PAMPA — A 28-year-old Pampa man was arrested on charges of evading arrest, unauthorized use of motor vehicle, deadly conduct and aggravated assault on a peace officer following a chase which began on East Browning and ended south of McClellan Creek bridge on Texas 273.

David Allen David, 28, was released on bonds totaling $26,000 after his arrest late Saturday night.

Deputy Jim Scott tried to stop the yellow 1979 Corvette when the chase ensued, said Lt. Jesse Wallace of the Gray County Sheriff's Office. The Corvette, reported stolen about 9 p.m. Saturday, was stopped by stinger spikes, Wallace said.

The car was reported by Pampa police officers as stolen from the 3000 block of Rosewood.

Wallace said a 16-year-old girl was in the Corvette during the chase.

PAMPA — Saturday's rain helped push Pampa's moisture total for the year to date to 6.02 inches, but that's only about 48 percent of normal.

"We still have quite a bit of a deficit to make up," said Darrell Sehorn, KGRO/KOMX meteorologist, adding that recent rains in May and June are improving matters some for the current drought which began in October.

Pampa received 0.23 inches of rain Saturday, most in a late-night thunderstorm, and an additional trace Sunday, Sehorn reported. That brings June's total moisture to 3.17 inches, just under the normal June total of 3.34.

Normal total for the year to date is 12.49 inches, Sehorn said.

Pampa recorded only a trace in January, nothing in February, 0.13 in March, nothing in April and 2.72 inches in May, he said.

AUSTIN (AP) — No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said.

The jackpot was worth $8 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 4, 29, 31, 32, 41 and 43.

There were 88 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $2,022.

There were 5,107 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $25. And there were 104,309 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $12 million.

Justices reject affirmative action appeals by colleges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court left intact a ruling that threatens all affirmative action programs at state-run colleges in three Southern states.

The justices let stand a federal appeals court ruling that struck down the University of Texas law school's former affirmative-action admissions plan to boost enrollment of blacks and Mexican-Americans.

The court rejected appeals in which Texas officials and two civil rights groups had urged it to decide whether state schools nationwide may continue using race or ethnicity as a factor in their admissions decisions.

The appeals court ruling is binding law for Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi, and it could influence other courts across the nation confronted with similar disputes.

Today's action was taken without any comment by the full court.

Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, in a brief opinion joined by Justice David H. Souter, noted that the program invalidated by the appeals court has long been abandoned by the law school.

"We must await a final judgment on a program genuinely in controversy before addressing the important question raised in this petition," Ginsburg said.

A three-judge panel of the New Orleans-based 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled last March that the law school's 1992 admissions policy discriminated against whites.

The school had set lower test-score standards for black and Mexican-American applicants, and provided a separate review board for those applications.

The plan was aimed at obtaining an entering class consisting of at least 10 percent Mexican-Americans and 5 percent blacks.

A federal trial judge and the appeals court ruled that the quota system violated the rights of four unsuccessful white applicants.

The appeals court went further and ruled that a landmark 1978 Supreme Court decision allowing the use of race or national origin as one factor in college admissions is no longer good law.

The nation's highest court first endorsed the concept of affirmative action in that 1978 ruling. It said race could be considered as one of many factors in a school's admission policy but struck down separate admissions tracks for whites and minorities.

That ruling ordered the University of California at Davis to admit Allan Bakke, a white man, as a medical student. He had been passed over to make room for minority students with lower test scores.

In the Texas case, the 5th Circuit court ruled flatly that "the law school may not use race as a factor in law school admissions."

"A university may properly favor one applicant over another because of his ability to play the cello, make a downfield tackle or understand chaos theory," the appeals court said. "An admissions process may also consider an applicant's home state or relationship to school alumni."

"Schools may even consider factors such as whether an applicant's parents attended college or the applicant's economic and social background," the appeals court said, acknowledging that those factors may have a correlation with race or ethnicity.

"But the key is that race itself cannot be taken into account," the appeals court added in a ruling that is binding in Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

The appeals court ruling was appealed by Texas officials and, separately, by two civil rights groups — the Thurgood Marshall Legal Society and Black Pre-law Association.

Both appeals were denied.

Court: U.S. liable for S&Ls rule change

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court exposed the government to the possibility of paying billions of dollars in damages to savings and loans, ruling today it can be held liable for a rule change that plunged many thrifts into financial trouble.

The 7-2 decision said the government broke its contracts with three S&Ls when it changed an accounting rule in 1989.

The Clinton administration has said a ruling for the S&Ls could wind up costing the government $10 billion in damages in about 100 similar cases.

In other action on the court's last day the justices:

— Revived a free-speech challenge to Baltimore's prohibition on billboard ads for cigarettes, telling a federal appeals court to restudy its ruling that had upheld the ban.

— Ruled that police generally do not need court warrants before searching cars they reasonably believe are carrying narcotics.

— Refused to revive Missouri's $100 to $300 caps on individual campaign contributions to candidates for state and local political offices.

Today's S&L ruling upholds a federal appeals court decision that said the government breached its contracts with the three S&Ls. The case now returns to a lower court to determine the amount of damages they are owed.

"We hold that the (contract) terms assigning the risk of regulatory change to the government are enforceable, and that the government is therefore liable in damages for breach," Justice David H. Souter wrote in the court's main opinion.

Souter said "it would, indeed, have been madness" for the three S&Ls to have agreed to take over ailing thrifts without a binding promise that they could rely on accounting rules then in effect.

Otherwise, Souter said, "The very existence of their institutions would then have been in jeopardy from the moment their agreements were signed."

At issue was a 1989 law that sought to restore the troubled thrift industry to health by tightening rules and providing money to close insolvent S&Ls. Overall, the S&L cleanup has cost about $200 billion.

Until then, the government had encouraged healthy thrifts to take over insolvent ones by letting them count the insolvent S&L's losses as "goodwill" assets. S&Ls also were allowed to double-count as "capital credit" government funds provided to help them take over ailing thrifts.

The 1989 law said S&Ls no longer could count such assets toward their minimum capital requirements.

Buffalo hunter

Jack Reuter of Jones, Okla., aka Man-Who, leader of the Buffalo Hunters Living History group, takes a lunch break Saturday at the Wheeler County Heritage Day activities sponsored by the Old Mobeetie Texas Association. Reuter and his group had a camp set up on the Joe VanZandt place southeast of Mobeetie. Hay rides throughout the day took visitors to the buffalo hunter camp, also stopping at the area's oldest rock house on the way. Reuter is a past president of the Canadian County Historical Society and currently is a member of the board of directors. When not traveling extensively with the Buffalo Hunters group, Reuter spends his time at home making knives.

Dozen wildfires burn in Southern California

IDYLLWILD, Calif. (AP) — A volatile mix of dry brush and record heat fueled more than a dozen wildfires across Southern California that destroyed 30 buildings and burned across 13,000 acres.

A 7,600-acre blaze that burned to within two miles of the Riverside County mountain resort of Idyllwild was the largest and most dangerous of the weekend fires.

Gunfire of an unknown origin sparked the blaze, which was about 30 percent contained early today in the San Bernardino National Forest.

A pair of brush fires in the Angeles National Forest 45 miles northeast of Los Angeles burned across 1,200 acres and prompted a voluntary evacuation of about 500 hikers from a campground, said Eddie Hesbol, a U.S. Forest Service dispatcher.

The blaze reportedly was started Saturday by an illegal campfire.

A fire near Temecula, some 90 miles southeast of Los Angeles, was contained after burning 1,336 acres of brush and a home, three mobile homes, two sheds and four vehicles.

The fires came during during a heat wave that snapped a 112-year-old record in downtown Los Angeles on Saturday: 98 degrees. Sunday's high was 96, not a record; today's forecast was for highs still in the 90s.

Elsewhere in the West:

—Utah firefighters contained 70 percent of a 7,800-acre fire on Beaver Mountain. Lightning ignited the fire on June 16 near Pole Creek in southwestern Utah.

—A 3,400-acre fire in western Nevada that destroyed four houses and forced the evacuation of more than 3,000 people near Lake Tahoe was expected to be under control by tonight.

Sponsors sought for Boys Ranch youths in Pampa's Kid Pony Show

The Top O' Texas Rodeo Association Board of Directors has announced that boys and girls from Boys Ranch will be participating in the 50th anniversary Kid Pony Show. There are currently 30 young people signed up but more are expected.

"We are looking for sponsors for these kids as this is the only way these kids are able to participate," said Jane Jacobs, rodeo office secretary.

Sponsors' donations will help to cover the cost of the entry fees for the Boys Ranch participants, she said, adding that any donation is appreciated. Donations may be made at the rodeo office, 200 N. Ballard, Jacobs said.

The youths will be entered in the July 8-10 Kid Pony Show events. More information may be obtained by calling Jacobs at 669-3241 or from any rodeo director.

All local youths up to age 15 are urged to sign up now for the Kid Pony Show at the rodeo office. Deadline for entries is 5 p.m. Friday, July 5. Jacobs reminded would-be entrants that the rodeo office will be closed Thursday, July 4.

Entries are also being taken for the Mutton Busting event to be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 11-13, during the PRCA rodeo performances.

Heritage Day gun display

Bob Mayfield of Mobeetie looks at a small swivel gun cannon displayed Saturday in front of Lefors resident Mike Oldham's camp as part of the Wheeler County Heritage Day activities. Lewis and Clark had a couple of these types of guns on their expedition into the Northwest. Other displays at the Old Mobeetie Jail Museum included wheelwright, blacksmith, traders, trappers and wagon exhibits.

Critics lash out at former FBI agent's book

WASHINGTON (AP) - The former FBI agent who wrote an insider's book on White House security is being attacked from all sides for what critics say is a pack of unbelievable tales and "wild speculation."

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton today blasted the book during a visit to Bucharest, Romania.

"I see it as a politically inspired fabrication and I don't think anybody should take it seriously," she said.

She also denied suggestions that she played a role in the hiring of the White House security chief who collected private FBI files on more than 400 people. "There is no connection," she said.

Aldrich's book, Unlimited Access: An FBI Agent Inside the Clinton White House, discusses lax supervision that allowed White House security staffers to review several hundred FBI files of former GOP officials.

A top White House aide denounced author Gary Aldrich as a person of no credibility whose book is part of conservative Republicans' "efforts to 'destroy the president.'"

And White House spokesman Mike McCurry today called on Republican candidate Bob Dole to separate himself from a campaign worker who is promoting Aldrich's book.

"It would be a surprise to us if Senator Dole didn't indicate that the activity of one of his paid advisers with respect to this book is unacceptable," McCurry said. "I assume he'll do that and do it promptly."

Even leading conservative journalists are denouncing Aldrich, including the apparent source of his book's wildest allegation - that President Clinton sneaks out of the White House without his guards for romantic hotel trysts.

"I never knew I would be used as a source," David Brock, a writer for the American Spectator, told Newsweek magazine. He said he never thought Aldrich would use the "wild speculation" he traded about the alleged presidential outings to a Washington hotel which the Secret Service says would be impossible.

Conservative columnist George Will, who quizzed Aldrich Sunday on ABC, said Brock told him he was appalled to see the unverified story published.

"Can't someone say that, in fact, your book is a raw file and that you have gone into print with the kind of evidence that no prosecutor would ever go into court with?" Will asked Aldrich.

"This is not a case presented to a grand jury," Aldrich replied, saying he had relied on his observations and untaped interviews for his book.

"I conducted investigations and talked to many sources, trying to knock this particular issue down as to whether the president could in fact travel without a Secret Service complement. I was unable to knock down that possibility," Aldrich said.

He acknowledged that much of the material came from second- and third-hand sources, some of whom have publicly disputed his account.

Aldrich, who retired from the FBI in 1994 after 30 years as an agent, said he would be willing to go before Congress to reveal his sources and back up his insider tales of sloppy White House security and alleged former drug use by some officials, including a senior staffer.

"I'm willing to swear under oath to anything that I have in this book," Aldrich said on ABC's This Week with David Brinkley.

Cookout at the lake

Venita Johnson of Amarillo prepares a brisket supper for her son, J.R. Jones, and his friend, Jonathan Garrison, while camping out at Lake McClellan Friday evening. With summer weather here, many people enjoy going to area lakes for campouts, fishing, water skiing, hiking and other outdoor activities.

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton tours Europe

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Standing at the site of Romania's democratic revolution, Hillary Rodham Clinton pledged the Clinton Administration's commitment to this nation's fledgling democracy. "We will stand with you and support you," the first lady said. More than 3,000 people gathered in Revolutionary Square roared with approval and let out shouts of "we love you" and "long live Clinton." The brief but emotional address opened an 11-day, seven-nation tour of Central and Eastern Europe. "The United States, as it has since 1989, will stand with you and support you," Mrs. Clinton told the crowd. "We believe in the future of Romania and we want to be your partners and your friends. Romania's move from Stalinist Communism under Nicolae Ceausescu to a free market democracy under former Communist Ion Iliescu has been arduous, slower than the conversion of most of its Central European neighbors. Mrs. Clinton was here to celebrate the advances Romania has made since Ceausescu was toppled and executed on Christmas Day, 1989. After Romania, Mrs. Clinton will stop in Poland, the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Hungary, Estonia and Finland. With the exception of Finland, the host countries are former Soviet satellites adjusting to democracy. The schedule was crafted to highlight their varying degrees of success — from the glimmering example of Prague and its hero-President Vaclav Havel to the nagging instability of Slovakia. It also gives Mrs. Clinton a chance to shed her Washington woes. Voters are telling pollsters they don't trust her; longtime family friend Bruce Lindsey was named an unindicted co-conspirator in a Whitewater trial and a former FBI agent says the first lady was responsible for hiring the White House security chief who collected private FBI files, a charge the president denied Saturday. This is the first lady's seventh overseas trip without her husband. Even Eleanor Roosevelt, who was first lady for more than 12 years, traveled outside the United States just three times without her husband, according to historian Carl Anthony. "As far as overseas trips, without the president, this is by far a record," Anthony said. Her overseas travels traditionally get favorable media coverage; they offer the public a glimpse at Mrs. Clinton's lighter side and draw attention to her work for women and children. But aides began scheduling this trip five months ago, long before her latest bout of problems. Clinton's political advisers said the trip has implications for the November election. They noted that high-level visits to places like Poland and the Czech Republic make good ethnic politics back home. The Polish-American vote, for example, is up for grabs in the battleground state of Illinois. The trip comes at an important time for Central and Eastern Europe. Within six years of their overthrow, Communists with fresh, young leaders have regrouped to win back power at the ballot box across the former Soviet bloc. Appealing to voters who miss the cradle-to-grave social welfare net and disdain the bickering of political neophytes, ex-Communists have won parliamentary majorities in Poland, Hungary and Bulgaria, since 1993. They also hold major political offices in Slovakia, Lithuania and Romania. And President Clinton has invested much of his Russia policy in President Boris Yeltsin, who was forced into a runoff with Communist Gennady Zyuganov this Wednesday.

Rural residents can participate in ground water program

TEMPLE — Rural residents across Texas now have an opportunity to take an active role in protecting their ground and drinking water with the launch of a new voluntary program called the "TEX*A*Syst Ground Water Protection Program."

TEX*A*Syst is based on the national FARM*A*Syst program that has been used throughout the U.S. since 1991 to address many sources of rural pollution through a series of easy-to-understand self-assessment worksheets and bulletins.

"The difference between FARM*A*Syst and TEX*A*Syst is that our program is targeted to all rural residents in Texas," said Dennis Hoffman, project leader and research scientist at Blackland Research Center at Temple.

The TEX*A*Syst Ground Water Protection Program helps rural residents protect their ground water by reducing nonpoint source pollution risks on their property. Through this program, residents voluntarily use a series of bulletins to identify present or potential sources of contamination caused by their management practices and/or structures on their property.

Once these present or potential sources of contamination are identified, TEX*A*Syst then recommends solutions to reduce or prevent them. In addition, the bulletins increase the participant's knowledge and understanding of the environment, existing policies, regulations and best management practices that can reduce or prevent NPS pollution of ground water.

Some of the subjects covered in the TEX*A*Syst bulletins include: wellhead protection, pesticide storage and handling, livestock waste management, fertilizer storage and handling, petroleum storage and handling, hazardous waste management, household wastewater treatment, milking center wastewater treatment and livestock holding pen management.

"This is an excellent opportunity for anyone that is going to design a homesite to learn about separation distance between the well and the septic system," said Monty Dozier, water quality extension associate with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, "because it is hard to correct the separation distance after they have been put in place."

The TEX*A*Syst Groundwater Protection Program is a demonstration project funded by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Section 319(h) of the Clean Water Act. Funds are administered by the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board, which is the lead agency for the state's agricultural/silvicultural NPS management program. Funding is provided to TSSWCB to implement activities that demonstrate ways to control and prevent NPS pollution associated with agricultural/silvicultural runoff.

"Future plans for the program include training county extension agents and National Resource Conservation Service staff on the TEX*A*Syst bulletins, so residents can contact a local source in the future regarding the program," Hoffman said.

"Currently, we are looking for groups and organizations that would like for us to speak at their meetings and explain how residents can voluntarily protect their water supply," said Dozier. "We want to reassure everyone that TEX*A*Syst is not regulatory in any fashion."

In an effort to reach Texans concerning water quality issues, the TEX*A*Syst program is on-line and can be accessed on the Internet at <http://brsun0.tamu.edu/~hoffman>. The on-line program contains all the bulletins and is cross linked to the national FARM*A*Syst program.

HOUSTON (AP) — A doctor accused of assaulting his mail order Ukrainian bride and performing sex acts in front of her children was sued last year by a patient complaining he fondled her during an examination.

Manuel F. Castaneda, 59, was sued last year by Ann Marie Liguez, who says the former gynecologist fondled her breasts and genitals during an examination at Sam Houston Memorial Hospital on Jan. 10, 1994.

Castaneda now works for the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston.

Early Saturday, he was released on $40,500 bond on charges of an assault against his wife, Svetlana Kravchenko Castaneda and indecency with her daughters.

The couple have been embroiled in a contentious divorce action since last October, officials say. She says he surreptitiously injected her with steroids to make her more sexually aggressive and offered her to men he met in bars.

Liguez, 27, said in her lawsuit that she went to the hospital complaining of abdominal pains.

"He felt my breasts and squeezed them, and he grabbed my vagina area," Liguez told the Houston Chronicle. "I pushed him, and he said nothing was wrong with me, it's just that all Mexican women who have babies are fat."

She said she was diagnosed with gallstones a month later and had surgery.

Sam Houston Memorial Hospital has since merged with Spring Branch Memorial Hospital to become Spring Branch Medical Center Inc., which also is named in the lawsuit.

Mike Hinton, the doctor's attorney, said Liguez was thinking "doctor equals money."

Hinton said Castaneda told him an internal investigation of Liguez's allegations vindicated him. Hinton said Castaneda's wife also is out to soak the doctor.

"(Sheriff) Tommy Thomas' investigators have been grossly misled and bamboozled," Hinton said. "This woman has taken this doctor for everything she could get."

Hinton said he will be looking into the mail order bride operation that brought the woman here, calling it a "real well-oiled machine racket."

The charges involving Castaneda's daughters include accusations that he had masturbated in front of them after having them dress in lingerie. Several neighbors told the Chronicle they couldn't believe that, because the daughters never shied from him and never said anything to friends in the neighborhood.

Perot battles state of Florida for special balloting privilege

DALLAS (AP) — The Reform Party says it will fight in court the state of Florida's rejection of its plan to substitute some running mates — so-called "stand-ins" — for the final choice.

The Libertarian Party plans to join the group bankrolled by Dallas billionaire Ross Perot in a lawsuit to be filed today in a Florida federal court. Perot or his party is on the ballot in more than a dozen states.

Both parties are calling Florida's refusal to permit the eventual substitution of their presidential candidates for the stand-ins unconstitutional, the reform group said Sunday.

Papers prepared for the lawsuit also state that State Secretary Sandra B. Mortham's decision to not allow the substitutions amounts to encouraging a "permanent monopoly" on the political process by the Republican and Democratic parties.

Russell Verney, Reform Party national coordinator, said that the Florida law does not prohibit the substitution of candidates' names on the state's ballot.

Other states allow such a practice, in which the party said it was emphasizing that the stand-ins are just holding a place on state ballots until delegates decide on their ticket at a nominating convention this summer.

"By her actions, the Secretary of State is discriminating against more than 100,000 Floridians whose constitutional freedoms are being deprived," Verney said in a prepared statement.

"Competition in ideas and governmental policy are at the core of our democratic process and First Amendment freedoms," he said.

"The voters in Florida should have the right to vote for their respective party's presidential candidates, who will be nominated by convention this summer."

The parties' representatives as well as the Florida secretary of state's office did not immediately return telephone calls today from The Associated Press.

The Reform Party will hold two national conventions to select the party's Presidential candidate for the 1996 election. The first will be held on August 11 and the date of the second has not been announced.

Nationwide, Reform party organizers have succeeded in placing the Texas billionaire or his party on ballots in 19 states and are aiming for all 50.

Although Perot has not indicated whether he will run this year, the third party movement grew from his 1992 presidential bid. He has reported providing $2.85 million to help the party qualify for all state ballots this year.

Perot has not ruled out running himself. In 1992, James Stockdale also was initially billed as vice presidential stand-in before he became the official No. 2.

The Texas businessman has said it's up to the party's members to choose a nominee at a national convention in August.

Journalists foresee Chinese threat to their freedoms

HONG KONG (AP) — As Hong Kong enters its final year before the Chinese takeover, its journalists warn their freedoms are under "a very real threat" from Communists bent on rolling back civil liberties.

They cited China's harassment of Hong Kong journalists working in China, its blacklisting of media it regards as unfriendly and proposed changes to Hong Kong's civil liberties laws.

"Already, it has been instrumental in creating a climate of fear among local journalists," said the annual report of the Hong Kong Journalists Association and Article 19, an international watchdog group.

"This kind of interference and threatening behavior toward the free operation of the Hong Kong media is a very real threat to freedom of expression in Hong Kong, both before and after the handover" on July 1, 1997, said the report, released Sunday.

While faulting the colonial government for failing to repeal many of its own restrictive laws, the report focuses most of its worries on China.

It deals in detail with China's plans, through its Hong Kong appointees, to roll back civil liberties laws that were enacted to comply with Hong Kong's 1991 Bill of Rights.

Cuban athletes desert Olympic team in Mexico

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — Two members of Cuba's Olympic boxing team deserted during training in Mexico, the state-run news agency said Sunday.

Ramon Garbey and Joel Casamayor, both 22, slipped away during the 12-member Cuban team's free time, said Miguel Barrientos, a spokesman for the boxing squad.

Their whereabouts are unknown, and they are presumed to have defected, Barrientos said, according to Notimex news agency and other news media.

Garbey and Casamayor were considered strong contenders for gold medals on a team that has traditionally been an international power.

The rest of the team will remain in Mexico to train for next month's Olympics in Atlanta, Barrientos said.

Odyssey ends in boy's search for his mother

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A 10-year-old boy who crossed two countries and trekked 1,300 miles to look for his mother in the United States will be returned to Honduras — without a chance to complete his search, the government announced Sunday.

Elmer Javier Licona was found June 18 in Guadalajara, Mexico, trying to sneak onto a flight to Los Angeles after leaving his village in Honduras with no food or money. His mother is reportedly living illegally in southern California.

Elmer's odyssey attracted international attention, but the sympathy of strangers was not enough to win him a visa to the United States.

The Honduran government said in a statement that its consul in Guadalajara "has strict instructions to return our young Honduran to this country on Tuesday."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Choosing between safety and savings?

Fear of flying — at least on upstart airlines — has increased since the horrific ValuJet crash in the Florida Everglades recently. You can't blame folks for that, especially with indications that ValuJet has had some problems with other aircraft too. You can't spend the money you might save on airfare if you don't get the most basic service — one safe landing for every take-off. That's a basic service.

But it's starting to look as if the stampede in the marketplace is based far more on fear than on specific consumer information. And that's where the Federal Aviation Administration and other Department of Transportation agencies have an urgent role to play before market forces — which may or may not be irrational — swamp the market choices that consumers rationally would prefer to have.

Consider little Nations Air, a carrier with two 737 jets. For nearly a year, it has given USAir its only scheduled competition between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh or Boston. The result has been lower fares for consumers.

But the day after the ValuJet crash, Nations Air's reservations plummeted 28 percent. Then, as reports of ValuJet's supposed problems became better known, Nations Air's bookings skidded by 40 percent. Now the small airline has suspended its Philadelphia flights. You can bet USAir fares will rise soon; it's the American way — forces of the marketplace doing their thing.

People believe they're safer by flying with an airline that has been flying people around for a longer time. This sounds like common sense, but it just ain't necessarily so. Almost every airline has had a crash at some time or another, but after a while, most people tend to forget.

Of course, as the airlines always point out, flying is much safer than driving a car. But something about so many people dying all at the same time gets folks worked up in a way that tens of thousands a year buying the farm in automobile accidents doesn't, much less the obscenity of thousands of adults — and hundreds of children — getting shot to death in this country each year. Maybe it's the illusion of what you can control.

This airline thing is one the government can do something useful about. The feds must move quickly to assure the public it is doing something to make sure small airlines are safe to fly.

People don't want to have to choose between safety and savings — and shouldn't have to.

"Conventional wisdom" is neither when applied to the media. It neither reflects public opinion nor is it intelligent.

On the June 2 Face the Nation, CBS reporter Bob Schieffer ended with a commentary noting the difficulties for politicians running on platforms of change: "Bill Clinton did and won the presidency, but he got only 43 percent of the vote. He misread that as a mandate for a massive, and radical change in America's health-care system. His calculation was so wrong that he not only saw his health care plan collapse, his own popularity plunged and his party lost control of both houses of Congress for the first time in 40 years. Republicans then interpreted that as a mandate for even more dramatic change. But they miscalculated too, scared a lot of voters in the process, and the result was that the president who seemed politically dead two years ago, now holds a 15- or 20-point lead over his Republican opponent in the coming election."

Within Schieffer's sermon is a fascinating shift in media opinion. It is certainly acceptable to label the Clinton agenda "radical." After all, with control over both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue, the Democrats peeled away restrictions on abortion on demand, pushed for openly gay soldiers in the military, raised taxes to historically high levels and promoted universally subsidized health care.

The extremist nature of this administration's agenda as cited by Schieffer has been an underlying theme — the conventional wisdom — in CBS coverage, right? Wrong. Schieffer was the first CBS reporter to apply the term "radical" to Clinton.

Using the Nexis news data retrieval system to search for the word "extreme" within 25 words of "Republican" or "Democrat" in the three news magazines (Time, Newsweek and U.S. News & World Report) and USA Today from Jan. 1, 1993, to May 31, 1996, a fascinating trend develops. In '93 and '94, reporters used just 41 extremist labels, but 26 of those were applied solely to Republicans, compared to only five for the Democrats.

But when the Republicans captured the Congress in late 1994, how things changed. In the first 17 months of GOP control, they were described as "extreme" in 123 stories. Only two were devoted to the "extreme" Democrats — and one of those was a rejection of that label. Add those numbers and you get 149 extremist labels applied to the Republicans and seven to the Democrats.

What changed in 1994 that made the media suddenly notice extremism? Obviously, it was the GOP agenda made possible by the electorate's "temper tantrum," as Peter Jennings described it. Clinton, the political opportunist, saw the opening. The public had decisively rejected his radical policies, the media would undermine the GOP agenda as extremist, and Clinton could reinvent himself as a moderate caught between two extremes — and do it without media scrutiny. After all, he had pulled it off once before, in the '92 campaign. Clinton gambled and won. In the last two years, the media have become an echo chamber for the Dick Morris political strategy.

Actually, they've done Morris one better. Despite "triangulation" having two extremes, reporters see only one, as self-declared U.S. News "moderate" Kenneth Walsh wrote on July 31, 1995: "The president is trying to position himself as a moderate who occupies a middle ground between liberal Democrats and ultraconservative Republicans." Three months later, in another "news story," Walsh publicly rejoiced at the political progress his moderate President was making: "President Clinton, playing Horatius at the bridge against the Republican hordes, is finally winning some favorable reviews. Democrats are rallying to his side as he defends the poor and elderly against GOP 'extremism.'"

And then there's the curious lack of enthusiasm on the part of our endless supply of media analysts and pundits for any effort to plumb the Clintonesque contradictions in this strategy. For example, if the Republicans are "extremists," what does that make the president, who claims to agree with them on practically everything? Also, how can the Republicans be guilty of "extremism" in trying to implement the Contract With America when they are being blamed by the public for failing to pass it over the president's vetoes? And how can Clinton take credit for halving the deficit when only the "extremists" advocated reductions in the growth of spending?

The May 31 Washington Post carried an Associated Press dispatch that told the real story of where government spending is headed. The first major spending bill for 1997 has emerged, and the Republicans have retreated on issue after issue and promise after promise. EPA spending is up. HUD spending is up. Veterans Affairs spending is up. NASA is up. Only foreign-aid spending fell. All this, AP concluded, meant "the bill was more moderate than last year's bill."

That shows you the funhouse that Washington reporters live in. It's "moderate" when almost everything in the budget increases. But when the percentage of spending growth ticks down a few notches, it is — "extremism."

Dick Morris is having a ball.

Today in History
Today is Monday, July 1, the 183rd day of 1996. There are 183 days left in the year. This is Canada Day.

Today's Highlight in History:
Fifty years ago, on July 1, 1946, the United States exploded a 20-kiloton atomic bomb near Bikini Atoll in the Pacific, using dozens of surplus ships as targets.

On this date:
In 1863, the Civil War Battle at Gettysburg began.

In 1867, Canada became a self-governing dominion of Great Britain as the British North America Act took effect.

In 1898, during the Spanish-American War, Theodore Roosevelt and his "Rough Riders" waged a victorious assault on San Juan Hill in Cuba.

In 1916, Dwight D. Eisenhower married Mary ("Mamie") Geneva Doud in Denver, Colo.

In 1943, "pay-as-you-go" income tax withholding began.

Morality and the Republican platform

Sen. Robert Dole is a fine man and will make a good president (yes, you can call that a prediction). But glimpses of how his mind works on some subjects are perplexing. There is, for example, the curious matter of his handling of the abortion plank in the Republican platform.

As everyone knows, the would be nominee had finessed the issue, only to stomp all over his elegant creation just a couple of days later. Sen. Dole at first said that the party would retain the pro-life plank it has included in every platform since 1980 but would put a statement in the preamble expressing tolerance for differing ideas. Everyone from Pat Buchanan to Ann Stone was satisfied. The great abortion rift seemed to melt away. But then, Sen. Dole went further, denouncing pro-lifers by name and announcing that tolerance language would appear in the abortion plank itself.

Sigh. As of this writing, the politicians and tacticians are scurrying to repair the damage and devise some face saving compromise.

That's their job. Mine is different. Something Dole said during the fracas deserves a closer look. He said that abortion is a moral issue and therefore the plank must contain a disclaimer about respecting other points of view.

Huh? What does that mean — that on moral matters, Republicans are willing to entertain conflicting points of view but on non-moral matters, like say, the capital gains tax cut or the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit, they hold firm?

Shouldn't it be just the other way around? A party platform covers a lot of ground. In 1988, the Republican Party platform set forth official positions on hundreds of issues — jobs, the homeless, immigration, drugs, urban revitalization, guns, education, opening markets abroad, government ethics, energy, rural economic development and AIDS — to name a just a few. Some of the areas covered are more debatable than others. You can argue pro and con about immigration, regulatory reform, workers' rights and government ethics. They are matters that can be resolved with reference to prudential judgments — viz, is immigration helping or hurting the economy?

Mona Charen

But moral reasoning tends to be of a different order. It relies upon fixed and immutable principles. We oppose child labor not because we think it is bad for the economy. Our view would be no different if it helped the economy. We oppose it because it is morally wrong to force children to bear the burdens of adults. Similarly, we oppose racial discrimination because it is wrong. It is a moral issue and therefore brooks no opposition.

If the Republican Party were to insert a plank in its platform expressing repugnance at racial discrimination but allowing that since this is a moral issue, we respect those who disagree, the platform would rightly be dismissed as incoherent.

Ah, say the relativists, but who decides what those principles are? Your principles are not my principles. Your right an wrong are not mine.

But is that really true? It might have seemed that white Southerners circa 1950 and the civil rights movement had no moral compass in common. But it wasn't so. In time, the segregationists were brought around to the view that their stand was morally wrong and the other side right.

If we ever reach the point in this country when two camps are truly without common frames of reference about moral absolutes, we will be in deep trouble. For now, the pro-life side is trying to persuade the pro-choice side that abortion is morally wrong — morally wrong according to the same morality that teaches racism, cruelty and aggression to be wrong.

In its spring issue, The Human Life Review reprints a 1975 essay by Rabbi Immanuel Jakobovits, formerly chief rabbi of the United Kingdom. He assails the notion that important moral judgments are matter of conscience. "In the Jewish view," he wrote, "the human conscience is meant to enforce laws, not to make them."

Does that mean that there is no place for pro-choice voters in the Republican Party? No. But it certainly does mean that the very last place you would put a statement expressing openness to other points of view is in the plank that expresses the party's moral aversion to abortion.

Democrats are extremists on abortion

Just how inclusive is a political party that refuses to tolerate dissent on the abortion issue?

That refuses to modify the language of its platform in deference to the substantial minority within its party ranks who respectfully disagree with the majority on abortion?

That will not allow anyone who does not toe the party line on abortion to address the party's national convention?

Well, that is precisely what is happening within the Democratic Party. Yet, you would never know this from watching the evening news or reading the national press. That's because the liberal media would prefer to focus on divisions within the Republican Party over the abortion issue, while giving the Democrats — who are no less divided — a free pass.

Indeed, at least one-fifth of the Democrats in Congress boast pro-life voting records, according to the National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League.

And at least 30 House Democrats, led by Reps. Tony Hall of Ohio and Bart Stupak of Michigan, are petitioning their leaders to "soften" the party's official position, which advocates freedom to abort unborn babies under any and every circumstance.

"Those of us Democrats who happen to be pro-life Democrats would like to see the Democratic Party be more understanding and receptive to our ideas and our concerns," said Rep. Stupak.

His sentiments were echoed by Rep. James Barcia, a Michigan Democrat, who urges a party platform with a "position of neutrality on abortion."

Of course, there is less than zero chance that the Democrats will modify their pro-abortion platform position. Not as long as the party is beholden to extremists like NARAL president Kate

Joseph Perkins

Michelman, who dismisses the conscientious concerns of Reps. Hall and Barcia and their fellow pro-life Democrats as "much ado about nothing."

In 1992, it may be remembered, Michelman appeared on stage at the Democratic National Convention during prime-time hours. By contrast, Pennsylvania Gov. Robert Casey — who happened to be pro-life — was relegated to the rafters of Madison Square Garden, having been denied an opportunity to address his fellow Democrats during prime or any other time.

In a scathing critique of his party convention, published in the Wall Street Journal, Casey wrote that the four-day political bash was carefully choreographed to highlight the unity of the party and its moderate, middle-of-the-road platform.

But, Casey added, "On the abortion issue, the platform is neither moderate nor middle-of-the-road. On this issue, the platform is radical and extreme, espousing abortion on demand."

Well, four years have passed, and the Democrats are no less radical or extreme on the abortion issue. Indeed, while many Democratic leaders — including President Clinton — profess personal revulsion to abortion, they have demonstrated their willingness to countenance any and every form of abortion, no matter how vile.

Consider recent legislation that would outlaw partial-birth abortions. The grisly procedure involves partially extracting an unborn baby, legs first, through the birth canal, cutting an incision in the skull base, then draining the brain through a suction tube, causing the skull to collapse.

Even abortion rights Democrats like Sen. Patrick Moynihan of New York and Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri had to draw the line at this procedure, voting for a national ban. Yet, President Clinton, with Michelman and other abortion extremists whispering in his ear, vetoed the ban, unwilling to place any limit whatsoever on abortion.

Funny thing, though, while political pundits (of the liberal persuasion) insist that the GOP's pro-life platform alienates voters, they poo-poo the suggestion that the Democrats' radical pro-abortion platform turns off voters.

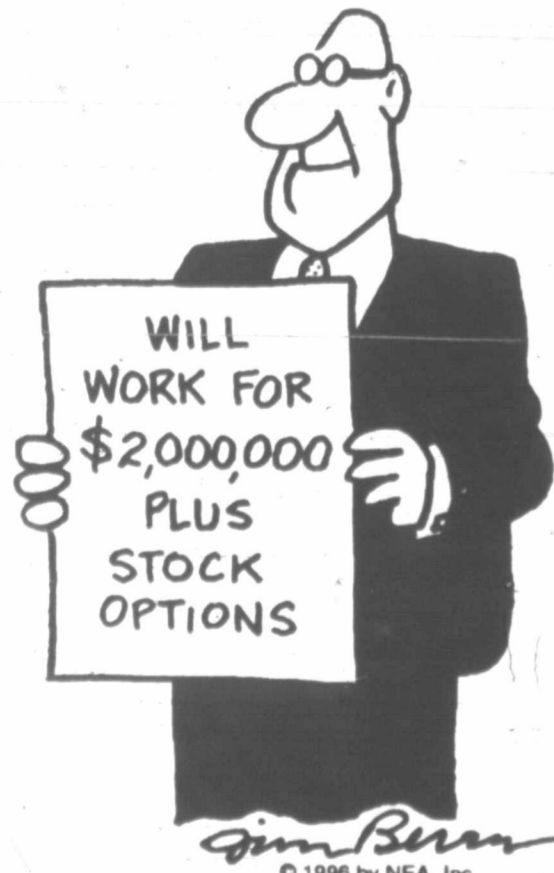

But, in fact, it is likelier that the abortion issue will work against Clinton and the Democrats this fall, rather than the Republicans. That's because, by vetoing the ban on partial-birth abortions, Clinton placed himself squarely at odds with Catholic voters, who make up a quarter of the electorate, and who voted for the Democrat in 1992.

The Democrats, and their friends in the media, have misread the abortion issue. While the majority of Americans may not favor an outright ban on any and all abortions, they certainly do not support the Democratic position, which is abortion on demand, under any and every circumstance.

1996 Miss Rodeo America to be special Top O' Texas Rodeo guest

Tanya McKinnon, 1996 Miss Rodeo America, will be a special guest for the 50th Top O' Texas Rodeo for the Friday and Saturday night performances, July 12 and 13.

With her hometown in Randolph, Utah, McKinnon was crowned Miss Rodeo Utah in 1995, making her eligible to compete for the national title.

Before a capacity crowd at the Flamingo Hilton Show Room in Las Vegas, McKinnon stood momentarily stunned when she heard her name announced as the 1996 Miss Rodeo America.

"I couldn't believe it was my name that they called," she said. "I couldn't believe that I was called for the top five, and then to have this honor. It's indescribable."

From a group of 33 state title holders, her dream of becoming Miss Rodeo America became reality when she was crowned at the 40th anniversary pageant in early December. The women participated in week-long competition that showcased their beauty, grace, horsemanship and knowledge about the sport of professional rodeo.

The contestants also made public appearances and rode in the opening ceremony at the National Finals Rodeo on Dec. 1, 1995, in Las Vegas, marking the first time all Miss Rodeo America contestants participated in the ceremony.

McKinnon, who also had served as the 1992-93 National High School Rodeo Queen, attends Utah State University, where she is majoring in bioveterinary medicine with a minor in communications. She hopes to earn her doctor of veterinary medicine degree from the Colorado State University School of Veterinary Medicine and Biomedical Sciences, fulfilling her ambition of becoming a veterinarian, specializing in large animals.

She already has completed a veterinarian internship and has been an associate writer for Horse Sense Newspaper. A senior at Utah State University, she has been on the Dean's List university honor roll. She is a member of the USU Pre-veterinary Club, USU Animal Science Club, Alpha Zeta Fraternity and USU Rodeo Team.

McKinnon, an only child, enjoys snow skiing, jet skiing, bungee jumping, writing, making porcelain dolls and working cattle on the family ranch. She got involved in rodeo "because it was either that or practice the piano, and I hated the piano," she said.

She grew up on a ranch in northern Utah and has been riding horses and working on the ranch all her life.

"I am a cowgirl, born and raised on a cattle ranch," McKinnon said. "The western way of life is my life and heritage. I'm proud to be able to represent it."

take her to hundreds of rodeos and requires her to make countless public appearances, down untold back roads and through major airports.

"There's a difference between being a queen and representing rodeo," McKinnon said. "The cowboys are busy with their events and all their work. They need someone to talk to the press and other media, sponsors and fans. Someone who is knowledgeable about the sport of rodeo and who can answer their questions. It's also important that it be someone who can relate to the cowboys. I guess that's going to be one of my big roles."

McKinnon, speaking of her role, said, "On behalf of professional rodeo and the Miss Rodeo America Pageant, I will give whatever help and assistance I can. As Miss Rodeo America, I consider it a privilege and honor to represent professional rodeo and the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association."

Blair County women claim police coercing niece

ALTOONA, Pa. (AP) — A Texas prosecutor said allegations by two Blair County women that police misinterpreted evidence in their niece's murder case should not be considered credible.

Dallas County Assistant District Attorney Norm Kinne declined comment on specific evidence but said the women have not visited the crime scene and so probably do not know details of the case.

Darlie Routier's aunt Sherry Moses told The Altoona Mirror that police tried to brainwash her niece into admitting she stabbed her two young sons to death.

"She was late to her own sons' viewing because police kept her in questioning," Moses said. "They've tried to brainwash her into thinking she did it, but she can't give a confession because she didn't do it."

Routier, 26, is being held on two counts of capital murder in the stabbing deaths of Devon, 6, and Damon, 5, on June 6 while they slept in the living room of the family's home in Rowlett, Texas. Routier also was stabbed and blamed an intruder for the slayings, but police later determined her wounds were self-inflicted.

Way cleared for inquiry into state funding practices

EL PASO (AP) — A criminal investigation into four state agencies' spending practices, courts of inquiry have emerged from two years of legal delays with a green light.

The Court of Criminal Appeals last week lifted a stay imposed on Feb. 18, 1994. The inquiries had been stalled since June 1994, when the state's highest criminal appellate court temporarily shut them down at the request of Texas Attorney General Dan Morales.

State District Judge Edward Marquez has ordered four courts of inquiry after alleging that El Paso County has been receiving short shrift in state funding of its transportation, mental health and elderly programs.

"Estoy en la Gloria (I am in heaven)," Marquez said Friday. "I am very happy and very pleased with the Court of Criminal Appeals decision. It is a tremendous victory for the courts of inquiry and for the community of El Paso."

Ward Tisdale, spokesman with the attorney general's office in Austin, said the office had not decided whether to file another appeal.

Asian youths accuse two nightclubs of discriminating

HOUSTON (AP) — A class-action lawsuit filed by 20 Asian youths says two Houston nightclubs denied them admission because of their race.

The Roxy and Tempest clubs have arbitrarily used dress codes to keep out Asians, according to the lawsuit filed Saturday in U.S. District Court in Houston.

"For example, The Roxy and Tempest frequently exclude Asian men, claiming the men's banded-collar shirts are too casual, even while they admit white men in similar shirts — or T-shirts," papers filed the lawsuit said.

The lawsuit, which currently has about 20 plaintiffs, will not specify monetary damages until it is known how many other plaintiffs will join the suit, said attorney David Kahne. He said other nightclubs might also be sued.

"We're seeing a broad pattern of discrimination," said Kahne.

"On April 20, I tried to go to the Tempest with my boyfriend and the bouncer told my boyfriend his pants were too baggy," said Nicole La, 23. "I stood by and watched as Caucasian men wearing the same pants were allowed to go in."

Providing healthy snacks for kids

When mid-morning and afternoon roll round, parents and caregivers face the battle of health food versus junk food when it comes to a child's snack time. Snacks may seem like a ploy for children to get their hands on some candy. But in reality, children simply need extra helpings of the right foods.

A child's stomach is very small and cannot digest enough food at meal time to satisfy the need for certain nutrients that keep them from getting hungry between meals. Snacks help fill the hunger gap between meals.

Not all snacks give a child vitamins and nutrients they need to grow strong and healthy. Snacks, however, may be used to substitute vital nutrients that were missed during a main meal. A parent or caregiver can plan both meals and snacks at the same time, insuring that a child receives all the nutrition he or she needs.

Parents and caregivers are advised to stay away from cookies loaded with sugar, fat and calories. Candy contains few nutrients of value and should be distributed sparingly. Fried foods should also be avoided when considering a healthy snack.

Satisfying a child's thirst during the summer is another challenge. An absolute must is water. Nothing is absorbed by the body as fast as water. If the taste of water does not satisfy a thirst, dress it up with a slice of lemon or lime.

Homemakers' News

Donna Brauchi

Caffeinated colas and sugared juice drinks should be left on the store shelf. The sweeter the drink, the longer it will delay the absorption of fluid into the body. Caffeine can be particularly harmful because it is a diuretic and will cause the body to eliminate fluid.

Here are some smart and fun snacks just right for kids:

- Stock up on carbohydrates — bagels, pretzels, whole grain breads and rolls, lowfat crackers and English muffins.

- Keep plenty of washed and cut raw vegetables in the refrigerator. Team them with yogurt or bean dip.

- Have an assortment of bread spreads handy such as peanut butter, smooth cottage cheese, reduced fat cream cheese, jams, jellies and preserves.

- Make your own frozen juice pops in an ice cube tray, or freeze grapes, strawberries or chunks of banana, pineapple or melon.

- Bake your own oatmeal cookies. You can cut the shortening, margarine, oil or butter and sugar in many recipes by at least one-third without affecting quality.

- Put together a large batch of cereal, pretzel and nut mix.

- Prepare air popped popcorn and sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese.

- Skewer chunks of fruit, cheese or meat on ice cream pop sticks or better yet — pretzels!

- Fill paper cupcake liners with grapes, nuts, raisins and bits of cheese.

- Dish up a sundae of fruits — top with yogurt, raisins, chopped nuts and wheat germ.

Snack time can be used to help children form good eating habits. By encouraging them to eat the right foods between and during meals, you can provide children with a sound basis for a lifetime of sensible nutrition. Set an example for children. They will want to snack on the same things they see you eating and drinking.

Shots of Vitamin C help restore smokers' blood vessels

DALLAS (AP) — Injecting vitamin C into smokers' blood vessels reverses one of the most harmful cardiovascular effects of smoking, according to a study published today.

But more research is needed to determine whether vitamin C pills might help reduce heart disease associated with cigarettes, said the authors of the study, published in the American Heart Association journal Circulation.

The vitamin works because of its antioxidant function, said Dr. Thomas Munzel of the University of Freiburg in Germany, one of the study's authors.

Cigarette smoke contains powerful oxidants — the same chemicals that make metal rust or peeled apples turn brown. High concentrations of vitamin C or vitamin E turn oxidants into a harmless substance.

The study suggests that in people, oxidants damage the endothelium, a layer of cells that helps arteries narrow and widen.

When the endothelium is damaged, plaque forms more easily in the arteries, making people more prone to strokes and heart attacks.

Researchers injected a chemical that stimulates the endothelial cells directly into the forearm veins of 10 non-smokers and 10 long-time smokers. In the non-smokers, this caused their arteries to widen, but the chemical had a much weaker effect on the smokers' cells.

The researchers then injected vitamin C into the same veins and tried the chemical again. The non-smokers' arteries widened as they had before. But after the vitamin C, the smokers' arteries responded as well as those of the non-smokers.

The process "almost completely reverses endothelial dysfunction in chronic smokers," the study said.

Other researchers cautioned that this does not prove that vitamin C neutralizes the effect of smoking on heart disease.

Another study in which smokers were given vitamin C pills over eight years found that there was no effect on their rate of heart disease, said Eric Rimm, an assistant professor of epidemiology at the Harvard School of Public Health.

"I think vitamin C among smokers is very important," Rimm said. The new study "does suggest that vitamin C has an acute effect of stopping vascular dysfunction."

Mother's Day Brings Mostly Pain For Mom Who's Mostly Ignored

DEAR ABBY: I have three grown children between the ages of 30 and 40. This past Mother's Day, I received no card or gift from any of them. Oh, one child finally left a message on my answering machine late in the evening after I had given up hope and gone to bed. I found it the next morning.

My headache increased with every hour of Mother's Day, and in the days that followed when I looked in vain in my mailbox for a belated card and waited for my phone to ring with a call of apology.

I admit I haven't been a perfect mother, but I think I am worthy of being acknowledged on Mother's Day. From the time they were born, I have given my children — and their children — my love and support and have always remembered them on their special days.

Although my headache has diminished, I cringe at the thought of facing another Mother's Day, and yet I don't want to chastise them for ignoring me because I would never know if future remembrances were done only out of a sense of duty.

Abby, do you have any words of wisdom to comfort me?

IGNORED MOTHER

DEAR IGNORED MOTHER: Sorry, I have no words of wisdom to comfort you, but I do have a question: How do your children treat you the other 364 days of the year?

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR ABBY: About May or June of each year, people begin to receive graduation invitations from nieces, nephews, grandnephews and grandnieces they have rarely seen and with whom they have had no communication whatsoever.

Well, what I do may not be right, but I write the graduates a letter to let them know that I am pleased with their status, and state that I wish I had the opportunity to know them better and hope they will make an effort to stay in touch with me in the future.

I send no gift, no check — nothing but my congratulations, Abby, what do you and your readers have to say about how I handle the situation?

WONDERING IN FLORIDA

DEAR WONDERING: I think you handle the situation admirably in view of the circumstances.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the 62-year-old retired widower, who declined an introduction to a lady because she was a smoker, really got my attention. Where is this man? We need him in Atlanta! I'm a 53-year-old, single, childless, professional female in search of a good man who dislikes cigarette smoke. I've lived and worked in Atlanta for 30 years and have never found a decent, honest, financially secure "significant other." (And this goes for most of my girlfriends, mainly teachers, who are now retiring.)

Abby, if you have the space, please mention Atlanta as the ideal place for men to retire. We're only four hours from the ocean. Thanks. S.P. IN ATLANTA

DEAR S.P.: You're welcome; consider it done. But you failed to mention the 1996 Summer Olympics, another attraction to your fair city. Perhaps you'll find romance in the "No Smoking" section.

Sergey Mariniuk of Moldova, also an Olympian, won his third event, the men's 200 individual medley in 2:05.03.

In the women's 1,500 freestyle, 13-year-old Sachiko Yamada of Japan swam the fourth-fastest time this year, 16:38.95.

U.S. Olympian Kurt Grote took the men's 200 breaststroke in 2:13.96, second-fastest this year, after winning the 100 breast Saturday. Fellow Olympian Brad Bridgewater swam 1:59.69 to win the 200 backstroke.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Mary Joe Fernandez, who teamed with Gigi Fernandez to win the gold medal in women's tennis doubles at the 1992 Olympics, was added to the U.S. team by the U.S. Tennis Association.

Lindsay Davenport, originally scheduled to play doubles, will play only singles, along with Monica Seles and Chanda Rubin.

BASKETBALL

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas traded forward Cherokee Parks, last year's first-round pick to Minnesota on Saturday. In exchange, Minnesota agreed to remove 2-6 lottery protection on the 1997 first-round pick Dallas acquired in the 1994 Sean Rooks trade. Minnesota will keep the 1997 pick only if it is No. 1 overall. Parks played in 64 games, averaging 3.9 points and 3.4 rebounds.

AUTO RACING

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Terry Labonte won his third straight Lysol 200 NASCAR Busch Grand National stock car race at Watkins Glen International.

Labonte, driving a Chevrolet, held off Todd Bodine for a .66-second victory in the 200-mile race on the 2.45-mile track. He collected $22,620 in his second win this season.

Mike McLaughlin finished third, with Bobby Labonte and David Green completing a Chevrolet sweep of the top five.

HORSE RACING

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Zagreb, ridden by Pat Shanahan and trained by Dermot Weld, won the Irish Derby Sunday. Owned by Allen Paulson, who also owns Cigar, Zagreb was a 20-1 outsider in the field of 13 3-year-olds in the 1-1/2-mile race. Polaris Flight was second, with His Excellence, a 50-1 shot, third.

CYCLING

DEN BOSCH, Netherlands (AP) — France's Frederic Moncassin emerged from a crowded sprint to the finish and captured the Tour de France's first stage Sunday.

Moncassin won his first career stage in 5 hours, 1 second. Alex Zulle, last year's overall runner-up, retained the leader's yellow jersey he gained in the prologue. He's trailed by five-time defending champion Miguel Indurain.

HOUSTON (AP) — After an off-season, Darryl Kile is on his game again.

The righthander, continuing to regain his All-Star form of 1994, limited New York to six hits in pitching his second complete game as the Astros defeated the Mets 9-3 Sunday.

"D.K. has always had great stuff," second baseman Craig Biggio said. "The difference in him this year as opposed to last year, I think, is his confidence. He doesn't let a couple of walks or hits get to him."

Last year, Darryl Kile's disappointing season was a contributing factor in Houston's failure to make the playoffs. This season Kile's performance is a key reason the first-place Astros are still atop the NL Central Division.

John Cangelosi drove in three runs and stole three bases and Ricky Gutierrez had three hits as every Houston starter recorded at least one hit. They gave Kile a 6-0 lead after four innings and 8-0 after five.

"He was outstanding," Houston manager Terry Collins said. "He has thrown the ball as well as anybody this year, he just doesn't have the wins to show for it."

Kile (7-5) struck out eight, walked two and held New York hitless for 3 1-3 innings. Last year Kile finished 4-12 and the Astros entertained trade offers before deciding to re-sign the 27-year-old.

"I don't know how we could have scored more," New York manager Dallas Green said. "He got the breaking stuff over and he stayed ahead in the count. He's a tough pitcher; he's no-hit us before."

Kile's complete game was the second in a row for the Astros after Shane Reynolds' Saturday night. It was the first time the Astros have had back-to-back complete games since Sept. 17-18, 1993, when Doug Drabek and Pete Harnisch did it against San Diego.

"I'm more concerned with getting the win than the complete game," Kile said. "The guys got me some runs and played great defense. When you've got a cushion like that to work with, it makes it easier."

The Astros scored six runs in the fourth inning when James Mouton and Ricky Gutierrez led off with back-to-back singles. Randy Knorr's sacrifice fly moved both runners up and one out later, Cangelosi singled up the middle to drive in two runs.

Cangelosi then stole second and third on consecutive pitches, the first theft when pitcher Jason Isringhausen got in the way of catcher Todd Hundley's throw to second. Craig Biggio drove Cangelosi in with a single for a 3-0 lead.

Bagwell followed with a walk. Mets center fielder Lance Johnson then lost Derek Bell's high fly, letting it drop for a double that scored Biggio and Bagwell. After Bell stole third, Orlando Miller singled to drive him in for a 6-0 lead.

In the fifth, Gutierrez led off with a double. Knorr drove him in with a single and the Mets brought in Dave Mlicki to relieve Isringhausen.

Knorr went to second on Kile's sacrifice bunt and to third on a wild pitch. Cangelosi then made it 8-0 with a single that scored Knorr.

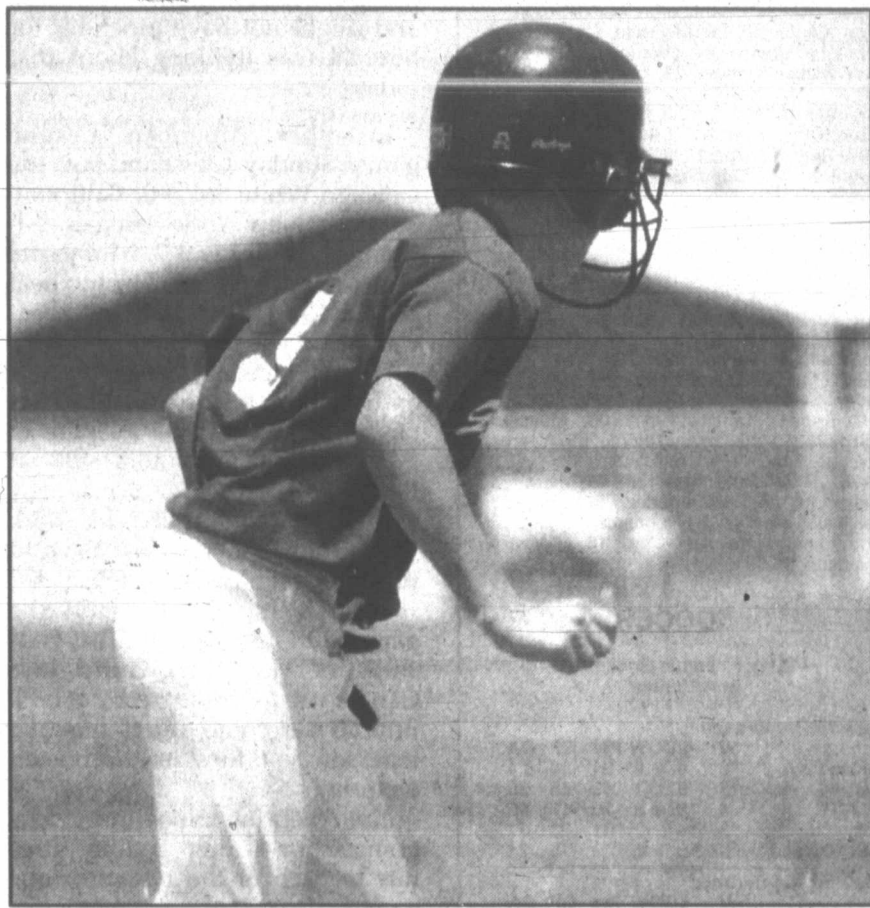

The Mets finally got to Kile when Edgardo Alfonzo led off the sixth with a single. Johnson's double moved Alfonzo to third and a sacrifice fly by Jose Vizcaino gave New York its first run. Bernard Gilkey drove in Johnson with a single for the Mets' second run.

The Mets added one in the ninth on Butch Huskey's RBI double.

"I'll take it," Kile said. "I've had some ups and downs, and I'm just happy to be able to help keep this team in first one more day."

Notes: The Astros finished June with a 15-12 record, their first winning month this season. Houston was 13-14 in April and 14-14 in May. Alex Ochoa hit safely in six of his eight starts with the Mets since being recalled from Triple-A Norfolk on June 22. Houston was second in the National League in runs with 421 before Sunday, 56 behind league leader Colorado. Bernard Gilkey is hitting .388 (19-for-49) in the past 12 games for the Mets. That includes two homers and seven RBIs. In the past 12 games, New York's bullpen is 4-0 with seven saves.

Glo-Valve's Nathanael Hill keeps an eye on the pitcher while leading off third base in the first inning of Sunday's Major Bambino League City Tournament Championship finals against Celanese. Hill scored on a double by Matt Driscoll.

Glo-Valve captures second straight city tourney crown

PAMPA — Glo-Valve Service capped off a banner year Sunday by winning its second consecutive City Tournament Championship of the Pampa Optimist Major Bambino League with a 5-0 whitewash of Hoechst Celanese Chemical Plant.

Ryan Zemanek and John Braddock assisted Glo-Valve with outstanding defensive plays and led the champions' hitting with two hits each. Randy Tice and Matt Driscoll combined pitching efforts for Glo-Valve to shut down Hoechst Celanese with only three hits.

Glo-Valve finished the season 17-1. Hoechst Celanese closed out 13-6. Glo-Valve won the league championship for the 11th time in the team's 23-year history. Glo-Valve has won the City Championship six times in 20 years of post-season play. They have been runners-up five times and third once.

The defending City Champions wasted no time getting out in front. Tice slammed a two-strike pitch to left field for a double to begin the game. He went to third a pitch later on a passed ball. Nathanael Hill, the hitting hero in the previous game between the two teams, crossed up the defense by laying down a perfect bunt which scored Tice. Hill took second on a throwing error, the only error of the game for either team. Hill advanced to third on an infield out and scored on a double by Driscoll. Zemanek then hammered a home run to give Glo-Valve a 4-0 lead.

In the second inning, Glo-Valve threatened by loading the bases on singles by Braddock and Justin Waggoner and a walk to Nathanael Hill. Brodie Hall ruined a bid by Driscoll for a grand slam by catching a fly ball in deep center field for the third out.

Zemanek and Braddock combined for a run in the third for Glo-Valve. Zemanek led off with a Texas League single to left field and took second and third on wild pitches. Braddock singled up the middle to plate Zemanek.

Hoechst Celanese threatened to begin the scoring column in the third inning. With two outs, Daniel Williams lined a triple down the third base line. Zach Rogers walked. Daniel Heuston, Hoechst Celanese's leading hitter with two hits, sent a grounder into right field which Zemanek charged and fired to first base to a stretching Driscoll to nab Heuston by a step.

Driscoll relieved Tice in the fourth inning. Tice received credit for the win. He allowed two hits and one walk while striking out three. Driscoll struck out two. He surrendered one hit and one walk in three innings, receiving credit for a save.

The game ended when Hoechst Celanese shortstop Kyle Francis skied deep to Braddock in center. Braddock made the catch and threw to Hill at second base for a double play which ended the Optimist Major Bambino League season.

All-star practice begins this week. Randall Tice will be the manager of the all-stars. He will be assisted by Mike Zemanek and Ronny Babcock.

Graf continues to win at Wimbledon

By STEPHEN WILSON
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Defending champion Steffi Graf beat 15-year-old Martina Hingis in straight sets today to reach the Wimbledon quarterfinals on a rainy, blustery day.

In a Centre Court match twice suspended by rain, the top-seeded Graf used her big serve and forehand to beat No. 16 Hingis 6-1, 6-4. The match lasted 55 minutes of actual playing time but took 1:45 because of the rain breaks.

The victory avenged the only tournament defeat Graf has suffered this year, a three-set loss to Hingis at the Italian Open in May.

"I think I was probably on top of right from the beginning on," Graf said. "Because I lost my last match against her, I didn't want to give her the chance to get into the match."

Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, the fourth seed and last year's runner-up, rallied from a set and 0-2 down to beat Belgium's Sabine Appelmans, 3-6, 6-2, 6-1.

After getting broken in the second game of the second set, Sanchez Vicario won 11 straight games to take the second set and go up 5-0 in the third. The match ended with a double fault by Appelmans, whose career record against Sanchez Vicario fell to 0-7.

Graf, a six-time Wimbledon champion, showed her superiority on grass once again. Last year, Graf beat Hingis in straight sets in the first round. This time, she gave up one more game but still had a much more powerful game.

"When I started to play my better game, it was second set already," Hingis said. "By then it was too late."

Graf, who has been suffering from a swollen tendon in her left knee, wore a small bandage below the knee. Although she appeared to limp slightly at times, especially in the first set, her game did not appear to suffer.

Graf raced out to a 4-0 lead before double faulting twice and losing serve in the fifth game. The match was suspended by rain for about 20 minutes at 5-1. When play resumed, Graf saved a break point before closing out the set with an ace.

After another 20-minute break at 1-0 in the second set, Hingis began putting more pressure on Graf with her solid baseline game. Graf saved two break points in the sixth game, then broke in the next game with a forehand winner to go up 4-3.

At 5-3, Hingis saved two match points and held serve as Graf made four straight errors. Graf served out the match at love in the next game, finishing with back-to-back aces.

Only half of the top 16 women made it to the second week of the tournament, equaling a Wimbledon record.

Eleven of the top 16 men failed to get past the first three rounds, the most since seeding began 69 years ago. The bottom half of the draw is guaranteed to produce a first-time finalist.

The top half of the bracket is still heavy with big-time names: Pete Sampras, two-time Wimbledon runner-up Goran Ivanisevic and 1991 champion Michael Stich.

The 16th-seeded Cedric Pioline was set to face Sampras today in the only men's match between seeded players. Pioline had never beaten Sampras in six previous tries, including the 1993 U.S. Open final.

Weibring wins GHO championship

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — It wasn't just another golf tournament for veteran D.A. Weibring.

"I had a lot of emotions going on," Weibring said Sunday at the Greater Hartford Open. "I knew I had a chance to win today, and that was important giving what I've experienced this year. ... All the time I worked out when I was ill. ... I thought about having a chance like this. And I had it today."

The Plano, Texas golfer took advantage of the situation to win his fifth title — but more importantly — the first since his career was abruptly interrupted when he was diagnosed with Bell's palsy earlier this year.

He got more than a little encouragement from his 16-year-old son.

"You deserve to win this, you've been through a lot," Matt Weibring told his father, who held a one-stroke lead entering Sunday's final round.

Weibring was unrelenting and got stronger as the round progressed. After bogeying the first hole, he parred eight consecutive holes and got into a position to pull away at the turn.

Weibring, 43, admitted to being rubber-legged at times and not having full vision in his right eye during the GHO, his first tournament in three weeks. He said he drew a lot of motivation from his son.

"I kept telling him 'I want to see you today. I want to talk to you.' And he met me and we walked together to the 10th tee," Weibring said.

He went on to get all four of his birdies on the back nine — the most challenging half of the course at the TPC at River Highlands — and finish with a 10-under 270 total.

"I've always prided myself on being able to perform my best down the stretch," Weibring said.

Tom Kite didn't do too badly, either, in finishing runnerup. He was one of the happiest losers the tour has seen in a while.

Although a win has eluded him since 1993, Kite said he knew he played like a winner even though finishing four strokes back of Weibring.

"I'm very, very confident right now. I feel great about my game," Kite said after shooting a 2-under 68. "When I get that win I know I'm back."

The 46-year-old Kite came back from being four strokes over par after the first nine holes of the tournament. But Kite knew that cold, blustery and wet conditions at the TPC at River Highlands course weren't conducive for making a strong run.

"D.A. played so well and starting out with a three-shot lead I know we were going to have to really, really go deep. The conditions that we had out there today really were not allowing," he said. "I had to have a little bit of help from the leaders."

Jefferson's bat boosts Red Sox past Tigers

By MIKE FLAM
Associated Press Writer

It was the perfect combination for Reggie Jefferson: batting at Fenway Park, his favorite stadium, against the Detroit Tigers, every opponent's favorite pitching staff.

The opportunity did not go wasted.

Jefferson homered twice Sunday and had his second consecutive three-hit game, leading the Boston Red Sox to a 9-4 victory over Detroit and the worst pitching staff in the majors.

One game after being lifted for a pinch-hitter while needing only a home run to hit for the cycle, Jefferson homered in his first at-bat. The Red Sox left fielder also homered in his second at-bat and added a single, reaching in eight straight plate appearances.

"This time I left him in to see if maybe he'd get three," said Boston manager Kevin Kennedy, who said he didn't know Jefferson was going for the cycle Saturday night and might not have pinch-hit for him. "I was thinking about that today."

In other American League games Sunday, Cleveland beat the Chicago White Sox 4-2, Baltimore beat the New York Yankees 9-1, Minnesota beat Texas 4-3, Toronto beat Milwaukee 15-2 and Oakland beat California 1-0.

Despite striking out in the seventh to end his streak, Jefferson has raised his batting average to .379 for the year and .430 at Fenway.

"I can't explain it," he said. "When you hit, you just have to ride it as long as you can."

The Tigers, who entered the game with a 6.96 team ERA, held sluggers Mo Vaughn and Jose Canseco to a combined 2-for-15. But at the same time, they let Jefferson go 6-for-7 in two Boston victories.

Tim Lincecum joined in the fun, going 2-for-4 after getting three hits in each of the two previous games.

"We concentrated on getting Canseco and Vaughn out this weekend and Jefferson and Naehering beat us," Detroit catcher Brad Ausmus said. "It's almost like we let out a breath of air after we got past Canseco and Vaughn. And that hurt us."

Tom Gordon (6-4) was the beneficiary, earning his first victory in a month. He went 6 2-3 innings, allowing four runs and six hits.

Indians 4, White Sox 2
Orel Hershiser earned his fifth straight win, rebounding from two terrible months as host Cleveland increased its lead in the AL Central to three games.

Hershiser (9-4) is 5-0 with a 0.51 ERA since June 8.

Sandy Alomar Jr. hit his first homer in 5 1/2 weeks as the defending AL champions earned a split of the four-game series. He capped Cleveland's three-run fifth inning off Kevin Tapani (8-5) with a two-run homer to left that gave the Indians a 3-1 lead.

Orioles 9, Yankees 1
David Wells pitched a four-hitter at Yankee Stadium but wasn't in the mood to discuss how he did it.

"Not today, guys," he said. Wells (5-7) pitched his third complete game this season, struck out two, walked one and allowed only one other runner to reach scoring position.

Second-place Baltimore salvaged a split of the four-game series and cut the Yankees' lead in the AL East to 4 1/2 games.

Brady Anderson, hitless in his first 12 at-bats in the four-game series, hit his 27th homer, taking the major league lead.

Mariners 4, Rangers 3
Edgar Martinez of Seattle continued his record-setting doubles pace, hitting two more in the Kingdom. Martinez, who also leads the majors with 59 extra-base hits, went 3-for-5 and has a major league-leading 39 doubles this season.

He is on pace to break the major league record of 67 doubles set in 1931 by Boston's Earl Webb.

Sterling Hitchcock (7-3) allowed only one hit through five innings before giving up three runs and four hits in the sixth.

By winning two out of three games in the weekend series, the Mariners cut first-place Texas' lead to five games in the AL West.

Twins 5, Royals 2
Visiting Minnesota beat Kansas City for the ninth time in 10 games as rookie Matt Lawton hit his first career grand slam and Frank Rodriguez (8-7) won his third straight game.

Minnesota's Marty Cordova had his hitting streak end at 23 games — the longest in the majors this season — by going 0-for-4.

Mark Gubicza (4-12) lost his sixth straight, and eighth in his last nine decisions, despite going the distance.

Anthony Quinn hospitalized in Rhode Island

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Anthony Quinn was in satisfactory condition today after being hospitalized with complaints of chest pains.

Quinn, 81, was taken to Rhode Island Hospital Sunday from his vacation home in Bristol, about 12 miles southeast of Providence. Hospital spokeswoman Stephanie Cabrel refused to release further details.

The actor has a history of heart problems.

About six years ago, Quinn underwent coronary bypass surgery at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York because of chest pains. In 1989, chest pains forced the actor to withdraw from a production of the play A Walk in the Woods in Syracuse, N.Y., a week before the play's opening night.

Quinn, a two-time Academy Award winner, has appeared in scores of movies, most notably as the hero in Zorba the Greek and the fierce Bedouin leader in Lawrence of Arabia.

Suspect accused of shooting spree surrenders at church

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — A gunman entered a man's home and shot him dead, then walked out to a busy intersection, flagged down cars and killed two others, including a toddler, police said.

Michael Nikeith Miles surrendered to a clergyman in his hometown of Phenix City, Ala., after Sunday's shooting. Miles waived extradition and was sent back to Columbus, where he was held without bond today.

The gunman entered the home of Deandre Holland in south Columbus shortly Sunday and shot Holland in the head, police said. He then went outside, firing at cars.

Motorist Michel Mire, 45, died from a gunshot to the head.

Jacob Lott, 1 1/2, was killed. His father, Timothy Lott, and two brothers, 9-year-old Mark and 4-year-old John, were wounded. Timothy and Mark Lott were in satisfactory condition after surgery at Columbus Medical Center. John Lott was in critical condition.

A third driver, Dennis Jackson, 37, was listed in unsatisfactory condition at the Columbus hospital early today.

Columbus police Maj. Wesley Mott said after the shootings, the gunman broke into a nearby home, left with the occupant's car keys and drove across the Chattahoochee River to Phenix City.

Inmate umpires get taste of freedom

VIENNA, Ill. (AP) — When the Little League games in this town are over, the young slugers head home and the umpires go to prison.

It's not the ultimate penalty for a bad call. It's part of a program that gives non-violent prisoners a taste of freedom to call balls and strikes.

"I'm just trying to give back what I tried to take away a long time ago," says Christopher Walls, a Vienna Correctional Center inmate who is serving a 13-year sentence for selling drugs. "I got a son 10 years old and another 5 years old. I don't get to do this with them. This is my way of making up for that."

For more than 20 years, the prison has been supplying umpires to this southern Illinois community. Prison officials can't recall any escapes or incidents. And parents, players and coaches seem happy to have them.

Not every inmate who volunteers to ump makes the cut. This year, about 90 signed up. Corrections officials whittled that down to 35, and only about a dozen finished the two months of training.

Navajos apply political pressure to obtain pardon for MacDonald

TEEC NOS POS, Ariz. (AP) — President Clinton could lose as many as 20,000 Navajo votes if he doesn't pardon former tribal chairman Peter MacDonald, tribal officials said.

Navajo Vice President Thomas Atcity, a cousin of MacDonald, spoke to about 100 MacDonald supporters Saturday at the Northern Dine Boholnii Convention here in the former chairman's home town.

The organization's goal is to free MacDonald from federal prison. He is serving a 14-year sentence in Fort Worth, Texas and is in failing health after suffering an apparent heart attack in March.

Atcity said during his recent trip to Washington, he told members of Clinton's staff that an estimated 20,000 Navajo votes could be riding on the pardon.

"If there is no positive action on his pardon, they might not vote, or they may vote Republican," he said. "If they have to use political pressure, they will."

MacDonald, 67, was convicted of conspiracy in connection with a 1989 riot in Window Rock that left two people dead and injured 11. The riot occurred after two years of political turmoil that centered around a Senate investigation linking MacDonald to bribes and kickbacks.

In February 1989, the Navajo Tribal Council voted to remove MacDonald from office. But his supporters objected to the vote and about 300 people marched on Window Rock, intent on restoring the chairman to power.

Prosecutors claimed MacDonald conspired to commit assault and kidnapping by urging his supporters to overthrow the government.

Most Americans oppose legalizing gay marriages

NEW YORK (AP) — While most Americans say gays should have equal rights in the job market, they oppose giving homosexuals a legal right to marry by 57 percent to 30 percent, according to an Associated Press poll.

Conservative and liberal lawmakers have squared off on this issue because Hawaii's highest court has signaled it might legalize same-sex marriage within the next two years. The poll indicates the issue causes disagreement within many families, too.

Two-thirds of men oppose gay marriage, but only 49 percent of women do, and opposition also falls under 50 percent among all adults under age 45. Those under age 35 split almost evenly on the issue, with 44 percent in favor of the right to marry and 47 percent opposed.

The poll taken June 14-18 involved 1,019 adults interviewed by ICR Survey-Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants. Results have a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Gay rights groups want to link homosexual marriage to workplace issues because Americans increasingly support gay rights in terms of job opportunities — 85 percent to 10 percent in the poll, compared with 76 percent to 16 percent in an AP poll in 1992.

"We know that is our strongest issue. Gay marriage is our weakest issue," said David Smith, spokesman for the Human Rights Campaign, a gay advocacy group based in Washington, D.C.

Even among people who favor political candidates endorsed by the Christian conservative movement, 77 percent think gays should have equal rights to jobs.

But some Christian conservatives like the Rev. Lou Sheldon see gay marriage as a big threat to society. He said gay activists "had a calculated plan to destroy marriage, as we knew it, through the Hawaii case."

Bills barring recognition of same-sex marriage have been enacted in 11 states and introduced in 23 others and in both houses of Congress.

"The legislation that we're talking about, the Defense of Marriage Act, is a reactive piece of legislation," said Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga. "It is a reaction to the aggressive agenda of the homosexual extremists."

In electoral politics, the poll suggests that gay rights is a less divisive issue than abortion. If a candidate supports a constitutional amendment to ban abortion, that would make a difference to most people. Twenty-five percent would be more likely to vote for that candidate, 43 percent less likely.
