Pampa, Texas

50¢ DAILY/SUNDAY $1

Low tonight in mid 30s, high tomorrow in mid 60s. See Page 2 for weather details.

PAMPA — County Clerk Wanda Carter on Tuesday called for a Texas Ranger investigation into an alleged voter irregularity in Precinct 12.

Texas Ranger Gary Henderson of Pampa took statements and collected evidence Tuesday evening into an incident which occurred between 3 and 3:30 p.m. that afternoon at Lamar Elementary School gym where Precinct 12 voters cast ballots, said Carter today.

Carter declined to discuss specifics of the incident except to say the problem was caused by a voter and observed by election judges.

"Of course it concerned the ballots," Carter said.

The incident will not change the outcome of any local race, she said.

"Voter fraud is a felony offense," Carter said.

A Department of Public Safety spokeswoman said Henderson is out of the office all day today.

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Ousted Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto today accused the president who removed her of kidnapping her husband and acting out of a desire for power.

"Is it the destiny of the people of Pakistan that their future always be in the hands of self-styled messiahs?" Ms. Bhutto asked reporters crowded into a room at her official residence. "I believe the future of Pakistan has been endangered by this arrogant decision."

Ms. Bhutto, her Cabinet and the National Assembly were fired Tuesday after President Farooq Leghari accused her of sanctioning police hit squads, allowing corruption to run rampant and undermining the judicial system.

BEIJING (AP) — China today released ailing dissident Chen Ziming, just weeks before the expected arrival of U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher on a visit to improve ties.

Chen, jailed as a "black hand" behind pro-democracy protests on Tiananmen Square in 1989, was freed on medical parole and arrived home tonight, saying he was tired, his younger brother Chen Ziping said.

"Chen Ziming's situation has improved," the brother said. "We are very happy."

Last week, a Chinese court convicted Wang Dan, one of China's last active democracy activists, on subversion charges and sentenced him to 11 years in prison. The United States criticized the verdict. Chen, who has cancer, was sentenced to 13 years imprisonment.

Clinton wins second term as president

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

President Clinton is savoring another political comeback, a second-term 31-state sweep, but he confronts a Republican Congress strong enough to check his dreams and investigate his dealings. House Speaker Newt Gingrich, also restored to power, promised today "to reach out and find a common ground" with Clinton.

In a vote for the status quo — and the legislative gridlock it sometimes produces — the country rebuffed Bob Dole and Ross Perot's attacks on Clinton's character and instead endorsed both Clinton's handling of the economy and the Republican Congress' ability to temper his proposals.

Clinton's second-term transition began with a bang today with word that Defense Secretary William Perry and Secretary of State Warren Christopher have decided to resign. White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta has acknowledged that he will leave the administration, too and a substantial number of other resignations is expected — not unusual in a second term.

The result of the election was a new round of divided government. The people marginally strengthened the GOP's hand in the Senate but weakened it in the House.

Republicans will hold all the chairmanships, assuring Clinton of a new round of investigations of him, his wife and his administration on a range of ethics issues, the latest being foreign donations to the Democratic Party.

"Obviously there's going to have to be some questions asked," Republican Senate Leader Trent Lott told The Associated Press.

And Gingrich, one of the nation's most divisive politicians, retains his speakership of the House.

"I think you'll see us try to reach out and find a common ground with President Clinton," Gingrich said in an interview on CBS.

He cited legislation passed by the Republican Congress this year and signed by Clinton and said, "We don't have to live in a world of confrontation. I think we can find common ground to work on things."

Senate Democratic Leader Tom Daschle gave the election returns a different spin. He said Senate Republicans retained "a thin majority only by rejecting their extreme agenda and working with Democrats." If that continues, he said, Democrats would join them. "If, however, they revert to their old revolutionary ways, we will fight them."

Rep. Bill Paxon of New York, chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, noted that the last time the GOP twice consecutively won control of the House was 1930.

"We cemented our gains in the House and set the foundation for a long-term House majority," he said.

Divided government over the past two years has led sometimes to stalemate, sometimes to compromise.

Panetta said that the people showed they did not want a resumption of partisan warfare. "If we bog down in the kind of gridlock and partisanship and attacks that we saw in the last two years, I think the American people will reject that," he said.

Lott, in another interview, said Congress could work with Clinton "if he's really sincere about the positions he took in the campaign." He called them "Republican positions."

Everything about Tuesday's election spoke of a public uninspired by its choices.

"To be honest," said one Clinton voter, Mike Morris of Fishers, Ind., "he was the best of the three, but I'm not happy with any of them. It was a tough decision."

The turnout at the polls was down sharply. A projection by Voter News Service suggested that only 49 percent of the voting age population cast ballots. That would be the lowest in 72 years.

When the results became known, Clinton appealed for bipartisanship, Dole acknowledging the sting of defeat and Perot hinted he would not quietly fade away.

Said Clinton to cheering supporters: "The challenges we face, they're not Democratic or Republican challenges. They're American challenges."

Dole, in a voice that reflected his emotions, said, "It's a lot more fun winning. It hurts to lose an election."

Mann keeps district attorney post

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Incumbent District Attorney John Mann narrowly held on to his position Tuesday, defeating Republican challenger Rick Roach by just 2.8 percent of the vote.

A big win in Wheeler County secured Mann's victory, making up for a loss in Gray County by a slim margin (see chart, Page 3). Mann also carried Hemphill County and Roberts County, his opponent's home territory.

Roach notched a victory in Lipscomb County in addition to his win in Gray. The final vote totals showed Mann with a 502-vote advantage — 7,271 to 6,769 over Roach.

"We're going to continue to run this office just as though we won 100 percent of the vote," Mann said following his victory.

"As far as I'm concerned, (assistant district attorney) Tracey

Jennings and I work for 100 percent of the people in this district. Crime does not know political parties, criminals don't decide if they're a Republican or a Democrat or if they're going after a Republican or a Democrat.

ELECTION '96 RESULTS

"We work for everybody, and I want to invite my opponent, who's the county attorney in Roberts County, to get on board, and let's all work together to get the bad guys where they belong," Mann continued.

Roach refused to give a comment to the newspaper, but in a concession speech around 10:30 p.m. to local Republicans, he called the contest a "very hard race."

"We ran a clean, honest race ... (but) I feel like the Lord has something for me to do other than be district attorney in Gray County," Roach said.

The campaign for district attorney has been called the fiercest of this election year, with both candidates hurling various accusations at one another throughout its run.

Mann has referred often to his opponent's 1988 indictment on oilfield theft in Breckenridge, while Roach accused Mann of allowing too many criminal defendants free on probation. The two also accused one another of running dishonest campaigns.

"I feel like ... we didn't do a good enough job of getting our message out," Roach told KGRO/KOMX late Tuesday. "There were negative aspects of my opponent's campaign that were hard to overcome."

"I would not do anything differently than I did," Mann said.

Gray County incumbents win races

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Incumbents ruled the day in contested Gray County races Tuesday, with all four of those seeking re-election locally coming out victorious over their opponents.

A total of 9,062 votes were cast in the election, 60.7 percent of the county's registered voters. The vote count is still considered unofficial until the votes can be canvassed.

County Tax Assessor/Collector Sammie Morris outpolled challenger Charles Buzzard by over a 2-to-1 margin.

"I really do appreciate all the support that all the citizens of Gray County have given me," Morris said at the Republican's watch party Tuesday evening.

Buzzard did not return a call for comment this morning.

Morris also gave credit to her co-workers in the tax office for her victory.

"I think what's really helped is the whole staff of this office. No one person can do this alone. I'm very proud of the whole office," she said.

Precinct 1 Commissioner Joe

Wheelely handily defeated Independent opponent Doug Locke to win his third term.

"I'm proud for me and my family, but also proud of the voters in Gray County. I'm glad that they entrusted this position to me for another four years," Wheelely said.

"I'm proud to have run and participated in the democratic process," Locke said this morning.

Locke was upbeat in his defeat. "I do not rule out future attacks on windmills," he said, referring to the uphill challenge of literary figure Don Quixote.

McLean church holds annual Election Day fund-raiser luncheon

By SHERRY CROMARTIE
Staff Writer

McLean celebrates an annual event every first Tuesday in November, regardless of whether it is election day. It's a day when everyone turns out for a pre-Thanksgiving turkey lunch with dressing and all the trimmings, and too many desserts to choose from.

Members of the United Methodist Women of McLean First United Methodist Church, and volunteers from the congregation and the community, help prepare food "to feed the voters." It is a major day of feasting for the community and other neighboring towns in the county, said Joyce Haynes, who was one of the front door greeters, collecting the donations from each luncheon guest.

"This is our biggest money-making activity of the entire year for our church," said Katy Graham.

"It is the biggest event in town," Inez Trostle said.

Graham and Trostle were working in the kitchen, dishing up food, and serving food. Food was everywhere. Preparation of the meal started Monday and finished up early Tuesday. The meal service started at 11 a.m. and continued through 1 p.m.

According to Haynes, "The ladies cooked eight large whole turkeys, and three large turkey breasts, 100 pounds of Irish potatoes for the buttered mashed-potato dishes, many, many pans of dressing cornbread, four gallons of cranberries, 11 gallons of bacon-seasoned green beans, and a few dozen eggs. And all the ladies of the church prepared desserts, including at least 40 different kinds of pies."

"A few of our Methodist men provided muscle power lifting, carrying and carving the turkeys, and just being available for little, needed gofer chores," said Graham, giving some of the credit to her husband, Bill, and also Tom Crawford, Johnny Haynes and Mayor Sam Haynes, and others.

The church congregation works together in union to accomplish this special event, which is appreciated by the local people a great deal, one of the guests said.

The fund-raiser lunch was an idea set into motion about 16 years ago, on election day, to spur some interest to get people out to vote, explained Ruth Magee, president of the women's church organization. It was a big success then, and has continued to be successful every year since.

"The people expect it to happen, and I guess we will continue making it happen," she said.

Funds earned from donations are used for several church projects, as well as special charity responsibilities and adopted programs of the Methodist Women, said Magee. One of their year-long projects taken on by the organizations is providing services and material items for cancer patients in the area.

Tuesday's turkey feast satisfied approximately 250 individuals who filled the fellowship hall of the church, including people from Pampa, Lefors, Mobeetie, Wheeler, Amarillo, Alanreed and McLean. In addition to the in-house guests, Haynes said more than 100 take-out meals were boxed up.

Manning the registration table at the annual Election Day fund-raiser luncheon for McLean First United Methodist Church are Ruth Magee, president of the District Methodist Women organization, Joyce Haynes and John Haynes.

Cheerleaders suspended after plot to sicken member

BAINBRIDGE IS AND, Wash. (AP) - Two high school cheerleaders who felt another squad member didn't measure up to their standards are accused of spiking the girl's drink to make her too sick to cheer.
 The Bainbridge High School girls slipped vomit-inducing ipecac syrup into the cheerleader's drink at a poster-painting party prior to the football team's home opener Sept. 20, said Ann Noble, mother of the head cheerleader.
 "When I arrived at the game, I felt drugged and dizzy," the girl said in a statement to police.

 She went on to cheer through the game and attended a cheerleaders' car wash the next day.
 The two cheerleaders accused of the act were suspended from the squad.

Mann

"Some people say that it was a negative race, some people thought that my opponent used some reverse psychology with allegations of smear tactics ... You know, in every political campaign ... there's a winner and there's a loser. Everyone has to run the race the way they think it needs to be done, and that's what I did and that's what obviously my opponent did."
 Roach also referred to a district-wide split in the Republican Party during his radio comments.
 "The Republican voters didn't vote for their candidate," he said, attributing his loss by over 500 votes in Wheeler County in part to Republican County Attorney Stephen Emmert's public support of Mann.
 "Once again Wheeler County has pretty well controlled the outcome of ... a 31st District race," Roach told the radio station.

The local Republican vote was also split among the candidates, thanks in part to the formation of Republicans for the Right Mann by local GOP figures John Tripplehorn and Bill Arrington.
 "This is pretty much of a Republican area, but the Republican voters just didn't vote for their candidate. Had they voted for their candidate in similar fashion to Dole and Gramm, then I think we would have been successful," Roach said.
 "I'm very disturbed by it, very disappointed by it. I think I speak for most of the Republicans in this community that feel the same way," said Gray County Republican Party Chairman Tom Mechler.
 "My responsibility to the party was to do exactly what we did. We followed the course of action that we were directed by the leadership of the party ... My Democratic counterpart didn't have to do anything. He basically could sit back and let Republicans tear each other up and run the campaign. And that's what they did - they ... basically ran the Democratic candidate's campaign for him."

 "Speaking for Bill Arrington and myself, we want to thank all the Republicans who joined us in voting for John Mann," said John Tripplehorn, a co-founder of Republicans for the Right Mann. "There were a lot of Republicans who appreciated his (Mann's) hard work and joined us in wanting the best crime prosecution we could have in the district."
 In his concession speech before final Gray County results were known, Roach said he hoped his candidacy would make Mann "mindful" of how the office is run in the future.
 Mann was appointed to his office in 1992 by then-Gov. Ann Richards and was elected to the post that same year. Roach currently serves as Roberts County Attorney.
 The 31st Judicial District Attorney serves five counties, also including the 223rd Judicial District.

Races

"I'll continue to try to make the best decisions I'm capable of and continue to listen to people and make objective decisions," Wheeley added.
 Also victorious Tuesday was Precinct 1 and 3 Constable James Lewis, who won a second term over write-in candidate Paul Sublett.
 "I appreciate the people's vote. They've been good to me for another four years, they've answered my call for them to vote for me," Lewis said.
 "I'm glad it's over and that the race is as clean as it was," Sublett said.

 Incumbent District Attorney John Mann lost Gray County by a slim margin but emerged victorious across the judicial district (see related story).
 Also successful in a re-election bid was 13th District Rep. Mac Thornberry, who garnered 82 percent of the Gray County vote. Thornberry defeated Democratic challenger Samuel Brown Silverman across the district as well; with 99 percent of precincts reporting, Thornberry took 67 percent of the vote.
 A number of other Gray County incumbents and candidates faced no opponent. State Rep. Warren Chisum drew 7,133 votes, County Attorney Todd Alvey 6,583 votes, County Precinct 3 Commissioner Gerald Wright 1,252 votes and Precinct 2 Constable Chris Lockridge 1,331 votes.

 Don Copeland scored 7,328 votes in the general election. Copeland, a retired DPS trooper, defeated incumbent Sheriff Randy Stubblefield in the March Republican primary.
 Precinct 4 Constable Frank Sparling took 2,109 votes in Tuesday's election, after defeating three opponents in the Republican primary.

Area county office races easily settled by voters

 Only one race - that for sheriff in Roberts County - was contested.
 In the Roberts County sheriff's race, incumbent Sheriff Billy Britton turned back a challenge from write-in candidate Curtis Dalton, winning 67 percent of the votes.

ELECTION '96 RETURNS

Gramm wins third term; Texas backs Dole

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican Gov. George W. Bush, a former baseball executive, sees it this way: His team batted 1.000.

Republican candidates swept 10 of 10 statewide races on Tuesday's ballot.

Texans handed Republican Sen. Phil Gramm a third term and bucked the national trend by backing Bob Dole for president.

They gave Republicans four seats on the Texas Supreme Court, continuing a 7-2 majority; gave them three seats on the Court of Criminal Appeals for their first majority on that bench this century; and re-elected Republican Railroad Commissioner Carole Keeton Rylander.

Not a flood, perhaps, but definitely a rising tide.

"This is an important milestone for Republicans of this great state," said Bush, former managing general partner of the Texas Rangers. "We won every single statewide race."

Democrats will lose at least one of their 18 U.S. House seats after three runoff elections next month.

The Democrats did hold control of the Texas House, but by a narrower majority.

The battle for the Texas Senate continues. Early today, each party held 14 Senate seats with one race still undecided. Two more seats remain up for grabs — in a West Texas runoff and an East Texas special election that will be called to replace Sen. Jim Turner, D-Crockett, who is going to Congress.

Bush thanked Texans for backing Dole, despite President Clinton's re-election, and noted that Gramm received another huge victory margin.

"We're a solid Republican state. In the face of what appears to be a national tide the other way, Texas stood strong for conservative principles," Bush said.

Democratic officials said they remain optimistic.

State party Chairman Bill White said the GOP's much-discussed effort to take over the state House was repulsed. And, he vowed, "We shall maintain a majority of our congressional delegation, even though the national Republican Party poured vast sums of money into Texas in the last week in order to retain the speakership for Newt Gingrich."

In the top Texas race, the Cinderella hopes of school teacher Victor Morales were dashed as his famed pickup truck turned back into a pumpkin. Gramm got 55 percent of the vote.

Gramm put his faith in a tried-and-tested message: "Republicans believe that you can make better decisions than the government can."

As a presidential battleground, Texas traditionally has been crucial to Democrats. Bill Clinton in 1992 was the first Democrat this century elected president without carrying the state, a feat he repeated Tuesday.

Texas hasn't gone Democratic in a presidential election since Jimmy Carter won in 1976, and state GOP Chairman Tom Pauken saw that as affirmation that Texans remain conservative.

"What happened in Texas is that people voted against Bill Clinton. His politics and philosophy never took in Texas," Pauken said.

Reform Party candidate Ross Perot was on the Texas ballot, too, as an independent. But he got only about 7 percent of the vote.

In the state's 30 congressional races, Republicans were positioned for a net gain of at least one seat.

Incumbents did well. Twenty congressmen — nine Republicans and 11 Democrats — were re-elected. Four Democrats and three Republicans won open seats.

That left a split of 15 Democrats and 12 Republicans, with the remaining three seats to be filled in runoff elections next month.

One of the runoffs — in the Houston-area 8th District — involves two Republicans, meaning the GOP is guaranteed a net gain of at least one.

Two incumbents were forced into runoffs. Rep. Steve Stockman, R-Friendswood, finished ahead of Democrat Nick Lampson in a race where a second Democrat also ran.

Rep. Ken Bentsen, D-Houston, finished first in an 11-candidate field but was outpolled by the eight Republicans in that race. He faces Republican Dolly Madison McKenna in the runoff.

Mississippi governor injured

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Gov. Kirk Fordice was critically injured after his sports utility vehicle veered off an interstate, flipped over several times as it rolled down an embankment and caught fire.

Fordice, 62, was in critical condition early today with bruises to his heart, lung and liver. He also suffered fractured ribs, a collapsed left lung, a nearly severed left ear and cuts on his left shoulder in the Tuesday evening crash.

"It's critical and we're not saying that to blow this out of proportion," said Dr. Keith Thoma, the governor's attending physician. "It's going to be a long course in the hospital for him."

Fordice was not up for re-election Tuesday. The conservative Republican was elected to a second term last year.

Fordice, who was driving alone, was pulled unconscious from his flaming Jeep Grand Cherokee, witnesses said.

"The fire was right there around him," said William Lowe, a truck driver who helped free Fordice.

Rescuers had to break into the vehicle, puncture an inflated air bag and cut through the seat belt to free him.

Fordice regained consciousness by the time he arrived at Grenada Lake Medical Center, about 15 miles south of the accident site in northern Mississippi. He was taken by ambulance to a Jackson hospital 100 miles to the south.

The accident occurred about 5 p.m. while Fordice was en route to Jackson for a GOP election night gathering.

State Public Safety Commissioner Jim Ingram said the cause of the accident was unknown. He said state troopers were near the governor at the time of the crash.

Turnout drops sharply in Texas

By The Associated Press

A record number of registered Texas voters didn't translate to more Texans in the voting booths this election year.

A simplification of the voter registration process resulted in about a million more Texans registered to vote this year than in 1992. Turnout, however, appeared to have dropped sharply from the last presidential election.

With nearly all the votes tallied early today, Secretary of State Tony Garza said the turnout would likely end up no higher than about 53.5 percent, compared with nearly 73 percent in 1992. Before this election, Garza had predicted a turnout of 58.5 percent.

"The campaigns got started late in Texas this year, and there doesn't seem to be an overriding issue in 1996 that the majority of Texans and Americans are extremely angry and worried about," he said.

Garza said that although the turnout was lower this year, the severity of the drop from 1992 is something of an anomaly.

The National Voter Registration Act, also known as the motor-voter law, resulted in about 10.5 million entries on Texas voter rolls, up from 8.6 million in 1992. About 1 million of those entries, however, are for voters who changed addresses and re-registered somewhere else.

Once registered under the motor-voter law, a voter can't be purged from the rolls for two years, Garza said.

"If you put back those million voters your percentage goes to 64 and that's more consistent with '84 and '88," he said.

Texas generally sees an average turnout of 65 percent during presidential election years.

In 1980 and 1984, just over 68 percent of Texas voters cast a ballot. That fell to about 66 percent in 1988 and jumped to 72.9 percent in 1992.

GOP wins majority in courts

By The Associated Press

Republicans now dominate the state's top two courts, winning a majority on the Court of Criminal Appeals for the first time this century and maintaining one on the Texas Supreme Court.

On the appeals court, Texas' top appellate court for criminal cases, GOP candidates defeated the highest Democratic incumbent on Tuesday's state ballot and filled two spots left open when Democrats Sam Houston Clinton and Bill White retired.

The outcome doubled the number of Republicans on the nine-member appeals bench.

Democrat Frank Maloney, the only incumbent seeking return to the panel, lost to Republican state District Judge Tom Price of Richardson, 54 percent to 46 percent.

A GOP majority, however, shouldn't make any difference in how the court conducts business, Maloney said, noting that any changes would be the result of merely having three new people on the court.

In the other races for the Court of Criminal Appeals, state District Judge Sue Holland of Plano, a Republican, beat Democratic state District Judge Bob Perkins of Austin, 56 percent to 44 percent.

Republican Paul Womack, a Williamson County assistant district attorney, topped Charles Holcomb, a Democrat on the 12th Court of Appeals in Tyler, 54 percent to 46 percent.

On the Texas Supreme Court, Republicans kept the four contested seats. Seven of the court's nine seats are held by the GOP.

With 95 percent of precincts counted, Chief Justice Tom Phillips held his spot on the state's highest civil court, taking 57 percent of the vote. Democratic challenger, state District Judge An-drew Jackson Kupper of Level-land, had 40 percent and Libertarian David Parker of Rockwall had 3 percent.

"The Supreme Court is unchanged and we have an excellent Supreme Court," Phillips said.

In the other Supreme Court contests, also with 95 percent of the vote counted, Justice Greg Abbott was re-elected with 84 percent of the vote over Libertarian John B. Hawley, a Dallas attorney, who had 16 percent.

Justice John Cornyn defeated Democrat Patrice Barron, a Houston attorney, 52 percent to 45 percent, with Libertarian Thomas Stults, a Houston lawyer, at 2 percent.

Justice James A. Baker was elected over Democrat Gene Kelly, an attorney from Universal City, 54 percent to 43 percent. Eileen Flume, the Libertarian candidate, had 4 percent.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

'Bridal registry' not necessary

In terms of direct cost to taxpayers and impact on society at large, the home-buying "bridal registry" program announced by Secretary of Housing Henry Cisneros is likely to have little impact.

In terms of revealing the mindset of most people in Washington, Republican and Democrat, the new program tells us volumes.

The new program will allow a couple about to be married to start a "bridal registry" account with a participating Federal Housing Administration lender. The lender will then provide brochures explaining to people invited to the wedding — or whoever — that instead of a blender or a piece of crystal, they can give a giving contribution toward the down payment on a house, which will then be deposited in an interest-bearing account set up by the FHA lender.

Was it really necessary for the federal government to set up a new program for this to happen? Haven't some young couples, for eons now, told relatives and friends that they wouldn't mind a bit if they got money as a gift rather than another piece of silverware? Don't weddings in many ethnic heritages include ancient customs that facilitate the giving of money through something that's fun, like dancing with the bride? Wouldn't any bank in the country be pleased as punch to set up a savings account into which well-wishers could deposit gifts?

Of course. And the use of the money in such cases is not restricted to a down payment on a house, which might be a particular couple's highest priority at the time of the nuptials.

But some people seem to think that nothing happens in America unless government does it, and if a bright idea occurs to somebody it would be unthinkable to rely on the intelligence or competence of ordinary people to get it done. A government program is obviously necessary. Hence, we have a high-ranking government bureaucrat heralding the birth of such a program that, superficially, sounds good, but upon reflection, this is an idea best implemented on an individual basis and left out of the public arena.

As Cato Institute Vice President David Boaz put it in a recent article, such people "conveniently forget the market process that has brought us such changes as the train, the skyscraper, the automobile, the personal computer, and charitable or self-help endeavors from settlement houses to Alcoholics Anonymous to Comic Relief."

Boaz continues: "What kind of political philosophy looks at the vibrancy of America and sees 'nothing' except what the government does?" Perhaps a philosophy that sees government as everything and mere people as nothing.

Berry's World

"Here's a hundred grand. Me and the little lady want to sleep in what's-his-name's bedroom — Lincoln."

Bad Fox, but worse mouse

Until recently, the Time Warner conglomerate was the undisputed champ of corporate irresponsibility in the entertainment industry. A corporation earns that title mostly by routinely marketing what's just plain destructive for the public good, especially if the product is targeted to impressionable youngsters. It is the deliberate attempt to reach for what's certain to offend, to challenge decency, to insult. It is the desire to cater to that nihilistic market that will always be there and will never be satisfied no matter how many barriers are torn down.

In the early 1990s, Time Warner was the home of such sociopathic rap "artists" as Tupac Shakur, Snoop Doggy Dogg and Ice-T, each of whom advocated the murder of police officers. Add the non-violent but salacious Madonna and you had quite an unsavory stew. Now, Tupac is late and unlamented (at least by me), Snoop and Ice are past their prime, and Madonna has been otherwise engaged. In short, Time Warner is less obnoxious than it used to be.

Interestingly, its television subsidiary, the new WB network, is moving in the direction of programming aimed at the family market. On this front, it is juxtaposed by the giant News Corporation and its Fox television network, which continues to resist any temptation toward social responsibility.

At a time when television increasingly caters to the family audience with wholesome series like WB's 7th Heaven and CBS's Promised Land, Fox has no family oriented programs whatsoever, already broadcasts such racy fare as Melrose Place and Martin at 8 p.m., and now has announced it is moving the long running celebration of gutter humor, Married ... With Children, into the 7 p.m. Sunday time slot, effective this month. The Bundys at dinnertime? That's the worst thing for digestion since Olestra. The shift is "a giant step backward," in the apt words of Rep. Lamar Smith (R-Texas), who, in the last congressional session, co-sponsored a resolution calling on the networks to air only family friendly offerings in early prime time.

Amazingly, Fox is championing Married? as family-friendly. Referring to the schedule change, the network's entertainment boss, Peter Roth, asserted that "there's no reason to suggest or believe that we're doing anything that's offensive." (That's pretty much what the Clinton administration had to say about the 900 FBI files, too.)

Today, there is a new title holder for Most Irresponsible Entertainment Corporation: Disney. In the past two years or so, it has released the viciously anti-Catholic movies Priest and The Prophecy. Disney's ABC airs, Ellen, whose title character apparently will proclaim her homosexuality later this season — another first, if that's what you want to call it. The Disney World theme park hosts an annual gay and lesbian day; in 1994, the event was held without warning to the thousands of families who came to the park that day.

These and numerous other actions have gained Disney a reputation for moral envelope-pushing. In late October, the company demonstrated that it is perfectly capable of political and intellectual outrage as well. The Washington Post's Howard Kurtz reported that Disney was negotiating for the film rights to Dark Alliance, an August series of articles by Gary Webb published in the San Jose Mercury News.

As with most conspiracy theories, there's a morsel of truth. Yes, two Nicaraguan exiles were involved with drug dealing in the black neighborhoods of Los Angeles during the 1980s, and yes, they may have funneled some of their profits to the anti-communist Contra forces in their homeland. What is also true and ignored: The Nicaraguan resistance played no role in this rogue operation. The two exiles were drug addicts who squandered virtually all of their profits on themselves.

Moreover, Webb's crucial allegation — that this drug dealing was backed by the CIA — is wholly unsubstantiated. Several years ago, more than one journalist and Senate subcommittee investigated similar claims and found nothing to support them. The whole stupid story should be Trivial Pursuit fodder, yet it's back again, and Disney is helping to breathe life into it.

Webb charges specifically that the crack cocaine epidemic in America's ghettos resulted from this nefarious CIA activity. Again, he provides no evidence, but never mind: It's a good plot. Presumably, blacks would be the target audience; for the cinematic version of Dark Alliance; ironically, by releasing such a despicably misleading movie, Disney would, in a sense, be distributing more poison to blacks than the CIA ever could.

One more news item. The Los Angeles Times, reported on Oct. 18 that Hollywood Records, a Disney label, has signed the heavy metal act Danzig, whose work, The Times said, is "laced with satanic themes." Danzig's previous label: American Recordings, part of the Time Warner empire. Yet another sign that the torch of corporate irresponsibility has passed.

Who does NOW really represent?

There is something wrong with the Women's Quarterly — the intelligent, witty, iconoclastic publication of the Independent Women's Forum. Like a coquette, it plays hard to get. We need it monthly.

The autumn issue features another gem illustrating the absurdity of the notion that the National Organization for Women promotes the welfare of women.

Feminists are famous, of course, for stressing the problem of rape. So-called "Take Back the Night" marches are a fixture on college campuses where young ladies are instructed in women's studies seminars (or "ovulars") that all men are potential rapists and those most to be feared are husbands and fathers.

Never mind that data on domestic violence consistently show that married women are less likely than single, cohabiting or divorced women to be the victims of rape or physical abuse. The feminist agenda is not really to fight rape — it is to manipulate women's perception of the threats facing them. Feminists want to discredit and undermine the traditional family — thus the skewed focus on domestic violence and date rape.

The feminist movement is also the ladies' auxiliary to the liberal/left — and its loyalty to that agenda often trumps its concern for women.

Deidre Raver, writing in the autumn issue of the Women's Quarterly, reports that in East New York, a seven-year-old girl was brutally raped by a 57-year-old man while her brother was forced to watch. The man was arrested (unusual in itself) and told police that he was HIV positive. When asked to take a blood test, he declined, citing New York's privacy laws. And he's right. Under New York law, a suspect cannot be tested for AIDS unless he is convicted of a crime. This is special treatment indeed for the AIDS virus since suspects are required to provide hair samples, fingerprints and many other pieces of evidence before being convicted of a crime.

The seven-year-old will have to wait months to discover whether she is infected. And that, apparently, is just fine with the National Organization for Women because it has teamed up with AIDS activists to oppose any kind of mandatory testing, even for accused criminals, and to protect the privacy of those who test positive even if they are sex offenders.

NOW has thus opposed the HIV Prevention Act of 1996, which would give rape victims access to the HIV status of their assailants and would hold rapists responsible for transmitting or attempting to transmit the virus. A spokeswoman for the NOW office in New York, explained that NOW "is not for non-voluntary testing and we're not pro-mandatory testing."

The transmission of AIDS by rapists doesn't show up on the NOW agenda. In 1993, Dwight Smallwood, a 21-year-old sex offender with AIDS, raped at gunpoint and threatened to kill three women. Prosecutors charged him not only with rape but with attempted murder, arguing that his disease was like a "deadly weapon."

The Maryland Court of Appeals reversed the convictions, protesting that the intent to kill wasn't proven since Smallwood never verbally communicated his HIV status during the assaults. Oh, so if I tie a lead weight around your ankles, throw you into a pool but fail to say, "I'm trying to drown you," then it's not attempted murder?

We will wait in vain for candlelight marches by feminists in protest of decisions like that. Real rape and AIDS transmitted by rape are just not where the money is. Feminists prefer rape education to punishment for offenders, at least in part because, as Raver notes, "These programs have the added benefit of steering millions of dollars of public funding into the coffers of their organizations rather than into, say, prisons." The Safe Streets Act of the federal Violence Against Women Act — Sen. Joe Biden's (D-Del.) contribution to political correctness — earmarks $28 million for rape education. And 25% of that money must be targeted at students at middle, junior high and high school.

That's the feminist view: The rapists are to be found in the junior highs. They must be humiliated, cowed and indoctrinated. As for the real rapists — even those transmitting HIV to seven-year-old girls — NOW is not agitated.

A constitutional case against boxing

In a current policy statement, the American Medical Association "encourages the elimination of both amateur and professional boxing, a sport in which the primary objective is to inflict injury — particularly "chronic brain damage." For years, Dr. George Lundberg of the AMA has been writing articles under the standing title: "Boxing should be banned in civilized countries."

For nearly ten years in Boston, I broadcast boxing bouts — sometimes doing blow-by-blow and sometimes color between rounds. I saw a young, extraordinarily graceful boxer who seemed choreographed. His name was Cassius Clay. And I remember such equally swift and precise combatants as Sugar Ray Robinson and Willie Pep.

They were boxers, not brutal machines like the latter-day Mike Tyson.

Most of the bouts I broadcast, however, were between club fighters professionals who could put on a good, often bloody show for the fans but would never make the big time.

I especially remember two of them. Young and eager at first, they looked, over time, as if they were throwing punches on an assembly line. They kept taking a lot of each other's punches, more each year.

By the time I left ringside to go to New York to cover jazz, the speech of those once ardent young men had also slowed. And they were not alone among the veteran gladiators who, by then, were in times zones of their own.

One of the last bouts I broadcast was between two fighters who had clobbered each other so hard in the early rounds that, neither being able to deliver a knockout blow, they more or less clung to each other. The disgusted crowd, cheated of the chance to see one of them fall unconscious, mockingly started to sing, I'll Always Be in Love With You — in waltz time.

Nat Hentoff

Watching the deprived sports fans, a venerable sportswriter said to me, "Once you leave this place, kid, you'll never go to see another boxing bout."

He was right. I don't go to the fights. I don't watch them on television. Friends of mine — journalists, lawyers, nearly all of them men — make festive evenings of boxing events. They too are disappointed if all that happens is bloodless boxing with nobody on the canvas with his lights out.

Daniel Kornstein, a lawyer and boxing fan, writes in the New York Law Journal: "Maybe there is something less than satisfying for a big fight to be decided by a disqualification rather than a knockout or a TKO. Without some form of knc-k-out, there is no catharsis (for the fans)."

I have heard defenders of the death penalty claim that each execution creates a catharsis in the surrounding community. Why not then, televise executions — with Don King, Mike Tyson's mentor and promoter, deciding which "dead man walking" meats prime time? There would then be a national catharsis from this entertainment.

Don King wasn't around when I, in Boston, would visit dressing rooms before a bout to pick up some stories to use between rounds. My partner, a senior sports announcer at the radio station, warned me not to name on the air some of the portly men with cigars backstage who seemingly owned the fighters. "They don't like publicity," he said, "and for good reason." They didn't like me either, just for being there. Most of them, I expect, are gone now, but — sportswriters tell me — others like them have taken their place.

Occasionally I do see reports concerning boxing on news shows. For in stance, the increasing number of professional bouts between women. And Patti Davis — daughter of former broadcaster Ronald Reagan — has written a screenplay about women boxers. "They're not oddities," she told the New York Post. "They're athletes, and can be good looking."

Not for long. As Dr. George Lundberg of the AMA notes, the chronic brain damage that is eventually suffered by boxers "who have had many fights ... results from repetitive subconcussive blows over multiple training sessions and matches ... A major purpose of a sports event is to win. When the surest way to win is by damaging the opponent's brain, and this becomes standard procedure, the sport is morally wrong."

And constitutionally wrong. Boxing is licensed by the states, and the Eighth Amendment in the Bill of Rights forbids the infliction of "cruel and unusual punishment." Battering an opponent into unconsciousness, and worse, is not a sport. Not in a civilized country.

The defensive rationale for professional boxing is that it allows youngsters at the bottom of society to get a chance at fame and fortune. That works for some, but most of those I've seen wind up with chump change and a funny look.

Affirmative action shot down, but challengers vow to battle in court

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

Two years ago, California shook up the nation with a vote targeting illegal immigrants. This fall, it locked on to another volatile issue — considerations given to minorities and women in jobs and education. Once again, the tremors have begun.

Tuesday's ballots were packed with hundreds of issues, including 90 initiatives created by citizen petition drives. Those included efforts to give parents protected rights over their children, tax sugar to clean up the Everglades and give animals a fighting chance in hunting. Old standards — on term limits, gambling and campaign financing — also jammed the ballots.

But the single item that captured the national imagination was California's plan to dismantle most of its affirmative action programs.

Voters in the nation's most populous state overwhelmingly approved Proposition 209, which bans racial and sex preferences in public hiring, contracting and college enrollments. With 92 percent of precincts reporting, the measure was endorsed 55 percent to 45 percent.

But that vote, rather than quashing debate, seems only to set the stage for the next act in this multimillion-dollar drama: legal challenges, expected as early as today.

"We're determined to have the last word on the issue," said Kathy Spillar, Southern California campaign coordinator for Stop Prop 209. "No matter what happens, this is only the beginning of what we believe will be a nationwide battle."

The divisions echoed the acrimony over Proposition 187, a measure intended to cut off many state services to illegal aliens. It passed easily two years ago — and promptly ended up in court, with a federal judge last year striking down parts as unconstitutional.

California voters also rejected a plan that would have made it easier to sue companies and individuals for securities fraud, with specific wording pertaining to damage to retirement investments. That measure triggered an unprecedented $45 million TV advertising war with heavy investments by the nation's stock exchanges.

And in a third proposal, California joined Arizona to just say "yes" — to smoking marijuana for medical purposes.

California's plan approves legalizing the cultivation, possession and use for health reasons. Arizona agreed to allow doctors to prescribe the drug for critically ill patients. The impact of both measures is uncertain since federal law prohibits anyone from using, growing or selling marijuana.

An array of environmental issues also went to the voters, and big business scored victories on two of them.

In Florida, a flood of advertising bought by sugar companies and farmers helped persuade voters to reject a penny-a-pound sugar tax for Everglades cleanup. Fertilizer runoff has polluted the fabled "River of Grass," but the voters refused an effort to make farmers pay almost half the enormous costs of restoring the wetland.

And in Maine, a proposed ban on clearcutting on 10 million acres of the state's northern forests failed after the most expensive referendum in state history. Among the opponents were the paper industry — which spent more than $5 million to defeat it — and Gov. Angus King, who warned the plan could cost more than 15,000 jobs.

"The gun that has been pointed at the head of the Maine economy is now uncocked, unloaded and off the table," King said.

In another hotly debated environmental issue, Idaho voters upheld a plan that allows 110 tons of highly radioactive waste to be dumped in the state over 40 years. In exchange, the plan calls for the eventual removal of all the hazardous material.

After a costly campaign, Montana defeated a proposal to toughen the regulation of water pollution from mining, especially cyanide used to leach gold from ore.

Montana voters also embraced an anti-extremism law that was placed on the ballot this spring even as the state grappled with a prairie standoff between armed Freeman and federal agents. The siege ended peacefully after 81 days.

The measure makes it easier to sue people accused of threatening or intimidating actions and bans the filing of bogus property liens, a favorite tactic of anti-government extremists.

Health and family matters were also decided in some states.

Oregon voters raised the state cigarette tax by 30 cents a pack, to 68 cents, to help fund health care for poor people. They also rejected limitations on how health maintenance organizations reimburse doctors for patient care.

Californians rejected two plans to revamp the way the state's HMOs do business.

In Colorado, a measure that would have put a guarantee in the state constitution that parents had ultimate rights in matters of educating and disciplining their children failed with voters. Opponents had argued it would make it tougher to prosecute child abuse and prompt legal fights over school curriculum.

GOP maintains control of the House despite heavy fire from rival party

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans fought off Democratic accusations of extremism to hold a slimmer majority in the House, gratifying Speaker Newt Gingrich but likely forcing him to trade for votes as he battles with President Clinton.

The GOP won ugly — grabbing open seats in the South and Midwest while at least 11 of their freshmen lost in a hail of negative ads financed by Democrats and big labor.

But the view from where Gingrich stood today was nice enough, as it was for Senate Republicans who also held their majority.

"It's pretty amazing, a truly historic moment," Gingrich told cheering supporters in Georgia early today. The last time the GOP successfully defended a House majority was 1930, during the presidency of Herbert Hoover.

Republicans won 221 seats and were leading in another four for 225; Democrats had won or were leading for 209 seats, which would be a gain of 11 seats. The current House split is 236 Republicans and 198 Democrats. The only independent, Bernard Sanders of Vermont, won re-election and generally votes with the Democrats.

The new Republican majority will be the slimmest for either party in the House since 1953. Gingrich, assuming he is selected again as speaker, will almost certainly have to bargain with centrist Democrats to move his agenda.

Clinton offered an olive branch to his GOP opponents.

"Let me say to the leaders of my Democratic Party and the leaders of the Republican Party, it is time to put country ahead of party," Clinton told a victory celebration in Little Rock, Ark.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said the Republican Senate will continue investigating ethical allegations against the Clinton administration but also would try to focus on "the people's agenda" of smaller government and lower taxes.

Republicans saw their 53-47 Senate majority expand by at least one seat. Early today, the only race too close to call was for an open Oregon seat between Republican state Senate president Gordon Smith and Democratic businessman Tom Bruggere.

In the House, voters said they don't like Gingrich but punched their ballots for GOP candidates in key races anyway. Three of five voters responding to a Voter News Service exit poll said they have an unfavorable view of Gingrich, yet more than half said they approved of the job the GOP-controlled Congress did in the past two years.

"I get frustrated with gridlock, but I don't know if I necessarily wanted a straight Democratic or straight Republican" control of Congress and the White House, said Kristin McGuine. The 28-year-old Oregon homemaker voted for Clinton, but didn't look at party when it came to Congress.

House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt said he had gone door-to-door this year to try to find out why the Democratic Party lost the House two years ago. It is a puzzle the party has yet to solve.

The Republicans took advantage of Democratic retirements in the South and Midwest to pick up open House seats in Alabama, Illinois, Mississippi, Montana, Oklahoma, South Dakota and Texas.

In some cases, the Republican wins were hair-raisingly close. Pennsylvania freshman Republican Jon Fox won by a grand total of 10 votes after running as hard as he could away from Gingrich.

Another key win for Republicans came in Idaho where embattled freshman Helen Chenoweth won a second term despite accusations of personal and official financial mismanagement.

Runners' Attire Designed For Function, Not Fashion

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Roger From Walnut Creek, Calif.," I was so furious I had to respond.

In Roger's opinion, "99 percent" of female runners wear sports attire that leaves little to the imagination in the hopes of attracting the attention of men.

I am a female runner who lives in Texas where the summers are extremely hot and humid. Running with heavy clothing is not only uncomfortable, it's also dangerous because there is no chance for the skin to breathe. I run anywhere from 4 to 6 miles, and in the summer this is often sheer torture. However, I and other female athletes continue to train in order to maintain health and fitness.

To suggest that we run in skimpy attire because we are seeking attention from men is just plain ignorant. There are a number of ways to get attention from men without putting oneself through a grueling workout in suffocating heat. Women receive catcalls and wolf whistles whether they wear shorts or baggy sweats. Most women find this "attention" childish, immature and often downright scary.

I feel sure Roger is not a runner. If I am wrong, I'd like to invite him to come to Texas next July and run 5 miles with me. I will wear my so-called skimpy outfit and he can wear his sweats. We'll see who collapses first. My guess is it will be Mr. Big Mouth.

TERESA SIBLEY,
FORT WORTH, TEXAS

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR THERESA: Roger's letter ranked other female runners, who were quick to point out that their sportswear can affect the quality of their performance. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I'm responding to "Roger From Walnut Creek, Calif.," who thinks women runners wear tight clothes so that men will look at them.

Abby, Roger needs therapy! I run every day with several other women, and we wear exercise clothing. The form-fitting lycra/spandex material allows for greater range of motion and the breathable fabric keeps the athlete drier, which adds to comfort. Greater comfort, better performance. What we are focused on is comfort and performance, not attracting attention from men.

Please tell Roger that women have better things to do than collecting catcalls from strangers. Maybe he should get out of his easy chair and try a little exercise himself. On second thought, we're better off if guys like Roger stay inside!

JUDY B., PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: This is also in response to "R.H.G. in Elm Grove, Wis.," who wrote to say that her mother would not wear hearing aids because she thought they would make her look old.

She has things turned around. It's being hard of hearing that makes people think you're old. Don't fool yourself; they will figure out quickly that you are hard of hearing, or worse yet, they'll think you're senile because you respond incorrectly to questions.

Since I often didn't answer questions or enter conversations many thought I was a snob. The truth was I hadn't heard them.

Thirty years ago when I got my first hearing aids, they changed my life. My whole world became a beautiful place full of sounds. I laughed and talked more — and I became an active participant in what was going on around me.

So, to your readers I say: Hurry to your phone and call for an appointment with an otolaryngologist. (That's a doctor who specializes in ear, nose and throat problems.) You will never be sorry.

AN 83-YEAR-OLD GREAT-GRANDMOTHER WHO IS GLAD TO BE HEARING HER GREAT-GRANDCHILDREN, INDIAN, CALIF.

DEAR GREAT-GRANDMOTHER: Now that people are living longer and enjoying their golden years more, your advice should be sweet music to many.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Bobby Witt has decided to remain a Texas Ranger, choosing to exercise a $2 million option to return next season instead of testing the free-agent market.

Witt and agent Alan Nero initially had sought a contract extension from the Rangers and discussed it earlier this week with general manager Doug Melvin. When it was not offered, Witt opted Tuesday to remain in Texas anyway.

"Alan and I felt like if I became a free agent, we could have gotten more money or some kind of long-term contract," said Witt, who was 16-12 with a 5.41 ERA as a starter last year. "The way I look at it is I'm going to concentrate on this next year and then see what's out there."

Witt, 32, joins Ken Hill and John Burkett as starters signed for next season. The right-hander — who came up through the organization, was traded in 1992 then reacquired in 1995 — went 7-2 after July 15 last year.

BASKETBALL

CLEVELAND (AP) — The injury-riddled San Antonio Spurs sure needed this victory. Dominique Wilkins and Vernon Maxwell needed those points, too.

With David Robinson among the injured, Wilkins and Maxwell took over in the second half as the Spurs erased a 17-point deficit to beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 74-68 Tuesday night.

It was San Antonio's seventh straight victory over Cleveland, but the Spurs' first this season in three games. The Spurs played again without Robinson, Chuck Person and Will Perdue due to injuries.

"We really needed to grind out a win, and we did," Spurs coach Bob Hill said.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Pete Carril, whose Princeton teams were everybody's favorite NCAA tournament underdog, and John Thompson, who transformed Georgetown into one of college basketball's top teams, were nominated Tuesday for the Basketball Hall of Fame.

The two old friends were among the largest group of nominees — seven coaches, seven players and one contributor — ever to go to the Honors Committee for a vote. And special nominating committees for women, oldtimers and the international game have yet to announce their proposed picks.

Former Denver Nuggets star Alex English, the NBA's most prolific scorer during the 1980s with 19,682 points, was one of three players being considered by the Honors Committee for the first time.

Also proposed for the first time were Sidney Moncrief, a star for Arkansas and the Milwaukee Bucks, and forward Bobby Jones, who played for North Carolina and then with the Nuggets and Philadelphia 76ers.

Renominated as players were the late Gus Johnson, a rebounding force for the Bullets during the 1960s; Dennis Johnson, who won two NBA titles with the Boston Celtics and one with Seattle; UCLA and Lakers standout Jamaal Wilkes, and sharp-shooting point guard Jo Jo White, who helped boost the Celtics to two titles after starring at Kansas.

Alex Hannum, who got his start turning faltering pro teams into contenders as player-coach of the St. Louis Hawks in 1956-57, was another first-time nominee.

Hannum, who in his first season brought St. Louis to the NBA finals before losing to the Celtics in the seventh game, is the only coach to win NBA and ABA championships — at Philadelphia in 1967 and Oakland in 1969.

Renominated were Don Haskins of Texas-El Paso, whose five black starters beat Kentucky for the 1966 national championship, and Jerry Tarkanian of Fresno State, who led UNLV to the 1990 NCAA championship.

Switzer likes must-win crisis Cowboys face

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Barry Switzer likes his football down and dismal.

It's a good thing. He may now be facing his biggest challenge since he became the Dallas Cowboys' coach three years ago.

Following Jimmy Johnson, Switzer found a team stocked with Pro Bowl players and Super Bowl winners.

He watched as the Cowboys lost to San Francisco in an NFC championship game two years ago and rolled to the Super Bowl title last year.

"Seldom has Switzer faced a must-win crisis like the one he's dealing with now: a reeling 5-4 team facing a one-two punch of the 49ers and then the Green Bay Packers.

The relationship between Switzer and quarterback Troy Aikman had its ups and downs but it didn't hurt the Cowboys in the won-loss column as they posted a 12-4 record. Switzer and Aikman patched up their differences long enough for Dallas to roll through Philadelphia, Green Bay and Pittsburgh in the playoffs.

Switzer admitted Tuesday that the pressure is on, but the former Oklahoma coach says he loves that kind of heat.

"I like it like that. I like adversity," Switzer said. "I'd like to get back in this thing (the NFC East race) and win it the hard way."

Switzer then held two fingers a few inches apart.

"We're just this close to being a 7-2 football team," he said. "There's no panic around here. No worry."

The Cowboys certainly know the challenge of meeting a team that has beaten them in three consecutive meetings. San Francisco beat the Cowboys 38-20 last year at Texas Stadium when the 49ers were down-and-out, struggling with a 5-4 record.

In 1994, the 49ers whipped the Cowboys 21-14 during the regular season and took a 38-28 victory in the NFC championship game.

Amazingly, the 49ers had a 12-1 turnover advantage in the three games.

"We've had a tremendous turnover differential against them," Switzer said. "It's hard to win when the turnover ratio is 12-1."

Last year everybody in America thought we would kick hell out of them, but we didn't. That's the way it works. We've got to start playing smart against them, no mental errors. And we have to be able not to let them have the big play."

Owner Jerry Jones said the Cowboys must regain their form if they hold any NFC East championship aspirations.

"The last three games we have had with them gives us all the incentive in the world," Jones said. "What's at stake here is the Super Bowl. We're still alive and well. This game is a journey of setbacks and who handles it the best."

For Switzer, it's the first time he's been this heavily under the gun since he left Norman.

Post-season play awaits area high school teams

PAMPA — At least three Pampa area football teams have wrapped up post-season playoff spots after victories last week.

In District 1-1A, Wheeler rolled past Gruver, 35-12, to clinch one of the two playoff berths. Booker is the other 1-1A team to make the playoffs after beating Shamrock, 24-6.

Wheeler goes to Booker on Friday night with the winner coming away with the outright district championship.

McLean became the area's first six-man team to wrap up a playoff spot with the Tigers' 28-27 win over Samnorwood last week. McLean joined Chillicothe as District 2-1A's playoff representatives. The two teams meet Friday night at Chillicothe for the district championship.

Either Groom or Miami, and maybe both, will advance to the playoffs out of District 1-1A (six-man). The situation will be resolved this weekend when Groom meets Follett and Miami goes against Lefors in regular-season finales. A Groom win would give the Tigers the No. 1 playoff seed and the outright district title. It would also mean Miami would grab the No. 2 playoff seed. There could also be a three-way tie for first if Follett defeats Groom.

Miami defeated Fort Elliott, 55-26, Groom blanked Higgins, 52-0 and Follett shut out Lefors, 50-0, last week.

Resilient Bills have Super Bowl possibilities again

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

After his Buffalo Bills thrashed Washington on Sunday, Marv Levy explained that players win games, not systems, and reiterated that the Bills didn't win because they acceded to Jim Kelly's wish went back to the "K-Gun" offense.

"We had to get out of the 'K-Gun' to come back and beat the Giants," Levy said. "You go with what works in that particular situation."

That is why the Bills have been to four Super Bowls and that's why they're 6-3 now and a possibility to go back again this season.

They are the NFL's most resilient team, and in the NFL, you need resilience.

So the Bills can struggle on offense, they can lose a tough game in New England or at home to Miami, and they can still come back and move into a tie for first place in the AFC East.

"We're just having fun," says center Kent Hull, one of the nucleus that still remains of the teams that won the AFC title from 1990-93.

It's not only the team that's resilient, it's the players, particularly Kelly and Andre Reed.

Kelly went into Sunday's game ranked 32 of 35 NFL quarterbacks who had thrown enough passes to get a ranking. He not only passed flawlessly (a rarity this season) against the Redskins, but actually ran for 20 yards, including a 4-yard sneak for a touchdown.

Reed wasn't even counted in the team's preseason plans — free agent Quinn Early and rookie Eric Moulds were supposed to make him expendable after last year's injury-plagued season.

Instead, at age 32, Reed is the Bills' most reliable receiver.

He's averaging 15.6 yards on 41 catches, both figures by far the best on the team. He's eighth in the AFC in receiving yardage.

That's one reason for the Bills' resiliency — their age. From Kelly, Reed, Hull, Thurman Thomas and Bruce Smith, the core of the Super Bowl teams, to veterans like Chris Spielman, Bryce Paup and Jim Jeffcoat, who came in from outside. All have been there before.

So Kelly is comfortable with Reed in a way he can't be with Moulds and Early, both in their first year as Bills. Steve Tasker finally got back two weeks ago, but he's getting banged up again; Don Beebe is in Green Bay and Billy Brooks in Baltimore.

Then there's that K-gun, the no-huddle offense that features three wide receivers and one running back. On Sunday, the one running back was either Thomas or Darick Holmes, and each went over 100 yards.

Bowler hits jackpot

(Pampa News photo)

Halloween night was a real treat for Pampa bowler Lonnie Loter (right), who won the "Strike it Rich" jackpot worth $5,051.50 at Harvester Lanes. Bowling alley proprietor Warren Dahn presents Loter with the big check. Loter had a 746 series with games of 225, 246 and 275. Loter had to throw strikes in a specified number of frames in each game to win the jackpot.

Reports say Harrick resigning at UCLA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim Harrick apparently is out as UCLA's basketball coach — 19 months after guiding the Bruins to their first NCAA championship in 20 years and two weeks before the start of the 1996-97 season.

Several news outlets said late Tuesday a news conference would be held on campus today to announce a coaching change.

The Los Angeles Times reported Harrick was given the option of resigning or being fired after practice Tuesday, and chose to resign.

The Long Beach Press-Telegram and Fox Sports News said essentially the same thing.

Harrick, 58, signed a five-year contract, reportedly for an annual salary of $400,000, in the summer of 1995. He was cleared two weeks ago by the school and Pacific-10 Conference of violations in the sale of a car he owned to the older sister of prized recruit Baron Davis.

Harrick's son, Glenn, had use of the vehicle after its purchase in 1990. Glenn Harrick works for Fox Sports News.

ESPN said it had confirmed the resignation of Harrick, saying the reason was because of "recruiting irregularities."

The Times reported the reason was expense report violations and not related to the sale of the car.

When reached at his home Tuesday night, UCLA sports information director Marc Dellins said he could neither confirm nor deny the report.

Harrick's wife, Sally, was tearful while answering a phone call from the Press-Telegram at the couple's Westwood home Tuesday night.

She said her husband wasn't at home. When asked if he was stepping down as UCLA's coach she sobbed and said, "You'll have to ask Jim."

Reportedly, Steve Lavin, 32, the chief recruiter on Harrick's staff, will be appointed interim head coach.

Lavin became the No. 1 assistant on Harrick's staff when Lorenzo Romar left to become head coach at Pepperdine last spring.

Lavin is about to start his sixth season as a member of the UCLA coaching staff, but just his second as a full-time assistant. He was promoted to a full-time spot in June 1995 after spending four years as the restricted earnings coach on Harrick's staff.

Lavin replaced Mark Gottfried, who left after seven years on the staff to become head coach at Murray State University.

Harrick coached at Pepperdine for nine years before succeeding Walt Hazzard as UCLA's head coach in April 1988. Harrick's overall record with the Bruins was 191-63.

UCLA was 23-8 last year, losing to Princeton in the first round of the NCAA tournament. With all five starters returning, UCLA opens the 1996-97 season Nov. 20 against Tulsa in the Preseason NIT.

Andrews' sophomore has second-best rushing game in Class 4A football history

DALLAS (AP) — Andrews coach Mike Leby thinks back a couple summers and remembers how impressed he was by a grade-school student he saw running track and playing basketball.

The kid thought he could do anything, and usually could. Yet, he was real humble about his abilities. That combination of confidence without cockiness convinced Leby he would one day have a heck of a football player.

In a season and a half, Shaud (pronounced Shod) Williams has exceeded those expectations. Last Friday, he exceeded all but one rushing performance in Class 4A history.

Williams, now just a sophomore, ran 34 times for 438 yards and five touchdowns in a 43-27 victory over Fort Stockton. Only Ronnie Ashmore, who had 476 yards for San Antonio Edgewood in a 1985 game against San Antonio Memorial, has ever rushed for more yards in a 4A game.

"When I asked about the stats and they told me, I said they were crazy," Leby said Tuesday. "But it's all on film. We've watched it several times and we still can't believe it."

Williams scored on consecutive carries in the third quarter, turning a 20-20 battle into a 34-20 Andrews lead. After Fort Stockton rallied to within 34-27, Williams answered with another score to secure the victory.

His great night wasn't limited to offense. As a free safety, Williams had an interception, blocked an extra point and made eight tackles, including one that saved a touchdown.

The incredible two-way performances made Williams an overwhelming choice for the top spot on this week's Associated Press honor roll.

"He's the best athlete I've ever been around," said Leby, who has coached at Andrews for eight years and before that was an assistant at Sweetwater for several years, including the 1985 state championship season.

By The Associated Press
FOOTBALL
CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals offensive lineman Scott Brumfield, who has had limited use of his legs since injuring his spine last week-end, promises he will play football again.
Brumfield was hurt in a head-butting collision with Bengals tight end Tony McGee in Sunday's 24-21 victory over the Baltimore Ravens.
Brumfield, 26, remained in fair condition, but could be released as early as Wednesday.
COLLEGE
LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The NCAA has cleared basketball coach Danny Lee of paying a recruiter to bring Nigerian star Osta Nwachuku to Nebraska, athletic director Bill Byrne said.
But Lee was found to have committed two minor violations for arranging transportation and failing to notify Nwachuku of the NCAA's five-visit limitation rule. He was barred from off-campus recruiting for the first two days of the recruiting season in mid-March.
Christopher Pond, who claimed to have coached Nwachuku, said he was paid by Nebraska to go to Africa to recruit the player, which would have been an NCAA violation.
GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The NCAA cleared tackle Mo Collins, whose Florida suspended in September for taking $500 from an associate of a sports agent.
A three-week school investigation found Collins did not sign with an agent or agree to be represented by one.
Collins must pay $500 in restitution to a charity. His suspension will end after Florida plays at Vanderbilt Saturday.

Raptors rally past Mavericks

TORONTO (AP) — For nearly three quarters, the Dallas Mavericks played with a certain swagger.
But after the Toronto Raptors erased an 18-point deficit to down the Mavericks 100-96 Tuesday night, Dallas head coach Jim Cleamons said he and his players walked "out of here with our tails between our legs."
Walt Williams, one of several off-season acquisitions by the youthful Raptors, showed the offensive skill that prompted the club to sign him, scoring a 34 points.
His 3-point shot with a minute left in the third quarter cut the Dallas lead to 79-68 and sparked a 24-5 run that culminated with Hubert Davis' basket that gave Toronto an 89-84 lead with 6:41 to play.
Williams fouled out with 1:51 left in the fourth quarter, sending Jim Jackson to the line. Jackson, who scored 20 points, hit two free throws for a 96-95 Mavericks lead before Damon Stoudamire's running jumper put the Raptors up 97-96 with 45 seconds left.
Chris Gatling, who led the Mavericks with 22 points and 11 rebounds, was called for traveling, and Stoudamire, who finished with 28

GOP gains a seat in Texas; three races head for final vote in December

By MELISSA WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The elections are over. Let the elections begin.

As Republicans celebrated a gain of at least one seat in Texas' Congressional delegation, both sides hunkered down to face another month of campaigning.

Court-ordered redistricting meant that races in which no candidate got a majority would be forced into a Dec. 10 runoff.

Observers anticipate a flood of outside interest and money in campaigns for the Houston-area 25th District of Democratic freshman Ken Bentsen, the 9th District held by Republican Steve Stockman in East Texas, and the 8th District, where two Republicans — state Rep. Kevin Brady and physician Gene Fontenot — were the survivors from Tuesday.

Democrats easily reclaimed the three House seats at the center of the remapping.

Republicans, who hoped they could overtake the Democrats' 18-12 advantage in the delegation, captured two Democratic seats outright: The redrawn 5th District vacated by John Bryant and the unaffected 12th District left open by Pete Geren.

But the GOP failed to capitalize on opportunities in East Texas' 1st and 2nd Districts, left open by Jim Chapman and the showy Charlie Wilson.

In the hotly competitive race for Stockman's seat, a high-dollar campaign by labor leaders helped push Democrat Nick Lampson to an early lead.

The controversial freshman recovered from a 7,000-vote disadvantage to edge Lampson by almost 4,000 votes. Lampson finished with 83,733 votes, or 44 percent, to Stockman's 88,002, or 46 percent. Democrat Geraldine Sam also ran.

State Democratic Party chairman Bill White said redistricting hurt his party.

"If it weren't for the bizarre election procedure ordered by the court, we would have won the 9th, 25th and 5th outright," White said.

On paper, Republicans still could pull even with the Democrats. Fifteen Democrats and 12 Republicans won. But one of the three runoffs — the 25th District — appears likely to go Democratic. Another pits two Republicans against each other.

Rep. Mac Thornberry, a freshman Republican from the Panhandle's 13th District, said his victory over Democrat Samuel Brown Silverman showed voters' distaste for the Democrats' pitch.

"If you look at the savage attacks that have been financed by labor unions and others, they have not been successful this year," Thornberry said. "The American people can see through that. They can see through the kinds of scare tactics that were used."

In his runoff, Bentsen faces Dolly Madison McKenna, a GOP moderate. Bentsen, a nephew of former U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, was considered to have suffered the greatest losses under redistricting. The redrawing cost him many staunchly Democratic precincts and replaced them with more Republican areas.

He polled 43,110 votes, or 34 percent, to McKenna's 21,650 votes, or 17 percent. Another Democrat, Beverley Clark, had 21,486 votes, or 17 percent.

Only one GOP veteran, Jack Fields of Humble, decided not to return in 1997. In that contest, voters will see a rematch between Brady and big-spending hospital owner Fontenot, who lost the spring primary but re-entered the race after redistricting. Brady won 80,022 votes, or 41 percent, to Fontenot's 75,124 votes, or 39 percent.

Fifteen Democrats won, with 12 Republicans victorious. In the 17 districts untouched by the ruling, Democrats took 11 and Republicans six.

Federal judges redrew 13 districts in the Houston and Dallas areas after the Supreme Court in June declared three of them unconstitutional. The Republican plaintiffs had claimed the districts favored minority candidates.

Democratic Reps. Sheila Jackson Lee, Gene Green and Eddie Bernice Johnson won in Texas' redrawn 18th, 29th and 30th Districts, despite slight losses of Democratic precincts.

Republican Pete Sessions defeated Democrat John Poulard in North Texas' redrawn 5th District. Bryant resigned the seat to seek the U.S. Senate nomination won by Victor Morales, who lost to Republican Phil Gramm.

Winners included Democrat Ruben Hinojosa, who won the 15th District seat vacated by de la Garza. Newcomer Max Sandlin defeated Republican Ed Merritt in the battle to replace Chapman, who decided to forsake his seat for a crack at the Senate.

State Sen. Jim Turner of Crockett vanquished Republican dentist Brian Babin in the 2nd District stretching from Rusk to Orange.

Former U.S. Border Patrol chief Silvestre Reyes, a Democrat, defeated GOP insurance agent Rick Ledesma in West Texas to take the 16th District seat being vacated by Ron Coleman of El Paso.

Republican incumbents Bill Archer, Dick Arme, Joe Barton, Sam Johnson, Lamar Smith, Tom DeLay, Henry Bonilla and Larry Combest easily won re-election.

Democratic incumbents Martin Frost, Charles W. Stenholm, Chet Edwards, Lloyd Doggett, Henry B. Gonzalez, Ralph Hall, Solomon P. Ortiz and Frank Tejeda also won.

At state-level, Democrats hold tightened House lead, Senate control lies in two runoff elections

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Republicans hoped for a 76-74 majority in the state House. They had to settle for a smaller Democratic majority.

But in the Senate, the GOP replaced Democrat's 17-14 edge with its own 15-14 majority Tuesday. Two seats — both held by Democrats — remain for voters to decide in a runoff and a special election.

The GOP picked up a total of four House seats in Tuesday's voting.

They had aimed at 27 races where they thought they could pick up the 13 seats needed to give the party control of the chamber for the first time in the 20th century.

One of those targets included a race between 12-term Democratic House Speaker Pete Laney and Springlake rancher and businessman Hollis Cain.

Laney, of Hale Center, and most other targeted Democrats, won their races.

"The Republicans announced early that they were going to take over the Texas House and rattled their sabres about it all year," said Joe Cutbirth, a Texas Democratic spokesman. "When the dust has cleared, Texans have elected a Democratic Legislature to deal with education, human services, criminal justice, transportation — the issues that have built this state and we think that's a validation of the leadership of (Democratic Lt. Gov.) Bob Bullock and Pete Laney."

The Republican's one-seat advantage in the Senate came in District 24, where Republican Troy Fraser, of Horseshoe Bay, defeated Sweetwater Democrat Rick Rhodes. The central-Texas seat had been held since 1983 by Democrat Bill Sims, of Paint Rock, who retired.

The runoff between Democrat David Langston and Republican Robert Duncan, set for Dec. 10, will decide which man replaces Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, who retired to become chancellor at Texas Tech University.

That race is likely to come before the special election to complete Sen. Jim Turner's term. The Crockett Democrat won his bid for Congress Tuesday, forcing him to give up the Senate's 5th District seat.

In the House, four incumbents, including two Democrats and two Republicans, were denied additional terms. Reps. Billy Clemmons, R-Pollock; Barbara Rusling, R-China Spring; John Cook, D-Breckenridge; and Homer Dear, D-Fort Worth; lost their re-election bids.

Republicans also picked up four seats where incumbent Democrats didn't seek re-election. They included:

— 1991 Luby's Cafeteria massacre survivor Suzanna Gratia Hupp's election over Dick Miller for the 54th District seat held by Democrat Layton Black, of Goldthwaite.

— Wayne Christian's election over Judy McDonald to replace retiring Rep. Jerry Johnson, D-Nacogdoches, in the 9th District.

— Republican Gene Seaman's victory over Pat Eisenhower for retiring Corpus Christi Rep. Todd Hunter's seat in the 32nd District.

— Republican Ron Clark's election over Democrat Roger Saunders to replace Democratic Rep. Curtis Seidlitz, of Sherman in the 62nd District.
