MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of people took part in marches and demonstrations across Russia today as part of a nationwide strike called by the country's largest labor union.

The workers — from teachers to miners to defense workers — are protesting unpaid wages, a shortage of jobs and lack of social guarantees, according to the Federation of Independent Unions of Russia.

The strike, called two weeks ago, coincided with President Boris Yeltsin's heart bypass surgery today at a clinic outside Moscow.

Millions of Russian workers have not been paid for months, and government spending on health and welfare is well below the modest amounts budgeted. Overdue wages and social benefits total about $7 billion.

Workers frequently go on strike in Russia, but aside from miners and energy workers, they have yet to organize effective mass labor action.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Two North Korean commandos who infiltrated South Korea from a stranded submarine more than six weeks ago were killed today in a shootout with their South Korean pursuers.

Three South Korean soldiers, including a colonel, also were killed and eight others wounded by grenades thrown by the North Koreans, about 6 miles from the border with North Korea, the Defense Ministry said.

The ministry said the two were among 26 North Koreans believed to have come ashore Sept. 18. Since then, 24 intruders have been killed or found dead; one was captured and another is still missing.

The ministry said the two dead North Koreans were "reconnaissance agents," but did not give their names.

Texas voters casting ballots at polls today

AUSTIN (AP) — The campaigning went down to the wire, but today it was the voters' turn. Secretary of State Tony Garza predicted a light turnout for a presidential election, with only 58.5 percent of the 10.5 million registered Texas voters likely to cast ballots.

Mary Page of Arlington, with voter registration card in hand, made her way to the polls this morning for only the second time in her 85 years.

"For a long time I didn't know they was allowing women to vote yet," she said. "But now I'll vote in every election."

Meanwhile, Republican congressional candidate Ed Harrison greeted voters at Webb Elementary School in a middle-class Arlington neighborhood, handing out cards and shaking hands in an attempt to win last-minute support.

"When you run in an election you kind of get a different perspective," said Harrison, who is in a tough race against incumbent Democrat Martin Frost. The state's 32 electoral votes were enough to bring two presidential hopefuls to Texas for one last pitch Monday.

Republican Bob Dole told a Houston crowd, "You are going to decide this election right here in Texas." Reform Party nominee Ross Perot, in San Antonio for his first Texas appearance of the campaign, railed against President Clinton's character.

The president wasn't in Texas on Monday, but he hadn't ignored the nation's second-largest state. He campaigned in El Paso and San Antonio on Friday and Saturday.

Hundreds of other candidates — for other federal, state and local offices — tried to make the most of the waning hours.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm barnstormed to a half dozen cities. The Republican, whose presidential hopes were dashed early in the year, asked for a third Senate term by reiterating his campaign themes of smaller government and lower taxes.

"Republicans believe that you can make better decisions than the government can," he said.

Gramm's Democratic rival, Victor Morales, hit the road for one final campaign trip in the white pickup truck that became his symbol. Morales drove from his Mesquite headquarters to Austin.

He said the key to his victory would be a big turnout among Hispanic voters. "If it comes through with a million, I think, a little bit over a million, then it's over for Phil," Morales said.

The races for Congress were less clear cut.

More than half the 30 congressional elections were to be decided today. But since federal judges ordered special elections in 13 Dallas and Houston-area districts — and many of those drew more than two candidates — some December runoff were possible.

Democrats were hoping to expand their 18-12 margin in the U.S. House but said the court-ordered elections gave the GOP an advantage. Republicans hoped to trim the Democrats' lead by at least two seats.

The GOP also was eyeing the state Capitol, where Democratic control of the Legislature has been a foregone conclusion for more than a century.

Democrats were clinging to a 16-14 lead in the 31-member Senate, with one seat vacant, and holding a more comfortable 84-63 lead in the 150-member House, with three vacancies.

The GOP even challenged House Speaker Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, who has been a lawmaker for 24 years.

Republicans hoped to hang onto their Texas Supreme Court majority, a job made somewhat easier when Democrats failed to field a candidate against Justice Greg Abbott.

In Court of Criminal Appeals races, Democratic Judge Frank Maloney was seeking re-election to the Court of Criminal Appeals, while two other Democratic incumbents retired.

Eight members of the 15-member State Board of Education will be chosen to write education policy for public schools.

Voting today in Pampa

Carolyn Coffman signs up to vote this morning in the Precinct 2 voting site in the Baker Elementary School gymnasium. Waiting to vote is Richard Coffman, and assisting the couple is Augusta Brown. Also manning the booth are Lula May Engle and Lavena Abbott. Polls for the general election close at 7 p.m. today.

Election day: Excitement and apathy

By FRED BAYLES
AP National Writer

From the midnight darkness of New Hampshire to a sunny Midwestern morning, Americans crowded into polling places today to celebrate democracy.

Some grumbled about the choice of candidates. Others criticized empty political rhetoric. But they put aside complaints to exercise their rights.

Among them was Anesti Vangel, a 68-year-old Boston man who shrugged when asked who he picked for president.

"Sometimes I've gone into the booth and not voted for anyone," he said. "But I go because I don't want to lose the privilege."

As in the past, the celebration began at midnight in two tiny communities nestled in New Hampshire's White Mountains. At Hart's Location, 21 residents filed into voting booths in the Notchland Inn's wood-paneled dining room.

It took them four minutes. The final count, including absentee ballots: Bob Dole 13, President Clinton 12, Ross Perot 4, Libertarian Harry Browne 2.

Across the mountains, in Dixville Notch, the ritual was repeated: Dole 18, Clinton 8, Perot 1, Browne 1.

The satisfaction of voting first wasn't enough for Bob Tiedeman, a long-haul trucker from Hart's Location.

"I just wish there were somebody running who was worth it all," said Tiedeman, who wouldn't say who got his vote.

But shortly before 7 a.m., as a line formed down the steps of the red-brick Eliot School in Boston's North End, Megan Tilles hugged her 8-month-old daughter, Mackerzie, against the early morning chill and said: "There's got to be some candidate you like in any election."

As the sun rose, the celebration continued. At the Donald J. Adams School in Northfield, N.J., a bedroom community near Atlantic City, John Malayer, 33, and his 5-year-old daughter, Colleen, crunched across the leaf-covered lawn to vote.

Malayer let his daughter pull the lever for Dole.

"After four years of hearing about Whitewater and that other crap, I'm tired of hearing it. They're both windbags but Dole's the lesser of two evils," Malayer said.

In Zebulon, Ky., Hugh Smith, a federal mine inspector, arrived early to vote in the basement of a funeral home. While he picked Clinton, he hoped for a balance of Republicans in Congress.

"I do not particularly want the Democratic party to go back to the way it was," he said. "Very frankly I think '94 was good for the Democratic party. There are some people who just had to go."

At the Century Village retirement community in Pembroke Pines, Fla., 82-year-old John Licitra came out in overcast, shirt-sleeve weather to vote for Perot. He said his pick was a vote for his four children and seven grandchildren.

"I've lost my wife. My days are numbered," Licitra said. "I want to vote for the future."

Volunteers and election officials kept an eye on the weather. Poll judges in Minnesota were undaunted by a forecast of snow. Veterans knew to bring snow shovels.

Panel says property taxes hurt Texas home ownership

DALLAS (AP) — The governor's tax study committee has come up with a final report that says a hybrid of taxes are the best way to lower property taxes, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

The newspaper reported that the 17-member panel concluded that rising property taxes are hindering capital investment and home ownership in Texas and there's "substantial public sentiment" to change it.

"It appears that some combination of alternatives, rather than a single replacement source, may offer the best hope for a solution," the report said.

The report also stated that any tax relief should come along with protections against the rise of property taxes to current levels.

The report is the result of two months of public hearings in 14 cities across the state conducted by a panel appointed by Gov. George W. Bush in April. It will be formally presented to Bush Friday at the final meeting of the Citizens' Committee on Property Tax Relief.

Ray Sullivan, spokesman for the governor, said Bush would not comment on the report until then.

Once Bush gets the report, the next step is for the governor, state leaders, and state legislators to work out a plan, Sullivan said.

The panel was directed to sample public opinion and issue a report before the 1997 Legislature convenes in January.

The report said there was a general agreement that local school property taxes, which usually make up most of a property owner's local property tax bill, needed to be reduced, but not eliminated.

Bush asked the committee to examine three possible tax alternatives: increasing the sales tax, creating a business gross-receipts tax or establishing a business-activity tax.

A gross receipts tax would tax a business' total revenue. A business-activity tax would tax the difference between the sales and costs that a business incurs.

There was no consensus on any of the three, but the panel found that Texans support property tax relief and want guarantees that a change isn't just a ruse for raising taxes.

"It is clear that to have credibility with the public, certain taxpayer guarantees are needed," the report found.

Establishing conservation concerns

From left, John Hughes, Ron Brauchi, L.H. Webb, Matt Street, Tony Smitherman, Jim Shaw, David Bowers and Lee McDonald listen to John Crowell of Gray County Soil and Water Conservation, standing, acting as facilitator for the District #125 public meeting Monday evening. The meeting was held for the purpose of establishing local priority concerns in conservation problems. Round-table discussions concluded that the top five conservation subjects for farm and ranch problems in Gray County are water and wind erosion, weed control, overgrazing and irrigation system efficiency. After complete review of all conservation districts' priorities is complete on the state and regional levels, according to SWCD and National Resource Conservation Services, final results will be determined on a national level through 1997 and 1998, based on needs assessments and evaluation of achievements.

National Home Care Month proclaimed

Pampa Mayor Bob Neslage has proclaimed November as National Home Care Month in Pampa, being observed Nov. 1 through Nov. 30.

Instrumental in obtaining the local proclamation were staff members of Columbia Medical Center of Pampa Homecare Department.

In his proclamation, Mayor Neslage notes that home care "is the oldest and most humane tradition of health service delivery in the United States enabling the ill and disabled to receive high quality medical assistance and retain a sense of dignity and independence in the comfort and security of their own homes."

The proclamation notes that home care is a growing alternative to hospitalization for acute and chronic illnesses in the United States, with an estimated expenditure of $30 billion for services to more than 7 million Americans.

Thousands of men and women work in association with more than 18,850 home care agencies in the U.S., combining caring and modern technology to provide cost effective home health care services that can stimulate quicker and fuller recoveries and improvements than often obtained through institutional care, Neslage notes in the proclamation.

National Home Care Month honors the National Association for Home Care and the home care agencies involved in providing home health care services to people.

The proclamation urges the citizens of Pampa "to support the home care profession in its efforts to provide safe, affordable and comfortable health care in the homes of our elderly, disabled and infirm."

Propane users urged to seek 'automatic' accounts

AUSTIN — Winter weather is just ahead, and the Texas Railroad Commission suggests homeowners who fuel furnaces and appliances with propane contact their local dealer about having their propane delivery account put on "automatic."

Bad weather can cause a backlog of emergency propane deliveries that inconveniences the customer and can lead to price spikes. But with an automatic or "keep full" account, residential users don't have to worry about running out of propane during cold snaps or times when treacherous road conditions hinder deliveries.

tanks full not only helps ensure an adequate supply of gas, but also a fair market price. In Texas, 90 percent of propane usage is by petrochemical companies as a feedstock, along with naphtha, ethanes and other hydrocarbons. When propane prices rise, these companies shift to the other hydrocarbons and release their propane inventories into the market.

Price spikes can occur when there is a sudden unforeseen demand for residential propane, as in a prolonged cold snap, and petrochemical companies aren't able to shift quickly enough to other raw materials.

also strongly urge homeowners to have their local propane dealers perform a regular yearly safety inspection program before the first icy blast of winter weather. A safety inspection will ensure the propane tank's regulator vent won't ice over or be clogged by insect nests or debris. This could cause a safety hazard by releasing high pressure gas directly to home appliances.

For more information on how to stay warm safely with propane this winter, look under "gas/propane" in the telephone book for your nearest propane dealer or call the Railroad Commission's Alternative Fuels Division at 1-800-64-CLEAR.

Report: Forgotten duct tape caused Peru plane crash

NEW YORK (AP) — Workers polishing a Peruvian jetliner forgot to remove duct tape they had put over crucial sensors, leading to a crash last month that killed all 70 people aboard, NBC News reported.

The Aeroperu Boeing 757 crashed into the Pacific Ocean on Oct. 2 shortly after takeoff from Lima, Peru.

Workers had placed the duct tape over the sensors — which monitor air pressure and help track altitude and airspeed — while polishing the outside of the plane in order to keep polish from getting into the sensor holes, NBC reported Monday.

In Seattle, Liz Verdier, a spokeswoman for Boeing Commercial Airplane Group, said that only the National Transportation Safety Board could comment on the investigation. NTSB spokesman Allen Pollock said today that any word on the crash's cause would have to come from authorities in Lima. The NTSB is only assisting in the investigation, he said.

Ex-KGB agent charged in 'Star Wars' case

NEW YORK (AP) — A former KGB agent is being accused of conspiring to obtain information on the "Star Wars" defense system for Russia, federal officials said.

The Russian Foreign Intelligence Service issued a statement Monday from Moscow protesting the arrest of Vladimir Galkin, who both Russian and U.S. authorities say is a former KGB agent.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Amy Rindskopf said Galkin will be arraigned on charges of attempting to gather information on U.S. national defense, "with reason to believe the information was to be used to the injury of the United States and to the advantage of any foreign nation."

His alleged accomplice, Aluru J. Prasad, a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and president of Hyderabad Batteries Ltd. of India, is accused of trying to obtain classified documents. His first trial ended in a mistrial last summer and he is to be tried again on Dec. 9.

In court papers, FBI agent Stanton M. Felton said Prasad, Galkin and unnamed "others" conspired to obtain U.S. military data that included plans for the Strategic Defense Initiative, popularly known as Star Wars or SDI. The plan, first proposed by President Reagan, calls for building a vast, space-based laser shield against a massive Soviet missile attack.

Felton said Galkin and Prasad tried to obtain SDI material through Subrahmayam M. Kota, of Northboro, Mass., an employee of Data General Corp. Kota was a key witness at Prasad's trial.

The affidavit quotes Kota as saying Prasad quit trying to get useful information from him in 1990, after which Kota began receiving calls from Galkin.

Court papers said Galkin offered Kota $10,000 for each of three reports on conferences and symposiums dealing with SDI, electronic warfare and other strategic and tactical systems being developed by the United States.

The Russian Intelligence Service said Galkin "was indeed a foreign intelligence officer until 1992," and had provided this information in his application for a U.S. visa.

Beta Sigma Phi sorority chapter representatives Terry Harrison, City Council president; Ottolene Jones of Preceptor Chi, Carolyn Smith of Preceptor Theta Iota and Starla Tracy of Xi Phi Alpha record ideas and notes for the sorority's 'Mardi Gras' Sweetheart Ball in February.

Local Beta Sigma Phi sorority chapters planning 'Mardi Gras' Sweetheart Ball

Members of several local chapters of Beta Sigma Phi met recently in the home of Carolyn Smith to discuss ideas for the annual sorority sweetheart banquet in February.

Pampa is the home of six chapters, representing more than 60 members, working toward a variety of community projects and programs providing services for local volunteer organizations, plus a full sorority scholarship package awarded a Pampa High School graduate each year.

Chapter representatives are putting together plans for their 1997 "Mardi Gras" Sweetheart Ball. The local chapters consist of Preceptor Theta Iota, Preceptor Chi, Xi Phi Alpha, Epsilon, Xi Beta Chi and Beta Eta Omega.

Smith said each chapter is represented by their chapter sweetheart, who will be presented in a special Sweetheart Ball ceremony which will be held Friday, Feb. 14, at the M.K. Brown Auditorium.

The annual event serves as a fund raising event for the sorority chapters to sponsor a Pampa high school graduate using its scholarship "opportunity plan" established with West Texas A&M, said Terry Harrison, Sorority City Council president and member of Preceptor Chi.

In the course of the meeting, several ideas on decorating, food service and entertainment were discussed.

Attending the Friday, Oct. 31, planning session, hosted by Smith, were Harrison, Starla Tracy and Ottolene Jones.

The next meeting will be called to establish work committees and present final plans for the February event. The date, meeting time and place for the next planning session will be determined in the near future, said Smith, who urges all sorority members to mark the Feb. 14 Mardi Gras on their calendars now.

Construction workers coexist with archeologists in Athens

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Not since the ancient Athenians built the graceful marble temples on Acropolis hill has Greece's capital been the site of such intensive construction work.

This time, though, Athenians are not glorifying heaven, but tunneling 65 feet underground. They are expanding their antiquated rail system with two new subway lines designed to ease traffic congestion and cut air pollution.

It has also become the single largest archaeological excavation carried out in Athens — 82,800 square yards of digs. Contractors have been forced to coexist with archeologists whose patience sometimes appears infinite in their determination to prevent damage to important finds.

In the digging, workers and archeologists found in the first 12 feet evidence from every major historical period dating back to 1200 B.C. About 90 million cubic feet of earth is being moved as the two underground lines are laid and 21 stations are built.

At one point the tunnel had to be diverted to prevent possible damage to a 5th century B.C. graveyard in the Kerameikos district.

Vatican suspends UNICEF contribution

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Vatican mission to the United Nations has suspended its symbolic contribution to UNICEF, saying the U.N. children's charity had become involved in birth control programs and abortion advocacy.

"The new involvement of UNICEF in the areas of concern ... has forced the Holy See to take this visible step," the mission said in a statement Monday.

UNICEF denied the Vatican assertions, saying its policies are "consistent with that of the Holy See."

"UNICEF does not make its resources available for abortion or any method of contraception in any country," spokeswoman Madeleine Eisner said.

The Vatican mission donated $2,000 to UNICEF in 1996, Eisner said, out of a total budget of about $1 billion.

Among other things, the Vatican mission said UNICEF had participated in the publication of a U.N. manual advocating the distribution of post-coital contraceptives to refugee women in emergency situations and had become involved in advocacy work on abortion legislation.

The Vatican statement also said UNICEF workers in various countries had distributed contraceptives and counseled people on using them.

American couple's bodies brought to Kathmandu

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — A Nepalese guide trapped in a snowstorm in the Himalayas watched an American medical college dean and his wife grow weak and despaired about the increasingly slim chances of rescue.

"The American couple is getting weaker," said the diary of Kumar Magar, 27, one of the three Nepalese sherpas who died with Helen and Philip J. Fialkow, both 62, of Seattle, Washington.

The rescue party that uncovered the frozen bodies also found a tape recorder of the American couple, but a U.S. Embassy spokesman said today the material would remain confidential until it is returned to the family.

Rescuers digging through eight feet of snow and ice found Magar's diary, said helicopter pilot Maj. Kisendra Shahi, who brought the bodies to the capital today.

Shahi quoted the diary as saying the weather over the area was deteriorating and the chances of a rescue helicopter reaching them appeared slim.

The Fialkows and two of their guides suffered frostbite and had asked the other Nepalese assistants to get help. Bad weather delayed the rescue operation for one week.

Doctors at the embassy today were preparing to embalm the bodies before sending them to Seattle, said consular official David Schensted.

Boris Yeltsin undergoes heart surgery, physicians declare operation a success

MOSCOW (AP) — Surgeons successfully carried out a vital heart operation today on President Boris Yeltsin to clear clogged arteries, and his doctors said everything went according to plan.

American heart expert Dr. Michael DeBakey, who consulted on the operation, said the surgery was a complete success and Yeltsin should recover quickly and resume his full duties.

"On the basis of the results of the operation, I would predict the president to be able to return to his office and perform his duty in perfectly normal fashion," DeBakey told reporters after the operation.

Dr. Renat Akchurin, who performed the operation, said the surgery had gone well and there had been no unexpected problems. He said Yeltsin still faced the recovery period, but his heart would now be able to function well.

Spokesman Sergei Yastrzhembsky said the bypass operation took seven hours, ending around 2 p.m. (6 a.m. EST).

Yeltsin was confident and joked with doctors before the surgery, which was carried out by a team of twelve top Russian doctors, including four surgeons.

"I'm not going to stay in the hospital bed for too long. I believe that I soon will be working as before — at full strength," Yeltsin said before the operation at the Moscow Cardiological Center.

Shortly before going under the knife, Yeltsin transferred power temporarily to Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, including control of Russia's vast nuclear arsenal. The premier visited the hospital while Yeltsin was in surgery, but made no public comment.

The surgical team was led by Akchurin, who trained in the United States with DeBakey. DeBakey and a team of American and German surgeons watched the operation on a monitor in case advice was needed.

Doctors said Yeltsin would need three or four bypasses to relieve his clogged arteries. But they expect Yeltsin to make a full recovery and return to work after six weeks to eight weeks of rest. Several members of the president's family were at the hospital.

The president "appeared energetic and felt optimistic and was joking before the operation," Yastrzhembsky said.

Meeting the chief Kremlin physician, Dr. Sergei Mironov, before the surgery, Yeltsin smiled and jokingly asked, "Are you carrying a knife already?" the spokesman said.

The 65-year-old president also thanked the ordinary people who had sent letters and telegrams wishing him a quick recovery.

"Dear Russians, you are all aware that I have to undergo a serious operation. I would like to thank all of you who sent letters and telegrams. Compassion and kind words are sometimes more important than any medicine," he said in a statement.

"I am sure everything will go normally," he added.

If Yeltsin were to die or was incapacitated, Chernomyrdin would take over, but would be required to call elections within three months.

Transferring his powers temporarily to Chernomyrdin, Yeltsin assured the Russian nation that the government was in firm hands and there was no need for concern.

"The country will not be left without a leader," he said in the statement.

Study: Specialists' care improves patient survival

DALLAS (AP) — Elderly stroke patients are more likely to survive if treated by neurologists instead of family physicians — but at a price, a study found.

Death rates during the 90 days after a stroke were 36 percent lower for patients treated by neurologists rather than family practitioners, the study found. The expenses were 34 percent higher.

The neurologists' patients may have benefited from better diagnosis, treatment, prevention and rehabilitation, the researchers said.

One of the study's authors, Dr. David J. Ballard, said the study underscores the importance of giving stroke patients access to more expensive specialists.

"It raises concerns about health-care plan arrangements that would make it difficult for neurologists to participate in the care of patients with stroke," said Ballard, an internist and director of the Center for Clinical Evaluation Sciences at Emory University.

The study was published in the November issue of the American Heart Association journal Stroke. It was funded by the federal Agency for Health Care Policy and Research of the Department of Health and Human Services.

Stroke occurs when a blood vessel to the brain bursts or is blocked by a clot. Deprived of oxygen, nerve cells in the affected area can't function and die within minutes. About 500,000 Americans suffer stroke each year.

The researchers studied 38,612 Medicare patients over 65 treated at hospitals across the United States for strokes caused by blood clots, the most common type.

Among patients discharged from a hospital, 16.1 percent of those in neurologists' care died in the 90 days after a stroke. That compares with 25.3 percent of those in family physicians' care.

Higher costs paralleled the improved survival rates.

The 90-day expenses for patient care (including hospital and doctor charges) averaged $15,919 for patients treated by neurologists and $11,838 for those cared for by family physicians.

Despite neurologists' higher patient-survival rates, "people should not use this paper as a rationale for 'the more we spend the better we do,'" said Dr. Alan L. Hillman, a health economist and director of the Center for Health Policy at the University of Pennsylvania.

The study did not look at patients' conditions after the 90-day period, Hillman noted.

"If all we are doing is buying people who are infirm for a certain period of time and then die, I don't think that's a good use of money," he said.

Police say UNT players return $1,400 in stolen property

DENTON, Texas (AP) — University of North Texas football players unloaded nearly $1,400 worth of motel property from team buses only minutes after they lost at Utah State last Saturday, police say.

Police in Logan, Utah, supervised as UNT buses were unpacked and stolen towels, bathmats, blankets, pillows and a videocassette recorder were piled into the parking lot of the Best Western Baugh Motel.

"They did an inventory at the motel and they found all these things missing," Logan police Lt. Randy Auman told The North Texas Daily, UNT's student newspaper.

Motel manager Elizabeth Maughan said she called North Texas athletic director Craig Helwig at Utah State's Romney Stadium during the game to report the missing property.

School officials agreed to return to the motel after UNT's 21-13 loss in the Big West Conference game.

Other items missing but not recovered during the search included hand towels, washcloths, a wool blanket and a thermal blanket, Maughan said.

The missing items, in total, were valued at $1,400, she said.

Auman said no charges would be filed against the players.

"We had a problem at the hotel and everything was taken care of," Helwig said in a statement released by the school Monday. Helwig was in California for the Big West basketball media day and unavailable for further comment.

Sean Johnson, an athletic department spokesman, said he didn't know what, if any, disciplinary action was being taken against players.

Head coach Matt Simon released a statement through Johnson, saying only: "The matter is being handled internally."

University president Al Hurley said that was fine with him.

"I have very, very strong confidence in coach Simon," Hurley said. "I think the coach is fundamentally responsible for the discipline of the football team."

Maughan said Simon had agreed to accept a bill for any items not returned to the motel.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Yeltsin asserts control in Russia

A grim and wooden Boris Yeltsin went on Russian television recently to dismiss Alexander Lebed, the youthful, controversial security chief who helped him gain the presidency in July and who almost singlehandedly ended the war in Chechnya last month.

The ouster was the ailing president's effort to prove that he's still in control of Russia's government and capable of maintaining order in the Kremlin.

It put an end, at least temporarily, to the raging struggle between Lebed and Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, who will now be on firmer ground to proceed with the business of government while Yeltsin undergoes a heart operation in the next weeks. Chernomyrdin and Interior Minister Anatoly Kulikov had continually clashed with the power hungry Lebed, whom Chernomyrdin recently referred to as an incompetent "home-grown Napoleon."

As talk of a coup swept the Kremlin, Kulikov accused Lebed of building his own rogue army. Most observers dismissed the rumors, but Lebed's own statements had done much to feed them. In September he told the press that Russia was at the "edge of the abyss," with the armed forces in near revolt and the national leadership paralyzed. Shortly after, he publicly asked Yeltsin to step down until he regained his health. And he demanded Kulikov's ouster, blaming him for the prolongation of the war in Chechnya.

Yeltsin's move was bold, and unavoidable under the circumstances. Lebed, an authoritarian former general who once spoke of himself as a semi-democrat, was presenting him with a situation that the president couldn't manage from his sick bed.

But the move won't be received warmly by the millions of Russians who perceive Lebed as a law-and-order maverick willing to confront the political establishment. His role in resolving the Chechnya conflict only added to his popularity, although it brought derision from politicians who accused him of selling out the army.

Nor is Lebed likely to take his removal lightly. He said in a press conference recently that he would go home to start preparing for a future election. Then he took a swipe at Yeltsin: "He's an elderly and ill person. It's not for me to kick the one who is down."

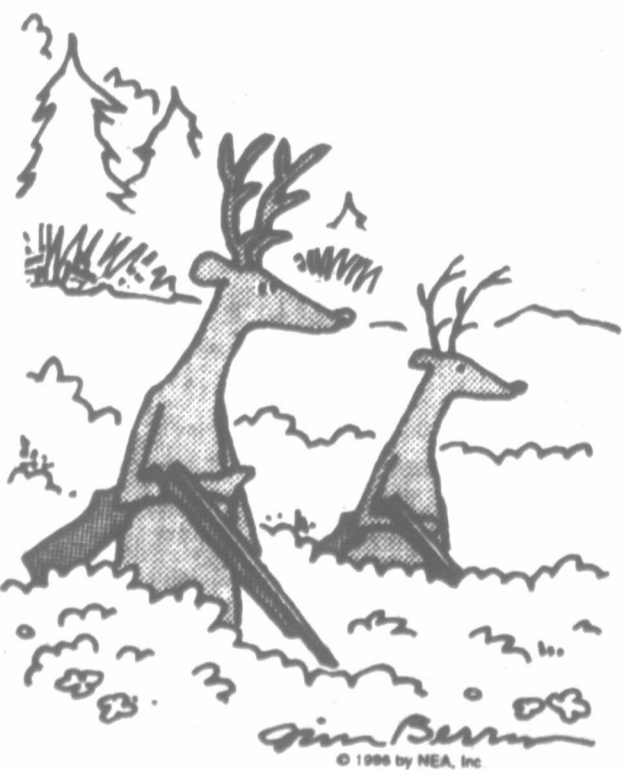

The United States has so far accepted events as strictly internal Russian affairs. But if Lebed emerges from them as a stronger candidate for the presidency, there might be, indeed, cause for concern.

Lebed, as a political leader, is largely an unknown quantity. Though he's hugely popular, he's a political neophyte, prone to blunders, dictatorial and a believer in Russia's imperial destiny. It might have been safer to keep him INSIDE the government.

Berry's World

NATO: A dangerous anachronism

A company that becomes obsolete soon becomes defunct as well: When its products are no longer useful, there is no way to stay in business. But political institutions can survive even when their reason for existence has disappeared. Take the case of NATO, which was a great success in the Cold War but is now a costly and dangerous anachronism.

The organization has nothing to fear from the two major presidential candidates, though. Bill Clinton made a speech in Detroit recently proposing that NATO admit some of the nations of Central and Eastern Europe to membership by 1999. Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic are the leading candidates, but Romania and Slovenia are also possibilities, with more aspirants waiting in the wings.

Does Bob Dole disagree? You bet: He's angry that the president hasn't moved faster to expand. What both would do is make not only Western Europe but all of Europe an American protectorate, with its defense paid for largely by American taxpayers and secured largely by American soldiers.

When the United States helped to establish the Atlantic alliance in 1949, nobody imagined that we would still be lugging it on our backs half a century later. The Truman administration assured skeptics in Congress that the American military presence was a temporary obligation until our allies could take on the task of looking after their own security. But our allies found it was much more pleasant to let us take care of their security, and they aren't eager to end this congenial arrangement.

To preserve it, though, requires a new rationale. The Soviet Union, which was the impetus for the alliance, is as dead as the Holy Roman Empire. Keeping NATO around just in case a new danger emerges makes about as much sense as putting a bear trap in your backyard in suburban Chicago, just in case a bear ever shows up.

Except that in this case, the safeguard may actually attract the bear: The surest way to provoke a hostile Russian response is to add Russia's neighbors to an alliance aimed at containing Russia. As Massachusetts Institute of Technology scholar Barry Posen asks, "Why poison relations with Russia when you need their cooperation on more important issues, like nuclear arms control and nuclear exports?"

Clinton urges the Russians not to "look at NATO through a Cold War prism," insisting that he wants NATO and Russia to work together as "partners for peace." But if Russia is supposed to be a NATO partner, it is hard to see the need for NATO, since the only external threat it might address comes from Russia.

The president, however, doesn't really think of this as a military coalition anymore. It's more like an honors society for democratic countries in Europe. Letting in new members is supposed to promote democracy, economic reform, peace and eternal bliss. And when the change is framed this way, it's hard to object.

The problem is that NATO is still first and foremost a military coalition, and its preservation and expansion create two dangers that the United States should be careful to avoid. The first is involvement in more Bosnia: Messy civil wars in Central and Eastern Europe where no American interest is at stake. Clinton applauds such ventures, which go way beyond anything NATO was expected to do during the Cold War.

The second danger is war against an outside power. When we admit a new member to NATO, as Clinton conceded, we agree to treat an attack on it as an attack on the United States. If the president were to tell Americans they should support a policy that someday might send their sons and daughters to die for Poland or Hungary or Romania, they'd think he was crazy.

Those who favor a bigger NATO seem to assume we'll never have to honor this expansive commitment because war will never come. But what if they're wrong? Hardly anyone in this country would go along if they thought someone might cash the check that Clinton, with Dole's hearty agreement, proposes to write.

The important question for Americans is what we get in exchange for remaining the workhorse and financier of a bigger NATO. The monetary expense to Americans will be significant, with the Congressional Budget Office estimating the total cost of expansion as high as $125 billion over 15 years. The risk is not trivial either: The chance of being yanked into a European war that has little to do with us or our security. It is hard to see any compensating benefit that is remotely comparable to these.

During the Cold War, the task of defending Europe was a necessary burden. Today, it's just a burden. It's time for the Europeans to grow up and handle it themselves.

Candidates with unrealistic goals

Charley Reese

I'm not writing about any of the third party candidates for president because I don't think any of them are serious.

People who pop up once every four years and suddenly announce they are running for president may want to sell books or tapes, collect membership dues or indulge their egos, but they are not serious candidates.

Anybody who is serious knows that you would have to start two years ahead of time to have a chance. There is nothing cynical, mysterious or conspiratorial about the American election process.

This is a big country. More than three million square miles. More than 260 million citizens. And it is not the duty of the communications industry to provide free advertising for every Ross, Ralph and Harry who sporadically decides to become a candidate.

Ergo, since campaign equals communication, any serious candidate has to raise money and recruit an organization. And you can't do that diddy-bopping around for a few weeks every four years.

So I have concluded that the third party candidates are as meaningless in their own ways as the two guys on the main tickets, whose race I will not write about.

Most of these guys are ideological candidates who think that all they have to do is announce their position on issues and that everyone who agrees on a particular issue will flock to their side. Horse apples.

There is more to leadership than taking a position on a menu of issues. There is no office of dictator in America. Any president who wants to do something besides go to dinners and make appointments had better know how to persuade members of the House and the Senate to go along with his ideas. He better have the ability to rally vast numbers of Americans to his cause.

That requires more than taking a position on an issue. It requires wisdom and experience and, frankly, a genuine affection for people. So far as I know, none of these third party presidential candidates has ever been elected god catcher and none of them would require more than a small room in which to hold a rally.

Let's not confuse politics with politicians. We may have a low opinion of particular politicians, but politics is an honorable art. If you study the lives of the founders of this republic - George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Patrick Henry and Tom Jefferson, for example - you will see that they were social people. They had wide networks of friends. They got involved very early in their lives in the affairs of their community. They were, in short, politicians.

What we do not like about contemporary politicians is not that they are politicians, but that they have flaws in their character - insincerity, dishonesty, lack of courage, greed for office and, often, money, too.

People who are serious about building an alternative to the Democrats and Republicans should really concentrate on the state level. A state with a new party that had a majority in the legislature and the governor's office would command national attention.

It can't be done making the round of talk shows once every four years or by running an ongoing, penny-ante fundraising operation out of Washington. Nor can it be done by merely stating ideological positions. If you propose a change, and are serious, then you have to convince Americans that the change is in their interest.

This country doesn't need people to make statements or merely take positions on issues or announce ideas they have no idea how to implement. They need experienced leaders rooted in their communities who care about more than their own egos or who just need a job. They need leaders who can translate principles into programs that will address contemporary problems.

So far, I don't see any serious alternatives to the Republicans or Democrats. I think a lot of people want an alternative, but a good one hasn't shown up yet.

'Rules' girls possess no personality

Sara Eckel

When I first heard about The Rules, the dating primer that has become a runaway best seller, I assumed it was full of the same old courtship clichés, trite but to a certain extent true.

After all, dating does have a degree of game playing to it. Self-loathing creatures that most of us humans are, classic tactics like playing hard-to-get frequently work. And it should come as no surprise that people who comb their hair and wear decent looking shoes tend to be more popular than those who eschew such superficialities.

So I have no problem with the idea of using a few strategic moves to get a person of the opposite sex interested - waiting a day or so to return a call, playing the field, wearing lipstick, etc.

But have you seen this thing? It makes Cosmopolitan look like a feminist manifesto. Here is just a sampler of the world according to The Rules:

- On Humor: "Don't tell sarcastic jokes. Don't be a loud knee-slapping hysterically funny girl... When you're with a man you like you must be quiet and mysterious, act ladylike, cross your legs and smile."
- On What to Talk About on a Date: "If you're smart you'll stay cool and just listen to what he says. Follow his lead."
- On Why You Shouldn't Ever Call Him: "Have you noticed that the conversation is almost always better when men call you?"
- On Why He Should Always Pay: "Why deprive him of the joy of feeling chivalrous?"
- On Independence: "(Some women) feel their diplomas and paychecks entitle them to do more in life than wait for the phone to ring. These women, we assure you, always end up heartbroken when their forwardness is rebuffed."

It's like one of those hilarious "How to Date a Boy" movies from the '50s. The ones they show late at night on Comedy Central. The ones that make you so happy to live at a time when women freely assert their independence and their sexuality.

But this is no joke. A lot of women are making authors Ellen Fein and Sherrie Schneider very rich - and not just by plunking down $5.99 for the paperback. They're also paying 45 bucks apiece to attend "Rules" seminars. Some are even paying $250 an hour to get personal counseling from the authors. In short, they're emptying their wallets for the opportunity to be told that they have to act like a nitwit to attract a man.

But what really baffles me is, who are these men? And why would anyone want to date - or, God forbid, marry - them? Who wants to have dinner with someone who doesn't want to hear your jokes and opinions? Who can respect someone who continues to call, even after you treated him like dirt?

And what self-respecting man would want to date a woman who is vapid, conniving and rude. But lest I was missing something, I quizzed my boyfriend Andrew on our courtship. I thought we were pretty happy, but perhaps things could have been even better. Would he like me more if I had never picked him up at his place (Rule 4)? What if I refused to pay for dates (Rule 4 again)? Or never returned his calls (Rule 5)?

He insists that he would not. However, Andrew is also crazy enough to date a feminist columnist. So he's probably not your typical Rules Guy.

But that's the problem with this book. It reduces both men and women to very, very stupid stereotypes. "Most men," we are informed, "are contented to sit around in a recliner on Sunday afternoon and drink beer and watch football." "Women," on the other hand, "tend to feel empty when their boyfriends don't include them in their plans or pay attention to them."

I'm sure that there are people in this world who are just boring enough to fit all of these stereotypes. And here, perhaps, is the justice in the whole thing.

For if there is a woman insipid enough to follow these rules, and if there is a man shallow enough to fall for them... Well, that sounds like a match made in heaven.

Congratulations Rules Girls and Boys. You deserve each other.

Riady made frequent visits to White House during trips to Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Indonesian businessman James Riady made frequent visits to the White House during half a dozen trips to Washington, discussing U.S.-Asian trade relations with the president and urging aides to put Asian Americans in government posts.

And one participant in a Clinton-Riady meeting was international business consultant Mark Middleton, a visitor to the White House 41 times during the past 13 months, according to Secret Service logs.

That's the picture drawn Monday by President Clinton's chief spokesman, Mike McCurry, responding to the growing controversy over foreign-linked political donations to the Democratic Party.

Clinton aides previously had disclosed only that Riady had three largely social chats with the president at the White House.

While Clinton aides are still delving into what precisely Riady discussed during his White House visits and with whom, the businessman from the billionaire Indonesian family "certainly had an interest in the status of most-favored nation treatment for China," McCurry acknowledged.

"He was a strong advocate of building closer relations between the United States and the emerging economies of Asia" and discussed those issues in "philosophical" terms, McCurry added. The Riadys have a power plant project in the planning stages in China.

Riady wanted to see a "reaching out trying to involve more"

Asian Americans "in the work of the administration," McCurry said of Riady's White House visits. One of Riady's subordinates in the family businesses, John Huang, went to work at the Commerce Department.

During an April 1993 White House visit, Riady tried to meet with Middleton's boss at the time, then-White House chief of staff Mack McLarty. McLarty referred Riady to Robert Rubin, head of the National Economic Council, about an unspecified policy matter. Rubin says he doesn't recall meeting with Riady.

Riady has known Clinton for well over a decade, dating from the early 1980s when Riady was a businessman in Little Rock at Stephens Inc., the largest U.S. investment banking firm outside Wall Street.

Middleton is linked to an allegation that he was offered a $15 million donation to Clinton's reelection effort in August 1995 by Liu Tai-ying, the chief financial manager of Taiwan's ruling Kuomintang Party. Liu denied the accusation and Middleton says he has never accepted or arranged any donations from any foreign source. The allegation was made by a Taiwanese lobbyist in Taipei.

Congressional committees are investigating the juncture of campaign contributions and foreign interests as they relate to the Clinton campaign and the DNC, including the White House visits of Riady, Huang, Middleton and others and the Clinton administration's relations with foreign countries, including Indonesia.

McCurry also revealed details about how Huang came to work at the Democratic National Committee, where he raised $4 million to $5 million in campaign money.

Referring to a previously known White House meeting in Sept. 13, 1995, attended by deputy White House counsel Bruce Lindsey, McCurry said Huang "suggested to Bruce" that Huang would "be better off helping the president by going to the DNC." Clinton, Riady, Huang's wife and Little Rock, Ark., lawyer Joe Giroir also were in the meeting.

Doris Duke's butler discovered dead at home in bed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bernard Lafferty, the pony-tailed butler whose control over tobacco heiress Doris Duke's billion-dollar estate led to accusations that he killed her, was found dead in his bed.

Friends staying at the Bel-Air Estates mansion he bought recently discovered his body early Monday.

A cause of death was not immediately clear, but there was no sign of foul play, said Scott Carrier, spokesman for the Los Angeles County coroner's office. Lafferty suffered from very high blood pressure, said his spokeswoman, Judy Miller.

Lafferty, originally from Ireland, was 51, Carrier said. But Miller said he may have been 52, adding that he has no surviving relatives.

Former Marine commits suicide in congressman's office

SAN MATEO, Calif. (AP) — A former Marine, apparently distraught over his treatment by the Veterans Administration, shot himself to death Monday in the offices of Rep. Tom Lantos.

Victor Francis, 40, shot himself once in the chest and died at a hospital.

Police spokesman Terry Reidy said the man entered the offices around midday and talked briefly with a woman working in the lobby.

"The gal said he had a handgun and said, 'Don't fire that.' Then he fired one round into his chest," Reidy said. "He was known to the office. He had some kind of disagreement with the staff there over disability."

But Lantos, who was not in the office at the time, said in a statement that "there had been no previous problems in his relationship with our office."

Michael Jackson announces his impending fatherhood

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sorry Billie Jean, the mother of Michael Jackson's child is Debbie Rowe.

Jackson on Monday announced he's going to be a pop, denying a tabloid report that the couple used artificial insemination and that Rowe, the singer's friend for 15 years, was being paid to have the baby.

"I am thrilled that I will soon be a father. ... This is my dream come true," Jackson, 38, said in a statement.

Rowe, 37, will have the child sometime next year, according to the statement, released by Jackson's spokeswoman Christine Holevas. No other details about Rowe were released.

Holevas denied a Sunday report in the London tabloid News of the World that the baby was a product of artificial insemination and that Rowe was being paid $528,000. She called the report "completely false and irresponsible."

Source: 'Less likely' bomb or missile downed jet

SMITHTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — While investigators began dredging the ocean floor for the last pieces of TWA Flight 800, a source said it appeared "less likely" that a bomb or missile downed the jumbo jet.

The source also discounted the missile theory, saying it was the least likely possibility of three scenarios investigators have recited repeatedly — bomb, missile or mechanical malfunction.

"We don't want to assign percentages to any of the three theories, but we are not seeing the type of evidence that we should

Mom Becomes Too Amicable Following Daughter's Divorce

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my mother and my ex-husband. When "Steve" and I divorced two years ago, there were a lot of hard feelings. My mother is aware of this because I was living with her at the time.

Abby, my mother constantly takes Steve's side over mine. She repeatedly "reminds" me how lucky I am that Steve pays child support and has regular visits with our daughter. I agree that I am luckier than most divorced mothers. But when I discuss any problem I might be having with Steve, Mom takes his side and says, "He pulls his own weight."

What I would like Steve to do is to take more responsibility for our daughter. She stays with him two days a week, but you can bet that on one of those days he will have something else to do — like work, a date or a ballgame. Then he asks Mom to baby-sit our daughter and Mom readily agrees. When I ask her to baby-sit for me, she immediately wants to know why. When Steve drops our daughter off at Mom's house, family members tell me that he usually spends up to an hour visiting with her. I think this is strange behavior.

What is this "thing" between my ex-husband and my mom? She didn't think he was so great when we were married. Why the sudden change? Is this my ex's way of staying involved in my life? When I ask Mom about this she gets defensive, or ignores me, or hangs up on me.

CONFUSED DAUGHTER,
METAIRIE, LA.

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR CONFUSED: Your mother is walking a tightrope between remaining cordial with your "ex," being loyal to you and being a good grandmother. She may be a little overboard defending Steve, but she may also be playing the "devil's advocate," pointing out his good features so that you will eventually have a civil relationship.

Although Steve is no longer your husband, that doesn't mean he can't be a friend of your mother's. Because you share custody of your child, Steve will always be in your life to some degree. Try to accept it and go on with your life.

DEAR ABBY: I am a male in my mid-30s and have been divorced for nearly two years. For the past year, I have been casually dating. During this period, a friend of mine passed away suddenly. His widow is everything I would ever want in a wife. Our families have participated in many activities together — baseball games, zoo, picnics, movies, etc. Our children get along great. I never intended to fall in love, but I have.

I know I am ready to move on with my life. But I don't know when my friend will be — if ever. How will I know when the time is right? She is truly a diamond, and I don't want to lose her — or our friendship. Please help me.

IN LOVE
DEAR IN LOVE: I wish all the questions I am asked were as easy to answer. Invite her to dinner without the children and tell her how you feel.

DEAR ABBY: I was pleased that you printed the letter about the infant who nearly strangled in her parents' bed. Her mother had taken her into the bed after an exhausting night of crying, and the baby's head slipped into a space between the mattress and the headboard, where she became stuck. That was an important cautionary tale, but I want to correct the impression that this sort of thing is a "freak accident."

In a recent one-year period, the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission received reports of almost 100 infants and young children who suffocated on adult beds. Abby, please tell your readers that parents should never put a young child, especially an infant, in their bed to sleep. It is a sweet gesture, but it could have tragic consequences.

Thank you so much for all the good work you do, and for helping keep children safe in their homes.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1998 expansion teams might be voting on baseball's proposed labor deal, which appears to be headed to defeat going into Wednesday's meeting.

Jerry Colangelo, managing general partner of the Arizona Diamondbacks, said he expected to vote on the five-year agreement when owners gather at Rosemont, Ill.

"I have very strong opinions about this whole situation," Colangelo said Monday. "I would as soon have an opportunity to voice them."

"The most important thing in my opinion is: What's in the best stakes of the game? — not individual teams or in agendas. In a sport that needs to get its act together, first and foremost let's bring some stability back to the game. Let's get on in rekindling the interest baseball once had."

Other officials said owners would decide at the meeting whether to give votes to the Diamondbacks and Tampa Bay Devil Rays.

"It has to be discussed; it has to be voted on," NL vice president Katy Feeney said.

FOOTBALL

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech fullback Sammy Morris, who scored the winning touchdown in the Red Raiders' victory over Texas A&M two weeks ago, won't play again this season because of academic problems.

Morris, a redshirt freshman from San Antonio Jay, had surprised Tech coaches with his rapid development this fall in a troublesome position for the Red Raiders.

"I am disappointed that Sammy no longer is on our football team," coach Spike Dykes said in a statement Monday. "I wish him well. I hope he gets a chance to join us next fall."

The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal had reported last week that Morris possibly had failed to properly attend the school's "XL" study-aid program. Lubbock attorney Floyd Holder had threatened to sue in Morris' behalf, but Morris indicated Monday he would accept his dismissal from the team.

DALLAS (AP) — This defending champion thing isn't going so well for La Marque.

The Cougars suffered their second regular-season defeat last weekend and on Monday were absent from The Associated Press high school football poll for the first time since the 1992 season ended.

La Marque's 42-poll streak — which had been the longest in any class — was ended by a 20-7 loss to Lamar Consolidated. The victory improved Consolidated to 8-0-1 and earned the Mustangs the No. 10 spot in the A poll.

Elsewhere, Humble's 17-14 victory over Aldine brought it into the poll at No. 9 and sent Aldine to 10th from second, and Kennedale became No. 10 in 3A in place of Hitchcock, which was bounced out by Sealy.

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers found a new way to lose another close game, this time in the final seconds against the Seattle Seahawks.

"I think you've seen it all now," quarterback Chris Chandler said. "I've never seen anything like that and I never thought I'd see us lose a game like that."

As the final seconds ticked away Sunday, Al Del Greco punted his foot into what could have been a game-winning 37-yard field goal, but Seattle's Michael McCrary blocked the kick.

McCrary then grabbed the ball and shoveled it to Robert Blackmon, who ran 61 yards for a touchdown and a 23-16 victory that left the Oilers shaking their heads at another one that got away.

"Thinking about what happened yesterday, you could use words like shocked, stunned, hurt and pain," coach Jeff Fisher said. "It proves that games in the NFL now are coming down to the last play."

That's especially true if the 1996 Oilers are involved. They have one-point losses to Kansas City and San Francisco, and seven of their nine losses last season were by seven points or fewer.

Big 12 South comes down to Texas, Texas Tech

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Most everyone figured the Texas Longhorns would be playing for the chance to be in the Big 12 title game in St. Louis on Dec. 7.

But few figured they would be 4-4 (3-2 Big 12) and needing to win their final three games to win the Big 12 South Division outright.

As it turns out, Texas Tech (5-3, 4-2) is in the driver's seat with Byron Hanspard, the nation's leading rusher, averaging 201 yards per game, and a defense that ranks in the top 30 nationally in every statistical category.

If the Longhorns lose to Tech Saturday in Lubbock, they'll be out of the Big 12 South hunt and in need of wins in their final two games at Kansas and home against Texas A&M simply to qualify for a bowl bid.

"This is our season," said Texas linebacker Tyson King, already shaking his head at the prospect of having to tackle the elusive Hanspard all Saturday evening. "We've got to prove our doubters wrong against Tech. We haven't done that well against big-name teams. We get another chance Saturday. We're down to our ninth life."

Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes, whose team romped over the Longhorns 33-9 in Lubbock in 1994, said the Raiders aren't taking Texas lightly.

"They were certainly an overwhelming choice in the preseason polls to win the South Division," Dykes said. "They've got a lot of firepower."

"I know we'll see the best they have to offer Saturday. I just hope to be able to hang in there with them," Dykes said in his usual attempt to poomouth his team's chances.

The Longhorns have been battling themselves as much as anyone. The defense hasn't stopped the run. The offense is prone to costly turnovers, and the team's heart was questioned after four star players met with an agent one day after a supposedly gut-wrenching loss at Colorado.

Throw in the fact that Texas has blown three fourth-quarter leads in losses to Notre Dame, Oklahoma and Colorado and you have a team that many thought would contend for a national championship still searching for an identity.

The Longhorns, losers of four of their last six, barely escaped with a 28-23 victory over Baylor at home Saturday after leading 21-0.

"This is our most important game of the year," said center Ryan Fiebiger. "It had been awhile since we had won a game and beating Baylor was an ugly win, but we won. We know we have to do a better job of putting teams away."

Texas coach John Mackovic is trying to stress positives.

"We know if we win this game, it gives us a tremendous leg up on Tech or anyone else," Mackovic said. "If we lose, we would definitely be out of it. This game is a must game if we want to win the southern division, and a key game for us to be a qualifier for a bowl game."

The game will likely hinge on the Longhorns' ability to stop Hanspard, which could mean trouble for Texas. The Longhorns, a four-point underdog this week, are giving up an average of 203.4 yards per game on the ground.

Tech has had two weeks to prepare for Texas after an off-week.

Texas defensive players tried to project how many yards Hanspard could gain and still have the Longhorns come out with a victory.

"I don't know," said Taje Allen, a senior cornerback from Lubbock. "Rashaan Salaam ran for 317 yards on us a few years ago and we were still in that game. Hopefully, Byron won't get that much."

Defensive end Gray Mosier said, "If he runs for 99 yards, he won't hurt our feelings. But when he starts going into the end zone, that's when it gets tough for us to accept."

Texas leads the overall series 34-11, but the two teams have split the last 10 meetings. UT holds a 12-7 advantage in games played in Lubbock. The Longhorns played a nearly flawless game last year in a 48-7 rout in Austin.

"I'm sure they're thinking about last year," Allen said. "They're definitely thinking pay-back. We have to come out hungrier than we've been all season and never let up our intensity."

Playoff picture clears up for Harvesters

PAMPA — The football playoff picture has gone from fuzzy to crystal-clear, at least for the Pampa Harvesters.

The Harvesters clinched a playoff spot after last week's 29-0 District 1-4A win over Amarillo Caprock and will meet Wolfforth Frenship in the first round of the playoffs in the Division I (large-school) playoffs.

Frenship clinched a playoff spot by edging Levelland, 16-13, in overtime last week. The Tigers are 4-0 in District 1-3A and 6-3 for the season.

Like Pampa, Frenship has one remaining regular-season game. The Harvesters, 4-1 in district and 6-2 overall, play Randall at 7:30 Friday night in Canyon's Buffalo Stadium. Randall is 1-4 in district and 2-7 overall.

Frenship goes against Lubbock Estacado, a 37-12 loser to Pampa in the season opener.

Dumas (4-1, 7-1) out of District 1-4A also clinched a playoff spot last weekend, but the Demons will go into the Division II (small-school playoffs). Borger and Canyon both have a shot at the third and last remaining playoff spot in District 1-4A.

Pampa did all its scoring damage in the first half against Caprock, which finished its season 0-6 in district and 2-7 for the season.

Junior quarterback Josh Blackmon threw two touchdown passes to Aaron Wiseman (10 yards) and Devin Lemons (15 yards). Marques Long scored twice for the Harvesters. Long recovered a blocked punt by teammate Jared White in the Caprock end zone and he also scored on a three-yard run.

Junior linebacker Vincente Martinez led the Pampa defense with 15 tackles, including four solo stops. Brandon Hill (195-pound sophomore) and Richard Proctor (150-pound junior) each recovered a fumble.

With Pampa leading 29-0 at half-time, Harvester reserves played much of the second half.

PAMPA — The Pampa girls' cross country team competes in the Class 4A state meet at 10 a.m. Saturday at Old Settler's Park in Round Rock.

The state cross country meet is normally held at Southwestern University in Georgetown, but the site had to be changed due to a schedule conflict.

"I haven't seen this new place, so I really don't know what it's like," said Pampa coach Mark Elms. "It's going to be a challenge for us."

Pampa finished second to Canyon in both district and regional meets this year. At last weekend's regionals in Lubbock, all seven of the Lady Harvesters finished in the top 86 of the 112 runners who competed at Mae Simmons Park. Jenny Fatherees fourth-place was the best finish among the PHS girls.

PAMPA-AREA SPORTS

"We'll get on the course Friday and see what it's like," Elms said. "We'll try and establish what kind of strategy we're going to need."

MCLEAN — Shawn Sanderson and Chad Richards of McLean have qualified for the Class 1A state cross country championships.

Competing last weekend in the boys' regional meet at Lubbock, Sanderson and Richards finished third and fifth, respectively, to advance to the state meet this weekend in Round Rock. Sanderson was timed at 17:16.3 and Richards 17:41.6 at Mae Simmons Park.

Ricky Serrato of Munday placed first with a time of 16:46.3.

The top three teams and top 10 individuals advance to state.

BRISCOE — Fort Elliott meets Harrold at 7 Thursday night in Paducah in a Class 1A bi-district volleyball match.

The Lady Cougars go into the playoffs with a 12-10 record.

"Serving is Harrold's strong-point. We'll have to be able to handle their serves. If we can take of that, the rest of our game should come along," said Fort Elliott coach Dave Johnson.

PAMPA — Dick Henley of Pampa won a ladies 10-karat gold diamond tennis bracelet in the Pampa High School tennis team's annual fund-raiser raffle.

The drawing was held this past Friday night at half-time of the Pampa-Caprock football game.

The bracelet, from Rheams Diamond Shop in Pampa, is valued at $400.

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech freshman guard Rayford Young of Pampa turned in a strong performance in the first controlled scrimmage Monday for the Red Raiders' basketball team.

Young hit 5 of 9 field goal attempts and was a perfect 9 of 9 from the foul line for a total of 20 points for the Red Team, which lost to the White Team, 109-99. Young and sophomore Stan Bonewitz are the leading contenders for the point guard position. Bonewitz had a team-high 22 points for the Red.

Junior guard Cory Carr was high scorer for the White Team with 41 points.

Tech tips off the exhibition season at 7 p.m. Nov. 14 at home against All-Army.

Young helped lead the Pampa Harvesters to the Class 4A state championship last season. He was voted Player of the Year in Class 4A by the Texas Sports Writers Association.

Southwest Texas fires coaching staff

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Southwest Texas head football coach Jim Bob Helduser and his staff were fired Monday, effective after the Bobcats' final three games, athletic director Mike Aiden said.

Helduser's team is 3-5 this season, including a 49-0 loss to Northwestern State last week. It was the Bobcats' first shutout in nine years.

Southwest Texas has three games left and finishes its season Nov. 23 at Sam Houston State.

Helduser, 39, is 18-33-2 in five seasons as head coach at Southwest Texas. He worked as an assistant coach at the school for five years before taking over.

The Bobcats were 5-5-1 in Helduser's first year at the helm but never finished with a winning record.

Yanks' Jeter is AL Rookie of the Year

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — He helped his team win the World Series. He sat next to supermodel Tyra Banks at a New York Knicks game. He unanimously won the AL Rookie of the Year award.

Even Derek Jeter, who rarely shows any emotion on the field, was forced to admit that he's had it pretty good lately.

"I'm not one to comment on a season until it's over," the New York Yankees shortstop said Monday after the rookie honor was announced. "But I guess it's safe to say it's been a great year."

From opening day, when he hit a home run and made an over-the-shoulder catch, to his key RBI single off Greg Maddux in the clinching Game 6 win over Atlanta, it was a special season for the 22-year-old.

Jeter hit .314 with 10 home runs, 78 RBIs and 104 runs scored, and settled a position that had long been in flux for the Yankees.

On a team with likely Cy Young winner Andy Pettitte, star relievers John Wetteland and Mariano Rivera and AL championship series MVP Bernie Williams, Jeter stood out for manager Joe Torre.

"I don't think we had one guy, player-wise, who was more valuable than him," Torre said.

Jeter was the eighth Yankees player to win the AL award — including shortstops Tony Kubek and Tom Tresh — and first since Dave Righetti in 1981. He received all 28 first-place votes and 140 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Chicago White Sox pitcher James Baldwin, who went 11-6, got 19 second-place votes and 64 points. Detroit first baseman Tony Clark, who hit 27 home runs, was third with six second-place votes and 30 points.

Jeter was the fifth unanimous choice for the AL award and the first since California outfielder Tim Salmon in 1993.

"Besides being a successful rookie, there was another status that seemed to bring the 6-foot-3 Jeter even more celebrity: Being single."

Jeter, who often talked to fans while in the on-deck circle, turned into the darling of many of the Yankees' female rooters. In fact, after John F. Kennedy Jr. got married, some said Jeter was the most eligible bachelor in New York.

"Oh, I don't know who said that," he said. "That may be because I am one of the few single players."

Not if 8-year-old Christina Skleros has her way. The New Jersey youngster became a Yankees' good-luck charm because each time she sang the national anthem, they won. After performing at Game 6 of the Series, she said she wanted to fix up her favorite player, Jeter, with her homeroom teacher.

Voting was completed at the end of the regular season. That was before Jeter hit that startling home run caught by a 12-year-old boy in the AL playoffs and before his RBI single and steal highlighted the win against Maddux.

In all, Jeter hit .361 and scored 12 runs in New York's 15 postseason games.

"Winning a world championship is the best, even more than winning this award," Jeter said.

Jeter, the sixth player picked in the 1992 draft, briefly appeared for the Yankees in 1995 and earned the starting job this spring.

Jeter credited Torre with giving him boosts of confidence.

"I had rough periods all season. In spring training, I thought they were going to send me out when the season started," he said.

"He told me I was the shortstop and he was behind me every time I had a problem or didn't play well," he said.

Jeter became the Yankees' sixth different opening-day shortstop in six years, following Tony Fernandez, Mike Gallego, Spike Owen, Randy Velarde and Alvaro Espinoza.

He played 157 games this season, the most by a Yankees shortstop since Bucky Dent in 1977. He also became the first No. 1 pick of the Yankees to make an impact with the team since Thurman Munson, chosen in the 1968 draft.

Jeter's 78 RBIs were the most by a Yankees shortstop since Frank Crosetti had 78 in 1936. He became the first full-time shortstop for the Yankees to bat over .300 since Gil McDougald hit .311 in 1956.

Jeter made 22 errors and stole 14 bases. He also struck out 102 times while batting in several spots, including leadoff and ninth.

Jeter, whose salary was $120,000 this year, had a $10,000 bonus clause in his contract for winning the award. He'll likely get about $220,000 as his share for winning the World Series.

The NL Rookie of the Year will be announced Wednesday. Los Angeles outfielder Todd Hollandsworth and Pittsburgh catcher Jason Kendall are considered the leading candidates.

Barkley, Olajuwon pace Rockets' victory

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Houston Rockets held Utah to its lowest point total in franchise history, beating the Jazz 75-72 Monday night on Charles Barkley's go-ahead dunk with 15.8 seconds left.

The Jazz broke their record of 74 points, set in 1974 — when the team was based in New Orleans — in a game at New York.

Karl Malone led Utah with 16 points, but was held without a field goal in the fourth quarter.

Barkley, who had 33 rebounds Saturday in Phoenix, had 20 rebounds and nine points in his second game of the season.

Hakeem Olajuwon, who scored 23 for Houston, found Barkley on a backdoor cut for a dunk that gave the Rockets a 73-72 lead.

On Utah's ensuing possession, Greg Foster was tied up underneath by Olajuwon. On the jump ball, Foster tipped to Houston's Mario Elie, who was fouled.

guys like myself would like all of you to get to know Rick like we know Rick, it's not paramount to me to get him to talk," Neuhisel insisted that labeling Carruth a non-first player would be wrong. "He's not only playing well when the ball is coming to him, he's playing well when the ball is going elsewhere," the coach said. "It's evident he is very much a team player."

NEBRASKA (7-1; 8-0)
Next game: vs. Missouri, Saturday
Cornhuskers coach Tom Osborne will see a rare player who shined his team's recruiting on Saturday when quarterback Corey Jones trots onto the field for Missouri. "We expressed some interest at one point and at one point it seemed like mutual interest," Osborne said, adding that quarterback coach Turner Call knew Jones' father. "As time went on, it became a little where he was going to stay in Missouri (Jones is a native of Columbia, where Missouri is located). But we definitely wanted him and very much would've liked to have had him." Osborne said he was interested in Jones because he would've been the perfect replacement to Tommie Frazier, the quarterback who led Nebraska to the last two national titles. "We thought he was someone who could run our offense well," Osborne said.

KANSAS STATE (7-1; 4-1)
Next game: at Kansas, Saturday
Kansas State is currently in a three-way tie for first in the Big 12 North, along with Nebraska and Colorado. "I think it's a rivalry that's ended that way? What if the season ended that way? 'That's so far ahead, I really haven't (checked the tiebreaking procedure),' Wildcats coach Bill Snyder said. "I've read through those, but I haven't really paid much attention to them and I probably won't until I'm in position to do it." Snyder outlined several circumstances, and said he believed each would remain tied. "The bottom line is, I think it will come down to who is ranked the highest," he said.

KANSAS (4-4; 2-3)
Next game: vs. Kansas State, Saturday
The Jayhawks are still in contention for the postseason, but coach Glen Mason doesn't consider that the carrot he's chasing. "I've got to be honest: the only carrot we're chasing is the NFL. I see they police it a little where we said we had played well," Mason said. "We're very fortunate we won in Ames, but I don't feel like we're playing up to our potential. 'Maybe I'm wrong and I overestimated the capabilities of this team. ... But who wouldn't want to win in November and still have a chance to win the division or the (league) championship?'"

MISSOURI (3-5; 1-4)
Next game: at Nebraska, Saturday
Cyclones coach Larry Smith said he doesn't believe the rising scores in college games are because offenses are generally more talented than defense. "I really believe the college game, we're averaging maybe 20 to 25 plays more than what the pros are," Smith said. "More plays means more scoring. ... Smith listed several factors, including clock management and the fact that colleges use a 25-second clock. "Also, the use of hands by the offensive linemen has really added to it," he said. "Watching the NFL, I see they police it a little better. In college football, I don't think we police it. Nobody is calling it consistently."

IOWA STATE (2-6; 1-4)
Next game: at Colorado, Saturday
Cyclones coach Dan McCarney didn't plan on using only Todd Doxzon this season, it just worked out that way over the first seven games. Having kept Todd Bandhauer on the bench all year made McCarney consider redshirting the sophomore who threw for 501 yards in six games as a freshman. But an injury to Doxzon on Saturday forced McCarney to bring in Bandhauer. "All of a sudden we were in the eighth game and the other quarterback had never got into a game," McCarney said. "At that stage, we were going to hold him out. It just didn't work out that way." McCarney said he didn't regret having kept Bandhauer on the bench up to that point. "Really, in all the games we went through, as tight and close as they have been, there was no question Todd Doxzon gave us the best chance to win," McCarney said. "Fortunately for him, he stayed healthy all year." McCarney said Doxzon will be back this weekend.

DALLAS (AP) — Selected comments from Big 12 South coaches during their weekly conference call Monday: SOUTH TEXAS TECH (5-3; 4-2)
Next game: vs. Texas, Saturday
Beating Texas has always meant a lot to Texas Tech. This year, it would be extra special because it would pretty much guarantee the Red Raiders a bowl berth and leave them a victory over Oklahoma away from winning the Big 12 South. "We're in a situation where the loser goes home and the winner is in the race," Tech coach Spike Dykes said. "That's all you can ask for at this stage of the game." Dykes did his best to hype the Longhorns as if they were still a Top 10 team, and not one that has lost four of its last six. "They've got great athletes," said Dykes, who did a similar psych-job before playing Texas A&M. "They were the overwhelming choice to win the South division. ... They've had a bad play or two or else they would still be there today."

TEXAS (4-4; 3-2)
Next game: at Texas Tech, Saturday

COLORADO (7-1; 5-0)
Next game: vs. Iowa State, Saturday
Colorado coach Rick Neuheisel has plenty of nice things to say about star receiver Ray Carruth, the Big 12's offensive player of the week. Carruth, though, doesn't have much to say — at least, not to the media. Neuheisel explained why Carruth has sworn off talking to reporters. "Ray, for whatever reason, feels he was being painted as a non-team player. Therefore, he's decided he doesn't want to talk about himself because he doesn't want that image," Neuheisel said. "As much as

Richard Walton may have gotten plenty of action against Baylor, but Texas coach John Mackovic said James Brown will remain his starting quarterback heading into this weekend. "I intend for James to be our quarterback," Mackovic said. "I don't intend to rotate them. If Richard plays, it'll be something I do by feel and not by a set schedule." Mackovic said he's wary of the Red Raiders because "they've had a week off, which gave them a chance to watch us and to rest." A bigger concern is Byron Hanspard. "He's the No. 1 rusher in the country and teams have run the ball at us," Mackovic said. "We know we'll have a lot of work to do."

TEXAS A&M (4-5; 2-3)
Next game: at Baylor, Saturday
Aggies coach R.C. Slocum said he doesn't want his decision to use redshirt freshman Randy McCown in relief of Brannon Stewart to be the beginning of a quarterback controversy. "Going into the game, I had planned on playing at least one of the other quarterbacks, or maybe two," Slocum said. "At the end of this season, we want to evaluate personnel. We want to know what Randy's capabilities are." Slocum said he told Stewart before McCown, and that he expects it to ease the burden on his much ballyhooed transfer from Tennessee. "I think it could end up being a positive thing for him," Slocum said. "I have been concerned all year about him feeling too much pressure about having to be the savior." Slocum added that the two are not rivals and that he doesn't expect the flip-flopping to cause "any problems between the two or within the team."

OKLAHOMA (2-6; 2-3)
Next game: at Oklahoma State, Saturday
Any time two big state schools meet, high school football players across the state are glued to their television sets. One of those teams may be their's one day. "I don't think it could end up being a positive thing for him," Slocum said. "I have been concerned all year about him feeling too much pressure about having to be the savior." Slocum added that the two are not rivals and that he doesn't expect the flip-flopping to cause "any problems between the two or within the team."

OKLAHOMA STATE (4-5; 1-5)
Next game: vs. Oklahoma, Saturday
Not long after OSU beat Oklahoma 12-0 last year, Cowboys coach Bob Simmons began realizing the importance of his team's first victory over its arch-rival since 1976. "I knew people felt adamant about the rivalry with OU and talked about close games they hadn't won," Simmons said. Then, after we won, it was a great relief to them. I was appreciative of what it meant to them." Simmons said he viewed last year's game in a different light. "I was really trying to build some momentum in the program and teach kids how to win," he said. "We were playing good football and it just so happened that that weekend we put it all together and played a really good game."

United Way introduces its 1996 Loaned Executives

As part of its 1996 fund-raising campaign, Pampa United Way is once again implementing the Loaned Executives Program as a highly effective way to enlist local businesses and their employees in support of United Way. This year's program includes 11 executives, each of whom The Pampa News will introduce during the course of the campaign.

Jan Oblak

Jan Oblak served the Pampa United Way as a loaned executive for IRI International, her first year in the post.

In addition to her United Way service, she serves on the board of directors for Clean Pampa Inc.

"I was surprised to realize, as a first-time United Way loaned executive, that a town the size of Pampa supports 17 individual agencies with its United Way contributions," Oblak said.

"I wasn't surprised, however, by the wonderful generosity of the people who gave. It has been a pleasure working with the United Way campaign this year."

She is married to James Oblak.

Though the Pampa United Way drive is officially over, at least with regular check-in meetings for the volunteer campaign workers, the drive is continuing with collecting pledge cards that are still out until the goal is reached.

If you have not been contacted for the opportunity to make a donation, contact the Pampa United Way office at 669-1001 for information, or mail the donation to Pampa United Way, P.O. Box 2076, Pampa, TX 79066.

Turner to TV execs: Raise standards

NEW YORK (AP) — Ted Turner says TV executives should have a simple test in deciding whether to air a questionable program: Would you let your children watch it?

"If it doesn't meet that test, then don't do it," Time Warner's wealthy new vice chairman told a roomful of his industry's top guns on Monday.

Turner talked TV standards — and continued his feud with rival Rupert Murdoch — in a lecture at the seat of broadcast industry power at the Museum of Television & Radio in midtown Manhattan.

Industry officials packed the room to hear Turner, whose empire included the Cable News Network, Turner Network Television and the Atlanta Braves before he sold it to Time Warner. The media mogul even chided Dan Rather for slipping in late.

Turner said he picked Time Warner instead of other interested rivals, like Murdoch's News Corp. or General Electric, because he wanted to make sure CNN landed in a company with strong credentials in journalism.

"I wouldn't have wanted Rupert Murdoch, for all his business acumen," he said. "He is exactly the kind of person I'm talking about who puts profits and power absolutely first, second and third. I would have hated to see CNN dragged through the same kind of stuff that the New York Post is."

The two have been fighting in court over Time Warner's refusal to allow Murdoch's Fox News Channel on its cable systems.

A Murdoch spokesman, Howard Rubenstein, responded by saying the News Corp. head is proud of the Post, and declined further comment about Turner.
