I Heard - - -

Ray "Fireball" McKernan, who was Mrs. McKernan has just returned from a trip through the northeastern states and eastern Canada, telling one on himself. He said he went into a barber shop in Quebec to be shaved and not one of the barbers could speak English. The barber who was shaving Ray, who weighs a good 300 pounds, turned to one of the other barbers and remarked "grand cheval" which translated means "big horse." Ray, who spent considerable time in France with Uncle Sam's army in 1917 and 1918, didn't tell the barber he understood French until after he had been shaved. Ray plans to go back to Quebec and spend several weeks next year.

'Time Flies,' Says FDR Of House Jolt

The War Today

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
King Carol of Rumania has lost his throne through a combination of circumstances, not least of which has been the shadow-rule of his titian-haired sweetheart, Madame Lupescu—but when all is said and done it represents another great victory for Adolf Hitler.

Rumania has entered Nazidom, and of that there is but one master—the Fuehrer. He has gained a new and important disciple for his teachings. He has gained access, hitherto disputed, to the agricultural wealth and oil of the country, thus strengthening his arm against Britain. He has erected a strategic barrier against Russia, and furthered his own politico-economic control of the Balkans.

So far as the records go he was an honest servant of his people. In fact, when I was in Rumania in the fall of 1938, the king was in process of trying to clean up his political house—to eliminate graft which was said to have weakened his regime.

Late News

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (AP)—Representative Schafer (R-Wis.) proposed today that the Burke-Wadsworth military training bill be amended to require all members of congress under 65 to register for the draft.

'Moral Suasion' Only Weapon Of Governor

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 6 (AP)—Attorney General Gerald C. Mann said in an opinion today the means by which the governor can compel state laws to be faithfully executed is virtually limited to "moral suasion."

Congratulations—

Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Harrison are the parents of a son, weighing nine pounds, born at a local hospital. He has been named Darrell Iven.

Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Savage are the parents of a daughter born yesterday afternoon at Pampa-Jarrett hospital. She weighed seven pounds, 14 ounces.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (AP)—The house refused twice today to change the registration age limit of 21 to 18, inclusive, in the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP)—President Roosevelt renewed today his plea for speedy congressional action on conscription, and the defense tax and appropriation bills, but declined comment on the house vote to delay actual drafting of men for a 60-day period of volunteer recruitment.

Asked at a press conference to comment on the house action, subject to another vote before the bill is finally acted on, the chief executive said he could not comment on any of the three major bills pending except to say Tempus Fugit (time flies).

The excess profits tax bill now is pending before the senate finance committee. The $5,250,000,000 emergency defense appropriation bill awaits final senate action before going to the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt added that the quicker the three bills go through the quicker the government will step up the national defense program.

When the president declined comment on the house vote to delay conscription, a reporter noted that at a prior press conference, when a similar delay amendment was pending in the senate, the president had read from a memorandum.

He referred reporters to the stenographic notes as to what actually was said at the other interview, refusing to become involved in an argument with the newsmen over just what was said.

Rudely jolted by their temporary failure to lock a postponement of the draft, house conscription leaders rallied their forces today to stave off more moves for the modification of the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military service bill.

The unexpected reversal occurred late yesterday when the house voted, 185 to 155, to defer the inauguration of conscription for 60 days while an effort was made to obtain 400,000 recruits for the army by one-year voluntary enlistment.

Those in the conscription ranks insisted the Burke-Wadsworth bill was in no danger of eventual defeat and opponents of the measure did not dispute them. Indications were that conscription leaders

All-American Show Has Style World In Flutter Today

NEW YORK, Sept. 5 (AP)—A pair of white bird's wings perched on the bosom, a new neckline which falls in a narrow "V" to the waist, and slim dinner dresses with their skirts slit up to the knee had the American style world today in a flutter.

Those were among the highlights at one of the most scintillating fashion shows ever held in this country—last night's showing of Berford Goodman's American-designed collection.

Accompanied by music and the tinkle of champagne glasses, in the manner of Parisian style shows before the war, mannikins paraded in 300 originals in one of a series of major showings on upper Fifth avenue.

Suits and daytime dresses were simple, beautifully fitted, usually with slightly flared skirts and squared shoulders.

For evening, the imagination ran riot with luxurious fabrics, skirts either stem-like and slit to the knee or bouffant and billowy, and startling transparent effects obtained by posing black lace bodies on a flesh-colored base.

A strapless evening gown had its décolletage bordered with ostrich tips.

Sorority Pin Is Never Label Of Social Success

By RUTH MILLETT

Mamas who are worried sick for fear their college-freshman daughters won't get sorority bids may be interested in what the dean of women of one of the large state universities has to say on the subject.

This dean found that membership in a sorority doesn't lessen a girl's social problems in the least.

In fact, she says, the socially-slow girl who does join a sorority finds every one of her shortcomings emphasized. She actually suffers more than the girl who lands in a dormitory, without any sorority connections.

FINDS OWN LEVEL IN LARGE GROUP

The girl who doesn't pledge a sorority becomes part of a large group—rather than part of a small, closely-knit group that tends to be snobbish.

In the large group she finds friends among girls who are interested in the same things she is interested in. If she doesn't go over big with boys, or gets small recognition in extra-curricular activities, she needn't be apologetic or embarrassed about it. For in a large group, every girl isn't expected to be a howling success.

But the sorority girl who doesn't have many dates and doesn't land any campus offices to compensate for them, is made to feel pretty useless.

BUILDS UP FEELING OF INFERIORITY

Most of the girls in the house date a great deal. In comparison she is a dud. Most of them get themselves known on the campus. If she does not, she is made to feel she isn't doing her part to make dear Alpha the best sorority on the campus.

The feeling of shame at not being a social success often becomes extremely intense. The Dean of Women I am quoting says that in one house at her college, girls who don't

Mrs. Blake Says You

Following a radio skit given by Maurice Jones, Lillian McCutt, Rube McConnell, Vera Lard, Lillian Jordan, Audrey Fowler, members of the Business and Professional Women's club, and Mrs. N. Dudley Steele on the club collect, written by Mary Stewart, Mrs. Peacock sang the collect.

Miss Stewart played numerous piano selections as refreshments of individual cakes, punch, and mints were served at a lace covered table decorated with marigolds in a crystal bowl and tall white tapers in

Mrs. Blake says you don't know your husband till you've wintered and summered him. I say even after that he can still surprise you.

I've tried all kinds, but I always come back to LIPTON'S for tea with the full tea flavor. And say, doesn't that richness make all the difference when you're makin' teed tea!

Aunt Lu! says no woman ought to lie about her age—not with so many pension plans brewin'.

Fa says I'm a spendthrift when it comes to glasses of iced LIPTON'S TEA to the neighborhood young folks. But after a hot game of tennis, they sure enjoy it. And tea—even as gran' as LIPTON'S—costs only a half a cent a glass!

Berlin Claims Victories In British Raids

BERLIN, Sept. 6 (AP)—German pursuit planes accompanying formations reported back to Berlin today that the raiding squadrons broke through Britain's air defenses after fierce battles this morning.

Thirty-five British planes were destroyed during these engagements, informed German sources said. At one airport the Nazi attackers were reported to have destroyed 10 planes on the ground along with several hangars and accessory plants.

The German high command reported German bombers "effectively" bombed British harbors and industrial establishments last night.

It said several airports in the neighborhood of Lincoln and big oil depots at Thames Haven, in Essex, and dock facilities in East London were blasted and set afire.

German raiders engaged in furious encounters with British fighters, but came out victorious, the communique said.

Other heavy attacks were reported, made on Liverpool, Sunderland, 12 miles southeast of Newcastle; the naval base at Portsmouth, Blyth and Hull, on the northeastern coast and Newcastle.

The night attacks followed 50 raids reported yesterday in one of the heaviest assaults thus far against Britain.

Informed sources said 46 British planes and six barrage balloons were destroyed in yesterday's attacks, against the loss of only 16 German planes.

British planes continued their night raids on Germany, and at one point were reported to have killed five rural residents. Otherwise, the high command said, the damage was "not worth mentioning."

For the third successive morning, Berliners were driven into air-raid shelters by the approach of British bombing planes.

No planes appeared over the city and authoritative spokesmen declared the British were driven off by anti-aircraft defenses.

The Berlin press vented its scorn on Prime Minister Winston Churchill's address to the British house of commons yesterday, calling it "a miserable echo to Adolf Hitler's Sportsplatz speech."

Hitler's newspaper, the Volkischer Beobachter, said the further's address was judged rightly by neutral observers to be "a final, unreserved challenge to the British empire to fight."

Commercial Class Will Be Organized Monday Afternoon

Conditions to be met in organizing part time classes in commercial education were outlined today by Miss Zenobia McFarlin, high school commercial teacher, under whose direction part-time classes for adults in commercial subjects will be formed at a meeting to be held at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon at 308 high school.

Students must be employed in commercial occupations and attend classes during the working day, assumed to be from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m.

They must be 16 or older, and have left the regular full-time school, must be taught in classes separate from the regular high school classes, and not more than 30 per cent of any one class may be temporarily unemployed, meaning such person has been regularly employed in office work within the past year.

A minimum of 12 students must be enrolled and an average attendance of eight maintained. Course of study will cover 144 hours, and instruction, suitable for the average young person from 16 to 18 years of age to help the student on his present job or fit him for logical promotion.

The time each student devotes to class work must not exceed the time he spends in regular employment.

Teachers are not to fill up classes with students who offer themselves for employment merely to meet class requirements. Purpose of the course is to offer employed persons an opportunity to return to school for further instruction, thereby making themselves more proficient in their field of employment.

England 'Tending To Business' As Usual Despite Bomb Damage

LONDON, Sept. 6 (AP)—A nationwide survey by the Associated Press, completed today, shows that England is tending to "business as usual" despite the damage and death inflicted by German raiders.

From the white cliffs of Dover to Land's End on the southern coast, in the industrial Midlands and the great harbors of Hull and Liverpool, Portsmouth and Southampton, Bristol and Plymouth, our staff was permitted to go freely to see for themselves the extent of damage—and the lack of it.

Dover, focal point of attack by air and artillery across the channel, is surprisingly free of extensive destruction. The inhabitants are repairing homes and even building new ones in the face of Nazi air armadas which daily roar overhead.

At the great naval base of Portsmouth, raiders once succeeded in dropping a bomb in the courtyard of the barracks but little damage was done and no one was hurt. Most of the fatalities there have been among civilians.

At Southampton, police gave me carte blanche not only to go where I pleased but also to photograph what I pleased. One bomb had set fire to a cold storage warehouse and a few houses had been wrecked, but the streets were filled with shoppers and shoppers were not hurt. Plymouth and Bristol, although frequently attacked, showed little evidence of bombings.

Around the Greater London area, the heaviest toll has been taken in the matter of high explosive and incendiary bombs have caused negligible damage—and that chiefly to residential property. Many of the fire bombs have been extinguished quickly by AFS—auxiliary fire service—workers.

Occasionally a rumor spreads that some vast sweep of London's docks has been a target of a severe bombing, but so far no first-hand survey has borne out such reports.

Liverpool has been the target of numerous bombs, some of which started small fires on the docks, but these soon were extinguished.

People all over the nation are becoming accustomed to the banshee howling of the raid sirens. Most of them quietly take shelter at such times, although great numbers pay no attention.

American newspaper correspondents are permitted to go almost anywhere.

The censors, however, are reluctant to permit the mention of the names of towns bombed at night. They think secrecy keeps the Nazis in the dark, and to permit this information would tell them whether they had succeeded in finding their objectives.

A survey of the towns and countryside, however, gives the impression the damage is of infinitesimal proportions, and even if the whole story could be told it would only add minor specific details to what already has been told in broad outline.

Convicts Escape From Bloodhound

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 6 (AP)—The sheriff is looking into the pedigrees of two of his bloodhounds.

One, called upon to follow the scent of a man who threw a dynamite cap under an oil refinery, apparently picked up a lead. With the posse following, the dog ran straight to a hamburger stand—and stopped.

Another was taken to CoColumbia, La., to hunt for six escaped convicts. The dog found the fugitives all right but struck up such a warm friendship with them that they had to tie him to a tree to get rid of him. Officers rescued him.

Chalk Up Red Face For P. O. Employee

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 6 (AP)—"But I wasn't born in Oklahoma," persisted a negro trying to register as an alien.

Yes, the official replied, one could tell by the Alabama accent.

"But I'm an African."

The official (one must be patient) laboriously explained that African descent didn't mean one wasn't a citizen.

At the door, the negro paused. "It was born," he said desperately, "in Monrovia, Liberia, Africa."

"Oh-h-h-h," a small voice said. "Name, please."

FDR Says Costa Rica And Ecuador Are Cooperating

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today that Costa Rica and Ecuador were cooperating completely with the United States in plans for defense of the Americas, but he added that no negotiations for acquisition of additional naval and air bases were now under way with any country.

Asked about reports that Costa Rica had offered to this country, Cocos Island, about 600 miles north-west of the Panama Canal in the Pacific, for a base, the President replied that all he could say on that was that there was complete cooperation between Costa Rica and the United States in the defense of the Americas.

Another question at Mr. Roosevelt's press conference was whether the Galapago Islands, about 1,000 miles southwest of the canal, were involved in talks with Ecuador. He replied that the same reply, namely, that Ecuador was working with this country on continental defense.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized that there were no negotiations on at all to acquire bases other than those provided for Great Britain on eight of its crown colonies from Newfoundland to British Guiana in exchange for 50 over-age destroyers.

Prior to the president's meeting with the press, it was learned that Canada was seeking several hundred obsolete World War tanks and large quantities of military supplies from the United States.

The bid for the tanks apparently was receiving favorable consideration at the war department, but there was silence on the status of the bigger question of military supplies.

The disclosure that negotiations were in progress was made yesterday by General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, and Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, chairman of the American section of the Joint U. S.-Canadian defense board.

Man To Be Subject Of Lesson-Sermon

"Man" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, September 8.

The golden text is: "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ" (Romans 8:16, 17).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "These words spake Jesus . . . I have manifested Thy name unto the men which Thou gavest me out of the world; Thine they were, and Thou gavest them Me; and they have kept Thy word" (John 17:1, 6).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Keys to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spiritual man is the image or idea of God, an idea which cannot be lost nor separated from its divine Principle" (page 303).

Dempsey Wonders If There Are Teeth In Politics Act

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 6 (AP)—Rep. J. J. Dempsey (D-N. M.) called for a "showdown" today on whether there are teeth in the Hatch clean politics act in New Mexico.

Complaints from federal workers in the state's first direct primary campaign have become so numerous, Dempsey declared, that he was led to believe "certain political workers have been advised there are no teeth in the Hatch act."

"I know of no better time than this to determine that question," Dempsey declared in course of a campaign address to the Democratic senatorial nomination, and announced he would ask the department of justice to investigate.

Dempsey's opponent in the primary is Senator Dennis Chavez (D-N. M.).

A snail's pace is about 15 feet per hour, if he keeps going that long.

Land Should Be Turned Back To Grass, Says Watson

AMARILLO, Sept. 6 (AP)—Sedney H. Watson, in charge of re- greening work for the soil conservation service, says from six to eight million acres of land in Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Kansas should be turned back to grass.

He told the more than 200 government and university specialists, department of agriculture employees and stockmen attending a grass- lands conference here that many difficulties faced the regressing program and that much time and work would be required to reclaim the millions of acres now lying idle.

The conference closes today.

Hunters Warned Not To Shoot On Public Roads

Sheriff Cal. Rose today called on Gray county residents to obey the game laws of state, especially those relating to trespass and shooting from automobiles.

Prime basis of the sheriff's appeal was in connection with the recent killing of a cow by hunters. The animal belonged to Dick Walker, who has a farm seven miles north-east of Pampa.

In the city Thursday, J. D. Moseley, supervisor of region 5, Texas Game, Fish and Oyster commission, said that the law prohibits shooting firearms from cars, day or night, and that it was illegal to shoot upon, across, or along any public road.

He defined a public road as one that was open to traffic.

"There's only one way to hunt," Warden Moseley said. "That is for the hunter to go to the farmer on whose land he wants to hunt and ask permission."

"Naturally, it makes the farmer mad to see his lands entered without permission and his stock killed by hunters."

Warden Moseley asked that any county resident observing violation of the law that prohibits shooting from cars or trespass, take note of the automobile license number of the offenders and report it to officers.

To date in Gray county, aside from the killing of a cow, only violation of the hunting laws was the "jumping" of the dove season by a hunter who was fined here recently in justice court. The dove season opened on September 1 and will end on October 31. Daily bag limit is 12.

Under Warden Moseley's supervision in enforcement of the game laws in the area extending from Wichita Falls, Breckenridge, Brownwood, Odessa, and including the Panhandle, comprising 78 counties, in all.

In Pampa yesterday with Moseley was J. H. Magard of Amarillo, also a state game warden.

Working with these two men in and near Pampa the past 10 days have been Bill Pierce of Wellington and V. D. Welton of Lubbock. Pierce is with the state game commission, while Welton is a federal game warden.

New Voting Machine In House Ready

Every time the speaker calls for a record vote in the Texas house of representatives next year, electrical current will surge through 65 miles of wire but never go out the walls of the house chamber.

The new electrical voting machine, streamlined and with infinitely more gadgets than the one previously used, involves 10,890 terminal connections. If one wire was soldered to the wrong post, the machine would not work.

Workmen are now putting the finishing touches on the complex machine and it will get its first test in a week or two.

To record the votes of members it was necessary to run eight wires to each of 150 desks. But that was only the beginning. Huge panels in a cubbyhole in the gallery are the terminal point for hundreds of other wires. More than 450 wires run to one section of it. There will be 78 wires used to call page boys who will watch a call board instead of listening for the clap of a member's hands, the former system of signaling a boy.

Another brand new feature of the voting system is that it will automatically record a member's absence. If he does not press one of several buttons when a vote is called a light will flash opposite his name in the "absent" column of the huge board which shows how a lawmaker votes.

HOUSEWIFE COMES UP SMILING

A Nazi bomb wrecked her home, blasted most of the earth covering off the the family air

An Austin man who prefers to remain anonymous had a very red face recently.

Determined to find the best fishing hole in the Southwest he packed his equipment and took off. He stopped here and there but remained unconvinced that he had found the fisherman's paradise.

His perambulations took him to a neighboring state where he asked a stranger to direct him to a good fishing spot.

"Mind going about 700 miles?" the fellow asked.

"Nope," was the reply.

"Well, you go to Austin, Texas, right below the Tom Miller dam on the Colorado river, the best fishing spot in America."

P. S.: He came back home.

The third term issue will be tested nationally this fall, but State Senator Wilbourne Collier of Eastland thinks it has been tested already in Texas.

Collier was defeated for renomination for a third term and the principal issue involved in the campaign, Collier believes, was the third term.

Further concerning the wonderful voting machine of the house of representatives:

It will be used immediately when the new house convenes, which was never true of the machine which is being discarded.

That the old machine was not used for several days after previous houses met was not the fault of that apparatus, however. Instead it was because members had not been assigned permanent seats. They voted orally on organized matters, from where they happened to be sitting. After a few days, when they were seated permanently, their names were connected with the machine.

Sergeant-at-Arms Ernest Boyett this year has asked members of the new house to choose seats in advance, which will make it possible to use the machine from the moment the speaker's gavel falls.

The big, box-like control room, perched in the gallery just above the speaker's rostrum, is painted snowy white. The paint was intended to match the white walls of the hall.

But the latter are far from white, and the effect is incongruous.

Commented Boyett:

"It looks as if we will have to wash the walls or spray dust on the control room. Or maybe, they will all be the same color by the end of the next session."

Boyett was approached by a member of the state Democratic executive committee to ascertain whether he wanted to be sergeant-at-arms of the Democratic state convention at Mineral Wells September 10.

He had the assignment at the stormy presidential nominating convention where there were fist fights and general uproarious confusion for four hours. City police repeatedly intervened.

Boyett told the committeeman that if he was sergeant-at-arms at Mineral Wells, one thing might as well be understood, namely, that he would not get rough with any member of the upcoming house.

"I have a race of my own to run," he grinned. "The campaign may be over for some people but mine is just getting hot."

The sergeant-at-arms of the house is elected by the house at the start of a biennial session. His term is two years.

Attending a dinner recently given members of the capitol press corps by Olin Cuberson, new nominee for the railroad commission, Myron Blacklock of Marshall, Democratic national committeeman for Texas, was asked whether the Waco convention this year was the most turbulent he had seen. Blacklock has had long experience in politics.

"By no means," he replied. "That little number at Waco wasn't a patching to some of the Democrats we had. The one at Beaumont, when Dan Moody was governor and the main issue was whether to instruct for Al Smith, was really a hum-

Canadian Gold
During December of 1938, the province of Ontario, Canada, produced a new high of 260,878 fine ounces of gold, the bulk of which came from the Porcupine camp.

Texas, which outlanders associate only with cattle, cotton and oil, is no less famous for its rose culture. Some 16,000 varieties are grown commercially in the state at the rate of 20,000,000 rose bushes a year, or more than one-half of the world's supply. Rose crops, grown in East Texas mainly in the region of Tyler, cost some $400 an acre, nearly three-quarters of which is for labor.

Gasoline taxes paid by motor vehicle operators yearly would pay the total annual bill of admission to theaters in the United States, plus the cost of beauty preparations and beauty treatments purchased by American women, a mathematician has figured out in his idle time.

All the members of an armadillo litter are of the same sex.

Easily Pleased

A Federal official recently passed through Portland, Oregon—a city located a few miles from the Federal government's great tax-built, tax-exempt hydroelectric dam at Bonneville, on the Columbia River. In an interview, he observed that officers of the government were pleased "over the way Bonneville power is being taken by manufacturing concerns and by communities."

As the Portland Oregonian observed editorially the next day, anyone who is pleased over that is easily pleased indeed. For industry and communities have so far shown an astonishing disinclination to buy Bonneville power. Last January the Bonneville Administrator forecast that sales for the 1940 fiscal year would reach $1,000,000. Sales actually came to $367,969, about one-third of the estimate. It is astonishing how spenders of public funds invariably seem to over-estimate revenue and under-estimate cost to taxpayers.

Of the $367,969 of revenue, only $306 came from industry—a construction company at the dam. And only $12,320 was purchased by municipalities. All the rest, $355,342, came from private power utilities in the Bonneville territory—they bought and distributed Bonneville power to their customers, and passed on the savings to them.

In other words, this tremendously costly experiment in power socialization would have sold practically no power at all had not the private utilities which it threatens to destroy, come to the rescue. During the current fiscal year, more power from Bonneville will go to industry. But, as in the past, the private power companies will remain the largest consumers. In case after case, Washington and Oregon communities have voted against burdening themselves with debt to use Bonneville juice. A handful of communities, most of them very small, have voted "yes."

Bonneville filled no need that was not already being adequately filled or could have been filled by private utilities. Funds for its expansion must be continually furnished by the hard-pressed taxpayers of the country. It is an ironic fact that the private utility purchases are all that have kept its generators turning.

The Living Suffer

The late Will Rogers, who had an astonishing gift for touching on the foibles and weaknesses of us humans, once wrote this: "If a man doesn't believe in life insurance let him die once without any. That will teach him a lesson."

All of us have observed what happens to the families of men who have tried that. In a tragically large number of cases, the result is want and privation. Widows must work when they should be enjoying a happy old age. Children must go without adequate education. Homes are lost—and long-laid plans for the future are irreparably destroyed.

For most of us, life insurance offers the only certain means of leaving an estate. Die without it—and the living we leave behind are the great sufferers.

Behind The News

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The portion of a senator's mail that disgusts him most is comprised not of the signed letters from constituents telling him they will defeat him the next time he runs, but the missives from sulkers who send in venomous remarks carefully unsigned.

A recent experience of Senator Gerald Nye of North Dakota is a case in point. An anonymous correspondent who disagreed with his opposition to the conscription bill wrote:

"Hiller must approve of what you are doing, you dirty rat of a Nazi. Why don't you get smart to yourself and go over to Germany if you like it so well?"

Another of the same ilk who liked Nye's stand wrote:

"It is the international Jews who are trying to get this country into war. We ought to run them into a concentration camp."

They got Senator Nye's goat because, as he phrased it, there is danger in these "mutterings of the gutter." He sees in both prejudices a peril to the United States.

SAYS UNITED JEWRY DOESN'T EXIST

So his next speech in the Senate referred to them in stinging words. He said he was tired of hints that the administration's conscription program was fostered by "international Jews," a body which he doubted ever existed or could exist. He cited instances to prove there is no such thing as a united Jewry on the conscription proposal.

The same is true, he said, of German-Americans. Many of their ancestors, he said, came to this country to escape a Prussian autocracy similar to that which rules Germany now.

Referring to both sets of prejudices, Nye said:

"It is the foulest libel that could be written to accuse our Americans of German stock of love for the new autocracy in Germany, as foul a libel as is the libel of the Jews to the effect that American Jews do not care what happens to America as long as Hitler can be subdued in Europe."

Common Ground

By R. C. HOILES

HAS NEW DEAL BENEFITED THE POOR? A correspondent contends Roosevelt has befriended the poor. He says, "I still contend that the national income is about twice what it was when Roosevelt took office."

The national income in '32, when dollars were worth 100 cents and when the income was not padded by the government paying out $5,000,000 for non-productive work, which is now included in the national income, was $40,000,000,000. Now, with 60-cent dollars and at least $5,000,000,000 not the same kind of income, it is around $70,000,000,000.

Besides this there are at least 5,000,000 more workers available than there were in '32. So it should be more by the per cent of increase in population.

Constant Gain Before New Deal

For a hundred years before 1930, the total annual production gained on an average of better than 3 per cent a year. This reduced to per capita, was about 1 1/2 per cent increase a year. Since then, we have not even taken up the slack, let alone having any gain.

But even with the increase in population, we have not yet reached the total annual income we had in 1929 before the New Deal legislation, let alone the per capita average for the 1920's. In spite of the fact that we have added to the debt some $20,000,000,000 and started the principle that people could live without work. And no government ever lasted long that adopted this principle.

The Roosevelt defender says stocks are up, production and car-loadings are up, but he does not say from where. He takes the short period when corrections were being made that would return full employment and an ever-increasing wage level and does not take averages over a period of years. Is this a business-like method of comparison or a trick way?

Production should be up with an increase in population of some eight per cent since 1932, but it is not up compared with the ten-year average prior to 1932 and it certainly should be with all the new science and increased population.

As To Salaries

He contends that heads of corporations get salaries they do not earn. Certainly, stockholders make errors in judgment as to values of all kinds of workers. But if the stockholders elect to pay salaries, to inefficient officers, it is no business of people who are not stockholders and has nothing to do with the poor. And a man need not own stock in any corporation, if he is not satisfied with the management. A man buys stock voluntarily. It is different when the government confiscates the fruits of his labor and gives it to another. He is helpless then. But if he buys stock in a corporation, where stockholders err in selecting the management, that is his own error in judgment.

The contributor thinks, like many, that men can raise the price of wheat and lower it by buying and selling it. It in no way permanently changes the price level. It simply levels off the high and low spots and is really performing a service to both the producer and the consumer, in spite of what the contributor contends that the man so doing is getting something that does not belong to him. If he has his money invested in it, or runs the risk that his judgment is in error, he should be rewarded for the service he is rendering to society.

The contributor contends that there is a limited amount of wants. An absurdity on the face of it. We are not animals and have limited wants.

He thinks, because we cannot produce anything we want to in any quantity we want to—like printing the double number of papers—that there is a limited amount of wants. No one ever contended that any man can produce anything that he wants to in any amount and sell it. He must produce the things that others want and will trade for. And there is no question but what people want a better newspaper, and if we can produce it or anybody else can produce a better one, the people will want it.

The contributor is confused between scarcity of jobs and a scarcity of work. Of course, there is a scarcity of jobs when workers want more for the products of their labor than other workers think it is worth.

The contributor contends that "Common Ground" does not believe prices are controlled by supply and demand. That is exactly what this column does believe. And when anything interferes with the supply or the demand, prices are put out of line and unemployment results.

And there is nothing that puts them out of balance more than having the government take from one producer by force of taxation and give it to another individual for producing no new wealth. When people can live without work for a time, the law of supply and demand does not function.

If the contributor sticks to the law of supply and demand as he contends, he will not be claiming that the government robbing one worker to give to another non-worker is beneficial to any workers in the long run.

der the code of the District of Columbia, was formed by executive order of the President in 1934. Purpose of the band is to aid in financing trade and to facilitate exports and imports between the U. S. and foreign countries.

Lending authority of the bank has been changed several times, the final limit being $200,000,000. The corporation is authorized to continue until June 30, 1941.

The bill now before the Senate would increase the lending power by $500,000,000, the present $200,000,000 already having been loaned or committed. Also, the life of the bank would be increased to 1947.

The bill virtually cancels certain other laws. One such act limits total loans to one country or its nationals to $20,000,000. This restriction is removed by the bill. Also removed are restrictions—so far as Latin American countries are involved—on loans to previous defaulters and on loans to finance the purchase of arms and munitions by other countries.

Chief opposition to the bill has been from persons who say that if we help Latin America to develop her agriculture and industry, her products will then compete with U. S. products in world markets.

Its backers reply that the bill is designed to help southern states to produce more rubber, tin, manganese, tungsten, chrome, drying oils, wax, cocoa, quinine, mercury and other materials for which the U. S. would be a ready market.

BERLIN BULLETIN BOARD

Around Hollywood

By PAUL HARRISON

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 6.—Behind the screen: With romance news wearing pretty thin, the press agents now report their clients' heart troubles. One announces: "Mary Healy and Peter Lind Hayes were to have eloped during the week-end, but quarreled instead."

The colony's prize elopement-tiffers, incidentally, are a studio executive and a minor actress. A charter pilot told me he flew them to Las Vegas about a year ago and that they quarreled en route and didn't even get out of the plane. A couple of weeks later they hired him again. This time they got to arguing about which was to blame for the first disagreement and the gal was so mad she sat up with the pilot on the way back.

Two months later, amid gas gulps from their friends, they took off and got to Las Vegas without mishap and were quickly married. The byers says he met the actress the other day and she asked if he sold commutation tickets. Seems she's going back to Nevada for a divorce.

Albert Morin, locally as famous as ribbing as Vince Barnett, was lionized at party at Cary Grant's house, where he was introduced as a celebrated French director. After squinting at Katharine Hepburn half the evening, he announced that she would photograph as well as Garbo, but that she couldn't act. At that, Miss Hepburn not only acted, but reacted.

LIMITED SHOWING

All American pictures now are excluded from Germany and Nazi-occupied territory, and Italy's is preparing a similar edict. So Europe is in for an entertainment famine, also. . . . A joke cherished by the Hitler-haters in Prague was this billing of a propaganda film: "The German Reich, Great World Power—For a Few Days Only."

Quickest way to make money is to pick out some star who's hard to cast and then think up a story especially fitted to his or her talents. McNutt was thinking of Hedy Lamarr when they spent part of a day working out an idea about a girl who can't do anything except sit around and look beautiful while events whirl about her. At 5 o'clock the writers whisked out to Metro with their plot, and next day at 10 a. m. they had a check for $25,000.

There definitely will be a series of Tugboat Annie pictures with Marjorie Rambeau in the title role created by Marie Dressler. The film just finished looks fine. . . . As a weapon against the double bill, Metro is experimenting with features of two to three reels made from magazine short stories. Paragraphs are whipping up another of those mystery productions—carefully guarded sets and strict secrecy about the plot. I'm not sure, though, whether the studio is protecting something valuable or merely hiding its embarrassment. The story—so help me!—is about a scientist who transfers the brain of a man to a great ape.

THEY SHOWED CLAUDETTE HER PLACE

Clark Gable says of "Boom Town": "It's got everything in it except kidnapping of Charley Rose." Claudette Colbert has been telling of some experiences she had at the beginning of that picture. When she reached the set, she found she didn't have a dressing room and changed costumes with the extras the first day. She also discovered she was slated for fourth billing—after Gable, Tracy and Lamarr. "Such things were very good for me," the star said. "They showed me I wasn't

People You Know

It seemed that Pampa lost a vital portion of her being yesterday when Father Joseph Wonderly left for his home diocese in Indiana where he will be stationed. Father Wonderly had been in Pampa a dozen years. He was already here when most of the present population of Pampa arrived. He came to be a part of the Pampa scene; he seemed to belong here, and seemed as permanent as the church and the school he built. They will be everyday reminders of his service to his community. They will be the monument he left behind.

Father Wonderly's left touched all phases of the community, and he was civic-minded. When there was a parade, one could always count on Father Wonderly to enter a float, and a good one, too, and his floats always won either first or second. He was a member of the Ministerial alliance and he got along with the other ministers of the town, and he cooperated with them. He was a lover of sports and he consistently supported the Harvesters and the Oilers. He liked to bowl and was no novice at the game. . . . Father Wonderly has many friends here, but his transfer was too sudden to even think of getting about town to bid his friends goodbye, and that pained him, too. So he sent a message to this one asking that this corner express a "heartfelt goodbye and God bless you, to all my friends. . . . Good luck to you, Father Wonderly."

Horace Johnson, Roy Lord and Bob Howell took Boss, Roy's greyhound, and two pups out to a ranch in the breaks about 20 miles from Pampa last Sunday, and Boss and the pups proceeded to run down a coyote in about 30 minutes. When they caught it they killed it. You will remember Boss as the "iron man" dog that ran a rabbit race by himself at the rabbit races last spring. That Boss is some greyhound. Imagine running a coyote down by himself.

Japan Will Reject British And U. S. Indo-China Views

TOKYO, Sept. 6 (AP)—The newspaper Kokum reported today that a meeting of key cabinet ministers had decided to reject official statements of the United States and Great Britain calling for attention to their interests in maintenance of the status quo in French Indo-China.

Kokum, considered an organ of the dominant party faction, said the decision had been reached by Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye and the foreign, war and navy ministers. Domei, the authoritative Japanese news agency, said the four had deliberated on the Indo-China and other foreign issues but did not report any decision.

Some well-informed quarters believed Japan merely would ignore the British-American statements.

STORIES IN STAMPS

Clippers Ruled Seas For Glorious Decade

THE Yankee Clippers were the streamliners of 1850. They filled a need for speed to link Atlantic and Pacific and when that demand slackened, the Clipper gave way to heavier, slower cargo ships. The Clipper is preserved for philately on the U. S. 20-cent stamp above, showing the Clipper "China Bird" in San Francisco's Golden Gate.

The California gold rush in 1849 launched the Clipper fleet. California had money, needed supplies. There was a premium on speed. The fastest ship made the most profit. The China tea trade also paid for speed, as did the Australian gold rush.

The Clippers were the racers of the sailing fleet. They lowered sailing time from New York to San Francisco from 130 days to 100; some of them made the trip in 90 days. The ships were long and slim, with tall masts carrying all the sail a daring captain could put on.

Within 10 years, however, the era of the Clipper was ended leaving only their achievements as one of the most brilliant chapters in U. S. maritime history.

Willkie Plan For Industry In War Cited

By THEODORE F. KOOP

RUSHVILLE, Ind., Sept. 6 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie is on record as favoring "creation of a service program for government operation of American industries during emergencies."

After a meeting with party leaders which he described as "harmonious and optimistic," the Republican presidential nominee told reporters late yesterday:

"Under the Overton-Russell amendment which the senate adopted to deal with cases of emergencies in industry could be seized by the government because of the caprice of one man."

"If a bill were introduced providing that in cases of emergencies industries should be selected—just as in the case of men for the army—and taken over by the government under rules and regulations instead of the arbitrary act of one man, I would be for it."

Willkie said he had not seen the exact language of a proposed house modification of the Overton-Russell amendment. The latter would permit the President to direct the institution of condemnation proceedings against defense "facilities" by the war or navy department after the departments had certified that they had been unable to reach an agreement with the plant's owners. The amendment also would authorize the government to operate such a plant while the proceedings were pending.

"Any legislation affecting government operation of industry, the nominee said, there should be a specific provision prohibiting the conscription of men for industry."

Willkie and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan talked over the administration's trade of 50 over-age United States destroyers for air and naval bases in British possessions.

The two men agreed, Willkie said, that "the President's action without the consent of congress was an arbitrary use of power."

"If the President should be re-elected and assume he had a mandate, he might trade away the Philippines without the consent of congress," Willkie added.

"Although I favor giving all the aid we properly can to England, the method chosen was bad."

TAX IDLE INCOME, NOT BUSY INCOME

By HARLEY L. LUTZ

Professor of Public Finance, Princeton University

The schemes for the taxation of so-called excess profits reveal the arbitrary character of modern income taxation carried to its final limit of absurdity. The whole process of income taxation date to what is known as the "arbitrary" assumption of a purely arbitrary definition of income, continues with tax rate schedules that are derived from anybody's guess, and winds up with the usual gibberish about ability to pay.

So it will be with excess profits. The law that Congress will enact will be nothing but a mess of assumptions about what constitutes an excess profit, and another mess of tax rates to be imposed on this real or imaginary excess. The whole will be designed to cheer to the popular, but completely erroneous, notion that all corporations earn too much profit, that all of this profit goes into the pockets of shareholders and that the average person has no ground for concern over what the government does to corporations anyway.

The excess profit tax, like the other taxes now being levied on income, will be based on the idea that the significant economic fact is the receipt of income. Our tax system has had a bad effect on the economic system and it will continue to exert this bad effect as long as there is failure to understand that the important fact is the receipt of income, not its receipt but its disposition. The major question which the tax law should ask should not be "How much was your income?" That question should be, "What did you do with your income?"

If the tax law were turned in this direction, then the important fact would be whether the person who received income had spent it or kept it as idle money, on hand or in a bank. The person who spends his income as he gets it is doing all that he can to create a market for goods and services, and thus to create work for other people. He is doing his part to provide jobs for the unemployed, and if the income that would be his was spent on the basis of a sensible basis it would recognize this fact.

Idle income, income that is not kept in use by spending or investing is idle income, and idle income does no good, either for its possessor or for others. Idle income leads to idle men and idle machines. If there must be progressive taxation it should be so adjusted as to begin with the person who has cut out his income as he gets it, and most heavily on those who hoard income in the form of idle funds.

This is the principle of a sensible income tax. If all income were spent or invested as received, the demand for labor and machines would be greater, there would be more profits and income, and moderate tax rates would produce more revenue than is produced by the present coddled income taxes. Best of all, less tax revenue would be needed, since relief costs would be limited largely to the care of the unemployed.

Under such a system of taxation the whole case for taxing so-called excess profit is gone. The amount of profit that a corporation earns would no longer be important. Instead, the amount that it keeps and does not use would be important. This is quite different from the discredited tax on undistributed profits. If the money earned is not paid out in dividends, it may be invested in new plant or machinery. That would be using it rather than hoarding. Heavy taxes on short-term profits would be a waste of energy and would do those profits which are kept idle. If the greatest weight of taxation were put on idle income, there would be more work and more income. The income that is kept in the would diffuse its benefits widely. It would create jobs and wages and markets, and these conditions are not fertile soil for social discontent. The tax law would say, in effect, "If you hoard your income, your tax will be comparatively low, but if you insist on hoarding it your tax will be heavy. This would be a definite incentive for the person who received income to spend it or to use it as idle money, on hand or in a bank. The person who spends his income as he gets it is doing all that he can to create a market for goods and services, and thus to create work for other people. He is doing

Core And Gassers Win First Game 9 To 2

Third Game To Be Here Saturday Eve

White-haired Willy Moore, veteran of many a major league campaign, held the glowing Pampa Oilers to six hits to give the Berger Gassers a 9 to 2 victory in the opening game of the playoff series to determine the Shaugnessy winner of the West Texas-New Mexico league. The Amarillo Gold Sox went up against five-hit pitcher Gene Stack and dropped to the Lubbock Hubbers 10 to 7 in the other game.

Tonight Pampa and Berger meet at Huber park in Berger for the second game. On Saturday night the two teams move back to Pampa for what would be the last battle of the series. Should another game be played, it will be in Berger Sunday afternoon. Game 5, the final, in Berger will be at 8 o'clock. The Saturday night game here will be called at 8 o'clock. It will not be a ladies' night game. Everyone must pay the regular admission price.

Tickets for tonight's game in Berger and also for the game here tomorrow night are on sale at Champlin Service Station, Perkins Pharmacy and Courthouse Cafe and at all Berger drug stores.

Moore Allows 6 Hits

While Moore was holding the Oilers to six hits, his teammates played sensational ball in the field and hit in the clinches. Big Gordon Nell, closer manager, led his team at the plate with a home run, with a mate on base, a double and single. Short also hit for the circuit with one on board.

Leroy Rex Dilbeck started for the Oilers but it was his of night. His curve ball refused to break and his fast ball would not go where it was aimed. He toiled until the sixth when John McPartland took over and the big left handed pitcher "cut" him ball the rest of the way. Dilbeck and McPartland fanned five each while the best Moore could do was to whiff three.

The play of Shortstop Gilchrist and second baseman Decker but not to take hot grounders but the speed of Pampa batters kept them from pulling any of their usually outstanding double plays. Each had five assists while Decker added five putouts to his record.

Summers Doubles

Lloyd Summers and Bob Knobles bagged four of the six hits off Moore. Summers' double in the first inning scored the two Oiler runs. Knobles parked two singles, one an infield laydown.

Even the New York Yankees couldn't have beaten the Gassers the way they were gamered last night. When the ball hit the bat a fielder would turn his back and be waiting against the fence when the ball came down. Little Scopetone took three off the centerfield fence while Rex Decker behind second to cut off a run.

Manager Grover Seitz and Bob Knobles collided while chasing a fly ball but luckily neither was hurt. Seitz took the ball but as it hit his glove Knobles crashed into him. Both dropped to the ground and the ball was knocked out of Seitz's glove.

Borger opened the scoring in the first inning. Gilchrist was an easy out. Decker struck the pitcher single over first. Short drew a walk and Nell singled Decker scored. Scopetone forced Short at third. Then Keeton blasted one between short and third for a single. Malvica went back took the ball banded, and threw home in time to get Nell, who tried to score.

Homers in Clinches

The Oilers went one up in their half. Knobles batted second. Potter forced Knobles and Seitz almost forced Potter but Gilchrist failed to touch second and all hands were safe. Prather advanced the two on an infield hit and Summers scored then Decker singled to open the third and Short sent him home ahead of him with a home run.

Williams singled to open the fourth and he scored when Knobles

Buffalo Club Asks $50,000 for Him

Buffalo of the International League asks several major league bidders $50,000 for Hal White, a 21-year-old right-hander. White, a Ulica boy, stands only 5 feet 10 and weighs no more than 164 pounds, but he is fast and strong and specializes in low-hit performances.

ran into Seitz. It was an error for Knobles.

Dilbeck hit short opening the first and Nell followed with a home run. Scopetone singled, Keeton sacrificed and a run scored on Malvica's error. A double play killed the rally. McPartland took over the reins from Dilbeck and pitched one-hit ball until the eighth when Williams was safe on Malvica's error. Potocak singled and Moore sent two runners across with a single. Another double play nipped the rally.

Milbert Vannoy will probably be on the mound for the Oilers tonight, opposed by Clem Hausman, Borger's curveball artist.

Lubbock Beats Amarillo In Opener 10-7

AMARILLO, Sept. 6.—Big Gene Stack had too much on the ball last night and only five Amarillo Gold Sox got hits as Lubbock won the opening game of the Shaugnessy playoff series 10 to 7.

The Sox not only lost the game but they lost Dick Ratliff, their ace catcher, who suffered a broken bone in his hip when he tagged Schweda who tried to score from second on a single.

Drake led the Lubbock attack on Dorman, Hill and Parrish. The two teams meet again tonight in Amarillo before moving to Lubbock to finish the series.

YESTERDAY, Mark and Ed Taylor at the blaze, learns that Carrie had come to the Taylor's...

CHAPTER XI TERROR froze Mark Deuel's heart as he stood in Taylor's yard, watching the fire licking closer...

The wagon! The wagon! That was it. Mark remembered the overturned wagon by the dugout...

With a cry, he ran from the barn to the dugout, calling "Carrie! Carrie! Mrs. Taylor! Are you in there? Are you all right?"

He reached the cellar, saw the storm had overturned only the light wagon box and that the door was free of the wheels...

"Mark—Mark!" It was Carrie. "That you, Ed?" came a second voice. "With one final heave, Mark cleared the door, pulled it open..."

EXACTLY what happened after that Mark never knew except that Mrs. Taylor was inquiring anxiously about Ed...

Adam Johnson Resigns From Welfare Board

AUSTIN, Sept. 6 (AP)—The old age pensions board, from which two members resigned in its one year of existence, today sought a qualified man for a $5,000-a-year post because of another resignation.

The agency, properly known as the state board of public welfare, yesterday accepted "with regret" the resignation, effective Sept. 15, of 68-year-old Adam R. Johnson, who had served it as director since its creation.

Johnson, former administrator for the Texas relief commission and member of the board of control, reminded the board he had taken the post with the understanding he would resign when the new department, combining several social security services, "was properly organized and functioning."

The board, consisting of Marvin Leonard of Fort Worth, Frank S. Roberts of Breckenridge and Thomas H. Taylor of Brownwood, complimented Johnson on organizing the department and asserted he had accomplished many things "worthy of commendation."

Asked what future work he contemplated, Johnson said he had "nothing in mind" and added:

Rumors Of Clashes In Mexico Denied

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 6 (AP)—Mexicans wonder how long the next step would be in the bitter political controversy growing out of the July 7 presidential elections, but rumors that clashes had broken out between opposing factions were denied officially.

The war ministry said its reports from army commanders throughout the republic had reported "all quiet." The attorney general's office said its agents likewise reported nothing happening.

The Mexican man on the street, although evidencing interest in what the Mexican press termed a threat of revolution by general presidency, patiently awaited developments.

Many expressed the conviction there would be no real trouble. Others wondered how the claims of Almazan, and of General Manuel Avila Camacho, administration party presidential candidate, ever could be adjusted.

Almazan was last reported in the United States on a station. Although rumors flew on streets here of disorders in one part of the country or another, not a one of these reports was confirmed.

Both Almazan and Avila Camacho have claimed election, and said they would take the oath of office December 1.

New Jersey is more densely populated than Japan, with 569 persons to the square mile in comparison to Japan's 321 persons.

In the semi-darkness Mark felt his way through the barn door, into the stalls. The horses, sensing the danger, their nostrils irritated by the smoke, pawed nervously, backed out quickly when he united them. He led them to the wagon, hoisted the box back on the wheelbase. Then he hooked the traces, whirled around the little farmyard and rattled up to the soddy.

He jumped down, yelled, "Carrie, Mrs. Taylor!" stopped short, as if shot. IT WAS RAINING!

IT came like that, the rain that night at Rock Creek. The air charged, suffocating one minute, purged, cooling the next. Mark remembered that he'd felt the first warning drops on his face as he rode through the burning bottom-lands from Carrie's to Taylor's, but in the anxiety of the moment he had missed them. The fire, eating his way steadily toward the homesteads, had seemed infinitely closer.

They were discussing all this, the fire, the cyclone, the experience in the dugout, over a breakfast of corn cakes and salt pork the next morning at Taylor's. The rain that had started the moment Mark drove the wagon up in front of the soddy had continued all night, had completely drowned out the fire. Big Ed, black, soaking wet but happy, had come home in the next morning at Taylor's. The breakfast was a celebration extraordinary.

Ed, looking out of the window at the black, water-soaked bottom-lands, which had blazed so fiercely a few hours earlier, began chucking, turned to Carrie. "Carrie," he said, winking at Mark, "think you can stick it out now? About everything's happened out here that can happen."

"I'm staying!" Carrie replied, and Mark, looking at her defiant chin, was infinitely proud.

Mrs. Taylor broke in on the conversation. "Mark, I don't think we can thank you enough for what you did last night. You'd make a mighty fine neigh."

"Say," Ed cut in, "that reminds me. Did you ever file on that piece of land you were talking about last time you rode out here, Mark?"

Mark reddened. "Why, yes and no, Ed. I liked that homestead, but you get your plans changed for you once in a while, you know."

Carrie, listening closely, looked up suddenly, a bit startled. Mark knew he had said too much. "Change plans? Who's a-changing plans on a young buck like you?" Ed asked bluntly. "Only time a fellow gets plans changed on him is when he gets married."

Mark knew he was in a corner and squirmed to get out of it. "I mean," he said, avoiding Carrie's intent glance and deliberately lying, "another homesteader beat me to it. But," he recovered quickly, "I may have news for you sooner than you expect."

LATER, Mark was to recall how prophetic that statement was. Carrie had flushed a bit, he imagined, when he said it and Taylor hadn't helped any, deliberately interpreting it in his own fashion.

"Well, it's about time," Ed said, "you had news for us. Good looking young cuss like you ought to be married and settled down long before this."

Mark had risen from the table, saying he had to start back to town, and the conversation had ended. Now, riding back to Sioux Springs in the hot midday sun, he recalled Carrie's sudden interest in his words and the thought left him infinitely happy.

He was thinking of her and the blunt way in which Ed Taylor had reached conclusions for both of them, when he looked up to see a man riding hard, out of Sioux Springs, toward him. Instantly, Mark was alert, spurred his own horse.

The figure drew closer—a tall rider on a fast sorrel. Mark recognized the horse. It was Newt Gale's. A second later he knew the man. It was Ashton Oaks.

Instinctively, Mark stiffened in his saddle, leaned forward, pressing hard on his stirrups. Oaks rode straight down on him, 30 yards, 20 yards, 10 yards—and then Oaks fired.

Like that it happened: without a word, a single flash of warning. With a shout, Mark raised high in his saddle, lurched toward the left. His own gun roared twice in the prairie stillness. Oaks went down, and simultaneously Mark crumpled from his saddle.

It was over quickly. Oaks, kicking himself free of an entangling stirrup, abandoned his dead horse, rushed over to Mark, knelt down. Mark's eyes were closed, he scarcely breathed.

"Dead!" Hoarsely Ashton Oaks whispered the single word. And then he looked back. Other riders, two, three, five, were now sending up a cloud of dust straight behind him. With a single bound Oaks reached Mark's horse, vaulted into the saddle. He glanced at the ground. Mark was stirring.

Senator Tom Connally Of Texas Is Famed For Repartee, Sarcasm

By L. T. FASLEY Associated Press Staff
WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (AP)—The junior senator from Texas has the floor.

With that admonition, the presiding officer of the senate rapped his gavel and restored order in the usually quiet legislative chamber, where one often may sit for hours listening to dull discourses.

Eyes and ears of his colleagues on the floor turned toward the tall, silver-haired Senator Tom Connally of Marlin. Spectators who packed the gallery focused their attention on the sharp tongued Texan, with sweeping gestures and booming voice.

"The junior senator from Texas is recognized," the chair repeated and a half dozen other senators who had tried to speak simultaneously took their seats. Under debate was the army promotion bill, providing for retirement of officers at 60 years instead of 64.

Senator Johnson (D-Colo.) had a moment before criticized the bill, contending it would remove many experienced officers and replace them with those less able to handle a particular situation. The debate had become a colloquy shared by the Coloradoan and Connally, who interjected:

"This is a 'plucking' bill, to pluck him out and put somebody else in." A chuckle rippled over the chamber as Connally, gesturing, reached down as if plucking a plum from a basket.

That was a sample of the senatorial quips for which Connally has become famed. A master of repartee, he frequently cites some historical incident to win his point. He is at his best when the subject is important, when debate is shared in by Republicans and Democrats alike and when the galleries are full.

mands that the chair call down the galleries for laughter or applause (visitors are supposed to refrain from any demonstration), then seemingly tries to test their ability at restraint by enlivening still more the ensuing debate.

The Texan draws on experiences to illustrate his thoughts. During discussion on the army promotion bill, which passed despite his opposition he offered this story:

"In 1897, when the senator from Texas was in the national guard at San Antonio, I went out to Fort Sam Houston, a large military post, where, drilling a company, I saw an old captain who aroused my curiosity. I asked:

"Who is that old officer out there?" "It was told: 'It is old Captain So-and-So. He entered the army during the Civil War, and still is a captain, and seemingly pretty well satisfied with it.'"

"He was out there drilling his company. That was 32 years after the close of the Civil War. He had gone through the Civil War and still was in the army. However, under the new theory, if a man enters the army he must be a colonel before he is promoted to captain."

One of the few senators who apparently does not mind getting involved in a heated row with the Texan is Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.). Not long ago the Michigan legislator proposed an amendment to a military appropriation bill which would have created a joint congressional committee to pass on expenditure of certain contingent funds appropriated for use as the President saw fit.

Connally emphatically stated his opposition, declaring that in his opinion the President should have his hands free to spend that particular fund on the spur of the moment without consulting any one if he thought it advisable in the interest of national defense. The proposed joint committee might seriously delay a defense move, Connally argued, by getting into "a long-winded" discussion on such matters as the number and size of bombs of airplanes needed.

"I can imagine what such a debate would be like," said the senator. "I can hear one member saying: 'Well, Mr. Chairman, I am agin' that. I don't think that bomb is the right size. There ain't nothin' in the platform of either party that says anything about the size of the bomb and I am opposed to adopting that size. I think we ought to experiment a little and call in the leaders of both parties and look at this bomb, and then decide it.'"

Laughter in the galleries punctuated the debate and when the discussion was resumed Connally recalled that during the Civil War President Lincoln had a "strategy board." Lincoln did not get very far with the war, the senator added, "before he kicked the strategy board out of the window along with some of his inefficient generals."

Connally said he was reminded in this connection that in the second Manassas campaign there was "old General Pope, flamboyant general, who probably had been approved by the strategy board, and who was consistently boasting of his exploits."

"The general always headed his reports 'Headquarters in the Saddle.' After the second battle of Manassas, when he was in retreat and running as fast as he could to get out of the way," Lincoln observed:

"I am afraid that General Pope had his headquarters where he should have had his hindquarters. That is the type of performance of boards of strategy."

Again the Texan pictured a meeting of a congressional committee such as that proposed by Vandenberg:

"Come to order, gentlemen. We are here to look after the national defense. Have all of you got cigars? Pass the cigars around, clerk. Is everybody comfortable?"

The Vandenberg amendment was defeated.

When the naval appropriations bill was before the senate Senator Danaher (R-Conn.) sharply criticized the administration for slowness of production of ships and aircraft under an earlier appropriation. Connally defended the administration, and Danaher asked him if he had seen any planes built yet from the previously appropriated funds.

"Certainly I have not seen the planes," snorted the Texan. "I assume, however, that planes are being manufactured. I do not know of any rule of mechanics by which we can push a button and have a plane jump out. There are no automatic devices of that kind."

The senate passed the conscription bill with an amendment providing that ministerial students should be exempt. Connally objected in vain with, "there is going to be need for a lot of prayer in this army."

At one time during the conscription debate he was interrupted by a disorderly gallery, and the chair stopped him to warn the outsiders. Connally came back:

"Mr. President, there ain't any use of doing it. They've been admonished all day and they don't pay any more attention to the chair than the senate does."

Courageous Texas Couple Quit Jobs, Realize Plan For Life

By WILLIAM T. RIVES Associated Press Staff
Rare is the person who never has dreamed that, by golly, some day he'd quit his routine job and do as he pleased.

Rarer still is the person who actually does that. Mother Freund did. Eighteen years ago she and her husband decided they'd had their fill of clerking.

They drew their pay checks on a Saturday night in Houston and next morning they drove down to Pistol Point—and a new way of life.

Pistol Point, also referred to as Hell's Half Acre, is a spot where the waters of Clear Creek join those of Galveston Bay, just below Kemah. Here the couple set up Freund's Place—a fisherman's camp and supply house.

Fire, storms and the death of her husband have struck Mother Freund, but nothing has touched her with regret or yearning for the old life.

"I wasn't hardships I dreaded anyhow," she said. "It was gettin' in a rut that I feared. Down here things may get tough at times, but no two days are alike."

Mother Freund is Kemah's Houseboat Hannah—a buntin, jovial, salt-water philosopher. Her chief delight, outside of fishing, is mothering needy children. She reared two children besides her own daughter, mothers all the kids in the neighborhood and frequently, in vacation-time, shepherds children sent her by friends in other states.

Like a mother hen, she can always spread her wings to take in one more chick.

Each July 4 she gives a barbecue for the friends she has acquired through the years. As she expresses it, "that's quite a few people."

"This warm-hearted, maternal attitude long ago won her the name 'Mother,' and she is so addressed by everyone—from toddling kids to sun-stared, aged fishermen.

"Mother Freund" just seems to fit her and no one inquires her true name.

Intimates never cease to marvel at Mother Freund. She can sail her 34-foot boat, the Miss Henrietta, with all the finesse of a sea-going captain, and she knows better than the bayside natives where the fish are biting.

Mother Freund proved her mettle convincingly—once when she and four passengers from Houston were caught miles from land in a northern gale when the boat's motor died. Most of the food and water had been consumed and other boats put in to shore as the storm clouds gathered.

"For three days we were tossed about until finally the storm subsided and a coast guard cutter picked us up," she said.

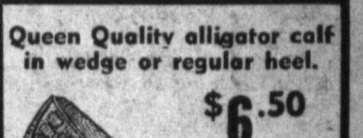

During the harrowing moments on the water, Mother Freund kept the passengers' morale high with quips and soothing words.

Four years ago, Freund's place burned to the ground. All keepsakes, pictures and heirlooms, except a closet full of family china and wedding presents, went up in smoke with her home and business.

Then the fire department trucks, rushing about madly, crushed to bits the few things she had managed to save.
