools breed resentment, despair and mediocrity. Our schools are teaching recycling and AIDS prevention, but our kids can't add and too often aren't allowed to pray."

Nor is Dole merely invoking troubling moral and social problems to position himself with voters. He is proposing serious reforms - the kind of reforms that have languished on conservative wish lists for a decade and more.

Dole's decision to highlight school choice is significant. This is not an easy, poll-tested winner with voters. A California ballot referendum on the subject a few years ago was defeated following an expensive anti-choice campaign by the teachers' union. Most voters are uninformed on the issue. But, properly framed, school choice is an issue that can unite home-schoolers, mostly Christian and conservative, with inner-city black and Hispanic parents, among others, yearning for an alternative to the failing public schools. Imagine being able to use the funds you now pay in taxes to support the public schools to send your child to any school. A cornucopia of new schools would sprout almost overnight to meet the demand.

Few policy makers are aware that the problem of teenage childbearing is more than a matter of randy youngsters getting carried away in the back seat of the car. Most Democrats treat the matter as a technical problem requiring more and better contraceptives. Bob Dole is actually on the cutting edge by focusing on the fact that more than half of the fathers of babies born to teenage mothers are fully grown men, age 20 or older. The younger the mother, the greater the age gap tends to be between her and the father of her child. In other words, as the senator noted, this is a problem of "male sexual predators" and must be addressed, at least in part, by a renewed commitment to enforcement of the statutory rape laws.

Dole has further endorsed a version of the charity tax credit first proposed by Sen. Dan Coats (R-Ind.), which would permit taxpayers to earmark a portion of their tax payments to a private charity that serves the poor. Churches, synagogues and private organizations have shown themselves far more successful at alleviating poverty than has the federal government, Dole argues. So, let individuals decide whether to give their money to "the Department of Health and Human Services or to Mother Teresa, to the Department of Housing and Urban Development or to Habitat for Humanity."

When the foregoing is combined with a proposal to spur economic growth, like a 15% across-the-board tax cut, the man Republicans have been despairing of shapes up as the most daring conservative since Ronald Reagan.

Of 'gay marriage' and power politics

President Bill Clinton would like to have his Big Mac and eat it, too. On the "gay marriage" question, it won't happen.

Yes, he still supports gay rights - the abolition of legal distinctions between homosexuals and heterosexuals. No, he wouldn't veto a bill should it come before him, letting states outlaw gay marriage. Homosexuals and lesbians, recognizing in the president's declaration a logical gap as wide as the Great Plains, are outraged. They'll probably still vote for him, but with noses held and eyes shut tight.

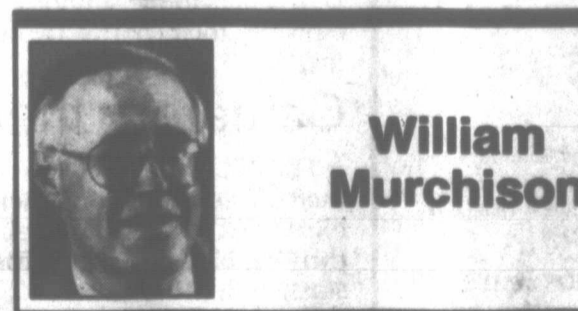

The president, a born pleaser, has displeased mightily by taking a moral stand: one he knows is agreeable to a larger number of voters than those to whom it's not agreeable.

How'd we get to this point, anyway, when the institutionalization of marriage between men and men, women and women, figures large in our political deliberations? There has never been a moment in human history quite like this one, and that covers some territory.

The proximate cause of the disturbance is the likelihood that Hawaii will legalize gay marriage, obliging the 49 other states, under the Constitution's "full faith and credit" clause, to recognize such unions when performed in Hawaii.

With respect to gay unions, congressional conservatives talk of a preemptive strike. They would declare that no state had to accept such unions. Clinton indicates he would sign such a declaration. Hence, the furor.

That all this rates as a political furor shows what we've come to in the '90s. Everything, or next to everything, is a political question. Not just taxes and trade and fleets and armies but also culture and morality. The politicians have undertaken to decide what the people may believe. The natural consequence is political warfare.

It is not supposed to be thus. The people are supposed to tell the politicians what to believe, assuming the politicians don't know instinctively. A country's moral and cultural assumptions are deemed - anyway, they used to be deemed - as beyond the reach of politicians. Those assumptions stem from tradition, formed chiefly, if not entirely, by religion.

The weakening of religious commitment in our time, the waning of belief in absolute standards informed by the Bible and Judeo-Christian witness, has opened a huge gap. Through this gap, the politicians pour. Suddenly, cultural and moral commitments become matter for political exhortation. The politicians will offer one group one thing - abortion on demand, easy divorce, government day care. Another group gets contrary offers - an end to abortion, a tightening of divorce laws, a larger scope for parents as against government supervisors.

The commitment that prevails is the one whose backers command the most votes. The rightness of a thing, or its wrongness, doesn't matter; its relative popularity is what matters. Popularity isn't supposed to be the "summum bonum" - the highest good - but democratic politics knows no other way of mediating disputes than the counting of noses.

Enter President Bill Clinton, perplexed. How to keep everyone happy in the gay-marriage debate? It can't be done. Gay marriage - opponents insist there is no such creature - is, at base, a moral question, concerning which politicians have nothing to offer.

The bill that Clinton thinks - for now, at least - he would sign is a proper response to a mess cooked up by politicians. If "gay marriage" is a concept alien to civilized society, should the United States appropriate it on the say-so of one state? Talk about a prescription for cultural disaster!

The no-gay-marriages bill is a signal to politicians to step back and let the religious and moral communities handle this one. Divided these communities may be, thanks to the international gay-rights clamor. One advantage they have over the politicians: They don't ask, on the front end, where they votes are. They ask: What is right? What is wrong?

Top White House aide calls FBI file incident 'bureaucratic snafu'

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top White House aide says an apology is owed for what President Clinton calls "a completely honest bureaucratic snafu" involving the handling of confidential FBI background files on prominent Republicans and others.

But Republicans — including some whose pasts were investigated — promise not to let the matter rest.

"I don't think that ends it," House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, said Sunday after White House chief of staff Leon Panetta acknowledged that an "inexcusable mistake" had been made. "I think we ought to have hearings," Armey said.

It was disclosed last week that in late 1993, while checking the backgrounds of people to be given permanent access to the White House, a civilian Army investigator on temporary assignment had obtained FBI files of 341 individuals.

They included such prominent Republicans as former Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Kenneth Duberstein, White House chief of staff under President Reagan.

Panetta said on NBC's "Meet the Press" that through a "bureaucratic mistake" Anthony Marceca of the Army's Criminal Investigation Division was given access to an old list from the Bush administration.

While Panetta said no political use was made of the documents and they have been returned to the FBI, "I think an apology is owed to those who were involved."

"I completely support what he said," Clinton said of Panetta's comment during a fund-raising stop in Las Vegas. "It appears to have been a completely honest bureaucratic snafu when we were trying to straighten out who should get security clearances to come to the White House."

The mistake was not revealed sooner, Panetta said, because "I honestly think nobody knew those files were there." He said both the FBI and a special counsel would look into the incident.

But for Republicans who have made a political campaign-issue out of alleged White House improprieties, Panetta's explanations weren't enough.

"Every time liberals get caught at something it's a mistake that shouldn't have happened," Armey said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley." "I've got to worry about this."

"I appreciate the apology, of course, but the case is not closed," said Tony Blankley, press secretary to House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and one of those whose FBI files were pulled.

Marceca has told The Washington Post he read the files and notified Clinton appointee Craig Livingstone, head of the White House personnel security office, of a few that contained "derogatory information."

Blankley, noting that report, said on CNN's "Inside Politics Weekend" that "obviously the investigators and prosecutors have to go in and look at what the facts are. What we find is that every day there's a new explanation, new information comes out."

In a story today, the Post quoted a lawyer for Livingstone, David Cohen, as saying Marceca remembers delivering only three files to Livingstone, "none of which were high-ranking former officials of the Bush or Reagan administrations."

Cohen said Livingstone does not recall seeing any file that raised "a real concern" and told no one outside his office what was in them before sending them to a White House vault.

In a statement, the lawyer said: "The FBI files in question were obtained by the White House as part of a routine process of recreating White House security files for holdover White House employees from the Bush administration and others who continued to need access to the White House complex after the Bush administration departed and took all existing White House files."

Sen. Bob Dole, the certain Republican presidential nominee, on Saturday compared the use of the FBI background records to the Watergate-era enemies lists compiled by the Nixon White House. "I think it smells to high heaven," said Dole, who also called for hearings by Congress.

Congressional Republicans already have carried out an extensive inquiry into the administration's use of the FBI to look for possible wrongdoing by seven employees of the White House travel office who were fired in 1993 to make way for Clinton appointees.

Central Texas family perfects collecting rainwater

AUSTIN (AP) — Unlike some of their Central Texas neighbors, Bill and Laurel Martin aren't feeling the effects of the devastating drought.

Two summers ago, the couple installed a system that provides 3,000 gallons of rainwater per month to the family of three.

Water collected in a cistern and pumped into their house proved more reliable than the neighbors' 600- and 700-foot wells.

"We've lived through 75 days when it didn't rain at the end of the summer, and we did OK," Bill Martin said.

The Martins, who live in southwest Travis County, are confidently settling in for another dry, hot Texas summer.

U.S. Marine receives two year sentence in car accident

TOKYO (AP) — A U.S. Marine from Texas stationed on Okinawa was convicted of reckless driving and sentenced today to two years in prison for a traffic accident that killed a mother and her two daughters.

Cpl. Lori A. Padilla, 20, was found guilty of speeding when her car spun out of control and onto a sidewalk last January, killing three pedestrians 18 miles north of Naha, the capital of the state of Okinawa.

Padilla was guilty of "gross negligence by driving in an extremely dangerous manner," Judge Keisuke Kamai told the court as he handed down the sentence, according to Kyodo News.

Three people — Rojita Kinjo, 36, and her daughters, Mitsuko, 10, and Mariko, 1, — were killed in the Jan. 7 accident.

Padilla, of Houston, is currently stationed at Marine Corps Air Station Futenma near Chatan on Okinawa, about 1,000 miles southwest of Tokyo.

The accident accelerated anti-base sentiment in Okinawa, following the rape of a schoolgirl in September by three U.S. servicemen.

About seventy-five percent of the land reserved for U.S. military bases in Japan is concentrated on Okinawa, which accounts for less than 1 percent of Japan's total area.

IRA threats, Sinn Fein demands cloud North Ireland peace talks

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Northern Ireland's long-delayed peace talks are beginning with one of the province's most powerful groups — the Sinn Fein party — on the outside demanding entry.

The Catholic-based Sinn Fein was barred from today's talks because its ally, the Irish Republican Army, has not resumed the cease-fire it violated with a London bombing in February.

It has pledged to answer the snub with a protest at the peace talks site, which is surrounded by fences and security guards. Sinn Fein says it should be allowed in because it — like the other nine parties present — won a place at the talks in a vote held May 30.

"Having peace negotiations without Sinn Fein is like staging 'Hamlet' without the prince," said Tim Pat Coogan, a veteran commentator on the IRA.

Today's negotiations — led by former U.S. Sen. George Mitchell — mark the first time an American has led peacemaking efforts in Northern Ireland, where the IRA has battled to unite the province with the Republic of Ireland for a quarter century.

Inside the Stormont government complex east of Belfast, prime ministers John Major of Britain and John Bruton of Ireland are to address the nine Northern Ireland parties as talks begin on how the province should be governed.

Protestant factions have insisted on maintaining Northern Ireland as a British state, while Catholic leaders want it unified with the rest of Ireland, independent since 1921.

Major and Bruton designated June 10 as the date to start negotiations, hoping that IRA supporters would see such a deadline as an effort to speed the peace process along.

The IRA had complained the process was moving too slowly — one of the reasons given for ending its 17-month truce.

"I feel cheated that Irish republicans, who have worked so hard for peace, are being locked out of negotiations," Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams said in an article published today in the Irish News, Belfast's main Catholic newspaper.

Major and Bruton's appointment of Mitchell, President Clinton's key adviser on Northern Ireland, was intended to show Sinn Fein these talks would not pursue an anti-IRA agenda.

That has not pleased pro-British Protestants.

John Taylor, deputy leader of the Ulster Unionists, the province's largest party, said putting a Catholic with an Irish-American father in charge was "the equivalent of an American Serb presiding over talks on the future of Croatia."

Mitchell is supposed to oversee a section of negotiations that determines how Northern Ireland's rival paramilitary groups — the IRA and pro-British loyalists, who are still observing their own 20-month truce — begin disarming under international supervision.

Report: American Airlines and British Airways to team up, pool resources

NEW YORK (AP) — American Airlines and British Airways plan to pool their resources for a network of routes covering Europe, Asia, and North and South America, The New York Times reported today.

The two airlines — among the most profitable in the industry — plan to share marketing, sell seats on each other's planes and join their frequent flier programs, the Times said.

The agreement was to be announced Tuesday, the newspaper said, citing sources familiar with the proposed deal.

It would produce what is known as a code-sharing arrangement in which airlines try to give the appearance of single routes between distant cities that actually might require making connections on two or three separate airlines.

Such deals are increasingly popular among airlines seeking to expand their routes.

In May, Transportation Secretary Federico Pena tentatively approved a deal between United Airlines and Lufthansa German Airlines allowing them to operate as one company. The two had already been operating under a code-sharing arrangement.

At the time, the Transportation Department said two similar applications were pending, one between American Airlines and Canadian Airlines International and the other involving Delta Air Lines, Austrian Airlines, Sabena and Swissair.

While British and American would continue to operate as separate entities and would not buy each other's shares, resources would be pooled and profits divided on all of their trans-Atlantic routes, the Times said.

The proposed deal would have to be approved by the federal government.

There is no way to guarantee celebrity endorsed clothes not made in sweatshops, retailers suggest

NEW YORK (AP) — It doesn't matter whether the purchase is a $9.96 Kathie Lee Gifford blouse at Wal-Mart or a $99 pair of Air Jordans: It comes with no guarantee that the celebrity-endorsed product wasn't made in a sweatshop.

And if eliminating unhealthy, underpaying factories is considered tough in this country, imagine the task in underdeveloped countries like Honduras, where workers sew both Gifford's line for Wal-Mart and Jaclyn Smith clothes for Kmart.

In Indonesia, labor activists complain that employees work 65-hour weeks to meet production quotas for Nike shoes and clothing, endorsed by dozens of celebrities including Michael Jordan.

"There's a lot of forced overtime, there's a lot of mistreatment and physical punishment," said Jeff Ballinger, who has documented conditions at the Nike plants. When workers protest, they are fired or questioned by the military, he said.

Nike, Kmart and the celebrities deny the charges. But many activists wonder how celebrities can earn so many millions from the products with their name on it without knowing about the abuses.

Gifford, for example, says she receives a percentage of the sales and gives 10 percent of that to charity — more than $1 million last year. That would imply more than $10 million as her share of Wal-Mart sales.

"When you're making that sort of money," said labor activist Charles Kernaghan, "you better ask some serious questions about the conditions under which this clothing is produced."

Revelations this year that New York City employees worked 60-hour weeks to make blouses for Gifford, and Hondurans worked for 31 cents an hour to make pants for her clothing line, focused national attention on sweatshop abuses.

"The problem of sweatshops is a national disgrace," U.S. Secretary of Labor Robert Reich said.

More than half of the country's 22,000 cutting and sewing shops in the garment industry pay below minimum wage, he said, and more than a third threaten employee health and safety. Many pay weeks and months late.

Tragic Tale Warns Teens Always To Drive With Care

DEAR ABBY: In June of 1976, you ran a short essay about teenage drivers. It was called "Please God, I'm Only 17." I know it has probably run several more times since then, but the message is so important, it should be repeated at least once a year.

Our son, who is now 28, was involved in a car accident. His car was totaled, but thank God he survived. If you use this letter in your column, please sign it...

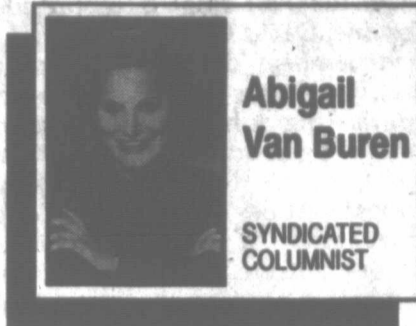

A CONCERNED PARENT,
HUNTSVILLE, ALA.

DEAR PARENT: This piece is one of the most powerful that I have ever run in my column, and I still receive many requests for it. Young people have confirmed that it made them think twice about their driving habits and encouraged them to be careful. You are right; it should run at least once a year, so here it is:

PLEASE GOD, I'M ONLY 17

The day I died was an ordinary school day. How I wish I had taken the bus. But I was too cool for the bus. I remember how I wheeled the car out of Mom. "Special favor," I pleaded. "All the kids drive."

When the 2:50 bell rang, I threw all my books in the locker. I was free until 8:40 tomorrow morning! I ran to the parking lot, excited at the thought of driving a car and being my own boss. Free!

Abigail Van Buren
SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

It doesn't matter how the accident happened. I was goofing off — going too fast. Taking crazy chances. But I was enjoying my freedom and having fun. The last thing I remember was passing an old lady who seemed to be going awfully slow. I heard the deafening crash and felt a terrible jolt. Glass and steel flew everywhere. My whole body seemed to be turning inside out. I heard myself scream.

Suddenly I awakened; it was very quiet. A police officer was standing over me. Then I saw a doctor. My body was mangled. I was saturated with blood. Pieces of jagged glass were sticking out all over. Strange that I couldn't feel anything.

Hey, don't pull that sheet over my head! I can't be dead. I'm only 17. I've got a date tonight. I'm supposed to grow up and have a wonderful life. I haven't lived yet. I can't be dead!

Later I was placed in a drawer.

My folks had to identify me. Why did they have to see me like this? Why did I have to look at Mom's eyes when she faced the most terrible ordeal of her life? Dad suddenly looked like an old man. He told the man in charge, "Yes, he is my son."

The funeral was a weird experience. I saw all my relatives and friends walk toward the casket. They passed by, one by one, and looked at me with the saddest eyes I've ever seen. Some of my buddies were crying. A few of the girls touched my hand and sobbed as they walked away.

Please — somebody — wake me up! Get me out of here! I can't bear to see my mom and dad so broken up. My grandparents are so racked with grief they can hardly walk. My brothers and sisters are like zombies. They move like robots. In a daze, everybody. No one can believe this. And I can't believe it, either.

Please don't bury me! I'm not dead! I have a lot of living to do! I want to laugh and run again. I want to sing and dance. Please don't put me in the ground. I promise if you give me one more chance, God, I'll be the most careful driver in the whole world. All I want is one more chance!

Please, God, I'm only 17!

GENERAL

NEW YORK (AP) — ESPN will launch a third network called ESPNEWS, a 24-hour sports news network, on Nov. 1, the network said today.

ESPN said the network would feature scores, highlights, analysis, interviews, live press conferences, statistics and breaking news, working closely with ESPN's SportsZone Internet site.

The announcement comes a little more than 2 1/2 years after ESPN launched its second network, ESPN2.

"Our fans want sports news around the clock, and they want it from ESPN," ESPN president and CEO Steve Bornstein said.

In February, CNN and Sports Illustrated announced a collaboration on a similar project, CNN-SI, which is expected to launch in December.

It was one of the first major moves announced after the Turner Broadcasting-Time Warner merger. CNN is part of the Turner empire, while Time Warner owned Sports Illustrated.

Both new networks will compete directly with NewSport, a joint operation of Rainbow Programming Holdings, Liberty Sports and NBC Cable Holdings and currently in about 9 million homes.

ESPN said affiliates will be offered certain benefits for carrying ESPNEWS, which will include "significant local advertising revenue opportunities."

ESPN reaches more than 68 million American homes, or about 71 percent of the total.

ESPNEWS will have a staff separate from that of ESPN and ESPN2 but will have its headquarters in Bristol, Conn., with the rest of ESPN.

BOXING

CANASTOTA, N.Y. (AP) — Wilfred Benitez has assumed his place among boxing's greatest. In his homeland of Puerto Rico, they knew it was only a matter of time.

Benitez, the youngest fighter ever to win a world title, was enshrined Sunday in the International Boxing Hall of Fame along with Aaron Pryor and 11 other boxers and ring personalities.

Benitez could barely contain himself when his name was called. With his mother sitting at his side, Benitez sprang to his feet, both arms outstretched with clenched fists.

Bulls charge to 3-0 lead in NBA Finals

SEATTLE (AP) — Let the coronation begin for Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls.

"I still think we can win some games," Seattle's Gary Payton said. "But they're a championship team."

In a few days, the Bulls may be more than mere champions. They may be known as the No. 1 team of all time.

Chicago put itself in position to complete the best season ever, taking a 3-0 NBA Finals lead over the SuperSonics with a 108-86 victory Sunday night. Jordan had 36 points, dominating the series for the first time.

The Bulls can finish the sweep — and an unprecedented 15-1 postseason run — by winning Wednesday. That would come on the heels of their record 72-win regular season.

Sunday was an affirmation of their greatness.

Despite taking the first two games, Chicago hadn't played very well. Jordan had averaged 28.5 points, good for mere mortals but not for the league's career leader in scoring average.

In Game 3, however, the Bulls took a 34-12 lead and led by double digits the rest of the way. Jordan was outstanding, especially when Seattle tried to rally. He scored 15 straight Chicago points during a fabulous four-minute stretch at the end of the first half and opened the fourth quarter with five quick points to make sure the outcome was never really in doubt.

"I saw a team that wasn't going to lose," Seattle coach George Karl said. "It was the first time I've seen them with killer eyes."

Said Jordan: "Hopefully, he didn't think we would come out here and not have killer eyes. We sensed an opportunity to grasp this series. But this team has done that all season long. It hasn't just happened here in the playoffs."

A fourth championship in six years now is more than just likely, it's practically a sure thing.

No team in history has come back from a 3-0 deficit in any playoff round.

"We've got an exceptional group of leaders," said Luc Longley, who had a playoff career-high 19 points. "It would stun me if we didn't come out very, very focused in the next game. That's why we've won all year. I don't think it's going to let us down in the fourth game of the finals."

Said Dennis Rodman: "Let's get this one and just go home."

Rodman again stood up to the rough-house tactics of Frank Brickowski, taking an elbow to the chops as Brickowski was ejected for the second time this series. Rodman, meanwhile, had 10 rebounds.

And the Bulls finally silenced the brash, young SuperSonics.

"I must admit trash-talking is part of the game. I talk trash, too," Jordan said. "But in these circumstances, a veteran team knows you can't just go out there and do a lot of lip service. You've got to go out and play the game, eventually."

"In someone else's home... it's hard to come in here and talk trash because they've got 17-, 18,000 people supporting them and we've got our wives and a couple of office peeps. That eliminates a lot of talking trash. It's up to us to let our game to our talking."

Once the Sonics' talk was quieted, all they had left was trash.

Seattle missed eight of its first 10 shots. It fell behind 34-16 after one quarter, with seven turnovers to Chicago's none. Shawn Kemp was lost when the Bulls double-teamed him; he finished with 14 points, less than half his average in the first two games. Payton was confused.

"I don't know what team was out there in the first quarter," Payton said. "We just didn't come to play."

The Bulls did, even though Ron Harper was limited to one minute by a sore knee. Toni Kukoc started in his place.

With Jordan scoring 12 points, Longley eight and Kukoc seven, Chicago's first quarter was the best offensive period of the series.

The Key Arena crowd, considered one of the NBA's loudest, never got into the game as the Sonics lost at home for just the sixth time this season. The Bulls, who set a league record with 33 road victories, are 5-1 on the road in the playoffs.

In their four appearances in the finals — including the title-winning years of 1991, 1992 and 1993 — they are 9-1 on the road.

Astros slip by Phillies

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros reserves Derrick May and Ricky Gutierrez are making it difficult for manager Terry Collins keep them out of the starting lineup.

Gutierrez got the go-ahead hit in the seventh inning Sunday, leading Houston to a 2-1 victory over Philadelphia and a three-game sweep of the Phillies.

May kept the game from being tied with two outs in the ninth when he fielded a line drive hit by Jim Eisenreich in right field and fired it home in time for catcher Rick Wilkins to tag out Mickey Morandini.

"It's really good to get a chance to play and have an opportunity to contribute with plays like that," said May, who has been platooned in the outfield and used as a pinch hitter this season.

"It was straight in front of me and I just wanted to make a good throw and not put too much on it. I don't think I've thrown anyone out like that to end the game, but it sure is a good feeling."

Morandini reached base on shortstop Gutierrez's fielding error in the ninth. He stole second — his 19th consecutive theft without being caught — then took off for third when Eisenreich drilled his hit.

As Morandini rounded the base, third base coach Larry Bowa sent him home but told him to hurry. Morandini knew quickly it was the wrong decision.

"Rounding third, I heard Bowa," Morandini said. "About a third of the way down, I knew I wasn't going to make it. If the throw was off I had a chance, but it wasn't."

Bowa said he was sending Morandini all the way.

"It was a gamble but we had to take it," Bowa said.

Gutierrez has nine hits in his last 11 at-bats, raising his average to .340.

"I come to the ballpark every day expecting to start," said Gutierrez, who has started 20 games at shortstop and two at third base. "If I don't start, I take batting practice like always and try to be ready."

The Astros (32-31) moved above .500 for the first time since May 9, when they were 18-17. They swept the Phillies in the Astrodome for the first time since June 3-5, 1994.

They have won three in a row and five of their last six as they begin a seven-game road trip to Colorado and San Francisco.

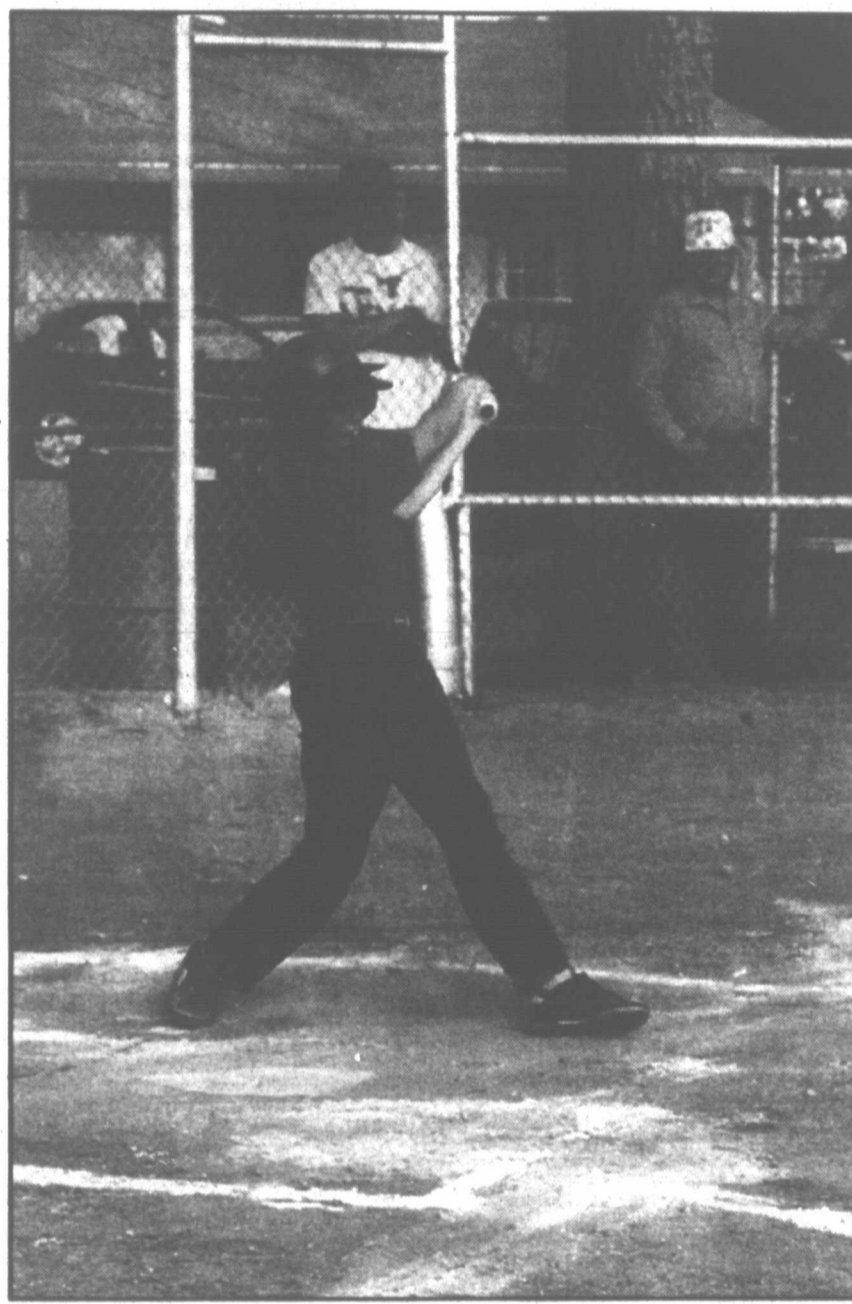

"This is what it's going to take, all 25 of us contributing," second baseman Craig Biggio said.

Starter Mike Hampton pitched six innings, allowing a run on seven hits, walking one and striking out one. Anthony Young (2-2) pitched the seventh for the victory, and Todd Jones worked the last two innings, barely surviving for his 12th save.

Pete Incaviglia singled on a grounder to deep shortstop to start the fourth inning and scored on Todd Zeile's double to the wall in right-center field.

Notes: Derek Bell of the Astros had started all 62 games this season until Sunday, and Biggio didn't start for the second time this season. ... Morandini, who didn't start Sunday, entered as a defensive replacement in the eighth, and reached on a fielding error. That ended a streak during which he reached base by hit or walk in 27 straight games, the most for a Phillie since Lenny Dykstra had 35 straight in 1990.

Groundball hit

Andretti aided by new restart rule at Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — A week ago, Michael Andretti felt bad for Al Unser Jr.

On Sunday, it was Newman-Haas Racing teammate Christian Fittipaldi who was the object of his compassion following the IIT Automotive Detroit Grand Prix.

In each case, the reason the other drivers were unhappy was that Andretti had taken advantage of a late restart to relegate them to second place in a PPG Indy Car World Series event.

"I felt bad for Al at Milwaukee because if we hadn't had that yellow (flag), there was no way I was going to catch him," Andretti said. "This time, I felt bad for Christian. He did a great job all weekend and he had me covered."

"On this track, the guy in front has control. I won because of the yellow. Otherwise, Christian would have been gone."

Both of his most recent victories have been helped by a new restart rule implemented last month by Championship Auto Racing Teams, which sanctions the Indy-car series.

On the oval at Milwaukee, the rule placed the leaders in a single-file row alongside the lapped cars. On the tight 2.1-mile, 14-turn temporary road circuit on Detroit's Belle Isle, the rule was revised to put all the lead lap cars in single file ahead of the lapped cars.

In each case, Andretti was second and was able to get one last good shot at leaders who were seemingly on their way to victory.

Andretti, one of the few drivers who had spoken out against the new rule, said, "Two races in a row where the restart helped me. I think they want me to support the thing."

This time, with the two-hour time limit allotted to the race running out, Andretti was surprised to get a shot at Fittipaldi, who had been leading since the second lap in what turned out to be a 72-lap event.

Andretti had been trailing Fittipaldi by about 3 seconds before a caution flag put the two cars nose-to-tail for the restart on lap 66. Four turns after the green flag waved, Andretti nosed his Ford-powered Lola under Fittipaldi's and shot into the lead.

"I was going to try to really stay on him for one or two laps because we were both on cold tires," Andretti said. "I figured that was the only chance I was going to get."

"I noticed he went wide and I jumped on the throttle. I was just lucky. I took advantage of a mistake."

"Mike has won the most Indy-car races of anybody out here," Fittipaldi said. "He put a lot of pressure on me and I braked a tiny bit late, got in the marbles and got wide."

"If we were side by side, then I would have kept it in there because on the next corner I would have been on the inside," he added. "But he was like three-quarters of a car in front of me and, obviously, I backed off. I think it would have looked very silly if both cars from the same team took each other out."

The 25-year-old Brazilian, still seeking his first Indy-car victory, finished about six car-lengths behind. He was followed by Gil de Ferran, Adrian Fernandez and Mark Blundell.

Nicklaus award goes to Zach Thomas

PAMPA — All-American linebacker Zach Thomas of Pampa joined basketball player Melinda White of Borger as this year's recipients of the W.W. "Windy" Nicklaus Award.

The award presentation was made last week during the Red Raider Golf Tournament at Ross Rogers Golf Course. The award is presented to Panhandle-area athletes excelling at Texas Tech. A plaque with the winners' names will hang in the offices of the Texas Tech athletic department.

Thomas was a consensus first-team All-American selection as a middle linebacker on the football team and was the first player to serve three seasons as team captain. Drafted by the NFL's Miami Dolphins this spring, he finished his collegiate career with 390 total tackles. The 6-0, 236-pound Thomas led the Red Raiders in total tackles with 131 total tackles this season.

White, a 5-10 senior post for the Lady Raiders, earned a reputation as a hard-nosed defender. A three-time selection to the dean's list, she holds a 3.48 grade-point average in education.

The award is in memory of Nicklaus, a 1924 Amarillo High graduate who became the first football captain at Texas Tech in 1925. A 1928 Tech graduate, Nicklaus remained active in supporting Red Raider athletics until his death in 1991.

Lightning strikes twice for Sweetwater's Pugh

SWEETWATER, Texas — To make a hole in one is a remarkable feat.

To make two holes in one in the same week is amazing.

To do it on the same hole with the same club is even more remarkable.

But to do it with the same ball — the only two times you hit the ball — well, that's Jerry Pugh's incredible story.

Pugh, a 46-year-old carpenter from Sweetwater, calls himself a "weekend" golfer. He made two holes in one back in the mid 1970s when he first took up golf during his spare time as a pipeline worker.

He never picked up a club for quite a few years, however, before resuming the sport about five years ago. Pugh carries a 5 handicap at Lake Sweetwater Municipal Golf Course, so he's a pretty good golfer.

But even Pugh's never had a week like this one.

It began on Saturday, May 18, about 11 a.m. when he was playing with Tommy Millett, Rusty Taylor, Ramon Moreno, Robert Barry and Si Acuna at Lake Sweetwater, and the group arrived at the par-3, 145-yard No. 10 hole.

"The pin was back left," Pugh said. "The green has a ridge in the middle. It hit top of the ridge and rolled in."

Pugh, who hit a 9-iron, was using a "Titleist 100 Tour Professional" golf ball, his favorite. After he made the hole in one, he took a marker and wrote the date 5/18 on the ball and stuck it in the side pocket of his bag, figuring he'd eventually put it on his desk or wall as a memento.

Avalanche poised to bury Panthers

MIAMI (AP) — At this point, Doug MacLean will accept any kind of positive sign, even from his college days.

"I was saying today — it happened one year while playing college — I went back and played for our senior A team and we came back from a 3-0 deficit and won the final four," the Florida Panthers coach said. "The GE Silliger Construction Combines sent us a fax wishing us good luck. I hope that's an omen."

MacLean will need all the help he can get, considering his team is one game away from elimination in the Stanley Cup finals. It could happen tonight when the Colorado Avalanche, holding 3-0 lead, visit the Miami Arena for Game 4 under a full head of steam.

"You have to give Colorado credit for the way they've played," MacLean said.

MacLean feels his team has generally played well, too, particularly in Game 3 Saturday night.

That's two holes in one on the same hole with the same club and the same ball — exactly one week apart.

"It's been a good week," Pugh said, laughing. "I almost made another one Monday at No. 5 (at Lake Sweetwater). I just missed it by six inches."

Don't challenge Pugh — or anyone in his family, for that matter — at No. 10 at Lake Sweetwater. Besides hitting three of his four career aces at No. 10, his sister, Barbara Jo Howington, owns two holes in one at No. 10.

"But her's were a lot uglier," Pugh said. "She used a 5-wood and a 3-iron."

Yeah, and they were more than a week apart and she probably didn't even use the same ball, either.

Oh, by the way, Pugh said he's marked "5/25" on the other side of the ball, and he plans to leave it in the bag this time.

Rangers sweep Blue Jays

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — If the Texas Rangers reach the playoffs for the first time in franchise history, their success against the AL East could play a key role.

The Rangers improved to 23-8 against the AL East, 16-2 at home, with Sunday's 8-6 victory over Toronto to wrap up a three-game sweep of the Blue Jays. Texas plays against the AL East in 13 of its next 16 games.

In improving to 38-23, their best mark after 61 games in team history, the Rangers received a strong performance from their bullpen. Dennis Cook, Jeff Russell and Mike Henneman combined to shut down the Blue Jays on one hit over 3 1-3 innings.

Rangers relievers had allowed 14 runs and 23 hits over 12 innings during a five-game span leading up to the Toronto series and Texas lost four of those games.

"You're going to give a few away; that's baseball," said Cook, who allowed only Charlie O'Brien's eighth-inning solo homer over his two-inning stint.

"But it was nice to get the job done again."

Russell got the final out in the eighth to preserve a one-run lead, and after Mark McLemore's RBI single in the bottom of the eighth gave the Rangers a two-run lead, Henneman got the last three outs for his 18th save.

"Our bullpen did a great job, especially Cookie," said Rangers starter Bobby Witt, who left in the sixth with a 6-5 lead. "They had opportunities, but he held them again."

Cook has stranded 28 of his last 30 inherited runners after bailing out Witt in the sixth. Witt allowed a two-run homer to Shawn Green as the Blue Jays narrowed the deficit to 6-5, then issued consecutive walks to O'Brien and Alex Gonzalez.

Cook walked Jacob Brumfield to load the bases before retiring Domingo Cedenno on a fly ball to end the threat.

Juan Gonzalez went 3-for-3 and had the big hit for the Rangers with a three-run homer to highlight a five-run third inning. McLemore went 4-for-4 and Rene Gonzales was 3-for-5 while giving regular shortstop Kevin Eister the day off.

Witt (6-4) survived 5 2-3 shaky innings, and passed last year's combined five victories for Florida and Texas. He allowed five hits, walked five and struck out five.

The Blue Jays committed a season-high four errors, one leading to an unearned run, as they wrapped up a 1-5 road trip. Toronto is 1-5 against Texas this season.

"We made some mistakes and a few errors," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said. "When you make an error, you feel like the lowest person in the world. Our guys battled back but every time we'd get close, they'd get another run."

The Rangers took a 5-1 lead in the third against Erik Hanson (6-8). McLemore and Rusty Greer delivered RBI singles and Gonzalez hit his ninth home run, a 423-foot drive into the bleachers in left-center.

"After the road trip we had, it was important to come back home and get back on track," McLemore said.

Notes: The Rangers have been in first place for the last 52 days. ... With a five-run third, the Rangers have scored five or more runs in an inning 13 times this season. Texas accomplished the feat 15 times all last season. ... Henneman recorded his third save since allowing six runs in the ninth inning of a 9-5 loss to Minnesota on June 2. ... Hanson allowed a season-high 12 hits.

Els captures Buick Classic

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Although it's been desirable of late to finish second the week before the U.S. Open, the way the field played for runner-up in the Buick Classic was a little ridiculous.

Ernie Els won the tournament by eight shots, and admitted that he was surprised no one made a serious run at him during Sunday's final round. In fact, Els added two strokes to his lead Sunday, despite shooting his worst round of the tournament, an even-par 71.

Els' 13-under-par total of 271 gave him his third PGA tour title and first since the 1995 Byron Nelson.

His victory margin was the largest on tour since Davis Love III won at Las Vegas by eight in 1993. It also tied the biggest winning margin in the Buick Classic, set by David Frost in 1992.

Democrats end convention, Morales takes off in truck

DALLAS (AP) - The ink was barely dry on Texas Democrats' new "mainstream," streamlined state platform as their U.S. Senate nominee, Victor Morales, took off for more campaigning in his trusty pickup.

"I'm excited. I think I have a very, very good shot ... I feel the attacks will be coming on harder. That just kind of proves my point. The harder they attack, the better I'm doing," Morales told congregates after Sunday's service at St. Luke's United Methodist Church. He was headed out on a 66-city, three-week, 2,500-mile tour of East, South and Central Texas.

Morales, who trucked across Texas to secure his party's nomination, can look forward to a national pulpit later this summer. State Democratic Chairman Bill White says Morales will be invited to speak at the party's national convention in August in Chicago.

A spokesman for Republican U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, whom Morales faces in November, said Morales should address his wife's delinquent student loan.

"Maybe he can tell the country how it is that ... the perfect Democratic Party nominee for the U.S. Senate is a guy who owes the taxpayers and won't pay," said Gramm spokesman Larry Neal. "That's a Democrat if I ever saw one."

Three Texas A&M Republican students calling themselves the "Dead Beat Patrol" stood near the church during services Sunday and said they plan to hound Morales about the loan while he's on his statewide tour.

One of the students, Glen Janik of Mesquite, said: "When people don't pay back their loans it's kind of like they're cheating the next generation."

Morales has said the federal government made it difficult for the couple to resolve the issue. He said they never refused to pay, but wanted to be treated with respect. He says he believes anyone who has "fought city hall" would understand.

He told the three students he had no problems answering their questions, but would like to speak to a large forum to tell all the problems that he and his wife have encountered with the loan.

He also said he would not make a promise not to raise taxes.

"Promises ... look to another politician to give you that," he said.

The Democrat says he's confident of his chances against Gramm, who he says has "abused" his Senate seat by "being close-minded, not reaching out to everyone, not bringing people into the United States government."

Neal said, "He's concerned that we haven't brought more people into the United States government. He's got us exactly right. Phil Gramm believes in less government and more freedom."

Morales also has been criticized by Neal and others who say he hasn't defined himself on the issues. But in a state convention speech, Morales cited his support for such issues as abortion rights, welfare for those in need, an assault weapons ban, the Brady gun control measure and, as a priority, education programs including Head Start.

Ironically, Texas Democrats, in their drive for a "mainstream" party platform, on Saturday rejected putting gun control in the document laying out their party positions.

Neither the new slimmed-down party platform, which gives general positions, nor detailed issue papers that accompany it mention an assault weapon ban or the Brady Bill. Both measures are supported by President Clinton.

Britain, EU partners remain at odds over beef ban

LUXEMBOURG (AP) - Britain went head-to-head today with its increasingly angry partners in the European Union over the global ban on British beef, but eased off slightly in its policy of blocking other EU measures.

There was still no sign of an end to the 10-week-old standoff in which Britain has vowed to obstruct all EU measures requiring unanimity until London gets the EU to announce when it will lift the beef ban.

The ban was instituted March 27 because of fears over mad cow disease in Britain, which scientists say may cause a fatal brain ailment in humans. Beef sales have sunk throughout the EU since the ban was put in place.

Britain's 14 EU partners are increasingly annoyed with its obstructionist tactics.

"The time has come for the British to become level-headed" before it further harms its interests, said Danish Foreign Minister Niels Helveg Petersen as EU ministers met today.

European Commission President Jacques Santer lashed out at Prime Minister John Major over the weekend, saying his non-cooperation strategy was "absurd" and created a "war atmosphere."

killings at least four people and tossing scores of passengers into the sea, Italian news reports said.

About 50 people were treated for minor injuries. Rescuers were searching for any passengers who could still be trapped inside the boat.

The high-speed boat, which skirts the water, began its morning run by taking aboard some 90 people headed for Naples from the resort island of Ischia. It then took on about 60 more passengers from Procida, a small island closer to shore.

Philippines to permit monkey exports once again

MANILA, Philippines (AP) - The Philippines lifted a ban on exporting monkeys today, saying the Ebola virus that spurred fears of an outbreak in the United States was isolated to a breeding farm still under quarantine.

U.S. scientists found no new infections among monkey handlers at any of the Philippines' five breeding farms, and the virus, deadly to monkeys, was discovered at just one site, said Health Secretary Carmencita Reodica.

Only Ferlite Scientific Research Inc., where six infections were detected by American Ebola experts, remained covered by the export moratorium, she said.

The Philippines imposed the export ban after Ferlite sent a shipment of monkeys to the South Texas Primate Center in Alice, Texas, on March 21. One animal died of the virus and at least one other contracted it.

Senator champions cause of forgotten South Vietnamese commandos

WASHINGTON (AP) - A senator who served in Vietnam is seeking bipartisan support to get the government to pay up to $11 million to hundreds of South Vietnamese commandos who were recruited by the United States in the 1960s, then declared dead when they were captured.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., said he would work with the Senate Armed Services Committee headed by Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., to "quietly and properly" pay the secret agents for time spent in a North Vietnamese prison and for their help in getting 88 fellow commandos out of Vietnam.

"I would hope Strom Thurmond would feel some concern," Kerry said in a telephone interview Sunday. "It's the wrong thing to do to deny them the honor they deserve. This is an important matter of both conscience and common sense for the country."

As a last resort, Kerry said he would offer an amendment to the Defense Department authorization bill to allocate about $11 million for the agents.

The agents were used in a covert operation to infiltrate North Vietnam starting in 1961 by the CIA and taken over in 1964 by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, The New York Times reported Sunday.

Recently declassified documents show how the United States trained the agents, sent them into North Vietnam on sabotage missions, then systematically scratched their names from a classified payroll and told their families they had been killed, the paper said.

The agents, nearly 200 of whom are still alive, are suing in federal claims court for back pay of $2,000 a year, without interest.
