Reagan to seek more defense money if inflation is untamed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, finding support in Congress for its proposed $32.6 billion buildup in military spending through 1982, is promising to seek even more money for defense if it fails to tame inflation.

Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, outlining a budget he said would make "a major start on meeting needs too long unmet," said Wednesday he would submit a supplemental request if prices of military hardware increase beyond the administration's estimates.

"We have to keep this program intact, absolutely," Weinberger told the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Under questioning by Sen. John Warner, R-Va., Weinberger conceded the revised defense budget envisions lower inflation than the Carter administration's forecast, which he previously said was underestimated.

But he said it is "fair to assume a lower (inflation) rate" if President Reagan's proposed tax cut and domestic spending reductions are enacted.

The Reagan administration predicts inflation will drop steadily to 7.2 percent in 1982 and 4 percent in 1986 as the president's economic recovery program takes hold. It was 12.4 percent last year, and the Carter administration's last forecast was for 9.6 percent in 1982 and 6 percent in 1986.

"If what we hope does not come to pass and we are not able to reduce inflation and don't get the cuts we are seeking, then I will have to present you with a supplemental," Weinberger said.

Members of the committee generally welcomed the budget increase, which would pay for an expanded Navy, a new bomber, a new kind of nerve gas and substantial pay raises for military personnel.

"There is no doubt that increased resources are required," said Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, the committee chairman.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., the senior Democrat on the panel, told Weinberger, "I believe you will get your money this year," and Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said the additional spending is "absolutely essential."

Tower indicated he wants the Pentagon's major budgets approved by Congress before there is any backlash about cuts in domestic programs.

"Our proposed increases would significantly and quickly strengthen our ability to respond to the Soviet threat at all levels of conflict and in all areas of the world vital to our national interest," Weinberger said.

He said it probably will be midsummer before the Pentagon decides on two key elements of the arms buildup: the choice of a long-range bomber to penetrate Soviet air defenses and whether to launch MX missiles from submarines or from hidden sites in the West.

The budget asks $2.5 billion for the bomber, designed to replace the aging B-52. Alternatives under study are a simplified version of the B-1, which the Carter administration abandoned; modification of existing F-111s; and the so-called "stealth" bomber designed to foil Soviet radar. The F-111s could be available soonest, but Weinberger said, "I don't think it is going to produce what we need."

The Reagan plan would nearly double the Carter administration's shipbuilding program, with an additional 15 Navy ships to be financed in 1982 as a start toward expanding the American fleet from 456 ships to 600.

"This is not a one-year program for summer soldiers," Weinberger said, signaling that the administration plans a long-term and costly buildup of military might.

The Reagan plan, in fact, projects $1.289 trillion in defense spending from fiscal 1982 through 1986. The budget called for $6.8 billion more than the Carter administration requested for this fiscal year, bringing the total to $178 billion.

At the same time, it recommended a jump of $25.8 billion in budget authority for fiscal 1982, starting next Oct. 1. That would raise the level next year to a peacetime record $222.2 billion.

Only $5.8 billion of the additional budget authority would be spent this year and next, with most of the money committed for future contracts.

About $20 billion of the $32.6 billion increase would be applied to ordering a wide variety of weapons and equipment.

Weinberger said military personnel "will become first-class citizens once again" with a 5.3 percent pay raise in July atop the 11.7 percent raise already approved for fiscal 1981, and at least an additional 9.1 percent in fiscal 1982.

He also recommended an increase of about 35,900 in military manpower to "enhance readiness directly by increased combat unit manning and indirectly through increased manning and technical activities." This would bring the total uniformed force to 2,119,500 by Oct. 1, 1982.

A REPRIEVE IN THE WEATHER brought Douglas Odell outside to work off some excess energy, which he did, by promptly tackling his puppy. A friend, Mrs. Nelda Simpson, was luckily on hand to referee the warm day wrestling match. Cooler temperatures and thundershowers are forecast for Friday so Douglas will have another day to bone up for a rematch. (Staff Photo by Skylar Chapman)

Tower says Soviets may test Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee today said the Soviet Union may provoke a crisis with the United States by late spring to test the Reagan administration.

"Typically, that's what the Soviets like to do," Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, told reporters. "They like to probe the new boy to see what stuff he's made of."

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker said, meanwhile, that he thinks such a test may already be underway in El Salvador.

Baker told reporters the Soviet Union has tested every president beginning with John F. Kennedy and that its alleged supply of arms to El Salvador "may have been a first effort to test the new American president."

But he said the "logical result of (Reagan's response) of unambiguous new American strength" should be "that everybody would just cool it."

Tower supported President Reagan's request to increase defense spending by 16 per cent this fiscal year and next as part of a $1.3 trillion buildup in U.S. defenses over the next five years.

Tower said inflation, if not reduced as Reagan expects, might require even more spending, and said domestic programs would have to give way.

"If we do increase our defense capability, we hasten the day when we can sit down and negotiate in a meaningful way with the Soviets on arms control — and I don't just mean arms limitations but arms reductions," Tower said at a breakfast news conference held by Foreign Policy magazine.

But he put most of his emphasis on what he saw as a Soviet threat to the United States and other countries around the world.

"I think you can expect the Soviets are going to test this administration, and my guess is sometime in the next 60 to 90 days, because typically that's what the Soviets like to do," Tower said.

"They like to probe the new boy to see what he's made of, and I think we can expect that. What form the test is going to take, where they are going to precipitate a crisis, whether it's of minor or major proportions, I think we can expect a test of some sort."

Tower said he could not predict how the administration would respond "because I don't know what the test will be."

Tower said he regarded the Indian Ocean as "a high-threat area" and that the United States has to be able to send forces there to protect oilfields. The administration yesterday asked Congress yesterday to approve an additional $670 million for the Rapid Deployment Force.

And Tower suggested that apart from formal agreements with some countries to use their military facilities, "gentlemen's agreements" could be reached that would not appear on paper or be known to the people there.

"Sometimes they have internal political problems putting something down on paper," he said.

As an example, Tower cited Egypt's Bas Banas airfield along the Red Sea, but he ruled out American use of the modern Israeli-built airfields in the Sinai that will be demilitarized and ceded to Egypt next year as part of the peace treaty between the two countries.

"We'd love to have those airfields in the Sinai but that's a political problem that's not soluble," he said.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, whose armed forces the United States is rebuilding with modern jets, training and other equipment, has offered temporary use of some facilities. But the Sinai bases remain off-limits.

But Tower also said the United States is "not going to go in where we are not wanted, whether we have a written agreement with ... or not."

Weather

The forecast calls for decreasing cloudiness becoming fair and warmer this afternoon. The high for today will be in the mid 50s with overnight lows in the low 30s. The forecast for Friday includes increased cloudiness with a chance of thundershowers and highs near 50.

High school senior files for school race

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

Its going to be a race! All but one of the places on the city commission and the Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees will be contested in the April 4 city elections.

As the minutes ticked towards 5 p.m. Wednesday — the final date to file for the local offices — George E. Rader III rushed to Carver Educational Center and placed his bid for the Place III position on the school board.

Rader, a 17-year-old senior at Pampa High School, will be vying for the seat currently held by incumbent school board member, Dr. Robert Lyle, a Pampa dentist.

City election official Pat Eades said Rader entered her office shortly before 5 p.m. Wednesday to file for the school board position. It was seven minutes until five when she told Rader he would have to go to Carver Center to register.

"I guess he made it," she said today.

School election official Jerry Haralson said Rader's age will not affect his bid for the election since the high school student will be 18-year-old by the April 4 election date.

Another late filer — Bunny Nichols of 1616 Fir, principal at the St. Matthews Elementary School — will oppose Rader and Lyle for the Place III spot.

Larry G. Ogden of 2721 Beech, a mechanical engineer for Celanese Corp., was the third person who filed Wednesday for the school board.

The Place I position will be a three-way fight between Odgen, Bill Quarles — an agent for the Prudential Insurance Company, and Wallace Birkes, a local farmer-rancher and an employee of Brashear Architects of Lubbock.

Paul Simmons currently holds the Place I spot. However, Simmons announced his decision to step down from the board earlier this year.

The current school board president, Darville Orr, manager of Lewis Supply Company, will be defending his Place II position against John Mize, an employee of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

In the city elections, local realtor Walter Shed is opposing present city mayor H. R. "Ray" Thompson, owner of Thompson Parts and Supply Co., for the position as mayor of the city.

Ward 1 Commissioner O. M. Prigmore, a retired Cabot executive, is defending his seat on the commission from John Sanders, owner of Sanders Sewing Center.

The Ward 3 commission seat is the only uncontested race in the elections with Melvin Hammon, of Hammon's Janitorial Service, running without opposition for the place vacated by current Ward 3 commissioner, Charles "Buddy" Cauthorne.

Cauthorne recently announced his decision to retire from the commission, citing work-related responsibilities as the reason.

Haig says it's up to Soviets now

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., dismissing a call to draw the line now on aid to El Salvador, says any further escalation of U.S. involvement depends on what the Soviet Union and Cuba do.

The possibility of additional aid, Haig said Wednesday, "will depend largely on the willingness of Cuba, the Soviet Union and those associated with them to continue to intervene illegally in the affairs of the member states of this hemisphere."

Specifically, Haig refused to say whether U.S. aid would stop with 20 additional military advisers and $25 million in new military assistance. "It would be foolish to attempt to do so," he said.

The administration has accused Cuba and other communist nations of complicity in smuggling at least 200 tons of military supplies to leftist insurgents in El Salvador.

"This is no longer an acceptable or tolerable kind of activity in this hemisphere," Haig declared after a closed-Senate briefing.

Earlier, the No. 2 Democrat in the Senate said the Reagan administration should supply no military assistance to El Salvador beyond the 20 additional advisers and $25 million in aid.

"Enough is enough," said Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the assistant Democratic leader in the Senate. "In the interest of protecting American lives and avoiding deeper and more dangerous U.S. involvement in the fighting in El Salvador, we must draw the line somewhere."

"And as far as I'm concerned, this is it," Cranston said. Congress is unlikely to block the extra advisers and military aid, "but whether some people will try or not I don't know."

Haig and White House Press Secretary James Brady, meanwhile, denied a Salvadoran rightist leader's statement that the United States wouldn't oppose a military coup in the Central American Republic.

Brady called that "pure fiction."

"We are in support of the stability of the current government of El Salvador, and anything that can be done to make sure that reforms are carried out and elections held," Brady told reporters.

The rightist leader, Maj. Roberto D'Aubisson, told reporters in El Salvador that he has met with U.S. officials since Reagan took office and "if there is a change, I think they would accept it."

Anti-war movement: new and old faces

WASHINGTON (AP) — From campuses to churches, a fledgling anti-war movement is emerging in America. This one opposes increased U.S. military involvement in El Salvador, and it is drawing support from veterans of Vietnam protests a decade ago.

Already, there have been campus teach-ins and protest rallies. A hunger strike is scheduled. And soon, the hallmark of the anti-Vietnam era will return: a march on the Pentagon.

"There is a tremendous awareness that this (U.S. involvement) looks like what happened around Vietnam," said Heidi Tarver, coordinator for the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador. "People are saying, 'We're not going to be taken in again.'"

Ron Kovic, former leader of Vietnam Veterans Against the War, said he was surprised when hundreds of college students turned out for Salvadoran teach-ins on the West Coast.

The protests over El Salvador "have been very sophisticated and have come very quickly," Kovic said. "The protest is inevitably going to build and it will involve Vietnam Veterans Against the War. ... I don't think another American boy should have to die for another mistake."

Sister Pat Haggerty says her Maryknoll order of nuns Catholic Church has been flooded with requests for speakers on El Salvador. The talks have been attracting "a wide cross-section" of people, she said.

"There is a very strong feeling as Americans get a chance to see the other side of the picture in El Salvador," Sister Haggerty said, arguing that the State Department has misrepresented the Salvadoran civil war as a power struggle between the United States and the Soviet Union.

She contends the conflict is the people's struggle for liberation and against repression.

"U.S. — Hands off El Salvador! Money for Jobs, Human Needs, Not for the Pentagon," reads a flyer for a May 3 march on the Pentagon scheduled by a group called the Peoples' Anti-War Mobilization.

The newly formed coalition of student and civil rights groups, liberal and left-wing religious leaders, and former anti-Vietnam War activists. Among the sponsors are anti-war figures Daniel and Philip Berrigan, Harvard Professor George Wald and author Noam Chomsky.

But the leadership of the new movement appears to be coming primarily from religious groups, particularly the Roman Catholic Church, which has been active in citizen movements throughout Latin America.

Salvadorian army officer arrested

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) - The civilian president of El Salvador's ruling civilian-military junta says he has ordered the arrest of an ultra-rightist major for advocating a military coup, and U.S. diplomats blamed the officer for a hit-and-run attack on the American Embassy. President Jose Napoleon Duarte told a news conference Wednesday he ordered the police to search for and arrest retired Maj. Roberto d'Aubuisson. D'Aubuisson held a news conference Tuesday, accused Duarte and the other members of his Christian Democratic party in the government of being communists and said the military should expel them from the government. But by early today there was no indication he had been arrested. Meanwhile, men in a speeding pickup truck fired 10 to 15 shots at the U.S. Embassy Wednesday, breaking a window. No one was hurt, and the embassy's Marine guards did not return the fire, a spokesman said. This incident has all the hallmarks of a d'Aubuisson operation, U.S. Charge d'Affaires Fredric Chapin told a news conference. In another attack last May also blamed on d'Aubuisson about 15 shots were fired at the embassy from a pickup truck at night, and no one was hurt. Leftist guerrillas also attacked the embassy last year, causing heavy damage with rockets but no casualties. D'Aubuisson at his news conference said he didn't think President Reagan would be "bothered" if the military ousted Duarte, but the White House said the notion that Reagan backs a coup was "pure fiction." Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said d'Aubuisson's statement "does not represent U.S. policy in any way." Duarte also backed away from the Socialist International's offer to mediate between the government and the leftist guerrillas trying to overthrow it. He said he has no immediate plans to meet with representatives of the league of Socialist parties, whose committee on Latin America met in Panama last weekend and offered to mediate. The Reagan administration has accused Vietnam, Cuba and other Soviet allies of funneling arms to the guerrillas via Nicaragua and is asking the U.S. Congress to approve $25 million more in U.S. military aid for the junta and 20 more American military advisers in addition to the 34 in El Salvador.

Blood stains issue in mystery money case

WACO, Texas (AP) - Bloodstains on a South Texas teen-ager's clothes have become a key issue in a trial to determine the rightful owner of nearly $500,000 the youth found buried on his father's ranch four years ago. James Dean Bridges, 19, who says he discovered the cash in an ice chest buried on his father's ranch near Alice, testified Wednesday that bloodstains seen on his shirt and pants the day Waco police arrested him in 1977 came from an injury he suffered when an officer pushed him to the floor of the police station. Attorneys contended the bloodstains, present when Bridges was interrogated by police, were not on his clothes at the time of his Jan. 31, 1977 arrest for running a red light. Officers confiscated $490,000 from the brand-new Thunderbird Bridges and his friend, Percy Garcia, had bought in Dallas the day before for $10,000. The youths are battling the state of Texas, the City of Waco, the Internal Revenue Service and McLennan County for all or part of the money. A parade of officers has taken the stand since the federal civil trial began Monday to relate the various stories Bridges and Garcia told to explain how they came by the cash. The most sensational of those explanations - and one that the Texas attorney general's office hopes to prove - was in a statement Bridges gave police after his arrest. The statement, retold by a police officer earlier this week, said Bridges' father was a drug smuggler who obtained the money through his illicit dealings. Bridges said in the statement that he watched his father bury the cash in a quail pen on the family ranch, then dug up the loot after his father bloodied his nose in a quarrel over cigarettes. Police Sgt. Truman Simons testified that Bridges' clothes were smeared with blood when he gave the statement.

Five persons enter pleas to felony charges

Five persons pleaded guilty to felony indictments and were sentenced by Judge Grainger McIlhany in a recent session of 31st District Court here. District Attorney Harold Comer said today. Steve Walker, 29, of an unknown address was sentenced to seven years imprisonment in the Texas Department of Corrections (TDC) in Huntsville. Walker pleaded guilty to four forgery charges in connection with the forging of checks stolen from the County Inn Steak House in October, 1980. Juan D. Lona of Pampa pleaded guilty to a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle stemming from a report of a stolen automobile on Dec. 20, 1980. Judge McIlhany sentenced Lona to six years of adult probation and a $750 fine. A guilty plea to the burglary of the E. L. Waters residence at 1701 Duncan on Dec. 23, 1980 was entered by Van Dudley Rhoden, 19, of the Davis Hotel. Rhoden was sentenced to five years in the Huntsville prison. The five-year probation sentence of John David Whitmarsh, 21, of 804 E. Craven for a 1980 burglary conviction was revoked by Judge McIlhany, at Comer's request. The District Attorney's office alleged Whitmarsh had violated the terms of the probation by a driving while intoxicated arrest on Feb. 18 of this year, Comer said. Sam Lowry, 50, 528 S. Gray was committed to Vernon State Hospital for alcoholic rehabilitation by Judge McIlhany. Comer said a motion to revoke Lowry's probation for a 1980 felony driving while intoxicated charge was declined on the condition Lowry entered the Vernon Hospital for rehabilitation. A hearing for a motion to revoke the eight-year probation of John Henry Throckmorton, 22, of the Johnson Trailer Park was continued at the request of Throckmorton's defense counsel, Comer said. The defendant was convicted and sentenced to probation in May 1980, for burglary, and the State alleges he violated the probation by a driving while intoxicated arrest on Jan. 23 of this year, the district attorney said. Today, in 223rd District court presided over by Judge Don Cain, the hearing of a motion to revoke the shock probation of Terry Harlen, 18, was reset for March 11. Comer said Harlen was convicted of burglary of a vehicle in July 1979 and given a five-year probation. The probation was revoked in March 1980, for a probation violation and Harlen was sent to TDC, he said. At Judge Cain's request, Harlen was granted shock probation and returned to Gray County in July 1980, the district attorney said. Comer said Harlen is now facing charges of the burglary of a vehicle in connection with an incident on Feb. 11, 1981.

School yard kids games of cops and robbers have come to life

By SCOTT KRAFT Associated Press Writer NEW YORK (AP) - A 9-year-old pulled out a loaded pellet gun and held his New Jersey parochial school class at bay. Another held up a midtown Manhattan bank. A third youngster robbed a Fort Worth, Texas, convenience store at gunpoint - and tipped the cashier. Schoolyard games of cops and robbers have come to life in recent days. Psychiatrists say child criminals generally act impulsively without knowing the consequences and may be imitating each other. "Youngsters are even more prone than adults to emulate and imitate the actions of others," says Dr. Elissa Benedek of the Center for Forensic Psychiatry at Ann Arbor, Mich. "When a youngster pulls a prank, other youngsters emulate that type of thing." Ms. Benedek says young children still are developing a sense of right and wrong and "many simply don't have that ability to think ahead to the consequences." Mario Merola, district attorney in The Bronx, N.Y., says 26 children under 15 have been arrested in the past six months for crimes involving guns in his area. About 1,900 juveniles between the ages of 7 and 12 were arrested in New York City last year. Under state law, those children cannot serve time in secure facilities. "The kids are getting worse than the adults," Merola says. "There was a time when we classified juvenile crime as truancy. Now we call it murder, robbery and rape." In New York on Monday, a 9-year-old boy identified only as Robert was charged with armed robbery and possession of a weapon in juvenile-delinquency proceedings stemming from the New York bank robbery. The boy used a toy cap pistol in the heist of $118, authorities said. He spent part of the money on hamburgers, a movie and a wrist watch that played music. In Collingswood, N.J., Wednesday, a fourth-grade student at the Transfiguration Grammar School pulled a loaded pellet gun in front of 28 classmates and a nun. The boy "had a bit of a problem with another student in school from the day before," explained police Detective James Wilson. Shortly after the students returned from Ash Wednesday services at an adjacent church, Wilson said, "the suspect is alleged to have produced a handgun, confronted the whole classroom and the teacher with the weapon." No one was injured. The 9-year-old was charged with unlawful possession of a weapon, making terroristic threats and assault with a weapon, police said. The latest FBI figures indicate that 117,589 children aged 11 or 12 were arrested in the nation's cities in 1979, down slightly from the year before. But the FBI says those figures aren't a pure indication of the trends in child crime. Many children are referred to special treatment programs and their records not formally counted.

QUAKE DEVASTATION. An old woman prays as she sits in the ruins of her house which collapsed during an earthquake late Wednesday in Platees, Greece. The quake, which measured 6.2 on the Richter scale, was followed by another one Thursday measuring 5.8. (AP Laserphoto)

Another earthquake rocks Greece

ATHENS, Greece (AP) - Another earthquake rocked Greece today, adding to the fear and misery of thousands of people camping out in the streets and squares across the nation after a quake less than a day earlier. Many schools, stores and offices were closed because Athenians were afraid that new tremors would bring down more buildings. No new casualties were reported in the latest quake, which measured 5.8 on the Richter scale. Police said more than 170 houses in rural areas collapsed and hundreds were damaged in the quake Wednesday night. Many of the houses had been weakened by two previous quakes over the past two weeks. One Athenian died and 30 were injured in Wednesday's quake, which measured 6.2 on the Richter scale and was centered 42 miles west of Athens in the Gulf of Corinth. The state radio said the tremor caused a three-foot high wave in the Corinth gulf that pounded the beaches of the town that was damaged by the quake on Feb. 24. That quake left 18 dead nationwide and caused some damage to the nation's ancient artifacts. The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5. An earthquake of 5 on the Richter scale can cause considerable damage, 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage. It is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage. The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

Oklahoma air service subsidies may be cut

WASHINGTON (AP) - If President Ronald Reagan's budget recommendations become law, federal air service subsidies amounting to almost $1.7 billion a year for Lawton and Guymon would be eliminated, officials say. The cuts are not expected to end air service to those communities, John Hokanson, chief of the air carrier subsidy division of the Civil Aeronautics Board, said Wednesday. Hokanson noted that Reagan is proposing to save $210 million over five years by quickly ending one of two air service subsidy programs for small communities. Service to Lawton and Guymon could be subsidized, if necessary, under the program Reagan proposes to keep, Hokanson said. Hokanson said he doubted subsidies would be needed. He said Reagan's proposed budget cuts probably will result in another air carrier with smaller planes picking up the Lawton and Guymon service from Frontier Airlines, which now serves the two Oklahoma points. He noted that even before Reagan's proposals, Frontier had applied to suspend subsidized service to the airport serving Guymon and Liberal, Kan., and several smaller-plane airlines had applied for permission to take Frontier's place. Reagan's cuts would not have any effect on the four other Oklahoma cities with subsidized service because those subsidies are provided under the program Reagan is keeping. The federal government now pays $400,000 a year to subsidize Air Midwest service to Enid and Ponca City and $978,000 to subsidize Metro Airlines service to McAlester, Stillwater and Paris, Texas. The federal government pays $880,000 a year to subsidize service to Lawton-Fort Sill.

Fake coins lead to area bank head's resignation

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — An Amarillo bank president resigned his post after learning the South African gold coins he accepted as collateral for $270,000 in loans were counterfeit. However, federal agents say Robert Ringo, former president of Tascosa National Bank of Amarillo, was only one of a number of people duped by a counterfeit operation that has sold the fake Krugerrands in Houston, Austin and Amarillo.

Investigators have confiscated gold-plated lead coins with a counterfeit value of almost $1.5 million in Amarillo and about $70,000 worth in Houston, said Secret Service agent David Freriks in Lubbock. He said some fake coins have turned up in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and agents are aware of sales in Austin.

Besides the Tascosa National Bank, agents say another unidentified lending institution in Houston authorized a $35,000 loan with fake coins as collateral.

Ringo abruptly submitted his resignation Wednesday, which the bank's board immediately accepted.

Daniel will answer questions on shooting

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Vickie Daniel will live up to the terms of a temporary child custody agreement by answering questions about the shooting death of her husband, former Texas House speaker Price Daniel Jr., when she gives a deposition today, her attorneys say. Mrs. Daniel, accused of murder in the Jan. 19 slaying of her estranged husband, waived her Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination in the custody fight as a condition for keeping her two young boys until jurors resolve the dispute in a March 12 trial. "She will answer all questions relative to Jan. 19," her attorney, Andrew Lannie said Wednesday.

Mrs. Daniel invoked her Fifth Amendment rights six times last week during a hearing on preliminary motions in the custody squabble when asked about the shooting or about letters removed from a warehouse containing her husband's belongings.

Mrs. Daniel honored another condition of the custody agreement Wednesday when she turned over 3-year-old Franklin Baldwin, Daniel and 1-year-old Marion Price Daniel IV to Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph of Richardson.

Texas redistricting plans are revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A delegation of state senators from Texas has given the state's congressmen the word about what can be expected when it comes time to reapportion their districts. "I said that the lines are going to be drawn by people to whom incumbency is not a dirty word," Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said after the group from Austin met separately with Republican and Democratic congressmen.

The state Legislature has the power to redraw the lines of the current 24 congressional districts in Texas to the 27 it appears the state will have because of 1980 census gains. Every congressional district in a state must have the same population, so each of the current districts will have to be reshaped in varying degrees to follow the new census results.

Hobby said preserving seats for incumbents will be taken into account but will not be the top priority. He said that is reserved for the numerical and legal requirements of redistricting complying with the Voting Rights Act protecting minorities for instance.

The congressmen were assured they would have the chance to let the state Legislature know their priorities for additions or subtractions to their districts, the lieutenant governor said. "Some did so, and some indicated that they would supply us with input at a later time," Hobby said.

Congressmen generally are reluctant to discuss publicly how they would like to see their districts reshaped. Hobby predicted that one of the three new districts will be in the Houston area and the second in the Dallas-Fort Worth area because of the huge population gains there.

The location of the third new district presents more of a question mark, Hobby said. The lieutenant governor described the sessions with Texas congressmen as briefings to outline the procedures and schedule for redistricting before the Legislature's session ends in May.

The Texas House has set up its own team to draft a redistricting bill.

Odessa police chief fired

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — City Manager Kerry Sweatt says Odessa Police Chief Jack Tomlin has been asked to resign. Sweatt said the request came after complaints by the city's uniformed officers of poor facilities and inept management of the department.

Tomlin, 59, who had been chief for 12 years, had been with the department more than 30 years. "I asked Jack to resign," Sweatt said.

Sweatt said, "The department has experienced a number of problems and I feel this will bring some rehabilitation and bring the department up to the level of service the community deserves." "I do want to make it clear that I am fired," said Tomlin. The departing police chief blamed the move on "turmoil and obvious interference with the department. A terrible injustice has been done to the police department by recent administrations in city hall."

Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant said City Council played no role in the decision to seek Tomlin's retirement. "The city manager makes personnel decisions of this type," he said. I feel he must have had sufficient reason to ask Mr. Tomlin to retire at this time.

Assistant City Manager Chester Nolan, who has no prior experience in law enforcement administration, was named acting police chief.

New nursing program set

CLARENDON — Clarendon College recently announced a cooperative agreement with Amarillo College to provide an Associate Degree Nursing (ADN) program on the Clarendon College campus in Pampa.

The program is expected to begin in the fall 1981 semester and will include students who have little or no formal nursing experience, as well as practicing licensed vocational nurses. Several options are available for entering and completing the program.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Defense: control and caution required

The selection of Caspar Weinberger as defense secretary has some hardening fans of military buildup a little concerned. Weinberger picked up the nickname "Cap the Knife" during his tenure as Reagan's budget chief in California, and it stuck while he was HEW secretary under Nixon. He has a reputation as a tough manager and he's refused to commit himself so far as a fixed percentage increase in defense spending. Some Pentagon people are expressing concern that they may not get all the shiny new weapons systems they've been craving.

It is probably true that Weinberger's reputation as a relatively good administrator who demands good reasons for budget increases has a little more grounding in reality than the image of the mad budget slasher. He will need all his skepticism and savvy to avoid chaos in the defense budget. Weinberger's biggest challenge (and Reagan's as well) will be to avoid being captured by his own constituency — the civilian and military bureaucrats at the Pentagon. These people are likely to feed the most tempting and deceptive fallacy that politicians often adopt concerning defense spending — equating a strong defense with a big military budget.

What is needed is a clear-eyed look at the way the Pentagon now wastes money on personnel, especially on extravagant retirement programs (93 percent of military retirees now retire from non-combat "support" roles).

If some programs are not scrapped now, we will be paying more and more for less and less real defense for the foreseeable future.

Trimming military fat

In a previous editorial we questioned the proposition that more money for the Pentagon automatically means better defense and safety for Americans. Too often, in fact, weapons systems are developed that are obviously wasteful and which, worse still, do not contribute to and could very well detract from the defense of the United States against a potential aggressor.

We hereby present examples of weapons systems that seem to us to be so obviously wasteful, so obviously misguided, that they deserve to be jettisoned right away. The problem is, too often, that systems that get off the drawing board assume a life of their own and are continued regardless of the fact that they don't even fulfill their original rationale.

The Trident submarine proposal is a case in point. The proposal now is to load our entire underwater nuclear arsenal onto 14 gigantic $2 billion Trident submarines. Assuming for the moment that there is any justification for placing missiles underwater, it would be to make them difficult to find. Supposedly, if the Soviets know there are lots of nuclear subs around and that it would be virtually impossible to locate and destroy them all, they'll think twice about launching a nuclear strike.

The Trident would give the Soviets fewer targets to shoot at. It looks like an expensive, dangerous boondoggle to us. Potential saving: $29 billion over the next several years.

The Army is working on an experimental tank. The XM-1 is too big to be carried on existing cargo planes. It is extremely complicated and uses vast quantities of fuel. In tests it has been plagued by equipment failures and malfunctions, even on relatively easy terrain. Yet it is manufactured by Chrysler Corp., and for the life of us that's the only reason we can imagine for going ahead with it — to keep Chrysler in business. Current plans are to spend $12 billion over the next several years. The project ought to be scrapped.

The F-18, designed to be a "lightweight, low-cost" fighter has turned out to be overweight and slow. It also costs twice as much (at least $27 million each) as the original projections. In attempting to be a multi-service plane, it has succeeded in being relatively useless for all services, much like the late, unlamented TFX. The Pentagon is phasing out the F-15, generally considered the best fighter in the world, and phasing in the F-18, which may be the worst, and costs much more. It would be less expensive for taxpayers to write off the development costs sunk into the F-18 as a bad investment and scrap the project.

The buzzword among military experts now is the Rapid Deployment Force, which is supposed to be able to add fuel to the fire of any crisis in the world within hours. They're planning to spend $35 billion on this turkey. The RDF as now projected would have a multiple command structure with the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines all having assignments, but no visible overall leadership. Sort of like a football team with four quarterbacks on the field at the same time.

It looks to us as if the RDF is designed to serve the purpose the Marines were supposed to serve. The Marines are already around. Why create another new service branch which is likely to build layers and barriers of liaison, logistics and jealous generals, who would rather fight each other than the Russians?

We would note, finally, that at least one-third of the U.S. defense budget is allocated toward the defense of Europe. The cost of troops and equipment physically stationed in Europe is $57 billion per year. When you add in the troops and equipment stationed in the U.S. but designated as NATO reinforcements, the cost rises to $81 billion per year. Maybe Washington ought to send NATO an annual invoice.

These are just a few suggestions for serious cuts. There is no reason military budgets should be any more sacrosanct than any other government budget, especially when spending programs don't purchase demonstrable safety or security. We haven't delved more deeply at this time into more fundamental issues of just what the legitimate and proper roles of U.S. military forces might be, but those questions need serious discussion too.

Meantime, these cuts would be a good place to start.

By Don Graff
If you've had enough by now of the item-by-item, billion-by-billion analysis of President Reagan's economic blueprint for the national future, this is for you. There's none of that in what follows.
The subject does involve billions, however — those to be poured into the one major program that is to be neither cut back nor put on hold at current expenditure levels.
Defense.
No surprise there, of course. There had been many advance words to the effect that the new administration's lean, trim budgeting for the '80s included additional billions for arms. So many words, in fact, that it may have come as a surprise to some listeners when the president coupled his remarks on this subject in his actual address with a pledge to root out waste and fraud in the military establishment.

Arms and the economy

Waste in the military? That's an issue that hasn't been much publicized since the 1976 presidential campaign of Jimmy Carter. Surely you remember him?

Not that it hasn't still been kicking around. For example, as the subject of a recent House Appropriations Committee report on defense funding for 1981. The report cited 46 specific spending abuses by the armed forces that ranged from the petty — military personnel helping themselves from fuel and other supply stocks — to the immense — failure to settle accounts with nations receiving U.S. military assistance. The General Accounting Office estimates that last item, very often involving personnel training and transportation costs recipient countries had contracted to pay, alone represents a billion-dollar loss to the United States.

In between come such debit entries as deterioration of carelessly stored equipment, overcharging by outside contractors, payment for work never performed and, in the case of the Navy, questionable and costly changes in ship design during construction.

The committee report put the dollar cost to the Defense Department — and ultimately the American taxpayer — at tens of billions annually, more than the entire budgets of many social programs that the administration is targeting for deep cuts.

The Reagan team at the Pentagon has its own plan for shaping up military finances that may make the House document redundant. Or, considering how several previous new administrations have fared in this area, maybe not.

Waste is not the only economic consideration involved in determining levels of military spending. There is also the overall impact upon the economy itself.

The conventional view is that the effect is stimulating, and it undeniably is for specific localities where outlays for military facilities and hardware produced by civilian plants mean more jobs, expanded payrolls and money in the pockets of the customers of local businesses. But on a national scale, the story is different.

A case can be made that military spending has an ultimately negative effect upon economic growth. It is a diversion of a significant portion of a society's available funds from productive uses to non-productive ends.

Money invested in a machine tool plant or electronic components manufacture produces items that are then used to produce more goods, compounding the return on investment and expanding the economy's productive capacity. Similarly, money put into services such as transportation enables people to reach jobs to produce more goods and services.

But military spending is an end in itself, an economic dead end. A flamethrower, a tank, a jet fighter contribute nothing further to economic growth. The bucks stop there.

In short, in terms of the supply-side, demand-side philosophy of economics so popular in this administration, most of those billions for defense pile up on the side of the latter. Which is not this administration's oft-stated economic intention.

Maybe in the long run it won't matter. Maybe the other growth-encouraging parts of that program will be sufficient to offset the military drag and yield the predicted improvement of the total economy. Or, considering how previous new administrations have fared with their programs for economic improvement, maybe not.

Appropriations is hell

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — There is no doubt in anyone's mind that the military is going to get everything it asks for in the new Reagan budget. But it's easier to give money to the Pentagon than it is to spend it. All the services want their mits on the new funds, and once it's been okayed, we may see internecine battles between the armed forces, the likes of which this country has never witnessed before.

As soon as Congress appropriates the money, it will be delivered in a Brink's truck to the doorstep of the Pentagon, where high-ranking officers of the four branches of services will be waiting for it.

An admiral will say to the Brink's employees, "OK, men, bring the money up to the safe in the Navy procurement office."

"The hell you say," an Air Force general will shout. "That money is going for our MX missile program. The Air Force needs every penny of it, and more."

An Army four-star general will chip in. "Keep your hands off those bags. They've been set aside to build up our conventional forces."

"In a pig's ear," the admiral says.

"Every cent has been allotted for new nuclear carriers and anti-submarine ships."

"What about me?" a Marine Corps general says.

"Oh, shut up," the Army general says. "The Brink's driver is annoyed. 'Will you guys make up your minds? We have to go to lunch.'"

"I talked to the Senate Armed Services Committee and they said we could build a new bomber with this money," the Air Force general says, trying to grab one of the bags.

"The Army general pushes him. 'Keep your hands off that bag. That's going for our M-60 tank.'"

"President Reagan says he wants a Rapid Deployment Force," the Marine Corps general says. "And the Marines are the only ones who can do the job."

"You stay out of this," the admiral warns. "We'll give you what's left over, once we build our missile cruiser ships."

"The Air Force general says to the Army general, 'Don't ever push me again or we'll bomb Fort Bragg back to the Stone Age.'"

"Oh yeah," the Army general says. "How would you like to see SAC headquarters filled with nerve gas?" While the two are arguing, the admiral is heaving bags of money behind a bush. The Air Force general and Army general start beating up on him. The admiral shouts to the Marine general for help, and the Marine says, "Not until you promise me enough for 1,000 helicopters."

The Brink's guard separates the officers. The admiral, dusting himself off, says, "That does it. We attack Langley Air Force Base tomorrow morning."

"Listen," the Brink's guard says, "if you guys don't want the money, I know a lot of people in the government who do."

By this time, someone has notified Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, who rushes down.

"What's going on?" he asks angrily. "Did you promise the Air Force this money for an MX system and a new bomber?"

"Yes, I did," Weinberger says. "And did you give me your solemn word it would go for new aircraft carriers and submarines?" the admiral asks.

"Of course."

"And didn't you swear," the Army general asks, "that we would get the bulk of the new appropriations to modernize our equipment?"

"I recall saying that."

"So which service gets the money?"

"None of you," Weinberger replies. "I just got a call from Al Haig and he says the $8 billion has to go for military equipment we're giving to El Salvador."

El Salvador and the American left

By Edward J. Walsh

Although most Americans did not notice, the resumption of U.S. military aid to the embattled government in El Salvador on January 14 was an occasion for celebration by the American left. For the left, the bloody civil war between the Marxist guerrillas of El Salvador and the authoritarian junta is, in effect, a step back in time, to the early sixties. American military assistance was the first step the U.S. took towards entrapment in Vietnam, an ordeal that lasted more than a decade and cost more than 50,000 American lives. But Vietnam also breathed new life into the tiny squabbling factions that composed the political left in the United States, and, in fact, created a cultural revolution with the radical activists of the New Left in the vanguard. The New Leftists broke with the Soviet sycophants of the Old Left, but agitated with equal vigor for Soviet goals in Southeast Asia.

Since the Vietnam War ended, however, the left has been disorganized, notwithstanding the fling with anti-nuclear polemics. The crisis in El Salvador, simmering slowly in blood, is a new opportunity. Thus on February 6, the predictable full-page advertisement appeared in The New York Times announcing the formation of the "U.S. Committee in Solidarity With the People of El Salvador." Those endorsing the Committee's efforts to stop U.S. aid to the Salvadoran government included Jane Fonda, spokeswoman for North Vietnam; Bella Abzug, radical former Congresswoman and longtime member of communist front groups; and a long list of radical leftists whose opposition to the American involvement in Vietnam amounted to approval of, or indifference to, the savageries perpetrated by the communists.

So it is with the Committee's stance on El Salvador: it calls for an "end to all forms of U.S. military aid and presence in El Salvador" — and decries the aid as the first step towards "another Vietnam." But there is no mention at all of the extensive arms shipments from the Soviet Union and other communist bloc nations to the Salvadoran Marxist guerrillas, who are conducting their own reign of terror.

On February 9, three days after the Committee's ad appeared, the Times reported that the State Department had obtained documents captured from guerrillas in El Salvador that describe the visit of Shafik Handal, secretary general of the Salvadoran communist party, to communist leaders in Vietnam, Ethiopia, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, East Germany, and the Soviet Union, all of whom promised substantial military aid, including from Vietnam, "1,620 M-16 rifles, 162 M-30 and 36 M-60 machine guns, 48 mortars, 12 antitank rocket launchers, 1.5 million rounds of ammunition and 11,000 mortar rounds." Much of this was American munitions captured after the fall of South Vietnam in 1975. The others promised similar weapons windfalls to the guerrillas.

In a sense, the crisis in El Salvador is a replay of the tragedy of Vietnam. The left, up to its neck in hypocrisy, is flailing the human rights issue where the anti-communist, pro-American government is concerned, but meanwhile encouraging communist warfare with communist weapons, direct from Hanoi, Moscow, and other communist capitals. In Vietnam, we see today what the activities of anti-American leftists created. They are at it again, in El Salvador.

The Robert E. Lee Memorial is a historic residence, Arlington House, on a hilltop above Arlington National Cemetery. It was built by George Washington Parke Custis, grandson of Martha Washington and father of Mary Ann Randolph Custis, who married Lee in the house in 1831. The house was confiscated during the Civil War, but was returned to George Washington Custis Lee, grandson of the builder, who sold it to the government in 1883 for $150,000.

Names in the news

CHICAGO (AP) — Roman Catholic theologian Hans Kung, whose controversial views have been censured by the Vatican, has accepted an invitation to teach at the University of Chicago Divinity School this fall, university officials say.

Kung, 52, author of a number of best-sellers, including "Does God Exist: An Answer for Today" and "On Being a Christian," is a professor of ecumenical theology at the University of Tubingen in West Germany.

The Swiss-born priest has outraged church authorities by challenging Roman Catholic teachings on papal infallibility, the right of women to hold church office, priestly celibacy and birth control.

In 1979, after conducting an inquiry into Kung's positions, the Vatican's Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, with the approval of Pope John Paul II, revoked Kung's status as a Catholic theologian at the West German school. His position as professor at the university is not controlled by the German bishops.

University of Chicago officials said that as John Nuveen, visiting professor at the divinity school, Kung will teach a course in ecumenical theology and lead a seminar on the existence of God.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Television actor Greg Morris, hurt in an auto accident, has been transferred out of intensive care unit at a hospital, but officials say they don't know how soon he will be released.

"He's out of intensive care as of this morning, but he's still in a lot of pain," Sunrise Hospital spokeswoman Rena Ruby said Wednesday. "He looks real good. He's very cooperative and just really a neat guy."

Morris, 47, star of the "Vegas" series, suffered cuts on his face, arm and shoulder Monday night when his car overturned on Interstate 15 just west of the Nevada-California state line. He was returning to his Las Vegas home from California.

Morris, who plays a police lieutenant on the ABC-TV series, will "have to mend now for a while and get some of those bangs and bruises out of the way," said Ms. Ruby.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Former President Isabel Peron, under house arrest pending trial on corruption charges, has been ordered to take a complete rest after complaining of stomach and chest pains, say spokesmen for the Peronist party.

Mrs. Peron was examined by her physician, Alejandro Martin, at a retreat at nearby San Vicente where she has been staying. Martin said the pains were due to a previously diagnosed stomach ulcer.

Mrs. Peron, the third wife of strongman Gen. Juan Peron, succeeded her husband to the presidency in July 1974 upon his death. She was arrested in March 1976 during a military coup.

Prior to her ouster, Mrs. Peron spent long periods in bed, reportedly suffering nervous disorders and, since her arrest, has been hospitalized for a circulatory ailment and an appendectomy.

ATLANTA (AP) — Countries surrounding the Persian Gulf, with help from the United Nations, are developing plans to prevent and clean up oil spills in waters clogged with huge oil tankers, according to an oil spill consultant.

The Kuwait Action Plan involving eight nations is one of several programs initiated in the world's oil-producing regions by the United Nations Environmental Program. Richard Golob, executive editor of the Boston-based Oil Spill Intelligence Report, said Wednesday.

The United States, Canada and European nations have laws requiring that spills be reported and have contingency plans for handling the spills.

In contrast, most of the world's oil-producing nations — and non-producing nations along shipping routes — lack laws to limit oil discharges into their waters, the ability to track spills and bureaucracies to coordinate clean-ups, Golob said.

Golob acted as a UN consultant at a December meeting in Bahrain to develop the plan. He was in Atlanta for the national Oil Spill Conference sponsored by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the U.S. Coast Guard and the American Petroleum Institute.

Officials currently do not know the extent of pollution in the Gulf because reporting and monitoring systems are nonexistent, he said.

"We did a survey of all the countries in the region and identified no more than 15 major spills in the area since 1967," Golob said. "Our Feeling is there were undoubtedly more than 15, but the reporting systems are not in place, and any real understanding (of the problem) does not exist yet."

The first goal of the Kuwait Action Plan is the development of a Marine Emergency Mutual Aid Center to act as a clearinghouse for spill information, to train personnel in cleanup tactics and to coordinate cleanup efforts when spills occur.

Additionally, the plan would promote nationwide regulations limiting the amount of oil which refineries or wells may put into waste water and the amount of oil ships may discharge into the Gulf.

Another phase of the plan calls for regulations requiring producers or carriers to report their spills and a monitoring program to check for oil slicks and other discharges on the waters.

Unlike the United States, the Arab states and other oil-producing countries do not have the enormous pressure from the public and news media to protect the environment, Golob said.

"But partly because of the threat of oil contamination to water desalination plants, fisheries and hydroelectric plants using seawater, concern over the environment is growing in those areas, he said.

The eight Persian Gulf states are Bahrain, Iraq, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and United Arab Emirates.

Using the existing Mediterranean Sea plan as prototype, regional response plans also are being developed for the Caribbean Sea, South China Sea, southwest Pacific and West Africa, Golob said.

Rural, small town areas growing faster than cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — After decades of migration from the countryside, rural and small-town areas are growing faster in population than cities, new census figures show.

Preliminary results of the 1980 census show the population of non-metropolitan counties grew 15.4 percent during the last decade, compared with 9.1 percent for metropolitan counties and 10.8 percent for the nation as a whole.

Calvin Beale, head of population studies in the Agriculture Department's Economics and Statistics Service, reported years ago that the rural population drain had come to an end.

In a June 1975 report, for example, Beale said, "The vast rural-to-urban migration of people that was the common pattern of U.S. population movement in the decades after World War II has been halted and, on balance, even reversed. During 1970-73, non-metropolitan areas gained 4.2 percent in population, compared to only 2.9 percent for metro areas."

Beale, in his 1975 report, offered this explanation for the turn-around in population growth:

"In the eyes of many Americans, the appeal of major urban areas has diminished and the attractiveness of rural and small-town communities has increased, economically and otherwise."

Beale's latest analysis — comparing census information from 1970 and 1980 — shows that in absolute terms the number of people in non-metropolitan counties increased to 62.8 million from 54.4 million.

"This includes a net of at least 4 million people who moved in from metropolitan areas and abroad," Beale said. "By contrast, in the 1960s, some 2.8 million more people moved out of the rural and small-town counties than into them."

Metropolitan areas are generally considered those that contain urban centers of 50,000 or more people. The boundaries are extended to county lines, and adjacent counties are added to the area if they meet certain criteria of "worker commuting and metropolitan character," the report said.

"In general, all parts of the United States participated in the renewed population growth in rural and small-town communities," Beale said.

However, some areas grew rapidly, some grew at a more modest pace, and other counties showed only a reduced rate of decrease rather than absolute growth."

At the other extreme, Beale said, about one-sixth of the nation's counties had declines in population between 1970 and 1980.

"These counties were most heavily concentrated in the Great Plains and western Corn Belt, where continued loss of farm population was not offset by non-farm growth," Beale said.

The most populous non-metropolitan county in the 1980 census was Ocean County, N.J., with 344,000 people, a growth of 65 percent since 1970, he said. The smallest was Loving County, Texas, a ranching area with only 91 people, a 44 percent decline since 1970.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has lowered estimates of meat imports for this calendar year to about 1.4 billion pounds, not enough to trigger quotas.

Supreme Court says home buyers are consumers

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court ruled today an Arlington couple got shortchanged on the square footage in their house and are entitled to triple damages of more than $10,000.

In awarding damages to Jerry and Jo Ann Cameron, the Supreme Court extended the deceptive trade practices law to real estate brokerage and agency firms.

Terrell & Garrett, Inc., which is such a firm, had argued the Camerons had no right to sue.

The Camerons bought their house in October 1975 for $52,957 after Terrell & Garrett listed it as having 2,400 square feet. This would have made the cost of the house $22.06 per square foot. There was testimony the square footage represented heated and air-conditioned space.

After moving into the house, the Camerons had it measured and found out it had 2,245 square feet of heated and air-conditioned space — 155 feet less than represented by Terrell & Garrett.

The Camerons alleged actual damages of $3,419 — 155 square feet times $22.06 — and sought triple damages and attorney's fees, plus court costs.

The trial judge held for Terrell & Garrett, and the appeals court affirmed the ruling, saying the Camerons were not consumers.

The Supreme Court said Terrell & Garrett had argued that the Camerons could not be consumers "because it (the firm) was the seller's agent and did not furnish any goods or services that were sought or acquired by the Camerons."

"We find no indication in the definition of consumer ... or any other provision of the act that the Legislature intended to restrict its application only to deceptive trade practices committed by persons who furnish the goods or services on which the complaint is based," the Supreme Court said.

Bell wins case in Supreme Court

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court ruled today that Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. has the authority to operate radio-paging services in five regions of the state.

Those regions are Webb, McLennan, Nueces and Travis Counties and a group of three counties — Jones, Taylor and Callahan.

Other entities provide similar, but not identical, services, and each contested Bell's application.

The Public Utility Commission authorized Bell to operate the radio-paging service, and a Travis County trial court sustained the commission's order.

Lubbock Radio Paging Service, Inc., and others appealed, but the Beaumont Court of Civil Appeals rejected their appeal. The Supreme Court said it could find no reversible error in lower court rulings.

Lubbock Radio contended testimony of a survey by Mary Jane Peters, founder of Peters Marketing Service, should have been excluded as hearsay but the Beaumont appeals court disagreed.

It said the the PUC's orders and the trial court ruling were supported by substantial evidence.

Social security has management problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — John A. Svahn, tabbed to be the youngest commissioner of Social Security in the nation's history, says the $138 billion program faces significant management problems as well as its major fiscal woes.

The White House announced Monday that President Reagan had chosen Svahn to run Social Security. The 37-year-old management expert is a former state and federal welfare official who was one of the key architects of Reagan's welfare reforms in California 10 years ago.

In another major appointment announced Tuesday, Reagan picked J. Lynn Helms, retired chairman and former president of the Piper Aircraft Corp., to head the Federal Aviation Administration. Helms has flown more than 10,000 hours as a pilot and logs nearly 350 hours' flight time a year, a White House statement said.

Svahn served on the Reagan transition team for Social Security and headed a special team that examined what Svahn calls the program's "antiquated" computer systems.

He warned that the system could be in danger of a breakdown when the agency begins a two-year move into a new computer building at its headquarters at Woodlawn, outside Baltimore, this summer.

"It's a 1960s computer system trying to operate two generations removed. It's antiquated and it's been patched together over the years," Svahn said in an interview Monday. In moving the machinery "you run a real risk of having the thing slow down."

Svahn says he is "a strong believer in the Social Security system," but he called the fiscal problems it faces over the next few years and after the turn of the century "one of the most critical problems facing the country."

"Contrary to what the previous administration said, the financial problems are real," he said. "The management problems of that agency are significant as well."

Svahn believes some of the financial trouble stems from "a lot of the things that have been hung onto Social Security with inadequate tax support. You can't expect to keep adding and adding and adding and not pay for it."

"We have to make Social Security a strong and viable system," he said. "If I have any opportunity, I'd like to make sure it is there for future generations, mine and others, when it comes our turn to retire."

If approved by the Senate for the $52,750 job, Svahn will be the ninth commissioner and the first born after Social Security was started in 1935. The program began sending out benefit checks in 1940 and now largely supports nearly 36 million retired or disabled workers and their families.

MARK'S A DIGGER
PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Defensive end Mark Gastineau of the New York Jets collects Indian relics as a hobby and frequently has to dig for them.

His collection includes Indian beads, needle points made from animal bones, implements used for grinding corn, 150 arrowheads and 15 tomahawks. He also has several adobe pots worth $500 to $600 each.

"The most interesting piece I ever found was a sacrificial rock," he said. "It had eyes, nose and a mouth carved in it."

CHAMPIONSHIP FORM. Kristi Hughes of Pampa demonstrates her expertise on the balance beam during a recent workout. State gymnastics champ hopes for Olympic try

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor
Winning the Texas gymnastics title may be a steppingstone to an Olympic tryout for Pampa's Kristi Hughes.

The personable 14-year-old, who won the state Class 3 crown in the 11-14 age bracket last month in Houston, hopes to be ready for the 1984 Olympics.

"I want to try for the next Olympics and if I don't make it I want to continue gymnastics in college or get in some kind of a league," Miss Hughes says. "I'd like to try for the Olympics even when I'm older, say 21. I know there are older girls on the United States team like Kathy Johnson (Oklahoma City gymnast), who is about 23."

Miss Hughes compiled 36 points in state competition which automatically puts her in Class 2 next year where the winners advance to regionals after the state meet. A gymnast must collect 35 points or more at a state meet to move into a higher bracket.

Miss Hughes' Olympic goal will become more difficult in the higher classes. She's very much aware of that fact.

"It's tough to move up because the girls are getting better every year and only a select few can make it," Miss Hughes added. "Class 1 gymnasts go onto the nationals and only the top two or three in every regional make it."

Miss Hughes said the United States team members are chosen from the elite class.

"The elite class is the highest level," Miss Hughes explained. "You compete all over the United States and go to the nationals. Then there are the elimination trials for the Olympics."

Miss Hughes' performance at the state meet surprised both her and her father, Fred Hughes, who also happens to be her coach.

"I was confident about what I could do, but I just didn't know how I would place," Miss Hughes said. (She placed third at the Class 4 level a year ago) "The judges seem to be tougher on people from this section, so you have to be twice as good as the other gymnasts. There was another girl from Pampa (Joanna Barbaree) who is better than most of the girls at state, but she just missed making it."

"Of course I wanted Kristi to win, but I had some doubts because of the tremendous competition," Fred Hughes said.

good though. She won overall in all her qualifying events, but she didn't win all her individual events. If she had won everything, she may have lacked the incentive to do good at state."

Miss Hughes said the bars are her favorite event while the vault is the most difficult.

"I like the bars because they're fast and you can really do good when you get it all together," she said. "On the vault you have to go high and get long and it's hard on your body, especially if it doesn't go where you want it to go."

There's no off-season in gymnastics. Miss Hughes stays in shape all year long.

"It's something you just have to do," she said. "I hurt my knee three days before the state meet and didn't do anything. When I recovered enough to do floor exercises, I was breathing hard

SPORTS

"She was the first to go in her section and that let the others chip away at her. That's hard to do. It's better to chase someone, than have them chase you."

Miss Hughes stayed on top by placing first in both the bars and floor exercises with 9.3 and 9.5 points respectively. She received a 9.2 in the vault for third place and an 8.8 on the balance beam for fifth.

"It was the first time she had won the bars all year," Hughes said. "That's and was so out of shape. That was after only three days."

Miss Hughes started her career by entering NARDS in Amarillo, but quit after four years because the gymnastics school did away with compulsory exercises.

"I knew the moves by then and mom and dad could watch me and tell me what I was doing wrong," Miss Hughes said. "That's when I starting winning."

How true.

Spurs play most disappointing game

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs, who have practically clinched the Midwest Division title, were given a basketball lesson by the Kansas City Kings, a team hustling for a berth in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

The Kings, ignited by a brilliant 39-point performance from Otis Birdsong and a stingy defense, raced by the Spurs 111-97 to get themselves back into the playoff picture Wednesday night, leaving San Antonio coach Stan Albeck wondering what happened.

"As far as I'm concerned, this is the most disappointing game this year," said Albeck. "They beat us in every phase of the game and Birdsong's shooting absolutely killed us."

"They are not out of the playoff picture. Their backs were to the wall and you've got to give them credit," he added. Birdsong outscored the entire San Antonio team in the second period, driving around the Spurs for five layups and shooting over them for five more baskets, while San Antonio totalled only 14 points in the quarter.

That outburst fueled Kansas City to a 56-40 halftime lead, marking the lowest point production by the Spurs for any half this season. Kansas City upped the lead to 91-67 after three periods.

"I was able to shoot well tonight. Some nights they fall and tonight was one of them," said Birdsong, who hit 19 of 25 field goal attempts for 64 percent and sank his only free throw.

"I was really fired up when I came. I wanted to play good, aggressive basketball. We needed a win after last night (a 99-98 loss to Los Angeles in Kansas City.) Last night was a tough loss. If we can continue to put it all together, we're not out of it (playoffs) yet."

The triumph, first for the Kings in 10 trips to HemisFair Arena, lifted them to a 34-36 record in a tight race with Golden State and Houston for the 5th and 6th playoff positions in the Western Conference.

"All our games are important to us now. We can't afford to lose," said Kansas City coach Cotton Fitzsimmons. "I said this afternoon we would come out playing hard and hustling. We did it tonight and we're going to do it until the final game of the season."

Scott Wedman backed Birdsong with 18 points, while Joe Meriweather and Reggie King added 15 apiece for the winners.

Santee leads gold medal race

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — American figure skaters David Santee and Scott Hamilton are set for what both predict will be a great showdown — their battle for a World Figure Skating gold medal tonight.

If Wednesday's short program was any indication, they're right.

Santee, 23, of Park Ridge, Ill., moved from second into first place overall and Hamilton was third, with Jean-Christophe Simond, of France, in second.

Although Santee, who recently lost the national championship to Hamilton in San Diego, says the faceoff with Scott will be "fun," he is confident of a gold medal.

"My goal is in ice skating has always been to be world champion," said Santee, who has competed in five other worlds and never won a medal. Now I'm on the doorstep.

Also Wednesday, the Soviets continued their world domination of the pairs event, with Irina Vorobieva and Igor Lisovsky winning the gold medal. Sabine Baess and Tassilo Thierbach of East Germany were second and Christina Riegel and Andreas Nischwitz of West Germany were third.

It was the 16th time in 17 years that the Soviets have won the championship, with only Americans Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner breaking the stranglehold in 1979.

The defending world champions, Soviets Marina Cherkasova and Sergei Shakrai gave a lackluster performance and finished fourth overall.

The American national champions, the brother-sister team of Peter and Kitty Carruthers, of Wilmington, Del., moved from seventh to fifth overall.

Dread of alleged mob boss may bring him down

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Reputed New England crime boss Raymond L.S. Patriarca is a little man — only 5-foot-6 and slightly built. But he can strike fear in ruthless men twice his size, and that may prove his downfall.

Last fall, convinced the 72-year-old Patriarca had ordered his execution, hitman Nicholas "Nicky" Palmigiano broke the mob's oath of silence to swear it was Patriarca who ordered him to kill a small-time hoodlum in 1965.

His statements to state police and a grand jury led to charges of accessory to murder being filed against Patriarca, who was described at a 1963 Senate crime committee hearing as the top man in the New England branch of the Cosa Nostra.

The investigation and upcoming April 6 trial of Patriarca and co-defendant Rudolph Sciarra, who allegedly supplied the murder weapon, could mark the most crippling foray yet into the top levels of New England organized crime, which police say controls loan-sharking, gambling and fencing operations.

Palmigiano, 42, a squat, muscular man who has spent most of his adult life behind bars, testified at a bail hearing for Sciarra that he shot Raymond the April trial. Gemma said he will be relocated under a new identity under the federal Witness Protection program.

Patriarca, who suffers from heart problems and other ailments, is free on $100,000 bail. Bail was denied for Sciarra.

The raspy-voiced Patriarca, who began as a small-time run runner and armed robber, is legend in Providence.

Until his illness he was a fixture on the streets of the largely Italian Federal Hill section, dressed in his trademark dark suit and white socks. On Jan. 2 and Feb. 2, the days of the bail hearing, the curious lined up three deep outside the courtroom to hear testimony about the underworld Patriarca has allegedly run for a quarter century.

"He's a well-liked man around here, well-respected with a terrific sense of humor," said his lawyer, Jack Cicilline.

Patriarca was born in Worcester, Mass., on St. Patrick's Day 1908. His parents were Italian immigrants. At 14, he quit school and began a life of crime.

Fluid may cause swollen ankles

DEAR DR. LAMB — My ankles began to swell yesterday, which scared me. They have never done that before. Is that caused by kidney problems? Would you please let me know? I have a little heart trouble.

I was sitting, working a picture puzzle, when I noticed the swelling that night. I put my feet in hot water with vinegar and the swelling went down some. Could poor circulation be the cause?

DEAR READER — Most swelling is caused by the local accumulation of fluid that is trapped outside the blood vessels and inside the tissues. With an injury such as a bad sprain, that may be from bleeding in the injured area from torn small blood vessels.

I can't be sure why you had swelling, as it is just a symptom. Swollen feet and legs can result when the right side of the heart fails. Swelling also results from varicose veins, liver disease and less often kidney disease — unless the kidney disease is particularly severe.

Pressure can be a factor. When you sit in a chair that compresses the veins in the back of the thighs for a long time the buildup in pressure in the veins may prevent the normal return of fluid from the tissues to your small capillaries.

Regardless of whether swelling is from varicose veins or even a sprain, a major factor is the position of the swollen part. Fluid pools in the tissues below the heart level. When you are sitting up or standing still the fluid pools in your feet. When you lie down and put your feet above the level of your heart the fluid drains back into your circulation.

This is one of the basic points about swelling discussed in The Health Letter number 11-6, Swelling: Causes and Management, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Remember that fluid runs downhill. This also applies to bleeding under the skin or from an open wound. As quickly as possible get the injured part up and above the heart level. If it is an ankle, lie down and get the ankle above the level of your head. Properly applied pressure is also important in preventing swelling.

Salt restriction and other medical measures may be necessary in chronic swelling problems.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 71 years old, 5 feet 2 and weigh 100 pounds. I have always been in good health most of my life. I live on a farm and run cattle. I'm active in farm life and church activities. I lost my husband four years ago so I still carry on. My problem is bad leg cramps, which I have had for a number of years. I live alone and have no one to help me loosen them.

It is not because I over-exercise. I just have them. Is it what I eat or don't eat? If I ever move at night I am caught.

DEAR READER — There are many causes for leg cramps. Anyone who has persistent leg cramps should have a medical examination. From your comment, I assume yours occur at night; many of my readers swear by wearing warm socks to bed to help prevent the problem. I think the idea is to keep the muscles warm all night. Cold muscles tend to cramp.

Otherwise, some people get help from various medicines and some are helped with vitamin E. I'm not big on vitamin E for most things, but it apparently does help some people with leg cramps.

At Wit's End

I have a recurring nightmare in which my son is getting the Nobel Prize for Science. After he is presented the award, he turns to see the entire audience on its feet clapping wildly. Finally, the applause dies down and there is a silence that lasts at least a year.

I can't stand it. I crawl to the stage on my hands and knees, tug on his pantsleg and whisper, "Say thank you!" He is 55 years old.

To a mother, "Thank you" is the ultimate in manners and breeding. It's toney... it's style... it transcends raggy underwear, knotted shoestrings and dog hairs on your sweater. It melts the hardest hearts, bends the rigid, and insures a happy death for her.

To a child, "Thank you" is something you say to make your mother let go of the cookie.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 55-year-old chemical engineer, married to a 52-year-old woman for 32 years.

Since last August I have suffered a heart attack, my wife has had a malignant tumor and one kidney removed, my 64-year-old sister died of cancer, my wife's 46-year-old sister died of cancer, and our closest friend has just been diagnosed as terminal with an inoperable brain tumor.

And as if that's not bad enough, two of our three children have hit bottom — drugs, alcohol, charged with robbery and all the other things that tear parents up. In one month I must return to the hospital for removal of an aneurysm and replacement by aortic graft.

Yesterday I came home and found a "love letter" from my wife. It read (in part), "Darling, you are like a rock and I am like a balloon. And if we weren't tied together, I'd have floated off into space long ago and burst! Thank you for your commitment to a lasting marriage. I don't know all the hurts I've caused you, but knowing myself, I've caused you plenty. I just want to say I love you, and I'm glad you love me." Abby, my spirits are high, and I feel so lucky I had to share this with someone.

I MARRIED AN ANGEL (ATHENS, GA.)

DEAR MARRIED: Your letter started out like the Book of Job, but what a lovely O. Henry ending! Thanks for sharing. And may you and your angel enjoy another 32 years together.

DEAR ABBY: A woman signed ENVIOUS wrote in to list all the advantages of being "the other woman" instead of the wife. Well, she is all wet. I have been the other woman, and I know firsthand that it's a losing game. I was married. My lover wasn't, but he was living with a woman who watched him closer than most wives watch their husbands. He managed to see me anyway. He kept telling me he loved me, but as long as I was a married woman there was no hope of marrying me, so he might as well live with this other woman and let her keep house and cook for him.

I was so in love with him that after two years I couldn't stand it, so I got a divorce. Did he marry me? Are you kidding? He ran like his pants were on fire!

LOVED AND LOST

DEAR LOVED: From the sound of your lover, you didn't lose much.

DEAR ABBY: Recently a woman signed G. IN JERSEY asked, "Now that I'm a career woman, why can't my husband be as supportive of my career as I was of his?" You said, "He must be the exception; most men are very supportive of their wives' careers."

Usually you are so "right on" that it's hard to believe that you were so out to lunch on this subject. I took that column to work with me, and you should have heard the reaction from the 30 women with whom I work! They said, "Abby must be referring to her own husband — and he is the exception."

Looking back, I think my kids were under the influence of hypnosis. They'd stand there like a fire hydrant until I said the key words, "What do you say?" and then they'd respond with all the feelings of a doll with a string in its neck. "Thank you."

I could never get them to use the word in the right place.

They'd say "Thank you" for a lick off a second-hand ice cream cone from a friend.

They'd remain mute when their grandmother gave them a check for their birthday.

They'd say "Thank you" for a piece of auto glass and a weasel tooth.

They'd be comatose when someone gave them a ride to the library in a blizzard.

The "Thank you" experience may be an exercise in futility, but it is one lesson that mothers never seem to give up on. They pursue it forever. The other day I said to my son, "Did you ever thank Mrs. Butler for that little bathtub toy for your birthday?"

"Mom! That was 23 years ago."

"She's probably wondering if you liked it."

"I ate it, didn't I?"

"And I don't suppose you ever thanked Aunt Mary for the atlas for your graduation."

"Why are you bringing all of this up now?"

"Because I am tired and I want to put child-raising behind me."

He lifted up the phone, dialed and finally said, "Hey, thanks a lot!"

I beamed. "You see, that wasn't so difficult, was it? By the way, who were you talking to?"

He shrugged. "It was a recording. I forgot myself."

Women drill sergeants seek acceptance

SGT. LUCY LEMBKE: "I am required to do everything the men do here, and I might add that I have to do it better." She is one of 230 women who are serving as drill sergeants in the U.S. Army, and she is responsible for about 50 men and women. Some recruits and officers do not easily accept a woman drill sergeant, she said.

FORT JACKSON, S.C. (NEA) - When the late Creighton Abrams was chief of staff of the Army, women were just about to come into the regular ranks. Publicly the general supported it, but privately he had reservations. "Next thing you know," he commented, "they'll want to be drill sergeants."

So, everyone chuckled. Drill sergeants had been turning recruits into soldiers since Von Steuben, and their masculinity was an article of faith in the Army. They had been rough, they had been tough, and - ho ho - here was Gen. Abrams suggesting that little ole gals might have presumptions?

Meet Lucy Lembke. Army serial number 152444432. She is blonde, fair-eyed, 5 feet 6 inches tall, 136 pounds, and, God bless you Gen. Abrams, she is one of 230 women who are serving as drill sergeants in the Army of 1981.

She is also serving quite well, apparently. She lacks the classic swagger of the traditional drill instructor, and she doesn't shave with a bayonet like the fellows of legend, but neither is she a dainty flower. Solid and husky voiced, she is said to be able to growl and glower with the best.

At present she is growling in the basic training school at Fort Jackson. Women are not yet allowed to drill combat recruits, but the GIs at Jackson are being trained for supporting rolls. Some 38,000 recruits are going through this school this year; 10 percent of their drill sergeants will be women.

Thus employed, Sgt. Lembke, 27, is responsible for the progress of about 50 men and women. When women first became drill sergeants in the Army, in the late 1970s, training units were segregated by sex and she was assigned accordingly. Now the ranks are integrated, and she labors in the mix.

It's not easy, she says. Actually, it may be the most difficult and important job in the enlisted service. Drill sergeants are the midwives of Army virility; they are also the surrogate parents of the troops of tomorrow. If they fail at their level, the rest of the echelons don't matter.

So, says Sgt. Lembke, "I have to work like a dog." She gets up at 4:30, she is on duty 12 to 18 hours a day, and occasionally she gets Sundays off. When it rains, she stands with her troops; when her feet hurt, she stands with her troops. "Sometimes," she smiles, "I think I made a mistake."

The latter remark is in jest, of course. But there is an edge to it. Sgt. Lembke says it's tough enough being a drill sergeant, but it's more than that when one is a woman. "Nobody gives us anything," she sighs, "we compete just like the men. The thing about this job is to have a thick skin."

For instance there is the novelty to suffer. The sergeant says women drill instructors are laughed at, verbally abused, and it's no fun getting a wolf whistle on parade. "A woman has a little wiggle, you know. It's impossible to overcome it. But you still have to go marching in public."

Then there are the recruits. They are particular problems for women sergeants whether they are men or women themselves. Some of the young men, for example, are too macho to take orders from women. Sgt. Lembke says some others "act like big brothers, and think it's their duty to protect us."

A few of the male recruits are overprotective, the sergeant adds, and rumors of fra-ternization fly. One rumor concerns a female drill instructor who was grabbed from behind one day, and struck back with a judo chop. Unfortunately, she hit her playful husband, who'd come out to the field for a visit.

And if the men give the lady instructors pause, the women recruits can be just as bad. Sgt. Lembke says females do not like to be corrected by other females, and are to claim harassment. Truth is, she goes on, can't be manipulated like men - and so that's some women get upset."

Yet even the scorn of sisters is not the worst for women drill sergeants. The worst by any means that they have not yet accepted as equals by peers.

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

March 6, 1981

As coming year you are likely be far more ambitious than you have been in the past. You'll know what you want and you'll be prepared to work hard to bring your desires into being.

SCORPIO (Feb. 20-March 20) It's at that you won't be ambitious today — it's that you may channel your efforts in the wrong direction. The success you hope to achieve could thus elude you. Find out more about what's in store for you by sending for your Astro-Graph which begins with our birthday. Mail $1 for each Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful today that you don't step out of character and permit the green-eyed monster of envy to affect your thinking. Jealousy isn't your style.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you are at a gathering today where friends are saying unkind things about a pal who isn't present, you'd be wise to express your own views.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your objectives must be clearly defined today, or confusion might enter the picture. That which could be achieved may slip by the boards.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Others cannot be expected to support your views or opinions today if they feel you don't totally believe in them. Take a firm position.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Joint commercial ventures could be a trifle trickier today than usual. Take steps to protect your interests as well as of those with whom you're involved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Under pressure today you could make concessions or commitments which may not serve your best interests. Start maneuvering if you feel you're being backed into a corner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Co-workers must be handled with kid gloves today or you may inadvertently do something which they could take offense at that you'd have a hard time rectifying.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Guard against impulsive spending today and also be careful how you deal with friends socially. In some unique manner these two influences may negatively overlap.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You know what needs doing today and you are a good starter, but your incentive could wane and you may fade in the home stretch. Be tenacious.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Say nothing of anyone today which you wouldn't like said of yourself. This pertains particularly to a close friend whose feelings are easily hurt.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is not a good day to do any deficit spending. Don't blow funds which you hope to have, but which aren't yet in your hands.

SWC tourney winner is anybody's guess

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Baylor and Texas were favored tonight in the Southwest Conference Basketball postseason tournament, but if you want to bet on it, then you haven't been paying attention in the wake of a wild, wild regular season.

Not much made sense during the regular season as favorites suffered ambushes almost every week.

And the oddsmakers took note for tonight's doubleheader in this sixth annual affair, giving Baylor a 1-point edge over the surprising Texas Christian Horned Frogs and installing the Longhorns as 1 1/2-point favorites over Texas Tech.

TCU, which finished eighth during the regular season, wasn't even supposed to be here. A 38-foot shot at the buzzer Monday night by guard Darrell Browder gave TCU a 62-60 victory over the defending champion Texas Aggies and a spot in the tournament.

In fact, TCU received tournament sweaters Wednesday night which had Texas A&M sizes.

TCU coach Jim Killingsworth said, "We're just excited about being here and we don't mind if the sweaters don't fit."

Baylor coach Jim Haller, honored by his fellow coaches as The Associated Press SWC Coach of the Year, said, "All I know is I'm scared to death of TCU. But I've got to admit, we spent most of our time practicing for Texas A&M."

The game will feature two of the highest scorers in the conference, with Baylor's Terry Teagle matching his 20-point per game scoring pace against that of Browder, who has scored a 19.5-per-game clip.

Reagan recalls grid experiences

By WILL GRIMSLEY, AP Special Correspondent

President Ronald Reagan, the legendary "Gipper" in the movie that memorialized Notre Dame's Coach Knute Rockne, sees football as a game that engenders "clean hatred" and "mutual respect."

"I know of no other game that gave me the same feeling that football did," the nation's chief executive told Inside Sports in an interview recalling his experiences as a 135-pound guard in high school, later a 175-pound lineman in college and a radio sports announcer.

Interviewed by Mark Shields, a columnist for the Washington Post, Reagan was asked if he felt that his experiences in sports had given him a particular sense of accomplishment.

"Well, I think they have," the president replied. "And I think football particularly. A Navy football player once described it as the nearest thing to war without being lethal."

"It is the last thing left in civilization where two men can literally fling themselves bodily at each other in combat and not be at war. You hate the color of his jersey, but there's a mutual respect that develops while you're playing on the field."

"And, also, there is a kind of inner confidence because you've met your fellow man in that kind of combat. I played other games, too. Football went deeper. That's why you can look at the bench when the TV camera comes over and see fellows sitting there crying."

"I've sat there crying." Reagan follows in the tradition of other presidents who had a close affinity with and a love for sports.

William Howard Taft, fearful of disapproval of his constituency, would sneak away from the White House and hit golf balls in privacy hours at a time. Warren Harding liked to entertain baseball heroes.

Dwight Eisenhower was an avid golfer who had a second White House at Augusta, Ga., home of the Masters. John F. Kennedy was a sailor, golfer and touch football buff. Both Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford got their relaxation on the golf course. Jimmy Carter played tennis.

Reagan, a left-handed gunslinger in a score of Western movies, got his greatest movie fame perhaps in the role of the dying George Gipp in the film "Knute Rockne: All-American" in which Pat O'Brien played the legendary coach of the Fighting Irish.

In this week's issue of the sports magazine, Shields, a former Notre Damer himself, elicits from the president the information that he, Reagan, was partly responsible for the making of the picture.

"I told the Gipp story on the air once when I was a sports announcer," the president recalled, "with no idea that one day in Hollywood I would be saying those same lines, because they were right out of Rockne's diary."

Reagan said he always felt that the Rockne story should be made into a movie. When he got to Hollywood, he started putting together the framework of a script and passing it among the studios. Then he learned that Warner Brothers was doing the picture.

He approached a producer of his films, Brynne Foy, who thought Reagan was seeking some payment for the idea.

Reagan recalled the subsequent details: "I said, 'Well, I don't want anything for it. I just want to play the Gipper.' He said, 'They've tested half a dozen guys already. I rushed to see the producer and his first words to me were, 'Well, wait a minute. This is the greatest football player who ever lived. He didn't think I was big enough.'"

Reagan rushed home and got a picture of himself in a football uniform, pads and all. Pat O'Brien personally helped him with the screen test. He got the part.

In the movie, O'Brien, as Rockne, says to Reagan, the Gipper: "I want you to run with the ball."

"How far?" asks the Gipper.

Reagan was a 135-pound guard at North Side High School in Dixon, Ill., captain of the 135-and-under team. He later was elevated to the varsity and was close to six feet and 175 pounds when he entered Eureka College in Illinois in the Little 19 Conference.

It wasn't the Big Ten or the Ivy League.

"Let me say one thing in defense of that Little 19 Conference," Reagan said. "The Little 19, at that time, sent more players to pro ball than any conference in the country."

And, he might have added, a man to the White House.

Old baseball star

Why Sal Bando plans to say goodbye

By Murray Olderman

WAIANA, Hawaii (NEA) — For the first time in 16 years, Salvatore Leonard Bando has had a desultory attitude about reporting for spring baseball training.

In fact, Sal Bando has already told his employer, the Milwaukee Brewers, that he is on the verge of retiring from the active playing ranks. This was not done casually. It means giving up a salary that is now more than a quarter of a million dollars a year plus the perquisites that go with being an active major-league star.

But Sal is also realistic. He is 37 years old. And the skills that once placed him among the premier third basemen in the major leagues — a performer in three All-Star games and the leader of a team (the Oakland A's) that won three straight World Series — have vanished subtly and inevitably.

Sal doesn't look any different, except for the thinning, graying tufts of hair on his head. His muscles, very much in evidence while he swatted golf balls here in the 15th annual American Airlines Golf Classic, are still well bunched, but supple.

Only the results are different.

Sal found that out in 1980 when his batting average dipped to .197 and he played in only 50 games. This was a guy who made a habit of playing 162 games a season and felt like having his pay docked if he had to lay off one day.

Sal Bando is smack up against the realization that comes to all great athletes when the end of their careers is apparent — that it's time for brutal self-appraisal and a new game plan for life.

Since he's also a shade more intelligent than most and doesn't carry the burden of a huge ego, Bando is able to rationalize his decline as a talent.

"It's frustrating," he admits, "because your heart and your mind still feel like you can do it. But your body is a little slower, your reflexes just aren't as quick."

"The difference is that before on a pitch, you hit the ball to left center. Now you're behind it and hitting the same ball to right field. Or the guy throws a hanging, breaking ball. Before you used to jump on it, maybe hit it out of the park or through the gap. Now you just get a single or hit the ball to shortstop."

"After a while, it plays on your mind. Then you start to doubt yourself."

The doubts first assailed him a year ago when the Brewers made it evident that Bando, who had played a dozen consecutive seasons at third base for Oakland and Milwaukee, would be supplanted as a starter by Don Money. Sal never asked why.

"I tried to press from that point on," he says, "showing that they were wrong. If I had a bad game or two, I tried to adjust. The more adjustments I made, the more problems I had. It became very difficult for me. In the past, when you go up there in a key situation, you know you're going to drive in a run. Now you go up there, you go up there just to hit the ball. You become very defensive."

However, Sal didn't feel completely useless in 1980. Harry Dalton, the Milwaukee general manager, had called him into the office before the season started and asked Sal, "Do you have any objections if I make you a player-coach?"

"No," answered Sal, "but for what reason?"

Baseball veterans on comeback trail

By The Associated Press

A trio of veterans who couldn't find their way out of the infirmity last year began a comeback attempt Wednesday. If they succeed, their teams just might find themselves in a very healthy situation — as pennant contenders.

Relief pitcher Don Stanhouse of the Dodgers and outfielders Dan Ford of the Angels and Joe Rudi of the Red Sox worked out with varying degrees of success. But, this early in spring training, just the fact that they were back in action was good news for their clubs.

Stanhouse, the ace reliever of the American League champion Baltimore Orioles in 1979, signed with Los Angeles as a free agent prior to last season. But he appeared in just 21 games while on the disabled list in 1980 and managed just seven saves.

On Wednesday, he pitched batting practice at the Dodgers' camp in Vero Beach, Fla.

"His control was not as good as it could be," said Coach Danny Ozark. "But for the first time out, he threw well. He threw for 10 minutes and threw quite freely."

Ford, a .290 hitter with 21 home runs and 101 RBI in 1979, when California won the AL West, underwent surgery for torn cartilage following that season. He appeared in just 65 games last year, hitting .266.

Ford participated in a baserunning drill at the Angels' training facility in Palm Springs, Calif., on Wednesday, then said his knee "feels fine."

"It could be stronger, it still gets a little sore at times," he added. "But I'll keep working with it and it should be no problem by the time the season starts."

And Rudi, acquired by Boston from the Angels in the deal that sent Fred Lynn to California, hit the ball hard in his first shot at live pitching at the Red Sox' camp in Winter Haven, Fla.

"Rudi said he felt a lot better." Manager Ralph Houk said of the veteran outfielder who hasn't been at top form since he starred with the championship Oakland A's teams of 1973-75.

Kern ready for revenge

POMPAÑO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The 1990 season was not a lot of fun for Texas Ranger relief pitcher Jim Kern, plagued as he was by a series of nagging injuries that turned his once-feared fast ball into a hitters' special.

A healthy Kern could spell trouble for the rest of the American League. In 1979, he was the league's Fireman of the Year with a 13-5 record, 29 saves and a phenomenal 1.57 earned run average, plus 136 strikeouts in 141 innings.

Last year his statistics plummeted to a 3-11 won-lost record, a 4.83 ERA and only two saves. Most of the problems were blamed on a sore elbow, pain in the shoulder and a stiff neck. He even was struck in the mouth by a stray bullpen throw one night, necessitating minor surgery.

"Every time I thought it couldn't get any worse, it did," Kern sighed. "I began to think they might as well shoot me and put me out of my misery."

Texas legislature briefs

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Legislators passed and sent Gov. Bill Clements on Wednesday a bill designed to confirm the appointment of an ambassador of labor and industry.

Clements appointed Steen in 1979, and Steen's cousin, James "Buster" Brown, Lake Jackson, was elected the Senate in November.

House Speaker Bill Mayton, in laying out the bill, called it "the Don't Bust Bubba bill."

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Houston Chamber of Commerce has its own 11-point package of proposed legislation to fight crime in Texas.

"There are no surprises here," said Louie Welch, president of the chamber, in introducing the 11 bills at a news conference.

"This package is aimed at violent crime not at any segment of the population," said Welch. "Unemployment is not the cause of crime in Texas."

Harris County District Attorney John Holmes added that "it is unfair to assume that a reduction in social programs will result in increased crime."

The measures include legalization of wiretaps in investigation of narcotics cases, allowing a series of criminal offenses in one "criminal episode" to be joined in a single trial, admission of oral confessions in criminal trials, increasing the drinking age to 19 and prohibition of the sale of drug paraphernalia.

The chamber also asked for five new criminal district courts in Harris County by 1985.

driver would get only a ticket in a state that also belongs to the compact. The driver could decide later whether to show up for a trial or mail in the fine.

Farabee said this would help Texas highway troopers who now have to accompany a traffic offender to see a justice of peace instead of patrolling the highways or other duties.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has set March 31 as the date for a special election to fill a House seat from Brownsville.

The seat was vacated when Democrat Hector Uribe won a special race to fill a Senate left open when Raul Longoria became a state district judge in Edinburg.

Clements said Wednesday that candidates in the special election in District 50 must file with the secretary of state by 5 p.m. on Monday.

he House passed 121-8, and sent to the Senate on Wednesday a bill that would raise from 10 percent to 15 percent the interest rate on local governments can pay on their bonds.

Rep. Don Henderson, D-Houston, said the 10 percent ceiling has made it impossible for water districts, cities and school districts with less than an A-plus bond rating to sell their bonds on today's high-interest market.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has added Sen. Walter Mengden's right-to-work legislation to the list of emergency matters.

"There are some ambiguities concerning the right-to-work statutes in Texas," Clements said Wednesday. "SB 264 by Mengden would clear these up and so the Legislature will immediately consider this I declare it as an emergency matter."

Mengden is a Democrat from Houston.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The decision came during the third day of Ann Kurth's libel suit against Thompson and his publisher, Doubleday & Co. Thompson's book deals with the life and death of Houston plastic surgeon Dr. John Hill.

Mrs. Kurth, 50, admits having an affair with Hill during the time he was married to Joan Robinson Hill, and married him only months after Hill's first wife died of a mysterious infection while under his care.

However, she told the court Wednesday her love affair with Hill was a "romantic love situation, not the way it was pictured in the book."

In his book, Thompson described Mrs. Kurth as a "sex bomb" and a demanding mistress who once broke Hill's nose by hitting him in the face.

Mrs. Kurth took the stand and discussed the 23 passages she considers libelous, disputing each one and contending that publication of Thompson's book hurt sales of her own book.

Judge tells jurors read book

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A federal judge changed his mind and ordered jurors in a $3.75 million libel suit to read almost 200 pages of Thomas Thompson's sensational best-seller, "Blood and Money," to put the allegedly libelous passages into context.

The decision came during the third day of Ann Kurth's libel suit against Thompson and his publisher, Doubleday & Co. Thompson's book deals with the life and death of Houston plastic surgeon Dr. John Hill.

Judge tells jurors read book

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A federal judge changed his mind and ordered jurors in a $3.75 million libel suit to read almost 200 pages of Thomas Thompson's sensational best-seller, "Blood and Money," to put the allegedly libelous passages into context.

The decision came during the third day of Ann Kurth's libel suit against Thompson and his publisher, Doubleday & Co. Thompson's book deals with the life and death of Houston plastic surgeon Dr. John Hill.

Mrs. Kurth, 50, admits having an affair with Hill during the time he was married to Joan Robinson Hill, and married him only months after Hill's first wife died of a mysterious infection while under his care.

However, she told the court Wednesday her love affair with Hill was a "romantic love situation, not the way it was pictured in the book."

In his book, Thompson described Mrs. Kurth as a "sex bomb" and a demanding mistress who once broke Hill's nose by hitting him in the face.

Mrs. Kurth took the stand and discussed the 23 passages she considers libelous, disputing each one and contending that publication of Thompson's book hurt sales of her own book.

"Prescription: Murder," telling her version of the Hill family problems.

Religious school license bill to committee

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Garland preacher says the state's failure to enforce criminal laws has forced churches with well-run schools to seek the state licenses hated by many clergymen.

The Rev. Earl Little, testifying for a bill that would end state licensing of religious day schools, said the licenses are offensive to clergymen who believe their schools should be ordained by God, not the state.

"I'm willing to go to jail rather than seek a license," Little told the House Committee on Human Services on Wednesday.

The committee set up a subcommittee to look at two similar bills that would take religious day schools out from under the Child Care Licensing Act of 1975. The act requires the churches to seek a Department of Human Resources license or join an association approved by DHR.

The subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, will look at bills filed by Rep. Ray Keller, D-Duncanville, and Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston. Mengden's bill has been approved by the Senate.

Several clergymen testified the bills would not lessen the schools' responsibility to meet local fire and safety codes. The preachers said the state has no business licensing church schools.

"If the state has the right to approve the church ministry, the state has the right to disapprove the church ministry," said Rev. Lewis Bridges of Lewisville. "If the state has the right to license our Monday school, the state has the right to license our Sunday school."

Little said better enforcement of criminal laws is the way to protect children from schools where they are abused or mistreated.

Keller wants an exemption for religious day schools with facilities for students in any grade kindergarten through 12. It would not exempt live-in schools such as those run by Rev. Lester Roloff in Corpus Christi.

Linda Team, associate director of the Texas Conference of Churches, spoke against the bills, saying the licenses are "valuable protections for children in the schools we run."

Rep. Mike Martin, R-Longview, wanted the committee to approve the measure and send it to the full House. He said people concerned about licensing church schools also could argue for licensing of the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts or any organization that watches children for any period of time.

Braniff recovery plan could benefit workers

DALLAS (AP) — Union workers employed by Braniff International Corp. are giving the ailing airline company a vote of confidence, hoping the financial sacrifices they have agreed to make will pay off in the long run.

On Wednesday, the financially strapped airline's 2,100 pilots approved a combination pay cut and profit-sharing program intended to help the company recover from its dismal performance in 1980, when it posted a net loss of $128.5 million.

The pilots' approval, coupled with an earlier OK from members of the Teamsters union, now leaves only the airline's 2,500 machinists still deliberating the company's profit-sharing program. Braniff has asked its employees to give up 10 percent of their salaries in exchange for a share of the airline's profits if and when it recovers from last year's record-breaking losses.

A company spokesman said Wednesday Braniff expects to receive a response from the machinists' union on Tuesday.

The corporation's 39 major creditors have formally agreed to postpone until July 1 payments on $40 million in loans to Braniff. But the agreement hinges on approval of the profit-sharing payouts by airline employees.

In a unanimous vote Tuesday, Braniff's flight attendants joined Teamsters and dispatchers in overwhelmingly approving the program.

Although only a few of the lenders had demanded such a condition, the terms of the agreement force the condition to apply to all 39, said Braniff treasurer Robert Ferguson.

The success of the airline's recovery program could hinge on the vote of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace workers, which has expressed reservations about the plan.

Horse thieves roped by cop

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — The story two men told "just didn't rattle right" with a former rodeo cowboy turned policeman, and his curiosity resulted in the arrests of the suspected horse thieves from South Carolina.

The men attracted Sgt. Don Robertson's attention when they claimed to have hauled six horses from South Carolina to sell at a Texas auction.

"The most they could have gotten for those horses — I mean top dollar — was $2,200. And they would have had to spend $800 to $900 in gasoline alone to haul them here," Robertson said Tuesday.

Robertson, who still ropes calves and once competed in rodeos, heard about the men last week when he went to a local stable to feed his horse. The stable owner told him the men had left six horses there.

"I went to look at the horses," Robertson said, "and they were in bad shape."

When he went to question the men the next day, the men told him they had hauled the horses nearly 1,400 miles from South Carolina. So Robertson called South Carolina authorities to check them out.

"You just don't haul horses all the way across the country unless they are top-flight horses going to a registered sale," said Robertson, a policeman for 24 years.

"There are just too many sale barns between here and there."

Mississippi authorities got wind of his investigations and telephoned him about six horses stolen near Jackson.

"They apparently had stolen some horses in Carolina and sold them in Bay Springs, Miss. Then they stole these horses in Hinds County (Miss.) last Monday night and blew in here Tuesday with them," Robertson said.

The suspects sold all six horses at the Dallas County Horse Auction barn, and three of them had been slaughtered by the time Robertson could get arrest warrants from Mississippi.

REUNION COMING. Michael Ozog, 58, who works in a hospital cafeteria in Stroughton, Mass., holds up a photo showing his mother, seated, with two relatives as he sits in his home Wednesday. Ozog was separated from his family when German police took him from his home in Poland in November 1941. He has not seen his mother since - but recently the International Red Cross located her and Ozog has received letters from her, in foreground. Ozog plans to travel to Poland with his wife in May to have a reunion.

Mother flees with ill child

DALLAS (AP) — The father of a missing 2-year-old leukemia victim says he is not worried about doctors' warnings that the child may die if she is not found and given medical treatment.

"I'm not fearful of that because of my belief in God. We believe God has healed her body from this condition," Louis Pendleton said.

"We believe in doctors, but we also strongly believe in God. I think this is out of the doctors' hands."

Louisa Pendleton and her mother, Judith, disappeared last week, shortly after a state district judge ordered Louisa's parents to provide her with medical treatment.

"Every day that this goes on diminishes her chance for recovery. It's just a tragedy," said State District Judge Craig Penfold.

The girl's 27-year-old father says he doesn't know where his wife and daughter have gone, but he's not worried about the doctors' grim warnings.

Louisa will die if she is not treated soon, doctors say. But if treatment could begin immediately, she stands almost a 50-50 chance of recovering from her illness and leading a near-normal life.

The Pendletons took Louisa to Children's Medical Center Jan. 22, saying she was listless and her hands were swelling.

The diagnosis of acute lymphoblastic leukemia was confirmed the next day, said Dr. George Buchanan, who examined the child.

She was admitted to the hospital immediately and underwent three days of treatment before her parents took her home and refused to return for scheduled treatments.

Buchanan finally took the matter to the Dallas County Child Welfare Department, saying, "I couldn't just sit by and watch her die without at least giving her the chance."

The district attorney's office filed suit against the parents in Penfold's court Feb. 3.

In a hearing the next day, the Pendletons said they wanted time to get a second opinion. When they still hadn't gotten the second opinion by Feb. 16, Penfold ordered them to take the child back to the hospital by Feb. 18.

The Pendletons took Louisa to the hospital, but refused to sign any admission papers or authorizations for treatment.

That afternoon Penfold issued an order for the parents to be picked up by sheriff's deputies.

Pendleton, assistant minister of Gospel Tabernacle, remained in jail overnight. He said he last saw his wife, Louisa and their other two children shortly before he was arrested.

The father said Louisa then appeared healthy, with plenty of energy and a good appetite.

"I don't know how it's going to work out, but I know God is going to see us through it," he said.

DOE plans project to free gas

PARACHUTE, Colo. (AP) — The federal Department of Energy has announced plans to spend $20 million on a five-year project to develop technology that will free millions of gallons of natural gas trapped in sandstone at a 56,000-acre gas field here.

A nuclear blast was used unsuccessfully in an attempt to release gas trapped in so-called "tight" gas sand formations in the Rulison gas field during 1969. The technique, a 40-kiloton blast set off 8,400 feet below the ground, increased gas production rates but not enough to pay for the costs of recovery.

Officials at the DOE's energy center in Bartlesville, Okla., say the new experiment calls for drilling and massive hydraulic fracturing tests.

Three wells will be drilled to 8,600 feet below ground at the Rulison field, DOE spokesmen said. The wells will be spaced from 100 to 500 feet apart and interference and pulse tests will be conducted between them.

Massive hydraulic fracturing, which pumps liquids under extreme pressures down a well bore to crack open underground formations, will be used between the wells as part of the experiment, officials said.

The new project will be conducted by the DOE and coordinated by the Sandia National Laboratories of Albuquerque, N.M. The CER Corp. of Las Vegas, Nev., which supervised the earlier nuclear project at the site, will be operations manager for the new tests.

A contract for the leases on the project was signed Jan. 30 with Superior Oil Co. in Houston.

DOE officials said scientists hope to discover what triggers the release of gas from the tight sandstone formations, which are believed to contain hundreds of trillions of cubic feet of gas in the Piceance Basin and a number of other sedimentary basins in the West.
