Wins Award

College Station, Spl... Bill Stansell of Fluvanna has been presented the Master Dairyman's Award by the Texas Dairy Herd Improvement Association (TDHIA) and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The award was presented recently at the ninth annual meeting of the TDHIA at College Station.

The Master Dairyman Award is presented to the top two dairymen in the state each year. It is based on herd production during the past three years and on the type of management operations carried out by the dairymen, notes Dr. Michael Tomaszewski dairy specialist with the Extension Service. The other recipient of the award was Wayne Alexander of Decatur.

Stansell, a member of the Lone Star Dairy Herd Improvement Association, started in the dairy business in 1959 in partnership with his brother. After six years, he became the sole owner of the business, and in 1965 went to an all registered Holstein herd. Stansell is currently serving as president of the Texas Holstein-Friesian Association and has served on the board of directors of the association for a number of years. In 1975 his herd of 89 cows produced 17,898 pounds of milk and 595 pounds of fat. He and his wife have three girls and two boys, both of whom now are partners in the dairy. One son, John, has a degree in dairy science from Texas A&M University.

Tax Incentives Proposed

Sen. John Tower has introduced legislation this week to provide tax incentives for physicians, dentists and optometrists who practice at least two years in a designated physician-shortage area.

Tower said the bill would result in immediate and voluntary correction of the health manpower shortage and ease the crisis in thousands of communities in a short time.

He reported that there are 15 Texas counties without any practicing physician, according to 1973 census figures. No optometrists are practicing in 106 Texas counties while 42 counties lack the services of a dentist.

"While rural counties often illustrate the most obvious maldistribution, certain sections of the urban counties have equally high ratios of physician-to-patients," added Tower.

The bill would amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to allow a proportional deduction of taxable income at a diminished rate for each of the first five years that a physician, dentist, or optometrist practices in a hard-pressed rural or urban area. The Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare or his delegate in cooperation with state health planning agencies would designate the needy areas.

In the first year of practice, $20,000 could be deducted, $15,000 the second year, $10,000 the third, $7,500 the fourth, and $5,000 the fifth year.

"This tax incentive concept creates a financial encouragement for the physician, dentist or optometrist to practice in the area where he or she can do the most good," Tower said. "It does not, however, dictate the area in which he must practice."

"My proposal would use existing governmental mechanisms. It will not require the establishment of yet another bureaucracy to carry out yet another federal program. To narrow the gap in the most critical manpower-shortage areas at a minimal cost to the federal government should be a priority item," Tower continued.

"There is probably not one state that does not have medically underserved areas," Tower noted. "Generally speaking, passage of this legislation would benefit rural and inner city areas all over the country."

"No New Taxes"

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce, at its recent 1975 Mid-Year Meeting, supported Governor Briscoe's stated position that "No New State Taxes are needed in the next session of the Texas Legislature". The WTCC went on to call on all 46 West Texas Legislators and 10 West Texas State Senators, "work vigorously with the Governor to this end."

E. Bruce Street, Chairman of the WTCC State Affairs Committee, which originated the endorsement said: "We support the Governor's position and feel it is entirely reasonable and possible. Taxpayers are already overburdened with unneeded taxes for programs that are not necessary or much too big and wasteful. It is time for all Texans to take a cold, hard look at the flood of recent new programs for city, county and education that have been spawned by so-called matching grants and grants of the state and federal governments. Many of these programs are not needed, are non-productive, and are costing the Texas taxpayer more and more in money and trouble and creating little or no benefits."

"Government is too big", Street continued, "and it is way past time to shrink government size and cost back to fit the needs and wishes of the private citizen rather than the desires of state and federal bureaucrats."

Opinions On State Roads

Texans have been fortunate to have developed one of the nation's best highway systems with one of the lowest gasoline taxes.

But Reagan Houston, chairman of the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission, acknowledged to the Dallas Morning News that toll roads may become the answer to the increasing revenue bind.

Inflation that has spiraled construction and maintenance costs and declining federal support will severely curtail highway projects. An estimated $11 billion for projects are needed in the state, and the commission estimates only that less than $3 billion in state and federal support will be available in the next few years.

"We simply don't have the funds required to build needed freeways," Houston said.

Highway officials have adamantly opposed wide use of toll roads for important projects.

The logical answer would be to increase the state gasoline tax to finance the increased highway costs. But political pressure could block an increase.

If so, Texans can prepare themselves to do without new highways -- or they can plan to finance them with tolls.

So says The Dallas Morning News. It seems illogical to rural areas to raise the tax on gasoline to pay for freeways that the majority would seldom, if ever, use.

Governor Hears Plans

Austin, December 1, 1975-- Governor Briscoe met last week with Hugh L. Scott, President of the Texas Safety Association, and Lew McNeil, Regional Director of the Highway Users Federation, to outline plans for working with the Governor's Office of Traffic Safety on an 18 month statewide citizen campaign for increased traffic safety measures.

Kickoff for the campaign will be a Texas Citizens 3 by 80 Traffic Safety Conference January 20-21 in Austin, to be sponsored by the Texas Safety Association and the Highway Users Federation, in cooperation with the Office of Traffic Safety.

Scott and McNeil cited the recent sharp rise in Texas traffic fatalities and critical needs in current Texas traffic safety laws as strong indication of the need for citizen support of administrative and legislative activities on local and state levels.

The two organizations pledged their support in carrying out information and education programs and providing assistance to service organizations and concerned citizen groups throughout the state.

The 3 x 80 theme is part of a nationwide campaign to reduce traffic fatalities to not more than three per 100 million vehicle miles by the year 1980.

Parents Club Meets

Twenty-one first grade children presented a Christmas program for the Elementary Parent's Club last Tuesday. The young students entertained over twenty mothers and guests. The first grade, Miss Steadman, and Mr. Parker are to be commended on a great job.

A holiday bake sale is scheduled in conjunction with the December 16, high school basketball game with Sands. Each elementary mother is asked to donate a Christmas sweet to be sold during the game. All food must be at the gym by 4:30 P.M.; game time is 5:00 P.M. Proceeds from this project will be used to furnish Christmas treats for the elementary students.

All elementary mothers are invited to attend the next meeting, January 8, 1976. Merry Christmas and Happy New Year!

FHA Meeting

On December 2, 1975 the F.H.A. monthly meeting was held. The purpose of the meeting was to reveal Big and Little Sisters and to talk about upcoming projects. Secret Grandparents were chosen and everybody was encouraged to do a good job. Deidre Tucker, president gave the report on how much money we made on our Christmas project of selling wrapping paper.

We would like to thank everybody that supported our project. Our cookbook is still being worked on. We encourage everybody to submit their recipes and a name for naming the Cook Book. The meeting was adjourned by our president and the creed was repeated.

The final date for submitting recipes for the Bicentennial Cookbook is Jan. 5.

Food Show

Five Borden County 4-H's were among 150 other members who competed in the District II Food Show in Lubbock, December 6.

Lyndy Doyle won a blue ribbon in the side dish division. receiving red ribbons were Clay Grose, Stephanie Stephens Kim Wills, and Travis Rinehart.

Borden County was commended by Mrs. Catherine Crawford, District leader from Lubbock for the efforts of the children, parents, and adult leaders.

Female Redskin

Sophia Magnoud is the only female member of the Redskins, a midget league football team in Boone, N.C.

The 95-pound, 4-foot 11-inch 13-year-old admits to being "a bit of a tomboy." She is not in the game so much because she's a "women's liberator," but simply because she likes playing football, she told a reporter. And she plays it well, according to her coach.

The coach said her presence on the team bothered some of the boys at first, but what bothered them most was the force and accuracy with which she is able to execute her blocks. Sophia often finds herself pitted against boys who outweigh her by as much as 40 pounds. But she can handle them. "She's a smart player," said Redskin coach Randy Sain. "That's why she's able to play against bigger boys."

While Sophia's foray into male-dominated football was greeted with scorn and apprehension by some, she is determined to take her bruises and finish out the season. And next year she is considering plying her skills on the freshman team.

Jer's Greetings

As we stand poised to celebrate the 200th birthday of our federal union of separate states, we should be re-affirming our belief in federalism. But the opposite seems to hold true. President Ford's decision to bail out New York City is one of a long series of decisions which have eroded the strength of the federalist position. Were the Founding Fathers allowed a visit to the nation they created, they would scarcely recognize the havoc we have wrought—the chaos we have created.

Granted, the erosion of the strength of local and state governments has not come with the Ford administration, or even in this generation. As early as 1825, Thomas Jefferson was writing of his alarm over "the rapid strides with which the federal branch of our government is advancing towards the usurpation of all the rights reserved to the states, and the consolidation in itself of all powers, foreign and domestic..."

Now just stop and reflect upon the growth of our federal government's powers since 1825. The federal government now has direct control over the personal use of our incomes thru the income tax. Our local schools are now federal schools. By accepting revenue sharing, our counties and cities and states have forfeited the right of self-government. The Social Security system has relegated the person over 65 to the role of a pauper—that of being completely subservient to an all powerful government. The welfare state has taken the responsibility for the downtrodden away from the individual, the church and the local government. Our voting laws and criminal statutes are new under the federal umbrella. The powers of local and state governments have become only administrative—that of administering what is dictated from the top.

As far as New York City is concerned, we all know that they broke the old economic principle of not spending more than you take in. But isn't it perplexing that President Ford has allowed them to shift the problem to the federal government? Uncle Sam has not been very prudent himself. That simple economic law has certainly not been put into effect on the federal level. Washington is just as broke as New York City and yet is willing to go further in debt in order to aid a city. And once the precedent is set, how many more cities, counties and states will form a line at the trough?

Another important axiom is also being ignored. With federal aid, comes federal control. Anything the federal government pays for, it controls. If you doubt that truth, you have only to look at the schools. With federal aid has come control over text books, curriculum, sports, housing, and even dress codes. Busing for racial reasons is a by-product of federal aid.

By surrendering control of city budgets, the city will be surrendering itself to complete financial dominance by an all powerful central government. We will have forfeited our right of independence. We will have made a mockery of the federal system which our Founding Fathers so carefully constructed.

HEW CHARGES DISCRIMINATION AT TCU AND OTHER CAMPUSES.

Charges At TCU

Delivered on Newsroom, KERA-TV, Dallas, a P.B.S. Station, on Wednesday, October 1, 1975, 6:30 P.M. by David A. Williams.

Yesterday an Office of Civil Rights spokesman in Dallas announced that on the basis of interviews conducted at T.C.U. last week, they will determine whether there is racial discrimination at the university. The charges were originally filed by the T.C.U. chapter of the NAACP in the Spring of 1974 and they allegedly involved the faculty, staff, student body, Greek sororities and fraternities, and the university baseball team.

The charges are nebulous, but they amount to that there is not enough black representation on the campus, although last year 3 per cent of freshmen were members of minorities, but that now the figure is 10 per cent.

It appears to me that what the Office of Civil Rights is doing is applying the same old discredited litmus test to the schools. If there are not enough blacks, browns, reds, yellows, pinks, or blues in any school area, that is proof positive that discrimination is practiced. According to H.E.W.'s regulations, in order for an institution to be charged with discrimination it is not necessary for there to be active, conscious, or even written rules designed to be injurious to a race, ethnic group, or sex. All that is need for a discrimination charge to stick is the lack of any minority to be represented in a school function. According to our American tradition of law, a person is innocent until proven guilty, and the accusing party must submit evidence to substantiate the allegation. Accordingly, T.C.U. Dean of Students Elizabeth Proffer insists that when the federal bureaucracy hassles an institution the specific nature of the charges must be revealed. "You do have the right to prepare your defense," she explained.

Whatever the specific charges may be, T.C.U. stands to lose approximately $1.5 million in federal aid if found guilty of this mysterious sum. It should also be pointed out that S.M.U. has been hit with the same allegations. For the next two years Greek rush at S.M.U. will be monitored by the H.E.W. as a result of allegations of ethnic and sex discrimination during rush. Chancellor Willis M. Tate was informed of the H.E.W. ruling in a letter he received last October. S.M.U. will comply with the ruling which requires not only statistical reports of the ethnic sex identification of each "rushee" in all stages of the process, from sign-up to initiation during 1974, and 1975 but also reports on programming initiated by the Greeks to eliminate discrimination.

To the outsider this action by the H.E.W. illustrates the callous attitude that the government has for the privacy of colleges and organizations. Who can observe this move by the H.E.W. to determine the composition of fraternities, without seriously considering that George Orwell's 1984 is on the scene?

The decision of fraternal groups to be with people of similar interests, background, and even racial and ethnic origin has always been an American principle. I would not be surprised if in the future the Sons of Norway are required to admit Italians and the Knights of Columbus forced to open up to Moslems. That form of insanity is closer than you think.

Kikers Kolumn

Insects On The Move

Insects will soon be looking for a warmer place of residence, and it will probably be your home.

Insects likely to be moving indoors include cockroaches, elm leaf beetles, boxelder bugs, fall webworms, crickets, clover mites, house flies, cluster flies and spikers.

The best way to halt the insect invasion is to spray the outside foundation of your home, says Kiker, a county agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

He advises spraying walls, porches, steps, baseboards, doorways and window ledges with an approved insecticide to control crawling insects.

"The best way to keep cockroaches out of the house is to keep it clean," says Kiker. "If they do get in, spray or dust window and door frames, drainboards, under the sink, in cracks and holes, around pipes and in cupboards."

If ants are a problem in your home, try to find their nest and spray it. You may have to remove some flooring or carpeting to find it.

Crickets sometimes cause damage to fabrics and goods and can be controlled by spraying on the ground and around the foundation of the house and the edges of sidewalks, patios and curbs.

"When spraying, keep rooms well-ventilated and keep people out of the spraying area for several hours after application or until the spray dries," says Kiker.

As always, pay close attention to the manufacturer's instructions when using any insecticide.

Keep Holiday Meals Safe To Eat

College Station- Holiday food can carry food poisoning bacteria--but simple precautions can prevent food poisoning and ruined holidays, Frances Reasonover, a foods and nutrition specialist, says.

"Bacteria need the right combination of time, temperature and moisture to grow. When foods remain between 40 and 120 degrees F. for three or four hours, bacteria grow and make the food unsafe to eat.

"And the only way to kill the bacteria is to heat food to 170 degrees F. Freezing doesn't kill bacteria, it simply slows growth," the specialist said.

She's with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Turning to specific food safety guidelines, she said to thaw the holiday turkey in the refrigerator. Fresh or freshly thawed turkey should be refrigerated and used within 24 hrs.

"When preparing the turkey, cook it until done throughout with an internal temperature of 180 degrees F. And if it is to be stuffed, wait until just before placing the bird in the oven to stuff the cavity.

Important Meeting

Dear Committee Members;

Each of you have been working on various committees such as 4-H, crops, and livestock. Your knowledge, time, and effort has greatly improved the economy as well as the family living in Borden Co.

Now it is time for us to tie each of the committee groups into one over-all Program Building Committee.

The Program Building Committee will consist of committee chairman and other leaders in the community.

The purpose of the Program Building Committee is to review and plan programs and activities to be carried out by the County Extension Agent and committee member.

This meeting is very important to develop a strong Extension Program in Borden Co.

The meeting will be at the Borden County District Court room Dec. 16 at 7:00 P.M.

Progress is in your hands. See you Tuesday night.

Sincerely,
Earnest Kiker

Telcot Performing

Lubbock--The electronic selling system of Plains Cotton Cooperative Association known as TELCOT is in its fourth week of operation and performing as planned, C.L. Boggs, Assistant General Manager of the 20,000 member association, said this week.

Volume harvesting and ginning will be underway this week in nearly all areas of the Southwest territory served by PCCA. The association expects traffic on the selling system to be heavy throughout the season.

"We have already moved several hundred lots of cotton involving thousands of bales, of the season," Mr. Boggs stated. "We are confident the system can accommodate the hundreds of thousands of bales we anticipate receiving. This system will obtain the best competitive price for the producer."

TELCOT incorporates the use of modern-day technology, relying on television, relying on televisual Cathode Ray Tube screens and high-speed date printers to offer PCCA members' cotton for bid to major merchants situated in Lubbock, Dallas and Memphis.

Sixteen merchant offices are linked by electronic circuits to the PCCA computer in Lubbock. Each participating merchant office is equipped with a CRT unit and data printer.

A gin can call the TELCOT center and obtain the general price level for any particular list of cotton. If a producer

Pesticide Rules Approved; EPA to Regulate Applicators

AUSTIN--At a hearing held in Austin November 20, representatives of farmers and ranchers, chemical companies and commercial pesticide applicators approved the proposed regulations of the Texas Pesticide Control Act.

Meanwhile, Texas is still waiting for word from Washington, D.C. to learn what pesticides will be covered by recent Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regulations on pesticide applicators, Agriculture Commissioner John C. White said.

The State Legislature passed the Texas Pesticide

Control Act which will bring the state into conformity with Federal regulations as they are stated now. But the EPA has not approved the state plan, according to Commissioner White.

The state law requires all commercial applicators to be certified, but exempts farmers. The Federal law, however, requires all persons supervising applications of certain "restricted use" pesticides to be certified.

White stressed that according to Federal regulations, only one certified applicator per farm will be required, that is, the person who will directly supervise applications.

MEMBER F.D.I.C.

An improved attitude toward the intermediate and long-range future of High Plains cotton in world markets is the most obvious change noted in W.B. Criswell of Idalou, President of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., since his return from the 34th Plenary Meeting of the International Cotton Advisory Committee (ICAC).

Fifty cotton consuming and producing countries were represented at the six-day ICAC meeting, held November 10-15 in Abidjan, Ivory Coast, Africa.

Criswell was encouraged primarily by indications that foreign cotton producing countries may decrease, and almost certainly will not increase, the acreage devoted to cotton any time in the near future. "Almost without exception," Criswell relates, "increasing food needs and prices for food crops in these countries are giving strong competition for available acreage."

This fact, plus expectations for a 1976 buildup of world cotton consumption and the somewhat surprising realization that cotton's cost-price relationship around the world is pretty much the same as in this country, Criswell continued, "leads me to believe that the High Plains will be a substantial supplier of world fiber demands, at improving levels of profitability, for years to come."

ICAC membership is composed of 50 countries interested in the production, export, import and consumption of cotton. A major ICAC function is to collect and disseminate complete and timely facts on cotton production, trade, consumption, stocks, prices and other developments affecting the world cotton situation.

While it has no enforcement powers, the committee also suggests to member governments measures considered suitable and practicable for the furtherance of a sound international cotton economy.

Criswell was invited to serve as a producer advisor on the 13-member official U.S. delegation to the meeting by Kenneth E. Frick, Administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. Frick headed up the U.S. group and presented the official U.S. position on cotton matters to assembled delegates. Another Lubbock member of the delegation was Dan Davis, General Manager of Plains Cotton Cooperative Association.

The Joint Plains Cotton Growers-Lubbock Cotton Exchange Crop Estimates Committee now projects cotton production from the 25 PCG counties on the Plains at 1,441,500 bales, down 292,200 bales from its previous estimate of 1,733,700.

Asked why the big reduction (16.8%), one member of the committee said, "The committee, its sources of information and its advisors were fooled on November 1 just like most farmers. We were even criticized at the time for setting the average area yield at a relatively low 352 pounds, because the crop looked better than that. But now that the harvest is well underway, the committee and everyone else is seeing that gin turnouts, mike values, boll size and lint weight are all below the expectations a month ago, and it is the consensus of the committee that the average per-acre yield on the Plains will be only about 294 pounds."

The following chart shows the committee's county by county estimates as of December 3, together with the November estimate for comparison.

Holly Is Traditional

Because holly grows in most parts of the world, for centuries it has been used as a decoration at festivals. In ancient times people believed that anyone who wore a wreath made of the berries would be gifted with second sight. Holly bears fruit and stays green in winter. Thus, it became a symbol of immortality. During the rise of the early church, many Christmas legends were linked to holly. One says that holly was the burning bush from which God spoke to Moses in the wilderness. Another has it that because the holly hid Jesus from Herod's soldiers during the flight into Egypt, it was blessed with green leaves all winter. In certain early yule celebrations holly represented the male and ivy the female. Whichever was brought into the house first at Christmas told whether the husband or the wife would rule the home for the next year. Few of these legends persist today. Holly has become a part of the traditional Christmas Decoration, and its beauty needs no further explanation.

Nutrition Guide

Consumers Union has recently published "Eating Right for Less", a book it describes as a "practical guide to food and nutrition written and designed for older people." The 80-page book is the first in a projected series of informative booklets for elderly consumers. The book shows how any older person can eat well on just over $10 a week. The book costs $2.

Tick Research Building Begun

Construction has begun on a research building at Falcon Heights, Texas, which will be used for developing means of protecting cattle from tick fever, Agriculture Commissioner John C. White has announced.

Researchers at the Falcon Heights facility will be seeking an effective and inexpensive inoculation to produce immunity to tick fever. Results of the research will be shared with cattlemen throughout the world.

The research conducted at Falcon Heights could eventually open extensive tropical markets for Texas cattle exports, the Commissioner predicted.

The center is located on the U.S. Department of Agriculture facility on an isolated peninsula below Falcon Dam on the Rio Grande River, south of Laredo. Construction is expected to be completed in January 1976.

wishes to offer his cotton at that "going price" level, his listing will be electronically flashed to the data printers in the merchant offices. Merchants are given a 15-minute period in which to submit bids on a list of cotton. PCCA also is participating in the bidding. The association will bid "in the blind" on the lists of cotton.

"These 16 merchants in the TELCOT system are among the strongest, best-organized and solidly-financed merchants in the U.S. cotton industry and along with PCCA probably make up about three-fourths of the market for Southwest cotton," Mr. Boggs said. "Such coverage of the market, plus the beneficial impact of PCCA's presence in the bidding, is bound to provide the best competitive price for a member's cotton."

He invites all members to stop by the PCCA offices in Lubbock to see the TELCOT center in operation."

LAMESA,

RALPH DE TOLEDANO COLUMN

Washington--The situation at the White House, to quote "Wonderland's" Alice, gets curiously and curiously. Beginning with the confusion over Vice President Nelson Rockefeller's bow-out and the firing of Defense Secretary James Schlesinger--the most brilliant and principled member of the Cabinet--and continuing with President Ford's feeble performance at his last press conference, it grows more inglorious by the day.

And the questions pile up--questions which go directly to President Ford's contention that he is running an "open" administration and demonstrate instead the Byzantine nature of White House politics.

The President tells us that Secretary Schlesinger was doing an excellent job. Why, then, was he fired? Enough has leaked out of the White House to convince every political observer here that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has been planting knives in Schlesinger's back and that Mr. Ford has been increasingly irate over the Defense Secretary's refusal to support a military budget which is detrimental to the national security.

White House sources argue that Donald Rumsfeld was "promoted" when he was named to succeed Schlesinger, and that along with Kissinger, he will now have the President's ear for one hour a day. But as Mr. Ford's chief-of-staff, Rumsfeld had access to the President at all hours of the day or night.

The same sources tell us that Kissinger has been cut down several notches by a reorganization which deprives him of his post as "national security adviser." But his replacement is Kissinger's man who can be counted on never to exercise independent judgment. Moreover, Mr. Ford says that his Secretary of State will have a "dominant" role in foreign policy.

At his press conference, Mr. Ford said that he had kept Schlesinger and CIA Director William Colby at their posts only because he wanted continuity with the previous administration. He was replacing them in order to have his own "team." But both Kissinger and Rumsfeld were also holdovers from the Nixon administration. Does the President intend to fire them at a later date?

On the Saturday before Schlesinger was fired, he met with Mr. Ford.

No word was uttered of his imminent departure. What happened on the following day to make Mr. Ford suddenly yearn for a team of his own?

It is being said that the President intended to release Rockefeller's letter, stepping down as a vice presidential candidate in 1976, on Sunday, with the announcement of the Schlesinger firing to come the following Wednesday. This sequence presumably would mollify restive conservative Republicans and soften the Schlesinger blow. Who leaked the news of the firing to the press, and why? Was it a member of Kissinger's entourage, fearful that Mr. Ford might realize the damage he was doing to himself and change his mind?

These are but a few of the questions which have been echoing in Washington.

The pundits assert that whatever those answers may be, they are tied to President Ford's worry over the rising political fortunes of Ronald Reagan. It is no secret that reports reaching the White House indicate that, as of now, Reagan would win both the New Hampshire and Florida primaries.

But how could the President possibly believe that firing a dedicated American and replacing him as Secretary of Defense with an ambitious time-server could help him or slow down Gov. Reagan? The mind, as they say, boggles.

But perhaps the whole business is of a piece with the belief of Mr. Ford's political advisers that he is making points with the voters by helping to push New York City down the drain. Other cities will follow, as surely as the night the day, and Mr. Ford will be held responsible.

It may be that there are no answers to the questions that what happened is merely a symptom of this administration's aimless ways. So far, the only great applause of the Schlesinger firing has come from Moscow.
