Tower considered for defense cabinet post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, emerged today as one of those being considered for secretary of defense in the President-elect Ronald Reagan's Cabinet, but he denied a published report he had been offered the job.

"Oh, it's been discussed with members of the transition team, but I don't think any decisions have been made," Tower said. "As I understand it, others are being discussed. I have not talked to Ronald Reagan about it."

The head of Reagan's transition team refused to comment on the Tower report but said a list of finalists for the various Cabinet posts was completed in California on Monday evening and will be flown to Washington for Reagan's consideration.

Edwin Meese, one of Reagan's closest aides who already has been named as one of two men slated for key slots in the new White House staff, was asked on NBC-TV's "Today" show this morning whether he brought a list of potential Cabinet officers with him when he flew to the capital with Reagan on Monday.

"Well, actually that list was completed yesterday, last evening, in California, and it is being flown to Washington this week," Meese said. "So we'll be looking at it later in the week."

The list, said to include three to five names for each Cabinet post, was drawn up by a group of long-time Reagan friends and advisers, including at least two former Cabinet secretaries and several wealthy Western businessmen expected to serve Reagan in an unofficial "kitchen" Cabinet.

James Brady, spokesman for the transition team, told reporters at his daily briefing that Reagan will talk with the top candidates, either in person or by telephone, before announcing his choices. He added the president-elect "has said he doesn't want this to become a spectacle" and reporters should not expect to witness a parade of office-seekers trooping in to see Reagan.

Reagan himself told his first news conference after his election he expects to announce his choices the last week of November or the first week in December.

The report that Tower had been picked for the Pentagon post came from syndicated columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak, who also said it was highly probable that Texas Gov. Bill Clements would name John B. Connally to replace Tower in the Senate.

In Philadelphia, where he was attending a conference of Republican governors, Clements said: "That's the nuttiest thing I've ever heard."

Clements nonetheless is close to Reagan, managed his successful campaign in Texas and visited the president-elect in California last weekend. Connally, a former Democratic governor of Texas who served in former President Richard M. Nixon's Cabinet, switched parties and ran for president earlier this year as a Republican. He dropped out after losing early primaries.

The 55-year-old Tower told the Dallas Times Herald on Monday night he had not discussed the job with Reagan and had not been offered the top spot at the Pentagon.

Evans and Novak said Reagan had formally made the offer to Tower in a telephone conversation.

When asked if he would accept the post if offered, Tower told the Dallas Times Herald: "I think we'll cross that bridge when we get to it."

However, the newspaper quoted sources close to the senator as saying Tower has expressed a "strong interest" in the defense job, but has not received any indication from the Reagan team that he has been picked.

The Times Herald also mentioned former Ambassador Anne Armstrong, a top official in the Reagan campaign and transition effort, and Rep. Bill Archer of Houston as possible replacements for Tower in the Senate.

MOTOCROSS IN THE SNOW. Weather conditions didn't hamper the enthusiasm Richie Beckham has for the two-wheel sport. With no special equipment and a lot of clothes, Beckham, 12, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rick Beckham, attacked the snow covered hill as just another motocross obstacle.

Snow benefited area wheat fields

The 44 inch of moisture Pampa received with the weekend snow may have played havoc with roads, but wheat fields have benefited. As local motorists were digging vehicles out of bar ditches and driveways, traffic on I-40 was moving slowly and cautiously.

Icy road conditions in Pampa this morning made drivers cautious and only one accident was reported. A two-car collision occurred at 9:10 a.m. this morning at the intersection of Kentucky and Hobart. No injuries were reported.

"People in Pampa seem to get very careful in the snow and ice and there are very few accidents," Glen Courtney, insurance agent, said.

"In fact, we have not received one damage claim due to the storm," Courtney said.

The Panhandle forecast, according to the National Weather Service, says conditions will stabilize through the week and warm to the mid 50s on Wednesday, Thursday through Saturday conditions will be partly cloudy with temperatures staying in the mid 50s and slightly warmer. No moisture has been forecast.

"This latest moisture may not even be enough, and we needed it last week," County Extension Agent Joe VanZandt said.

Much of the snow moisture was blown off the fields in the high winds, making the moisture content spotty and not reliable for crop potential.

Some of the local farmers have been waiting for moisture to begin the late wheat sowing.

"Although the moisture was not quite enough, the farmers will have to go ahead and plant," VanZandt said.

"The farm animals in the area were not hurt by the sudden cold front, and most farmers are feeding cattle at this time of the year," VanZandt said.

Cold fronts such as the one that blew into the area Saturday can keep cattle from feeding, thereby losing precious weight.

"There was no problems this time," an official of the Heaton Cattle Company said.

"The problems with cattle happen when power lines ice over and break. Then we cannot feed," the official said.

Snow moves north taking 13 lives

By C. W. MIRANKER
Associated Press Writer

A vast storm that swooped out of the Western Plains assaulted cities of the urban Northeast with snows almost a foot deep today, leaving at least 13 people dead from Texas to New York.

Thousands of homes were darkened as the snow and ice ripped down power lines. Highways from Ohio to Massachusetts were littered with stalled trucks and cars. Schools closed in numerous communities.

The storm that had dropped snow up to 17 inches deep in parts of the West intensified as it reached New England in the early-morning hours. With snow still falling, more than 10 inches had accumulated at such places as Albany, N.Y., and Williamsport, Pa. Six inches had fallen in six hours at Concord, N.H., with 5 inches during the same period at Hartford, Conn.

Two traffic deaths in Texas on a slick road and one in Oklahoma were blamed on the storm, which in one day left eight times the normal November snowfall in Oklahoma. Four people died in separate snow-related road accidents in Ohio, where as much as 7 1/2 inches fell.

Two traffic deaths were reported in Pennsylvania and one in New Jersey. In addition, a 9-year-old boy in Armstrong County, Pa., was found dead in his backyard swimming pool after he went outside to shovel snow.

In New York, the storm was blamed for at least two deaths.

A twin-engine airplane piloted by a New York man was reported missing this morning over rugged Pennsylvania terrain covered with nine to 12 inches of snow.

The first snowfall of the season prompted University of Rhode Island students to attack the police station in South Kingston, R.I., with snowballs.

"They broke 11 windows and vandalized a police car, but there were no injuries," said police Capt. James E. McDonald.

Heavy, wet snow and driving winds caught Pittsburgh during the evening rush hour Monday. Today's morning rush hour in the New York-New Jersey-Connecticut metropolitan area showed signs of being a slow, hazardous one as snow and an icy crust built up on highways overnight.

Sanding machines began to roll in New York City late Monday, and driving conditions in the surrounding counties were hazardous.

In upstate New York, the National Weather Service reported 6 inches of snow in Elmira and 4 in Syracuse.

More than 5 inches of snow blanketed northwestern New Jersey, and driving was hazardous as 30 mph winds hammered the snow at motorists.

Gilley claims Mahan 'bull' a copy

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The country-western singer whose Pasadena, Texas bar set the scene for the movie "Urban Cowboy," says a mechanical bucking machine sold in this Phoenix suburb is costing him big bucks of another sort.

A Pasadena, Texas, company, partly owned by singer Mickey Gilley, has filed a lawsuit accusing F.W. and Associates, of Tempe, and rodeo champion Larry Mahan of copying its patented mechanical bull, which actor John Travolta rode in the movie.

That's bull, says defendant Fred Wagenhals, the Tempe company's president.

The bull he and partner Ed Fochtman recently started manufacturing is an amusement ride with safety features, while the original bull featured in the movie was designed to train rodeo novices, Wagenhals said.

The original device looks like a saddle, while the Tempe creation looks like the torso of a bull. Neither device has any legs or head, but both give powerful bucks.

The suit was filed Friday in U.S. District Court by Gilley's Enterprises, and Joe D. Turner, a Corrales, N.M., resident who said he invented the mechanical bull in 1974 and received the only federal patent for the "rodeo-training device" in December 1976.

Gilley's Enterprises owns Gilley's Club, a Pasadena nightclub that was the location for the shooting of Urban Cowboy, the pop-culture love story that featured a bucking contest.

The only company authorized to sell the patented bull is Gilley's Enterprises, said the suit.

The plaintiffs ask for a court order stopping any further manufacture of the Tempe bull and for monetary damages. Wagenhals said he does not believe there is an infringement on any patent.

"We took a long look at that patent," he said. "We're not going to do anything to jeopardize our company. We had our attorneys look at it and we felt we could overlook it (the patent)."

F.W. and Associates manufactures novelties including motorized, air-conditioned stagecoaches with stained-glass windows, television sets, phones and bars. One of the $35,000 coaches recently was purchased by actor Burt Reynolds.

The 10-year-old company was sued in Maricopa County Superior Court in January 1979 by sports-car magnate Malcolm Bricklin, creator of the gull-winged Bricklin SV1.

Bricklin claimed that the company had violated an exclusive promotions contract with him by using his nationwide contacts to expand its business. Wagenhals said Monday that the claim has not been resolved.

Reagan, GOP leaders to pare budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan, bidding to improve relations between the White House and Capitol Hill, is meeting with congressional leaders as he begins work on paring the federal budget.

Today's schedule included a round of stops on Capitol Hill — courtesy calls on Democrats and "some fairly heavy work sessions" with Republican leaders, said Edwin Meese, Reagan's transition chief of staff who will be a Cabinet-ranking counselor to the president in the new administration.

Reagan has said he hopes to have a closer relationship with Congress than Carter had. Meese said the day after the election the president-elect will try to coordinate with congressional leaders a "carefully planned calendar of legislative activity."

Before leaving Los Angeles on Monday, Reagan cautioned against expecting overnight changes when he takes office. Noting that spending cuts and reorganizations will require legislation, he said, "It's going to take time getting that implemented."

Reagan brought with him to Washington two large binders, which he said contained plans to implement his campaign promises of reducing income taxes 30 percent over three years and cutting government spending 2 percent a year.

After his arrival Monday night at a government-owned guest residence half a block from the White House, Reagan spoke by telephone with the nation's Republican governors, who are meeting in Philadelphia.

Telling them that he wanted to "re-institute this nation as a federation of sovereign states," he said:

"I look forward to consulting with you and with us mutually helping each other to bring this about, to see that finally responsibilities are properly apportioned, those that belong at the national level and those that belong at the state level."

During a rambling briefing on Monday's flight east, Meese said changing the way Social Security benefits are adjusted to keep pace with inflation is "the least likely" option in Reagan's efforts to cut the budget.

Meese also said the staff overseeing the Reagan transition will study "the original legitimate function" of federal regulatory agencies, review the modifications that have been made "and then see to what extent the agencies are really carrying out a function that is necessary to protect the public."

"I think we're going to monitor those things to see to what extent their enforcement programs are unrealistic or unnecessary in terms of the original legislation," Meese said.

He also said Reagan is on schedule in his search for a Cabinet and will review specific names within the next 10 days.

A group of top Reagan advisers who will recommend three to five finalists for each post began whittling the list of names in Los Angeles on Monday, and Cabinet nominees are expected to be announced by early December.

Meese said that Reagan had received "a private communication" from former President Richard M. Nixon, and that several Reagan staff members had received congratulatory and advisory telephone calls from Nixon.

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, arrived in the nation's capital Monday evening aboard a twin-engine Air Force jetliner that landed in a chilly, driving rain.

The trip to Washington, Reagan's first since his election, provided one of his first encounters with the trappings of the presidency. The gleaming white, blue and silver military jet, staffed by Air Force pilots and stewards, carried him from Los Angeles to Andrews Air Force Base, where the president's Air Force One is based.

His home in Washington this week, overlooking Lafayette Park and affording a view of the White House at an angle, is a renovated townhouse with two bedrooms.

With four inches falling around the Panhandle over the weekend, snowman builders were kept busy while it lasted. Football player shot in quarrel at school

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Leonard Hunter lay critically wounded in a Fort Worth hospital today, his hopes for a college football career derailed by a bullet.

The 17-year-old starting tailback and co-captain of a Fort Worth high school was felled in the parking lot of his school during the noon hour Monday after a scuffle with another student.

Police said Hunter was shot once in the upper left chest by a 16-year-old boy with whom he had quarreled several times during the day.

The shooting occurred about 12:40 p.m. in a parking lot south of Eastern Hills High School in far east Fort Worth. A group of students witnessed the shooting, police said.

After surgery, Hunter was listed in fair condition Monday evening at John Peter Smith Hospital, but officials later changed his condition to critical.

Police Lt. S.D. Pruitt said that after the shooting, a 16-year-old student was grabbed and held by other students until police arrived. During his entanglement with other students, the boy suffered several bruises and cuts, police said.

He was taken to John Peter Smith Hospital, where he was treated and released to the custody of his mother, police said.

Miami crash claims third victim

Betty Carr Davis, 46, of Canadian died Monday in Parkland Hospital Burn Center in Dallas as she received in a devastating wreck east of Miami on October 8 — the third victim of the fiery two-vehicle collision.

Mrs. Davis had remained in critical condition with burns over 30 percent of her body, two broken arms and broken ribs in the intensive care unit of the Dallas burn center for almost six weeks before succumbing to the injuries.

Killed in the accident were Lola Studer, 80, and Ruth Shaller, 71, both of Canadian.

A second severely burned victim, Michael Wayne Porter, 20, of 1041 Kingman, Canadian, was released from the burn center Nov. 13. Porter was admitted at the time of the mishap, suffering from burns over 20 percent of his body, broken bones and lacerations.

Cindy Lou Brown, 22, of Canadian was transported to High Plains Baptist Hospital, but has since been released.

According to Texas Highway Patrol officers, the accident occurred at about 8:45 p.m. on Texas 60, 4.4 miles east of Miami. A van, driven by Porter, reportedly failed to negotiate a curve, ran off the road on the right side, officials said. The driver apparently overcorrected to the left and lost control of the vehicle in a broadside skid, crossing the center stripe into the path of the automobile driven by Mrs. Davis.

Witnesses said the van exploded at the impact of the two vehicles, and caused the engine of the Davis auto to burst into flames.

Graveside services for Mrs. Davis will be conducted at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday in Canadian Cemetery with the Rev. Stan Quisenberry, pastor of the Canadian Church of Christ, officiating. Burial will be under the direction of Stickley-Hill Funeral Directors.

Survivors include her husband, Ernie; two sons, John D. and Shawn Davis; two daughters, Mrs. Cindy Brown and Tyna Davis, all of Canadian; her mother, Ella Carr and one brother, Carroll Carr, both of Canadian; and four sisters, Mrs. Irma Hedgecoke of Canadian, Mrs. Mary Cox and Mrs. Erlene Hoffer, both of Miami and Mrs. Shirley Pittman of Bud Lake, N.J.

USS NASHVILLE VETERANS SOUGHT
 World War II veterans who served aboard the light cruiser USS Nashville (CL43) are planning a July 1981 reunion in San Diego, Calif. Former personnel, both officer and enlisted, who are not on the mailing list are requested to write A. B. Speed, 13229 Des Moines Way S., Seattle, Wash. 98168.

The USS Nashville participated in the famed Doolittle Raid on Tokyo and went on to become Gen. Douglas MacArthur's flagship during many of his Southwest Pacific operations, including his triumphant return to the Philippines. Many believe MacArthur would have received the Japanese surrender aboard the USS Nashville if President Truman had not designated the battleship named for his home state, the USS Missouri.
 The USS Nashville was purchased by Chile in 1950 and renamed the Capitán Prat after their most revered naval hero. The ship now serves as the flagship of the Chilean fleet.

road conditions

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Texas road conditions reported Tuesday by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, by districts, included:
Lubbock - Major roads ice and snow packed but traffic moving throughout district. Some farm roads have not been plowed.
Childress - Some ice remaining on roads in Briscoe County but improvement expected later in the day.
Abilene - Major roads clear. Some icy and snow spots remain on farm roads.
Amarillo - Major highways open. Ice accumulations on Interstate 40 in both directions from Amarillo made travel very slow. Some farm roads still had ice and snow accumulations.
Odessa - Traffic moving throughout the district. Some scattered ice.

Klan acquittal called 'victory for whites'

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - A Nazi leader hailed the acquittal of six Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis as a "great victory for white America," but the Communist Workers Party charged that the verdict in the slaying of five comrades "gives the green light to Hitler-like attacks on the people of America."

The charges stemmed from a bloody shootout between white supremacists and demonstrators at a CWP "Death to the Klan" rally Nov. 3, 1979.

Not long after the jurors announced their decision, the civil rights division of the U.S. Justice Department said it was studying the verdict. Drew S. Days said the branch was checking "to see if there is anything we can do."

The Rev. Hosea Williams, a black civil rights activist, called the verdict "the greatest perpetration of injustice on our country since the death of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr."

Whether 16 other people charged after the demonstration will be brought to trial now has not yet been announced.
 The decision by the all-white jury came after seven days of deliberation and a 23-week trial.

Prosecutors had argued the defendants were aggressors in the bloody battle. But defense lawyers said the six men, who had arrived at the rally site in a Klan-Nazi motorcade, came only to heckle demonstrators.

"From the very beginning, it was the communists who did the attacking," said juror Robert A. Williams. "It was the communists who started beating the cars with sticks. From then on, it was a case of self-defense."

"Oh, gosh, I feel like I have been set free," said a tearful Paula Wood, whose husband, Nazi Roland Wayne Wood, was acquitted. "I'm not sure how I feel. It's just a relief."

Regina Collett said she "never thought for a second that they (jurors) would come back with any other verdict" for her fiancée, Lawrence Gene Morgan. "I never believed he was guilty, and he's been set free by God's will," she said.

Lisa Pridmore, 14, said she had believed it was "God's will" that her father Coleman Blair Pridmore would be acquitted.
 In Raleigh, national Nazi commander Harold Covington called the verdict "fantastic. It shows we can beat the system on their own ground."

CWP member Kurt Krumpelman said, "The verdict gives the green light to Hitler-like attacks on the people of America. That was evident when the hand-picked, all-white, Klan-loving jury was seated."

Citizens act to end lack of emergency vehicle

PRESIDIO, Texas (AP) - It's a familiar story - the hour was late and the driver had been drinking. The speeding car veered out of control on a curve and overturned several times. Two persons died and four others were hurt.

It's a familiar story with one difference.
 One of the victims lay bleeding on the roadside for 40 minutes, waiting for emergency medical help that arrived one hour after he died.

It has happened before, but this time, outraged citizens in this remote border town decided it would never happen again.
 "The ambulance problem comes up every time there is an accident - and everybody looks at everybody else and says 'do something.' Well, after that (Sept. 13) accident enough people got mad enough that instead of asking they finally started doing," said Rita Terry, a local artist and wife of the U.S. Customs chief here.

Mrs. Terry and others decided to buy an ambulance for this town of 1,600. They formed a committee and have been soliciting funds for the vehicle, which should cost in the neighborhood of $20,000.
 Presidio has no doctor and the nearest ambulance is in Marfa, 60 tortuous miles across a rugged, desolate stretch of Southwest Texas.

One of the victims of the Sept. 13 wreck, Antonio Brito, was killed instantly. But as 16-year-old Martin Manriquez lay bleeding to death, frantic parents crossed the international bridge and woke up two young doctors in Ojinaga, Mexico.

While the Mexican physicians did what they could, their efforts were frustrated by a lack of emergency medical equipment.
 The committee has not yet raised enough money for the ambulance, but U.S. Customs Chief Laurence Terry has offered what first aid equipment his office has for emergencies. His wife and one of his men, Mike Pileggi, both are certified emergency medical technicians and both now are called to emergencies on a routine basis.

"It dawned on us that no one else was going to help us. We certainly haven't received any help from Marfa (the county seat)," said Mary Luisa Spencer, president of the ambulance committee.

"We realized if we wanted an ambulance we were going to have to get it on our own."

Local radio stations have helped in the drive and volunteers have gone door-to-door in search of funds. Collection cans have been placed in stores and shops all over town, and one has been placed at the bridge over the Rio Grande.

"Our goal is $20,000 for a vehicle and the medical equipment needed to make it an ambulance," said Mrs. Spencer. So far, the committee has raised about $15,000 in cash or pledges.

"We asked each family to give $25, and most everybody has given something," she said.
 Some volunteers and donors are motivated by more than community spirit.

Ismael Tarango, who was injured in a traffic accident and survived despite the long wait for an ambulance, donated $100, "because he said he knows how it feels to be lying there waiting," Mrs. Spencer said. "All he could do was lie there and say 'help me, help me.'"

Mrs. Rojelio Brito is vice president of the drive. Her husband, who was no relation to Anthony Brito, died after waiting an hour and 45 minutes for an ambulance the day before Thanksgiving last year.

Brito's pickup truck had overturned about 10 miles north of Presidio. He died 15 minutes after the ambulance arrived, "and he would probably be alive today if they could have gotten to him in time," said Mrs. Terry.

She said there is some doubt as to whether Manriquez could have been saved after the Sept. 13 accident.
 "But he deserved a chance. Everybody deserves a chance. That's what this drive is all about," she said.

The committee raised more than $300 by raffling off a Christmas tree and a toy vacuum cleaner. It raised a whopping $1,400 by raffling off an oil painting donated by Mrs. Terry, who specializes in Western landscapes.

THE EAST FOURTEENTH STREET GANG. The guys on East 14th Street in Pampa all ganged up Monday to create a snowman since the whole day was free of normal school classes. After the job was completed, the guys all gathered around to admire their big friend who began to go through a disappearing act today as the sun peeked through and temperatures climbed. Names in the news

LONDON (AP) — Larry Hagman, who as the nasty J.R. Ewing got shot in the "Dallas" TV series, died the death every trouper fears when he appeared before royalty here. He forgot his lines.

On Monday night, the biggest showbiz night of the year at the London Palladium, Hagman twice forgot the lyrics to "My Favorite Sins."

"Well, I blew it — well, there you go," he confessed. But his role has made Hagman so popular here that he can't do wrong. Queen Mother Elizabeth and her grandson, Prince Charles, were all smiles, and a diamond-studded theatergoer who shelled out $144 for their charity tickets cheered him to the roof.

They cheered again when Hagman's mother, veteran actress Mary Martin, skipped onstage in her sailor suit from "South Pacific" and did a song-and-dance routine with her son. After the show, part of the ongoing celebration of the queen mother's 80th birthday, Hagman met with the royal guests.

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Jackie Gleason, faced with having to take a back seat to a car company, says he is dissociating himself from the annual Inverrary Golf Classic, according to the Miami Herald.

The entertainer started the Jackie Gleason Inverrary in 1972, but tournament officials are now seeking corporate sponsorship, apparently from an automaker. Their decision to ease out Gleason came after CBS-TV decided to bump the tournament from its 18-event listing for 1982.

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Ronald Reagan's handwriting reveals a confident, open-minded and emotionally controlled man, but also one who "tends to live in the past," an amateur handwriting analyst says.

Patrick Weitzel, who studied samples of the president-elect's penmanship on notecards Reagan used during a speech here, said the way the upper case "T" looped backward, then back across, "indicates this person tends to live in the past."

But the president-elect swings the loop back to cross the vertical line, Weitzel said, showing that "he's not obsessed by the past."

Weitzel also noted that Reagan's "I" is slightly enlarged, showing that he is "a realist and a man who likes himself," the analyst said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Hoving, chairman of the famed jewelers Tiffany & Company, has announced that he will retire at the end of the year to devote himself to investments and other interests.

Hoving, at 82 the oldest active head of a nationally known retail company, will end a 56-year career in retailing on Dec. 31.

New system reduces radiation exposure

DALLAS (AP) — A new medical technology will reduce radiation exposure to patients undergoing chest X-rays by 80 percent, the Picker Corp. announced Monday.

The development, unveiled at the annual meeting of the Radiological Society of North America, was achieved with a second-generation chest radiography system known as Servochest, the company said.

The use of fast screen-film combinations make exposure times of less than two milliseconds possible.

Expert views nuclear energy

HOUSTON (AP) — Dr. Edward Teller says many things point to a rebirth of interest in U.S. nuclear power.

The only question, said the man called the father of the atomic bomb, is whether the revival can be perfected in time to avert serious problems such as a severe energy shortage.

At a Monday news conference, Teller referred to President Carter's defeat in the Nov. 4 general election by saying, "We are rid of the nuclear engineer in the White House."

He said every poll indicates the American public has expressed favor for nuclear energy.

Conned out of savings, man still has money to get by DETROIT (AP) — People from all over the country sent Peter Muzyka money after hearing the 91-year-old man was conned out of his life savings, but now he admits he had more than $20,000 in his bank account.

A man and woman posing as gas company employees took $16,000 the elderly Detroit man had hidden in his home. He told the Detroit Free Press that the money was his life savings, and said he would have to get by on his $300-a-month pension.

Money flooded into the newspaper and Detroit area television stations. One contributor sent a check for $2,000 to the newspaper, while others sent smaller contributions, finally totaling $9,253 to the Free Press alone.

With the checks and cash came letters, many saying, "This isn't much, but it's all I can spare." Another taped a dollar bill to a news account of the story with a note saying, "I was going to buy milk with this dollar; instead, I will drink water all week."

However, the newspaper learned that Muzyka was not penniless as he had said, and questioned him Monday when he was told of the donations. The paper said he then acknowledged having a savings account at the Bank of the Commonwealth, but "not much money." Queried further, he told the newspaper the account contained "maybe $5,000."

According to his niece, Stasha Zelasko of Livonia, Muzyka's passbook shows a balance of $22,686.14.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Whistleblowers need courage

Advocates of protection of "whistleblowers" in the federal government are disappointed that a new program, created as part of a civil service reform package passed in 1978, doesn't seem to be doing the job. The quasi-judicial Merit System Protection Board is supposed to protect whistleblowers — federal employees who criticize or publicize waste, foolishness and corruption in the federal establishment — from reprisals by their superiors. So far 150 self-described whistleblowers have sought the board's protection, and none of them has been satisfied. Indeed, one of them says the board serves only as a sting operation to smoke out critics.

The board's members cite the usual excuses — too little staff, too little money, computer problems, difficulty in getting procedures underway and ambiguity in the enabling legislation. We're inclined to think they are only excuses. Not that the board's promoters weren't sincere about protecting whistleblowers, and not that the boards wouldn't like to do it. But we doubt whether the federal government will ever be able adequately to protect whistleblowers. It's just one of the many things government is unable to do well.

To understand why the government can't protect or encourage whistleblowers you need to understand a little about the situation a whistleblower faces.

Most whistleblowers are professional civil servants. They see an abuse — bribes being solicited or taken, persistent cost overruns, rigged bidding, friends on the payroll, laziness — that goes against their grain, that they know wastes taxpayers' money, and want to correct it. But they know they can get a reputation as a troublemaker and be subject to direct and indirect job pressures. Many who have made waves have been ostracized, passed over for promotions or virtually forced to resign. In addition, some whistleblowers are motivated more by personal vendettas against superiors or colleagues than concern for the public weal.

What good will a review board do? It's an instrument of the government, and therefore philosophically and institutionally circumscribed in the kinds of whistleblowing it will support, regardless of good intentions. It also has to be careful about the rights of superiors accused of unethically "getting even" with a whistleblower. Such cases are bound to become tied in red tape, and the whistleblowers will be subject to the kinds of public controversy they wanted to avoid.

We're not aware of any psychological studies of whistleblowers, but from what we can see of the more prominent ones, they're people who have found the kinds of things they see or are asked to do simply incompatible with a firmly ingrained code of moral standards. If those moral standards are important enough to them, they will be more important than holding on to their civil service jobs. If they're not willing to take the risk of losing their jobs, no government agency is going to give them the backbone.

What it boils down to is that we've got to depend on the individual courage, crankiness or curmudgeonly attitude of individual whistleblowers to alert us to waste and corruption in the federal government. We can't create a government agency to encourage them or protect them. If they aren't willing to risk their futures for a principle, they won't trust a bureaucratic agency to protect them — and they're probably right too.

Some things can be done from outside the government to encourage whistleblowers. Private individuals can agree to help whistleblowers find jobs outside the government if they have the courage of their convictions. Newspapers and magazines can pay them well to write their stories. The public can respect them, lionize them and support them.

It takes courage to blow the whistle on government and some of the special interests at the public trough. It may not be encouraging to those who want solutions tied up in neat little packages, but the public is going to have to depend on that kind of courage to expose waste and corruption in government. Courage can't be created by federal edict.

Texas teacher union turns to the left

Several months ago the U.S. News & World Report carried an item under the headline: "Teachers Learn How to Use Political Muscle."

Last June 29 the New York Times published an article under the headline: "An NEA Endorsement of Carter Would Be a First."

Reed Larson, who heads the National Right To Work Committee, in a commentary recently wrote: "So imagine if you will, the reaction of the school children in Simi Valley, California, after recently witnessing two of their teachers, symbols of authority and a respected tradition of learning, actually served with papers in their classrooms by local police officers. In all, fifty Simi Valley teachers had been served with subpoenas for the 'crime' of refusing to join the National Education Association — union."

For Simi Valley school children, the new lesson in civics was stunningly clear: Individuals have no right to think, act, or work independently of the regimented mass. Teachers are subordinate to, and hold their positions at the sufferance of, union officials.

The Simi Valley lesson was a brutal demonstration of NEA (National Education Association) muscle. But there are other, more subtle ways in which school children are being taught to follow the collectivized herd instead of thinking for themselves.

A thing like that could not happen in Texas? Ponder this lead-sentence in a Washington-dated news item: "Susan Staub, director of Concerned Educators Against Forced Unionism (CEAFU), charged that officials of the National Education Association Union are pushing for the repeal of all Right to Work laws to help them stop the exodus of teachers from the Texas State Teachers Association (TSTA) and other affiliates throughout the country."

The Texas State Teachers Association endorsed Jimmy Carter for re-election and designated collective bargaining legislation its top priority for 1981. There are blunders that indicate the Texas teacher "leadership," at least, has turned sharply to the left.

From time to time we have referred to the TSTA as a big labor union, and some teachers, with their feelings hurt, have objected, declaring the union is not a union. Now it is clear it is a labor union body with 140,000 members.

It was good to note that Gov. Bill Clements said he would veto legislation giving state teachers collective bargaining rights, if such were approved by the legislature.

It also is good to note that there are sensible teachers in Texas withdrawing from membership in the big TSTA-Union. Many others, we are told, are afraid to.

But it should be pointed out that while there are these two things, in addition to the general good sense of most Texans, that give us hope the big teacher-union effort will be stopped, there always is the chance that a back-door sneak attack may give the unionites the upper hand, at least temporarily. In that case, we could expect the same police-state action in Texas as happened in the little city of Simi Valley, Calif. It will pay all Texans to be alert to what kind of civics the teachers are teaching — and thinking. It should be noted here, too, that there are many well-meaning teachers in the teacher-union who find it expedient to "go along" with the union bosses rather than risk being an outcast in the collectivized herd.

Ronald Reagan's landslide victory, coupled with sweeping Republican gains in Congress, could produce a new conservative era in U.S. politics.

Not that the great mass of voters consciously embraced the conservative cause. Voters, for the most part, aren't ideological. Almost certainly, the elemental reason for the huge Reagan triumph was a simple anti-Carter reaction.

In the process of repudiating Jimmy Carter, however, the voters also surprised everyone by responding strongly to the Republicans' time-for-a-change theme. The GOP gained control of the Senate for the first time in 26 years as liberal after liberal fell to conservative Republicans.

The Republicans' big gains in the House, while short of a majority, give conservative legislators a philosophical majority.

Conservative era dawns

Even more than the presidential election, the congressional results have an ideological cast. Several of the new Republican senators are unabashedly conservative — strong foes of big government and ardent advocates of hard-line foreign and defense policies. Their victories wrecked the liberal ranks of the Senate; such liberal leaders as McGovern, Church, Bayh, Culver and Nelson are gone.

Clearly, the election marked a repudiation of the Democratic liberalism that has dominated politics for so long. The voters apparently are tired of it, much as liberalism itself seems tired and unable to generate fresh and promising ideas for effective governance.

But if the people are tired of liberalism, it does not follow that they are endorsing a specific catalog of conservative policies. More likely, people simply voted, perhaps with some sense of desperation, to give the Republicans a chance to get events under control. That is, to curb seemingly uncontrollable inflation and to reverse the alarming slide of U.S. power and prestige in world affairs.

Still, if the Reagan-led Republicans can produce progress, they have a historic chance to guide American politics on a conservative course that could outlast Reagan's first term. For while the voters probably didn't cast their ballots for a list of specific policies, they seem inclined toward a basically conservative approach.

Domestically, new spending programs are out of favor. People want the old ones fixed to run better, with the most unproductive programs weeded out. There's a consensus for tax cuts — as long as they don't make inflation worse.

To deal with international dangers, there's a solid consensus for rebuilding U.S. defense power. There is a yearning for a restoration of U.S. dominance in foreign affairs that probably will support a tougher posture against the Russians as long as it doesn't seem reckless.

Most people don't care whether their basic desires are labeled conservative or something else. They are interested in results. If the Republicans produce better results than the Democrats have, voters probably will reward them at the next election. If they don't, people may well go back to the Democrats.

What President-elect Reagan and other Republicans face, then, is an extremely tough challenge to demonstrate that they can fashion sensible policies that will produce some improvement in the nation's most fundamental problems. With control of the White House and working majorities in the Congress, the Republicans have all the power voters can give them to meet the challenge.

It is not a partisan statement to say that giving this challenge to the Republicans is a healthy thing. For the plain fact is that the Carter presidency has been a failure, domestically and internationally. Reagan will assume office unencumbered by the failed policies of the past four years.

And the Democrats have controlled Congress too long for their own good. Their thinking has ossified; defeat will force them to rethink their policies, and some innovative ideas may emerge that could revive their fortunes.

So, too, the congressional Republicans have been in the minority for so long that negativism has become almost automatic for many of them. Now, at least in the Senate, they will share responsibility with a president of their own party for governing and will have a chance to show whether they're worthy of positive responsibilities.

There are doubts aplenty whether Reagan and other Republicans have the ability for the task. Despite the size of the Reagan victory, public-opinion polls disclosed deep reservations about his wisdom, especially in setting foreign and defense policies. His support, though broad, is fragile, and just a few missteps at the outset could damage his administration badly.

But it would be a mistake to underestimate Reagan's potential for success. The mood of the country is in sympathy with his conservative approach. He has the votes in Congress to back his major policies, if they are sensibly crafted. And people are not looking for miracles. They know it will take time, a long time, to deal with the nation's basic problems. They probably will be glad to settle for incremental progress if that can be delivered.

Moreover, Reagan possesses attractive personal qualities that will stand him in good stead. He is the first president since John Kennedy who is both likable and highly articulate in expressing national goals. While cynics deride the sometimes schmaltzy Reagan vision of America, it is possible that his gift for uplifting rhetoric may be his most powerful asset.

Reagan's administration will be a success if he can produce at least some measurable progress while inspiring people to believe there's hope for more in the future. If he can do that, with the support of resurgent congressional Republicans, this undoubtedly conservative president-elect has the chance to turn conservatism into a governing force outlasting his time in office.

No close shave for Arafat

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — A reader has asked me to help him with a problem he has. The question he posed is: "I notice that PLO leader Yasser Arafat and new Iranian Prime Minister Rajai always manage to appear with a four- to six-day growth of beard, which never grows any longer. How do they manage to do it?"

In order to get the answer I called a friend of mine at the CIA who was very upset that I was on to something. He agreed to meet me in a safe house in McLean, Va. He told me to take a taxi to National Airport, buy a ticket to Bangor, Me., and then at the last moment rent a car and drive to the address.

When I met him at the house there were three CIA agents in the living room, who refused to give their names, and my friend: "Why are you interested in Arafat and Rajai's shaving problems?" one of them wanted to know.

I played dumb. "Just curiosity. A reader asked me and I thought he deserved an answer."

"A likely story," one of the others sneered. "You were tipped off by someone in the agency, weren't you?"

"I don't think I have to answer that."

"We've been working on this problem for months now. There are only six people in 'The Company,' not including the CIA barber, who knows what we've been up to. Now it looks as if one of them is a mole."

"You mean he's working for both sides?"

"It's obvious he is. To get to the bottom of this, we'll tell you what we know if you tell us what you know."

"It sounds good to me," I said. "It seems there are a lot of leaders in the Middle East who don't shave every day. By the same token they refuse to grow beards. They prefer a four- to six-day growth, but no more. My source believes they're all using the same razor blade."

One of the CIA men was taking notes. "He's on the right track," he said.

"Did your source tell you how they manage to get the razor blade back and forth?"

"Arafat seems to be the bag man. He's always traveling somewhere and my man believes he has the razor blade hidden in his turban. We've never seen a picture of Yasser without his headress. It would be the obvious place to keep it."

"The men looked at each other before one spoke."

"Suppose we told you it wasn't a razor blade but a Soviet electric razor?"

"I hit my head with the palm of my hand. An electric razor. I never thought of that. But wouldn't an electric razor give them all a clean shave?"

"You would think so," my friend said.

"But we have evidence that the Soviets have been unloading bum electric razors on their clients in the Middle East. No one in Russia will buy them because they will hardly cut any kind of beard, so every time a leftist leader comes to Moscow they give him one as a gift. Arafat shaves every day with one, and so does Rajai and a lot of the other people in that part of the world. But even on the adjustable high setting it's the best they can do."

"Why do you people want to keep this a secret?" I asked. "I should think it would be to our advantage to publicize the fact that the Soviets are unloading rejected electric razors on their friends."

"Because every morning when Arafat and his cronies shave it causes them excruciating pain, and for the moment we want to keep it that way."

The survivor

By Don Graff

For an alarming moment there the other day it appeared that the Persian Gulf war might be widening.

A flash on the wires informed that Jordan's King Hussein had placed his army under the command of Iraq.

But a follow-up correction was rapidly forthcoming. Faulty translation of a Jordanian radio broadcast, Hussein, returning from his second visit to Baghdad since the outbreak of the month-old conflict, had only pledged his country to "stand by the side of its brethren with all of its energies and resources."

Cancel the crisis. Nothing more to it than another example of typically Arab tough talk that stops just short of actually getting tough.

But what if there had been more to it? How might active Jordanian involvement have affected the course of the stalemated struggle?

Probably minimally in a military sense, considering that the much larger and better-equipped Iraqi forces have been unable to knock out the disorganized Iraqis or even completely achieve limited territorial objectives. And what a non-belligerent Hussein is already doing for the Iraqis — making available the Red Sea port of Aqaba for their supply line and being their most prominent advocate in the divided Arab world — is probably worth considerably more than his brigades.

Diplomatically it could be another matter, however. It would intensify the polarization of the Arabs, possibly to the point of a widened conflict bringing in Jordan's neighbor, Syria, openly supporting Iraq along with distant and unpredictable Libya.

And it could strain to the point of breaking Jordan's 30-year American connection, already strained by among other things Hussein's flirting with the Soviets somewhat to the latter's embarrassment. They recently asked him to please not make a planned visit to Moscow because talks with the Syrians were under way there at the time and the Iraqis might take offense at a show of Soviet cordiality to Iraq's best friend.

More active involvement would thus appear to pose considerable risks for Hussein. That would not, however, be anything new for him. He has risked — with mixed results — before. He plunged late into the 1967 Mideast war and lost Jerusalem and the West Bank to Israel. In 1970-71, he took on Palestinian guerrillas who in the process of using Jordan as a base for raids on Israel had virtually taken over the country. He won, driving them out of Jordan, but at the price of being a pariah in intra-Arab politics for the next several years.

Hussein's entire career has, in fact, been a risk, or a series of risks. He came to the Jordanian throne in 1952, at the age of 17, following the assassination of his grandfather and the deposing of his mentally unbalanced father. The odds on a long reign appeared decidedly short at that time. Jordan was among the smallest and poorest of Arab states, existing on first British and then American subsidies.

Hussein was regularly castigated as an imperialist lackey by the then chief poohbah of the Arabs, Egypt's Gamal Abdel Nasser. He was also saddled with an ancient family feud with the rulers of neighboring Saudi Arabia. He has been the target of repeated coup and assassination plots. In 1958 his cousin, King Faisal of Iraq, was overthrown and the royal family strung up in the streets of Baghdad by the predecessors of the very regime Hussein now so ardently backs. Back then, Hussein appeared a likely next to go.

But the odds — makers of 1952 have been proved very wrong. He not only survived but much more. He has been in power longer than any other Arab leader. And he has become quite possibly the most consummate diplomat in the Mideast, Egypt's Anwar Sadat and a number of Israelis perhaps excepted.

Viewed from this perspective, Hussein's current maneuverings may raise questions. While pushing the Iraqi cause he is, for example, also preparing for a long-scheduled Arab "unity" summit meeting in Amman later this month, unity always having been in short supply among the Arabs and no more so than at present.

But he may have his reasons. And in any case it would be a mistake to write him off. He has, if nothing else, a remarkable record for challenging the odds and surviving.

Net farm income could jump one-third

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new projection by the Agriculture Department shows farmers' net income, overall, could jump sharply next year after sagging miserably in 1980.

And if all goes well farmers may pump billions of dollars back into the economy in 1981 as they buy needed tractors, combines and other capital equipment, officials said Monday.

After plunging by one-fourth this year, net farm income could soar by as much as one-third in 1981.

In its first projections for the coming year — figures that are considered highly tentative — the department's Economics and Statistics Service said net farm income for 1981 could range between $27 billion and $32 billion.

This year, plagued by drought, high interest rates, tight credit and inflation, farmers are expected to have a net income collectively of between $23 billion and $25 billion, the agency said. Net farm income in 1979 was $31 billion. The 1981 forecast was included in a brief summary of an "agricultural finance" report scheduled to be released in about two weeks.

Reduced crop yields, particularly corn and soybeans, have helped drive up commodity prices this fall. Brisk domestic and foreign demand also is bolstering prices.

Meanwhile, J. Dawson Ahalt told the department's annual agricultural outlook conference, which opened Monday for a four-day run, that farm production expenses will continue to rise next year but that farmers' gross income will rise faster.

"With good harvests and no major inflationary jolts next year, we could see net farm income return to the 1979 level," Ahalt said.

He is chairman of the department's World Food and Agricultural Outlook and Situation Board. The report said anticipated "lower interest rates and a decline in the rate of increase in production expenses" also are expected to be major factors in next year's improved income outlook.

"As a whole, farmers are likely to be in an improved financial position by the end of 1981," the report said. "However, hog and poultry producers' incomes are expected to improve only marginally while producers of vegetables, fruits and nuts are forecast to have lower incomes in 1981."

The report said farmers in drought-stricken areas "will enter 1981 heavily burdened with debt" while those not affected by the dry weather "should be in a stronger financial situation."

Gross investments by farmers in 1981 could total nearly $41 billion, compared to less than $12 billion this year and 1979's level of $21.6 billion, the report said.

"The reduction in 1980 reflects widespread postponement of purchases of capital items because of low income prospects and high interest rates," it said.

THERE IS NO FUN LIKE SNOW FUN. Eleven-year-old boys have a talent for making the best of any situation, especially when Mother Nature steps in and provides enough snow to keep schools closed on a Monday morning. Taking advantage of the first snow of the season, and an unscheduled day out of class, Barry Osborne, left, packs a good one for a shot at his buddy, Chris Wilson. Chris smothered a giggle in a half-hearted attempt to escape a barrage. The boys are sons of the John Osborne's and Jerry Wilson's.

Teen found guilty of shooting live-in friend

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — A Wichita Falls teen-ager wept when a jury declared her guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the shooting death of her live-in boyfriend — a man she testified she shot in self defense.

Jesse Lee Williams, 18, was accused of murder, but the jury deliberated three hours Monday and convicted her of the lesser offense of manslaughter. The panel took 45 minutes more before to set her punishment at 12 years in prison.

Testifying in her own defense, Miss Williams admitted killing S.P. Runnels last Aug. 31 in the house where they were living, but said she did it to protect her own life. Runnels abused her and her 18-month-old daughter and was coming at her with a knife when she shot him, she said.

Patricia Morrow, a key witness for the prosecution, testified last Thursday — on the second day of the trial — that Miss Williams told her while both were in Wichita County Jail that she planned Runnels' death in advance.

Defense attorney Robert Estrada criticized the verdict as "harsh under the circumstances."

Mrs. Morrow's testimony was the only thing the jury had to base a finding that Runnels wasn't killed in self defense, Estrada said. He told the jury Mrs. Morrow was trying with her testimony to win favor with the district attorney for both herself and her husband.

Mrs. Morrow is on probation for possession of drugs and is facing possible prosecution for involvement in organized criminal activity, Estrada said, and her husband is charged with drug-related crimes.

Assistant District Attorney Steve Shelton called the sentence appropriate. He said the jury fit the punishment to the crime.

Voluntary manslaughter carries a sentence of 2 to 20 years, with probation also an alternative.

Shelton had pleaded in his closing arguments for the jury to make the sentence communicate something to others.

"I think the large number of recent killings in Wichita Falls must have affected the decision," Shelton said.

Mid East 'accident' cause oil crisis

DALLAS (AP) — A single "accident" in the volatile Middle East could toss oil-dependent industrial nations into a major crisis as early as next spring, a financial specialist warns.

Peter E. Butler, first vice president of Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins, Inc., said oil inventory surpluses probably will dwindle over the next few months, resulting in a shortage of 1 million to 2 million barrels a day by next spring.

"With everything going at full steam, all it takes is an accident — an errant rocket, a bombing of an oil field — and we're in trouble," Butler said. "We've gotten into a situation where we have almost no margin for error."

"And if we have an accident," he added, "then you can look for prices to jump tremendously."

Butler said he believes President-elect Reagan's program to cut down the size of government will remove some obstacles to energy production.

At the same time, he said, a move toward nationalization of oil companies by the Canadian government is driving oil company capital south.

"It's just put a black cloud over the industry," Butler said. "We're not putting another dime in the ground until we know what's going to happen."

Butler was in Dallas to speak to executives of financial institutions.

Two charged in CETA case

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A man from San Jose and an El Paso, Texas, man have been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of fraud and coverup in connection with money allegedly paid an Arizona training group.

The two, Alejandro L. Delgado, 32, of San Jose and Robert A. Cuellar, 41, of El Paso, were charged with lying to the Santa Clara Valley Employment and Training Board about the use of Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, or CETA, funds.

Delgado is executive director of SER-Jobs for Progress of San Jose and Cuellar is a former official of Progressive Enterprise Group of Phoenix, Ariz.

The indictments alleged that Delgado misrepresented some documents about a $2,485 payment by SER to Progressive and that later both lied about the documents and tried to coverup the action.

The money was supposedly to pay for a seminar Progressive sponsored. It was not known whether the money actually reached Progressive or whether the 1976 seminar was indeed held.

Cuellar now heads Anahuac Inc. and Adcom Associates. Neither he nor Delgado could be reached for comment.

Each count carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

China officials reveal furor with 'Gang' arrest

PEKING (AP) — Followers of China's radical "Gang of Four" deployed 33,500 militiamen in Shanghai and planned an armed rebellion after learning of the gang's arrest in October 1976, foreign ministry officials said today.

In the last of four briefings on indictments against the gang and six members of the "Lin Piao Clique," the officials said the gang's followers planned to control key facilities in China's biggest city and instigate strikes and demonstrations across the country.

There was no indication why the alleged rebellion failed to start. The officials again declined to say when the trial of the 10 would start. But the Communist Party newspaper People's Daily said today it was imminent and hundreds of representatives of various organizations had arrived in Peking to attend the trial.

The newspaper said parts of the trial would be telecast to the world by satellite. All 10 defendants face the death penalty.

The indictment says the gang handed out 74,000 rifles to the militia in Shanghai in August 1976, along with 300 artillery pieces and 10 million rounds of ammunition in preparation for an armed rebellion.

Chairman Mao Tse-tung, who led the People's Republic from its founding in 1949, died on Sept. 9, 1976. Senior leader Deng Xiaoping has said the gang did not accept his choice of a successor, a reference to current Party Chairman Hua Guofeng, and wanted to seize power.

The gang's alleged leader was Mao's wife, Jiang Qing. She was not among those charged with plotting the October 1976 rebellion, but the other three members — Zhang Chunqiao, Wang Hongwen and Yao Wenyuan — were.

On Oct. 8, 1976, according to the indictment, the gang's Shanghai followers learned by secret code of the gang's arrest in Peking, called an emergency meeting and decided to use the militia for an armed rebellion.

DANISH DAIRIES FACING TRIAL

AARHUS, Denmark (AP) — The Association of Danish Dairies is facing trial on charges of violating the nation's sex discrimination law.

Prosecutors acted when they saw an association advertisement for publicity aides that said applicants had to wear skirts.

The association said one man applied but he was turned down.

SCHOOL FUNDS FACE CUT

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. Relief and Works Agency says it may have to cut back U.N. schooling for young Palestinians because government pledges for its 1981 budget fell short of the estimated need.

Thirty-nine nations have promised $103.9 million to finance the agency's programs for 1,844,318 registered refugees, including 314,164 pupils going to U.N. schools in Lebanon, Jordan, Syria and the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan and Gaza Strip.

The commissioner-general of the agency, Olof Rydbeck of Sweden, said that will leave the agency $71 million short.

REFUGEE COMMISSION DEFRAUDED

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Police have arrested five people and charged them with forging a $204,000 check from the U.N. High Commission for Refugees, a police spokesman said today.

He said one of the five, an employee of the U.N. agency, broke into an office drawer on June 31 and stole a check.

MASS DEATH CREATED 'VISION OF HELL'

The scene in the photo above shows Guyana after members of the People Temple committed mass suicide at the urging of their lead, Jim Jones, photo at right. Although the Peoples Temple died in the jungle clearing two years ago, the California-originated cult has not been buried. A witness to the incident said the suicide rite was a "vision of hell." The photo of Jones was taken by Greg Robinson, a San Francisco Examiner photographer who died in a Jonestown shootout. The top photo is by Frank Johnston of the Washington Post.

Guyana ghost town fighting the curious, jungle vegetation

JONESTOWN, Guyana (AP) — Two years after the People's Temple massacre, Jonestown is a ghost town, with a dozen guards and workers keeping out the curious and the jungle vegetation.

The area around the main pavilion where the Rev. Jim Jones exhorted more than 900 of his followers to drink poisoned punch and "die with dignity" on Nov. 18, 1978, shows no trace of the 913 suicides and murders.

Only two people have been charged in Guyana in connection with the tragedy.

Charles Beikman, a 44-year-old cook and shoemaker at the commune, was sentenced in April to five years for the attempted murder of a 9-year-old girl at the cult's Georgetown headquarters on the night of the massacre.

Another member of the temple, Larry Layton, 33, is being held on murder charges in connection with the slaying of U.S. Rep. Leo J. Ryan, three reporters and a People's Temple defector at an airstrip a few hours before the massacre, but he may be released soon because witnesses against him have refused to return from the United States to testify.

Layton was acquitted last May of the attempted murder of two other defectors, Vern Gosney and Monica Bagby. But if he returns to the United States, he could face federal charges of conspiracy to kill the California congressman and the four others who died with him.

Two-thirds of the cult's liquid assets in Guyana have been used to pay the Guyanese government $770,000 for the two Guyana Airways planes damaged in the shooting of Ryan and his party and for cleaning up Jonestown after the massacre.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The dentist who told you that the gold in a person's mouth is usually not worth bothering about is in error. With the help of a mortician in town I have written down all the instructions as to what should happen to me after I die, and I specifically state that the gold in my mouth shall be removed and given to the executors of my estate (my two sons).

The mortician told me that I was by no means the first to make this kind of request. He said it takes only a few seconds to accomplish this with a dental instrument, and should the mortician feel unqualified to perform this task, a dentist can be called in.

A dental supply salesman I know well said he knows some big-city morticians who get between $15 and $30 thousand a year for the gold they extract from the deceased whose families think "it's just too horrible to think about."

I would rather see the gold in my mouth, which my dentist says is worth between $2 and $3 thousand, go toward educating my grandchildren than to someone who means nothing to me. You can bet your gold-filled molars that there will be someone along the line who will see that the gold doesn't go to the same place the corpse does.

AN ARKIE

DEAR ARKIE: Thanks for a valuable letter. Well, readers, that should settle it — unless some morticians want to get their digs in.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is not unusual. I have two friends whom I've known since childhood. (I'll call them Mary and Jane.)

Lately Mary tells me that Jane is slandering me behind my back. Then she says, "But please don't tell her I told you." This angers me because I can't fight back without betraying Mary.

Abby, how would you handle this? It baffles me because I've always had a good relationship with both of them.

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Mark Twain said: "It takes an enemy and a friend working together to hurt you to the quick. The one to slander you and the other to get the news to you."

Don't accept as truth anything you can't verify. And the next time Mary starts to quote Jane, tell her you're not interested.

DEAR ABBY: I am a secretary who qualifies for membership in the "I never thought I'd be writing to Dear Abby" club, but I really need help with this problem:

When someone calls to talk to my boss and I tell the caller that he is engaged in a telephone conversation, the caller invariably says, "How long do you think he'll be?"

Now, really, Abby, I am not a mind reader, and there is virtually no way of knowing whether he will be tied up on the phone for an hour or only two minutes.

I always say politely, "I'm sorry, but I have no way of knowing." Then I am made to feel like a dummy.

Abby, you're quick on your feet. Please give us secretaries a quippy reply to this asinine question.

A.F.

DEAR A.F.: Instead of telling the caller that the boss is on the phone, simply say, "I'm sorry, he's unavailable now, but if you care, to leave your name and number I will have him return your call as soon as possible." End of problem.

Do you wish you had more friends? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby, Popularity, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm 4 feet 11 and have to lose weight because of high blood pressure and sugar in my blood. I'm on the borderline. My husband said I was too skinny when I got down to 104 pounds but my doctor wants me to stay around there. I got up to 106 one time and he said he wouldn't bawl me out but to watch my diet.

I go every three months for a blood sugar check and I don't think I'm skinny at that weight because I am so short.

Then I read this article in the paper that I'm sending you which said that being chubby might be healthier than being thin. It quotes the new statistics that show that people who are a little heavier than we skinny people tend to live longer. Now what I want to know is who is right — my doctor or this information that shows that being a little overweight doesn't matter?

DEAR READER — You're caught up in the human tendency to take one single observation and then extend it to encompass everybody and everything. One of my mottoes is "individualize, don't generalize." Many people have very good health reasons to be skinny and from the sound of your letter you're probably one of them.

The reason, from a medical point of view, to recommend that people stay thin or lose weight is to help them lower their blood pressure when it's elevated or to help them lower their blood sugar (glucose) when it's elevated. Or as a measure to correct abnormally high levels of blood cholesterol and other blood fats.

If a person were perfect in all these regards and had no other medical problems that were adversely affected by body weight, then it wouldn't be so important.

The study you're quoting refers to a general population. Many of these people have relatively normal blood pressures, blood fat and cholesterol levels. In their case, being moderately overweight didn't make any difference. But they're normal people who have no medical reasons to limit their body fat.

As you can see from The Health Letter number 15-8, Your Vital Blood Pressure, which I'm sending you, there are optimal levels for blood pressure. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. It's probably important to you to get your pressure to more optimal levels and control of body weight is one of the biggest aids you have.

Now if your blood pressure goes down and stays down and your blood glucose goes down and stays down to nice optimal levels and gaining weight doesn't affect these in any way, then it would be another matter. But you'll have to determine that on the basis of the tests that your doctor is doing for you as part of your follow-up program. I'd like to add one other comment for other readers. Don't read an article in the paper that talks about group studies and decide that it applies to you.

AT WIT'S END

For celebrities whose every malady must be shared with the free world, there should be a code name for hemorrhoids.

Although it's a condition that seems too "common" to be associated with presidents and third basemen in the World Series, it does occasionally happen and the results are always the same.

Everyone tries to be serious about it and sympathetic, but there's an unmistakable twinkle in Cronkite's eye, a headline that is catchier than most, and you just know that somewhere the sufferer will receive two or three anonymous Titanic Lifesavers to sit on.

Maybe I'm too sensitive about this, but I never permitted my children the heartbreak of diarrhea. Whenever they returned to school after an absence and needed a note of explanation I prudently opted for "upset stomach." One teacher circulated a rumor that it was because I did not know how to spell diarrhea, but she was quite vicious and thank goodness did not have tenure.

To be honest, hemh... that word... gives the celebrity a humanness I am not ready to admit to. In my heart, I have never believed that Miss America sweats, Robert Redford bleeds when he shaves, the Pope steps in chewing gum, or Sophia Loren gets an anchovy stuck in her front teeth.

Why, you ask, does the press have to print it all? Because, you silly duck, according to the First Amendment, it is your God-given right to know if your hero is sitting on a whoopee cushion from the waist down and acting like all is well with the world from the waist up.

Also, there is an unwritten law that hemorrhoids sell papers. I have personally admired the people who have visited Mexico and come home with constipation. It doesn't sell as many papers as diarrhea, but it's class... real class.

I'm not kidding about the code word. One of these days celebrities will be spared the humiliation of headlines, news bulletins, and eight seconds of a Carson monologue. The word will go out that the celebrity will not appear at an event because of a case of... I don't know... Creative Sitting, the Third Baseman's Disease, or something.

Maybe Washington could come up with a name for it. After all, people who call a defeat a "winning streak in remission" or refer to a scam as a "shift in power and resources" can come up with something.

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's first supermarkets opened in 1930.

Long before their 50th anniversary in 1980, supermarkets came to symbolize American ingenuity and abundance, a supermarketing magazine reported.

Hike bridges generations

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A coast-to-coast hike is bridging the generations as it spans the continent.

HikaNation is a Pacific-to-Atlantic backpacking project which counts among its 50 participants John Stout, a 68-year-old retired machinist, and Jamie Pyles, an 11-month-old girl being wheeled cross-country by her parents.

The trek, sponsored by the makers of Postum and the U.S. Department of Interior, started in San Francisco in early April and expects to reach the Washington Monument next spring. The 4,500-mile hike represents the first time a group this size has backpacked together across America. The aim is to focus attention on the need for more trails as more Americans become active hikers.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

November 18, 1980

Something you have always treated as a hobby could be put on a paying basis this coming year. It may, however, require someone with marketing experience to get it to the public's attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's important today to give that which requires priority top place on your list of duties. Poor scheduling could mess you up. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A leader will be required in your group involvements today, and it looks like you're the best one to handle the role. Take charge if others appear to be disorganized.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your goals can be achieved today, but perhaps not directly. Be flexible. Adjust your actions as necessitated by the trend of events.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Someone you're quite fond of could express some strong views today which you won't agree with. Rather than start a fracas, temper your response.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't let setbacks disturb you today, even if they appear insurmountable at first glance. You have the wherewithal to overcome challenges.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be prepared to make some compromises today in dealing with associates on a one-to-one basis. They'll cooperate if you will.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Friction could result with coworkers today if your collective labors are unequally distributed. Neither party should dodge assigned duties.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A friend won't appreciate it today if you make light of his or her problem. Strive to be helpful in positive, serious ways.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's likely you'll achieve what you start out to do today, but perhaps not to its fullest potential. Your normal industriousness may be throttled down.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your salesmanship can be enhanced today by avoiding pressure tactics. Bring a little humor into your presentation and, by all means, use the soft sell.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Should you feel something has to be readjusted in your business dealings today, try not to let too much time elapse before correcting it. The clock isn't your ally.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Guard against a tendency today to do things in fits and starts. Once you undertake something, complete it, then begin new projects.

Roloff says state has no say over 'divine'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Preacher Lester Roloff says a state agency set up to oversee human resources has no say over that which is divine — such as his homes for wayward children.

"The license from the state has to do with controlling my spiritual liberty," the evangelist testified Monday. "I believe the Lord reserves the right to give that license to me."

The courtroom was packed with Roloff supporters as the radio preacher continued his dogged fight against state law requiring licenses to run homes for wayward children. Some of his comments drew hushed "amens" from the audience.

"They are stepping out of bounds," he said of state officials. "They came to my church and declared war on me."

Roloff lost the most recent battle in the war but devised a scheme to assure himself another day in court. State District Judge Charles Mathews, who is hearing the current case, ruled in 1979 that Roloff needed the license to keep the homes open.

State officials sent to enforce the order in June 1979 were met by a Bible-wielding throng of preachers and Roloff supporters. They lined up in front of Roloff's People's Baptist Church, daring the officials to go in and take the children.

The standoff ended when Roloff moved his children out of the state. The transfer gave him time to develop a new plan by which he placed the homes under the wing of his church. They had been under his Roloff Evangelistic Enterprises.

The state filed a new suit. Assistant Attorney General David Young said Monday that Roloff is liable for $46,000 in civil penalties. He wants Mathews to again order Roloff to get a license or close the homes.

Young presented a brief case, merely stating what Roloff does not deny — that the homes are unlicensed.

Roloff said he is being victimized by the state. "There has been a personal vendetta against Lester Roloff," Roloff said. "I've been made a political football and everybody knows it."

The feisty preacher reeled off a list of state rules he said he could not obey, even if he did seek a license.

"We're not obligated to the state. We're obligated to the parents. I believe the state could keep itself real busy looking after its own wilderness camps," he said.

As always, Roloff clutched his well-worn Bible as he testified. He also held the state law that says he needs a license.

"Why would I swap (the Bible) off for such upgraded, rewritten human rule books such as this," he said, holding up the state law.

He also said the state "track record is not good."

"The state hatched out Jim Jones. He had plenty of licenses," he said.

Judge immune from lawsuit in oil case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A unanimous Supreme Court has ruled that persons accused of conspiring with a judge to violate someone's rights may be sued even though the judge may not be.

The judge's immunity does not shield all the alleged conspirators from being named in a civil rights lawsuit, the court said Monday in an opinion by Justice Byron R. White.

The court also ruled that judges believed to have engaged in such conspiracies can be forced to testify against the alleged co-conspirators being sued.

The decision means Texas millionaire rancher Clifton Manges and Texas businessmen Orville Dennis and Clarence Martens must defend themselves against a lawsuit filed by two oil field owners.

Sidney Sparks and R.L. Lynd owned and operated oil wells on land adjacent to property owned by Manges' Duval County Ranch Co.

Sparks and Lynd sued Manges, Dennis, Martens and then-Duval County Judge O.P. Carrillo, charging that the four men conspired to deprive them of their oil revenues.

The lawsuit alleged that Manges in 1972 sued Sparks and Lynd charging that their operations were polluting his land — but that his true motivation was to stop production long enough to end their oil leases.

The complaint filed by Sparks and Lynd alleged that Carrillo, acting at Manges' behest, entered an order in early 1973 halting oil production by Sparks and Lynd. Mertens and Dennis served as sureties for the injunction bond.

The production-halting order lasted for more than two years until it was overturned by a state appeals court in June 1975. The lawsuit claimed that Sparks and Lynd suffered real losses of 13,000 barrels of crude oil worth $169,000.

A federal trial judge ruled that Carrillo, because his part in the alleged conspiracy represented an official act taken within his judicial authority, was shielded by the doctrine of judicial immunity.

Because Carrillo was immune, the federal judge ruled that the other defendants could not be held subject to a civil rights suit. The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed that ruling as it applied to all of the defendants except Carrillo.

Carrillo was removed from office in 1976 by the Texas Senate and the Texas Supreme Court. He subsequently was imprisoned in a federal penitentiary for tax evasion.

"The potential harm to the public from denying immunity to private co-conspirators is outweighed by the benefits of providing a remedy against those private persons who participate in subverting the judicial process and in so doing inflict injury on other persons," White's opinion said.

He added that unlike the constitutional protection members of Congress receive for their official comments, "no similar constitutionally based privilege immunizing judges from being required to testify about their judicial conduct in third-party litigation."

Reagan posters good investment

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A University of Texas researcher says Ronald Reagan movie posters are blue chip investments, especially if the president-elect is pictured with the movie chimp Bonzo.

"I'm getting about eight to 10 calls a day from all over the country about Reagan posters," said Edwin Neal, a research associate at the UT Humanities Research Center.

Neal is a specialist in film posters. His collection includes 150 Reagan posters from 16 films starring the president-elect.

"Bedtime for Bonzo" has always been popular on college campuses," he said.

"It was so bad, it was good. For a long time it was a cult film," Neal said.

"A full-sized poster from 'Bedtime for Bonzo' could be worth up to $500, he said.

"Five years ago, you could have had two boxes of Reagan posters for $10," he said.

"Are Reagan posters sound investments?"

"Absolutely. I would say at any price, they're deflation proof. They have crossed over the line from theater memorabilia and have become presidential memorabilia," said Neal.

Neal defended Reagan's film career.

"Reagan never made any B-movies. He worked for Warner Brothers, and they didn't make B-movies. They didn't make 'Gone with the Wind,' but how can you call 'Klutie Rockne,' with Pat O'Brien a B-movie?" he said.

Revenues denied colleges with construction monies

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White said Monday 17 state colleges and universities now receiving money from the state property tax for construction may not receive additional general revenue funds.

"Even though only a small amount of money is available for allocation, the clear language of (the Texas Constitution) denies general revenue construction funds to universities participating in that allocation," said White's legal opinion.

The opinion was asked by Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, after the 1979 Legislature lowered the assessment ratio for the state ad valorem tax to .0001 percent, which White said would generate only $200 a year for the fund supporting the 17 schools.

White stressed that Mrs. Delco did not ask him to rule on the constitutionality of the Legislature's action and his opinion did not address that issue.

The state property tax has been used for a number of years to help state schools outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems acquire, construct and equip buildings.

White said a constitutional provision specifically says that the designated schools eligible to receive the tax money shall not receive any general revenue funds for construction.

STRANGER IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD. What could have been a weather sentinel or omen of change was revealed to members of the C.R. Hoover household recently. Resident yard birds, including crows, wrens, robins and sparrows, alerted the household early in the day that something was amiss in the sideyard. Closer observation of the trees around the home at 1016 Mary Ellen, revealed an very sedate and dignified hoot owl — not the every day variety of urban feathered creature. The fellow had taken up temporary residence in a tree. Lance DeFever, 16, grandson of the Hoover's and photographer for the Pampa High School Little Harvester, also chose a perch, on the roof, and waited for an hour for the "just right" portrait of the visitor. Later, the family discovered their friend had just stopped by for a nap. He was gone. Maybe ... he went elsewhere as an advance herald for the coming snow ... or maybe he knew, and was on his way South.

Pampa area residents earn spots in solar construction

WTSU - Three persons from the Pampa area have been selected as members of a team to construct an attached solar greenhouse. Team participants were selected from more than 40 persons who applied to join Stacy Reese, West Texas State University instructor of horticulture in the plant science department of the School of Agriculture; Dr. Ron McBride, assistant professor of industrial education and technology in the WTSU College of Education; and Dr. Earl Gilmore, research professor with the WTSU Alternative Energy Institute. The intensive weekend session during which participants will build a solar greenhouse on the south side of the Combs - Worley Cottage at the Amarillo Children's Home, 3400 S. Bowie, began with a training session on Friday evening. The Solar Greenhouse '80 Workshop, sponsored by the Texas Solar Energy Society and the WTSU Alternative Energy Institute, is one of 15 workshops conducted in Texas. AEI personnel plan to offer similar workshops during the spring, but participants will have to provide materials and costs. Participating team members registered Friday, at the children's home main building. Instruction was provided by Reese, McBride and Gilmore; Gary Beyer of Austin, project manager of Solar Greenhouse '80 with the Texas Solar Energy Society, and Meg Mooring, Ken Starcher and Pat Acker, research associates with the AEI. Each team member received a handbook and viewed a film and slides on the construction procedure. Construction began on the south side of the children's cottage Saturday. Team members viewed each phase of construction. Construction continued from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday. Solar greenhouses, according to the coordinators of the project, are built on the southern exposure of buildings to attract the maximum amount of the sun's energy. Fiberglass panels are used to filter the sunlight and to prevent hail damage. Heated water stored in barrels in the greenhouse gives off warm air which rises and is vented throughout the greenhouse and into the adjoining cottage. Attached solar greenhouses provide additional living space, a structure for growing plants and vegetables for most of the year and functions as a supplemental heating source for the building. Pampa area team members are William H. Lewis of Pampa and Melvin Dennis and Dean Wyatt, both of White Deer. Other participants are from Amarillo, Canyon, Spearman, Friona, and Perryton.

Soldier to have hero service

DALLAS (AP) — A full military funeral has been ordered for Raymond J. Bianchi II, a decorated "GI Joe kid" who died in an air crash near Cajro just days after telling his family he was leaving on a "secret mission." The Bianchis were told their son was one of 13 soldiers killed during the first overseas test of the United States' new Rapid Development Force. "He wanted to be what the uniform represented to him, a hero," said Dorothy Bianchi, Raymond's mother. "He wanted to be a hero in the best sense of that word." Funeral services for Bianchi are scheduled for today at St. Mark's Church in Plano with burial in Calvary Hill Cemetery here. The 21-year-old "always was militaristic," Mrs. Bianchi said. "He was a GI Joe kid. He grew up watching 'Combat' on television. Bianchi joined the military in 1977, three months after he graduated from high school and had planned to re-enlist, his mother said. He had been named "Airman of the Month" and received a citation for bravery.

Cut your own taxes

Plan now to reduce taxes

By Ray DeCrane

It's inventory time on your federal income tax return. By prudent planning now, it is possible for you to reduce your income tax both this year and next year. You can't do a good job in this operation unless you know the rules you have to live by. This much is certain: There are no major changes on the 1980 tax returns. On the other hand, you have a virtual guarantee that there will be a tax cut next year.

With this much known, it becomes a simple truism to shift as much income as you can to next year. With a lower rate in prospect for next year, the same level of income will cost you less in tax a year from now than it will at this time. The corollary to that proposition also becomes evident. Deductions will be more valuable to you this year than next. An extra dollar in deductions will reduce your tax more this year than in 1981.

This is the time of the year when business executives take inventory of their stock to determine where they stand from a profit and loss standpoint. They also make budgets for the new year at this time. In these inflationary times, when taxes take such a high percentage of everyone's income, isn't it time for individuals to do this type of planning? In this four-part mini-series, suggestions will be made for improving your tax picture both this year and next. (NEXT: Don't waste those deductions.) (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.) The 1981 edition of "Cut Your Own Taxes and Save" by Ray DeCrane will be available after Jan. 1, 1980. Reserve your copy now. Send a check or money order for $1.50 (plus 50 cents postage and handling) to "Cut Your Own Taxes" c/o this newspaper P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Rate of home building heads downward

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The rate of home building is heading down again, according to Kenneth Thygeson, chief economist of the U.S. League of Savings Associations. "Next year will not be a good year," he said.

Thygeson believes the first half of 1981 will be very weak, and the improvement he foresees later in the year is likely to bring starts back only to an annual rate of 1.4 million or 1.5 million.

That first-half weakness, as he sees it, will be a continuation of a decline, and which could drop starts during the winter to an annual rate just above 1 million — 1.2 million at most.

"We see a fairly substantial dip that should show up in the October starts (when figures are reported) and which should persist into next February or March," he said. "There'll be no reprieve this winter."

Such extreme pessimism may not be as widespread by the mid-1980s, when it is hoped new building and financing techniques might bring some relief. But for a year or so, the scene is not a happy one.

The reason, lenders say, is high interest rates, about 14.5 percent at most savings and loan associations but with some already exceeding 15 percent. Atop those rates might be up-front charges.

A Connecticut savings bank, for example, now charges $150 merely to consider a mortgage application. If it is granted, the borrower is confronted with two or three points — percents of the total mortgage — that must be paid before the borrower ever lives in the house.

When very stiff terms are "offered," said Thygeson, no terms really are being offered. "The lenders are telling people 'we don't have money — look elsewhere.'" But where?

Some realtors report that in recent months more than half their deals have been consummated with the help of seller financing, and it appears that some of these mortgages might be acceptable for resale.

The Federal National Mortgage Association has indicated it will buy some seller-financed paper that meets its specifications and is serviced by a third party, such as a savings and loan.

They are swearing by boots in the Big Apple

NEW YORK (AP) — Texans aren't the only ones who swear by their Justins, their Noconas and their Tony Lamas. Two transplanted Dallasites have found the boot business booming deep in the heart of Manhattan.

Robin Steakley and Al Martinez headed East with the idea that New Yorkers, although probably not yet ready for the flash of Cutler Bill's, might be hankering for a new look on their feet.

The result, some two years later, is a boot boutique on New York's booming West Side successful enough to have just expanded into the onetime dry cleaner's store next door to add Stetson hats and other western wear.

And the owners of To Boot and the neighboring Clothes To Boot claim they are not worried in the least that the boots at the base of their business might be just a fad.

"We're seeing a tremendous increase in repeat business — so it's totally transcended faddism," Steakley said. "They're fun; they're comfortable and they make a little statement."

Martinez added that the steel shank built into the sole of all western boots makes them perfect for walking, a big plus in New York where the average resident pounds his shoes along blocks and blocks of sidewalks every day.

The boot store carries only Texas-made brands.

The Texans admit to having learned all they know about boots only since they decided to set up shop in New York, but they have used their Texas heritage to advantage in advertising and publicity.

Video revolution upsets structure in upheaval

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The video revolution is finally beginning to look like a revolution. I mean a real revolution, with violent upheaval of the status quo and a reordering of the social structure.

First came cable. Suddenly, the Tube was forced to distribute something other than the narrow fare of commercial TV. We got movies. Uncut, uncensored movies. Cable was our Magna Carta.

Then, satellites brought us an all-sports network, Ted Turner's superstation, the Atlanta Braves, old movies, an all-news network.

Now there is the promise of complete upheaval. I'm talking blood-in-the-shag-carpet revolt here. Its name is teletext.

The CBS Broadcast Group, in association with local stations KNXT (a CBS-owned affiliate) and KCET (a public TV station) announced last week the beginning of a teletext experiment in Los Angeles that has huge implications for the TV dens across America.

Teletext is a service that allows viewers to order printed information on the home TV. Say you're watching "That's Incredible" and you want to know the mortality rate of TV stuntmen. Teletext, eventually, could enable you to punch a button and find the answer.

Teletext involves the transmission of signals with the TV signal. A decoder box enables the viewer to block out, wholly or partially, the normal picture and order teletext data — weather reports, news headlines, community calendars, whatever happens to be programmed.

The Los Angeles experiment will initially involve about 100 sets and will begin next spring. The difference between this teletext test and others that have occurred around the country is that the L.A. experiment is meant to find viewers' feelings about content. Previous experiments were conducted to work out technical kinks.

"We became boot experts real fast," Steakley said. "The media took an immediate liking to the store, because we were sort of different from the average New York businessman."

Martinez said he designed the store to avoid the western cliches that were at the time becoming almost commonplace in New York. "I'd gone to Saks and Bloomingdales and all of the department stores. They were still treating it as a costume," he said. "The boots themselves are western, so why not put them in a backdrop that was plain?"

The boots are the show in To Boot, a wall of them stretching from floor to ceiling.

The store opened in January 1979, and Steakley said in the first year the take exceeded $1 million.

Clothes To Boot opened late this summer.

Retailing is a new experience for both partners. Steakley said they had been tossing around the idea of moving to New York for some months before coming up with the idea of a boot store.

"We were sort of antsy to make a move," he said. "If you're going to be alive in the United States, you might as well live in New York."

Steakley said it's the challenge of it that's exciting, a feeling that a business that works in New York could be successful anywhere.

"To be successful in New York, you have to be the best at whatever you're doing," he said.

Some of the boots were designed by Martinez, including a model for men expressly made to meet the conservative demands of Wall Street. The fancy styling is at the top of the boot so it can be hidden by trousers.

The merchandise carried in Clothes To Boot also is intended to take care of New Yorkers' needs, not transplant Texas.

Looking ahead to a long New York winter, for example, sweaters take up far more space than they would in a store in Texas.

Steakley said the ratio of eastern to western wear in the clothing store is now 70-30, but the western items have had enough success for them to plan to increase the share to 50-50.

The owners admit that "Texas chic" as evidenced by hit movies and television series has played a part in their success, but they deny it is on the downturn.

"There were people who were predicting that last year, that Texas chic was on its way out," Steakley said.

He added that those people were proven wrong.

The owners keep a handwritten list on a yellow pad of their celebrity customers, and it includes Mia Farrow, Mick Jagger, John Lennon and Yoko Ono, Diane Keaton, Arthur Miller and the entire Isley Brothers soul group.

Steakley claimed the business' main problem so far has been that demand nationwide for Texas-made boots is outstripping the supply by far.

"We're down to the nubbins now," he said about To Boot's inventory. "We're literally turning people away."

Rosen denies wrongdoing

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros General Manager Al Rosen says he is only guilty of bad judgment in connection with an alleged New Jersey casino gambling scam.

Rosen said he was not involved in anything illegal, "and I will stand on that until my dying day."

"If I had done something wrong I would have been indicted," he said. "I used bad judgment, that was my crime. When I dissed it with the authorities, those were the exact words they used. Nobody likes to admit to making a bad deal, but I have nothing to hide. This whole thing has shattered me," he said. "I just want to get on with the business of running a baseball team. I certainly don't feel my reputation has been tarnished."

Rosen's name was mentioned over the weekend in Atlantic City reports on an alleged major credit scam involving three casinos, including Bally's Park Place where Rosen worked from last December until October.

Rosen acknowledged he signed cards approving credit at the casino but said he had nothing to hide. He said New Jersey authorities assured him he will not be prosecuted in the case.

Oakland rallies past Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — The amazing comeback of Jim Plunkett continued — at the expense of the Seattle Seahawks.

The Oakland Raiders' storied quarterback had a mediocre passing game Monday night and, for three quarters at least, it looked like Plunkett's 1980 magic wasn't going to work.

But he did everything right when he had to in the final quarter in a 19-17 comeback victory over the Seahawks.

The nationally televised game was Oakland's sixth straight triumph, all behind the rejuvenated Plunkett, the 10-year National Football League veteran who got a chance to play when Dan Pastorini broke a leg.

"You have to give them credit for hanging in there," Seattle quarterback Jim Zorn sighed.

Oakland stayed in sole possession of first place in the American Football Conference's Western Division — at 8-3 — on Chris Bahr's 28-yard field goal with 56 seconds left.

The Raiders trailed 17-7 early in the fourth quarter.

"It was a great comeback," Oakland Coach Tom Flores said. "I'm proud. Jim Plunkett came through in the clutch. And when we had to protect him, we did."

"This game," Plunkett said, "was the toughest we've had in the last six weeks. It's the first time we've had to come back. But we're a good football team, and we came back in the second half."

Plunkett's statistics were 9 completions in 22 attempts for 135 yards and no touchdowns.

First free agents recalled

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent
The names that came over the loud speaker were familiar ones — Dave Winfield and Don Sutton, both potential future millionaires.

The most important names were those that went unmentioned ... George Toolson ... Danny Gardella ... Curt Flood.

They're the guys who fought the battles in the trenches. They struggled and lost, and so today baseball players owe these three relatively obscure pioneers a tribute.

Every time they bank another part of their lavish paychecks, they should pause and give thanks for these stubborn souls who first defied baseball's archaic, sweatshop rules and allowed Andy Messersmith and Dave McNally to get the glory of the kill.

Toolson, Gardella, Flood. Where are they now? Who among us takes time to know or remember?

Baseball's fifth free agent draft took only 59 minutes Thursday in the plush Terrace Room of New York's Plaza Hotel. When it was over, 48 players were on the shelf — available to the highest bidder.

But they — not the baseball clubs — had the final say.

Winfield, a power-hitting outfielder from San Diego, was the choicest. The reported asking price: $13 million for 10 years. George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees was said ready to cover.

Dave W. Roberts, a catcher and utility man with Texas and a career batting average of .240, was picked by the most teams — 12 — and reportedly is asking $1.3 million a year.

Baseball is in the fifth year of this new and enlightened era. For close to a century, players fell victim to a most restrictive and inequitable device — the reserve clause.

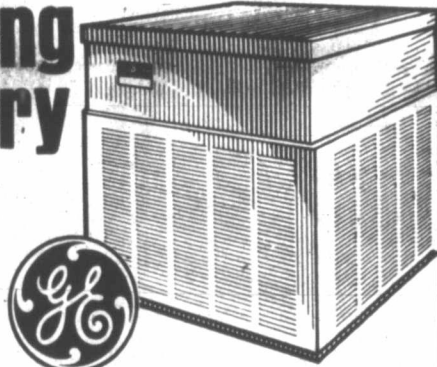

This clause made a player the property of a club for life, or until traded or sold. The player had no freedom to strike or to go to another team of his choosing. He was literally a slave of the establishment and he had no redress in the courts which shrugged its shoulders and said: "It's only a game — don't mess with it."

But people did. Gardella was a .250 hitter for the New York Giants who was expelled from baseball for jumping to the Mexican League during World War II. He fought the game on antitrust grounds for years before finally taking $60,000 to drop the suit. Toolson, an obscure Yankee, met similar fate when he went to court after being sent to the minors.

Then came Flood, a St. Louis Cardinal outfielder who sued baseball for $3.1 million after being traded to the Philadelphia Phillies. In 1972 his case was rejected by the Supreme Court. He went to Europe, and never played again.

Bobby Layne of Texas scored 28 points against Missouri in the 1946 Cotton Bowl.

Texas Briefs

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP)—Jury selection began Monday in the bribery trial of two men indicted during a grand jury investigation of theft and fraud in the Fort Worth school district.

J. W. Swackhamer, the district's plumbing shop foreman, and Harry V. Bates, owner of Bates Tool Co. and Nesco Air Conditioning, will be tried simultaneously.

Bates is charged with offering and giving a bribe to Swackhamer in September 1979. Swackhamer is charged with bribery and perjury in connection with a kickback from Bates.

Swackhamer was suspended from his position in the plumbing shop, which the grand jury cited as the location of a scheme that scalped thousands of dollars from the district by charging inflated prices for goods bought at discount rates.

INTRODUCES Venture Oak

AMERICAN DREW
BOX HP3, HIGH POINT, NORTH CAROLINA 27261
A DIVISION OF SPERRY AND HUTCHINSON FURNITURE, INC.

Each piece is totally individual...yet, creates an integrated whole. This is what we have strived for, and achieved in the American Drew Venture Oak Collection.

The total collection can be used in three different ways: The first, to achieve a formal and elegant look. The second, a less formal and more country look. The third, a blending of the two for your own uniquely personal electric look.

The entire collection has a glowing amber-tone finish with a great deal of highlighting and antiquing. The finish evokes the lovely look of candlelight on a precious heirloom, or a hearth fire on a cold winter night.
