Winners drawn in Lefors land giveaway

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Fourteen people literally from across the country had their names drawn Monday evening as winners of free lots of land in Lefors.

Winners hail from San Diego, Houston, Austin, Cincinnati and Mesa, Ariz., among other cities around the nation.

Those 14 names, plus 14 alternates, were drawn from a field of 581 entrants in Lefors' land giveaway during a ceremony Monday at City Hall.

A packed house of Lefors residents and at least two out-of-state entrants applauded after each name was drawn, audibly expressing surprise at the hometowns of some who entered the contest.

Council members were only able to contact two of the winners by phone after the drawing, but plan to send certified letters this week to all the winners. The winners will have two weeks after they receive the letter to decide whether or not they will take the land. The alternates drawn would be contacted should the winners choose not to accept their lot.

One winner, Jason Daulton of Houston, said he was "thoroughly confused right now" about what he plans to do with his lot, a 54 by 125 foot lot on 10th Street.

Daulton said he saw a news story on the giveaway a couple of months and decided to enter.

"I said 'what the hell' and called City Hall," Daulton said. "I'm kinda surprised I won; I'd almost forgot about it."

"It's incredible. I cannot believe we won," said Layne Whaley, wife of winner Russell Whaley of Mesa, Ariz. "We've never won anything in our lives, and we think it's fabulous."

Mrs. Whaley, a 1993 body-building champion, indicated her family may accept the lot.

"My husband and I believe that change is good. We have in the past thrown everything up in the air and moved from San Diego to Arizona," she said.

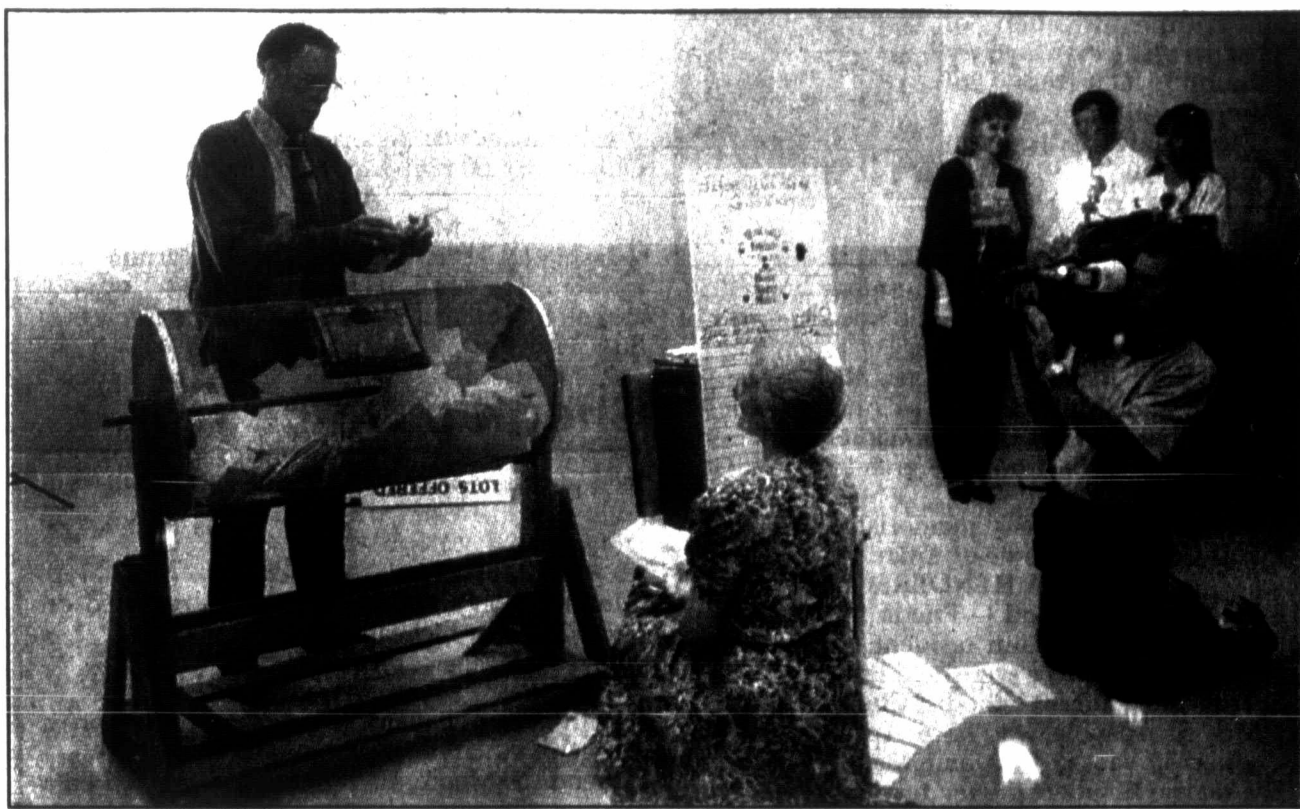

The Whaleys have a 15-month-old daughter, Cheyenne, along with a Labrador and a cat.

Lefors City Secretary Virginia Maples said this morning that two other winners had returned calls this morning. One winner, Judith Strauss of Whitefield, Okla., declined the lot because of an illness in the family. Another, Robin Sica of Clintonville, Wis., asked for pictures of her lot and the town before making up her mind.

None of the winners were present at the drawing, but at least two entrants attended.

"I just can't believe they didn't call my name. I'm really disappointed," said Linda Heit who, along with two friends, drove from Denver to attend the drawing.

"We were positive I was going to win. ... I thought I'd just get to live in this little town. I'm kinda stunned," she said.

Gray County Judge Richard Peet, left, draws one of 14 winners in the Lefors land giveaway Monday evening. City Secretary Virginia Maples, center, jots down the names of each of the winners and alternates. Television crews from Amarillo filmed the event, which has gained national attention.

Jim and Billie Ruth Kasid from Concord, Calif., also attended the drawing.

"We just talked about it and we wanted to get away from Concord. So we put our names in and see what happens," Mr. Kasid said.

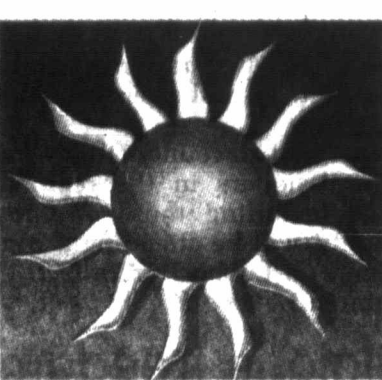

"We would build on it and probably live in it," Mrs. Kasid said before the drawing.

Winners of the drawing were Isaac Brionez of San Diego, Calif.; Allison Moore of San Augustine, Texas; Judith Strauss of Whitefield, Okla.; Janice Spaulding of Yerington, Nev.; John Barthelemy of Orange, Texas; Jason Daulton of Houston; Vera Rodriguez of Bakersfield, Calif.; Mark Lang of Cincinnati, Ohio; Russell Whaley of Mesa, Ariz.; J.P. Standard of Austin; Claudise Hamlett Allison of Las Vegas, Nev.; Gerrie Payne of Grass Valley, Calif.; Jean Jordan of Houston; and Robin Sica of Clintonville, Wis.

McLEAN - A Kansas man remains in Gray County jail in lieu of bond charged with possession of marijuana after the Blazer he was driving was discovered to have a false compartment holding 54 bricks of suspected marijuana.

Jose Antonio Bilbao, 21, of Kansas City was arrested late Thursday afternoon on Interstate 40 by Department of Public Safety trooper Chad Estes following a traffic stop, according to DPS secretary Donna Brown.

Bilbao's bond is set at $20,000 on the second degree felony charge of possession of marijuana over 50 lbs.

According to Brown, Estes stopped Bilbao at the 141 mile marker in Gray County and as he walked toward the Chevrolet S10 Blazer, the trooper saw gasoline splashing out of the gasoline tank.

Estes obtained a consent to search the Blazer including the gas tank, Brown said.

After the tank was removed at Richardson's Texaco in McLean, it was discovered to have a false compartment holding the bricks of "green, leafy substance" wrapped in cellophane and brown package tape, she explained.

The suspected marijuana was taken to the DPS lab in Amarillo for analysis, Brown said.

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC, CBS, NBC and PBS, but not Fox, will broadcast live coverage of this year's second and final presidential debate, originating at 9 p.m. EDT Wednesday from San Diego.

When the debate ends at 10:30 p.m., all four networks will air a half-hour of analysis.

Fox Broadcasting will carry the baseball playoff game between the Atlanta Braves and the St. Louis Cardinals instead of the debate.

On cable, CNN, C-SPAN, Fox News Channel and MSNBC also will carry the debate.

Afterward, CNN will have a special edition of Larry King Live with independent presidential candidates including Ross Perot and Ralph Nader. Later, from midnight to 12:30 a.m., CNN will present analysis on the debate.

At 7 p.m., C-SPAN will present a "Presidential Preview," providing a look at how the candidates, and the host city, prepare for the debates. After the debate, C-SPAN will have a wrap-up, including audience interviews and a viewer call-in.

Library board rejects Internet filter proposal

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Access to the Internet will be unimpeded at Lovett Memorial Library after a pair of split votes Monday afternoon.

In two 5-3 votes, library advisory board members voted down an attempt to require filtering of Net access and adopted a staff-developed policy for Internet use.

The majority of board members rejected a potential compromise suggested by local attorney Ken Fields: providing two computers, one filtered for children under 17 and the other unfiltered for adult use.

Board member Sharon Haynes said this morning that she voted with the majority because she trusted a legal opinion given by City Attorney Don Lane last month.

"[A] governmental body must meet Constitutional standards when it imposes restrictions on speech. It is my opinion that to block that portion of the Internet to which objections are being made for all patrons of the library would be an improper intrusion upon First Amendment rights," Lane's opinion read.

Haynes said she would have agreed to the compromise had Lane given it his blessing, but the idea of having two computers was not addressed in Lane's opinion.

"As a board member, I can't recommend to the city that they adopt a policy that violates the First Amendment," board member Vanessa Buzzard said today. "I don't object to filters, and I will personally use them on my home computer, but I don't believe a public library should."

Another deciding factor, Haynes indicated, was the fact that no other library in Texas has an Internet filter, according to Texas State Library.

"We have the distinction of being the first on their (TSL's) list," librarian Dan Snider said. "We can be certain that we are the only public library in the state of Texas that's considering a filter." "Our opinion is consistent with the view of the state library and every library in Texas," Buzzard said.

The policy adopted by the board leaves the responsibility of restricting minor's access to the Internet to that child's parent or guardian.

"The library does not have the right, or responsibility, to act in loco parentis. Parents should let their children know if there are

"Parents of minor children must assume responsibility for their children's use of the Internet in the library, and are encouraged to supervise their Internet sessions."

— from Lovett Memorial Library's new Internet policy materials which they do not want them to use. Parents of minor children must assume responsibility for their children's use of the Internet in the library, and are encouraged to supervise their Internet sessions," the policy reads.

Board member Tom Mechler has argued the library had the right to restrict Internet access in much the same way as it restricts what printed materials are purchased. Mechler invited elementary school counselor Cheryl Robbins and state Representative Warren Chisum to speak at the meeting.

"I question why this is even being debated. Do we not even want to protect our children?" Robbins asked the board.

Chisum did not appear at the meeting.

Lovett Memorial Library will receive Internet access through a grant from the Texas State Library as administered through Amarillo Public Libraries.

How to offer Internet resources has been discussed for the past four months after a board member questioned what policy would be used.

The policy will go before the city commission for final approval.

Resident complains to commission of 'filthy conditions' of Carruth Pavilion

A local resident complained to Gray County Commissioners during an open forum Monday about the "filthy condition" of the Clyde Carruth Pavilion.

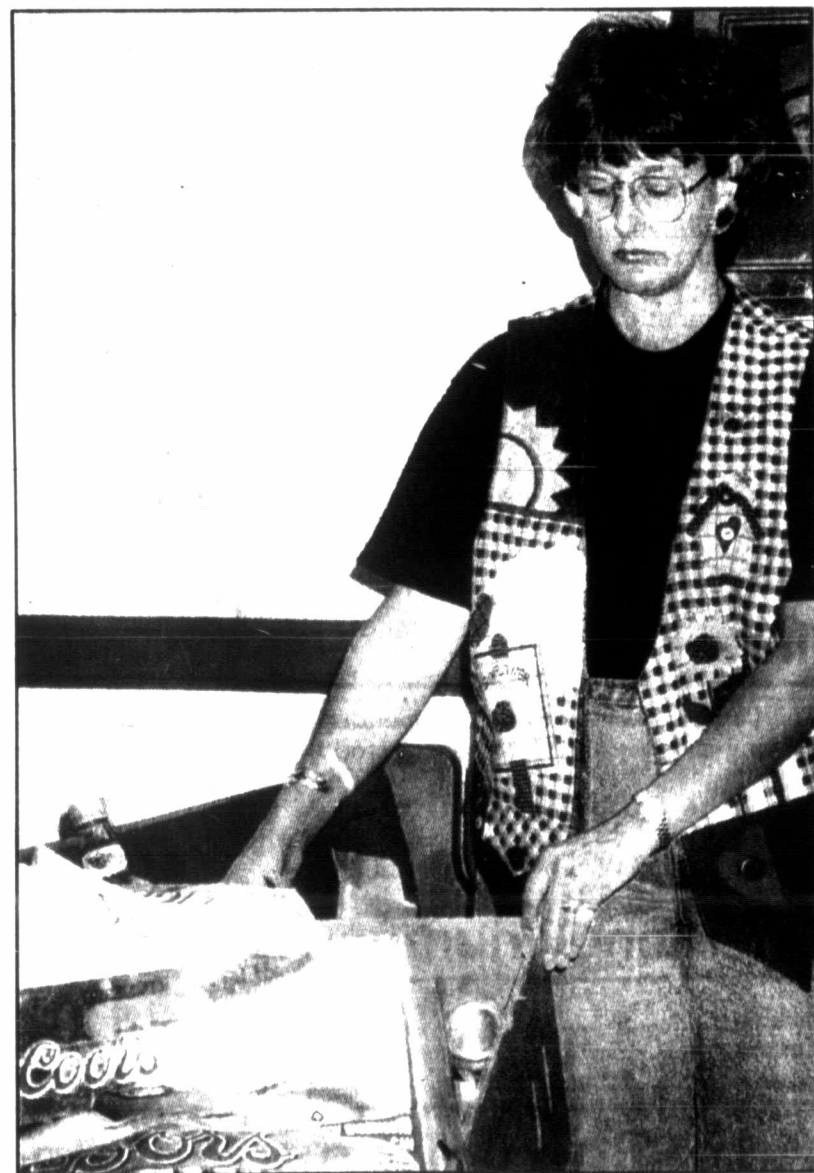

Cheryl Coutts told Gray County Judge Richard Peet and commissioners that she picked up the key to the Bull Barn from the courthouse on Friday afternoon, since she had reserved it a year in advance for the Coutts' annual Top O'Texas Pig Sale.

That evening she went out to inspect the premises to see what, if anything, needed to be done for preparation for the weekend sale scheduled Sunday, Oct. 13. She found the main door was bolted from the inside and the only way to enter the building was through a back door opening.

"I was astonished at what I found in the barn and the filthy conditions of the bathrooms. It was a mess," Coutts said.

She displayed a plastic bag full of bent beer cans, empty liquor bottles and other trash items, which she said were only a small portion of what she had to clean out of the building. She gave explicit descriptions of the bathroom conditions and expressed her disgust of having to deal with the problem.

Saturday, after several phone calls back and forth to courthouse personnel to the homes of Commissioner Jim Greene and County Treasurer Scott Hahn, she decided nothing would be done in time for her needs, so she and her daughter cleaned the inside of the arena, doing what they could to get the place decent for public use. She commented that it was town people to the event, and allowing them to enter a public place uncared for is an embarrassment to her and to the county.

Stock market remains over 6,000 in Tuesday trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street's aging bull is still trampling naysayers again today.

Not even three months after many declared the bull's run was over, the Dow Jones industrial average closed above the 6,000 mark Monday for the first time, and it gained more ground today.

The index of 30 blue-chip stocks rose 40.62 Monday to a record close of 6,010.00, and was up an additional 23.48 to 6,033.48 at midmorning.

Broad market indexes also were higher today, with the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index and Nasdaq composite index both adding to their Monday record closings.

The gain was the result of new hopes for sustained, noninflationary economic growth that will continue to drive corporate earnings higher.

Peet stated to the court he would have something ready to present at the next commissioners' meeting to correct the cleaning problems, so that the problem will not happen again.

The commissioners voted to return the $200 deposit money and the rental fee to Courts.

In other business, Anne Davidson, curator for White Deer Land Museum, addressed the court on the county's providing sufficient insurance coverage for special "traveling exhibits" placed in the museum, saying it is the responsibility of the county and the museum to show proof of insurance for the declared value of such exhibits contracted for show. She and insurance agent Bill Bridges discussed proposed policy coverage and premium amounts, based on $10,000 increments, up to $30,000.

Commissioners voted to approve the additional insurance to be included in the pending insurance bid packages, at a top value of $30,000, and that the total bids will be reviewed in the November meetings.

Commissioners voted to defer to Nov. 1 entering into a renewed county contract with the State Child Welfare Board. County Attorney Todd Alvey reported he had received one contract from the office in Lubbock, which the court was given, and another contract from Diana Bartlett, regional child welfare supervisor. He requested additional time to study and compare the differences of the contract agreements.

The county's current Child Welfare contract has been on file since 1979, according to Peet.

In other action, commissioners voted:

- To postpone action on the vehicle purchase for Constable Chris Lockridge's use until Nov. 15;
- Approve transfer of hangar

lease from Hudson Drilling Co. to Buck Worley;

- To defer discussion concerning the county's acceptance of the historic Worley Hospital building located on Somerville, pending further inspections of the building, including analysis of asbestos content;

- To advertise for bid offers on a 1979 pickup used in Precinct #2, and to advertise for purchase bids on a new, replacement pickup;

Commissioners reported on meetings attended in Amarillo recently on new Texas insurance laws recommended for counties, whereby six credits were earned toward certification, and that an upcoming safety meeting is to be held Oct. 29, at the county annex building.

High court to review 1993 law on religious freedom

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taking on what could become an epic constitutional battle, the Supreme Court today agreed to judge the validity of a 1993 federal law aimed at enhancing Americans' religious freedom.

The court will use a zoning dispute between a Roman Catholic church and Boerne, Texas, to decide whether Congress exceeded its authority in passing the Religious Freedom Restoration Act.

The law gives far more weight to claims that governmental actions violate religious freedom.

The Texas church invoked the federal law after it was blocked by a local landmark-preservation ordinance from building an addition. Church officials said the city's action violated their religious freedom.

Then the city attacked the constitutionality of the federal law.

A federal appeals court upheld the 1993 law in siding with the church. The justices now are being urged to rule that Congress in enacting the law wrongly usurped power from state and local governments and from the Supreme Court itself.

A decision is expected by July.

In other action, the court:

- Agreed to use a New York case to decide whether states may tax the income of hospitals run by employee welfare benefit plans.

- Said it will decide whether a Florida state Senate district in the Tampa-St. Petersburg area unlawfully favors black voters.

- Let stand a never-enforced 1991 Michigan court order that bars Dr. Jack Kevorkian from helping people commit suicide.

- Ordered a federal appeals court to reconsider a ruling that barred California's use of poison gas in executions.

The 1993 law on religious freedom was enacted in response to a 1990 Supreme Court decision that said laws that are otherwise neutral toward religion are not unconstitutional just because they may infringe on the religious beliefs of some people.

The court in 1990 ruled in an Oregon case involving Native American rituals that there is no constitutional right to take the hallucinogenic drug peyote as a religious practice.

A broad coalition of religious and civil rights groups contended that the court had turned its back on a long tradition of providing greater protection for religious rights and sought help from Congress.

Congress sought in 1993 to overcome the 1990 decision. The legislation required that any law imposing a "substantial burden" on someone's religious beliefs serve a "compelling" government interest in the least intrusive way. That standard gives religious minorities far greater legal protection.

The law has been particularly unpopular with prison officials in many states. They say it caused a flood of lawsuits in which inmates challenge regulation of apparel, diet and other aspects of life behind bars as violations of their religious beliefs.

Sixteen states joined in a friend-of-the-court brief supporting Boerne's appeal, saying the federal law has allowed "gangs and like-minded groups to shroud illicit activity under the cover of 'religious' belief."

The states are Delaware, Florida, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Vermont.

The Texas dispute acted on today stems from space problems at the St. Peter Catholic Church in Boerne.

The church, part of the San Antonio Archdiocese, applied for a permit in 1993 to enlarge its 70-year-old building. The church has more than 2,000 members but its sanctuary can accommodate fewer than 250 at one time.

In 1991, the church building's facade had been placed in the city's historic district. A city landmark commission in 1993 turned down the church's request to enlarge the building even though a proposed addition would not affect the facade.

The city council upheld the commission's decision, and the church then went to court. Its lawyers said the city's action violated the federal Religious Freedom Restoration Act.

City lawyers responded by arguing that the federal law is unconstitutional, and U.S. District Judge Lucious Bunton agreed.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed his ruling and upheld the law last January. That sent the landmark dispute back to Bunton for further proceedings.

North Carolina appeals court says gay father can keep custody of children

By DENNIS PATTERSON
 Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A father can keep custody of his two sons even though he lives with a homosexual lover, the North Carolina Court of Appeals ruled today.

The unanimous appeals court ruling overturns a lower court decision that said the children were exposed to "unfit and improper influences" that could damage them emotionally and socially. The boys' mother had sought to regain custody.

The trial court findings "reflect nothing more than the opinions of the trial court that the conduct of the defendant necessarily exposes the children to 'improper influences,'" Appeals Court Judge Edward Greene wrote for the three-judge panel.

"In this case, there is no evidence that the conduct has or likely will have a deleterious effect on the children," Greene wrote.

There was no immediate word on whether the mother, Carol Pulliam, would appeal to the state Supreme Court.

She had sought to change a custody order filed in California after she and Frederick J. Smith divorced in 1991.

Smith and his two sons lived with his grandmother in Henderson County from 1991 to 1994. But in 1994, the grandmother moved out of Smith's home and Tim Tipton, his homosexual lover, moved in.

Pulliam, who now lives in Kansas, said the change in Smith's living arrangements justified giving her exclusive custody of the children, ages 11 and 8.

Greene said Smith's relationship with Tipton was not a "substantial change in circumstances," which is required to change a custody order.

Greene wrote that the North Carolina case differs from a Virginia case in which a lesbian couple was denied custody because Smith's children appear to be well adjusted, make good grades, attend school regularly and participate in athletic activities.

Medical home testing kits come under fire — critics fear self-diagnoses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sunny Cloud ignited controversy when she charged the government was trying to stop her from helping frightened mothers test their children for drugs.

But the Atlanta housewife's battle highlights a broader issue: More and more Americans are diagnosing themselves with increasingly complex in-home medical tests, and the government has no policy to say when the advancing technology goes beyond what a layman can handle.

"It becomes a matter of social policy — what is an appropriate test for an individual to engage in themselves?" said Wayne Pines, a former Food and Drug Administration official who is a consultant to the medical device industry.

Cloud's home drug test "is a step along the way, and it's got a lot of people thinking," he said.

Home testing is big business, with tests that let Americans check for high cholesterol, colon cancer, even the AIDS virus in the privacy of their bathrooms. These tests earned more than $1 billion last year, a 13 percent jump from 1994.

The FDA regulates the effectiveness of home tests and makes sure laymen can use them and understand the results. Some decisions about some tests are straightforward, like pregnancy tests where chemically treated strips simply change color in urine samples.

Others pose more complicated challenges. The FDA wrangled for almost six years over whether Americans should be allowed to mail their blood samples to a laboratory and learn over the telephone if they had the AIDS virus. The FDA approved a home HIV test this year only after phone counseling was added.

But the FDA didn't use the experience to set a policy on how to balance rapidly evolving tests with the social concerns of how and when to sell them directly to laymen.

Will patients be hurt if tests are wrong? When do they see a doctor? Could they force a test on a family member? More basic, are there some tests — like those that detect genetic flaws that might cause incurable diseases — that laymen should never use?

Now Cloud's home drug test has the agency again facing these questions. After Cloud caught her son smoking marijuana, she created kits to help other mothers detect teen drug use. The $40 "Parents Alert" kits contain a cup to collect urine, a package to mail it to a federally certified laboratory and a toll-free telephone number where Cloud provides the lab's test results.

The FDA says Cloud violated federal law by selling more than 1,000 of the kits without its knowledge. But after congressional complaints that the FDA was being paternalistic, the agency let Parents Alert stay on the market until the government re-evaluates how strictly to regulate it.

Scientists are expected to meet within two months to debate whether the FDA should simply check that Cloud uses reliable test methods and explains them to parents — or whether it should consider broader social questions, including whether false results create family strife.

Twice before, the FDA has opposed home drug tests for fear of "potential adverse consequences in parent-child or spousal relationships" if the test falsely detected drug use. Each time, top agency officials were divided over whether they should even consider such social concerns, and they never settled the issue.

Coastal town breeds giant pumpkins

HALF MOON BAY, Calif. (AP) — If Kirk Mombert wanted to cut up his prize-winning pumpkin, he could make a jack-o'-lantern to spook a giant.

Tipping the scales at 808 pounds, Mombert's sizable squash — 52 inches tall and 143 inches around — weighed in as the winner of the Half Moon Bay Great Pumpkin Weigh-Off on Monday.

Mombert of Harrisburg, Ore., won $2,500 for beating six dozen other pumpkin growers vying for the prize in this coastal town that calls itself the "Pumpkin Capital of the World." Runners-up weighed 783 pounds and 742 pounds.

Mombert, 43, has grown pumpkins for 19 years. This year, he transplanted an Atlantic Giant seedling in May before pollinating it himself on July 1.

"Instead of the bees doing it, I did it," he said. "That's kind of like its date of birth."

The firefighter, who said he spent as much as 30 hours a week on his days off tending to a 1,600-square-foot pumpkin patch, says he has no plans to sample his winning entry.

"I couldn't eat it. I've been growing it for four months," he said. "Anyway, I don't like pumpkin pie."

Thief with a conscience returns stolen cash

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — A thief with a guilty conscience returned $600 stolen from a restaurant five years ago and even included some extra money for good measure.

A woman drove up after dark to Mary's Kitchen restaurant, and asked a man about to walk inside to carry in a satchel.

The satchel contained more than $600 and a note that read: "I hope someday you can forgive me. Here is a little more than I took. I'm very sorry."

Mary Presnell, owner of the restaurant, said she had never forgotten the theft in 1991, when someone grabbed a pouch under the cash register while she and her workers were busy elsewhere in the restaurant.

She did not say how much extra money was included in the bag.

Sheriff's deputies will not try to track down the suspect in this mountain town about 100 miles northwest of Charlotte, Watauga County Sheriff James Lyons said Monday.

Madonna gives birth to a little girl

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Madonna's a momma.

The 38-year-old pop diva and actress gave birth Monday to a healthy six pound, nine ounce girl, Lourdes Maria Ciccone Leon.

Madonna, the baby and father Carlos Leon were resting comfortably, spokeswoman Liz Rosenberg said. It is the first child for Madonna Louise Veronica Ciccone. The 30-year-old father is her personal trainer and boyfriend.

The girl was born at 4:01 p.m. at Good Samaritan Hospital, Rosenberg said. No other details were released.

Paul Fleiss, father of Hollywood madam Heidi Fleiss, told TV crews as he left the hospital that he was the baby's pediatrician.

Pampa United Way agency profile

This article is one in a series of profiles on the agencies and organizations supported by Pampa United Way. This information is being provided by Pampa United Way as part of its 1996 "Paint A Brighter Tomorrow" fund-raising campaign.

Genesis House is a home for troubled teenagers, with a chance to rebuild their lives through a caring community. It has provided a "new beginning" for over 500 teenagers since 1971.

In the past year, Genesis House and Pampa Counseling Service staff members have helped to give some type of service to well over 100 individuals, including providing drug and alcohol education classes on a weekly basis to more than 70 adolescents at the Esmore Boot Camp.

Genesis House provides a homelike environment for those in need of residential treatment in order to develop the skills needed to become a productive member of society. Pampa Counseling Service works with local youths on an outpatient basis to help those who are struggling with issues related to drug/alcohol use or who are at risk of developing such problems.

But the service provided by Genesis House is not measured just by numbers. As with other agencies assisted by United Way funding, the success is determined by the assistance given to the individual.

A case example: Jane was dealing her mother's misery. While her mother, a single parent, worked two jobs to support them, Jane began sneaking out of the house, lying and experimenting with drugs and alcohol with new "friends." Jane resented authority from adults, lost respect for her mother and often had temper outbursts which developed into verbal abuse.

(Special photos)

Genesis House clients do some yardwork, digging up the ground for new grass, as a summer project.

In desperation, Jane's mother sought help through the Genesis House outpatient program called the Pampa Counseling Service. While her mother learned parenting skills in monthly counseling sessions, Jane moved into the Genesis House residential program, where she remained for eight months. There she learned to control anger, respect authority, take responsibility for her actions and deal with the consequences of her actions. Counseling taught her about the dangers of alcohol, drugs, HIV/AIDS and STDs.

Jane was assigned home chores, had supervised attendance at school and took part in a varied recreational program. Her school grades improved and so did her self-esteem. After completing the program, Jane returned home with the good feeling that she and her mother could resolve issues openly, honestly and calmly.

Genesis House, entering its 26th year of operation, is designed to reverse such inappropriate and destructive behavior as dropping out of school, running away, violating laws and taking part in inappropriate sexual activity and other behavior that can be destructive to both the physical and mental health of adolescents.

The program provides a strong structure to help the client develop good decision making skills and study and work skills. Wage earning opportunities teach them about budgeting, wise shopping and good work habits. A sliding scale fee means no one is turned away for inability to pay.

Jane is currently doing well and is on her way to becoming a productive member of society thanks to Genesis House, a United Way agency.

This type of service is provided, in part, due to the funding assistance coming from the Pampa United Way.

For more information on the Genesis House and Pampa Counseling Service, contact Sharon Braddock at 665-7123.

Judge drops ticket against high schooler

AZLE, Texas (AP) — An Azle High School ninth-grader charged with two counts of disorderly conduct had one of the tickets dropped by a judge Monday night because of a technicality.

Municipal Judge Wynette Parchman ruled that a ticket issued to 14-year-old student Chris Gordon for calling another student a "fat cow" was invalid because it wasn't signed by a complainant, the girl who was the target of the boy's alleged remark.

The judge left intact, at least for now, a second ticket against Gordon for allegedly using profanity during a flag football game.

American Civil Liberties Union attorney Craig Watkins asked that the second ticket also be dropped because it doesn't specify what words Gordon used. Parchman said she would rule on the ticket Oct. 28.

The student said Monday night that the whole incident has aggravated him.

"This is ridiculous," he said. "My grades have really fallen because this is always on my mind."

The boy's mother, Phyllis Gordon, said the school went too far in issuing the citations. They're among hundreds of tickets that have been issued, with the blessing of school officials, for a variety of offenses.

Monday's pre-trial hearing, just for Azle students, was packed. Most of the students pleaded guilty.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

College costs climb unabated

As predictable as beer-guzzling at a fraternity toga party, college and university tuition is up again: 6% over last year for private schools, 5% for public schools. That's nearly twice the inflation rate of 3%.

According to figures released recently by the College Board, tuition at public schools now averages $2,966 a year, private schools $12,823. Room and board are extra. That's a lot of money for what, in all too many cases, is four years of indoctrination in political correctness.

As usual, those skintflap taxpayers — with 50% of their incomes grabbed already — were blamed for not begging to have even more grabbed. "We have made a major shift in cost from the taxpayer to the student," groaned David Reneman, dean of the Curry School of Education at the University of Virginia.

But tuition has been rising above the inflation level at these schools for 25 years — during years of recession or prosperity, during times of increased taxes and tax cuts alike. No matter what, tuition rises.

The real reason for the tuition increases is the tax-funding itself, especially federal aid. As any Econ 101 course teaches, if demand increases — in this case through increased taxpayers' subsidies of tuition — the cost rises.

According to Charles J. Sykes, author of ProfScam: Professors and the Demise of Higher Education, "An eloquent tribute to the transfusion of the federal government's mind-set into the universities is the fact that university administrative costs nationally have grown at twice the rate of instructional costs over the past decade. A notable legacy of the federalization of the universities has been the bureaucratization of the soul of higher education."

The problem could get even worse. If re-elected, President Clinton threatens to guarantee every American at least two years in a community college. But any American today already can afford such schools if he or she works a job and goes to school in the off-hours. Since when do Americans have a taxpayer-funded right to go to school full-time without working?

The Clinton program — assuming it's one of the few promises President Mendacity might fulfill — would further centralize schooling and inflate its cost.

The opposite is needed. First, Americans need to realize that wasting four years attending P.C. classes glaze-eyed might not be the best uses of a young person's energy and intelligence.

Second, the massive taxpayers' subsidies should be ended, the money returned to taxpayers, all schools privatized. That's unlikely for some time. But with the expenses of Medicare, Social Security and other welfare programs careening out of control, even the weed-infested groves of Academe will have to be trimmed.

"I said — they've extended our Bosnia mission again."

Congress to courts: Drop dead

It's been easy to forget the custody battle over Hillary Foretich, unless you're Eric Foretich.

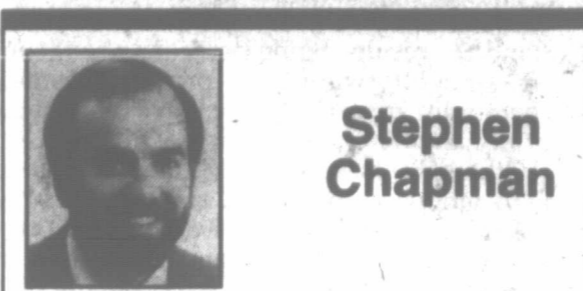

In 1985, when Hillary was two-years-old, her mother, a Washington, D.C., plastic surgeon named Elizabeth Morgan, accused her ex-husband of sexually molesting the child. The Fairfax, Va., police investigated but closed the case without filing charges. Court after court likewise rejected the accusation and ordered that Foretich be allowed to see his daughter. In 1987, when Morgan sent Hillary into hiding rather than comply, a District of Columbia judge held her in contempt and put her in jail.

She remained behind bars for 25 months — until Congress passed a measure freeing her, despite her continued defiance of the lawful orders of the judicial system. She moved to New Zealand, where her daughter was living.

And there she and the girl have stayed until now, leaving Eric Foretich helpless. Not only has he been illegally separated from his own flesh and blood for the better part of her life, he has been bankrupted by his legal fight and made the villain of a TV movie in which the winsome Bonnie Bedelia portrayed Elizabeth Morgan as a saint for our times.

Now, Congress has compounded the injury to him with another injury that is a threat to the rest of us, too. In an 11th-hour amendment tacked onto a transportation spending bill, it stripped the D.C. courts of jurisdiction over the case — giving Morgan the right to return to the United States with Hillary without having to let her ex-husband see his daughter.

Rep. Frank Wolf, the Virginia Republican who got the measure attached, defended his action by invoking the Bible rather than his oath of office: "The Book of James says faith without works is dead." His Republican colleague, F. James

Stephen Chapman

Sensenbrenner Jr. of Wisconsin, however, called the amendment "a poster child for the line-item veto."

That's not the half of it. This is a case, as George Washington University law professor Jonathan Turley puts it, "of Congress selecting one person out of 250 million and negating his parental rights because his ex-wife has friends in Congress who didn't like the decisions of the courts."

The controversy may sound like just another disagreement between two branches of government. In fact, it represents an exceptional instance of brazen, lawless overreaching by Congress. It's as if Congress, disgusted by the O.J. Simpson acquittal, had ordered Simpson deported.

Congress, of course, lacks the power to do that. The Constitution expressly forbids any "bill of attainder" — legislation aimed at punishing an individual without a trial. But that is exactly what it passed to strip Eric Foretich of his rights.

Turley got interested in the case when a House committee asked him to evaluate the proposed measure before it was considered. "I told them it's completely unconstitutional, it's a bill of attainder, it's a violation of the of separation of powers and it's a potential violation of the Hague Convention," he says. It was passed anyway.

Turley then volunteered to represent Foretich, without pay, on the constitutional issue.

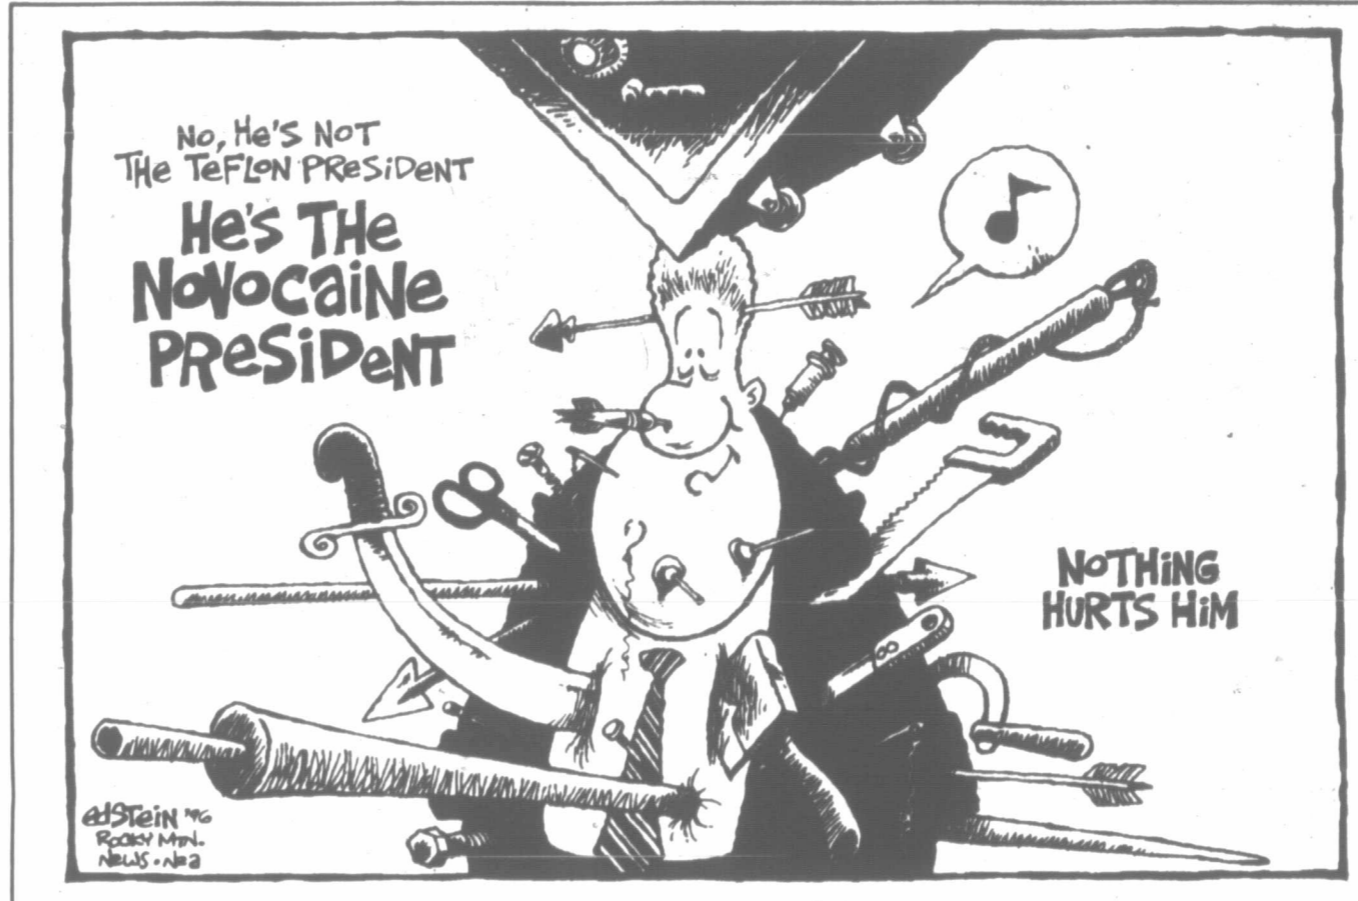

Reasonable people can differ on whether to believe Morgan or Foretich — though he has passed two lie detector tests and she seems prone to flights of fantasy, having accused not only Foretich but his parents and a court appointed psychiatrist of molesting her daughter. Members of Congress are also entitled to their opinions.

But it's not the job of Congress or the public at large to decide the matter. That responsibility lies with the courts, which repeatedly ruled against Elizabeth Morgan and which she willfully defied. Her punishment is to be freed from jail by Congress and then allowed to return to this country, all without the inconvenience of abiding by a court order. Foretich, on the other hand, abided by the law and prevailed in the judicial system — and now has nothing to show for it but a congressional determination that he poses a danger to his own daughter.

Fourth of July speeches often note proudly that America is a government of laws, not of men. What that means is that the law applies to everyone, with no one privileged to violate or ignore it. But the case of Eric Foretich and Elizabeth Morgan suggests otherwise.

Here, Congress has decided to place Morgan above the law's demands and Foretich beneath its protections. Never mind what juries say; never mind what judges say; never mind what the law says. Congress, with only a cursory glance at the evidence, has decided that in this dispute, Morgan should win and Foretich should lose.

It's the sort of legislation that disgraces not only those who voted for it but the entire institution of Congress. There's no evidence that Hillary Foretich was ever abused. But her father and American democracy certainly have been.

Preparing for global mumbo-jumbo

Charley Reese

If you are a social naturalist you might be interested in a peculiar quirk that infects those of us who labor in the journalism trade.

We have a habit of picking up a sentence or a phrase, usually originated by some political or corporate tack, repeating it until it becomes a cliché and then elevating it to the status of a mantra with the power to paralyze a journalist's brain.

Here's an example: "We must prepare our children to compete in the global economy."

How many times have you heard or read that? The trouble is, it's nonsense.

One, it implies that the global economy is something new that Americans have never had to cope with. That's just ignorance. Americans have been participating in a global economy since the days they called themselves loyal subjects of his majesty, King George.

Two, so far as their work is concerned, the overwhelming majority of Americans will not compete in the global economy. The bulk of the American economy is domestic.

Three, individuals rarely compete in the global economy. Offhand, the only people I can think of would be entertainers, lawyers and mercenaries. Mostly, it's a few American corporations that compete in foreign markets, and many of them compete by building plants overseas staffed by nationals of the country where the plant is located. In 1991, U.S. direct investment abroad was $450 billion.

In 1994, American exports accounted for $513 billion. That year, like most years, we imported more than we exported, so the net effect of foreign trade was a minus $151 billion.

Thus, unless your child plans to operate in the overseas sales and marketing division of a large corporation, the global economy, as far as his education is concerned, is just another example of globaloney.

You will notice that people who say we must prepare American children to compete in the global economy never get around to saying just how they propose to do that. How do you prepare a carpenter, plumber, bricklayer, machinist, librarian or truckdriver to compete in the global economy?

Suppose you are a machinist who works for Boeing, which competes in the global economy. It makes no difference. The machinist's skills are the same whether the plane he's working on is going to be sold domestically or overseas.

Actually, all the globaloney is just propaganda to mask some bad trade policies and some unconscionable practices of American corporations that prefer cheap foreign labor to American workers.

The more important point is that the people laboring in schools to convert little savages into competent human beings have enough problems without being showered by political and journalistic fertilizer.

American children need to learn today what they have always needed to learn: how to read, write and speak their own language; how to use math; the history and philosophy of their own country and its institutions; geography; something about the basic sciences; literature; art; music; and a skill that will be marketable in the great American domestic economy.

If we fund the schools, reduce class sizes, cut the crap out of the curricula added by politicians and bureaucrats and enforce iron discipline, our education system's problems will vanish.

Let us prepare American children to be strong Americans, and they will handle any competition that comes along.

Toss the globaloney into the trash, where it belongs.

Clinton plays a masterful chess game

Joseph Spear

This is one of those columns that ought to have a perforated edge around it for easy clipping. Because if Bill Clinton loses, a few surly critics are going to send it back in November with nasty stuff written all over it in red ink.

What the heck. Life's too short to pull punches, so here's the gist of it: If Bill "Death Wish" Clinton manages not to blow his huge lead before Nov. 5, he will be remembered as one of the most supremely gifted politicians in modern history.

I know, you've heard it before. But I mean REALLY gifted.

It's going to take the perspective of time to fully realize what the man appears to be accomplishing. Wasn't it just a week or so ago that the Republicans pulled off a revolution and Newt Gingrich was on the tube more often than Oprah, pontificating one day about the "opportunity society," bragging the next about being the Roosevelt of the right?

And wasn't it just recently that Bill Clinton was being dismissed by pundits as a one-term wonder? That was, what, last Tuesday, I think.

And then, next thing you know, the Democratic opposition to Bill Clinton has vanished, the Clinton team has raised enough money for two campaigns, Newt Gingrich is the most disliked pol in America, and Bill Clinton is the supreme centrist.

I mean, talk about your Slick Willie. Think of it as a chess match, and consider all the ways in which Robert Dole has been checked:

— The economy. Nothing Dole says about pocketbook issues seems to resonate, and that's because economic growth is steady, inflation is low, consumer confidence is high. And many voters seem to be concerned that Bob Dole's vaunted tax cut would send the deficit into orbit again. A spokesman for a group of businessmen who endorsed Clinton said there is "little confusion on Wall Street that tax cuts that are not fully financed will severely compromise the extraordinary recovery and business environment that's been created over the last three years."

— Drugs. No matter how strenuously Dole strains to make Clinton sound like the ringleader of a cocaine cartel, it sounds tinny because so many Republican luminaries once partook of drugs. Even Newt Gingrich tried pot once and now passes it off as a "sign that we were alive and in graduate school." It has been speculated that as many as 80% of those members of Congress who went to college in the '60s tried marijuana. My guess is they are not all Democrats.

— Crime. Clinton pushed for police programs and gun-control laws and won the endorsement of the Fraternal Order of Police. A soft-on-crime label just won't stick.

— Military experience. Haven't heard much about this 1992 bestseller, have you? The reason, again, is because so many Republican leaders are equally culpable. Yes, Bill Clinton did his damndest to stay out of the military and avoid Vietnam. But so did millions of young Americans — including Newt Gingrich, Phil Gramm, Lamar Alexander, Dick Cheney, Pat Buchanan and a few of the GOP's brightest gubernatorial stars.

— Iraq. I love this one. Have you forgotten that Bob Dole visited Saddam Hussein in 1990 in the city of Mosul, near where Saddam had gassed 5,000 Kurds, and promised the dictator he would oppose any attempt by Congress to impose sanctions against Iraq for using poison gas? Is there any wonder Dole had little to say when Clinton launched a missile attack against Iraq?

The 's much more. How can you exploit the Hillary issue if you are married to Elizabeth? How can you argue family values when you are the one with the divorce and your opponent has an intact family and is the doting father of a teenage daughter?

Call it stealing Republican ideas. Call it triangulation. Call it dumb luck. Fact is, Clinton has done it extremely well.

Will it be a checkmate? If it isn't remember: Your chess columnist wrote this, not Joe. Send the clips to her or him.

'Loving' Grandfather Was Far Too Loving To Some

DEAR ABBY: My grandfather died today. He was outgoing and loving, a pillar of the church and did much for our community. Everyone respected him, but they were unaware of a dark family secret. Until I was in my late 20s, no one in our family would talk about the fact that Grandpa was a pedophile (child molester). He molested members of our family — myself included — and God knows how many others.

There were excuses why no one in the family would discuss it. Denial was a means of coping, and some of us rationalized, "That was a long time ago; why bring up the past?" Grandpa eventually found himself facing charges of molesting a young neighbor girl. The outcome? He ran from the law to another state where he lived the rest of his life. Our legal system lacks the funds to pursue a pedophile in another state.

The one good thing that resulted from Grandpa being "officially" charged was that our family finally started talking about it. In my gut, I always knew there was something wrong, but I had buried the past so completely that it took several years before I was able to admit it — even to myself.

There are mothers who know that their husbands are molesting their children. I hope my experience causes others to come out with the truth. Were you molested by a parent you now allow to spend time with your children? You alone have the power to protect them. The problem doesn't just go away. The first step is to tell someone. Remember the shame belongs only to the pedophiles, not the victims they violate.

Abigail Van Buren

Adults must teach children to protect themselves, and it's never too late to start. You can't remain silent and protect your kids. You must make a choice.

LIVING IN GOD'S GLORY AND GRACE

DEAR LIVING: Two of the most damaging results of sexual abuse are the shame and isolation felt by the victims. Healing cannot begin until the facts are brought out in the open and discussed among all the parties involved.

The National Child Abuse Hotline, 1-800-422-4453, provides information and referral for victims and family members. Telephone crisis counseling is also offered. Your local mental health society can recommend therapists specializing in counseling for those who were molested as children and still harbor the bitter memories. Counseling helps victims work through their painful memories so they can finally be put to rest.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding "Mike in Texas," who wanted to know how to dispose of his Bible:

There are book repair shops that rebind and re-cover books and Bibles. My parents' rebound Bible is one of my most treasured possessions.

Most Bibles contain blank pages to record births, baptisms, marriages and deaths. If civil records are lost or destroyed, the Bible is accepted as proof in most states.

When my sister became eligible for Social Security, I took my parents' Bible to the records department in the courthouse. The clerk testified to the authenticity of the old Bible, and my sister's claim was approved.

Also, when tracing our roots, a family Bible can be invaluable. MONICA KOEPL EHRlichman, TACOMA, WASH.

WIFE TO HUSBAND OVER DINNER: "We had a tough day at the office. The computer broke down and everybody had to learn to think all over again."

Horoscope

Wednesday, Oct. 16, 1996

In the year ahead, you might put together a partnership arrangement that could make previous ones pale in comparison. You will achieve financial and social goals.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Early in the day you might brush your responsibilities aside, hoping to take care of them later. However, you will not be able to make up for lost time. Libra, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not hesitate to compliment someone who does something well today, even if you do not like this person very much.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In business meetings today, try to eliminate corny jokes and small talk. You will be more successful if you get right down to business.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It will not be productive to try to use flattery to gain acknowledgment today. Associates will have more respect for you if you're forthright and sincere.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Make an effort to keep a nosy friend out of your affairs today. Even though he or she may try to help, it's more likely that your pal will cause complications.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Accept a new friend for who she is today instead of trying to make this person conform to your specifications. You will be glad you did.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Associates will not be pleased if you try to take credit for something that was a collective endeavor. Honesty is always the best policy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do not let the behavior of someone you don't like take the fun out of any situation today. Move away from this individual, and relax and have a good time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your evaluation of a situation is likely to be better than your mate's judgment today. Do not let your spouse change your mind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you put together an important agreement today, do not treat the small details with disdain. These bits and pieces will soon be relevant.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It will be important to keep your priorities in order today. Do not devote time to frivolous activities that will cost more than you can afford.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Let your hair down and enjoy yourself without overindulging today. You will have a good time if you do things in moderation.

FOOTBALL

PAMPA — Pampa lost to Canyon, 43-7, in a junior varsity game last week.

Curtis Johnson scored on a 50-yard run for Pampa. Justin Barnes kicked the extra point.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas Christian football coach Pay Sullivan has suspended defensive end Daryl Johnson for violating team rules, making him the fifth player in less than a week to be reprimanded for conduct.

Sullivan would not elaborate Monday on the reason for suspending Johnson, a sophomore who started in Saturday night's 18-0 victory over Texas-El Paso in place of injured starter Chance McCarty.

Team sources told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the suspension stemmed from an off-field incident after the UTEP game.

Johnson has been kicked off the team for the rest of the season. That follows Thursday's suspension of senior defensive tackle Gaylon Hyder, redshirt freshman quarterback Jeff Dover and redshirt transfer quarterbacks Kevin Colon and Derek Canine.

"It's part of my job," Sullivan said about the difficulties of handling the athletic department violations. "I've told all of my kids, if they mess up, there are going to be consequences."

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Texas running back Claude Mathis and Troy State defensive end Pratt Lyons are sharing the Southland Conference's recognition as offensive and defensive players of the week, respectively.

It was the third time that Mathis, a junior, was honored by the league this season. He ran for 192 yards on 35 carries and scored three touchdowns in SWT's 41-27 loss at Southern Utah.

Mathis of Bartlett accounted for all of the Bobcats' scoring, connecting on a 33-yard catch.

On the other side of the line, Lyons amassed 15 tackles — 10 unassisted — along with three sacks for a loss of 24 yards and forced two fumbles in the Trojans' 16-12 victory over McNeese State. He is a senior from Fort Worth.

Sam Houston State return specialist Yohance Bree and Adam Diel, a Nicholls State place kicker, received honors as special teams players of the week.

BASEBALL

HOUSTON (AP) — The New York Mets gave Houston permission to interview Al Jackson, who is believed to be the Astros' top candidate for pitching coach, according to the Houston Chronicle's editions today.

Astros general manager Gerry Hunsicker will interview Jackson, the Mets' minor league pitching instructor, later this week, probably in Houston.

Vern Ruhle, the Astros' minor-league pitching coordinator, also is a candidate for the job.

"I'll try to talk with Al within the next day or two, but I don't think any decisions will be made before Friday," said Hunsicker, who is in Kissimmee, Fla., overseeing the team's organizational meetings. "Vern is a candidate, but we clearly have not selected a pitching coach."

Hunsicker and new manager Larry Dierker also need to hire a hitting instructor and a third-base coach.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bucky Dent, bench coach of the Texas Rangers, was in Philadelphia on Tuesday to interview for the job of Philadelphia Phillies manager.

Last week, three people interviewed for the job — Detroit Tigers coach Terry Francona, Phillies third base coach Larry Bowa and former Baltimore Orioles manager Phil Regan.

Braves' bats come alive against Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Atlanta Braves made it seem too easy.

As if they just decided it was time to win, the Braves staved off elimination in the NL championship series with one of the most overpowering performances ever in October.

The defending World Series champions, heeding manager Bobby Cox's pregame call, matched the biggest postseason rout in history Monday night with a 14-0 romp over St. Louis that cut the Cardinals' lead to 3-2.

"I had a short meeting, nothing real big. It wasn't like 'Let's all have a nice winter.' It was more like 'I expect to play 7-to-10 more games,'" Cox said.

Marquis Grissom set the tone with a single on Game 2 winner Todd Stottlemyre's first pitch. By the end of the inning, helped by a misplayed fly ball that turned into a two-out triple for Jeff Blauser, Atlanta had six hits and led 5-0.

The Busch Stadium record crowd of 56,782, meanwhile, was silent.

"Before they could even get their popcorn and beer, they were down five," said Chipper Jones, who had a two-run double. "What I really liked is that we had the killer instinct. We kept piling it on. Last night, I didn't sense that."

Coming off a 4-3 loss in which the Braves blew a three-run lead in a postseason game for the first time in franchise history, they made sure there would be no letup.

By the time Javy Lopez singled in the fourth, every Braves batter had a hit. When he homered to dead center the next inning, Atlanta led 11-0 and already had an NLCS record with 17 hits.

The Braves finished with an LCS-record 22 hits, including two by pitcher John Smoltz, who worked seven shutout innings.

"The only thing is when we win a game like this, you wish it counts for two," Smoltz said. "You would think that a 10-run rule would count for two."

No, but it did send the Braves home to Atlanta with renewed hope in the best-of-7 series.

And no wonder. Four-time Cy Young winner Greg Maddux will try to rebound from his loss in Game 2 when he pitches Wednesday night against Donovan Osborne. If Atlanta wins, 1995 World Series MVP Tom Glavine will start Game 7.

"I'm glad that I get to pitch again," Maddux said. "You know, you come to the park today getting ready to pitch, but in the back of your mind, you're not."

Stottlemyre, working on three days' rest for the first time since July 1995, also felt ready. That was until he gave up hits to nine of the 12 batters he faced before manager Tony La Russa pulled him.

"That's the way it goes,"

Stottlemyre said. "They were fighting for their lives."

The Braves, a team that began the game batting only .213 in this year's postseason, got four hits each from Lopez and Mark Lemke. Lopez scored four runs and Fred McGriff drove in the last two with a home run.

"We got out early and took their crowd out of it," Lemke said. "I think you have to credit the whole offense. The team really came through."

The Cardinals had won nine in a row at home in the postseason before the Braves broke loose. Atlanta is trying to become the eighth team — out of 48 — to overcome a 3-1 deficit; St. Louis is the only club to twice blow such leads, in the 1968 and 1985 World Series.

"Before we could escape, they had put up a couple of crooked numbers," La Russa said. "It just wasn't any fun. That game got away from us."

"We've had a few of those — not many — but when we've had them, we shook it off. We'll be ready the next time we're scheduled to play."

The Braves broke the LCS record of 19 hits set by the New York Yankees against Oakland in 1981. The Braves also surpassed the Chicago Cubs' 13-0 win over San Diego in 1984 for the largest margin of victory in an LCS game.

The Braves matched the record for a postseason rout. The New York Yankees beat the New York Giants 18-4 in Game 2 of the 1936 World Series.

Smoltz, not that the Braves needed him to be so sharp on this night, improved to 8-1 lifetime in the postseason and 3-0 this October. The major league leader in wins and strikeouts this year, he passed Bob Gibson and Whitey Ford to become baseball's career leader in postseason strikeouts with 98.

Harvesters closing in on another District 1-4A title

PAMPA — Pampa appears to be well on the way to winning its second straight District 1-4A championship.

Pampa's 31-16 win over Canyon coupled with Randall's 14-3 loss to Dumas last week left the Harvesters the only unbeaten team in the district at 3-0.

"It was a key game for us," said Pampa quarterback Josh Blackmon, who completed 5 of 12 pass attempts for 73 yards and a touchdown in the win over Canyon. "That may have given us the district championship. We don't that for sure, but we're close."

Blackmon also scored on a 10-yard run, kicked a 32-yard field goal and four extra points, but his feats was overshadowed by the rushing performance of senior running back Marques Long, who ran for 257 yards on 32 carries and a touchdown. On his 19-yard scoring run in the second quarter, Long broke about five tackles on his way to the end zone.

"Marques had quite a night with over 200 yards rushing. He made some nice runs and he got some excellent blocking," said Pampa head coach Dennis Cavalier.

With district play half over, Pampa visits Borger for a 7:30 meeting Friday night. The Bulldogs, coming off an open date, are 1-1 in district and 3-2 overall.

Last season, the district championship came down to the season finale with Pampa whipping Borger, 24-9, to clinch the title. The Harvesters could wrap it up sooner in 1996.

Packers beat 49ers in overtime

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Don Beebe never had a bigger game, and it couldn't have come at a better time for the Green Bay Packers.

The 32-year-old journeyman receiver stepped in for the injured Robert Brooks and caught 11 passes for a career-best 220 yards as Green Bay beat San Francisco 23-20 in overtime Monday night before a record crowd of 60,716 at Lambeau Field.

"I've had four touchdowns in a game and I've had 10 catches," said Beebe, who played in four Super Bowls with Buffalo. "But considering how this came out, I'd have to say this was my best game."

Beebe, whose 220 yards were the third-highest in the Packers' 76-year history, had a 13-yard catch that helped set up Chris Jacke's 53-yard field goal, the longest overtime kick in NFL history.

He also had a controversial 59-yard catch for a touchdown that sparked the Packers' comeback from a 17-6 deficit in the third period.

Brooks, Brett Favre's favorite receiver and Green Bay's best deep threat, was lost for the season with a knee injury on the Packers' first offensive play. He landed awkwardly when 49ers cornerback Tyrone Drakeford pulled him down.

"It's a shame," said coach Mike Holmgren, who said Brooks would undergo surgery this week.

This was a game between two of the NFL's best teams that lived up to its billing as the 49ers tried to reverse a 27-17 playoff loss last season.

For most of the game, it looked like San Francisco would win.

Led by Dana Stubblefield, Lee Woodall and Marquez Pope, the 49ers (4-2) dominated on defense, limiting Green Bay to 68 yards rushing and forcing Favre to pass a team-record 61 times. He completed 28 for 395 yards.

The 49ers took a 17-6 halftime lead on TD passes of 7 and 13 yards to Jerry Rice and allowed only one touchdown — the debatable touchdown pass from Favre to Beebe on which Beebe dove to catch the pass, got up as Pope went over him and ran to the end zone.

"It was definitely a catch," Beebe said. "I felt something touch me, but I didn't know if I was down yet. So that's why I got up and ran."

It came midway through the third quarter and cut the deficit to 17-14 after Favre hit Edgar Bennett for a 2-point conversion. That allowed Jacke's 35-yarder with 3:35 left to tie it at 17.

"There were some of the most zany things I'd ever seen in a game," San Francisco coach George Seifert said.

Still, it looked like the San Francisco defense would ruin Beebe's big day after Pope intercepted a pass with 2:13 left and returned it to the Green Bay 12.

"Right then, I said, 'God, I guess it's over,'" Favre said.

But the 49ers played conservatively, Green Bay used two timeouts and the 2-minute warning, and there was still 1:50 left when Jeff Wilkins kicked a 28-yard field goal that gave the 49ers a 20-17 lead.

But the defense gave Green Bay a shorter field — Steve Israel, a reserve defensive back for the 49ers, was called for a 5-yard hands to the face penalty, then was penalized 15 more yards and ejected from the game for unsportsmanlike conduct. That gave Jacke a chip shot of 31 yards to tie it.

In overtime, the 49ers went three and out, and Green Bay got the ball at its own 44. A 13-yard pass to Beebe moved the ball into scoring position, then Holmgren decided to have Jacke try from 53 yards.

Florida State focused on being No. 1

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — It doesn't make any difference to Florida State coaches or players if they're No. 2 or No. 3 right now. Their aim is focused on being No. 1 at the end of the year.

"We might not be the No. 1 team in the nation yet, but hopefully at the end of the year we will be," middle linebacker Daryl Bush said. "I think we're getting there step by step."

Florida State, which vaulted past Ohio State into the No. 2 slot in the coaches' poll, trails the Buckeyes by just three points in the AP poll for the second spot behind Florida.

Coach Bobby Bowden also isn't worried about the polls right now. Instead, he's paying attention to Virginia, Georgia Tech and Southern Mississippi — teams that could upset his third-ranked Seminoles before their Nov. 30 date with top-ranked Florida.

"Those are good football teams," said Bowden, whose Seminoles have already knocked North Carolina and Miami — ranked 11th and sixth, respectively, on the days they played Florida State.

"We've got to take our opponents one at a time," he said. "If we don't, we'll get beat just like we did last year."

Bowden said Monday the Seminoles (5-0, 4-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) are just starting to find themselves.

"If we can stay healthy, we'll be mighty good," he told boosters at his weekly football luncheon.

Margaret Palmer-White (above), along with her son, Wendell Palmer of Pampa, will be inducted into the Masters Track and Field Hall of Fame. At the left is a photograph of her with Jay Leno and Wendell on the set of "The Tonight Show."

Mother, son to join Masters Track & Field Hall of Fame

PAMPA — At 102, Margaret Palmer-White is living proof a person is never too old to become a famous athlete.

Mrs. White of Oklahoma City and her youngest son, 64-year-old Wendell Palmer of Pampa, will be inducted into the Masters Track and Field Hall of Fame in December.

Mrs. White, a former Turpin, Okla. resident, started throwing the shot put at age 98. Two years later, she became the first 100-year-old athlete to compete in the Sooner Indoor Games held in Oklahoma City. After throwing the shot 12 feet, 11 inches, she became an instant celebrity. Mrs. White first appeared on the "Good Morning, America" television show, then came TV appearances on "The Tonight Show" with Jay Leno and "Donahue."

Waiting their turn are "Regis and Kathie Lee" and "The Late Show" with David Letterman. She has been the subject of numerous newspaper features and radio interviews all over the world. Books are currently being written about her.

One of her best lines, Wendell recalls, came on "The Tonight Show" when she said her son "was getting too old to participate."

Mrs. White, who is visiting Wendell and wife Barbara in Pampa this week, is recovering from a fractured wrist sustained in a fall at her home.

"I'm getting along pretty good now," she said. "I just try and do the best I can."

Mrs. White has been overwhelmed by all the attention.

"It's been quite an experience," she says. "I just never thought all of this would happen to me."

Mrs. White is uncertain about ever throwing the shot again. She did participate in some throw-a-thons before her injury.

"I'd like to get her in those Sooner Games again. 'Every meet I go to, people are wanting to know when I'm going to bring my mother,'" Wendell said.

Her other children are Dean and Maxine Palmer of Oklahoma City, Margaret Parmelee of Liberal, Kan., Edna Olinger of Hugoton, Kan., Clara and Doug Griggs of Duncan, Okla.

Wendell Palmer, who competes in the 60-64 age group, is famous in his own right. Palmer entered the Masters for senior athletes in 1976 and has been at it ever since. He holds numerous world and American records and has been the National Masters Discus champion 10 times. He was a shot-discus double winner three times.

Palmer won the world discus title in 1989 and took second in 1995 in Buffalo, N.Y. He plans to compete in the 1997 Games in Durban, South Africa.

Last August during a meet in Spokane, Wash., he won both the discus and shot and placed second in the hammer.

Palmer once scored 118 points in a Masters meet in Texas City and finished 13th in the decathlon at the World Games in Eugene, Ore. in 1989.

Twice, Palmer has received the special achievement award from the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame.

Texas trying to wake up from nightmare

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas blew a fourth-quarter lead for the second time this season, and, even worse, it came against the formerly winless, archrival Oklahoma Sooners.

The Longhorns, who plummeted out of the Top 25, are 3-3 (2-1 Big 12) and reeling with a trip to Colorado (4-1, 2-0) looming after an off-week.

"This is a nightmare we wish we could wake up out of," said Texas kicker Phil Dawson, whose field goal in overtime against Oklahoma wasn't enough Saturday as the Sooners drove for a winning touchdown and a 30-27 victory.

"The problem is no one can pinpoint what it is right now that we're lacking. If we could figure out what the problem was, we would feel a little better. But right now we are searching," Dawson said.

North dominating South in Big 12

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

A&M and Oklahoma. A lot is going to happen between now and December."

DALLAS (AP) — The Big 12's first-ever championship game is shaping up like the Super Bowl, and that's not a favorable comparison.

Halfway through the league's inaugural season, the North division appears to be comfortably ahead of the South — sort of like the way the NFC has dominated the AFC for the last decade in the NFL.

For the Big 12, the result could be a lopsided title game Dec. 7 at the Trans World Dome in St. Louis.

"I bet those people in St. Louis are getting ready for that banner showdown," Kansas coach Glen Mason said Monday, laughing.

The imbalance of the divisions is illustrated best by the national rankings.

Representing the North are No. 5 Nebraska, No. 8 Colorado and No. 21 Kansas State.

No South teams appear in the top 25.

Texas and Texas A&M used to be ranked, but both are now 3-3.

The Longhorns are 2-1 in Big 12 play, leaving them second to Texas Tech (4-2, 3-1).

The Red Raiders have so far provided the South with its biggest highlight, a 30-17 comeback victory over Kansas on Saturday.

Otherwise, the North is 5-3 in head-to-head games against the South.

"I think Texas Tech is probably playing better than everyone else in the South," Baylor coach Chuck Reedy said. "But they still have Nebraska, Texas,

Added Texas coach John Mackovic, "The door is clearly open for just about everyone. I think everyone in the South division is looking forward to playing each other."

The current parity of the South is reminiscent of the second-to-last Southwest Conference season, when five schools tied for the league crown with 4-3 records.

The North race, meanwhile, looks like another good of Big Eight tussle under the guise of the Big 12.

So far, Colorado and Nebraska are the only teams undefeated in league play.

Each has several big tests left, but if each keeps winning, their Nov. 29 matchup in Lincoln will likely be the game that truly determines the league's best team.

During their weekly conference call Monday, several coaches begrudgingly admitted the North's edge.

However, they were quick to point out that things can change quickly, and certainly won't last forever.

"I think that will probably go up and down every year," Missouri coach Larry Smith said. "Right now, it does look like the north has a pretty strong division. But we've got to wait and see how it all deals out in the end."

Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes boils it down to a simple point.

"Whatever division you put Nebraska in," he said, "that makes them the strength."

Children carried on normally for two weeks with slain mother in house

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Neighbors noticed nothing unusual about the eight-year-old boy and his 14-year-old sister for those two weeks. And even after the children opened all the doors and windows, no one noticed the smell.

Sgt. Bob Mitchell noticed it right away as he drove up to the house where police say the children lived while their slain mother's body decomposed in a closed bedroom.

"I could smell it without our car windows being down," Mitchell said Monday.

The children's father stabbed and beat 38-year-old Janice Castorena, threatened to kill them if they told, and fled, police said. For two weeks, the children visited friends, made meals and kept to themselves while living in the home.

"I can't believe that the girl was in our house a few days ago and not saying a word, not acting like anything was bothering her," said neighbor Robin Casey, adding that the girl had come over to visit her children.

Police found the woman's body after the boy purposely got caught shoplifting at a supermarket late Sunday to attract attention, Mitchell said. The boy told officers that he thought his mother was dead.

Investigators searched today for the father, Robert Castorena, 38, a high school social studies teacher who quit his job last month and vanished about two weeks ago. A motive in the slaying was not immediately clear.

"As he left he said 'I'm going to find the enemy,'" Mitchell said. "If he has a fixation on an 'enemy,' he could harm anybody. He's got a ten day start and he could be anywhere."

Investigators said they believe Mrs. Castorena was knifed and bludgeoned to death on Oct. 1 and that her husband left within two days. Before he left, Castorena held a knife to his daughter's throat and warned her not to go to police, Mitchell said.

"She pleaded for her life, saying she wanted to have children some day," he said.

Castorena also threatened the boy while holding the knife, Mitchell added.

Officers found the boy's sister in the home; Mrs. Castorena's body was on a bedroom floor. Police don't believe the children had seen their mother because the body hadn't been moved from where it was blocking the bedroom door.

Residents in the upscale neighborhood, with manicured lawns and tree-shaded lanes about five miles from the state Capitol, told police they noticed nothing amiss with the children, except that they seemed quiet.
