Senate committee okays $2 billion added cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recommending even deeper overall cuts than President Reagan has asked, Senate budget writers are slicing more money from some social programs to make room for restoring export subsidies that benefit big business.

By the time it quit work for the night Wednesday, the Senate Budget Committee had approved more than $35 billion in cuts, a net of about $2.4 billion more than Reagan recommended for the areas covered.

One of the panel's votes was to restore $110 million — a third of Reagan's proposed cut — for the Export-Import Bank. The bank subsidizes exports through loans and loan guarantees to purchasers of American goods, and most of the benefits go to a few large American corporations.

At the recommendation of Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., the panel supported deeper cuts in housing for the poor and community services aid to more than make up the money put back in the Ex-Im Bank budget.

Mrs. Kassebaum denied the move was designed to help companies like Boeing and Cessna, which produce airplanes in her state and sell them abroad with the Ex-Im Bank's help. She said the change is intended "to help workers keep their jobs, not big business."

The action on the Ex-Im Bank was one of fewer times the committee voted more money than Reagan had recommended as it completed its second day of work on the 1982 federal budget.

Sen. Peter Domenici, R-N.M., the committee chairman, predicted the panel would complete its spending blueprint today, and aides said it would wind up approving more than the $48.6 billion in cuts the president has recommended.

The committee recommended reductions in social programs ranging from unemployment benefits and Social Security to food stamps and welfare.

While Reagan was generally getting his way in the Senate, he was winning another victory in another committee of Congress.

The House Ways and Means Committee gave its initial endorsement to $8.8 billion in spending cuts in social programs it oversees and a $50.4 billion tax cut, nearly identical to the president's request.

The vote in the Democrat-controlled committee was unanimous despite the reservations by some members about specific cutbacks proposed by the administration.

But in the Senate Budget Committee, the majority Republicans sometimes had to overcome Democrat opposition as they voted for abolishing the $3.6 billion public service jobs program, a reduction of more than $1 billion in education programs and a $2 billion cut in some Social Security programs.

The committee also backed Reagan's call to slash food stamp expenditures by nearly $1.5 billion, and it called for reducing the budget for school lunch programs by $1.5 billion.

However, it rejected Reagan's proposal for a 30 percent cut in a program that provides milk for pregnant mothers and infant children, voting to spend $223 million that the president wanted cut.

And it voted to restore $653 million Reagan wanted to cut from elementary and secondary education, aid for the handicapped and youth training programs.

Republicans rebuffed attempts by Democrats to restore $500 million for the Urban Development Actions Grants that are popular with many mayors, and the committee overwhelmingly rejected a move by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum to close $3.9 billion in so-called tax loopholes for the oil industry.

Technically, the committee is drafting instructions to the other committees of Congress, which have broad discretion in deciding how to make reductions among programs under their jurisdictions.

Among other actions Wednesday, the Budget Committee voted 15-3 to support Reagan's call for ending the Social Security minimum benefit of $122 a month, a move affecting relatively few Americans on retirement. In addition, the panel recommended phasing out Social Security student benefits over four years.

Junior sale nets $161,000 Hereford sale brings $38,000

Sales from the Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Sale Wednesday totaled $161,752 as area 4-H and FFA members who placed in the top percentage of their class put their animals on the auction block following the stock show.

Two arrested in oil condensate theft

CANADIAN - Charges of felony theft are expected to be filed today against two area persons arrested early this morning in Canadian in connection with the theft of condensate oil from an M.C.R. Oil Company oil lease according to Hemphill County Sheriff C.H. Wright.

Tom Gray Barker, 52, of Shamrock and Nina McCurley, 47, of McLean were apprehended by Hemphill County Sheriff's Deputies at approximately 1 p.m. this morning on the M.C.R. Oil Company Little Lease 3-30, which is located 11 miles south and one mile west of Highway 83, Wright said.

The two suspects are in custody in the Hemphill County jail today and after consultation with District Attorney Harold Comer, Wright said that the charges of felony theft are expected to be filed later today.

"We have been hit six times in the past week with these oil field thefts," Wright said.

"Hemphill County deputies and M.C.R. Corporation employees worked together in staking out several oil lease areas to combat the rash of oil field thefts and the work paid off last night," Sheriff Wright said.

Oil field thefts have plagued oil companies large and small for several years and recently the theft of equipment became apparent in the Panhandle.

A local oil company official said Tuesday that the "theft of oil field equipment has dropped off considerably recently and the theft of condensate has increased in this area almost daily."

Fight between teenage newlyweds injures two

Two Pampans were injured in what city police officers termed a "domestic fight" in a residence near downtown Pampa Wednesday evening.

A 16-year-old girl and her 23-year-old brother were treated at Highland General Hospital Wednesday evening, Lt. Glen Carden said today.

The girl was treated to a wound to her forehead, police said she suffered when she was hit between the eyes with a rock.

The 23-year-old man was treated for a stab wound to the hand and admitted to Highland General Hospital, Carden said.

Carden said police were called to the residence at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday. Investigation showed a 15-year-old boy had been in a fight with his 16-year-old wife of three months, Carden said.

"The bride's brother intervened (in the fight) and a fight started between the groom and the brother - in-law. The groom pulled a knife and the brother - in-law received a laceration to the hand," the police lieutenant said. He said the knife wound crossed the palm of the hand, severing an artery.

The 23-year-old man was taken to the hospital by private vehicle, Carden said. The 16-year-old girl was transported by ambulance.

The 15-year-old boy was detained by city police and is to be referred to juvenile probation authorities, Pampa Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said today.

Shuttle workers overcome by gas after rehearsal

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Several space workers passed out from lack of oxygen today as they used nitrogen in testing safety procedures on the space shuttle Columbia two hours after a successful dress rehearsal of pre-launch activities, officials said.

NASA officials at Kennedy Space Center said five or six employees of Rockwell International, the private contractor for the shuttle project, were using pure nitrogen to purge shuttle systems after the pre-launch rehearsal.

The workers lingered too long in an area in which there was no oxygen and four passed out, space officials said.

Spokesman Rocky Rabb of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said there was no gas leaks, but that the workers had stayed in an area that was all-nitrogen too long.

Officials said they didn't think any of the workers were injured. One of the workers was carried away from the launch pad on a stretcher, and that the others were helped away.

It wasn't immediately known whether they would require hospitalization.

The incident came shortly after NASA officials proclaimed that the rehearsal "went super." A simulated ignition at 7:25 a.m. EST, marked the end of the test run, NASA spokesman Mark Hess said.

The rehearsal was a dry run of what astronauts John Young and Robert Crippen will be doing on launch day, Hess said.

"The reason (for the test run) was to establish a good time frame, to know how long the pre-launch activities will take on launch day," he said.

Early today, just as will be done on the actual launch day, the flight team was awakened by NASA officials, given breakfast, suited up and taken to the launch pad, Hess said. He said the activities took two hours and 25 minutes.

The shuttle is scheduled for its first blastoff into space on a 54-hour voyage during the week of April 5.

Hess said repairs still need to be completed on the insulation of the craft's huge fuel tank. Then two exercises involving the loading of propellants will precede the countdown for the first launch.

The actual launch date, already two years behind schedule, should be set by the end of this month, he said.

Young and Crippen have practiced simulated liftoffs and flights many times previously, but this was the first time the whole countdown process had been tied together, Hess said.

"That was the final dress rehearsal for the launch from the standpoint of a running countdown," Hess said.

Officials also successfully tested a simulated shut-down sequence of the shuttle's engines. Hess said a premature shutdown of one engine during the actual countdown would trigger the same effect in the other engines so the count could be picked up and resumed later.

Once the reusable space shuttle is fully operational, it will be the "workhorse" of the U.S. space program. It is designed to take scientists and astronauts into space and return them to Earth, gliding on wings like an airplane.

In April's flight, the shuttle is to land at Edwards Air Force Base in California on its return trip.

Sorry, teachers - only $50 a month raise

By DEBORAH BRIDGES Staff Writer

It was good while it lasted.

However, teachers employed by the Pampa Independent School District did not receive a $600 per month raise approval from the school district's board of trustees as reported in the Pampa News Wednesday.

The teachers did, in fact, get a $600 ANNUAL across-the-board increase (or $50 a month) in the local salary supplement provided by the school district — added to the annual teachers' pay set by the Texas State Legislature.

Commenting on the reports of a $600 per month salary raise printed in the Pampa News and broadcast in news reports by local radio stations, board member Kenneth Fields said today, "I think it was the unfamiliarity with the language used by the board. All the board understood this was annual."

"I was recommending an increase in the local salary increment — like if we grant an increment to a coach, it is over and above his salary for a year," he explained.

"It was clear as far as the board was concerned," Fields added.

Fields, as chairman of the school board's salary committee, recommended the $600 increase — raising the yearly salary increment for bachelor's-degree holders from $1,200 to $1,800 and for master's-degree holders from $1,400 to $2,000.

Although no one on the board specified that the increment was to be paid on a yearly basis, Fields said several times in his recommendation and motion to the board that it was the local salary supplement.

Board President Darville Orr said he could not remember exactly what was said at the meeting.

"I've been trying to go back to what was said. I guess we never did explain what the increment was. We just assumed that everyone would know what we were talking about," he said.

Orr explained the local salary increment.

"The state legislature sets the teachers' base salary based on their education and their length of time in the profession," he said. "What the school district does is give an increment in addition to the state's base pay."

The starting pay for an inexperienced teacher holding a bachelor's degree is $9,430 per year, a spokesman for the local district superintendent's office said today. The increment is added to that amount, she said.

Following a closed personnel session of the school board Tuesday, the board accepted the resignations of John Michael Lowe, science teacher and coach at Pampa Middle School; and of Ricky E. Palmer, physical education teacher and coach at Pampa High School.

Superintendent Bob Phillips said the resignations of the two coaches would be accepted subject to the district's finding a replacement for the two

The board also approved Tuesday renewal of contracts for 78 teachers at Pampa High School; 55 educators at Pampa Middle School; 24 at Stephen F. Austin Elementary; 23 at Baker Elementary; 12 at Lamar Elementary; 18 at Horace Mann Elementary; 19 at William B. Travis Elementary; and 19 at Woodrow Wilson Elementary.

Phillips said several resignations from teachers for various reasons, such as moving and maternity leave, would be submitted to the board later in the school year.

Haig wants to stop Cuban arms pipeline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said today the administration is considering a full range of steps to take if necessary to stop Cuban supply of arms to Latin American rebels, but said it has no specific plan for military action against Cuba.

"With respect to a specific plan, why no. The president has not had an opportunity to approve or to consider in detail any courses of action for the period ahead," Haig said.

Haig gave that reply when pressed at a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing on an administration official's testimony Wednesday.

Bad luck rock is sent back home

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Nixon Morris scoffed silently at a guide in Hawaii who warned vacationers on a tour bus not to take any rocks from the Mauna Loa volcano where the bus stopped to allow tourists to walk around.
 "He said if we took a piece of lava the goddess Pele would put a curse on us. I've never been a superstitious man. Right away I got the idea I had to have a piece of that lava," said Morris, 59.
 Today, he's just hoping that mailing the rock back to Hawaii will break the curse and return his life to normal.
 "I just got nine days to go before they take this cast off my leg," said Morris, a hardwood dealer who said he had always led a quiet life until he took the black rock home with him two years ago. That's when all the trouble started.
 Morris fell off his roof, lightning struck an antenna and ruined several appliances in his house, and his wife got sick with a mysterious infection that left her knee swollen.
 Then a burglar broke into their house and Morris fought with the intruder and suffered a broken hip and thigh, the family's cat was sleeping under the hood of Mrs. Morris' car when she started the engine and stripped one side of the pet, and Morris' granddaughter fell and broke her arm in two places just last week.
 "That was really the last straw," Morris said.
 He said he had broken the rock in two when he returned home from his Hawaiian vacation and had given a piece to a friend as a souvenir. But it brought his friend a streak of rotten luck too, Morris said.

Salvadoran 'cleanup' continues

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) - Planes and ground troops battled leftist guerrillas in the third week of a "cleanup" operation near the Honduran border as El Salvador's armed forces awaited the arrival later this week of 12 more U.S. advisers and four transport helicopters.
 Military sources reported at least one government soldier killed in the fighting Wednesday 120 miles east of San Salvador. Residents said 10 other soldiers were killed when guerrillas ambushed a military convoy in the village of Aceituno, 25 miles north of the capital.
 The guerrillas also blew up a bridge on a coastal highway in Santiago Nonualco, 25 miles east of San Salvador, forcing traffic to make a long detour, the government said.
 Meanwhile, police reported breaking up a gun-smuggling ring that used private planes to fly arms into Ilopango airbase on the outskirts of the capital. They said the owner of a flying service who was under investigation committed suicide in his jail cell.

 It was not immediately known if the guns were being delivered to the guerrillas or to ultra-rightist death squads who also want to overthrow the junta that ousted President Carlos Humberto Romero 17 months ago.
 The Reagan administration is stepping up American support of the junta and is expected to send 12 more military advisers this week to train El Salvador's armed forces in counterinsurgency. This will bring the number of American advisers in El Salvador to 54, according to official figures. Four transport helicopters also are due.
 In Washington, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told the House Foreign Affairs Committee Wednesday that the communists are embarked on a campaign to take over Central America and have a priority "hit list" of four nations.

Consumer lawyer idea opposed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Sen. Lloyd Doggett, who wants to set up a state-paid lawyer to represent residential utility customers at rate hearings, got the reaction he expected from utility lobbyists and lawyers who have represented household customers in the past.
 Utility companies told the Senate Committee on State Affairs on Wednesday the counsel would merely add another layer to a rate-setting system which already looks out for the little guy.
 And the lawyers testified the counsel would give residential customers needed clout before the Public Utility Commission and the Texas Railroad Commission.
 "Only the residential ratepayers have no assurance their interests will be represented to the regulatory commissions," she said Rebecca Lightsey of the Texas Consumers Association.
 Among the utility company representatives testifying against Doggett's bill was Robert Johnson, representing Texas Telephone Association and Texas Electric Service Co. He said the commission staffs represent the public's interests in rate hearings. He also said the PUC members are charged with making sure "every rate is just and reasonable."

 "I'm a lawyer. I'm not sure we need any more lawyers over there at PUC," he said.
 Johnson pointed out attorneys for the legal services groups might be out of work soon because of budget cuts proposed by President Ronald Reagan.
 "Some of these gentlemen might want it because it looks like they might lose their jobs," he said.
 Saunders Gregg of Houston, an Entex vice president, said a Department of Public Utility Counsel "creates another government agency which would perform no function not already performed."
 Committee Chairman Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, sent the measure, and a package of other utility bills, to subcommittee.

Colleagues roll out the red carpet for photographer of Iwo Jima

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Joe Rosenthal got it all, captured the whole Pacific theater of World War II with a 4-by-5-inch photo: battle-weary Marines wrestling aloft a wind-whipped American flag on Iwo Jima in February 1945.
 The picture electrified a country weary of World War II, won Rosenthal a Pulitzer Prize and became a symbol for the Marine Corps. It has been widely reproduced, including a bronze monument at Arlington, Va.
 This week, Rosenthal, 69, retires from the San Francisco Chronicle and tonight his colleagues are throwing him a party at Treasure Island Navy base, with music by the 1st Marine Division band.
 The photographer, then working for The Associated Press, was in his element aboard a landing craft that stormed Iwo Jima Feb. 19, 1945. He had been with the Marines at Guam and Peleliu.
 "I preferred going with the Marines because of the types of pictures that were available," Rosenthal said later. "Assault landings appealed to me. All you had to do was screw up your courage and go with them."
 The 60,000 Marines at Iwo Jima met savage opposition from the troops under Lt. Gen. Tadamiichi Kuribayashi. Twenty-six days after the assault, Iwo Jima fell. The Marines and Navy killed more than 20,000 enemy troops at a cost of some 6,000 American lives.
 "No man who survived that beach can tell you how he did it," said Rosenthal. "It was like walking through rain and not getting wet, and there is no way you can explain it."

 Four days later, a small U.S. flag was planted on the smoky slopes of Mount Suribachi. Because the flag was so hard to see, a bigger flag was taken up by a patrol, Rosenthal not far behind it.
 "As I got closer, I saw a group of our men hauling a long iron pipe, and then I discovered still another Marine holding a neatly folded American flag."
 Rosenthal leveled his bulky Speed Graphic, then the prime news camera, and caught the dramatic moment. He didn't know what he had. Days later messages of congratulations poured in for him.
 He returned to this country a hero. A short time later, he joined the San Francisco Chronicle photo staff, where he has worked for 35 years.

Prison board seeks legal aid in suit

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Texas Department of Corrections officials have asked to hire some outside legal guns to reinforce the assistant attorneys general trying to shoot holes in a federal judge's ruling that the state's prisons are unconstitutionally harsh.
 But Attorney General Mark White, who must by law must approve the hiring of an outside lawyer by a state agency, said nothing doing.

 The Texas Board of Corrections, in a letter hand delivered to White this week, asked him to authorize the hiring of outside counsel to represent the board, its individual members and the entire prison system in the Ruiz vs. Estelle case.
 The state is expected to appeal a ruling in the case by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice that Texas prisons are unconstitutionally crowded, provide inadequate medical care and permit brutal treatment of inmates.
 White said Wednesday he did not regard the board's request as an affront, but he indicated he would not allow the board to hire its own lawyers.

Coal strikes end, others continue

By The Associated Press
 Coal miners in Illinois and Alabama returned to work today after a one-day wildcat strike to protest the collapse of contract talks, but more than 9,000 others in at least four states continued to stay off the job.
 Meanwhile, United Mine Workers President Sam Church was ready to resume bargaining with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, a union source in Washington said.
 But with a contract ratification process that takes 10 days to complete, it appeared virtually inevitable that there would be a strike by the 160,000-member union when the current pact expires at midnight March 26. The miners traditionally have not worked without a contract.
 Nearly 9,600 miners staged wildcat strikes Wednesday in reaction to the breakdown of the talks on Tuesday.
 "I guess they just jumped the gun a little bit," said Robert Carter, president of UMW District 30 in Kentucky. "They get a wild hair now and then."
 An additional 5,000 miners in Pennsylvania were off the job in a dispute over the firing of six workers at a mine in Kirby, Pa.
 The strikes picked up steam in some areas overnight and faded in others.

About 3,300 miners were reported off the job on the 12:01 a.m. shift today in Ohio, West Virginia and Virginia, company and union officials said. In Kentucky, where 5,000 miners were out Wednesday, it was not immediately clear how many miners, if any, were striking.
 The Pennsylvania strike apparently strengthened, with 6,000 miners off the job.
 But in Illinois, there were no miners striking, according to Rick Tygett, a board member for UMW District 12. About 1,600 Illinois miners were out Wednesday. In Alabama, there were also no walkouts reported today, according to the Fayette County sheriff's department. About 400 miners struck Wednesday at a mine near Berry.
 Church was "working through mutual friends" to restart the negotiations and had not talked to officials of the BCOA, said the source, who asked not to be identified.
 B.R. Brown, chief bargainer for the BCOA and president of Consolidation Coal Co., an industry giant, could not be reached for comment.
 At the White House, press secretary James S. Brady said, "It's something we hope is settled." He would not say whether the Reagan administration would get involved in the negotiations.

Police teach driving to Filipino nurses

A group of 10 Filipino nurses are currently taking driving lessons from officers of the Pampa Police Department. Phillis O'Dell, assistant director of human resources at Highland General Hospital, has announced.
 The graduate nurses, here in Pampa as part of an exchange program, are being taught the rudiments of driving in a classroom course at the hospital, she said.
 The second phase of the course will be on-road practice driving.
 Pampa Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said the nurses did not have the opportunity to learn to drive in the Philippine Islands, where the most common forms of transportation are bicycling and riding buses.

 Ryzman said the course is being taught by police officers, Rod Bishop, Robert Cano, Kenneth Hopson, Susan Ortega, Ron Rutledge, and J. D. Smith.
 Graduate nurses taking the course are: Fedis Legapzi, Emma Valdez, Beth Santos, Wilma Sanchez, Luna Estrella, Fe Marquez, Marlene Duran, Rachel Garrido, Noel Domingo and Neri David.

Airline robbed by stolen cards

AMARILLO (AP) — A swindling scheme using stolen credit cards to obtain airline tickets from vending machines has cost Southwest Airlines $28,000, company officials said.

"This has gotten so bad... we may have to discontinue the use of the automated machines," A.W. Donelson, Southwest Airlines manager in Amarillo, said Wednesday.

Since December, at least five stolen credit cards have been used in the airline's automated ticket sellers in Amarillo, Dallas, Houston, Austin, San Antonio and Corpus Christi, Donelson said.

The tickets apparently would then be re-sold at reduced prices.

Donelson said an Amarillo man was questioned Saturday after his ticket to Houston was confiscated in a routine check.

"He is a prominent man whose name is known to everyone in Amarillo," Donelson said. "He gave several different versions of how he obtained the ticket. He said a friend gave it to him in San Antonio, then he said he bought it in Austin, then he said it was sold to him on a plane."

No charges have been filed. Donelson said the airline has verified that two Mastercards, two Diners Club cards and a Visa card — all reported as stolen — have been used.

The airline is now requiring all passengers traveling on tickets obtained from the automated machines to show their credit cards to gate personnel.

"Signs have been posted on the machines," Donelson said.

"If we find a ticket that has been obtained with one of the stolen credit cards, the ticket is confiscated and the holder is out the money he paid for it," Donelson said.

Judge says state must file bilingual education proposal

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Texas Attorney General Mark White says he is "surprised" that the federal judge threatening to order a bilingual plan for Texas schools refuses to give legislators time to come up with their own proposal.

But the judge said he would not give the state time to look for a "political solution" to the Mexican-American education problem.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice denied the state's request that his March 9 deadline — which the state missed — be extended to June 15, two weeks after the legislature adjourns.

White said he had not had time to study the ruling, but said he was "surprised that we were not extended more time."

The judge, however, said the delay request was based on the "unsubstantiated hope" that a political solution could be found to the Mexican-American education problem.

Justice ruled in January that the state's current bilingual program is inadequate. He ordered both sides to work out proposals for him to study.

Plaintiffs, including the Justice Department, the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund and the G.I. Forum, submitted their proposals March 10.

Current state law provides bilingual education, when student demand is sufficient, through Grade 3 and makes it optional through Grade 5. Plaintiffs want it extended through the 12th grade.

Wednesday, Justice warned that unless the state submitted a proposal immediately, "the court will be compelled to enter a final judgment without the benefit of their (the state's) plan."

White said the original ruling "seemed a perfect opportunity to let the Legislature respond to the lawsuit and the Legislature has been very receptive in working on the problem. I hope this (Wednesday's) order will not frustrate their efforts."

Justice wrote that the state was asking "the court to postpone relief for the tens of thousands of Mexican-American children suffering from unconstitutional discrimination while the state's political process wrestled with this pressing problem."

"It is readily apparent that the defendant's motion for delay is premised upon nothing more than unsubstantiated hope that a political solution to the plight of the state's Mexican-American school children will somehow be realized during the next three months," Justice wrote.

House okays drinking age increase

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Ed Emmett wondered aloud how Rep. Henry Allee could sponsor a bill taking away 18-year-olds' drinking rights while pushing other legislation that would let them carry guns in their cars.

Allee's bill raising the legal drinking age from 18 to 19 won preliminary House approval on Wednesday, 115-20, and was expected to pass today.

The next step will be Senate action on an amendment added by the House which would make it harder for tavern owners and others who sell alcohol to under-age drinkers to defend themselves in court.

It is against the law to knowingly sell alcoholic beverages to minors, and the amendment would establish a presumption an illegal sale was made knowingly if the seller did not ask for a young person's driver's license or other proof of age.

Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Herford, said he would ask the Senate to accept the amendment, which would send the bill to Gov. Bill Clements for signature into law.

"I have no problem with the amendment and, in fact, feel that it will strengthen the bill and help with its enforcement," Sarpalius said.

Allee said school officials, teachers and PTAs want the drinking age raised because too many teen-agers drink on their lunch hours and return to high school drunk.

Many 18-year-olds are still in school but few 19-year-olds are, he said.

"Are you telling this body that 18-year-olds are not capable of handling alcohol but are capable of handling handguns in a car?" Emmett, R-Kingwood, asked Allee.

"I have found that as a group, they can't handle it (alcohol), and for 14- and 15-year-olds the peer pressure is too great," Allee said.

Allee is the sponsor of a bill that would let Texans — including 18-year-olds, who legally are adults — carry handguns in their automobiles for protection.

Allee said 18-year-olds too often buy liquor for younger friends, who feel "peer pressure" to behave like the older students.

Rep. Gary Thompson, D-Abilene, said only eight states allow 18-year-olds to drink, and "almost all that went to 18 have gone back."

The House rejected an attempt by Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, to raise the drinking age back to 21, where it was before 18-year-olds were given all adult rights and privileges in 1973.

His amendment was tabled, 72-63.

State law provides a fine of $25 to $200 on first offense of possession or consumption of alcohol by a minor — defined in the bill as someone under 19 — and $100 to $500 on subsequent offenses.

White said he had not had time to study the ruling, but said he was "surprised that we were not extended more time."

The judge, however, said the delay request was based on the "unsubstantiated hope" that a political solution could be found to the Mexican-American education problem.

Justice ruled in January that the state's current bilingual program is inadequate. He ordered both sides to work out proposals for him to study.

Texas repudiates stipulation

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The State of Texas has changed its mind, does not admit historical discrimination against Mexican-Americans and wishes to withdraw from a school desegregation case, an assistant attorney general said.

"I am about to make the most remarkable statement I have ever made," David H. Young told a three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. He said the state no longer supports "stipulations" made last year in U.S. District Court at Tyler, Texas, admitting to past racial discrimination.

"Those are stipulations which we now say should not have been made," said Young.

When an attorney makes a stipulation in a court case, it means he does not dispute the truth of the matter under discussion.

The stipulations were originally filed at a November 1979 hearing in a separate 1971 bilingual education case being heard by the same federal judge, William Wayne Justice. The stipulations said segregation against Mexican-Americans was a historical fact in the "state of Texas."

Usually such stipulations apply only to one particular case, but Justice decided they also applied to the Gregory-Portland Independent School District's desegregation case and Young claims the judge used them to fashion a discrimination concept that resulted in a forced busing order for the 3,100-student district.

The school district appealed the busing order, contending its ratio of Mexican-Americans to Anglo students is an accurate reflection of community percentages, not the result of discrimination.

Texas and the Texas Education Agency went into appellate court with the U.S. Justice Department, standing as adversaries to the school district. However, Young's Wednesday repudiation of the state stipulations had the effect of removing Texas from the case.

Fifth Circuit Judge Charles Clark told Young that since he had switched positions it was best that he leave the rest of the argument to the Justice Department lawyer, Joseph Rich.

Indictment against oil firm head dismissed

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has thrown out charges against two officers of a Houston-based oil company accused of using a secret bank account in the Cayman Islands to avoid paying income taxes.

U.S. District Judge Woodrow Seals dismissed the 11-count indictment Wednesday against Uni Oil Co. President Thomas M. Hajecate and Thomas H. Hajecate, his father and the company's secretary-treasurer.

The two men, along with Miami tax lawyer Lance E. Eisenberg, were indicted Jan. 21 on charges of conspiring to use the secret account to avoid paying taxes over a three-year period.

The Hajecates were indicted twice in 1979 on oil mispricing charges. Both cases were dismissed by U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling.

The government has appealed both rulings and is expected to contest Seals' decision.

In addition to the conspiracy charge, the Hajecates were accused of filing false income tax returns and failing to disclose the transfer of $1.5 million into the United States.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Law of the gun

There is something profoundly saddening in the fear of a growing number of persons that society is about to collapse and they must barricade themselves against their neighbors.

The times are uncertain, it is true. Crime is rising, the economy is flagging, the very cement of society seems to be crumbling. Many among us find too little that is familiar and too much that is troubling in the outlines of the future. It is understandable that some should take alarm at these omens and act to protect their families.

It may be prudent to provide food supplies and emergency shelter against nuclear disaster, earthquake and famine, if one's fears dictate these precautions. But the cult of survival foresees not only the worst from nature, but from man, as well. Along with the cult of survival goes the law of the gun.

The families that lay in an arsenal along with emergency rations and turn their survival shelters into bunkers, appear to believe that kindness and decency will be the first casualties of disaster. How Americans would react to nuclear holocaust, great natural calamity, or collapse of the economy cannot be foretold. Most people have responded with courage and fortitude when they have been faced with an emergency. Indeed, adversity has often brought out the best, rather than the worst, in human nature.

Survivalists, however, have refused in advance to share adversity on even terms with their fellow men. By expecting the worst, and arming to repel others seeking help, the survivalists must beware lest their own actions invoke the law of the very jungle against which they so assiduously prepare.

Choice is very easy

We who live in what is normally called "the South" do have a pride in our homeland, and those who try to use those words "the South" in derision usually fail to succeed in making a point.

We are proud that we live in the South and that we are part of this great heritage. But then there are those who in a sense of derision speak of us as "those Bible Belt folks." And to most of us, living in "the South" and also in the "Bible Belt" is a true privilege denied to those who would chastise us.

Some people seek to be very critical of people who live in our area. But to most of us who live here, work here, and enjoy the fruits of our labor here, the privilege of living both in "the South" and in the "Bible Belt" is a blessing we hold ever precious. And we actually feel sorry for those who are denied this very same blessing.

Our choice is very easy. We just naturally prefer the very area that some others chide us about.

—Washington Daily News

Putting out the word

President Reagan probably calmed some fears recently when he said in a televised interview that he does not see any likelihood of this country going into El Salvador with fighting forces.

On the other hand, some fears might have grown.

Nobody needs to be reminded that back during the early stages of the Vietnam War nobody said they saw any likelihood of our fighting forces going there. Yet, little by little, we were sucked in.

What Reagan seems to be doing that wasn't done in Vietnam, however, is leveling with the American people; and that just wasn't done when Vietnam slipped up.

Reagan is saying that there is a problem in our hemisphere — not half way around the globe — and that he is pursuing diplomatic efforts so "we do not just sit passively by and let this hemisphere be invaded by outside forces."

Few people like to think that a war might come. But they also don't like to think that Russia ought to be allowed to proceed with its expansionism in this part of the globe. It has Cuba and it apparently has its foot in the door in El Salvador.

There needs to be a no-foolishness approach with Russia over this problem, and that seems to be exactly the picture that Reagan is drawing for the Communists.

Letters to editor

Dear Mr. Newspaper Editor
I am writing to ask your help with passing House Concurrent Resolution No. 53 to make the armadillo the official mammal of Texas. Our school has been working hard to get other students writing letters to other legislators in Austin. We have a lot of schools helping but not many from your area. And we would like for children in every county of Texas to be a part of this campaign.

If teachers or children will write to Armadillo '81, Oak Creek Elementary Schools, 3975 Gladeridge, Houston, Texas, 77068, we will write and tell them how they can help.

The Soviet Union and South Africa

By Peter Duignan

Before the Soviet Union intervened in Angola in 1974-75, they had been training guerrillas, subsidizing liberation movements, and giving them arms and money. When the conflict began, the Soviets backed Angolan guerrillas with Cubans and, later, with East Germans. This started a new phase of Soviet aggression, which destabilized the whole of Southern Africa: Namibia, Zambia, Zaire, Zimbabwe, and South Africa. This new phase of aggressiveness was made possible by Soviet newly-developed airlift and naval capability to project power overseas.

The United States hesitated to act in the Angolan conflict. The Soviets had kept their ships off the coast of Guinea for two weeks, while the U.S. Congress debated whether or not to support the democratic opponents of the MPLA. At issue was whether this was another Vietnam situation. Unfortunately, the Senate voted not to support Unita and FLNA movements backed by over two-thirds of the population. When we did not move, the Soviet intervened, and they won Angola.

The Soviets' formula worked so well that they did it again in Ethiopia, and South Yemen, and now they've intervened directly in Afghanistan. They divide up responsibilities in their scheme of world conquest — it's called proletarian internationalism. The Cubans do the fighting and dying; the Russians organize the economic ministry, occupy most of the strategic posts, and provide the equipment and training; and, the East Germans mostly run the secret police and police forces.

Since 1974-75, the Soviets have dominated Angola, the Republic of the Congo, Ethiopia, and South Yemen and Indochina. These regimes generally depend on Soviet support, and tend to emulate Soviet practices and doctrine. But, the Soviets' main target is clearly South Africa. By a quirk of geology, the Soviet Union and South Africa produce 80 to 90 percent of five or six of the world's most strategic minerals. The United States has a major need for chromite, manganese, vanadium, and platinum. To the United States, South Africa's minerals are as important as Saudi Arabia's oil. While we have some stockpiles, the Europeans and the Japanese have little or none. Alternative supplies are either not developed, or the countries rich in these minerals are inherently unstable — witness Zaire's interrupted production of chromium and cobalt when Shaba Province was invaded from Angola.

South Africa also controls the strategic sea route around Capetown, where so much of the West's minerals and oil supply must move — peace and in war. In two world wars, control of the Cape route has been a major asset for the West. It is especially important for large oil tankers, which cannot use the Suez Canal. Because the Cape provides ports, in wartime it can repair and resupply the biggest ships.

The United States does not want conflict in South Africa. On either humanitarian or political grounds, we don't want to see another Angola, Mozambique or Ethiopia, where civil liberties have simply ceased and economic well-being has disappeared. But, the Soviets have us over a barrel. It is hard for us or any other western democracy to cooperate with South Africa and defend her racist policies.

So, to use Lenin's phrase, what's to be done? We've tried boycotts and sanctions, disinvestment and the Sullivan Code, the Carter-Mondale approach of demanding one man-one vote. But, external criticism rarely forces regimes to do things which are not in their best interests. There is no point in continuing this policy of pinpricks: sanctions, boycotts, or talks about disinvestment. These efforts will not change the South Africans so why pursue them?

The South African policy which I recommend and which an increasing number of people like ex-UN secretary George Ball recommend, is a policy of true detente — an end to the struggle, and the beginning of an era of cooperation. Let's have more cultural, economic, and diplomatic exchange with South Africa. Let's get the South African society to transform itself by interacting with western nations, not by shutting them out. Change will come, if it's to come at all, from the inside, from the more liberal wing of the Nationalist Party, the so-called "rightists"; it will come because their own common sense and Christian principles tell them they cannot keep eighteen and one-half million blacks without any political power. They will not remove the keystone blocks of apartheid — Groups Areas Act, and the Immorality and Mixed Marriages Act — for some time. Their first steps will be allowing black unions, ending job reservations, and then giving the vote to the Coloreds — the cousins, granddaughters and grandsons of the Afrikaners. The Indians will also gain rough equality. But there is a problem with the Blacks, who are equally divided between tribal people who still live on the tribal reserves, speak tribal languages, and follow tribal customs, and those who work for money and are either part of the permanent or migrant labor forces. The whites fear the blacks and hesitate to allow one man-one vote for this would mean the end of the white man, he feels.

Politics is the art of what is possible, South Africa may not completely and quickly dismantle apartheid, but in the meantime, they could develop a consociational society. This is not a perfect democracy — it is not based on consensus — but it does allow for joint veto, proportional representation, and ethnic parliaments. Consociation is not something the American Civil Liberties would approve, but it is historically a realistic solution for racially and ethnically diverse societies. There has been enormous change in South Africa in the last twenty years, and recently, trade unions were allowed. They are no longer protecting the white workers; blacks can now occupy any position in the economy. The government is pouring more and more money into black social services. The economy has a record which ranks second only to Japan in expanding and in providing more jobs. As the Marxists would say, the modes of production will change the society, and then people who will have similar values will be able to come together. Then and only then will the white people be willing to share power and give equality to blacks. Such a time is far off, but it is better than fighting a long racial war in which there would be no winners.

Hush money

by ART BUCHWALD

"Mr. Flick of the 'Support President Reagan or Else' committee wishes to see you, Mr. Ellis."

"Send him in."

"Ellis, the name's Flick, and a few of the boys in the back kitchen have gotten together to put up a little fund for Ronnie to see that he gets his economic program through. We thought since you're the president of Dynamite Aerospace you might put a couple of bucks in the pot."

"What did you say the fund was for?"

"To advertise Ronnie's program to the American people. Congress is starting to give Ronnie a hard time on some of his proposals, so we thought we ought to use a little hard sell with the public."

"How much are you hoping to raise?"

"One or two million dollars. We figure every businessman has a stake in Ronnie's program, particularly those in the defense industry, and they wouldn't want to let Ronnie down."

"Does the president know about the fund?"

"Of course not. He couldn't be a part of anything like this. But there is nothing to stop concerned citizens like you and I from publicizing what he's trying to do."

"I'd be happy to give you $10,000."

"We had you down for $100,000. Of course, you know better than we do how much Dynamite can afford. I didn't know the company was doing so poorly."

"We're not doing poorly. As a matter of fact, we're hoping to get a $500 million contract for our new air-to-air missile."

"Yes, we know about that. Apparently Cheshire Robots is bidding for the same contract. They gave us $100,000 for our fund and didn't ask any questions."

"I'm not asking any questions! I was just curious how you people have managed to keep this a secret from the president."

"It hasn't been easy. We see him all the time, and we have to be very careful we don't spill the beans, because he'd get very mad if he heard we were soliciting funds from businessmen doing work with the government. But once we put Ronnie in the White House, we made a vow he'd get all the support we could give him. We expect the business community to do more than pay lip service to Ronnie's programs."

"Mr. Flick, I'm writing the check as fast as I can."

"Take your time. There's no rush. I'm on my way to see the Queeg Boat Company. They're hoping to get a big submarine contract from the Navy."

"I'm sure they'll come across."

"I wish you wouldn't put it that way, Mr. Ellis. This is purely a voluntary fund drive. If someone wants to give, fine. If he doesn't, we can always find another boat company to build our submarines."

"Mr. Flick, would you get angry if I gave you $150,000 instead of $100,000?"

"I don't think so. But I want it clearly understood that whatever you donate will have no effect on whether you get the $500 million contract for your superb air-to-air missile."

"I understand that. This check is only to show my faith in the Reagan administration."

"You're a great American, Mr. Ellis. I wish there were a hundred more like you."

"Aren't there?"

"Yes, but we haven't hit them all up yet."

"Here's your check, Mr. Flick. I have only one request. Please don't tell the president I made this generous contribution to support him, because I want our missile to stand or fall on its merits."

"I assure you my lips are sealed. And my request to you is that the president never finds out what we've been doing. He considers himself a great communicator, and he would never understand why we had to raise a war chest to sell his program."

Soviet terrorism: fact or fiction

By Richard F. Staar

Approximately 7,300 world-wide terrorist incidents occurred during the past thirteen years. Some forty percent of these attacks were directed against American citizens or property, mostly overseas, which comprised about 2,700 of the above total. By contrast, almost none have been directed against the USSR or its satellites in Eastern Europe. These data were assembled by the U.S. Department of State. In February 1981, the official Soviet news agency TASS accused the United States of being "the main center for the organization of terrorism," i.e., attacking its own citizens. The USSR categorically denied any involvement with such activities.

The communist attitude toward terror can be found in the works of V.I. Lenin, who never denounced violence. On the contrary, as early as 1906, he proposed in a letter to comrades at St. Petersburg a "clear, brief, direct and simple plan: Organize combat troops immediately, arm yourselves as best you can, and work with all your might ... supply each group with brief and simple recipes for making bombs, give them an elementary explanation of the type of work, and then leave it all to them ... Some may at once undertake to kill a spy or blow up a police station, others to raid a bank ... Why should one believe that Lenin's heirs regard terrorism any differently? What are the facts?"

TASS: "Any allegations about the Soviet Union's involvement in terrorist activities represent a gross and malicious deception."

FACTS: The first major USSR move in support of international terrorism came shortly after the 1966 Tricontinental Congress in Havana. The delegates passed resolutions, emphasizing the need for close collaboration between "socialist (i.e., communist ruled) countries and national liberation movements." Ten months later, more than a dozen training camps for terrorists opened in Cuba under KGB Colonel Vadim Kochevkin. Since then, the Soviet Union clandestinely has supported terrorism while overtly pretending to reject political violence.

TASS: "The Soviet Union has always been and remains a principal opponent of the theory and practice of terrorism, including terrorism in international relations."

FACTS: Instruction in terrorism is provided at KGB-run camps in Syria, Lebanon, Jordan, South Yemen, Libya, Angola, Mozambique, and Algeria as well as Cuba and the Soviet Union. Russians, Cubans, East Germans, and North Koreans serve as instructors. Major coordinating agencies for this network of terrorist schools include the GBU (Soviet military intelligence) and the DGI (Cuban intelligence), the latter operating under direct Russian control.

TASS: "The organization that directed the hand of the murderers of Aldo Moro in Italy is also known — it was the CIA."

FACTS: Italian terrorism is complex, active as an open and legal counterculture as well as an underground terrorist branch of a secret global network. According to Carlo Fioroni, imprisoned for his role in the terrorist kidnapping of his closest friend, half the founding leaders of the Red Brigades and several top leaders of the Autonomous Area counterculture in Italy had been trained by the KGB in a special camp at Karlovy Vary, Czechoslovakia. Former prime minister Moro was kidnapped and killed with a Czechoslovak - manufactured Skorpion machine pistol by the Red Brigades.

TASS: "More than 10,000 people in El Salvador have been murdered by terrorist bands, supervised by the CIA and other U.S. special services."

FACTS: Most of these killings are the work of leftists, whose weapons come from the Soviet bloc. In fact the guerrillas themselves claim to have murdered approximately 6,000 persons, including noncombatant "informers" as well as government officials and soldiers. Several hundred tons of weapons have been delivered via Cuba and Nicaragua over the past several months, mostly U.S. equipment captured in Vietnam or delivered to Ethiopia, in order to camouflage the USSR connection.

TASS: "The United States is continuing an undeclared war against Afghanistan by training and equipping criminal bands."

FACTS: Soviet armed forces entered Kabul allegedly at the invitation of Prime Minister Hafizullah Amin at the end of December 1979, surrounded his headquarters, and murdered him as well as all members of his family and government. The USSR maintains a "limited contingent" of at least 100,000 troops to support the puppet regime of Babrak Karmal who had been living in Moscow. Since that time, the Soviet occupation forces have used mass extermination techniques to suppress the Moslem national liberation movement. The strategic Wakhan corridor, a panhandle between the USSR and Pakistan, had been annexed. It gives the Soviet Union direct access to India.

TASS is silent about the U.S. embassy seizure in Teheran on 4 November 1979 and Soviet attempts to sabotage the 20 January 1981 release of American prisoners. The Tudeh (communist) party, the Mujahadeen Khalq, and pro-Moscow groups from Palestine all cooperated in the take-over. The fact that the leftist Iranian Students Association in this country has the support of the Communist Party U.S.A. also implies Soviet assistance and support for the student terrorists in Teheran.

President Reagan and Secretary Haig do indeed have documentation to support their charges that the Soviet Union has been pursuing a conscious policy of promoting international terrorism. Hence, the vicious lies emanating from Moscow via the official government news agency TASS.

Wood grand jury not dissolving

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A published report that the grand jury investigating the 1979 assassination of U.S. District Judge John Wood Jr. has been dissolved was denied by the federal judge presiding in the case.

"I will discuss only one thing with you and that is, no, it has not been disbanded. It has not been discharged," Chief U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions told The Associated Press by telephone Wednesday.

Local officials said they have received no reports on the progress of the investigation since the Justice Department in Washington took control last December. Extraordinary secrecy has surrounded the investigation since then.

Sessions would not discuss the investigation any further, saying "I feel it would not be possible for the court to talk about any of those matters at all."

He would not comment when questioned whether there was any move to disband the special grand jury, either. "It has not been discharged, but beyond that I wouldn't discuss any of it with you."

The published report said the special grand jury had been disbanded and a new grand jury would take up where it left off.

"You're talking to the wrong man," First Assistant U.S. Attorney Fred Rodriguez said when asked about the report that a "drastic change" had taken place in the Wood investigation.

Wood, known as "Maximum John" because of stiff sentences he imposed on narcotics traffickers, was shot once in the back from an ambush outside his San Antonio apartment on May 29, 1979.

The Wood killing and a previous attempt to assassinate Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr on Nov. 21, 1978, touched off what has been described as the most massive federal investigation since the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

"This office has nothing to do with it," Rodriguez said of the investigation. "We lost contact totally in December."

"Everytime the grand jury meets — it's been once or twice — these guys (reporters) ask me and they know more about it than I do. I didn't even know the grand jury was meeting. I haven't seen anybody (from Washington). I didn't even know they'd met, but apparently they have."

After the Justice Department assigned the case to Washington attorneys in December, former U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd and his staff remained silent about the case, and new U.S. Attorney Ed Prado said last week he, himself, was trying to find out status of the investigation.

In Washington, Justice Department spokesman John Russell said Wednesday, "I am just not going to say anything. We do not discuss grand jury matters."

"It's a secret proceeding. We don't even discuss the term. The sitting of a grand jury is a secret proceeding that is not discussed by the public or the press in order to protect the integrity of a criminal investigation and the individuals involved," Russell said.

The special grand jury was convened in June 1980 for a term up to 36 months.

The panel could dissolve itself by a majority vote or at the direction of a judge, or if it dropped below a required 16 members.

In recent months the grand jury has focused its investigation on convicted hired killer Charles V. Harrelson, who has been held in the Harris County Jail at Houston without bond, and on Jamie "Jimmy" Chagra, serving a federal prison term for narcotics violations.

At the time Wood was killed from a .243-caliber bullet in the back, he was scheduled to hear Chagra's trial on charges of continuing criminal enterprise.

Reportedly two associates of Harrelson and possibly other witnesses have been subpoenaed to San Antonio for next Wednesday, but federal officials would not comment.

Couple's relationship described in court

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Howard and Stephana Oldham, former friends and business associates of Price Daniel Jr., say their friendship cooled because of Vickie Daniel's suspicions about her husband's infidelity.

And Betty White, once Daniel's bookkeeper, testified that Mrs. Daniel accused her of having a personal relationship with Daniel, the former Texas House Speaker shot to death at his home here Jan. 19.

The three testified Wednesday at a child custody trial filed by Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph, to gain custody of Franklin Baldwin Daniel, 3, and Marion Price Daniel IV, 1, the Daniels' youngest sons.

Mrs. Daniel is charged with murder in the shooting death of her husband. She has admitted firing the fatal shot but insists it was not intentional.

Mrs. Oldham said she became friends with Mrs. Daniel in 1978 when their husbands became business associates in the ownership of a trailer park. But two years later, she was ready to end the friendship.

"I wanted to back out of the friendship because I thought she was trying to cause trouble between me and my husband and between Price and my husband," Mrs. Oldham testified.

She also said Mrs. Daniel suspected her husband of having affairs with other women, and often accused him of abusing their children.

Howard Oldham, who operates a business supply store here, said he tired of the friendship because of the "continual paranoid feeling she (Mrs. Daniel) had about Price. It became the only thing you heard, and I wanted to walk away from it. The friendship drifted apart over a period of time."

Funeral services set for bull rider

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A funeral mass will be said Saturday in Bryan for a college rodeo cowboy who died three days after he was thrown from a bull at a rodeo performance.

Tommy Castenson, 22, of Bryan, died Tuesday, at John Peter Smith Hospital. He had been paralyzed from the neck down after fracturing two vertebrae near the base of his skull in the Saturday fall.

Castenson would have graduated from Sam Houston State University this summer.

Mass will be said at St. Anthony Catholic Church in Bryan.

Steve Murrin, president of Cowtown Rodeo Inc., said proceeds from his company's next rodeo will be donated to Castenson's family to help pay for medical expenses. Castenson was hurt in Cowtown's first rodeo of the season, last Saturday night.

"This is pretty much a cowboy area," Murrin said, "and when one of the guys is down, everyone just tries to do whatever they can to help."

Gloria Fuller, manager of a nearby cafe, said cornbread, beans and beer would be served in exchange for contributions beginning at 7 p.m. today.

"A lot of the cowboys got together and decided that is what they wanted to do," Mrs. Fuller said.

A memorial scholarship fund has been established at Sam Houston State University.

Mrs. Daniel, once a waitress at a Dairy Queen in Liberty, earlier testified her husband ridiculed her and tried to make her look "dumb."

However, Mrs. Oldham, in response to a question by Mrs. Daniel's attorney, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, said she had never heard Daniel belittle his wife by calling her "Dairy Queen."

American business beaten on the world market place

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Eugene Jennings was lamenting the weakened world position of American business. "Competitors in the international marketplace are beating us at our own game," the professor said.

The game and techniques for playing were established by U.S. firms years ago, he said. But as competitors learned, Americans forgot. He forecast that "President Reagan's attempt to turn America around by investment incentives will surely fail if corporate chiefs don't return to wise management." America, he contends, "suffers more from a shortfall of wisdom than a shortfall of capital." The bitter pill, he said, "is that today's mistakes were yesterday's lessons."

1. Know your business. "It isn't determined by products or profits," he said, citing an observation by Harvard's Theodore Levitt that drill makers sell holes, not drills, and another by the inventor of the reaper, Cyrus McCormick, that his product was economics, not reapers.

By this reasoning, he said, you can see that General Motors and AT&T are in the same business, that of bringing people together. Their goals, he pointed out, are the same, though the instruments differ.

2. Technology and marketing must be married. "America was seldom first in technology, but we were first to marry it to markets in a timely, orderly fashion," he said. "Our asset was responsiveness."

3. Other companies cannot be bought blindly. "To acquire the other guy's products you should know either the technology or the market. Without either you don't know what you're buying." The message is proved daily as companies divest holdings acquired a few years earlier.

4. Quality begets customer loyalty. "We invented the principle," with Model T Fords and other products, said a chagrined Jennings. "We shouldn't have to have Sony retrace it to us." They know, he said, what Henry Ford learned: Quantity doesn't offset poor quality, because people buy products one at a time.

5. Strategy precedes structure. "We knew that once a business organization was functioning the management style had to defer to it."

The best corporations, including General Motors and IBM, he said in illustration, don't reorganize every time a new chief rises to the top. Less successful, more erratic ones, he pointed out, often do.

6. People are a company's most important asset. We knew that too, he said. "But then companies abandoned their employees."

One of the oldest maxims in American management, he said, is that you cannot hire a pair of hands. "Andrew Carnegie observed that a man also has a mind and a heart, and that he thinks and feels. But management abandoned the mind and heart, and the unions eagerly sought them."

7. A business needs a sense of purpose. The greats of American industry knew it. "A company is too abstract to give loyalty to," the professor asserted. "We must turn an organization to a purpose. It must have meaning and justification. This is the art of leadership."

And so, said Jennings, author of many books on corporate life, these seven bits of wisdom have become the seven deadly mistakes.

Sunken cutter skipper given reprimand

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Coast Guard has issued a "mild reproof" as punishment for Lt. Cmdr. George Sepel, skipper of the cutter Blackthorn which sank in Tampa Bay taking 23 men to their deaths after colliding with a tanker.

The "letter of admonition" was ordered Wednesday by Rear Adm. Paul Yost, commandant of the 8th Coast Guard District who decided not to court-martial Sepel. "I am thankful that this ordeal is over," Sepel said after a closed-door hearing called an admiral's mast. He declined further comments, referring questions to his lawyer.

Short of complete acquittal, an admonition, defined by the Coast Guard as a mild reproof instead of a reprimand, was the lightest punishment possible.

Adm. Yost, trying to keep an officer that he regards as one of the best, despite the tragic collision, had ruled Tuesday that there was no evidence to warrant a court-martial. "He certainly gave Sepel the lightest punishment he could possibly award," said Jay Flanagan, a civilian lawyer from Boston who helped defend Sepel.

The Blackthorn, a 180-foot cutter with a crew of 50, was coming out of Tampa on the night of Jan. 28, 1980, when it collided with the Capricorn, 605 feet long and loaded with oil. The cutter sank quickly. Not much damage was done to the tanker.

Flanagan said he admired

Yost for his courage in handling the case. "It is not a routine decision — what to do with the commanding officer of a military ship that collides and is sunk with loss of life," he said.

"This had a lot of notoriety and I think it put the admiral in a tough spot, to decide, 'Do I really call the shots the way I see them or is there a certain amount of public pressure to do what people think I ought to do...'"

Sepel, 36, is now stationed at the Marine Safety Division in Houston. Lt. Cmdr. Roger Brunell, Sepel's roommate at the Coast Guard Academy and his legal counsel in this case, confirmed that Sepel is writing a book about the episode.

Asked if Sepel intends to stay in the service, Brunell said he had no indication that he did not. Despite the light penalty, Sepel will never get another command.

"We had a discussion with the admiral on this very question and he pointed out that the effect of such a thing can't be predicted," said Brunell.

Maximum punishment could have included arrest in quarters for up to 30 days, restriction to station for up to 60 days, and forfeiture of one half of one month's pay, for two months.

Sepel was called before the admiral on a charge of dereliction of duty. "He originally faced more serious charges of 'hazarding a vessel,' which alleged that his actions caused the collision."

The sunken hulk of the cutter, which operated out of Galveston, Texas, was raised and remains at Tampa. Officers said they expect it to be scrapped.

A marine board investigation said there was evidence that routine rules of the road for ships passing were not followed by Sepel, by Lt. J.G. James R. Ryan, who was the cutter's officer of the deck at the time, or by the captain of the tanker, George P. McShea Jr., and bay pilot, Harry E. Knight.

In a report issued in Washington, the national Transportation Safety Board said the collision was due to Sepel's failure to supervise a novice officer of the deck — Ryan.

An officer of the deck is the man in charge of a ship during his watch, unless a superior officer steps in and takes over.

Gasoline supplies soaring as Americans buying less

NEW YORK (AP) — With Americans driving less because of high fuel prices, gasoline supplies have reached a record high and the resulting competition among oil companies has brought a dip in prices, the industry says.

The American Petroleum Institute reported Wednesday that inventories of gasoline rose 2.6 million barrels in the latest week, to a record 284.3 million barrels. A barrel contains 42 gallons.

At the same time, the group reported that refineries operated at only 69.1 percent of capacity, down from 70.4 percent a week earlier and "the lowest figure in recent memory," spokesman Gene Johnson said.

The reasons for the surplus include sluggish economies around the world and increased conservation brought on by higher prices.

The latest Department of Energy report showed that in February sales of gasoline averaged just over 6 million barrels a day, down 8.6 percent from the same time last year.

Gasoline prices shot up earlier this year as increases by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were passed on and after President Reagan ended controls on domestic crude oil prices.

But gasoline prices are now weakening because of the surplus. In a number of areas, competition has forced price cuts in the last few weeks, including reductions announced Tuesday of up to two cents a gallon in some areas by Shell and Sun.

Those cuts are in wholesale prices, but retail prices have also come under pressure and margins are declining. The average dealer markup for regular unleaded gasoline sold at self-service pumps was 8.37 cents a gallon earlier this month, down from 12.31 cents a year earlier, according to the Lundberg Letter, an industry newsletter.

"Increasingly, there has been surplus gasoline available to sell, and there has been an increasingly competitive scramble to sell it," the newsletter commented in its latest issue.

Responding to the excess supplies, Gulf Oil said earlier this week it would close plants in Toledo, Ohio, and Venice, La. Earlier in the month Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) said it would close a refinery in Wood River, Ill.

The old record for gasoline inventories was 283.2 million barrels, set in the week that ended last April 18.

Horrid horse stories told Senate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Frontier justice came swift and sure for horse thieves left to dangle from the ropes that broke their short fall. And now some Texas legislators suggest that was a method not without its merits.

"They hung 'em," said Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler.

"I've been thinking that might be appropriate now," said Sen. John Wilson, D-La Grange.

The senators only slightly tongue-in-cheek call Wednesday for sterner punishment in contemporary Texas came after witnesses told the Senate Natural Resources Committee that thieves are stealing show horses and children's ponies to sell at slaughterhouses.

The carcasses are then converted to food for dogs, cats and even humans.

The slaughter of horses is a $400-million-a-year business, said McKnight, who added that residents of the Baltic states are big consumers for horse meat.

A 1955 law requiring sellers to register "is a paper law with no teeth," said McKnight who has asked to put a bill in a subcommittee to work on provisions calling for tougher penalties and daily inspections of Texas' eight or nine slaughter plants.

"You can take a bucket (of feed), catch any animal and be at a slaughter plant 300 miles away in six hours," said B.F. Phillips of Frisco, the immediate past president of the American Quarterhorse Association.

Phillips said it was only by accident that someone spotted a national champion paint mare and stopped her from being slaughtered. And McKnight said quarterhorses worth as much as $150,000 have been sold as horse meat.

Wilson said a horse can be sold to slaughter houses for up to $500.

"They're worth stealing," said Wilson, "that's what it boils down to."

Is the Ostwind meant to survive?

New owner is obsessed with Hitler's yacht

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (NEA) - It began quite by accident for Horace Glass. He was reading a newspaper in 1971 when he came across an article that told of an old German boat that was sunk in Florida's Intercoastal Waterway. The boat, an 85-foot yawl, was said to have once belonged to Adolf Hitler.

Glass was intrigued, and decided to investigate. He visited the boat, whereupon he was struck by its silent association with world history. So he bought it on the spot, for $5,000, and commenced the adventure that follows.

The yacht had indeed belonged to Hitler, in the sense that everything in the Third Reich was his. When the Nazi Führer was planning to take over the world, he included the world of yacht racing. To this end he ordered the construction of four boats he thought would become the standards of the day.

One of the boats was the "Ostwind" (Eastwind), and no effort was spared in her magnificence. The main mast reached 100 feet in the air, and the mizzen mast was 50. The decks were fitted with teak, the planking was made of mahogany, and, at full speed, she hoisted more than 3,000 square feet of sail.

Alas, the ship was never to race for the Fatherland. If Hitler's vision was sweeping, his timing was lousy. The craft was launched in 1939, three days after the invasion of Poland instituted the Second World War. That bit of misfortune was to set a more or less ill-fated course for the Ostwind.

Hitler tried to use the yacht personally during the conflict, sometimes to entertain his mistress, Eva Braun, but apparently the boat made him seasick. Also, Reichsmarschall Hermann Goering came aboard to plot the air raids of Great Britain, but history indicates that, likewise, turned out badly.

Even when the war ended, the Ostwind's fortunes remained sour. The U.S. government seized it, and tried to use it as a training ship at the Naval Academy, but the yawl's 13-foot keel was too deep for Chesapeake Bay. Thus the grand ship was unceremoniously peddled to a succession of private individuals.

The first owner lost an eye while racing the yacht. And owners after that let the boat slip into disrepair. At one time the Ostwind was reportedly used as a bordello near Miami. Eventually, in the late 1960s, the luckless hulk was invaded by shipworms and vandals, and was sunk several times.

Then Horace Glass read about it in the newspaper.

And the old boat's decline was stayed.

At the time, Glass owned a local advertising agency, and was busy making a living and raising a family; so he rescued the yawl mostly out of curiosity. "But the more I got into it," he says now, "the more fascinated I became. I guess it's correct to say that it's become an obsession with me."

To be sure. By his own accounting, Glass spent $50,000 just to research the boat's origins. In time he was to sell his business and most of his property to continue with the project. In all, he says he's spent $110,000 and much of the last nine years to shore up, repair and refurbish the Führer's vessel.

Today the object of all this effort and money is resting on the St. Johns River in front of its owner's suburban home. The 50-ton ship is tied to jerrybuilt rigging that includes telephone poles and house jacks. It is trussed up above the surface of the water, so that Glass can attend to its mending.

To say the least, the work is going slow. A decade after it was pulled from the Inter-coastal Waterway, the Ostwind is still almost derelict. The rudder has been eaten away, the masts are off, the hull is picketed with holes; and, too, the ship's complexion has turned gray with age and tribulation.

Just the same, Glass thinks it's still beautiful. And he insists the yacht will yet again repose in the dignity it deserves. Once it's sound and seaworthy, he plans to float it down the St. Johns to the middle of the state — and turn it into a floating exhibit of the Nazi state from whence it came.

The only thing is, he doesn't know where the money will come from to bring the boat to glory. He has already spent his savings on the ship, and he now edits a weekly newspaper to get by. Realistically, he says, nothing is going to happen soon; it may still be years before the yawl is ready.

And meantime, not everyone shares the Glass dream. Some of his riverside neighbors think the ship is an unnecessary eyesore. There are other folks here who think Glass is a new Nazi, or at least a sympathizer, and they would like to see the Führer's yacht taken out in the Atlantic and torpedoed.

Yet Horace Glass vows he will not be dissuaded. He says he needs $40,000 to get the Ostwind out of drydock, and another $1 million to establish it as a museum. Unlike the Third Reich, he adds, Hitler's yacht has risen and fallen many times, and so maybe that means that it's meant to survive.

IRS after workers about exemptions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is enlisting the nation's employers in a war against a tax-avoidance scheme in which workers falsely claim dozens of $1,000 exemptions.

Under a new regulation announced this week, employers will be required to withhold federal taxes based on the government's word rather than that of an employee.

The temporary new rule is being rushed into effect in response to the spread of the scheme among thousands of autoworkers in Flint and elsewhere in Michigan, the IRS indicated.

The agency says workers have been claiming as many as 99 exemptions on W-4 withholding forms although they are eligible for only a few for themselves and their families. Claiming such a high number of exemptions assures that no federal income tax will be withheld.

Unless a worker is willing to risk claiming a phony number of exemptions on his tax return later, he still will have to pay the taxes that were not withheld. And he could be subject to penalties for failing to pay throughout the year.

City's census falls short

GEORGE WEST, Texas (AP) — Local officials went to great pains in 1979 to show this Live Oak County town's population was at least the 5,000 needed to become a home rule city.

Utility connections and church rosters seemed to indicate at least 5,000 called it home here. The town approved a home rule charter in 1980 which gives it more autonomy to govern itself than as a general law city.

Now the 1980 federal census figures show only 2,651 people live here and some folks are mad.

Those who opposed the home rule charter have complained to Secretary of State George Strake and Attorney General Mark White, seeking to have the designation removed.

City Manager Harold Moffatt and others said that the state, in the past, has been reluctant to strip a city of its new status unless fraud or "abuse of discretion" was involved in the designation.

Pan-American Highway

The most awesome road system in history

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (NEA) - At 5 a.m. in the winter, here near the Arctic Circle, dawn is still hours away and the major road in this part of the world is deserted. Only the wind travels over Alaska Route 2 at this moment - the wind and one small automobile that I'm directing.

The temperature is below zero.

The macadam is dusted with frost. The signpost ahead says North Pole, three miles. But the road does not go north. It runs south out of Fairbanks, past the Santa Claus suburb of North Pole, and then continues, incredibly, for 14,000 miles, through 19 nations and two hemispheres, over the Rocky Mountains, past the equator and across the Andes.

Route 2 is the northern beginning of the longest and most awesome road system in history, that of the Pan-American Highway, a remarkable land bridge that links 607 million people on two continents. For the next several weeks I will drive the highway half its length, the extent of North America.

The journey will include passage through eight of the United States' closest neighbors, from Canada to Panama. The Ronald Reagan administration says it wants to forge better relations with these governments and their people; I want to learn whether it can be done.

To an extent, certainly, the foundations for better relations are already in place, and the Pan-American Highway is a principal part of the structure. No other multi-national continent is tied together with a road system of this nature; its conception and maturation are little shy of wondrous.

And yet, the highway was not originally conceived in the spirit of international cooperation. When 16th-century conquistadors were conspiring to wipe out the Inca Empire, King Charles V proposed that a road be built over the isthmus so that the crown could exploit the riches of the ancients.

The road was not built, as it happened, and Spain's exploitation took other avenues, but the idea of the land communication was kept alive. Then in the 1920s, after World War I suggested the larger potential of the internal-combustion vehicle, several American states decided to get cracking.

So the blueprints were drawn. And the long dream of a hemispheric highway was begun. Mexico started immediately. The U.S. portion was already in place. Panama, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala were to follow; the Canadian section would come on line in the 1940s.

The U.S. Congress provided most of the capital at the start, more than $150 million in the first years, but construction was in every way an international event. Hundreds of political and industrial interests cooperated, and by the 1930s a primitive connector had been cut in the Americas.

And primitive is the word. Early travel on the Pan-Am system (the route is actually a series of many highways) was virtually death defying. Some who tried did die, unfortunately, and others died a little. One chap, in 1927, took two years to motor from Rio to FOLLOW THIS road in Canada's Yukon far enough and you'll end up in Chile. The Pan-American Highway spans two hemispheres, traveling through 19 nations on two continents. The weather in the Yukon gets to 40 below zero, while some countries in Central America boast of eternal spring.

New York, there spending weeks in a coma.

Early travelers shot monkeys for nourishment and built rafts to ford the rivers. In 1928, three Brazilian engineers drove north at a rate that at times was only a few feet a day, and they were forced to rebuild their vehicle again and again; it took the adventurers nine years to reach Washington, D.C.

Today the highway is less demanding. In fact, it is comparatively comfortable. The route across the continent is still long, almost a fourth of the circumference of the earth, but 90 percent of the most expedient line is paved, and a Pan-American Highway

Congress now attends to its development.

Not that the system has purged all its hardships. The highway through Canada's Yukon remains quite hazardous for the casual motorist, and bandits in Mexico sometimes block the roads at night. Then there are the revolutions in Central America; the highway into San Salvador is hardly reassuring.

Yet in the main, the road down the continent is passable, even inviting. And those who take it today think in terms of weeks rather than years. Reportedly, some Americans have hitchhiked the odyssey; and Jack Binkley, a Fairbanks riverboat man, has driven the whole system on a motorcycle.

My route will be a westerly one, about 12,000 miles altogether, and I'm driving a rental vehicle. The weather in the Yukon will get to 40 below zero, but some countries in Central America boast of eternal spring. By the end I will have ventured through a population of 368 million folks.

All American folks, by the way, Eskimos, Indians, Aztecs - whites, blacks and blends' unnumbered. They are our fellows. We share common turf in the cosmos, and an uncertain future. Do good roads make good neighbors? We shall see.

The computers are coming

The library enters electronic age

By Robert Weigeworth

In a Park Ridge, Ill., elementary school, students write and run their own computer programs in the school library.

The Salt Lake County library has installed a market line that prints out New York Stock Exchange quotations just 15 minutes after they hit the big board.

Youngsters in enlo Park, Calif., are learning to use microcomputers in the library.

And in Georgia, a regional library produces children's story hours along with a variety of other programs that are telecast some 60 hours a week over a local cable station.

These are just a few examples of ways in which the sophisticated world of electronics is having a direct impact not only on millions of library visitors but on television viewers who may never get to the library.

In part, the move to high-tech is a response by library professionals to the growing problem of information storage and retrieval.

In the Bible, we find the fateful words "of the making of many books there is no end." This might also be said of periodicals, journals and documents of all kinds.

No library today can house all the books, journals or periodicals published in the United States alone - not to mention other types of printed materials - without requiring additional acres of increasingly costly storage space.

The need to make printed materials easily accessible to readers has led librarians to adopt such techniques as microform reduction.

Three 3-by-5-inch microfiche cards can hold the equivalent of a 100-page book. And the new videodisc has the capability of storing the equivalent of 54,000 pages on one side of a slender 12-inch disc.

Many libraries are adding video cassettes and videodiscs to their non-print material collections. Within the next year or two, software programs for home computers may also become available for library loan.

Eventually, all levels of library service will be affected by new methods of handling the information explosion.

For example, computer card catalogs are already beginning to replace manual card catalogs, which are costly to maintain and take up a great deal of space.

Eventually, you will be able to search the card catalog of your local public library - and eventually the catalogs of libraries throughout the country - via your home computer without leaving your living room.

The country's data bases, which were formerly available only through a limited number of special libraries, are now "on line" in hundreds of public libraries around the country. This enables library visitors to get information quickly that would have taken weeks of research in years past.

So, if you want to check medical journals for information, you no longer have to be a doctor to access the splendid MEDLINE. And if you want to do research in chemistry or engineering, there are specialized data bases that offer abstracts of articles in these fields.

To use these data bases, you need to learn their own specialized vocabularies and to get accustomed to a new kind of electronic browsing.

In many communities, libraries provide the most complete contact between citizens and the electronic tools that deliver more and more of the information they require. Library staffers can introduce patrons to this new equipment and help them overcome any uneasiness about it.

As librarians teach the use of data bases, computer card catalogs, videodiscs and cassettes, they are acutely conscious that they are helping their patrons to obtain a new kind of literacy built around electronics. Computer literacy is becoming as important as good reading and comprehension skills.

Only about half of all Americans over 18 annually visit one of our 14,000 public libraries. Television technology, with its new interactive or "talk-back" capability, is expected to open up the vast resources of our libraries to millions of non-visitors as well.

For instance, libraries are taking advantage of the nationwide cable-television surge to become producers of programming that encourages reading.

Residents of Columbus, Ohio, can already order books reviewed on a QUBE interactive cable program.

AT THE EVANSTON, Ill., public library, young readers check the card catalog via computer terminals.

Home in Mount St. Helens' red zone

Fear of volcano won't keep couple away

By Tom Tiede

TOUTLE, Wash. (NEA) - Larry and Annabelle Umiker will never forget when the volcano erupted. They were just getting out of bed, last May 18, and they thought the explosion was the hot water tank. Then they looked out the window to see a huge black cloud descending on them from the peak of Mount St. Helens.

"It was like the end of the world," they remember, "like the sun had gone out." The cloud was accompanied by lightning and angry swells, and it engulfed the Umikers' home with a shroud of ash. "We grabbed a few things and left," the husband says. "We just wanted to get the hell away from there."

As it happened, the couple was terribly fortunate. The effect of the blast missed their mountain valley home by a nervous two degrees. Some wild animals were killed on their property, and two human beings perished within a mile and a half, but the Umikers and their children drove out in safety.

Now, nine months later, the

LARRY AND ANNABELLE Umiker at their home near Mount St. Helens. "We have respect for the mountain, naturally, but we can't be afraid of it. It was a good neighbor before. Maybe it will be again."

family still recalls the incident with trepidation. But time has healed the greater part of their leftover concern. So, says Larry Umiker, "We're going to go back."

This spring they will give up their temporary housing here, and return to their home near the mountain.

Friends say they are crazy. The Umiker's home stands on the land around Mount St. Helens known as the "red zone," an area thought to be the most vulnerable to another explosion. And scientists believe another explosion is possible. Indeed, some respected volcanologists say another explosion is likely.

Yet the Umikers insist their decision is final. "It may be close to the mountain, but it's still our home." Presently, only one other family lives in the red zone, but farther out. When the Umikers move back to their property, which is inside federal land, they will live closer to the volcano than anyone.

They will be so close, actually, that the worst of the May 18 devastation is just over the hill from their place. There the trees are still lying asunder, as if cut by a grim reaper; the bones of dead animals are even closer, and Mr. Umiker says he believes they were destroyed by eruption gases.

Somewhat miraculously, though, the Umiker's home is not touched. Even the four inches of fallen ash has been removed, or washed away. "My trees are as beautiful as always," Umiker observes, "and the grass is just as green. It is a wonderful place, really, all you can hear are the birdsongs."

That's the way it was, he adds, when his people homesteaded the property a century ago. "My great grandfather was a logger. He cut wood for shingle bolts. They chopped it up and floated it down the Toutle River then. Logging is the major industry around here; that's why my family stayed."

Umiker is a third generation woodsman. And his home is built from the lumber that has supported his dependents. The house is small, but redoubtable, and it's surrounded by subsidiary structures: the original shelter (1880) is still standing, but it's now used as a barn and for storing the implements.

Umiker looks like a logger. He is thin as a pine tree and has the shoulders of a man who operates a 40-inch chain saw for eight hours a day. His wife is also formidable, in a quiet way. Two of their children are grown and gone; two others, still in school, will be moving back with the parents.

Mrs. Umiker feels the return will be particularly good for the kids. She fears they are being spoiled by urbanization (Toutle's population is about 500). "They just go and go down here, night after night. I don't like it. I want to get them back up in the mountains, home, like it used to be."

It won't be exactly as it used to be, of course. The electricity is still out in the red zone, as is the road to the Umiker's homestead. The old highway, Route 504, is buried under mountains of mud in many places; for some time to come the only open roads will be those made and maintained by lumbermen.

Besides this, the Umikers will no longer have the serenity of old. Because they will have to coexist with Mount St. Helens' potential. Some forecasters believe the volcano will remain extremely dangerous for 20 years or more. "And if it blows our way," says Mrs. Umiker, "we know it might kill us."

Technocrats' aim: North American unity

By Tom Tiede

VANCOUVER, B.C. (NEA) - When Ronald Reagan speaks of improving hemispheric relations, he means fostering the conditions which promote intergovernmental dependence. He says the United States and its neighbors should strive to reach across their boundaries with the hands of mutual cooperation.

But what if the boundaries were not there?

What if North America was a single sovereign state?

The concept is not new. It has, in fact, been around since President Reagan was a pup, established and encouraged by a group known as Technocracy, Inc. Technocrats believe the United States, Canada, Mexico and Central America should unite under one flag; their Canadian headquarters is located here near the Pacific.

The headquarters is a modest building, and it's occupied by a small staff of volunteers. There is nothing diminutive about the group's aim, however. Members say that a unified North America would be the largest political entity on earth, and the most universally prosperous nation in history.

Think of it. The "Technate of North America," as it might be called, would stretch from the Arctic to the Amazon, from Hawaii to Haiti. It would comprise 19 percent of the world's land, but only 10 percent of its population (about 400 million), and there would be space and resources for all.

The latter point is most important. For it forms the fundamental of the Technocracy notion. Members insist there is plenty of wealth and opportunity in the hemisphere, but competitive nationalism limits distribution. Unification, on the other hand, would guarantee a society that is free of want.

What a society it would be, they say. Politics would be purged, money would be done away with, and no one would have to work for more than 20 years of their lives. "We have it all thought out," says John Darvill, director of Canadian Technocracy, "after all, we've been planning it for more than 60 years."

Sixty-two years to be exact. The movement was conceived in 1919 by a New York industrial engineer named Howard Scott. He was taken by the phenomenon that the continent's resources (rivers and energy seams) run north to south, but national borders are east to west. His theories took root from there.

At first, Scott's theories were dismissed as rubbish. But by the 1930s, when the Depression set in, his message was reconsidered. Scott promised a new beginning for a continent that was out of work and out of hope, and, for a while, Technocracy, Inc. was the fastest growing organization in the Americas.

But then, as times got better by other means, Scott's visions came once again under attack. He proposed that the government of the "Technate" be made up of scientists, not politicians, and critics pointed out correctly that it would mean the end of democracy, the vote, and representative leadership.

TECHNOCRACY, INC. proposes a system of government in which all economic resources, and hence the entire social system, would be controlled by scientists and engineers.

Also, the critics decried Scott's ideas concerning money. Technocrats would take wealth from the rich, give it to the poor, and create an egalitarian nation. No one would own anything in the "Technate"; instead, the new government would lend its citizens everything they wanted for as long as they needed.

After World War II the Technocrats began to be called communists. They proposed a society of community ownership, as Moscow was doing, and few in North America were in a mood for it. Despite protestations to the contrary, Scott faded from view, and Technocracy, Inc. was condemned to the same fate.

Today, only the remnants of the group remain. The continental headquarters is a 20-acre farm in Savannah, Ohio, peopled by a handful of elderly loyalists. There are small branches in Seattle, Wash.,

Farmers to be counted next year

COLLEGE STATION - While most U.S. citizens get counted only once every 10 years, farmers and ranchers get tabbed at that time as well as every five years, or four years as will be the case with the upcoming Agricultural Census.

Farmers and ranchers can look forward to the 1982 Census of Agriculture which is being conducted for the first time to coincide with the Economic Census, said Joseph Horak, with the U.S. Census Bureau, at a recent Census of Agriculture Data Users Conference at Texas A&M University. Conference sponsors were the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and Texas A&M's Department of Rural Sociology.

The last Agricultural Census was conducted in 1978. Following the '82 Census, the cycle will return to five-year intervals. The census started in 1840 and was conducted every 10 years until 1920 when the five-year cycle began.

In addition to agriculture, the economic census will include business, construction, economic surveys, foreign trade, governments and industry, said Horak. The last time the Economic Census was conducted -- 1977 -- it cost almost $60 million.

Horak said the census of agriculture provides a comprehensive picture of U.S. agriculture, including number and types of farms and ranches, kinds of commodities produced, and various details about farm and ranch operators and land use.

In the 1978 Agricultural Census, some 4.5 million forms were mailed to farmers and ranchers, 326,000 of those in Texas. Forms were mailed to everyone with $1,000 or more in annual agricultural sales. However, Horak estimated that mailings of the 1982 Agricultural Census would be down to 3.5 to 4 million due to the decline in farm numbers.

He indicated that about 10 percent of all farms in the U.S. were missed in the '78 census due to incomplete mailing lists and lack of farmer response but that these were generally smaller operations that accounted for only about 3 percent of the total sales from agricultural products.

Reviewing '78 census figures, Horak noted that part-time farmers continue to increase in number and that about two-thirds of all farmland is operated by individuals or families. While there are many small farming operations, farms with sales of more than $100,000 accounted for two-thirds of all agricultural sales in the U.S.

State spending low on public transportation

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two senators wondered out loud Wednesday why the state highway department is asking for less money each year for public transportation, and a new highway commissioner said that also "intrigues" him.

The Senate Nominations Subcommittee recommended confirmation of highway commissioners Robert Dedman, Dallas, and John Butler Jr., Houston, on a 4-0 vote.

The subcommittee held up a vote on parole commissioners Glenn Heckmann, Angleton, and Donn Woolery, Huntsville, after Chairman Peyton McKnight said he was tired of hearing rumors about pardons and paroles and wanted facts.

Sen. McKnight said, however, "This is no reflection on the job you're doing."

Heckmann is a former security boss for the state prison system, and Woolery is an ex-convict who served two years on an armed robbery conviction before being pardoned in 1973.

The subcommittee also approved Richard Mellado, El Paso, as the first Mexican-American member of the Texas Employment Commission, and Lias "Bubba" Steen as commissioner of labor and standards.

Steen is Sen. James Brown's cousin, and the Legislature passed a bill this session to allow him to avoid a prohibition against relatives of lawmakers working for state government.

Dedman, a former member of the Board of Control, told the subcommittee Houston and Dallas "are already strangling in traffic," and he added, "Personally, I view it as the biggest problem we have, with the possible single exception of crime."

Dedman said, "It intrigues me that the highway department each year is asking for less money for public transportation. He noted the request for 1981 was $32 million, the next year $27 million and the following year $23 million.

McKnight asked, "At what point do we start implementing some of the plans we have?"

"You had better ask for in 1981 what you want the next session (1983)," he said.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, said the department was seeking up to $700 million over the next two years for highway construction "yet public transportation is going down."

"Before we emphasize public transportation too much the basic road network has got to be in place," said Butler.

Sen. Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth, said, "I can't believe there is a public demand for public transportation. To buy a fleet of buses so someone can drive around — that's crazy."

"I believe I can understand and relate to inmates," said Woolery. "When I say the Texas Department of Corrections has a fine program for rehabilitation, I speak from my own experience."

"You're a hard man to con?" asked McKnight, D-Tyler.

"You can't con an old con, senator," replied Woolery.

McKnight said he had heard the number of parole rejections by Gov. Bill Clements "was almost the equivalent of the number of people sleeping on the floor" in prison.

A House-approved bill is pending in the Senate that would appropriate $35 million to provide more cells for the overcrowded prison population of 30,000.

"I'm tired of hearing he would like to have them for the entire Senate."

He said he wanted to know the number of parolees approved and the number rejected by the last two or three governors, including Clements, as well as statistics for each commissioner and member of the Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Sen. Roy Blake, the sponsor of a bill restricting unemployment benefits, asked Mellado, the employees representative on the Employment Commission, if he could see any reason why the bill would not work.

"No sir," said Mellado. "The majority of workers will not suffer from the bill. Most prudent workers do not quit their jobs or get fired for misconduct."

Blake, D-Nacogdoches, said Mellado's answer meant that at least two of three commissioners "feel it will work. There are those of us who feel Mr. (Nolan) Ward leans more toward employees and organized labor."

Blake said he would offer a resolution directing the Employment Commission to monitor the effects of his bill "to see the impact, good or bad," over the next two years.

Budget Office study criticizes target prices

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study by the Congressional Budget Office, while making no specific recommendation on how to change farm law, has given support to critics of target prices and "deficiency payments."

The CBO study, issued Wednesday, says if full costs of production were used in computing federal target prices for major crops, the bill could go up $3 billion a year. Using a full-cost formula could boost total federal costs of operating crop subsidy programs to between $5 billion and $6 billion a year, the study said.

Congress is working on comprehensive new farm legislation to succeed the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977, which expires at the end of this year.

The CBO, which sent its findings to the Senate Agriculture Committee, also said if the current basic farm programs are continued through 1985, those would "most likely" cost taxpayers $2 billion to $3 billion a year.

Those programs, which include wheat, corn, cotton, rice and soybeans, have cost an average of about $2 billion annually in recent years, the CBO said.

Target prices are bookkeeping devices used to compute federal payments to farmers if any are due. If market prices fall below the target price for a specific commodity — or the price support loan level, whichever is higher — the government makes "deficiency" payments to the farmer to make up the difference.

Price support loans are made to farmers who put their crops as collateral. When market prices are higher than the loan rates, as they have been recently, farmers normally repay the loans and then sell their commodities for cash.

If the loan is not repaid, the government assumes ownership of the commodities and the loan is canceled.

Commodity prices lately have been higher than the targets, so no deficiency payments are due farmers.

The Reagan administration wants to abandon the target price principle in new farm legislation but has not yet made a specific proposal of its own.

"Some producers think that the level of income protection provided by the current system of target prices is too low," the CBO said. "They argue that the federal government should provide income protection covering full production costs, including land, and that target prices should be 'fully indexed to annual changes in production costs.'"

Full-cost target prices "would have serious inflationary and budgetary consequences," the report said. "Also, this policy would reverse the long-term policy transition toward greater reliance on the market and would tend to escalate crop prices and thereby hinder export growth," it added.

The report included projections showing that if full costs were considered, the target price for wheat would increase to $6.24 a bushel by 1985, compared to $3.63 in 1980. Corn was projected at $3.66 a bushel, compared to $2.35 last year, and cotton at $1.20 a pound, up from 58.4 cents a pound.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rank-and-file employees at the Agriculture Department are hoping the logjam on getting approval for senior Reagan administration appointees finally has broken.

C. W. (Bill) McMillan, a former cattle industry representative, was sworn in Wednesday as assistant secretary of agriculture for marketing and transportation services.

McMillan, 55, previously was vice president for government affairs for the National Cattlemen's Association. He is a native of Fort Collins, Colo.

The job pays $52,750 a year.

McMillan is only the third of President Reagan's farm team to be officially installed. The others are Agriculture Secretary John R. Block and Deputy Secretary Richard E. Lyng.

However, according to department records, the official lineup of Carter administration farm officials was not so impressive in numbers after two months, either.

Bob Bergland, Carter's secretary of agriculture, was joined first by John White, whose nomination came March 9, 1977. White was confirmed by the Senate March 17.

Dr. Lamb

Avoid drugs for anxiety

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am female, 18, and have a problem that really worries me. I would appreciate your advice. For the past three months my doctor has prescribed Valium for me. I do have emotional problems that I cannot handle directly myself. I'm 50 pounds overweight and the Valium does help to control my emotional problems. I am afraid I am becoming totally dependent upon Valium. I don't want to run into more problems in the future. I am a very nervous and hyper person. I also take nose drops every hour or my nose stuffs up. I can't breathe except through my mouth. For the past two years I have taken Excedrin every day. I wake up every morning with a headache. The headaches aren't bad, they are just there. DEAR READER — So you are nervous and tend to have anxiety. It is true that tranquilizers such as Valium may give relief from these conditions. But you can't and don't want to go through life on tranquilizers. Your nose problems and your headaches may also be related to your anxiety. I would suggest that you ask your doctor to refer you to a mental health clinic or a psychiatrist for some help. If you can work through your emotional tensions, perhaps you won't need to rely on medications and may well be able to enjoy life a great deal more. Valium is one of many tranquilizers that can lead to drug dependency. I am sending you

The Health Letter number 12-12, Sedatives, Hypnotics and Tranquilizers: The Pill Problem, which lists most of the medications that lead to problems. You should be particularly careful not to use alcohol with any of these medicines. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. You might try just using nose drops in one side of your nose for a while. That will enable the other side to recover from chemical reactions to nose drops. After one side has recovered so you will have one open normal side, you can stop using them entirely. That method helps many people who get hooked on nose drops.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like some information about autopsies. I thought an autopsy always showed the cause of death. Recently a friend of mine died suddenly. She was not sick and was not under a doctor's care. The death certificate read, "probable virus." This was based on the fact she had had a cold about a week before she died. Now people tell me that it is not unusual for a young person to die suddenly and no cause is found. DEAR READER — There are causes of death that cannot be seen by visual examination, even with the use of a microscope. To cite one example, if your heart suddenly stopped or beat in such an irregular fashion as to fail to pump blood, you would be dead in minutes.

Dear Abby

Driver's seizures endanger lives

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I feel as though I should be doing something about this problem, but I don't know what. A relative of my husband has epilepsy. He's on medication, but he forgets to take it and keeps on having seizures. The law here states that if an epileptic hasn't had a seizure for a full year, he can apply for a driver's license. Well, this relative has had seizures right along, but he lied about it and got a license anyway. Last year while driving alone, he had a spell, lost control of his car and hit another car. Fortunately, nobody was seriously injured. Three months ago while he was driving, he had another seizure. His wife grabbed the steering wheel, but the car jumped the curb and struck two children playing on the sidewalk. They were lucky they weren't killed. After that, he swore he'd never drive again. In less than two weeks he was driving again! Abby, for his own safety and the safety of others, this man should not be permitted to drive, but I don't want to be the one to turn him in. What should I do?

ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Write to the department of motor vehicles in care of your state capital and describe what you have told me. Your identity will be held in the strictest of confidence. Please do this today, before he maims (or kills) himself and innocent people. You will be doing the man — and society — a tremendous service.

DEAR ABBY: I have had this problem for as long as I can remember, and I am sick of it. All a person has to do is say "Hi" to me and I turn red. I don't consider myself extra shy, but for no reason at all, even when I'm with people I know well, I feel my face getting hot and I know I'm turning red. The people I'm with think they have embarrassed me, which makes me blush even more. I feel so dumb. My grandmother told me that she had the same problem when she was a girl, but she outgrew it. Abby, I'm 24 and I haven't outgrown it yet. Is there anything I can do about this dumb blushing?

BLUSHING IN FLUSHING

DEAR BLUSHING: Yes. Make up your mind that if you blush, you blush, and you don't give a hoot! Your fear of blushing contributes to your blushing. Once you overcome that fear, you'll have the problem licked. (P.S. In the meantime, it might be a consolation to know that blushing is "in." Women who haven't blushed in years are buying "blush" at the cosmetic counter.)

DEAR ABBY: Concerning friends and relatives flocking to visit Florida: I was once one of those friends who went to Florida in the winter and stayed with friends. In the near future I expect to be a resident there and will undoubtedly have friends visiting me. I have penned these lines to express my thoughts about visitors:

"ONCE, A GUEST
TWICE, LESS ZEST
THRICE, A PEST"

Kitchens can be inviting

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — Kitchens speak. Some say, relax, have a cup of coffee. Others say, watch where you're leaning. The inviting ones invite because, says Janet Rosenberg, a New York interior designer and 1979 winner of the S.M. Hexter Interior of the Year award (for renovating office space in her home), "they provide a comfortable, spacious background for the food and the people. They offset all those functional appliances that are not pleasing to look at." And that, she maintains, is neither difficult nor expensive to accomplish. To begin, she says, "Strip the room of all loose items. Then take a snapshot of it so you can examine it from a different perspective. Think about the look you want. Try to select and coordinate things that make a cohesive statement, but remember, they don't have to be all contemporary or antique." If you don't know what you want, find out. "Comb magazines and newspapers for materials and items you relate to, and start noticing details, why it is some places feel so comfortable, like the local coffee shop or the dentist's reception room (as opposed to his office). Often, it's due to the color and lighting." As a rule, dark colors reduce space, she says, which is why neutrals — tan, sand, off-white — and pastels work better in a kitchen. "Small amounts of color go a long way," she says. And patterned wallpaper goes too far. "They add a sense of clutter, in addition to becoming tiresome after a short time." Whatever you decide to do with your walls won't get done overnight, but then, she says, there's no time limit, and "you shouldn't expect to complete everything in one day." What you can do quickly for openers, however, is get rid of the old-fashioned, unattractive hardware on your cabinet doors. "Replace those knobs with colored plastic knobs, which you can get at the hardware store for about $1.50 each," she says. "If there are two screw holes for each knob, you can put up a rectangular pull, or two knobs instead of one for a different, modern look." Don't strain your eyes while you're doing it. Put on the light. If it's the typical "blue, cold kitchen fluorescent light that's not flattering to the food or the people," she says, put it out again. "Add some incandescent lighting. You can get inexpensive strips of lights the size of Christmas tree lights to nail underneath overhead cabinets. That will give you a nice soft wash of light on your counter. And it will also save energy, especially if you put those lights on a dimmer. You don't need a lot of light, for instance, when you go to the kitchen for a drink of water at night." As long as you're there at the faucet, you might as well spray the fern or the philodendron you're going to hang over the kitchen sink for a "touch of warmth." And a cookie would be nice, now, so you can reach into the decorative French biscuit tin you're now using as a cookie/cracker canister, or "the attractive basket shaped like a hen or a chicken, with a removable head." Then, take a breath and enjoy the air. "It's nice to keep one or two fresh flowers in a vase in the kitchen or a pretty container of potpourri out on the counter for a nice fragrance," she says. Not to mention a decorative, but functional (which means you use it), spice rack. "All those things offset the slick appli-

At Wit's End

A few months ago, I suggested that television ease up a little on sex in Texas and give the other 49 states a chance to be unscrupulous and immoral. So far, no one has taken the bait.

"J.R." and the Ewing clan have made sex the biggest group sport since water volleyball. They've also succeeded in setting a style that the entire country is trying to emulate.

To be perfectly honest, I've had it with the Western look. If I never see another fanny in a pair of tight jeans it will too soon for me. If I never see another chase between a pick-up truck and a sports car, it'll be just fine. If I never see a man in a ten-gallon hat arguing about his inheritance, I can live.

No wonder we don't have any oil in this country. We can't get the oilmen out of the bedroom and back on the oil rigs where they belong.

I'm not exaggerating when I talk about the impact Texas has had on the country. In one week alone, I received booklets and ads that offered: Western pillows, boots with matching bags, a doormat that says "Hi Y'all," horn-shaped beer steins, a stuffed Clydesdale for the wall, a tie clasp in the shape of a Conestoga Wagon, a bolo tie, a belt made out of diamond-back rattlesnake hide, and a game called "Go to Texas" with the objective being to be the richest player.

There's also a silver boot match-holder, packets of Texas chili with enamelware to serve it in, belt buckles, a pound of Texas leather to carry around because it looks and smells great, an oil cap with J.R.'s official emblem on it, an eight-inch ceramic armadillo filled with jalapeno lollipops, barbed-wire swizzle sticks and napkin holders and (get ready) for $25 you can buy a square foot of J.R.'s ranch, Southfork. (You can bet if J.R.'s letting it go, it died.)

By Erma Bombeck

I don't deny Texas is easy to fall in love with... the warmth of its people, the outgoing honesty, the extremes and the laid-back lifestyle, but let's not get limited by our imagination. What's the Midwest city you think of when you think of sin? Cleveland!

Try this plot on for size. An envelope baron is buying up all the stationery manufacturers in the Midwest to create a monopoly and bring corporations to their knees. He has a wife who winters in Akron and a mistress in Chagrin Falls. He is trying to marry his only daughter off to a glue magnate and is upset because his only son wants to clerk in a maternity shop. One night the Cuyahoga River catches fire and one of his envelopes is seen on the banks, near the crime.

I'm telling you. Give it a chance and in three months the whole country will be talking with a Cleveland accent and wearing loafers.

YOU WANNA SEE MY BABY? Duala, a week-old gorilla baby, clings to her mother, 13-year-old Quarta, at a Basle, Switzerland, zoo.

HOMEMADE TAFFY. Who doesn't like to take a rest from pulling the sweet stuff to taste it? This turn-of-the-century illustration is from the culinary collection of Cecily Brownstone, Associated Press food editor.

Old-fashioned candy pulls popular again

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Now that American cooking is coming back into vogue, we've had queries from readers whose families want to have old-fashioned taffy pulls.

Webster defines the word "taffy" as a candy that is always pulled. The dictionary also includes the phrase "taffy pull" and defines it as "a social gathering at which taffy is pulled." In light of the definition of taffy, the phrase "taffy pull" seems redundant. But who would want to change it to "taffy gathering?" Not I. On the other hand, I'm all for calling a taffy pull a "taffy social."

Originally, taffy pulls were called candy pulls. Marian Harland, the great American cookbook writer of 19th-century fame, wrote some delightful lines about them: "Good old-fashioned candy pulls were frolics dear to our mothers' girlish hearts. In my opinion, taffy is sweeter to taste and to memory than chocolate creams or any other modern bonbon."

Marian Harland gave no recipe for chocolate-flavored pulled candy. Because there are so many "chocolatics" with us nowadays, we offer the following taffy recipe flavored with chocolate.

U.S. to observe
International Year of Disabled

WASHINGTON (AP) — With 1981 designated as the International Year of Disabled Persons, organizations and individuals all over the country will be participating in the United Nations-proclaimed observance.

More than 1,400 communities, the governors of all 50 states and 280 national organizations are working with the U.S. Council for IYDP, according to Alan A. Reich, council president.

Each of the communities, which have joined the council as Community Partners, is developing a program to meet the needs of local disabled persons.

"In every case, the aim of the community is to provide opportunities for disabled citizens to participate more fully in community life — to work, be educated, shop, go to church, visit parks and theaters, just like everyone else," Reich said.

"Disabilities are not necessarily handicaps, and this is nowhere more true than in America, where attitudes have begun to change," he added.

½ cup water
2 squares (1 ounce each) unsweetened chocolate, coarsely chopped
2 tablespoons butter
Grease an 8 by 8 by 2-inch pan. In a heavy 2-quart saucepan stir together the sugar, corn syrup and water. Stirring constantly, cook over medium heat until mixture comes to a boil. Without stirring, continue cooking until the temperature on a candy thermometer reaches 252 degrees — a small amount of mixture when dropped into very cold water forms a ball that is hard enough to hold its shape, yet plastic. Remove from heat; stir in the chocolate and butter. Pour into the prepared pan. Let stand until completely cool. With greased hands, pull until taffy has a satin-like finish and is much lighter in color — the color of unsweetened cocoa. Pull into long strips, ½-inch wide. On a greased surface cut into 1-inch pieces. Wrap pieces individually in waxed paper or saran. The taffy does not hold its ridges and remains soft and chewy. Makes about 1 pound.

Old allies you've helped in the past when you needed you will rally to your banner when and if you need them this coming year. One pal in particular will prove very helpful.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Steer clear of situations today where you feel others might look upon you as a backer. The solid proposition they propose may turn out to be a bummer. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Companions or associates won't appreciate it today if you take them or what they do for you for granted. Express your gratitude. Strive to be cooperative.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you've neglected to take care of important tasks earlier in the week, there is a good chance they'll pounce upon you today and complicate your schedule.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try to keep your involvements with friends today as low-key and simple as possible. Complicated arrangements will create unnecessary friction.

CANCER (June 21-July 21) It would be unwise today to compare the achievements of outsiders against those of a family member. Your statistics may be lopsided.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) One sure way to have others come down hard on your bright ideas today is to try to find fault in theirs. Seek the positive. Shun the negative.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be doubly prudent and cautious in financial and business dealings today. Impulsive judgments could cause you to lose, if you're either buying or selling.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be your own person today, but try to do so without offending others. Coming on too strong really isn't the type of role you play comfortably.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Unless you are very careful today you may assume more responsibility than you're capable of handling. If you volunteer, others will find you duties.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Enjoy yourself today, but also be careful not to overindulge. Too much of a good thing can carry a negative price tag which you may not wish to pay.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today you may have difficulty distinguishing between those who are in your corner and those who oppose you. Poor judgment could hamper your success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Usually you are able to deal better with large ideas than you are with little ones. Today, however, big schemes could lead to your undoing.

CUBAN REFUGEES came by boat to this country with high hopes. But some, like Manuel Cerillo, arrived with criminal records. The United States doesn't want them and Cuba doesn't want them back.

'Rateros' give U.S. headache

By Tom Tiede

MIAMI (NEA) - When Manuel Cerillo came to the United States during last year's Cuban boat lift he landed with hopes for the future. He would find friends, he thought, maybe even distant relatives, and they would help him to get a job, get a home, and get on with a proper new life.

It hasn't worked out that way, however.

Perhaps it never will.

The thing is, Cerillo arrived with a criminal record. He told federal authorities that he had been convicted of petty thievery in Cuba, and jailed as a malcontent, and so he was immediately taken from the regular refugee ranks and placed under close guard until an investigation was completed.

Cerillo didn't like it. He had served his time, paid his debt, and this was no way to begin anew in America. He complained, and soon began to argue, and eventually he lost his temper. When he was told he might be sent to a federal penitentiary he decided to run away from the refugee center.

Once out, he changed his name, went into hiding, and looked about for ways to make a living. When he couldn't find work, he says, he began stealing food to eat from the supermarkets. Perhaps inevitably he expanded the activity to include snatching bags and purses from women on the walks.

Today, seven months after hoping so much for the future, Manuel Cerillo has once again become what the Spanish call a "ratero" (a crook). He has also become a headache for the United States.

What's to be done with him? That's the rub. He still wants a decent life here, he still wants a job, but how can even a kindly nation help an exile who is essentially a thug?

And it's not only him. While most of last year's 125,000 Cuban exiles have been resettled, and are moving toward the mainstream, an army of others with criminal records has been rejected and left in immigration limbo. Officials say the plain truth is that nobody wants these people here.

This sentiment is not surprising. Federal agents say they are now holding 1,800 exiles with criminal backgrounds and many of them are genuine lowlife. Some of the refugees were killers in Cuba, apparently, while many others have committed assaults and robberies since arriving in the United States.

Also, there are hundreds more doing dirty business at the local levels. Here in Miami the police say crime has skyrocketed since the boat lift of last spring. Area officers say there were 200 more murders in 1980 than in the year before, and the number of rapes at Miami Beach has doubled.

Not all of the increase can be attributed to refugees, of course. But police claim they've done more than a share. Crime rates in Miami's Little Havana have gone up 100 percent, and law enforcement agencies report that almost 350 exiles are now in area jails or charged and awaiting judgments.

Thus there is precious little sympathy for the rateros. And federal agents frankly admit they don't know what will be done with them. They can't be jailed forever, and they can be freed without public approval. They can't even be sent back to Cuba, for nobody there wants them either.

At least, nobody in Cuba wants them now. The U.S. government hopes this will change, and Jim Thompson of Miami's refugee task force thinks there may be a chance. He says the United States has gone out of its way to urge the Fidel Castro regime to take some responsibility for the rateros.

If it doesn't, Thompson adds, the state department will then ask Cuban communities around the nation to come to the rescue. He says the Cubans are largely responsible for last year's boat lift, and therefore have a duty to see that all of their countrymen - rateros included - are resettled.

The trouble with this rationale is that the Cubans don't seem to agree with it. Not here in Miami anyway. Cubans in the street say the tainted refugees should be cut loose in the Atlantic Ocean, and Hispanic political leaders insist they will never do anything to assist common bandits.

Rafael Villaverde puts it clearly enough. He directs a popular community center, and is often called the unofficial mayor of Little Havana. "They can send them to jail," he says, "or they can send them to hell. The only way they will send them to this neighborhood is over my dead body."

Revised regulations in brucellosis program

AUSTIN - A year of revised regulations in the Texas brucellosis program is highlighted by a sharp increase in vaccination of heifer calves, promising research developments, and improved cooperation with producers and other segments of the livestock industry.

Commissioners of the Texas Animal Health Commission adopted major changes in the Texas program a year ago. "We believe much progress has been made in that time," John Armstrong, Kingsville, chairman, TAHC, said. He explained the program has six basic thrusts:

1. To provide a practical and affordable program for the Texas cowman that meets scientific criteria for control leading to eventual eradication of brucellosis;
2. Significant increase in the use of the reduced dose of Strain 19 vaccine;
3. Expanded and improved laboratories;
4. Improved surveillance;
5. Individual herd plans;
6. Meet federal regulations for interstate movement of breeding cattle.

Brucellosis is a highly contagious disease, affecting mainly livestock, and centering in the reproductive organs. It causes abortions, sterility, weakened calves and partial loss of milk. In humans, it is called undulant fever.

Vaccination of heifer calves during the last calendar quarter of 1980 has shown an almost 100 percent increase compared to the same time period in 1979. This is due in large part to the approval of the reduced dose of Strain 19 vaccine. Vaccination is a key element in the Texas brucellosis program, but it alone will not provide the answer. We must also have an excellent surveillance program to locate and eliminate infection.

"We have seen great strides in this area of the Texas program. More than 90 percent of the state's livestock markets are now voluntarily participating in first-point testing. Slaughter plant operators have also greatly expanded their cooperation," Armstrong explained.

A new test to improve accuracy in detecting field strain infected animals is being incorporated into the TAHC laboratory in Austin on a trial basis. "The vast majority of livestock producers in Texas are to be congratulated for their efforts in making progress in controlling brucellosis," Armstrong said.

Red Sox bury champion Phillies 15-3

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

New Manager Ralph Houk has been saying all along that he thinks the Boston Red Sox have "enough offense to score runs," but even baseball's perennial optimist must have thought his rose-colored glasses starting were starting to fog up.

That was prior to Wednesday. After scoring a meager 32 runs while winning just two of their first eight exhibition games, the Red Sox erupted with a 20-hit explosion and buried the world champion Philadelphia Phillies 15-3.

Boston broke open a 3-2 game with five runs in the fourth inning, including a solo homer by rookie Dave Schmidt and a three-run shot by Jim Rice. Dwight Evans also homered for the Red Sox.

The Red Sox didn't pick on any sore-armed pitchers. They clobbered 17-game winner Dick Ruthven for 11 hits and eight runs in the first four innings, tacked on Evans' homer against Nino Espinosa, raked rookie hotshot Mark Davis for four runs in two innings and finished up with three hits and two runs off Sparky Lyle in the ninth.

The pitchers stole the show in the Oakland-San Francisco contest. Mike Rowland, Randy Moffitt and Fred Breining combined on a one-hitter in hurling the Giants to a 1-0 victory over the A's, the run coming on Johnnie LeMaster's bases-loaded single with two out in the bottom of the ninth. The Oakland hit was a third-inning single off Rowland's glove by pitcher Matt Keough.

Forty-year-old Luis Tiant, trying to hook on with Pittsburgh, pitched two scoreless innings and Rusty Torres, Tony Pena and Dale Berra homered as the Pirates trounced the St. Louis Cardinals 11-3. But another group of Cardinals defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 6-2, the big blow a pinch three-run homer by pitcher Bob Forsch.

Forsch's brother Ken worked four shutout innings but his Houston Astros lost to the Minnesota Twins 3-2 on Pete Mackanin's RBI single in the eighth inning.

Johnny Bench, tired of catching, homered for Cincinnati but the Reds bowed to the Kansas City Royals 7-6 on Dave Chalk's RBI single in the bottom of the 11th innings.

Larry Parrish hit a pair of two-run homers and Tommy Hutton slammed a three-run shot to power the Montreal Expos over the Atlanta Braves 12-8. The Braves gave outfielder Gary Matthews permission to talk trade with the Phillies. There have been published reports that Matthews will be dealt for pitcher Bob Walk.

Drungo Hazewood walked with the bases loaded in the 11th inning, forcing home the run that gave the Baltimore Orioles a 5-4 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Steve Kemp had three hits and scored the go-ahead run on Al Cowens' sacrifice fly as the Detroit Tigers downed the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-3.

No change in NFL pass interference rule

MAUI, Hawaii (AP) — Owners of National Football League teams have decided not to modify the pass interference rule because they felt such action would lead to more infractions.

The rule gives possession to the offensive team at the point of infraction by a defensive player. Offensive pass interference calls for a 10-yard penalty from the line of scrimmage.

Spokesman Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys, said most of the owners were not in favor of changing.

The owners did pass several new rules, most of a minor nature.

One of interest will prohibit the use of stickum on players' hands. Lester Hayes of the Oakland Raiders, who led the NFL in interceptions last season with 17 (including post-season play), smeared stickum on his hands and arms. Many other players also used stickum.

Also, it will be against the rules to use any slippery substances to make a player more elusive.

Another rule passed concerned quarterbacks intentionally grounding the ball when about to be sacked.

Instead of just a 10-yard penalty and loss of down, the defense will have the option of taking that or making the offense put the ball in play from the point of the infraction, plus the loss of down. So there will be no advantage in grounding if a quarterback is about to be hit 25 yards or so behind the line of scrimmage.

In a move for more safety in the game, the owners approved a resolution against chop blocking by interior linemen, a rule already in effect for the ends. Coaches must agree not to coach that type of block where a player goes after the knee of one already engaged by another.

The owners refused to change the rule concerning outside kicks that go out of bounds. The rule says that the kicking team gets a five-yard penalty and must kick again.

Proposed by the Competitions Committee was a change that would give the receiving team the option of taking possession at the point where the kickoff went out of bounds.

Also kept on the books was the rule that the offensive line must hold its set for a second before the ball is snapped. Defeated proposals were for either no delay or a delay of two seconds.

NCAA tourney resumes tonight

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

Upset City, alias the NCAA basketball tournament, resumes tonight with Virginia, North Carolina and Notre Dame putting their Top Ten rankings on the line and Louisiana State, Indiana and Utah hoping to take advantage of friendly surroundings.

The East and West Regionals tip off tonight with the Midwest and Midwest coming up Friday night. The regional championships to determine the Final Four will be played Saturday and Sunday.

The fifth-ranked Virginia Cavaliers will get things rolling against No. 15 Tennessee in the opener of a doubleheader at the Omni in Atlanta. And All-American Ralph Sampson, their 7-foot-4 star, put things in perspective for all the remaining games, as well as most of those already played.

"It will be a battle," he said. "It will be a war."

The 48-team skirmish already has claimed 10 members of The Associated Press Top Twenty among its victims, including top-rated DePaul, runnerup Oregon State and third-ranked Arizona State.

In the Atlanta nightcap, seventh-ranked Notre Dame meets No. 16 Brigham Young. Meanwhile, the University of Utah, ranked 14th, will be at home in Salt Lake City against sixth-ranked North Carolina. In the second game, No. 19 Illinois faces Kansas State.

Friday night starts with a twinbill at Bloomington, Ind., where the Cinderella Hawks of St. Joseph's (Pa.) meet Boston College and the hometown Indiana Hoosiers tackle upstart Alabama-Birmingham.

At the New Orleans Superdome, little more than an hour down the road from Baton Rouge, fourth-ranked LSU faces No. 20 Arkansas after intrastate rivals Kansas and Wichita State meet for the first time in 25 years.

All four teams in the East have ailing players.

POINTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The conversations, as usual at this tournament, were mostly about the weather.

And that means the wind. "I can remember being so confused by the winds, they were swirling so much. I mis-clubbed on my second shot on No. 9 by three clubs," said Tom Watson.

"I can remember withdrawing because it was so cold," said Lee Trevino.

And, of course, there were recollections of Cesar Sanudo, who won a place in golf's legend and lore when he once withdrew while his tee shot was in the air, heading for the water.

And golf's leading players fully expected more of the same today in the first round of the Tournament Players Championship, the annual championship of the touring pros.

Golfers eye weather in TPC

But Watson and Trevino, generally considered the men most likely to succeed in the rich event, aren't too concerned.

"Given my choice between playing in the wind and not playing in the wind, I'll take the wind every time," said Watson, golf's Player of the Year for the past four seasons and a title contender in his last two starts in this event.

"I don't mind the wind," said Trevino, the defending champion in the tournament that offers $440,000 in total prizes, with $72,000 to the winner.

Softball meeting scheduled

Persons interested in organizing teams for a slowpitch industrial softball league (men or women) and a slowpitch mixed league this summer are urged to meet at 7 p.m. tonight in commission room 202 of City Hall.

League fees, by-laws and team rosters will be among the items discussed.

The hopsack blazer ... a necessary classic from Kingsridge

No man's spring and summer wardrobe is complete without one (especially this year when the focus is on the fashion fundamentals). Ours from famous Kingsridge reflects over a century of tailoring craftsmanship and is loomed of the finest worsted wool blended with polyester for a performance and wrinkle recovery so necessary for our Panhandle climate. Go from dress up days to casual nights over trouser after trouser with equal perfection. Choose from navy, tan, beige, grey or new fashion red. Sizes 38 to 46 regular and long, 150.00. Men's Clothing, all three Hubs.

Fashion Note: The blazer was first created over two centuries ago aboard the English ship of the same name. Metal-buttoned and tailored of blue serge, the jackets were intended to standardize the looks of the motley crew. If the hopsack blazer is an indispensable basic to today's man's wardrobe, the ultrasuede blazer is a well-earned indulgence no longer limited to fall and winter. Our Kingsridge Chamy® blazers in dusty rose, navy, medium blue, chocolate brown, tan or grey are the most beautiful suede sportcoats you'll ever wear, and they aren't even suede. They're a soft, sensuous, almost undetectably man-made fabric about half the weight of natural suede (dry-cleanable at a fraction of the cost!) and therefore perfect for spring and summer! 38 to 46 regular and long, 285.00.

College basketball is network small fry

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

College basketball may be a two-network sport next year, but it's still a television small fry when compared to entertainment programming. The Academy Awards will be ABC's competition against the NCAA Basketball Tournament final on March 30, so NBC has installed a special defense and switched the tipoff from 9 p.m. EST. to 8.

Sports doesn't have the mass TV appeal Madison Avenue demands, so NBC made the logical move. Especially since NBC wants to bow out of the tournament with its ratings, reviews and respect intact. This weekend's games on NBC and then the championship semifinals (March 28) and the final two nights later will be the network's last tournament broadcasts for three years — maybe more.

CBS took away NBC's longtime property with a 3-year, $48-million proposal, $1.8 million more than NBC's bid. The money difference of $600,000 a year is not considered major, which has left NBC executives baffled as to the reasons for the NCAA's defection.

"I think the money difference was a factor, but I've never been satisfied with it," said Art Watson, president of NBC Sports. "I'm very bewildered about the whole thing."

Some have analyzed that Watson's personality clash with Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA, was a reason for NBC's losing the property, the first major sport shift among the networks since ABC lost pro basketball to CBS in 1973.

A network source said that during the preliminary negotiations late last year, Watson accused Byers of bad-faith bargaining, prompting Walter to pick up his basketball and leave the table.

"Our relationship was a little touchy in the beginning, then it improved dramatically," Watson said in an interview with The Associated Press. "In our first meeting, Walter wanted a 1-year contract and we didn't. It was a little disagreement. It ceased negotiations. But I never accused him of bad-faith negotiating."

It behooves Watson and Byers to keep their hatchet buried in public. This won't be the last time Watson goes shopping at Byers' store. In fact, Watson went to Kansas City last month to express NBC's interest in NCAA football. ABC's contract expires after this season and many industry observers expect the NCAA to hammer out a two-network deal.

ABC has the inside track, but who gets the other half of the package will be between the Hatfields and McCoys of sports, CBS and NBC.

In the past six months, CBS and NBC have vied on several fronts. CBS, under new sports president, Van Gordon Sauter, gained attention and checkbook credibility by bidding $7.2 million for the 1983 Rose Bowl. NBC reluctantly matched the bid to keep its longtime game.

It's Borg

Even Steve Garvey has a hero

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Sports Correspondent

Ever heroes have heroes. "You know who my hero is?" asked Steve Garvey during one of those inevitable bull sessions that mark baseball's spring training. "It's Bjorn Borg. I admire him more than any athlete I know."

The All-Star first baseman of the Los Angeles Dodgers, awarded the Clemente Trophy in St. Petersburg, Fla., last week for his charity work, was talking about all of the great sports events he and other ballplayers miss because of their seven-month March-through-September grind.

"Take Wimbledon," he said. "I would love to see Wimbledon. That's where tennis started and, from the way it looks on television, very little has changed over the years."

"I have never seen a Kentucky Derby, either, or an Indianapolis 500, World Cup soccer, a Masters or U.S. Open golf tournament. They are always in the hot months and I'm occupied."

"I've often thought, when I retire, I would take time out and see all those classics that I've read about and watched on TV — but I'll see them up close."

"I want to see the sweat and hear the horses snort in the paddocks, go into Indy's Gasoline Alley and talk to the mechanics. Another thing I would like to see is the Henley Regatta."

Now how could the son of a Tampa, Fla., bus driver and one who has been around baseball all his life cultivate an interest in a boat race on the River Thames?

"When I was doing the Olympic series for television last year — more than 30 hours of it," Garvey said, "the rowing events intrigued me. The physical demands on the oarsmen. They are superb athletes. And that little coxman up front giving orders."

"But mainly Wimbledon, that I'd really love. I hope Borg is still winning when I get a chance to see it."

Garvey may have a particular admiration for Borg because he sees a little of himself in the stolid, stoical Swede who has won five Wimbledon crowns in a row and today stands astride the tennis world like a Colossus.

The stocky, muscled Dodger slugger has picked up so many nicknames it's hard to keep count: "Mr. Clean," "Mr. Consistency," "The All-American Boy."

Hollywood handsome, spit and polished mannered, quiet and non-controversial, he does his work with cold precision and dedication. He never seems flustered. He never throws a tantrum. Much in the fashion of Borg, he never makes waves.

What he makes are statistics — Hall of Fame statistics.

Garvey goes into the new season with the longest consecutive playing streak of any active player and sixth best in the game's history — 835 games. He has appeared in 1,125 of the last 1,134. He has had five 200-hit seasons, played in three World Series and seven straight All-Star games.

Like Borg, he is solid as a rock and about as unflamboyant.

Syracuse hoping for postseason wins in NIT

By The Associated Press

Syracuse, snubbed by the NCAA tournament selection committee despite winning the Big East Conference tourney on its home floor, hopes to continue its string of postseason successes at the Carrier Dome tonight when it takes on Michigan in a quarterfinal game of the National Invitation Tournament.

Michigan is one of three Big Ten teams still alive after the first two rounds of the NIT, which winds up in New York's Madison Square Garden March 23 and 25.

Minnesota, beaten by Virginia in the NIT final a year ago, plays host to West Virginia in tonight's other game, while Purdue will be host to Duke on Friday. In Friday's other quarterfinal, South Alabama will play at Tulsa.

Michigan, 19-10, is led by Mike McGee, a 6-foot-5 senior forward who is averaging 24 points per game and is the Big Ten's all-time leading scorer.

Syracuse's biggest weapon may be the homecourt advantage, since more than 20,000 are expected for tonight's game. The Orangemen, 15-11 in the regular season, have already won five postseason games at the Carrier Dome — three in the Big East tournament and two in the NIT. On the season Syracuse is 16-3 at home, 4-8

The game will have extra meaning for Syracuse sophomore Erich Santifer. He came to Syracuse from his hometown of Ann Arbor, Mich., because he did not feel Michigan really wanted him. Santifer has played well lately after being switched from forward to guard.

West Virginia Coach Gale Catlett, whose team won its first two NIT games at home, expects it to be tougher when the Mountaineers take to the road to face Minnesota in the 17,000-seat Williams Arena in Minneapolis.

Two athletes ponder - college or turn pro?

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

He is named after one of the Old Testament prophets but no one seems able to prophesy what the immediate future is for Isiah Thomas, a 19-year-old sophomore basketball whiz.

Should he remain in college and work toward a law degree, perhaps play a little pro ball afterward and then hang up his shingle? Or should he, not taking the risk of injury or some other misfortune, strike while the iron is hot and join the pros?

Thomas's dilemma is similar to one facing Herschel Walker, the 18-year-old juggernaut from the University of Georgia who has been acclaimed the greatest natural football running back to come along in a generation.

Walker is adamant. Barred by the archaic National Football League rule that prohibits a pro team from signing an athlete until his college class has graduated, he insists he has no desire to challenge the fragile regulation in court.

The 6-foot-1, 218-pound combination of speed and raw power has his eyes set on winning a gold medal as a sprinter in the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles. Real gold doesn't intrigue him as much as the gold plate of an Olympic medal.

Thomas has a different kind of goal but, in his mind, it is strong enough to make him weigh the alternatives. It has been his ambition to become a lawyer and offer legal services to the poor.

rumors persist, however, that the flashy 6-foot-1 guard, a warbling dervish on the court, may follow the lead of Earvin "Magic" Johnson and turn professional before getting a degree.

Johnson, citing hardship, turned pro after leading Michigan State to the NCAA basketball championship in 1978 and signed a $600,000 contract with the Los Angeles Lakers.

Pro basketball doesn't have the same deterrent as football.

There is no question that both Walker and Thomas, in their respective spheres, could demand equivalent figures and set themselves up for life with multimillion dollar pacts.

Should the Hoosiers win the NCAA championship — and they're a prime choice — then Isiah would become overnight one of basketball's hottest commodities.

Some of us are still living in the dark ages if we think a college is necessary to success and security.

Professional sports now offer a lucrative field for the talented and even the semi-talented, wealth beyond their fondest dreams. Basketball and baseball players in the majors average more money than corporate vice presidents. Teenagers are coining tour. Golf is only slightly less lucrative.

$500,000 and up on the tennis

What can physics, sociology and English literature provide if you've got a forehead like Bjorn Borg, a swing like Jack Nicklaus, legs like Walker and reflexes like Isiah Thomas.

To Roy Smalley, baseball is a circus

By Murray Olderman

LOS ANGELES (NEA) — When he was eight years old, Roy Frederick Smalley III already knew what he was going to do with his life. He was going to be a ballplayer.

He had his own little tailored uniform with the letters "Reno Dodgers" emblazoned across the chest. Every day he went out to the ballpark early with his dad, Roy Smalley Jr., the manager of the team.

His father would throw to him on the field and hit ground balls to him. And then when the players came out — such future Los Angeles Dodgers as Jim Lefebvre and Joe Moeller — young Roy would run around with them. When the game started, he sat on the bench in the dugout, just as they did.

Then a couple of times during the summer, he would go with them on bus trips to such exotic stops as Stockton, Fresno and Visalia.

"The road trips," recalls Roy, "were on the buses that everybody hates, but I thought it was the greatest adventure you could imagine."

The years were 1961 and 1962.

When the senior Smalley, who had been a shortstop in the National League for a decade, retired from managing to return to Southern California, little Roy still had his connection to organized baseball.

His uncle, Gene Mauch, was manager of the Philadelphia Phillies then.

"When they came to Los Angeles," says Roy, now a Minnesota Twins shortstop, "I used to go out in a Philly uniform and work out with Gene early on the field in Dodger Stadium. I did this from the time I was 10 until I graduated from high school. And after graduation, I even made a trip with Montreal when he was with the Expos. It was exciting."

Some kids rebel at a structured environment imposed upon them by their parents (Roy's mother is Gene Mauch's younger sister) and relatives. Being raised in a baseball family could have been a jading experience.

But not for Roy Smalley III. "I found it fascinating," he says. "I was on an annual high, a perennial trip to the circus. I just thought it was tremendous."

Exactly how tremendous can be divined in the new contract that Roy — a tall, handsome, 28-year-old professional ballplayer — has signed with the Twins. He will receive $2.4 million over the next four years.

In just one season, he will receive more money than his father earned in his entire playing career (1948-58) with the Cubs, Braves and Phillies.

When he was traded from the Texas Rangers to the Twins in June of 1976, Roy had the unique distinction of playing for his uncle Gene Mauch — who has managed the Phillies (1960-68), Expos (1969-75) and Twins (1976-1980) — gave up on the Minnesota job last summer. (Now Mauch is director of player personnel for the California Angels.)

"People never realized how close Gene and I were," Roy says. "My dad and I have a tremendous relationship. My relationship with Gene was also closer than most fathers and sons. It was like having two fathers. Gene never had a son. I was his surrogate son. A little kid knows when he's liked. Gene talked baseball with me, telling me how good I was going to be, what kind of player I was going to be."

So it must have bothered Roy that his uncle quit the same team to which the player had committed his future.

"Yeah. But I was glad for him, to be honest with you, because it was eating him up. He wasn't getting any help on the field or in the front office. He was fighting a losing battle from both ends."

There are symptoms of change in the Minnesota organization, which recently signed young catcher Butch Wynegar to a five-year contract worth more than $2 million. Wynegar, 25, and Smalley are the senior Twins in longevity since the freer-agent defection of such superb talents of Rod Carew, Larry Hisle, the late Lyman Bostock, Dan Ford, Dave Goltz and others.

Roy claims he never let the transient nature of the Twins' roster bother him: "I have my own sights set on where I want to get as a player. If we had kept the guys we had before, it would have made it a helluva lot easier. When you have a lineup like the California Angels or the Boston Red Sox, everybody hits. It's so much easier to hit with men on base."

"The first half of 1979, every time I came up, I had two men on base. It was incredibly hot. Last year, I was hot toward the end of the season, but I was hitting with a man on first, or nobody on, a lot of the time. It's harder to accumulate statistics that way."

The last three seasons (1978-79-80), Smalley has been a model of consistency, with batting averages, respectively, of .273, .271 and .278. He also hits with unusual power for a shortstop, knocking 24 home runs and driving in 95 runs in 1979.

A series of nagging injuries cut down his playing time in 1980.

"I had about 225 or 250 fewer at bats," he noted. "I need the season to do well. I think I'm a steady player. Except for the first half of the 1979 season, when I was unconscious (and threatened to bat .400), I'm the kind of guy that just plugs along. If you extrapolate the 12 home runs and 63 RBIs I had last year to 600 at-bats, I'd wind up with 16 or 17 homes and 85 RBIs."

Yes, he said "extrapolate." Roy is bright and articulate. He came out of the University of Southern California to sign with the Texas Rangers for a bonus close to six figures in 1974. When he came up to the major league roster a year later, the Rangers played him primarily at second base. Uncle Gene Mauch moved him to his present roosting spot at shortstop a year later.

At 6 feet 2 and 185 pounds, Smalley is a rangy, durable, sure-handed fielder who possesses unusual offensive power for his position.

"Hitting is hard to do," he says. "Most clubs feel if they've got enough hitters, they can give away shortstop if the guy can do the job defensively. They don't care what he hits, and consequently the shortstop doesn't care what he hits."

Roy Smalley III does care, which is why he's one of the premier players in the game at his vital position.

ROY SMALLEY does more than live baseball for 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. In the off-season, he sometimes relaxes by playing golf.

News in brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most soldiers and airmen given the hallucinogenic drug LSD in experiments apparently suffered no "significant damage," the Pentagon says.

In a report on the experiments conducted between 1955 and 1967, the Army said Wednesday the subjects suffered about the same rate of physical and mental illness as the general population. The Pentagon has admitted the experiments on 741 volunteers violated its rules and disregarded ethical standards.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House says an unprecedented negative poll rating for a 2-month-old administration is having no effect on policy decisions.

The 24 percent disapproval in a recent Gallup Poll probably results from an economic program "designed to change the direction of government," White House Press Secretary James Brady said Wednesday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal National Mortgage Association will offer its own "wraparound" mortgages after March 30 in an effort to increase earnings. FNMA, a private corporation, holds mortgages it has been sold by retail lenders who continue to handle homeowner payments.

President David O. Maxwell said Wednesday the agency now will offer homeowners mortgages to replace old mortgages to permit them to cash in on the increased market value of their homes or sell their homes more easily. The new mortgages are expected to carry lower payments than a conventional second mortgage were added to the first.

WASHINGTON (AP) — West German Economics Minister Otto Lambsdorff is warning that U.S. restrictions on Japanese auto imports would mean increased Japanese car shipments to Europe — and that European countries would react within two weeks.

The reaction, he said after meeting with President Reagan on Wednesday, would not be limited to Japanese automobiles. West Germany is the only country in Western Europe without formal or informal barriers to Japanese cars.

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan was toppled over backward by small boy who ran to hug her as she knelt to say her goodbyes during a visit to St. Ann's Infant Home in a Maryland suburb.

The White House said she was unhurt and laughed off Wednesday's incident.

With Reagan administration officials and members of Congress, the delegation will visit a Marine Corps base in North Carolina, the spokesman said.

The party has 29 seats in the 511-member lower house of Parliament. It is strongly opposed to Japan's defense ties with Washington and the stationing of U.S. troops in Japan.

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A twin-engine U.S. Air Force Super Skymaster, with one man aboard, has been declared missing after failing to return to the Howard Air Force Base from a training flight near the Panama Canal, the U.S. Southern Command said.

Authorities said an extensive air search was conducted by American and Panamanian air force planes after the small plane failed to return to its base Tuesday. It was declared missing Wednesday.

The pilot was not identified pending notification of his relatives.

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter has told a group of Princeton University students that he "might have been more forceful in dealing with Iran" in the hostage dispute, according to Steve Yelenoski, a senior who heard him speak.

Carter also said at the private meeting Wednesday that he "wasn't as effective as a president as he could have been," said David Huebner, a junior.

Carter participated in a question-and-answer session with upperclassmen studying the American presidency at the university's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs.

He arrived at Princeton on Tuesday to seek the advice of political science and history scholars in preparing his memoirs.

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — A judge has turned down a state request that he immediately order former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew to repay Maryland $200,000 he allegedly received in bribes while governor.

Anne Arundel Circuit Court Judge Bruce C. Williams said Wednesday there is "a need for testimony in the case." He denied a state request for a summary judgment.

Williams also turned down a request by Agnew's attorney that the trial, set to begin April 20, be postponed.

prosecutors say the money belongs to the state treasury.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Brenda Vaccaro, who rose to stardom in the movie "Midnight Cowboy" and has since won an Oscar nomination and an Emmy, will marry a New York photographer in two months, her publicist says.

Ms. Vaccaro and Charles Cannizzaro met recently through mutual friends in New York, the spokeswoman for Rogers & Cowan Inc. publicity agency said Wednesday.

It will be the third marriage for Ms. Vaccaro, 41, and the second for Cannizzaro, 27.

Ms. Vaccaro received an Emmy as best supporting actress for her role in "The Shape of Things" and was nominated for an Oscar in the same category for her role in "Once Is Not Enough."

CHRISTIANSTED, U.S. Virgin Islands. (AP) — Comedian-pianist Victor Borge played and sang "God Bless America" at a hotel dinner-dance at the request of a former American hostage who was on a free vacation here.

Air Force Col. Tom Schaefer made the request Tuesday night at a St. Patrick's Day dinner-dance at a hotel on the island of St. Croix, a part of the U.S. Virgin Islands.

The party was held in honor of the 32 former hostages, all of whom had been invited by the hotel for a week's free vacation in the Caribbean.

Colombian and Ecuadorean forces together claimed to have killed or captured nearly 100 members of the guerrilla band that claimed responsibility for the slaying of American Bible translator Chester A. Bitterman on March 7.

Officials said Wednesday that 48 of the guerrillas were captured near the border last weekend, including 15 who were turned over to Colombian forces.

Colombian and Ecuadorean forces together claimed to have killed or captured nearly 100 members of the guerrilla band that claimed responsibility for the slaying of American Bible translator Chester A. Bitterman on March 7.

None of the rebel cadets were detained, he said without elaboration.

Sources said the rebellion began Tuesday when about 100 cadets detained the new academy commander, Col. Luis Arce Gomez, a staunch supporter of President Luis Garcia Meza. The rebellion ended after the president ordered a military alert.

TOKYO (AP) — Three members of the Japan Communist Party leave for Washington Saturday for a 10-day visit to discuss U.S.-Japanese security ties and U.S. demands that Japan increase its defense spending, a party spokesman said today.

Record price paid for coin

WEST BLOOMFIELD, Mich. (AP) — Two suburban Detroit coin dealers have spent $325,000 to buy one of the world's rarest coins, a 1911 Canadian silver dollar, making it the most expensive 20th century coin on record.

The coin's value may top $2 million in a few years, according to Joseph Carlton and David Hirschman, partners in the Birmingham firm that bought the coin from a Canadian dealer.

Only two of the coins are known to exist. The other has been a part of the Royal Mint collection in London since it was struck 70 years ago, the collectors said.

"We feel it's grossly underpriced," Carlton said.

WHEN THE when the draft ended in 1973, and the Army was forced to rely on volunteers, the reality of combat was eclipsed by the realities of recruiting. Thus, training was made less demanding in order to attract enough young men and women to fill the units.

Today's Army: too accomodating

By Tom Tiede

FORT JACKSON, S.C. (NEA) - Jerry Anderson was in the United States Army for 20 years, and he loved it. He fought in Korea, he fought in Vietnam, and when he retired during the past decade he decided to make his home where his heart was, on the border of this sprawling military training post.

Now he's having second thoughts about living here. "The thing is," he explains, "The Army's not the same anymore. When I go on post I can't believe what I see. There is no discipline, there is no pride, there are just people filling up spaces. The Army I belonged to was a well-trained unit. I hate to say it but the only thing it is now is a mob."

A mob? "The hair is long. The uniforms are sloppy. And the attitude! The other day I saw a drill sergeant walk up to a recruit and tell him to button his jacket. The recruit just told the sergeant to go to hell. I tell you, my wife won't come on post with me anymore, because I get so damned angry."

This old soldier is not the only one who is angry, apparently. People throughout the service say they feel the same. Officially, the Army maintains that it is as good and hard as ever, but privately there is deep concern. Authority is diminishing, as is esprit, and the primary thing left is the mob.

That mob is most apparent in its infancy, perhaps. And this is why Jerry Anderson is frustrated when he visits Fort Jackson. The post is one of nine basic training centers in the U.S. Army, more than 35,000 recruits are assembled here each year, and there is no doubt that it's not what it used to be.

It used to be tough, for one thing. Ever since the first freeze in the Revolution, the Army has tried to train men for the impossible. War kills, or maims, or at least is most uncomfortable, and the service has traditionally labored to establish this truth in its training process.

That's what the John Wayne films were about. He was always kicking rumps, and bumping heads, because the script was aware of the realities of combat. "If you don't learn it in training, son," Wayne would bark, "if we don't push hard, we'll have to bring you back from the front in a bag."

But that was in the days of the military draft. When the draft ended in 1973, and the Army was forced to rely on volunteers, the reality of combat was eclipsed by the realities of recruiting. Thus, training was made less demanding in order to attract enough young men and women to fill the units. First the hair length standards were relaxed. Then tight restrictions were placed on physical abuse. In time, Army recruits were given several of the privileges of regular soldiers, and many officers and non-commissioned officers began to grumble that training was becoming too soft and easy.

Yet the Army didn't listen to the grumbling. Instead, in 1979, it introduced the concept of "self discipline" to the boot program. Thereafter the recruits would be allowed by law to train in a "positive climate," which, essentially, means one free from the historic rule of vigorous control. And so today basic training is no longer punishing. It may not even be effective. Jerry Anderson says high school football is tougher, and Capt. Sam Barlotta, who has been in the drilling cadre, says the primary goal of modern recruit training seems to be to avoid hurting anyone's feelings.

Barlotta, who has written a critique of training for an Army house organ, believes self-sacrifice and responsibility have been all but dropped from recruit indoctrination. He says the Army doesn't try to mold soldiers anymore; instead, it concentrates on appeasing "nice little boys and girls."

The appeasement begins with the duration of training. In 1949-1956, basic training was 14 weeks long. Today it is half that for the recruits at Fort Jackson. It should be noted that Jackson trains combat support troops; other recruits go to basic and advanced training for a total of 11 weeks 1 day.

And since training is reduced in time, it is reduced in scope as well. Unlike their fathers, therefore, Jackson's recruits do not learn hand-to-hand combat, and do not have map reading classes. They don't have live fire exercises, either; soldiers of old used to belly 48 inches under machine gun fire.

Actually, the recruits do not even experience a significant amount of machinegun fire in target practice. Budget cutting has eliminated the luxury of permitting wholesale practice shots. Recruits at the 50 cal. range, for example, are only allowed one short burst, that is to say: 10 rounds.

But at least the Army recruits have the weapons. Trainees in the Navy do not. The Pentagon has decided that since sailors do not normally use individual weapons, the recruits should not be required to carry them. That's what basic has come to, critics say — in effect, a program of accomodation.

Petroleum Institute to award scholarships

The American Petroleum Institute (A.P.I.), Panhandle Chapter is accepting applications for the award of four $400 scholarships for the 1981-1982 school year.

Eligibility for participation in this program is limited to sons and daughters of any A.P.I. Panhandle Chapter member. Recipients shall be chosen on the basis of ability, seriousness of purpose, character and scholarship.

Requirement for application will consist of a neat letter written about the applicant, including but not limited to, the following information:

Full name and address of parent or guardian. Description of applicant and family, including number of family members, interests, background.

School career including activities, honors, grades and class standing.

Outside activities and talents achievements.

Statement of ambitions and future plans including the college or university plans and enrollment plans.

The recipient must be enrolled in college for the 1981 fall term, or the scholarship will go to the alternate.

The letter of application can be submitted to the American Petroleum Institute, Panhandle Chapter, Attention: API Scholarship Committee, Don L. Mashburn, P. O. Box 2319, Pampa, Texas. 79065 by June 1, 1981.

Additional $400 scholarships will be awarded if funds are available.
