Robertis' First Appearance

I Heard---

Because they want to see the Pampa Air show, pilots composing the Texas Air Tour will end instead of begin the tour in Pampa, Bert Howell, general chairman of the show said today.

As originally planned, the 40 planes composing the tour were to start from Pampa after coming here on September 23, opening day of the two-day event, which is sponsored by the Pampa Junior Chamber of Commerce.

One Change Necessary

Only one change was made necessary in local arrangements due to the tour ending instead of beginning in Pampa. It had been planned to hold a banquet for the pilots on Saturday night. This has been changed to a luncheon at noon Saturday, to be followed by a dance at the Southern club with free passes to visiting pilots by courtesy of the club management.

Pampa Food Prices Rise; Sugar Scarce

Wallace Will Talk On Food 'Profiteering'

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (AP)—Columbia Broadcasting company today announced Secretary of Agriculture Wallace would address the nation over its network tonight on the subject of food "profiteering." Wallace will speak from Washington at 7 p. m. central standard time.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP)—President Roosevelt told the American people through his press conference today there was an actual surplus of all foodstuffs and there was no going to be any repetition of price rises this nation saw in World War days.

He said many well meaning people in the last few days had found some food prices up and were limited to small purchases of sugar and other staples.

The President then went on to say there was an ample supply of food in every variety and no indication of any conceivable shortage.

As Secretary Wallace said yesterday, the chief executive declared all the fear of a shortage of sugar, flour and other things was merely one of those things that come from not knowing the facts.

Asked concerning any large individual orders, only one of the stores reported any such order. Groceries, however, don't expect prices to go as high as they did in the last war, one grocer said.

Major Battle On Western Front In Few Days Likely

BERLIN, Sept. 8. (AP)—The German supreme high command announced today that a German army unit forced an entry into Warsaw at 5:15 p. m. (10:15 a. m. CST).

The announcement called the unit armored troops (presumably an armored car formation).

It was further announced the troops, forging rapidly ahead, had reached Nadarzyn, 12 miles southwest of the Polish capital.

(This would indicate the entry had been made by the German column which has been driving on Warsaw from the north.)

Fighting spread on two fronts in Europe today.

In the east, the Germans were trying to deliver a knockout blow in a "lightning war" against Poland.

In the west, French forces were reported to have advanced on German soil, apparently in an attempt to make the Germans pull their punches against Poland.

The Germans reported rapid progress by their three armies converging on Warsaw. Latest communiques placed one column beyond Pultusk, 28 miles north of Warsaw; another in possession of Mszczonow, 25 miles to the southwest; and the third 38 miles west of Warsaw after capturing the towns of Rawo and Mozwiecko.

But the Warsaw radio broadcast that "the Polish army will yet start its offensive."

French Speed Hastens Hour For Offensive

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 8 (AP)—With heavy artillery thundering at main forts of Germany's Siegfried line, military observers here believe the French high command may launch a major offensive within the next few days.

Foreign observers previously had estimated it would be two weeks or more before such an attack.

The Polish air fleet, the broadcaster added, is on the Polish capital from three sides, reported their artillery within range.

At the same time, French forces in the west said they had advanced on German soil—a move apparently aimed at diverting some of Germany's strength from the eastern front in Poland.

FDR To Be Sure He Has Votes To Approve Neutrality Legislation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP)—Congressional sources described President Roosevelt today as wanting to be sure he has the votes to approve his neutrality recommendations before calling the Senate and House into special session.

First the Senate foreign relations committee and then the Senate itself, it was said authoritatively, will be polled by telephone and telegraph.

Senate action was blocked this summer when the foreign relations committee voted 12 to 11 to delay action until next session. Well-advised persons said Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary Hull have not yet decided to ask Congress: 1. To authorize the sale of all goods to belligerents, including arms and implements of war, on a "cash-and-carry" basis; or 2. To repeat the entire neutrality act and return to international law. Congressional insiders were reported to have advised the president it would be much easier to obtain some form of "cash-and-carry" legislation than to abandon entirely the theory of statutory neutrality. Under this system, warring nations would have to pay cash for American purchases and transport them in their own ships.

Advocates of such a policy have argued it would benefit Great Britain and France, on the ground they could pay cash and could be expected to control the Atlantic sea lanes. Since the war began, these advocates noted, Germany has withdrawn her merchant ships from American ports. Much the same reasoning has been advanced by proponents of a return to international law, under which restrictions would be placed on the sale of goods. These persons contend Germany, without much foreign exchange in the United States, would be in a position to buy many war supplies here.

Comments of a number of legislators here and at their homes indicate much bi-partisan sentiment for a "cash-and-carry" policy. repeal or revision of the arms embargo, a survey showed, is favored by some House members who voted against repeal in the last session. There was much discussion of a possible date for a special session following a statement by Senator McNary of Oregon, the Republican leader, that Mr. Roosevelt had suggested Congress meet Sept. 18.

Capital Hill authorities generally predicted Congress would not be asked to meet before Oct. 1. A few hours after their birth, baby zebras can run almost as fast as their parents.

Minerals now being exploited in Tanganyika include gold, diamonds, tin, tungsten, salt, red ochre, mica and phosphate.

Wasp, Jr. motors with a cruising speed of 185 miles an hour and a top speed of 205 miles. The ship was club deluxe model with lounge, table, easy chairs, refrigerator, etc., and was priced at $45,000. Also visiting in Pampa yesterday was E. E. Clair of Wichita Falls, production superintendent of the Kings Oil company, who flew here in the company's Beechcraft piloted by Fred Elderson.

City Manager Back In His Office Again

City Manager W. T. Williamson was able to be in his office today after returning from Vernon where he was taken to a hospital Tuesday while enroute to Fort Worth on a business trip. Mr. Williamson underwent an operation here a month ago and returned to his office last week for the first time. Important business this week necessitated his going to Fort Worth, but enroute, with City Attorney Walter Rogers, he became ill and was taken to a Vernon hospital. He returned home yesterday much improved. The city commission will meet this afternoon in delayed session.

British Drop Another Note Over Germany

LONDON, Sept. 8 (AP)—Europe's warring nations bombed each other today with words aimed at morale, and the sympathies of neutral countries, as Great Britain and France slowly developed their offensive against Germany on the western front.

The propaganda battle grew like a rolling snowball with its core of war of words that preceded actual combat.

Germany exploited her steady advances in Poland and accused Polish civilians of the massacre of German nationals within Poland's borders. Poland charged Germany with indiscriminate bombing of civilian population.

Britain, continuing to play up the torpedoing of the passenger liner Atlantic, scolded at German bluffs that it was a British trick. On all sides there were claims of success in land, sea and air operations—and denials.

The ministry of information announced British Royal Air Force planes made a fourth reconnaissance flight over Germany early this morning and dropped three and a half million copies of a note to the German people.

Meanwhile, the fighting on the western front proceeded in a manner markedly different from the early days of the World War.

Several factors figured in the comparatively slow development of the 1939 combat. Outstanding was the difference between today's tactical conditions and those prevailing in 1914.

In 1914 troops maneuvering in open country eluded and fought within a few hours after expiration of Britain's ultimatum to Germany to get her troops out of neutral Belgium or go to war.

Today great armies are moving into previously prepared lines, deep and heavily fortified. Such process makes for extended artillery duels to soften defenses and clear the way for big mass infantry and mechanized forces.

Another angle arises from the need for caution against flanking movements. A quick advance by a small detachment would leave it open to flank attack by the fast-moving motorized modern armies.

Still a third important factor was the conviction of Britain and France that the element of time is in their favor.

British strategists contend Germany's internal economic strength is insufficient to withstand the demands of a long war.

As a consequence, the British and French are going at their land campaign slowly and carefully with a view to creating a diversion from the German attack on Poland, where Germany is meanwhile expending ammunition, manpower and equipment.

Bridge Across Red River Dedicated

VERNON, Sept. 8 (AP)—Dedication today of the new Oklaunion-Davidson bridge across Red river fulfilled a 30-year-old dream of Texas and Oklahoma highway promoters.

The $662,000 span was opened August 30, providing continuous traffic between the two states. The wooden span it replaces was often closed by high water and once by fire.

Governor Leon Phillips and members of the Texas Highway commission were guests of honor at that state's ceremonies at the bridge this morning.

Texas observance was to be held this afternoon, with members of the highway commission, highway engineers, Lee Highway Association officials, Gov. John E. Miles of New Mexico, Congressman Ed Gossett and delegations from town along the highway participating.

The bridge stretches 1.21 miles. The longest span across the Red river. It is finished concrete overall and is built in sections, with metal expansion joints to take care of contraction and expansion. The floor rests on steel stringers.

Rayburn Assails Neutrality Act

TEXARKANA, Sept. 8 (AP)—Rep. Sam Rayburn (D., Texas), House majority leader, wants this country's neutrality act "wiped out because it is not a neutrality bill at all."

This he told a banquet in his honor last night, commenting later he "presumed" President Roosevelt would call a special session of Congress to attempt revision of the neutrality act about Sept. 18.

He said he had not talked to the President for a week.

Calling Hitler "that mad man turned loose in Europe," the congressman declared "grant the United States to do everything short of war to aid the democracies stamp out the dictators."

Veneral Disease Treatment May Be Obtained At Clinic

Treatment for veneral diseases can still be obtained by Gray county citizens from the county operated clinic, Dr. Roy A. Webb, county health officer said today.

The clinic has now been in operation for one year and between 40 and 50 persons a week have received treatment.

Hours for the treatment of such patients are from 9 o'clock in the morning until noon on Saturdays, at Dr. Webb's office, 1003 1/2 South Cuyler.

Only persons who are citizens of Gray county and financially unable to obtain treatment elsewhere will be given treatment at the clinic. Those who are able to pay for such treatment should consult their own physician, Dr. Webb said.

As They Were: Current Crisis Figures in 1914

What were they doing 25 years ago? In 1914, Germany's Adolf Hitler, left, was a Bavarian house and poster painter, who dropped his brush to join the army. Britain's Neville Chamberlain, center, was alderman of Birmingham, England. Italy's Benito Mussolini, in corporal's uniform, founded a Socialist daily which urged Italian entry into the war against Germany. Today these men, who rose from the ashes of the last war, are the leaders making—or averting—the next one. What figures of the war of tomorrow now are hidden in Europe's armies or obscure political circles?

O'Daniel Still Thinks Capital Punishment Should Be Abolished

By HOWARD C. MARSHALL

AUSTIN, Sept. 8 (AP)—Two hundred and thirty-four days as governor of Texas strengthened W. Lee O'Daniel in his opinion capital punishment should be abolished.

Declaring the execution of human beings was nothing less than a hangover from barbarism, Governor O'Daniel asserted today in an interview capital punishment ultimately would be banned and everywhere would be looked upon with horror.

Moreover, he said, his experiences in the executive's office, where he reviews hundreds of cases of persons convicted of crime, have convinced him justice too often miscarried for society to run the risk of putting an innocent man to death.

"I was inaugurated Jan. 17," he said, "and since then one of my chief duties has been to review criminal cases passed on to me by the board of pardons and paroles.

"Today I believe more firmly than ever that capital punishment should be abolished, and I think it is only a matter of time until it will be blotted out in all civilized countries."

Recalling the case of Francis Marion Black, whose death sentence recently was commuted by the Governor on the unanimous recommendation of the pardons board, O'Daniel said:

"If it had not been for my policy of granting 30-day stays of execution to men sentenced to death, Black would be dead. That's putting it flatly and simply. The man would be dead today.

"We would be dead despite the fact all members of the pardons board consider commutation warranted. The 30-day stay gave enough time to allow the board to receive new evidence."

Black was convicted on a charge of killing Marvin Dale Noble, a Harlingen boy, by pushing him off a cliff in an attempt to collect $5,000 life insurance.

"You would be surprised how many times a man is convicted of a terrible crime, given the death sentence by a jury and a judge and then later every member of that jury and the judge change their minds, become doubtful whether they have done the right thing," O'Daniel went on.

"If the man has been put to death, it will have been late to do anything about it. If he is in prison, the case can be re-opened and new evidence received.

"Not a great while ago two men served several years in the Texas penitentiary for a crime which it finally was proved they did not commit. The men were released. But suppose these men had been assessed a death sentence and put to death?"

People Would Abolish While admitting there was little likelihood Texas would abolish capital punishment any time soon, the governor expressed the opinion "the people would vote for abolition if given the opportunity."

"It is just a hangover from barbarism," he declared.

"Aside from the humane and moral aspects of the issue, he continued, death is not a deterrent to crime.

"Records prove it," he said. "And the records also show that crime is no worse in states where capital punishment has been abolished."

Abolition was recommended to the last session of the legislature, which was O'Daniel's first session, but the bills to make the recommendation effective made no headway. They never got out of committee.

In fact, every session as far back as veteran observers remember has witnessed introduction of such legislation in response to pleas of persons seeking abolition of the death penalty, but the move has failed to make appreciable progress.

Opponents say the death penalty is needed to curb heinous crimes and that it is the only really effective deterrent. Governor James V. Alfred took this view, once saying death was the only thing a hardened criminal feared.

Experts Complicate Problem Some say also the racial situation in Texas necessitates capital punishment and if the death penalty were abolished there would be an outbreak of lynchings, especially for sex crimes.

Under the law, the governor's clemency powers are sharply restricted. He may commute a death sentence only on recommendation of the pardons board. In the absence of such recommendation, he may authorize only a 30-day stay of execution. If the board should recommend clemency, he might refuse to grant it.

Every person under death sentence whose cases reached him has been granted a 30-day stay by Governor O'Daniel.

In the approximately eight months of his administration, nine persons

$3,050 Recovered In Daring Attack

AMARILLO, Sept. 8 (AP)—John Zager of Clayton, N. M., recovered $3,050 lost to confidence men while clinging to the outside of a speeding automobile and jabbing its two occupants with a pocket knife last night.

Many Amarillo residents witnessed the strange flight.

Zager, a tourist camp operator in Clayton, said he was fleeing of $4,000 in a horse-racing confidence game. He said that as he walked Amarillo streets last night he saw the men. He jumped on the running board of their car, yelled for police and started "work" with his knife. He said the men tried to push him off the car but started handing him fists full of bills after he started slashing at them with the knife.

An Amarillo woman found $500 in the route of the flight. She turned the money in to Amarillo police, Panhandle and New Mexico officers launched a wide search for the men.

Members of a Sam Raba, Tex., Sunday school class recently killed a rattlesnake that weighed 25 pounds.

WORKING WIVES

BY LOUISE HOLMES

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday, Marian cannot blame herself when Florence blames her for holding Dan back, depriving him of his job...

CHAPTER IV

AFTER his outburst, Mr. Fellows ignored and seemed to forget the conversation. He was himself again, businesslike, kindly, impersonal.

Shocked and bewildered, Marian tried to uncover the motive behind his frankness. At last she arrived at a comforting conclusion. No doubt G. F. had been merely letting off steam.

When, shortly before lunch, Mr. Fellows asked her to choose a diamond bracelet for his wife, she chuckled to herself.

"I think I'm going crazy, Marian," she said. "Oh, no, dear—of course, Pete's marriage was a shock."

"Pete belongs to me," Carmar's rouged lips were a thin line. "But, Carmar—you could have had him—any time."

"Why didn't I take him?" she smiled bitterly. "I thought he'd always be there—I couldn't marry him last year because I was buying my car—I couldn't marry him the year before because I had to have a milk coat. I've got the car and the coat, but—"

She stopped, biting her lip. She was quietly hysterical. "Listen, Carmar, be reasonable. You didn't want to pinch and scrimp—that's what it would have meant if you had married Pete. When you see him and his wife struggling along on his salary, going without everything they want—"

"That's what I thought when he wrote me. He said he was going to marry this Julie person—her lips twisted over the name—'unless I get it right then and came home. I cabled him to go ahead—but I—I didn't think he would."

"You've done the most sensible thing in the world. You have a swell job, opportunity for travel, money—"

"But I want Pete. The years ahead—so long—so lonely." After a sketchy luncheon, they left the restaurant, two ultra-smart, young business women.

One costly dress covered heart-break, the other a constantly nagging fear. Gallantly they smiled at parting.

ANOTHER side of the hectic picture presented itself to Marian that afternoon when Florence Avery, the switchboard girl, came to her desk. Florence was a shy, retiring girl.

"Do you think I could have a small raise in salary, Mrs. Harkness?" she asked. Marian looked doubtful. "Is there any particular reason why you need more money?"

The girl blushed. "Ted, my husband, wants a car. He says a man can't get a job without a car."

"Hasn't your husband a job?" "Oh, no, he hasn't worked since we were married."

"Florence, that's too bad. It makes it hard for you." "I don't care whether he works or not," Florence replied with a touch of shy defiance.

"It doesn't matter where the money comes from. We have lots of fun." She looked down, drawing a wistful breath. "I just thought—he hasn't seemed so happy lately—if I could get a car for him—on payments."

Marian felt that the world had gone topsy-turvy, it was all wrong somehow. Herself, beset with anxiety; Carmar, sick with grief because she had not been able to have her cake and eat it, too.

And now little Florence, trying to hold her husband's love by providing for him more lavishly. Three business women. After all, were the homemakers to be envied? She thought of Dolly and Pete's Julie.

She said harshly to the waiting Florence, "If your husband wants a car I'm afraid he'll have to buy it for himself."

"Yes'm," Florence turned away, her small face shadowed. Marian thought: What's the matter with us? Has civilization gone into reverse? She sighed. Whether it had or not, there was no turning back. They must all go on, caught in the web of their own weaving.

As for herself, she must find some way of circumventing Sally Blake. It should be simple. Sally was younger, yes, but other than that, her advantages were on the negative side. She had no background of experience, she was only fairly adept. Several times that day G. F. had laughingly corrected her. Laughingly—that was the catch. He had appeared to enjoy Sally's presence in the office. Marian set her chin. She'd hang on. The nagging dread again, the dread which did not concern Sally. What would she do if—? Instantly, she assured herself that the dread was absurd. She had managed her life for 12 years, forced the fates to smile upon it. It was most likely she could go on doing so.

AT the end of the afternoon she was utterly exhausted, distracted with the swinging pendulum of her thoughts. When Dan called for her at the office, she raised haggard eyes, sure of his sympathetic understanding.

"I'm so tired," she complained. "It's been a hectic day, Dan." She was on the verge of tears. If only Dan would take her in his arms, kiss away all her worries. She leaned toward him, only to have him turn abruptly away.

"That's the way they come sometimes," he said. "Anyway, it was nice riding home with Dan. Carefully removing her hat, she leaned her head against the cushion. Wearily, she closed her eyes. The events of the day marched before her, troublesome, vexing, disturbing. They were well out of Sheridan before she found the strength to tell Dan of Carmar's frantic regret.

Dan did not exactly say that it served Carmar right, but Marian received the impression that he thought so. He said, "Carmar has kept Pete dangling for 10 years just because she must have nick nacks, things that are here today and gone tomorrow, she has deprived Pete of a home and loved children."

Marian's unreliable temper flared. "I hope you're not aiming at me over Carmar's shoulder."

"We have a home, haven't we? And love—haven't we?" Marian darted a glance at his strong, good-looking profile. Sarcasm again. What had come over Dan? Had he decided to strike back? Normally she would have tossed her head and laughed at the idea of Dan striking back. He was in no position to make terms. But she did not toss her head, she was far from laughing. Almost timidly, she touched his arm.

"Dan—would you be glad if he had a baby?" "Lord, no," he exploded. "The poor little tad would have a type-writer for a mother and a spinster dad for a father. We'll just spare the coming generation that."

Marian's hands closed into tight fists. (To Be Continued)

Nazis Ahead Of Britain In Sub War

(By The Associated Press)

It was England's mighty surface fleet against Germany's undersea raiders all over again today as naval activity took a leading role in Europe's new war between old enemies.

And with the U-boats off to a fast start—faster by far than in the World War—the score at the end of five days of conflict stood 5 to 3 in favor of the Axis. In the tonnage the British have lost 32,143 to the Nazis; 14,037, all in merchantmen.

This counted only the known losses. At least two other British freighters and a French vessel were attacked by submarines in the Atlantic, but one reached port safely and the fate of the others was not yet known.

Insufficient information was available to include in the score two German navy "snappers," a submarine, the British ministry of information reported last (Thursday) night a naval attack on a mine-laying U-boat and expressed belief the attack was successful, while Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons that in Monday's air raid over the Kiel canal "at least two hits" were recorded on one of Germany's three "pocket" battleships.

A sudden outbreak of submarine attacks yesterday raised the Nazi score.

Three British freighters were added to the sunken passenger liner (which Berlin denies was torpedoed) and the freighter Bosnia on the list of those sunk.

MANAAR—7,242 gross tons, sunk about 100 miles off the Portuguese coast; 88 in crew; two known dead, three wounded, 40 missing; as in the case of the Adonia, Turkey, said submarine fired a sinking ship as crew sought to escape.

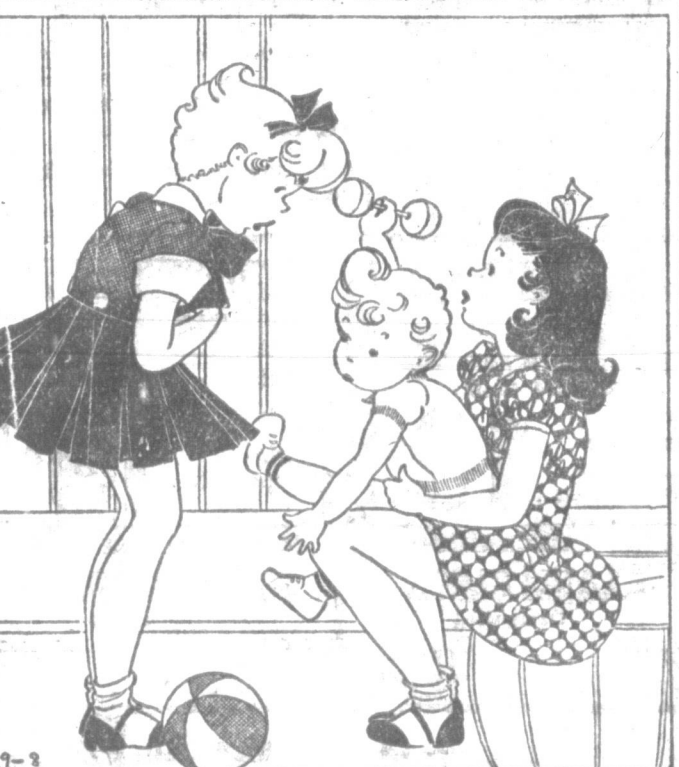

Commander "Courteous" OLIVE GROVE—1,060 tons, loaded with sugar, sunk off Irish coast; crew of 33 saved by U. S. liner Washington, whose captain, Giles Steadman, reported the sub commander as "most courteous" in ordering British crew to lifeboats before torpedoing, offering to tow the lifeboats toward land, putting them on their course and firing two signal rockets which enabled the lifeboats less than an hour after SOS was received.

built in 1937; loss announced by British but no details given. In addition, the U. S. liner American Farmer, enroute to England, reported the British Pulkastan, 3,809 tons, and the French Tamara, 3,747 tons, were attacked by submarines off the European coast, and the British ministry of information disclosed the Corinthic, 4,823 tons, had been attacked by a sub but reached an unamed port safely.
