PAMPA — The investigation into an alleged 68-year-old murder mystery has been temporarily put on hold, police officials said Thursday.

So far, no physical evidence has been found to support claims made in a note about the supposed murder of Loax Manderz and burial in the basement of 403 N. Ward.

A note signed "Lottery Samson" claiming Manderz was murdered by "Three Fingers Mallory" on April 4, 1928, was found by contractors Tuesday in the basement of the home owned by Ruth Hall.

West Texas A&M University professor Dr. John "Chip" Poluhowich, a forensic medicine specialist, toured the site Thursday.

Poluhowich told investigators he would attempt to borrow a seismic locator, a device similar to sonar. With the machine, investigators could determine if a body were buried beneath the concrete floor without having to demolish it further.

PAMPA — A bone marrow drive will be held Tuesday from noon to 6 p.m. in the St. Vincent de Paul Catholic School gymnasium.

Though the drive was started to benefit leukemia patient Bruce Madsen, the brother-in-law of Pampa resident Michelle Andorfer, it could potentially help any number of ill patients around the world.

At the drive, potential donors have two tablespoons of blood taken. The blood is then tested for human leukocyte antigen (HLA) types. Should that type match that of a patient in need, the donor is then contacted.

Marrow would be harvested in Fort Worth in an outpatient procedure.

Potential donors must be between 18 and 60 years old. The test is free for the first 50 people; a $20 charge is assessed for those following.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House urged liquor companies today to continue abiding by a half century voluntary ban on broadcast ads for hard liquor as one distiller began airing commercials in Texas.

"The president feels the ... ban on advertising by hard liquor manufacturers is a good thing and has helped protect children," presidential spokesman Mike McCurry told reporters.

Seagram, run by a family of important Democrats, has begun a month-long series of 30-second commercials for Crown Royal whiskey on an NBC station in Corpus Christi, Texas.

McLean council hears economic development plan

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

McLean should initiate a 1/2-cent sales tax and give out tax-delinquent lots in an effort to stimulate the local economy, a Chamber of Commerce representative told the city council Thursday night.

Rick Reeser appeared before the council Thursday to report on a June 4 chamber session with a Southwestern Public Service economic development adviser.

The chamber developed its recommendations to the council June 6.

A tax should be initiated, said Reeser, to put McLean on an even playing field with surrounding communities.

"All the other communities around where we sometimes have to go to get things have one," Reeser said, citing taxes in Pampa, Shamrock and Amarillo.

Tax revenue would be dedicated to economic development, either hiring a developer or funding special projects, he continued.

The council should also consider giving tax-delinquent properties to interested parties who are willing to complete a minimum amount of improvements within a designated time, Reeser said.

For example, he said, at least $20,000 of improvements should be completed within nine months.

"That produces taxable income ... and keeps money circulating through town," Reeser said.

Coincidentally, neighboring Lefors is pursuing a similar economic development plan. The city council and school board are considering offering free lots for a promise of construction within six months.

The council tabled discussion and action to their next meeting.

In other action, council members accepted two bids totaling $1,750 from Billy Bybee for tax delinquent property and agreed to sign over land adjacent to the county barn to Gray County.

The council also decided to charge a local businessman full price for his garbage rates.

Randy Stewart had been paying $12.50 instead of the full $81.25 as he started a new downtown business. The council had decided two years ago to assist him as the business began, but felt Thursday that enough time had passed.

In other business, the council commended City Superintendent Fred Smith and crew for their rapid work in installing gas lines to the old Dairy Queen building, now the North Fork Steak House and Grill. Installation was completed in seven days.

Mayor Bob Neslage, right, and Kenneth Reagans, left, assistant warden at the Jordan Unit, pose with the pig Ursula, who will star in the greased pig race at the Top O' Texas Jubilee on Saturday. The Berkshire pig hails from the Tucker Berks Pig Farm at Lefors. Reagans is serving as chairman of the Jubilee.

Top O' Texas Jubilee schedules activities Saturday and Sunday at Recreation Park

A greased pig is the star of special events planned for the first annual Top O' Texas Jubilee Saturday through Sunday.

Kenneth Reagan, president and chairman of this year's fund raiser, and Mayor Bob Neslage will coach the greased pig race and assist in other events in the rodeo arena and at Clyde Carruth Pavilion.

The purpose of the fund raiser is to help the Southside Senior Citizens in their continued attempts to increase their building fund for a community center.

Children ranging in ages seven through 14 will be participating in a race, led by the pig, which will be shaved and greased with lard, then released in the arena to defy each of the children in pursuit, according to Jubilee coordinator Floye Christensen.

Young participants will be involved in most competition; however, the two days of old-fashioned fun will be enjoyed by all ages.

Activities will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday at Recreation Park and continue through the day. On Sunday, following a morning worship service, activities will begin at 9 a.m. and continue until about 4 p.m.

Other activities are a fishing tournament, hay scramble, volleyball tournament, tug-of-war pull, antique car show, basketball tournament, talent and fashion show, crafts and food booths and a chili cook-off. Booths will be set up in the Clyde Carruth Pavilion.

A fashion and talent show will be held at 7:30 p.m.

Saturday in the Clyde Carruth Pavilion. Cost is $2 for adults and $1 for children, with children under 5 admitted free. Door prizes will be given.

A community church service, for all citizens, will begin at 7 a.m. Sunday in the Top O' Texas Rodeo Arena. Gospel hymns will be heard from a 100-man choir, Christensen said. Practice for the volunteer choir will be at 5:30 p.m. Saturday in the Central Baptist Church auditorium.

The Jubilee is sponsored by the Southside Senior Citizens Organization, which has set a goal to build recreational facilities to serve all persons in the community.

"We want to build a place for the older people to meet each day to enjoy their table games, watch television and just have good fellowship times," Christensen said.

The proposed building will provide a place for young people to gather, play basketball or participate in other indoor sports, and will be used by families who wish to hold reunions.

Under the leadership of members of the Community Unity Organization, approximately $26,000 has been raised thus far, said Christensen. There are 3.5 acres of land already designated for the center.

Community Unity Organization is a volunteer membership. Meetings are scheduled weekly at 6:30 p.m. on Thursdays at the present Southside Senior Citizens building at 438 West Crawford in Pampa.

Morales: Parents can teach driver's ed

AUSTIN (AP) - Nearly all Texas parents can teach their teenagers how to drive in order to get a license before they turn 18, Attorney General Dan Morales said in an opinion released today.

James Wilson, director of the Department of Public Safety, asked Morales whether a recent change to the driver's education law allowing parents to teach approved driver's education course applies only to those teaching their children at home. Morales said nothing in the new law limits the provision to home-school parents.

Laureen Chernow, a spokeswoman for the DPS, said the department had not reviewed Morales' opinion. But she said it will take some time for the department to develop rules and training packages for the new program.

"This is not something that is going to happen tomorrow," she said.

Farm Bureau asks residents to sign petition in favor of property tax relief

The president of Gray-Roberts County Farm Bureau is calling on local property owners and homeowners to sign a petition in support of property tax relief. Petitions are located in the County Farm Bureau office.

"The property tax remains one of the most unfair taxes levied on Texas citizens," said Joe VanZandt, local farmer. "It taxes non-liquid assets that have very little to do with the property owner's ability to pay."

Gov. Bush appointed a 17-member Citizens Committee in May to explore alternatives to the property tax.

Texas Farm Bureau President Bob Stallman serves on that committee. Bush said a state income tax is not an option, but he is interested in other tax alternatives.

The petition states: "We, the undersigned residents of Gray-Roberts County, are very concerned about our property taxes. We believe the property tax is an unfair method to fund public schools, and it discriminates against home and land owners."

"We strongly urge that a more broad-based and equitable means of taxation be substituted for the current property tax. We applaud your efforts to find such an alternative without considering a state income tax."

"We must let the Citizen's Committee know how we feel about property tax," VanZandt said.

He urged all local property owners and homeowners, TFB members and non-members alike, to sign the petition at the Gray-Roberts County Farm Bureau office located at 1132 S. Hobart in Pampa.

"This is one of those times when citizens and taxpayers have a chance to make a difference," he concluded.

Area students win honors at state 4-H Roundup

Six Gray County 4-H members were among 2,500 outstanding youth from across the state who competed in the 1996 Texas 4-H Roundup at Texas A&M University June 3-7.

More than $750,000 in scholarships sponsored by the Texas 4-H Foundation were awarded at this year's Roundup. Amanda Kludt, daughter of Fran and Eileen Kludt of Pampa, was awarded a $10,000 Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo 4-H scholarship. Texas has the nation's largest 4-H scholarship program which receives tremendous support from private donors.

The young people applying for scholarships were judged on their 4-H experiences, leadership skills, projects, community service, personal needs and other qualifications pertaining to high school academic performance and college entrance exam scores. Scholarships were granted in agriculture, life sciences and unrestricted categories.

The Texas 4-H Fabric and Fashion Design Competition and the Texas 4-H Fashion Show also took place during Roundup. Kim McDonald, daughter of Lee and Katie McDonald, earned a $150 scholarship provided by Wrangler for her second place textile design entry. Angie Davenport, daughter of Roger and Shari Davenport of Lefors, earned fifth place with her accessory design entry.

Kludt earned third place in the Casual Construction category of the Texas 4-H Fashion Show. In addition, she was named first place winner in the Cotton Construction category and overall best cotton entry. As a result, she received approximately $500 in scholarships and savings bonds for her efforts. More than 100 contestants exhibited their knowledge and skills in purchasing, construction and modeling techniques in the Texas 4-H Fashion Show.

Cory Jackson, son of Barry and Lendi Jackson of Lefors, placed third in the State 4-H Photography contest with a colored landscape print. The State 4-H Photography Contest is open to 4-H members of all ages and is conducted in conjunction with Texas 4-H Roundup.

Three Gray County 4-H members joined other outstanding 4-H'ers in competing in one of the 44 contests by displaying their speaking abilities, decision-making skills and talents.

Amanda Kludt won first place in Fashion Show-Cotton Construction, as well as winning a $10,000 scholarship.

Kim McDonald won second place in Fabric and Fashion Design and competed in Textile Design.

Nonnie James, daughter of Gary and Sharon James of Pampa, and Bryant Smith, son of Joe and Debbie Smith of Pampa, earned third place in the Entomology demonstration contest. Jessica Fish, daughter of Jay Dee and Becky Fish of McLean, competed in the Sheep and Goat demonstration contest.

The Texas 4-H Food Show was another highlight of 4-H Roundup. Barry Brauchi, son of Ron and Donna Brauchi of Pampa, competed in the Fruits and Vegetables category. 4-H members in the Food Show prepared a dish and participated in an interview about nutrition, preparation principles and project experiences.

This year in addition to the competition, participants learned the value of helping others through "Three Days of Sharing." 4-H members from across the state donated canned goods, clothing and eyeglasses which were shared with local charities in the College Station area.

For more information on the 4-H youth development program, contact the Gray County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

State briefs

Congressmen pressured to sign anti-abortion pledge

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A congressman from San Antonio says he will not bow to pressure from anti-abortion groups and sign an anti-abortion pledge in order to become a delegate to the Republican National Convention.

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, whose name was submitted by Bob Dole's organization for ratification as a national delegate from his congressional district, is being pressured to sign the pledge.

Smith, who has supported abortion rights, said Thursday he will not sign although he wants to be a national delegate.

Anti-abortion groups want national delegates from Texas congressional districts to sign a pledge to support the strong anti-abortion language from the 1992 Republican platform as well as vowing to back only a "pro-life vice presidential nominee."

Six universities converge on single campus

THE WOODLANDS (AP) — The state's first public-private university partnership will allow students to earn degrees from any of six Texas universities without actually visiting the main campuses.

The so-called University Center, based at Montgomery College south of Conroe, will bring to the relatively new community college the resources of Texas A&M University, University of Houston, University of Houston-Downtown, Prairie View A&M University, Sam Houston State University and Texas Southern University.

Some 45 bachelor's and master's programs initially will be offered at the $11 million, three-story center. Montgomery College opened just last August, the latest branch of the North Harris Montgomery district that also includes schools in north Houston, Kingwood and Tomball. With nearly 20,000 students and another 12,000 taking adult-education courses, the community college is the seventh-largest in the state.

Trains arrive in Dallas — will Dallas climb aboard?

DALLAS (AP) — There have been no local passenger trains in Dallas since the 1950s, although now the city is on track with a new transit system that's ready to roll.

Today, a shiny new 40-car fleet of commuter trains hit the tracks, and the big question is whether car-lovin', pickup truck-huggin' Texans will climb aboard.

"In Texas, everybody likes to be independent, to have their own car, have their own truck, be their own boss," said Chad Beattie, who works as a furniture salesman near downtown.

But even Beattie said he'll give the train a try. And that is the kind of adventurous spirit the Dallas Area Rapid Transit is counting on. DART hopes suburban commuters will board trains just as nonchalantly as livestock.

State goes ahead with tobacco lawsuit following judge's ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas will push ahead with its $4 billion federal lawsuit against the tobacco industry after a state judge put on hold an industry lawsuit that had sought to fend off the case.

"We now essentially have the green light to proceed in the federal court which is really what we have been arguing all along," Texas Attorney General Dan Morales said Thursday.

But State District Judge Joseph Hart refused Morales' request to dismiss tobacco companies' state lawsuit against him, in which the industry claimed he oversteps his authority in the federal case.

The judge said he wants to see how the federal court rules first.

Hart also refused to fine the tobacco companies for Morales called their "frivolous" lawsuit.

"I do not find the plaintiffs' pleadings were brought for the purpose of harassment, to cause unnecessary delay, to increase the cost of litigation or for any other improper purpose," Hart said in a letter to lawyers in the case.

The tobacco companies filed their state court lawsuit last year, trying to prevent Morales from suing them. They contend he doesn't have the authority to bring much of the federal lawsuit.

But Morales sued them anyway.

The lawsuit was filed in March in Texarkana, alleging the tobacco industry violated federal racketeering, wire fraud and conspiracy laws; federal and state antitrust laws; and state consumer protection laws.

Morales is seeking reimbursement of Medicaid money spent on treating tobacco-related illnesses and a halt to advertising that he says targets children.

The tobacco industry has denied the allegations against it.

Hart said he was setting aside the tobacco companies' state lawsuit because even if he ruled, his decision wouldn't address all the issues raised in the federal lawsuit.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The Dallas Morning News on church fires:

A late Sunday-night fire gutted the attic and darkened the sanctuary of the New Light House of Prayer in Greenville. The suspicious blaze was No. 31 in a series of fires at African-American churches throughout the South. The Greenville Fire Department considers the New Light House blaze, and another church fire early Monday, to be "acts of local vandalism."

That they may be, but they point to a highly troubling national problem. Some subset of Americans apparently believes it is acceptable to burn down African-American churches. Formal conspiracy or no, dozens of black houses of worship are being torched while churches with predominately white congregations go unscathed. Some sort of social poison is at work.

Black clergy and multiracial religious groups want federal authorities to aggressively investigate the fires. President Clinton and top U.S. law enforcement officials have finally acknowledged the seriousness of these arson attacks. The increased attention is well-warranted. Because many law enforcement agencies have historically mistreated African-Americans, law officers should show sensitivity to the concerns of church members.

Fighting the poison of violent racism will be as difficult as catching the criminals. Generalized social outrage at the arsons probably won't deter the type of criminals who gloat over such anonymous attacks. A few perpetrators may be teenagers craving attention. Others likely live on the margins of society — underemployed or undereducated, clinging to some supremacist ideology that makes them feel powerful. From such a distorted perspective, the bombings look heroic. Whatever their motivations, the arsonists must be caught and punished.

With racist beliefs shared by so many fringe groups today, from the Freeman in Montana to white separatist Christian Identity faithful, the federal government must regard violent racist cults as a top domestic security threat. Intelligence gathered from the fires may help prevent other kinds of crimes later.

In the meantime, members of nonblack churches can use this time to cross the racial divide. Local councils of churches can help devise security plans for members. Sympathetic, mostly white congregations could take a special collection to help churches that must rebuild.

An attack on any group's sanctuary is an attack on religious freedom. And that must not stand.

Fort Worth Star-Telegram on access to FBI files:

All indications are that the latest election-year flap between Republicans and the White House — about the fact that an Army civilian investigator in 1993 obtained FBI files on 341 people who had had access to the executive mansion in previous administrations (most of them, obviously, Republicans) — is a tempest about a mistake.

Those who filed away the files say that no one in the political end of the White House even knew about it. Evidently no use, proper or improper, was made of the files.

So maybe it was really just another stupid mistake, as when political functionaries in the Bush White House sought out passport records of Bill Clinton and his mother in 1992. (In 1994, a special prosecutor reported that no laws had been broken.)

What needs to be addressed by this and future administrations is the ease (almost 24 years after Watergate and more than 24 years after the death of J. Edgar Hoover, who is said to have used FBI materials to blackmail several presidents) with which private and personal information from FBI files could be misused. In this case, no harm was done. But it should be much harder than it is for such information to be served up from an FBI underling to a White House underling upon a request based on an error.

It is, as former Reagan staffer Elizabeth Board said, "appalling" that information is just "floating around for people to look at." Board said that she assumed FBI files were tightly guarded. It's a natural assumption.

The White House has apologized. So should the FBI. But more than an apology, those affected and other citizens need better assurance that security files will not be "floating around" and liable to be misused.

Berry's World

"GREAT! Now, could you give us your Gettysburg thing in a 10-second sound bite?"

Viewpoints Of politics and procreation ...

The story is told that John F. Kennedy, on the night of the 1960 election, told his pregnant wife and sister, "OK, girls, you can remove those pillows from under your dresses now - we've won."

Was the first lady rereading that history before she gave her interview to Time magazine? Responding to the question, "You've had trouble having kids. Have you ever considered adoption?" She said, "Well, we have talked about it. I must say we're hoping that we have another child."

The interviewer, clearly startled, said, "Are you still hoping you'll have a second child?" Mrs. Clinton laughed and replied, "I have to tell you I would be surprised but not disappointed. My friends would be appalled, I'm sure. But I think it would be terrific."

Here we go again. Mrs. Clinton is playing the femininity card. Whenever she thinks it may be politically useful, this tough, combative woman drapes herself in the mantle of femininity — or at least the kind of femininity she imagines the great unwashed prefer. During the 1992 campaign, she styled herself "Mrs. Hillary Clinton." Only when the pair were safely in the White House did the nation learn that the first lady goes by the name of Hillary Rodham Clinton.

When she testified before Congress on behalf of her health-care overhaul bill, Rodham Clinton maintained that she was speaking as "a mother, a wife and a daughter." Those who actually read the legislation thought she sounded more like a commiserator. And when she ran into trouble following public disclosure of her unethical cattle futures trading, she posed for magazine covers arranging the flowers at a State dinner (what she thinks we think first ladies should confine themselves to).

But adoption and a possible pregnancy must be considered the trump femininity card. And just before an election, too. What a coincidence! Asked if she and her husband were talking more about adoption now than in the past, Mrs. Clinton said, "Yeah, I think we're talking about it more now. We'd obviously wait to get serious about it until after the election." No doubt.

After dropping her bombshell about trying to conceive, Mrs. Clinton went on at some length about the (more realistic) possibility of adopting a child, stressing that she has "worked hard to promote adoption, particularly for older kids, and across racial lines, and for kids with special needs."

Of course, with Mrs. Clinton, caution is indicated before taking at face value her descriptions of how hard she's worked. She said she did very little work for Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, but the famous billing records suggest otherwise. As for her hard work promoting adoption, that, too, is a matter of interpretation.

Mrs. Clinton has certainly participated in a few photo opportunities. She helped Mother Teresa open a home for unwed mothers in Washington, and for that, she deserves praise. She invited some adoptive families to the White House for tea to observe National Adoption Week, and she taped some public service spots to promote adoption of special needs kids. Is that working hard?

Mrs. Clinton further claims that she has labored to ease transracial adoption. That is not a matter of interpretation. That is simply not true.

Former Sen. Howard Metzenbaum (D-Ohio) spend his career promoting liberal causes. But when it came to transracial adoptions, he found himself at loggerheads with his usual liberal allies — including the Clinton administration. Metzenbaum shepherded passage of legislation that would have made it illegal to discriminate on the basis of race in making adoption placements. (Black children wait much longer in foster care than white children because only black parents are considered.) He was dismayed to discover, after the bill became law, that the Department of Health and Human Services, headed by Rodham Clinton friend Donna Shalala, had issued "guidelines" on the application of the law that completely eviscerated it. The guidelines, instead of insisting that black children be placed with the first available family, called upon child welfare agencies to do more to "recruit" black adoptive parents.

"They've gutted my bill," said an embittered Metzenbaum later.

It's no more than Mrs. Clinton has done to the truth.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today in History

Today is Friday, June 14, the 166th day of 1996. There are 200 days left in the year. This is Flag Day.

Today's Highlight in History:
On June 14, 1777, the Continental Congress in Philadelphia adopted the Stars and Stripes as the national flag.

On this date:
In 1775, the United States Army was founded.

In 1801, former American Revolutionary War Gen. Benedict Arnold died in London.

In 1841, the first Canadian parliament opened in Kingston.

In 1846, 150 years ago, a group of U.S. settlers in Sonoma proclaimed the Republic of California.

In 1917, Gen. John Pershing arrived in Paris during World War I.

In 1922, Warren G. Harding became the first president heard on radio, as Baltimore station WEAR broadcast his speech dedicating the Francis Scott Key memorial at Fort McHenry.

So who's in charge here anyway?

Thoughts about life and its fragility flood the mind. "Flood"? Shows you the appeal of aqueous images during a sure-enough drought.

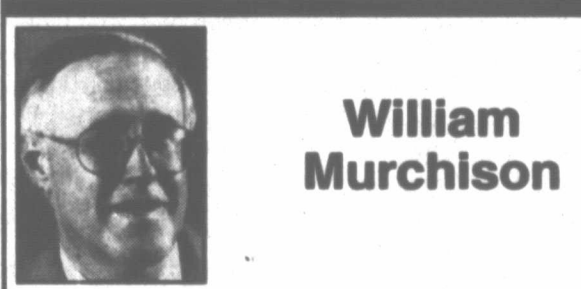

In the early '90s, the clouds dripped fatness — to quote the Psalmist. No longer. Nowadays a good cloud is hard to find. With the glee that bad news bearers always experience, the media assure us We Are In for It.

What, no rain? In the '90s, this could qualify as a violation of basic constitutional rights. Why doesn't someone headquartered inside the Washington Beltway press a button, throw a switch — make it rain?

The inescapable reason: There are matters beyond human, not to mention governmental, control. Droughts, floods — these things happen. Nature, as we continue to call those forces external to the human body, changes moods: pampering one moment, punishing the next. And without reference to human desires or deserts.

The rhythm of drought-fatness-drought is built into the Southwestern life. You don't fight it; you endure it. It helps, a little at least, to have lived through the 'Fifties — "the time it never rained," as Elmer Kelton titled his fine novel about the period.

No one over 50 needs corroboration for such memories. Texas, in the '50s, burned to a cinder. As usual, crops withered, and cattle died. Not a few Texans went through the whole period without air-conditioning. Sometimes a water-cooled fan in the main bedroom blew through the house; otherwise there was the open window, where a passing breeze might be lured inside and held for ransom.

To get really cool, you plunked down 9¢ at the Palace Theatre and feasted your eyes on Three Coins in the Fountain or House of Wax. You sat in the shade a lot. On the worst nights, all hope of sleep renounced, the neighbors drifted outdoors, there to exchange consolations and news.

Then for some reason the drought — as we spelled it in those days — finally broke. The time it never rained became, in the spring of '57, the time it never quit raining. This new state of affairs we silently appropriated, as we had the old. It was how things were.

And still are? Maybe, just maybe. Because, even when it does rain, the marginality of human measures and defenses is impressed on us. Hard. Here we sit in Dallas, on a calm Saturday morning. Winds blow through at 100 miles an hour, rain falls, power lines topple. Whereupon, throughout the community, refrigerators cease; massive air-conditioning units shut down. Houses and businesses fall dark. Gasoline pumps can't pump. Restaurants can't serve. Picture shows can't show. Life as defined by our conveniences comes to a stop.

Little but waiting and wandering remains for the victims. The power that civilization gained over nature, through electricity, is forfeit. To benefit from electricity you have to have it. And, when you don't ...

The power and pride of modernity, together with its accomplishments, started to die with the sinking of the "unsinkable" Titanic, in 1912. Year by year the process has escalated. The fragility, the conditionality of human life grows plainer. Yes, you can have this, do this, go here, go there. If ...

Man, the measure of all things (as Protagoras boasted)? Ha! Icebergs, snow, wind, rain, bleak, unsparring sunshine; the inscrutable ways of God, as our fathers referred to them — you never know when or how long. Mechanical contrivances are defenses against nature. None is a reliable substitute.

What do you do when it doesn't rain; or when the lights go out and stay out? The old answer is ... you endure, knowing that hardship, hard as it gets, passes away.

Our fathers found lessons of this sort in the Bible, and in history. Neither consolation appeals profoundly to moderns, who, with their computers and power plants and government agencies, know both more and less than the old folks did. Maybe we'll see how long that spirit persists; because, as we Texans say, it ain't gettin' no cooler around here!

Bob Dole needs the old Bob Dole

What the new Bob Dole could use about now is somebody to play the role of the old Bob Dole — tough, sharp-tongued, ready to seize and exploit every Democratic vulnerability.

That kind of hard-line campaigning doesn't play well for the candidate at the top of the ticket. Presidents and would-be presidents prefer the high road while spokesman, surrogates and sometimes running mates do the attack work.

Dole knows that, having done it, sometimes too sturdily. He once joked ruefully that when he went for the jugular vein, he got his own. Still, over the years, he was the man who could put a Republican edge on things, often in a quip that made it understandable and, for the opposition, unavoidable.

But as the seasoned, mellowed Dole resigns his Senate seat today to run full time for the White House, there's nobody playing a comparable part for him. He won't have a running mate until the convention, still three months away.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich is an ally, but his negative ratings rule out a high-profile campaign spot.

When Dole was campaigning in Chicago two weeks ago, a man suggested that his ticket might suffer for the unpopularity of the speaker and the Republican Congress.

"Some might say that," he replied. "I have to spell out my own agenda for America, Bob Dole's agenda."

Beginning Wednesday, he will do so as a former senator. His resignation makes him "a candidate for president to the exclusion of all else," said

Walter Mears AP Special Correspondent

Republican National Chairman Haley Barbour, adding that he already is more focused as a campaigner.

He has remained a relatively cautious one, despite openings the Dole of another era would have seized and exploited. He has dealt gingerly with Whitewater and other cases touching on President Clinton and his associates, although he hardened his line after the disclosure that the White House got FBI background files on 341 people, most of them Republicans, in 1993, in connection with access passes. Clinton called it an honest bureaucratic snafu, and the process was stopped part way through the alphabet.

But Dole said the episode smells, that there should and will be hearings in Congress on what "reads like a Clinton enemies list." He said he remembered Watergate and the things that happened "because of these kind of tricks."

Even a White House apology came with a counter-attack. Leon Panetta, the chief of staff, offered it, after saying that when Dole "has a tendency to shoot first and ask questions later" and did so when he spoke beside House Speaker Newt Gingrich at a rally in Marietta, Ga., on Saturday.

But in this campaign, Dole has been relatively restrained, although the Democrats argue that he's lurching from one negative attack to another. Dole says that's because he's telling the truth about Clinton's record, which he said is to talk like a conservative and govern like a liberal.

Dole said he was intentionally staying out of the Whitewater controversy, and didn't comment when two former Clinton associates and his successor as Arkansas governor were convicted of fraud.

When he did speak of it later, it was to say that "I want to return integrity to our government, a mission that's more important this week than even a week ago." Mild words compared with those of his early career.

Republican strategy is to make character and credibility issues against Clinton, but they haven't undone the president's early lead so far. Nor has Dole's decision to resign his Senate seat boosted his standing.

"I don't know any reason it would have any effect on the polls," Haley Barbour, the Republican national chairman, said Monday.

Perhaps not, but the polls certainly had an effect on it. Dole's campaign design had been to run as the Senate leader who got things done. But he couldn't get measures past balky Democrats, and ardent House conservatives complicated the task, too.

Dole at first had resisted suggestions that he step aside as the majority leader, at least temporarily. But lagging in the polls and snarled in Senate disputes, he chose to resign outright.

Barbour said that has stirred and solidified voters for the campaign, but that undecided voters remain to be convinced on the issues. Dole will be trying, full time, from now on.

Retail sales continue steady rise through May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales rose 0.8 percent in May, the third advance in four months as automobile dealers posted a rebound.

The Commerce Department said today sales totaled a seasonally adjusted $205.5 billion, up from $203.9 billion in April when sales slipped 0.1 percent. The department initially estimated sales had fallen 0.3 percent.

The April drop was attributed largely to declining motor vehicle purchases, which account for about one-fourth of total retail sales. Many analysts had expected a 1 percent gain in overall sales in May. The bond market rose moderately after the figures were released. Yields on 30-year Treasury bonds, a barometer for long-term borrowing charges, slipped to about 7.16 percent in early trading today from 7.19 percent late Wednesday.

Stocks were mixed, although the Dow Jones industrial average opened higher.

The report said auto dealers rang up a 2.1 percent increase in sales in May after a 3.8 percent loss a month earlier. Excluding autos, sales were up 0.3 percent.

After remaining unchanged in January, sales shot up 2.1 percent in February and registered a 0.4 percent gain a month later. Sales in May were 55 percent higher than they were during the same month of 1995. Some analysts contend sales will slow in the second half of 1996, in part because of high consumer debt levels.

The American Bankers Association said earlier this week that credit card delinquencies during the January-March quarter reached the highest level in 14 years. Retail sales are an important gauge of the U.S. economy, since they represent one-third of the nation's economic activity.

In a separate report, the Labor Department said new claims for jobless benefits rose by 6,000 last week to a seasonally adjusted 360,000, highest since 372,000 during the week ended April 20.

Analysts contend a range of about 350,000 is consistent with an improving labor market. The Labor Department had reported last week there were 348,000 payroll additions in May. So far this year, job creation has averaged 222,400 a month. In the retail sales report, Commerce said sales of big-ticket durable goods expected to last more than three years jumped 1.9 percent, wiping out a 1.8 percent loss in April. It too was the third increase in four months.

In addition to motor vehicles, sales of building materials, hardware and garden supplies shot up 2.5 percent after a 3.1 percent advance in April. Sales of furniture and other home furnishings were up 1.6 percent after edging down 0.2 percent a month earlier.

Sales of nondurable goods were flat after rising 1 percent in April.

Department stores rang up a 1.2 percent increase in sales on top of a 1.4 percent gain in April. Sales at apparel stores were up 0.1 percent; at drug stores, up 0.9 percent, and at gasoline stations, up 0.4 percent.

Sales at grocery stores dropped 0.5 percent, and at restaurants and bars they fell 0.8 percent.

Police hit jackpot when routine case turns unexpected
NEW-YORK (AP) — The high-profile case of the slain "Lollipop Lady" was cracked in a fairly ordinary fashion: A fingerprint matched a name, John Royster.

But that was just the beginning. After Royster was picked up Wednesday evening, the slender loner began talking. And talking. On Thursday, officials said they had solved a startling string of attacks once thought unrelated — including the vicious beating of a piano teacher in daylight in Central Park.

Along with the park beating, Royster was to be arraigned today in the killing of the owner of a dry cleaner on Park Avenue, and the beatings of two other women in Yonkers and in Manhattan.

Overweight adults more likely to suffer from arthritis

ATLANTA (AP) — Adults might be able to reduce their risk of arthritis by controlling their weight, a government study found.

Men who are overweight or underweight are more likely to suffer from the joint disease than adults of normal weight, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported Thursday. Obese women are also at risk, but underweight women apparently aren't.

Researchers don't know exactly why weight plays a role. "The question is, did the arthritis come before the weight gain and cause it, or did it come after the weight gain as a result of it?" said Dr. Chad Helmick, a CDC epidemiologist. "Either way, avoiding excess weight is the message."

Trump makes big splash with ritzy yacht

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Take that, Las Vegas: The Donald is building The Casino.

Donald Trump says this one will be on a five-story, 430-foot yacht to be docked at the marina next to his Trump Castle Casino Resort here. He plans to spend $75 million on it, plus $150 million on a hotel tower for 1,500 guests.

"I always wanted to build a 430-foot yacht," he said Thursday.

Trump, who last month opened a fourth Atlantic City casino, has lost some of the spotlight recently to Stephen A. Wynn and other Las Vegas casino moguls planning to build resorts in New Jersey.

Federal government grants asylum to woman fearing genital mutilation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A woman who said she would "go anywhere" except back to her West African homeland because she feared having her genitals cut off is the first person to win U.S. asylum on the basis of female genital mutilation.

The Board of Immigration Appeals broke with Immigration and Naturalization Service policy Thursday to grant asylum to 19-year-old Fauziya Kasinga, of Togo, who says her family planned to force her to submit to female genital mutilation.

"We find that female genital mutilation can be the basis for a grant of asylum," the 12-member appeals board said, adding that Kasinga has a well-founded fear of country-wide persecution.

Board members disagreed about guidelines for granting asylum based on female genital mutilation in the future and declined to speculate about future cases, the decision said.

Sunrise service to celebrate community unity

Church services tomorrow will be a little different for members of several local congregations.

Father's Day services will begin at 7 a.m. at the Top O' Texas rodeo grounds, US 60 east of Pampa.

The service is sponsored by Community Unity which aims to bring together Pampans from all areas of the city: black, white and Hispanic.

Sunday's service is part of this year's first annual Top of Texas Jubilee.

To encourage unity, the early morning Sunday service will include participants from several area churches, including an ecumenical men's choir.

Any man in the area is invited to join the choir. A rehearsal is set for 5:30-6:30 p.m. Saturday at Central Baptist Church, 513 E. Francis. Men may also participate by arriving at the rodeo grounds at 6:30 a.m. Sunday morning. For more information, contact Zan Walker at Central Baptist, 665-1631 or 665-6552.

Preaching at the 7 a.m. sunrise service is Dr. Edwin Cooley, pastor of First Presbyterian Church of Pampa. His sermon title is "What does that child know about the Spirit?", and is based on a conversation he remembers from his student days at Texas Tech.

At the time, he was serving as a supply preacher in a small black, Baptist church near Lubbock. He had a conversation with the matriarch of the church about how blacks and whites worship.

"That conversation," Cooley recalls, "changed my way of thinking about how we understood each other as people of different races and cultures living in different parts of Lubbock, ... and how we often took many things for granted that just weren't right."

Also participating in the early morning worship service are Kenneth Reagans, assistant warden at the Jordan Unit; Elder H. Kelley, Open Door Church of God in Christ; Charles Dixon, St. Mark's C.M.E. Church; Lonny Robbins, Trinity Fellowship; and I.L. Patrick, Macedonia Baptist.

Congregational singing includes old-time gospels "Blessed Be the Name," "Victory in Jesus" and "When the Roll Is Called Up Yonder." The public is invited.

cheon, according to the Rev. Ronald Barr, pastor. For more information on the church or the Father's Day buffet, call 665-0916.

Slaton, district superintendent of the West Texas district of the Assemblies of God, will speak at the 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. services.

Slaton will also conduct an installation service for the Rev. Mike Moss as the new pastor here.

The public is invited.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - For years, many predominantly black churches across North Carolina distanced themselves from the AIDS epidemic, viewing the deadly disease as punishment for sinful behavior.

But now that more and more people are dying - churchgoers, their children, their grandchildren - some church members say if they don't step forward, no one will.

"There has been a denial by part of the church that these people who are suffering are loved by God and need some kind of healing ministry by the body of faith," the Rev. Carl Kenney of Orange Grove Missionary Baptist Church in Durham told The News & Observer of Raleigh.

The statistics about AIDS and black Americans are chilling.

In North Carolina, AIDS is now the largest single killer of black men between the ages of 15 and 44. It's second only to cancer for black women of the same age.

The rate of infection among blacks is much higher than that among whites. In 1995, 54 out of every 100,000 blacks tested positive for HIV, compared to 4.7 for whites.

The General Baptist State Convention of North Carolina, which represents more than 1,800 historically black churches, is hiring a health and human services coordinator to help. A major part of the job will be preparing educational materials on AIDS prevention and promoting AIDS ministries, said the Rev. Clifford Jones, president of that group.

Next year, North Carolina will host the national Black Church Education and Leadership Conference on AIDS.

The Rev. Eddie White, pastor of Mount Sinai Baptist Church in Thomasville, is helping organize the event. While people are clearly more motivated, he knows much work remains to be done to convince people they should care.

"I've actually seen people who would not sit on the same pew if they knew a person there had AIDS," said White. "Something has got to happen."

Public health workers know they need the blessing of people with clout to stop the spread of the disease in the black community, said Janet Wise, assistant section chief for the state's HIV/STD control section.

"I'm as black as your black shoes, but it won't do me any good to say that. I'm with the state. That's the system," Wise said. "It has to come from the ministers."

Tammy Hernandez and Kim Montoya dance to a Christian rock song on the drag last week in the New Life Church's special service for teens.

Youth service held on drag

By TIFFANIE FRANKS
Staff Writer

"The law, the government - no one can stop us from praising Jesus Christ wherever and whenever we want," said youth minister of New Life Church Pete Hernandez at last week's service on the drag.

The youth group of the church presented the words of Christ in an unusual way - with Christian rock music, dramatic skits and a dance. What is even more unusual, it was held on the drag in front of Rick's Body Shop.

The service opened with Hernandez, Ruben Leal and Kim Montoya singing songs that sounded like hard rock, but the words portrayed a message of love for the Lord.

Mirna Solis and Gema Venegas acted out a skit about teenagers dealing with premarital sex and how Christ can help in those issues.

"There are so many kids who are hurting. They are dealing with sexual issues, divorced parents and all kinds of problems. We are here because we believe that Jesus is the only answer," Hernandez said.

Montoya, Solis, Venegas and Tammy Hernandez presented a dance to a Christian rock song.

Leal and Carmen Himenez acted out a skit about how prayer and the reading of the Bible can help couples with difficult decisions.

The service concluded with Pete Hernandez giving a sermon to the teens on the drag about sexual abstinence, alcohol and accepting Christ into their lives.

"We are here (on the drag) because there is no other place in Pampa where all the youth are in one place at the same time," he said.

He feels the reception of the drag teens was not as positive as the group would have liked, but the youth group will be out doing the same thing every other week this summer.

"It (the negative reception) is a blessing to us because the Bible says we will be blessed if we are cursed in his name," Hernandez said.

Better To Lose Wedding Costs Than To Gain Abusive Spouse

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from the girl who got stuck with the $155 bridesmaid dress, I had to write.

When I was young (too young), I got engaged to a man I hadn't known very long. My parents were paying for the wedding and the attendants were paying for their own gowns and tuxedo rentals.

During the month before the wedding, my fiancé began to show his true colors. He drank heavily and became physically and verbally abusive. I knew I should have called the wedding off, but I was worried about all the money my parents were spending on the wedding, so I foolishly kept quiet and went through with it. Big mistake!

Two years later, when I finally got the courage to leave him, my friends and family told they would not have minded losing the money if it saved me from the hell I endured while being married to this abusive man.

Real friends forgive each other. MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR MINNEAPOLIS: Thank you for a letter that may save many women from making the mistake you made. This also applies to men. If either the bride or groom has second thoughts about their feelings, it would be far better to call the wedding off. While it may cause the other party to be upset, in the long run, it would be far better for all concerned.

Her father's failure to handle his affairs is probably not due to incompetence, but to the overwhelming fear of throwing away something important; therefore, he keeps everything. DEAR ABBY: I saw the letter from "Worried in California," whose 14-year-old daughter was driven home from baby sitting by a drunk parent.

I grew up in New Orleans and was told at an early age that if I ever needed a ride home for any reason — but especially alcohol — at any time of day or night, to call home and one of my parents would come and get me with no questions asked. Mom gave me a quarter, which I carried with me wherever I went out. As I was leaving, I would hear, "Have a good time. Do you have your quarter?"

Only once did I have to call home, not because of alcohol, but when a date turned abusive. He took my purse and refused to give it back, but I still had my quarter — in my shoe.

Abby, please continue to advise parents to tell their children never to get into a car with a driver who

His time in that race, 48.08 seconds, is the best in the world this year.

Harris, who has been training in Ames with Iowa State track coach Steve Lynn, was suspended for four years after testing positive for cocaine following the U.S. indoor championships in 1992. The IAAF later reduced the suspension to two years.

Reid returns to Groom as head coach of the Tigers

GROOM — Jim Reid returns to Groom again, this time as the head football coach, replacing Steve Lott, who coached the Tigers the past two seasons.

Reid was an assistant coach at Groom in 1992 and 1993 when Terry O'Dell was head coach. Reid has been the head coach at Ropesville the past two seasons where he had a 7-14 record. Reid's '94 squad posted a 7-3 record and advanced into the playoffs, losing to Guthrie in the bi-district round.

"I'm looking forward to coming back. Groom drops back to six-man after being in 11-man the past two years and I'm looking forward to coaching the team," Reid said.

Reid, 27, is a Rochester, Tex. native. He begins his fifth coaching season. Lott resigned to become an assistant coach at Amarillo Caprock High School. He will also be the head freshman coach at Caprock.

Groom posted a 5-15 record under Lott when the Tigers played at the 11-man level.

Gearing up for summer fishing in Lone Star state

DALLAS — Summertime is fishing time in Texas. Fishing is not necessarily better this time of year, but stable weather, long days and vacations provide more fishing time.

Here are common questions involving the most popular types of fishing tackle and answers compiled from experts at Zebeco, a Tulsa, Okla., company that makes all three basic kinds of gear:

Q: Why isn't there a universal rod and reel for all types of fishing?

A: Because methods and types of fishing all over the world are too different for any one rod-and-reel combination to meet all the demands. You don't fish for 30-pound strippers in a swift river with the same gear you'd use for eight-ounce bluegills in a quiet farm pond. Select the right tackle for the job at hand.

Q: Which is better — spincast, spinning or casting reels?

A: For novices, you can't beat a spincast reel. Spincast is the easiest reel to use because it is a fixed-spool reel activated by a thumb release. This means the spool does not turn during the cast or retrieve and is not subject to backlash.

A spinning reel is essentially an upside down spincast cast reel. The spool is exposed. In order to cast, the bail must be opened. With the reel mounted under the rod, spinning reels are well-balanced. The exposed spool means less friction and longer casts with lighter lures. Spinning reels are a favorite with light-tackle anglers and coastal fishermen who must cast into the wind.

A casting reel is a miniature winch, rotating on an axle, just like a car tire. When the cast is first made, the lure and reel's spool are traveling at the same speed. As the lure goes out and meets wind resistance, it slows. If the spool does not low to match the decreasing speed of the lure, a backlash occurs. Casting reels are more difficult to use. They have smooth drag systems and are a favorite of many experienced anglers, particularly those who favor heavy lines and lures.

Q: What reels are good for salt-water fishing?

A: Any reel that can handle the assignment. For saltwater, a reel should have ample line capacity to handle the fish you seek, it should have an adequate drag system and it should be corrosion resistant. Any reel used in saltwater should be rinsed thoroughly in freshwater after each use and kept well-lubricated.

Q: What pound test line should I use?

A: Line weight depends on the situation. In very clear water or when fishing light lures for small fish, four- to eight-pound test is a good choice. For all-around fishing, 10-pound test works well. If you fish in heavy, abrasive cover and must put a lot of pressure on a big fish, 14- to 25-pound line is good choice.

Some spinning reels come with interchangeable spools. Different line weights can be spooled in advanced and the spools switched to match specific fishing challenges.

Q: How do I put line on my reel and how much line should I use?

A: Most fishing reels work best when they are filled to within one-eighth inch of the spool flange. Reels are best filled when they are attached to the rod the line is threaded through the rod eyes and tied to the empty reel spool.

With a spinning or spincast reel, turn the handle to determine which way the bail or the spinnerhead (spincast) is turning. Lay the spool of line on it side so the line comes off in the same direction the bail or spinnerhead is turning. Fill the spool while maintaining slight pressure on the line with thumb and forefinger.

U.S. Open lead shared by Stewart and Austin

By RON SIRAK
 AP Golf Writer

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. (AP) — The Oakland Hills monster became a squishy plaything in Thursday's first round of the U.S. Open, softened by days of rain and protected only by its thick rough and sharply sloping greens.

Payne Stewart, the 1991 winner, and Woody Austin, playing in the Open for the first time, shot 3-under-par 67s for a one-stroke lead over Lee Janzen, the 1993 champion, on a day when par was an assailable obstacle.

"I think the golf course is accessible right now because it is so soft," Stewart said. "You are throwing 4-irons and 5-irons at the greens and they will stick."

That would not have been the case if 2 1/2 inches of rain had not fallen on Wednesday, softening the course and prompting work crews to perform an exceptional job getting it in playing condition.

The soft greens made it possible to leave the driver in the bag and play safely to the fairways with irons off the tee — avoiding the bogey-making thick rough.

Long approach shots, which would not normally hold the wildly contoured greens, settled softly and stuck on this day.

"You could hit a 4-iron to the greens and it would stop within 5 yards," said Masters champion Nick Faldo, five strokes back after a 72. Faldo took his 3-wood out of his bag and replaced it with a 0-iron, driving seven times with the 12-degree loft club first used by John Daly.

"It's the perfect club for this course," said Faldo, who can hit it 230 yards. Six players were two strokes back at 1-under 69 — Frank Nobilo, Philip Walton, Bob Ford, David Berganio, Gary Trivisonno and Stewart Cink. Eleven others were at even par, including Colin Montgomerie and Tom Watson, with several dozen players still on the course.

Tiger Woods, the 20-year-old amateur who took his sophomore final exams at Stanford last week, was 3 under when he walked off the 13th green and 4 over par when he walked off the 16th.

Woods went bogey-double bogey, quadruple bogey — hitting two on the water on No. 16 — as he unraveled and finished with a 76.

The last time the Open was played at Oakland Hills — in 1985 — only seven players broke par in the first round and only seven others matched it. Andy North won that tournament with a 1-under 279.

It was at the 1951 Open, when Ben Hogan won with a 7-over 287, that the course earned the nickname "The Monster."

"I wouldn't call it that now," Stewart said after an erratic round in which he had seven birdies, two bogeys and a double bogey.

"There's some ugly out there and there's some pretty and it all totaled up to 67," Stewart said about a scrambling round in which he missed five fairways and made a remarkable par on No. 14.

"I got away with it, hitting some errant tee shots," Stewart said. "You don't want to make a habit of that all week."

On No. 14 he drove into the left rough, hit a tree with his 4-iron second shot and bounded even farther left, this time his shot to the green was blocked by a TV tower.

After a free drop, he hit an 8-iron over the trees to the fringe — 50 feet from the hole — and putted it in to save par.

Austin's round was a lot more hum-drum.

"It was pretty much a bunch of boring pars to start with," Austin said. "I was playing perfect golf, hitting fairways and greens."

After 10 straight pars, Austin made three consecutive birdies, rolling in a 4-footer on No. 11 and 6-footers on 12 and 13.

Janzen, who had six birdies, four bogeys and three good par saves, got to 4 under par through 13 holes then bogeyed No. 14 when he was refused relief from what he thought was casual water and then bogeyed again at No. 17 when his 60-foot putt failed to make it up the ridge and stopped 30 feet short.

"I assumed I was going to three-putt," Janzen said about No. 17. "I wasn't going to try to be a hero and four-putt."

Jack Nicklaus, playing in his 40th consecutive U.S. Open, shot a 72.

Greg Norman, playing in his first major championship since squandering a six-stroke lead at the Masters, started with a double bogey and finished with a 73.

Defending champion Corey Pavin struggled to a 73 and Daly shot a 72.

Phil Mickelson opened with a 40 on the front nine and was in danger of missing the cut with a 76.

While the rain softened the greens and soaked the fairways, it also turned the long rough into the consistency of oatmeal.

"You've just got to takes yours lumps when you hit it in this rough," Janzen said, "and just get it back to the fairway. I think the course probably will play harder every day."

And it is scary to think how treacherous the greens would be if they ever dry out. Huge ridges divide most of the greens into distinct sections and a ball on the wrong section is an almost certain three-putt.

"You couldn't build greens like this today," Stewart said about the course constructed during World War I by famed golf architect Donald Ross. "They would ridicule you."

Mark O'Meara four-putted No. 9.

He aimed his 45-foot first putt a good 25 feet above the hole then watched as it rolled 10 feet past the cup. He missed the 10-footer and the 3-footer coming back.

"The amount of break, that's the thing," Faldo said about the greens, shaking his head in disbelief.

Pre-game rituals give Texas catcher chance to spend time with young son

ARLINGTON, Texas — Dave Valle has few memories of his father, who died when he was 8. His mother, a nurse, worked the graveyard shift to support her eight children in New York City.

So he cherishes the time he spends with his 10-year-old son, Philip, a daily visitor to The Ballpark in Arlington.

"It would kill me if Philip didn't have any memories of me during his childhood," said Valle, a 10-year veteran. "I know how much joy it brings me to see him happy.

"It's important to build memories, even though they're probably more important to me than they are to him at this time."

The life of a professional baseball player is a glamorous one. Fame and wealth abound. But the game can be hard on a father's relationship with his children.

When spring training begins in February, the kids are in school. And there's no time for summer vacations because it's the height of the season. Most players arrive at the ballpark about 3 p.m. and return home near midnight after the children have been tucked away in bed. Time becomes a precious commodity.

Valle and a few other players like Mickey Tettleton, Jeff Russell and Ivan Rodriguez bring their kids to the ballpark on a regular basis because it gives father and son an opportunity to share a special bond.

"I'm glad he gets to come out here because it gives me a chance to spend more time with him," Valle said. "Every day we drive 25 minutes to the ballpark and 25 minutes home. We talk about a thousand things that we wouldn't be able to talk about if we didn't have this time."

Philip Valle is equally happy for the time.

"If I didn't come to the ballpark, I wouldn't see him that much," Philip Valle said. "Last year was the first year that I came to the stadium because they didn't let kids come to the stadium in Seattle."

Texas manager Johnny Oates encourages the players to bring their children to the ballpark as long as they're well-behaved and follow the rules. He wanted to allow the players' kids on the field when he managed Baltimore, but the front office wouldn't let him.

"I get so many letters from the players and their wives thanking me and the organization for letting the kids come out," Oates said. "I wish I could have done it with my son when he was their age."

"It's also really fun when you watch a kid like Philip Valle and you see how much he's improved in the last year."

Cubs win in 14th against Padres

CHICAGO (AP) — Terry Shumpert hit a three-run homer in the bottom of the 14th inning Thursday night to lift the Chicago Cubs to a 6-3 victory over San Diego, the Padres' seventh straight loss.

Jose Hernandez opened the inning with a single off Willie Blair (0-4). Hernandez moved to second on a sacrifice by Doug Glanville. After Brian McRae was intentionally walked, Mike Hubbard grounded out to second. McRae reached second safely after being caught in a rundown when first baseman Archi Cianfrocco threw to third to try to get Hernandez off the bag.

Supreme Court strikes down states' redistricting plans

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pair of Supreme Court rulings that threw out predominantly minority congressional districts in Texas and North Carolina has politicians and state election officials wondering what federal courts in those states will do next.

Would they order new district lines — and therefore new primaries — before November's elections or allow the 1996 vote to proceed and order new lines for 1998 elections.

"That's the biggest question we have, will we be running primaries in September or October, or will it be the next cycle?" said Gary Bartlett, executive director of North Carolina's State Board of Elections, where one district was thrown out.

In Texas, where three predominantly minority congressional districts in Houston and Dallas were ruled unconstitutional by the high court, election plans were in limbo.

The answer likely lies in the hands of a three-judge federal panel in Houston, which first ruled the districts unconstitutional in 1994.

The Texas judges now could draw a map of their own, allow the current plan to remain in effect or order Gov. George W. Bush to call the Texas Legislature into special session to adopt a new redistricting plan.

"We're in a holding pattern until we hear from them," said Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock.

The three Texas districts can probably be redrawn in a fashion that would leave their Democratic incumbents as favorites for re-election, though perhaps with a smaller percentage of minority voters.

The remapping challenge is more daunting in North Carolina, where Rep. Melvin Watt's district snakes along interstate highways through 10 counties.

The court's two 5-4 rulings reaffirmed the standard the high court established in previous rulings affecting black-majority districts in Louisiana and Georgia: that race cannot be the predominant factor in drawing legislative lines.

As the court established this standard in recent years, some have suggested white Democratic candidates would benefit — on the theory that black voters would be dispersed among more districts. There is certainly no argument that white Democrats have suffered from the creation of majority-black districts under the Voting Rights Act.

In 1990, for example, Georgia's House delegation had nine Democrats, just one of them black, and one Republican. Just six years later, after black voters were concentrated into two more majority black districts, Republicans outnumber Democrats eight to three — and there are no white Democrats in the delegation.

"The tendency is for conservative whites to run as Republicans now," said Emory University political scientist Merle Black.

But even with the new court decision, few see a return to the days when black voters were dispersed in a way that helped white Democrats.

"I'm very unhappy with the decision," said David Bositis, a political analyst at the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, a black think tank. "But it is not like the black membership of Congress is going to be going from 40 to zero."

For starters, the black incumbents are reluctant to give up their gains. Also, white voters in the South are trending Republican. And since the lines were last drawn after the 1990 census, Republicans have made inroads across the South and in many states struck alliances with blacks to draw new lines.

"Those alliances are likely to continue," said Ben Ginsberg, a Republican attorney who specializes in redistricting.

New Jersey Rep. Donald Payne, the chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, said the new court standard "threatens to disenfranchise African-Americans."

Rep. Corrine Brown, D-Fla., directed her anger at Clarence Thomas, the black Supreme Court justice who sided with the majority. "He is burning the very bridge that he came across on," Brown said.
