Homes destroyed in brush fires

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Roaring fires moved on in front of the capricious Santa Ana winds today after inflicting losses in the tens of millions of dollars over 44,000 acres of parched brushland. More than 100 homes were damaged or destroyed and at least one person Some of the hillside homes were valued at more than $1 million.

Choking smoke and ash blown by the northeasterly winds, which ranged up to 80 mph, blanketed areas several miles from the nine fires that raged through the weekend.

While the fires spread, homeowners tried to salvage bits of their charred homes. One old man wept in the arms of his pregnant daughter as a forlorn dog sat near smoldering ruins in the posh Bradbury area

The wind and fires interrupted electricity to some 50,000 homes though power was restored to more than 90 percent of them by Sunday night.

A power failure to one pumping station cut water pressure, frustrating firefighters already having trouble pushing away the curious, officials said.

Two people were arrested on charges of looting ruined homes. Fire authorities called a "red flag" alert throughout Southern California due to high fire danger, severely restricting activity in brushy areas. There has been no significant rain here since April. LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Police searched the Little Rock area for a man and divers checked the Arkansas River for a baby girl's body after a taxi driver reported that the man had tossed the child from a bridge.

Lt. Robert Powell of the North Little Rock Police Department said the search began late Sunday when the cabbie told police that a passenger with two girls, aged 1 and 2, had thrown one from the Main Street bridge.

Divers from the Pulaski County Sheriff's Department were called in to the search early today. Meanwhile, police from both cities and the Pulaski County sheriff's river patrol continued their search in steady, cold rains.

Powell said police knew who they were looking for but he declined to release the name. He said police were looking "everywhere" including in the river - for the man and both children. Reagan, seeking to establish good relations with Congress, will meet with Democratic and Republican leaders Tuesday, after flying to Washington from California today.

Both the House and the Senate are scheduled to work this week on binding federal budget for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1. The House version calls for spending $631.7 billion, leaving a deficit of $25 billion. To reach that figure, Reagan would have to cut planned expenditures $17 billion, roughly the 2 percent by which he has said the budget could be pruned. The Senate version proposes spending of $633 billion, with a deficit of $17.9 billion, but does not mandate a spending cut.

The House version is sponsored by Rep. Robert Giaimo, D-Conn., the Budget Committee chairman. He said it would enable Reagan to make good on claims that 2 percent could be trimmed by eliminating waste and fraud.

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - Gov. Ella Grasso was in good condition after being admitted to Hartford Hospital for treatment of phlebitis in her left leg.

Mrs. Grasso. 61, underwent surgery in April for cancer and recently has been recovering from the side effects of radiation therapy. Her press secretary, Larrye deBear, said "there is no indication of any connection" between the cancer and the phlebitis.

Mrs. Grasso's doctors want her to remain hospitalized for about a week and half more, deBear said. She was admitted late Saturday and was in good condition Sunday.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Col. Harland Sanders, the goateed gentleman who made a name for himself with his Kentucky Fried Chicken recipe, has found hospital food not to his liking.

Doctors said the fussing was an indication that Sanders, 90, was getting better, according to John Cox, a spokesman for Kentucky

Sanders has been hospitalized since Nov. 7, when he was admitted for treatment of a kidney and bladder infection. Sanders lost consciousness for a time Friday, but Sunday he was awake and alert, Cox said.

"He is sitting up and talking to people, and the doctors say he is fussing about the food, which is always encouraging," Cox said. Sanders, also being treated for pneumonia, was taken off the critical list Sunday for the first time since Friday, though he still was listed in serious condition, Cox said.

Ashe suffered a heart attack in July 1979, only weeks after his 36th birthday. At the end of that year he underwent open heart surgery during which doctors successfully bypassed three obstructed arteries. Not bad for a 4-year-old. Jeff's quick action is credited with saving his father's life.

Ernest Jaschke, a rural Randall farmer, was unloading corn about two weeks ago while Jeff and Greg Jaschke, 2, watched from a wagon. Suddenly Jaschke screamed out and hollered to Jeff that his hand was caught in the corn picking machine.

MAINZ, West Germany (AP) - Speaking to a crowd of 300,000 at a U.S. Army airfield in West Germany, Pope John Paul II denounced war, appealed for better East-West relations and urged governments to respect human rights and religious freedom

At an open-air Mass Sunday on the second day of his visit to West Germany, the pontiff recalled the horrors of World War II, in which Mainz was virtually destroyed by Allied bombs.

Calling it a "period of terrible destruction, of indescribable suffering, of violation and contempt for human life," he asked that the "infamous atrocities" of the war never be 'Let us pray to God that this terrible lesson of

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) - Most of the 106 Haitians who tried to flee to Florida but got shipwrecked in the Bahamas for 40 days were back today in the same villages they never wanted to see again. But at least 20 were hospitalized in Port-au-Prince, suffering from malnutrition or beatings by the Bahamians

Buses took the rest back to the Artibonite Valley in central Haiti, where malaria was prevalent last year: to Gonave Island off the tentral coast, where an eight-year drought has caused widespread hunger, and to the arid northern coast, hardest hit of the erosion-plagued mountainous areas of Haiti.

The rusting Bahamian vessel Lady Moore picked them up from Cayo Lobos island north of Cuba on Thursday and returned them to Port-au-Prince on Sunday. They looked hollow-eyed and gaunt when they stepped off the ship. A few told reporters they were glad it was over. Others shrugged and nervously said. The ship also brought 100 Haitians who had been in a Bahamian prison as illegal aliens, and five people claiming to be Cuban-Americans who were found on Cayo Lobos. The latter five were met by representatives of the U.S. Embassy who said they would check on their claim that they lived in Miami.

The refugees were escorted several hundred feet to a reception center where fruit juice. coffee, bread, water and blankets awaited them. So did Red Cross workers, doctors and dozens of policemen.

Nine refugees, including several pregnant women, were carried on stretchers and put into ambulances. Dr. Yves Renaud, an internist at the University Hospital in Port-au-Prince, said at least 20 were taken to the hospital, most with broken ribs, bruises or other injuries inflicted by the Bahamians who removed them from Cavo Lobos. He said they also were suffering from malnutrition.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This no wspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Soviet empire: paper tiger?

One of the major issues in the U.S. is the military capability of the United States in relation to the Soviet Union. We view a steady Soviet military buildup over the last twenty years that has a clear goal of establishing military superiority over the U.S., the invasion of Afghanistan and a worldwide pattern of stirring troubled waters in hope of gain for the global communist movement. and we are easily disturbed. Indeed, it would be unwise to dismiss the Soviet threat to world peace and the prospects for freedom

In considering the threat posed by the Soviet Union and its empire, however, it is equally ill-considered to view the Soviets as the stewards of an invincible monolith which is destined to roll over the West like a juggernaut unless we spend X billions of dollars on this or that piece of military hardware. Indeed, the particulr vulnerabilities of the Soviets might well yield more quickly to other tactics than a copycat military buildup on the part of the United States.

Let us note at the outset that the Soviets run the most hideously totalitarian empire in history, and that their dreams of global conquest, while perhaps somewhat tempered by reality and the age of their leaders, remain not only an important part of communist liturgy, but an oft determining factor in the actions of the Soviet rulers. But let's not paint them as superhuman antagonists who can only be stopped by creating an armed camp or warfare state in the United States

Let's look at vulunerabilities in the Soviet Union itself. The manic drive for weapons superiority in an economy plagued by shortages and communist mismanagement has led to shortchanging consumer goods and the citizens' standard of living more severely than at any time except, perhaps just after the revolution. Russian youth no longer respond to revolutionary slogans. indeed they're widely viewed with contempt. And the Soviet Union contains not only Russians but 100 other naionalities, many of whom feel little loyalty or even outright hostility to Moscow

Troubles in the East European bloc have been highlighted by the recent workers' strike in Poland. Worker demands there for independent trade unions represent an historic break with communist orthodoxy. Moscow was restrained from military intervention in part by the fear that such intervention would expose further weaknesses in the eastern bloc. Socialist mismanagement has created economic and social problems that can't be solved solely with aid and edicts from Moscow. East Germany, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, as well as Poland, have come to rely to a larger degree on trade with the West for necessities of life.

Afghanistan, which has muddled the waters of detente with the West, has also proved a source of bitter frustration to Soviet leaders. The puppet communist regime is still devoid of legitimate authority, and tribal revolts have exploded into a countrywide insurrection that has tied up over 80,000 Soviet troops in what may be a "no-win" war.

In Africa the Soviet Union keeps some 3,800 military and 8,000 civilian advisers, and pays the bills for 37,000 Cuban troops in Angola and Ethiopia. Yet former friends are seeking to loosen ties and sometimes kicking the Soviets in the teeth. Guinea and Mozambique, once virtually Soviet satellites, are showing signs of inependence. Angola is seeking better ties with the West.

The Soviet Union sends Castro's Cuba $3 billion a year. In return it uses Cuban troops as proxies in world hot spots, but the Soviets are also keenly aware that Castro has failed to win the confidence of Third World nations

All this is not to say that the Soviet Union and the communist movement are not the most important enemies of freedom in the world, and a formidable adversary. But the empire has soft spots and vulnerabilities. The communist empire doesn't necessarily have history on its side, and the most important weapons we can muster against it may not be military, but moral and spiritual.

Kremlin's senior citizens

Official photos of the Politburo were a clue to the decay that is shaking the

The leadership was revealed as aging and ailing. Prime Minister Alexei Kosygin's seat was empty. The 76 - year - old No. 2 man in the hierarchy had been missing since a heart attack in August Now he has resigned after 16 years in office. His replacement is Nikolai

Communist party boss Leonid Breshnev is approaching his 74 birthday. Other members are plagued by illness as well as advanced age

In a totalitarian nation, however, the obviously imminent changing of the power structure promises no easing of Soviet purpose or practices. The system historically has survived its leadership.

Mystery in Moscow

It says something significant about the way the Soviet Union is governed that Premier Alexei Kosygin could leave office without anyone in the West knowing for certain why he did so or what, if anything, his departure portends for the future.

Ostensibly, the 76 - year - old Kosygin resigned voluntarily citing poor health. At least that was the essence of a brief announcement made by Soviet president and party boss Leonid Brezhnev. If Kosygin in fact exited under his own steam, he would be the first premier in Soviet history to retire willingly. Kosygin's predecessors, beginning with Lenin, either died in office, were forcibly demoted or ended up in front of a firing squad.

It is generally believed that Kosygin has been in precarious health since his reported heart attack in 1976. In recent years, he has twice disappeared from public view for prolonged periods, leading to rumors that he was again ill.

Even so, his departure may not have been entirely voluntary. Kosygin's responsibilities included general supervision of an economy whose deficiencies were publicly acknowledged by Brezhnev two days before he announced Kosygin's resignation. Brezhnev offered no praise for Kosygin's past service and Tass, the Soviet news agency, treated the resignation perfunctorily.

All things considered, it was hardly an impressive sendoff for a man who had been a party official for 40 years and premier since Nikita Khrushchev's ouster in 1964.

Moreover, Kosygin's seat on the ruling, 13 - m'ember politburo was taken by Nikolai Tikhonov, a 75 - year - old Brezhnev protege who reportedly shares his mentor's differences with Kosygin over economic policy. Tikhonov's elevation may signal an even greater stress on the traditional centralized planning favored by Brezhn'ev.

Leonid Brezhnev has long has been the dominant figure in the Kremlin leadership. Thus, Kosygin's departure probably portends little or no real change in Soviet foreign or domestic policy.

But the manner of Kosygin's resignation and the uncertainties surrounding it ought to remind the West that the Soviet Union remains a wholly closed state governed by mistrustful men whose decisions are reached in an atmosphere of obsessive secrecy.

New world information order

By Christopher Flannery

It does not surprise us when news agencies in the Soviet Union report "imperialist plots" in Afghanistan while massive Soviet armies sweep into that country. It comes as no surprise when western broadcasts reporting workers' strikes in Poland are jammed by the Soviet government so that they cannot be picked up on radios in the Soviet Union. We understand in a general sort of way that the Russian peoples suffer under an ideological despotism, and that two rudimentary instruments of such despotism are the suppression and distortion of ideas. We know, when we think about it, that over every foot of territory controlled by Soviet armies, the Communist party in Moscow controls the instruments that inform men's

We are less accustomed to reflect that most of the world's peoples suffer under one or another form of despotism whether ideological, tribal, military, racial or religious -- and that censorship and propoganda are therefore not the exception but the rule for gathering and distributing information. Still again, when we think about it for a moment, we know that it is only in those diminishing portions of the globe which, taken collectively, are called the Free World, that there is unfettered collection, dissemination, and discussion of

And yet, it would come as a great surprise to us -- indeed, it would pass belief to learn that we must forego our accustomed freedoms and conform to the repressive practices that are common to so much of the world.

This, however, is precisely the direction in which the world is heading. And this is what it will come to, unless the United States and the handful of other free countries are able to head it off.

The most recent step along this road was taken in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, at the 21st general conference of UNESCO, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. 153 nations are members of UNESCO and an overwhelming majority of them are united in a single purpose. The majority consists of so - called "non - aligned" and 'developing'' countries, and is spearheaded by the Soviet bloc; the purpose that unites them for the moment is the creation of what has come to be called the New World Information Order. Just what this New World Order will be and what it will mean for the Free World is easily gathered from a brief history of the

A summit meeting of "non - aligned" countries in Algiers in 1973, called for 'reorganization of existing communication channels, which are the legacy of the colonial past." This demand was repeated at "non - aligned" conferences in Lima in 1975 and in Tunis, Mexico City and Colombo in 1976. Finally, a Non - aligned Countries Information Council, meeting in Havana in 1978, ordered a comprehensive study of the problem which was to be submitted to UNESCO and the UN. Among the more startling demands made in this study was the demand for the establishment of a "supranational tribunal to monitor media

Americans don't have to be more than middle - age to remember when houses were left unlocked, cars were left unlocked. Now Northwestern University's study on this subject reveals that six out of ten people dress plainly, without significant jewelry, to avoid notice by criminals. Nine out of ten refuse to open locked doors until the visitor identifies himself. Seven out of ten keep car doors locked even while riding The national study of attitudes reveals that 40 percent of all Americans are now "highly fearful" of becoming victims of murder, rape, robbery, assault.

Significantly, the increased fear of crime has outstripped the increased confidence of

These shock films are a double - barreled menace. They compound the paranoia of potential victims and they whet the appetites of the sick sadists.

Most law enforcement officials relate most increased crime to the increased use of drugs. In Chicago, where a community group called the Back of the Yards Council has been waging all - out war on drug traffic, there is measurably less crime, less fear than in some of the more affluent neighborhoods of the city.

The pendulum of public opinion is swinging back in favor of stricter law enforcement. Two out of three people questioned favor giving police more power to question suspects.

The last five annual conferences of UNESCO, and several regional conferences, have followed the "non aligned" line closely, charging those few countries in the world that still have a free press with "cultural aggression" and 'moral and cultural pollution' for reporting the news as they see it. The head of UNESCO's department for the "free flow of information," for example, found it intolerable that the Western press should give the impression to its readers that the regime of the Ayatollah Khomeini might be run by "religious zealots."

And so we come to Belgrade. There, in September, the Soviet delegation placed on the UNESCO agenda a resolution condemning "imperial, transnational corporations" (read NBC, ABC, CBS, UPI, AP, Reuters, BBC, etc.), for their domination of international communications. The Soviet Union then sponsored a resolution calling for a special conference of UNESCO in 1983. The purpose of the conference would be to monitor the success of the world's media at living up to its obligation to "contribute to strengthening peace and international understanding, to the promotion of human rights and to countering racialism, apartheid and incitement to war.

It is difficult for the layman to penetrate this layer of catchwords that enfolds the harsh reality of the resolution, which passed overwhelmingly. The resolution might be rephrased to read: "UNESCO will be established as the supranational monitor of media behavior." A truer reading would be, that those powers that are the greatest threat to peace, that are the most notorious despisers of human rights, whose contribution to international understanding is to brandish words as blunt instruments, whose idea of freedom of the press is to print the party line without bias, these powers will presume to be the judge of what the Free World reads and

"Actually, I'm not here in a quest for self-fulfillment. I'm hoping to get into computer crime.'

America through England's eyes

By L.P. Arnn

Mr. Arnn has just returned from three years in England, where he was researcher for the official biography of Winston

It is instructive to see one's country through foreign eyes, especially through foreign eyes that take a close, and usually a kindly view of things American, British coverage of our current elections is a case in point. The English view our election with almost the same interest they take in their own, and with more interest than they take in, say, the German and the French elections. The pictures of American politics that have appeared every night over several months on British television look strange - indeed, they look embarrassing.

There, upon the BBC, one can see our President promising never to lie or mislead, in one moment, and giving a most ridiculous and incredible caricature of his opponent in the next. One sees the opponent, innocent of the extreme charges made against him, nevertheless reduced to a state of hesitancy and meekness out of fear that the President will be believed. One sees him neglect his whole message and platform in favor of computer - written speeches that aim to please rather than to

Then there follows incessant chatter about the 'issues', by which is meant three or four dozen questions of immediate policy. None of these issues, one soon learns, is to be settled upon any ground but that of party or factional advantage, as measured by the market researchers who. plan the campaigns.

'The People' are flattered shamelessly. Congressional candidates smear one another in a manner that is as clumsy as it is distasteful. Scandals abound, followed by blubbering contrition, and more scandal. Brass bands play. Balloons soar up to the heavens, borne irresistibly by vast quantities of hot air coming from an obvious source. The scene is appalling.

This is how the American election looks from England. British elections are by comparison calm, short, and dignified. They are completed in about three weeks. Although they, too, indulge in the exaggeration, concealment, and deception that seems to characterize our election, they appear by comparison as stately as the tower of Big Ben, and as staid as the Abbey at Westminster.

At the end of the evening news in Britain. after the last report on American politics, an understated British commentator will often come on the screen to reflect upon the election. He will wonder whether the distracted giant America is really fit to lead the free world. The answer, implied by all that has gone before, is an irresistible negative. To an American, watching his country through foreign eyes, the effect is devastating.

That is when it is necessary to come home and see whether things are indeed as bad as all that. One discovers that they are - almost. But that 'almost' is enough, we resolute optimists believe, to be the saving grace. Two facts are undeniable when one is at last home again amongst his friends and neighbors: that there is an energy and a determination in America that surpasses anything found abroad, and that the body politic in America is eager to hear a little sense, if only someone would speak it. It is true that this election is almost entirely composed of empty bombast. But it is also true that almost everyone knows it. Almost everyone is dissatisfied with it. Almost everyone feels that something is deeply wrong, and they are willing to take corrective measures, if only someone will rise above the lust for votes long enough to articulate what he believes. Then perhaps a debate would ensue, and competing ideas would replace competing appetites in the public discourse. No doubt, the rapt attention that is paid to our elections in England is not extraordinary, but typical. No doubt, the whole world is taking a keen interest in the discussions we are conducting - or ought to be conducting -- in the course of the election. In Europe, in Asia, in Africa, in South America, it is understood that America must decide how to recover herself, or she must continue to decline And with her must decline the cause it has been her purpose to represent in the world for two centuries. The candidates in this election represent, if they would proclaim it, the two dominant views of how America should proceed. That they both have declined to say what they mean is a principal source of our embarrassment

Desire not enough to turn Marshall team around

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) - It's been 10 years since Marshall University lost its football team in a fiery plane crash in the treetops just short of Tri-State Airport, but Nate Ruffin still hears the eerie silence of that foggy night.

"I'll never forget that sight. There wasn't any moaning. There was just the jet fuel burning." said Ruffin, a defensive back who was not traveling with the team because of an injury. He went to the scene when he heard of the accident.

The Thundering Herd was on its way back from East Carolina University in Greenville, N.C., on the night of Nov. 14, 1970, after a 17-14 loss. Investigators said that Frank Abbott, the pilot of the chartered Southern Airways DC-9 charter, brought the plane in too

The trees sheared off its wings and the plane came to rest in a fiery wreck 1,700 yards short of the hilltop runway. The airport had not been equipped with radar.

*Seventy-five people — 37 were members of the team and the rest were coaches. crew members and fans - were killed in the accident, the worst in collegiate sports history. There were no survivors. It followed by just two weeks the wreck of a plane that had been carrying the Wichita State University football team. Thirty-one people were killed in that crash.

Marshall had long been a football weakling and had not managed to win more than four games in any season since 1965. But after the crash. Huntington's 60.000 residents began trying to build a winning

"Somebody was always waiting to put on a banquet or something," said Joe McMullen, who became athletic director after Charlie Kautz was killed in the crash.

Even now, second-year coach Sonny Randle still talks of winning that one big game that will turn Marshall football around. But Marshall was only able to put together a 22-84 record during the 1970s, the worst among major college teams.

Marshall struggles on the football field, a step slower than its opposition, always a few yards or a few points short of being

Huntington residents still support the Herd, longing for the day the losing will end.

The school sponsored a short anniversary service prior to Saturday's home game against the University of Toledo. "If there was ever to be any emotional game at Fairfield Stadium, it should have been this afternoon," said Randle after the Herd lost 38-0. "We had no more emotion than the man in the

Some things have changed. The accident prompted the installation of radar at Tri-State Airport. Rules for air charters have been strengthened.

But the memories have not lost their edge.

"I still cry," said Ruth Andrews of Cincinnati, whose son, Mark, was an offensive guard on the Marshall team. "You learn to live with it, but you never really accept it.

Giant slide defaces Yosemite Park mountain, kills hikers

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) - Boulders the size of pickup trucks crashed down on weekend hikers on the hairpin turns of a trail near Yosemite Falls, killing three and injuring seven, park officials said.

Two of the dead were believed to be Germans on their first day in

The rock slide, onto the 4.8-mile trail about a half-mile below the top of the famed 2.700-foot waterfall, left a "big blank space" on the face of the mountain, said Mary Niles, librarian at Yosemite National Park. Debris was scattered over a 600-yard section of the tortuous trail.

About two dozen hikers were on the trail when the slide rumbled down Sunday, said Linda Abbott, a National Parks Service spokeswoman.

Bob Williams, of Cupertino, Calif., said he scrambled to safety as the rocks tumbled down. His relief soon turned to horror.

"A guy came up to me and said in German that two of his friends were dead and another was hurt," Williams said. "I took a parka off one of the ones who was dead and covered up the one who was "The Germans told me they believed a boulder six feet in diameter rolled completely over him (the dead man). I saw the other one in a kind of hole, 30 feet below. His leg was wrapped around his shoulder.

· Williams said he believed it was the Germans' first day in Farther down the trail, Williams and a friend, Stuart Kagan of San Mateo, Calif., spotted two teen-age boys. "One was underneath a rock. The other boy...was OK and was holding the hand of his friend" who was dead, Williams said.

Hiker John Weiss said he and a companion took refuge under an overhang and were protected from "rocks the size of RVs (recreational vehicles).

"Big trees were broken right in half," said another hiker. 'There's no more trail in that area.

Ms. Abbott said the slide stranded eight people at the top of the mountain for several hours. They and the injured were evacuated by helicopter, she said.

The body of one of the dead hikers was removed by nightfall Sunday, and the other two were to be removed today, park officials

Names of the victims were being withheld until relatives could be notified. Five of the injured were taken to hospitals in Modesto and Fresno, while two others were treated at Yosemite Hospital and

Mike Rover, a security officer for the park's concessionaire, said he heard a "big rumble" and rushed from his Yosemite Valley

"I looked over there and saw a boulder rolling down slowly. It seemed about the size of half a house," he said. "... There was all kinds of dust. The dust cloud extended from the lower falls to almost the top of the upper falls," a distance of about a half-mile.

Blind man accused in acid murder

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - A legally blind man accused of murdering his girlfriend by forcing sulfuric acid down her throat says he didn't realize what he had done until he saw the woman's acid-seared body at an Austin funeral home.

Co-workers at the Texas Commission for the Blind found the body of Pauline Blair, 40, sprawled in the bedroom of her mobile home after she failed to report to work Monday morning.

Her hair had been chopped off and her nude body doused with

In a telephone interview Friday night from city jail where he is being held on $100,000 bond, Townsley told The Austin American-Statesman, "I didn't mean to kill her. I didn't realize what I'd done until I saw her at the funeral home. I didn't intend for Townsley, who has partial vision, said police had allowed him to see Ms. Blair twice at the funeral home, and it was not until then that he became aware of the effects of the acid.

"I didn't really know how strong that acid was. I didn't know what it would do to her." he said.

Townsley said he poured acid on Ms. Blair and burned her with a cigarette lighter after he thought she was dead

Strings attached to interest paying checking account plans

Associated Press Writer

Consumers across the country will be able to earn interest on the money in their checking accounts starting next vear. But the strings attached to the accounts may leave depositors with a loss instead of

The conditions governing the new interest-bearing checking accounts will vary from city to city and institution to institution. As a general rule, however, you will have to keep a substantial amount in your checking account - $1,000 or more in some places - if you want to avoid hefty service charges. In many cases, the account will cost more in fees than it will earn in interest. And the less money you leave on deposit, the more you will pay.

The NOW accounts - the letters stand for "Negotiated Order of Withdrawal" - were introduced in New England in 1972. They spread throughout the region and into New York and New Jersey, but were prohibited elsewhere.

The debut of NOW accounts on a national basis is coming as a reult of legislation passed by Congress to eliminate many of the regulations governing the banking industry. Banks. savings and loan associations and other financial institutions in all 50 states will be allowed but not required - to offer interest-bearing checking accounts beginning Jan. 2, 1981. The maximum interest rate on the NOW accounts, set by a federal panel which is overseeing deregulation in the banking field, will be 51/4 percent a year. That's the same amount that commercial banks are allowed to pay on passbook savings accounts and is quarter of a percentage point less than savings and loan institutions

Figuring out whether a NOW account is a good deal will require some complicated calculations. Among the things you will have to look at are the average amount of money you now keep in your checking account, the number of checks you write every month and the fees you already pay for checking.

Suppose, for example, you keep about $250 a month in your checking account. At present. $1.15 a month on your $250. If, in you earn no interest on that money. You also get free checking, however - no per-check charge. If you open a NOW account that pays 51/4 daily — you will earn less than people do exchange for earning interest, you have to pay fees of more than $1.15 a month, you will lose monthly service fee and no money with a NOW account.

Suppose, however, you already pay a service charge percent a year, compounded for your checking account. Most

Archer County water witcher claims fetes are 'gifts of God'

SCOTLAND. Texas (AP) - Henry Vieth says he can find water with a willow switch and oil with a home-made wire contraption called a

His "witching" sense has been better with water.

The crusty 85-year-old says he has been "witching" for water for three or four decades now, guided by his self-described, God-given gift. "It's in your blood. It's a God-given thing." the old man said.

"One of boy told me, 'You've just of a gift from God and I guess that's it. If I didn't, well, I just couldn't do it, that's all.

To prove his point, he picked up a willow stick and walked out across the yard behind his broken-down house. Sure enough, the switch started pulling toward the earth.

Doubters need only hold Vieth's wrist with one hand and the switch with the other. The switch pulls powerfully downward, but Vieth's hands and wrists never move

Back at the house with his wife and 42-year-old son. Vieth warmed a chill near a wood-burning stove and talked of his gift. It's not without it's hitches, he explained

He can find water with a willow switch, a branch of mesquite or even a piece of wire. Problem is, he explained, he can't find a switch that discriminates salt water from fresh water.

That's why the water at his own home is pumped in. he said, because the only water he can find on his 251-acre Archer County homestead is brinish.

"Over in Cooke County, it's a different story," he told visitors. "It's all good drinkin' water

One his his most successful finds, he said, was

January His "doodlebug" is nothing more than a can of oil sand clamped onto a V-shaped piece of copper wire. He uses it to locate the oil, he said, and another contraption to measure drilling depth. Vieth said he hold the second device - a 4-foot long, rubber-coated copper wire with a little bottle of oil on the end — three inches above the spot and it bobs up and down, once for every 100

He chuckles when he remembers his first contact with "witching.

It was better than three decades ago, he said, when he saw an old man with a "doodlebug" stand on top of a fancy new wooden oil derrick in Archer County and proclaim the well a dry hole.

The owner, having just invested in the new derrick, wasn't too pleased and threatened to knock the old man in the head, Vieck said.

But, as the old man predicted, the well came

High-flying teens come to earth at police query

DALLAS (AP) - Dallas police say they don't know what will happen to three teen-agers who stole an airplane and flew perilously close to city rooftops for almost an hour, narrowly missing a Southwest Airlines plane that was trying to land.

The boys told police none of them even knew how to

"I think they realize how serious it was, that they could have been killed, or killed somebody," said Youth Division investigator Billie Mills. She has been interviewing the boys — one age 15, the others 16 aboout the dangerous Friday night flight.

Miss Mills said it was unlikely that the three teen-agers would be certified as adults to stand trial for the incident, since there were no injuries.

She said the legal options were to press charges of juvenile delinquency - which could result in a home - put the boys in a first-offender youth service program, or drop charges entirely.

maximum of three years' detention in a state juvenile

Friday night, the boys entered the grounds of Cooper Airmotive, a private air charter firm at the city airport, Dallas Love Field, and clambered onto an unlocked Piper Seneca.

The Seneca does not need an ignition key. The youngest of the group apparently knew his way around airports and convinced a security guard and an air traffic controller he was authorfzed to fly the "How the kids got in I have no idea," said an employee at Cooper Airmotive who asked not to be identified. "We lock the gates at six o'clock, except for the main gate and there's a guard there. They have to go through the gate ... unless they jumped the fence."

The 15-year-old later told police he did not know how to fly but had watched his father operate corporate airplanes before. He fired up the $25,000 airplane's twin engines and taxied onto a runway, police said.

The air controller's first hint something was amiss, came when the plane was already off the ground and turned the wrong way after asking to go south, said control supervisor Bill York.

Tower operators said they lost radio and radar contact with the plane almost immediately, but within a few minutes a Southwest Airlines pilot said the craft suddenly appeared in his glide path as he was* attempting a landing. He said it had been flying 'erratically" toward a head-on collision, but dipped just under his path as it approached him.

The teen-agers later said they never saw the Boeing

KERMIT, Texas (AP) - Police will say little about a weekend double-slaying here except that they fear for the safety of a young woman who hid in a back bedroom while a knife-wielding attacker stabbed three other women in the house.

One of the victims - a 15-year-old girl - staggered back to the bedroom door after she was stabbed and warned the cowering woman to "keep quiet" moments before she died, police said.

Montana's coal mining tax opposition grows

At least six Midwest and Southwest states have announced plans to join the effort, now before the U.S. Supreme Court, to strike down Montana's 30-percent tax on coal mining.

Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller said Saturday that he and three other state attorneys general are asking the U.S. Supreme Court hear the case. The tax was upheld by the Montana Supreme Court.

Miller's arguments to the nation's highest court are in the form of a "friend of the court" brief filed in conjunction with the attorneys general of Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin.

In Montana, one of the chief defenders of the tax.

Assistant Atorney General Mike McGrath, said similar action is planned by officials from Texas and Kansas. Texas participated as a friend of the court when the Montana Supreme Court considered the case in April. The suit against the tax was filed by a number of out-of-state utilities and coal companies.

'The Montana 'severance tax' taxes coal mined in the state at a rate of 30 percent of its value," said Miller. "This cost is passed along to energy consumers in Iowa and other states in the form of higher fuel

In their brief, Miller and other opponents of the tax claim it is unconstitutional because it "impedes or frustrates federal policy or objective.

"In recent years, the federal government ... has fashioned an energy policy which favors the use and production of coal, particularly the low-sulfur coal found in the western states, as a substitute for oil and natural gas," it said.

"By increasing the severance tax on its coal to an " unprecedented level, the state of Montana has increased the cost of coal to its sister states to such a degree that it undermines important federal policies, which favor a relative increase in the consumption of

Plans set for rail purchase

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) - The state transportation commissioner says negotiations are to begin this week for the purchase of nearly 60 miles of abandoned Missouri-Kansas-Texas track in southwestern Oklahoma.

Smithsonian features Lubbock artist

LUBBOCK - A Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibit which includes a work by a Lubbock artist opened Sunday at The Museum of Texas Tech University

"Plane of Darkness," by James D. Howze of the Texas Tech art faculty, is one of the 51 pieces selected for the "American Drawings II" exhibit from over 1,000 drawings submitted to the national open competition.

Representing the full range of styles used by artists in the United States today, the exhibit will be at The Museum through Dec. 14. The competition and exhibit were organized by the Portsmouth, Va., Community Arts Council.

Jurors for the competition said one thing all the drawings have in common is that they are highly finished works of art which is a modern phenomenon. Traditionally, drawings have been part of the transition from a concept to a finished painting or

Jurors were Ann Percy, associate curator for drawings, Philadelphia Museum of Art; Josephine Winters, associate professor of art, University of Maryland and William Kloss, art historian and

The three said they were looking for more than technical skill in the works and that they guarded against a single standard of "taste."

While an artist must be articulate, he or she must also offer an idea, an image or an interpretation that is the special product of the individual mind, personalty or experience," jurors said.

Howze said his charcoal drawing involves a fantasy airplane, an antique automobile and several figures set in an illusory space and defined by an ambiguous arrangement of planes.

Jurors said the variety of styles and subjects that emerged from the selection makes this exhibit "the combination of authenticity of idea and authority of execution that we wanted.

A reception honoring Howze is planned by The Museum staff and the West Texas Museum Association from 7:30-9 p.m. Nov. 20 at The Museum. The public is invited to meet the artist. The Portsmouth, Va., Community Arts Council has announced selection of another of Howze's drawings to tour with a future 'American Drawings IH' exhibit.

"American Drawings II," opened its two-year national tour April 7 at Commons Gallery, University Park, Pa. The exhibit travels under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service.

The drawings range from pristine representationalism to experimental abstractions which push the traditional concept of drawing to its

Museum Nov. 15 through Feb. 1. "Dreamstage" was first show in 1977 at Carpenter Center for the Visual Arts at Harvard University. On its tour of the country, the show has appeared at San Francisco's. Exploratorium, St. Louis's Old

Post Office, Seattle's Pacific

Science Center and Boston's

Museum of Science. The result of a unique collaboration between scientists and artists, "Dreamstage" presents the biological discoveries of current sleep research in a new aesthetic language, expressing the inherent beauty of these findings and the creative qualities of sleep.

The exhibit is divided into two areas: a Dark Space and a Light Space. In the Dark Space, a sleep laboratory (with a person naturally sleeping and dreaming, and a polygraph to monitor his sleep) has been placed in the center of a soft, communal environment. The sleeper can be seen through a curtained window as well as on a large video screen. The electrical activity generated by the sleeper's brain waves, heart beat, eye movements and muscle tone is synthesized to create original electronic music and transmitted into laser walls in a rainbow of colors. This symphony of music and light, a live "On-line" creation by the sleeper, reaches its dramatic peak during his dream cycle

Elsewhere in the Dark Space one can see a periodically changing mural of neuronal landscapes (projections of brain cell structure). And on the ceiling are displayed lap-dissolve projections of people sleeping, while taped dream reports are softly broadcast.

The Light Space contains more conventional instructional material informing about the findings of current sleep research and its important implications for the theory of dreams. Another section consists of time-lapse photographic sleep studies and graphics produced by neuroscientists as part of their

Key contributors to "Dreamstage" are Paul Earls, M.I.T. multi-media artist and composer; Dr. Allan Hobson, Harvard neurophysiologist and psychiatrist; Ragnhild Karlstrom, graphic artist and Theodore Spagna, filmmaker and photographer. The exhibition is supported by an educational grant from Roche Laboratories, a division of projections that oscillate on the Hoffmann-La Roche Inc

Next to water, protein is the most plentiful substance in the body. Protein is one of the most important elements for the maintenance of good health and vitality. It is the major source of building materials for muscles, blood, skin, nails, hair and internal organs including the heart and the brain. Protein is needed for the formation of hormones, which control a variety of body functions such as growth, sexual development and rate of metabolism. Protein also helps prevent blood and tissues from becoming either too acid or too alkaline and helps regulate the body's water balance.

Enzymes, substances necessary for basic life functions, and antibodies which help fight foreign substances in the body are also formed from protein. However, ingestion of too much protein with a total lack of carbohydrates and fats - a regime prescribed by many high protein diets can throw the body into a state of ketosis and can cause fluid imbalance in the body. You can learn .ow to lose weight by eating an adequate supply of protein in combination with a healthy balance of carbohydrates and fat. Call Diet Center.

AP Sports Writer IRVING, Texas (AP) - Not only does Drew Pearson now own the all-time Dallas Cowboys' receiving record, but he's not half bad at prophecy either.

all-time list Sunday in a 31-21 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. He snared one of three touchdown passes off the arm of Danny White, who bounced back with an excellent outing after serving five interceptions in a 38-35 upset loss to the New York Giants a week ago.

Pearson surpassed Bob Hayes on Dallas'

"I felt all week that he would come out of this and have one of his best games ever," said Pearson, as the Cowboys ran their record to 8-3, two games behind Philadelphia in the National Conference Eastern Division

White hurled touchdown passes of 18 yards to Preston Pearson, 58 yards to Tony Hill and a final 14-yarder to Drew Pearson. Drew's touchdown catch tied Hayes'

another one to break it

After the interview session following the game. Pearson went to the telephone and called his father, who is critically ill with cancer in New Jersey.

Pearson kept two footballs - the one he tied the record with and the record-breaker

"I rank it right along with making the National Football League's All-Decade team and being named All-Pro for three veras." said Pearson. After the record catch, Pearson said,

"My brother (Andre) ran out of the stands. He was one of the first to greet me. Dallas' 8-3 record puts the Cowboys in excellent wild-card position should they fail to catch the Eagles.

The luckless Cardinals dipped to 3-8. St. Louis jumped to a 14-0 lead behind Ottis Anderson's 51-vard touchdown and Jim Hart's 69-yard scoring pass to Mel Gray, who had to leave the game with a White answered that salvo with the first of his scoring passes, but Hart wasn't through. He nailed Pat Tilley with a 60-yard pass for a touchdown.

A 58-yard White to Tony Hill connection cut the score to 21-17 St. Louis at halftime. It was all Dallas in the second half as White flicked the 14-yarder to Drew Pearson for the score that gave the Cowboys a 24-21 lead.

Tony Dorsett, who rushed for 122 yards, dashed 11 yards for a fourth-period score. It was Dorsett's 17th 100-yard day as a Cowboy, tying Calvin Hill's club record. St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan, who sprang a four-man line defense on the Cowboys. said, "You've got to give Dallas credit. They just played better than we did. 'We started out with the 4-3 defense because we were hurting at linebackers, but they adjusted quickly. Hart said, "We do better against the Cowboys than a lot of teams we play, but we still can't beat them. They aren't that invincible, but they always seem to win.'

Dave Cowens: A breed apart

AP Special Correspondent

A season or so ago, Jane Gross of the New York Times was in Boston on an assignment to interview the All-Star center and later player-coach of the Celtics basketball team, Dave Cowens.

After watching practice and questioning her subject, she was offered by Cowens a lift back to her hotel.

"That is," Cowens said apologetically, "if you don't mind riding in an old pickup

"No, that's fine," said the grateful newswoman. "On the way," Gross recalled, "Dave apologized again because he said he had to make a brief stop. He dropped off some things at the Salvation Army. I got the

Quickly now, name another person who would walk away from half a million dollars and job security worth an added million or more because he felt he couldn't carry his part of the load.

In this age of often spoiled and mercenary sports super stars, this raw-boned, rusty-haired product of Florida

State stands apart because of his basic honesty and sense of values.

On Nov.14, 1978, Cowens was hand-picked by owner John Y. Brown and General Manager Red Auerbach to succeed Tom (Satch) Sanders as coach of the traditionally successful National Basketball Association team.

He signed a multi-year contract, reported at the time to be $300,000 a year but later confirmed to be closer to $500,000. He was to serve as both coach and player, a dual role that the great Bill Russell had performed before him.

At the end of the 1978-79 season, after coaching for less than one year. Cowens decided he had enough of coaching and would return to concentrating on playing. Then on Oct. I this fall, the same day Don Zimmer was fired as manager of baseball's Red Sox, Cowens announced his retirement as a player - a development that hit Boston like a thunderclap.

"I felt I wasn't contributing that much to the team," he said. "I enjoyed the years I played. I got a kick out of hard-nosing it against centers bigger than I was. I got a charge out of rebounding, clearing people out of the lane and playing defense.

"Then suddenly the game wasn't enjoyable any more. I didn't want to be at practice. I lost my enthusiasm. I had sprained my ankles 30 times, suffered other injuries - none too serious - and basketball physically was no longer fun.

'So I had to walk away.' It was an unusual act. No one else had detected an erosion of Cowens' skills - not John Y. Brown, not Auerbach, not the public. He was popular both with players and the fans.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Guards Jim Spanarkel and Geoff Huston provided Dallas with a potent one-two punch from the backcourt, but first-year expansion teams don't figure to beat the champs. And the Mavericks didn't.

The final score was not a true indication of the game, as Dallas trailed by as many as 24 points and wasn't closer than the eight-point margin of defeat in the final three quarters.
