SERIAL STORY
FLYING CO-ED
By MARY KINNAVEY MOORE

YESTERDAY: Submitting to her guardian's wishes, Anne tells Tony she cannot see him until after school closes. On their last date, Tony takes her to a roadhouse, humiliated by school authorities. There is a shooting. A disarming girl helps Anne escape before police arrive.

CHAPTER VII

IN a back room of the Villa Aloha, one of the gunmen grabbed Clarie by the arm.

"That red-haired girl, who was she? Where is she?"

"I don't know. Let me go—"

"We've got to find her." The other man swore angrily. "If she's picked up, she'll talk."

Clarie shook her head frantically. "I tell you I don't know what happened to her!"

"She must have beat it out the back way," the man said, freeing Clarie. "If she's on foot, she can't get far."

With a half-snarled oath, his companion followed him out through a back doorway as the police entered at the front.

Meanwhile, a short distance down a side road, Anne was hurrying as best she could. Her light evening wrap was little protection against the storm, and her filmy dress clung to her like a rag. But Anne was long past caring about how she looked. Her one thought was to get away, as far away as she could.

She had no doubt of what would happen if she were publicly involved in the shooting at the Villa Aloha. She would be held for questioning, she was a witness. Headlines would tell the story.

That she had been at the Villa Aloha, in spite of the college ruling, would mean instant expulsion from Midland. It would mean the end of her flying course. Curious, she thought, that she should think about that now.

In the next instant, a revolver aimed at her. She was brought to a stop. Running away from things was not in Anne Norris' tradition. It was true, she reminded herself, that her presence at the Villa Aloha had been entirely innocent. She was not really to blame. Yet, the fact was that she had been there. The fact remained that she had broken the college ruling. The reasons for her having been at the tavern would make no difference to college authorities. In spite of that, she could not run away. There was only one thing to do, and that was to go back to take her medicine.

Then, once more, as she stood in the rain, she had that terrible feeling of being pursued. Instinctively she drew away from the edge of the road. She saw that he was right.

Two men were hurrying down the road, obviously looking for someone. Instinct and quick thought told her they were the two who had done the shooting, and that they were looking for her. At almost the same instant, she heard one of them call out.

"There she is!"

ANNE NORRIS turned and ran blindly down the road through the rain. This time she was not running from disgrace, from the fear of expulsion from college. She was running in sheer terror, from what she instinctively recognized as real and immediate danger.

The headlights of a car coming from behind her illuminated the highway. The car skidded to a abrupt stop beside Anne. The door of the car fell open, a hand reached out to Anne, and a voice called, "In here—quick—"

It was the voice of Dick Douglas.

With one swift motion he pulled Anne into the car and slammed the door. He jammed the car into gear, sent it roaring down the highway in a burst of speed. Behind them a shot rang out, and another. At the first shot the car was well ahead, and in another moment it was out of range of Anne's pursuers.

DICK slowed to normal speed. He glanced curiously at Anne, huddled, white-faced, in a corner. "I thought those two looked bad as I passed them. You have some very odd friends, Miss Norris."

At the sound of his voice, Anne felt her strength returning.

"I'd hardly say their manner was very friendly!" She tried to be casual.

"Well, what has the beautiful Miss Norris been doing for excitement? Looks as if it might have been more than a rotogravure picture in the Sunday supplements this time."

Embarrassed, half-angry at herself for doing so, Anne told him the whole story. As she finished it, she added, "I don't know why on earth I should tell all of this to you."

"You needn't," he said curtly. "I will say you showed even less judgment than I'd have expected." He looked at her as he spoke, and all at once began to laugh.

"That's right, laugh," Anne snapped, her temper rising. "If you could only see yourself," he gasped. "Wait—"

He stopped the car, took out his flashlight. He looked at Anne in your vanity. Take a look."

STILL angry, Anne took out her mirror and stared at herself as he held the flashlight. Her hair

Experts Produce Bill To Prevent War Millionaires

WASHINGTON, July 22. (AP)—Administration tax experts brought out today the first rough draft of a bill to "prevent war millionaires."

It was an "excess profits" tax, to be levied on surplus revenue. Treasury and congressional workers indicated the measure of "surplus" would be either "normal earnings" or "reasonable return on capital investment," depending on the individual case.

President Roosevelt urged last spring some measure to forestall enrichment of manufacturers who would get huge contracts to build airplanes and other weapons for the army and navy.

One of the major question-marks on the bill was whether it would supplement or repeal the new 7 per cent profit tax, which the government airplane and warship contracts. Indications were that it would replace existing legislation.

Pending study by the house ways and means committee, for whom the draft was made, experts declined to discuss the measure's contents in detail.

The experts pointed out that the excess profits taxes tried during the World war and for a while afterward were based either on "normal earnings" alone or on "reasonable return." Neither method was found fair in all cases.

The rates to be charged have not yet been determined. One informed source said that rates would depend on "how much money they want to raise."

Latvia, Estonia Lithuania Would Join Red Union

MOSCOW, July 22 (AP)—An early session of the supreme Soviet, Russia's parliament, is expected to approve the requests of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia for membership in the Soviet Union.

The addition of the three states will increase Russia's Baltic sea front as well as her land frontier with Germany. Their 5,500,000 inhabitants will boost the Soviet population to around 190,000,000.

With the three Baltic states members of the Soviet family, the number of independent allied republics in the Soviet Union will be increased to 15, compared to 11 a year ago. A fifth, the Moldavian republic created from Bessarabia and northern Bucovina ceded by Rumania, is expected soon to be formally proclaimed.

The first of the newly added territory was the Karelian-Finnish republic, carved out of the area obtained from Finland.

The 50,000 airplanes requested for the United States national defense would be almost equal to the air forces of all the belligerents combined.

LEVELLAND, July 22 (AP)—Fourteen-month-old Rita Ann Shue was drowned when she fell into a tank at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Shue of two miles southwest of Sundown in Hockley county Sunday morning.

No one saw the baby fall in the tank. When she was missed, a search was started. Several children were playing in the yard.

18th District Battle Holds Spotlight

By HOWARD C. MARSHALL
 AUSTIN, July 22 (AP)—Vigorous efforts of four former national representatives to "come back" and hard campaigning by 12 candidates for the seat of retiring Marvin Jones of Amarillo highlight Democratic contests in 14 of Texas' 21 congressional districts.

Most of the contests probably will be decided in the first primary Saturday.

The quartet seeking return to congress are Joe H. Eagle of Houston, in the eighth district, O. H. Cross of Waco, eleventh district, W. D. McFarlane of Graham, thirteenth district, and Thomas L. Blanton of Albany, seventeenth district.

The districts are represented, respectively, by Reps. Albert Thomas of Houston, W. R. Poage of Waco, Ed Gossett of Wichita Falls and Clyde L. Garrett of Eastland.

Seven of the 20 congressmen running for re-election do not have opposition. One woman and six members of the legislature are candidates.

Outstanding issues are absent. The incumbents are asking re-election on their records, which are being criticized in spots. One candidate advocates socialized medicine, another $45 federal pensions to all over 60 and a third the Townsend plan.

Confident this is a fine year for the "ins," most of the representatives have remained in Washington, pleading duty while congress is in session, but during the recess for the Democratic national convention several visited their districts.

Martin Dies of Orange, who has two opponents, has been in Texas two weeks, investigating un-American activities. He is chairman of a congressional committee created for that purpose.

Admittedly it is no easy task to defeat a Texas congressman under normal conditions. Texas has a record of keeping its national representatives in office. In view of the war and the national defense program, the odds are generally considered heavier still against overturns.

Much interest is manifested in the possibility of increase in state population will be shown in the new census and Texas may obtain a new congressman or two.

The seven congressmen without opposition are Hamilton W. Summers of Dallas, chairman of the judiciary committee of the national house, who represents the fifth district; Luther A. Johnson, of Corsicana, sixth district; Nat Patton of Crockett, seventh district; Lyndon B. Johnson of Austin, tenth district; Milton E. West of Brownsville, fifteenth district, and Charles L. South of Coleman, twenty-first district.

Most colorful of those saying "comebacks" is Blanton, a fiery, hard-hitting speaker, known in Washington during the 20 years prior to 1936 in which he represented the seventeenth district as "the watchdog of the treasury."

He is one of four gunning for Garrett, the others being Otis Miller of Anson, district attorney for Taylor, Jones and Fisher committee. Sam Russell, district judge of the Stephensville district, and Joe Shepard of Eastland county.

Blanton charges that Garrett, who defeated Blanton in 1936 and has held the office since, has not opened his mouth on the floor of the national house. He cites his own record as a member of the sub-committee for war department appropriations, declaring that if recommendations of the sub-committee had been followed recently heavy appropriations would have been unnecessary and "preparedness would have been going on the past four years."

McFarlane, an ardent new-dealer who represented the thirteenth district six years prior to 1938 when he was defeated by Gossett, has waged an active campaign, his principal platform plank being an appeal to re-elect President Roosevelt. Another candidate for Gossett's post is C. H. Ripley, a WPA employee.

Y. plant, will help build one of the 75,000-horsepower generators which will turn waters stored behind the government-built Bonneville, Ore. dam into electricity for industrial production.

Gossett paid a hurried visit to his district during the recent congressional recess, but although some friends have worked for him, there has been little campaigning in his behalf.

Eagle, an attorney who twice served the eighth district as congressman, is Thomas' only opponent. He voluntarily retired from the house in 1936 to make an unsuccessful race for the United States senate against Morris Sheppard. Thomas succeeded Eagle in the house and has served two terms. Eagle has not made an active campaign but claims Thomas is inefficient.

Cross, after representing the eleventh district eight years, in 1936 retired without offering for re-election. He advocated old age pensions of $45 a month for all over 60, payable by the federal government, preparedness as a guarantee against war and completion of the Brazos river conservation and reclamation project. Poage backed candidates for a third term on his warm support of new deal politics.

No marked issues and no mud-slinging have appeared but the campaign in the eighteenth district to inherit the mantle of Congressman Marvin Jones is sharp. Jones, chairman of the house agriculture committee, will retire next January to the bench of the U. S. court of claims.

The candidates include two state representatives, Eugene Worley of Shamrock and Robert Allen Harp of Cee Vee. Others are E. T. (Dusty) Miller of Amarillo, former law partner of Jones; Jim Cade of Amarillo, who opposed Jones in 1936 and 1938; Henry Bishop of Amarillo, a former district judge and district attorney; Tom Elsey of Perryton, a ranchman; Dennis Zimmerman of Tulla, a lawyer; Deskins Wells of Wellington, newspaper publisher; R. V. Converse of Spearman, Townsendite; Lewis P. Fields of Amarillo, insurance man; Lee McConnell of Pampa, oil and grain man, and Lewis Goodrich of Shamrock, an attorney who was a candidate for attorney general in 1938.

In the twentieth district, Mrs. Frances Haskell Edmondson of San Antonio, opposing Rep. Paul J. Kilday of the same city, has conducted a personal solicitation campaign. Mrs. Edmondson, daughter of Charles N. Haskell, first governor of Oklahoma, is co-chairman of the state Democratic executive committee.

Wright Patman of Texarkana, with a six-term record, is opposed in the first district by State Rep. Howard Smith of Sulphur Springs and R. G. Waters of Texarkana, state casualty insurance commissioner. Smith and Waters are campaigning actively while Patman has remained in Washington.

Congressman Dies, who represents the second district, has opposition from W. F. Hill of Port Arthur linotype operator and labor leader, and James L. Latimer, likewise of Port Arthur and a building contractor.

Twenty-seven year-old Lindley Beckworth of East Mountain, "baby" member of congress, is opposed for re-election to his second term from the third district by Frank Beznoli of Tyler, a lawyer and a former district attorney. Beckworth is another who was staged in Washington but his father, O. J. Beckworth, is campaigning for him. Beznoli has been stumping the district for three months.

Sam Rayburn of Bonham, house majority leader, has opposition from Dr. Bevin R. Galbraith, physician of Honey Grove, who has made a casual medicine his platform but has not campaigned actively. Rayburn represents the fourth district.

In the ninth district, J. J. Mansfield of Columbus, chairman of the house rivers and harbors committee who is asking election to his thirteenth term, is opposed by State Senator L. J. Sulak of Lagrave, a newspaper publisher, and C. O. Foerster of Richmond, a nurseryman.

Fritz G. Lanham of Fort Worth, chairman of the public buildings and grounds committee and for 11 terms representative of the twelfth district, has for an opponent State Rep. Jack Langdon of Glen Rose and Fort Worth. Langdon, an attorney and one-time football star at Texas Christian university, is one of the "immortal 56" who blocked passage of "S. J. R. 12," proposed sales-natural resource tax constitutional amendment rejected at the last session of the legislature. Langdon has been quietly soliciting votes and has made a few speeches.

In the fourteenth district, Richard M. Kieberg of Corpus Christi is challenged for re-election to a sixth term by Gabe Garrett, newspaper publisher, and Wesley Seale, an attorney, both also of Corpus Christi. Garrett is an advocate of the Townsend plan. Seale stands the 100 per cent for Roosevelt and the new deal program. Kieberg has opposed some administration measures.

Running for a fourth term from the nineteenth district, George H. Mahon, formerly of Colorado City and voting in Lubbock county this year, has two opponents, State Rep. C. L. Harris of Spur and M. D. Ramsey, Floyd county farmer who claims support from pension group. The activity has been chiefly hand-shaking by Harris and Ramsey.

Continuing WPA and other similar organizations until a more permanent solution is found for our unemployment problems. 4. Equal and uniform pension payments by the federal government in all of the states. Summing up, I will say that I will work for everything that will bring about national unity to the end that this democratic form of government will continue forever. I have qualified myself to serve you in the national house of representatives by first serving in the state house of representatives, and a man who does not have the ambition to advance himself will not have the ambition to advance his community or his country.

National Defense Supplants Politics

WASHINGTON, July 22 (AP)—National defense supplants politics in the capital temporarily today as congress returned from recess to tackle a dozen and one problems which may prolong the session many weeks.

The order of business for the senate and house this week had not been determined as Democratic leaders came back to their desks from the Chicago convention, but committees faced heavy schedules.

Chairman Woodrum (D-Va.) of the state deficiency appropriations subcommittee announced the start of hearings (at 9:30 a. m. C. S. T.) on the request of President Roosevelt for another $4,800,000,000 for defense. Woodrum predicted the big bill, raising the current defense outlay to about $15,000,000,000, would be ready for house debate in two weeks.

Within a few days, the treasury department will present to congressional committees its tentative plan for an excess profits tax.

Already in the legislative mill were the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill and a proposal to permit the President to mobilize the National Guard in continental emergencies. Senate and house military committees arranged to resume hearings on the training measure this week.

Diamond Field In Arkansas May Be Reopened Soon

MURFREESBORO, Ark., July 22 (AP)—They're planning to reopen North America's only diamond field near this southwest Arkansas farming town now that war has disrupted the old world jewel trade, and the news brings back memories to 82-year-old John W. Huddleston.

Once the field was his—a part of his unprofitable 50-acre farm; and it was Huddleston—"Diamond John" to folks hereabouts—from the "blue mud" that made the tract such a poor agriculture venture.

He remembers how he picked up the stone, took it home, scrubbed it clean with a hair brush.

"Looks like a diamond," he told his wife and children.

"Might be," said Mrs. Huddleston, unimpressed.

He took the thing to town, displayed it at a store there, eventually had it examined by experts. It was a 2 3/8-carat diamond.

"Diamond John" sold his farm shortly afterward for a reported $36,000, moved to nearby Arkadelphia, where according to his own story "thieves and poachers" disguised as salesmen got most of his fortune. The rest just dwindled away.

Today he lives alone in a little cottage here, beneficiary of a 35-per-month old age pension check from the state welfare department. He still is keenly interested in the future of his discovery, although he no longer owns any actual interest in it.

Power Firms Seek To Prevent Strike

MEXICO CITY, July 22 (AP)—Representatives of employees of six subsidiary plants of the Electric Bond and Share company prepared today to resume conversations with the department of labor to prevent a strike which would tie up electric service in the states of Tamaulipas, Vera Cruz, Puebla, Zacatecas, Sinaloa and Coahuila.

The workers have threatened a strike because of the refusal of the United States-owned company to grant wage increase demands.
