Bentsen says Coast Guard can't stop drug traffic

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Coast Guard may be losing its ability to cope with drug smuggling along the Texas coast, says Sen. Lloyd Bentsen. "They tell me they intercept about 10-15 percent of the drugs that come in by sea," the Texas Democrat said. "And yet the Coast Guard has many duties, you know — intercepting drug traffic is only one of them — and we're seeing a massive increase in drugs coming into the state."

In an interview prepared for broadcast over Texas television stations, Bentsen noted that because of budget problems, the Coast Guard now uses boats it would not certify for anyone else. He said the average age of the Coast Guard's boats is 27 years, while it should be about 25 years. "You have the average enlistee has only been in there two years, so I'm asking the General Accounting Office to take a look at it, a survey, to see what we should do, perhaps cut back on some of the other responsibilities," Bentsen said. "Or else we're going to have to put more funds in it, in order that we can truly intercept some of these drug smugglers bringing in these drugs."

In a letter to Milton J. Focolar, acting comptroller general, Bentsen asked for an update of the year-old GAO evaluation of the Coast Guard. "One of my immediate concerns is the capability of the Coast Guard to control drug smuggling especially along the Texas coast," he wrote.

The senator said estimates show the Coast Guard would need to intercept 75 percent of the drug traffic to put an effective end to smuggling.

Man who claimed innocence convicted of triple slaying

DUNCAN, Okla. (AP) — A Stephens County jury was deliberating Saturday whether to recommend life imprisonment or death by lethal drug injection for a 29-year-old man convicted of three counts of first-degree murder in the shootings of a man and two British women at a farmhouse near Velma.

The eight-woman, four-man jury announced the guilty verdict against Johnny Gillum about 10 a.m. Saturday after less than two hours of deliberation, said Joe Enos, Stephens County assistant district attorney. The panel resumed deliberations in the sentencing phase of the trial about noon.

Gillum is the second man to be convicted in the slayings. On March 28, jurors recommended the death penalty for Gillum's uncle, Olan Randle Robison. A third defendant, William Starr Jordan, of Wichita Falls, Texas, faces similar charges.

During lengthy testimony and cross-examination Friday, Gillum persistently denied shooting anyone at the Velma residence. He said he didn't know what his uncle and another man had in mind when they put some guns into a car and drove to the rural Velma home on June 12, the night of the killings.

"Murder, killing, or robbery ... there was nothing like that ever mentioned in my presence," Gillum said of discussions at the Healdton residence earlier the night of the slayings. "Not one single time."

Gillum, Jordan and Robison, were charged with the killings of Robert Swinford, Averil Bourque and Julie Sheila Lovejoy. The women were on an extended vacation in this southwest Oklahoma area.

District Attorney Tony Burns has contended robbers tried to find Mrs. Bourque's gold jewelry, valued at more than $6,000. The jewelry was found hidden in her bedroom when investigators searched the death scene.

Gillum said he was in the car, unarmed, when Robison and Jordan were admitted into the Velma residence by someone who apparently recognized Robison. Approximately 30 seconds later, Gillum said, he heard a gunshot, got out of the car and ran toward the house.

The defendant said he saw "some legs of a body" and Robison trying to kick in an interior door, carrying a gun in his left hand. "I was scared to death," he testified. "I asked Randle, 'please stop this, let's get out of here.'"

Gang suspected in robberies of Texas wealthy

DALLAS (AP) — Authorities are searching for clues to a well-organized gang of robbers believed responsible for victimizing several prominent families throughout Texas.

The robbers struck again Thursday night, tying up relatives of the late John D. Murchison Sr. at their Dallas mansion and making off with an undetermined amount of valuables.

The robbers' descriptions and their method of operation strongly resembled several other incidents in the past year in Lubbock, Brownfield, Fort Worth, Houston, Abilene, Cleburne and New Orleans, officers said.

In all the robberies, the two men tied up family members and ransacked their homes, police said. In several of the cases, a third accomplice apparently watched the house and may have monitored police radio broadcasts.

Last November, retired New York insurance broker John Howells and his wife Florence, a former Italian countess, lost about $245,000 in gold, silver and jewelry from their North Dallas home to robbers who said they needed money for drugs.

More than $1.4 million in cash, jewelry and silver was taken in December 1979 from the Fort Worth house of oilman W.A. "Tex" Moncrief.

In January 1980, another similar robbery occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Cooper — about 10 blocks away from the Murchison home.

In the latest robbery, two men wearing blue jogging suits, ski masks and gloves and carrying pistols, knives and tear gas confronted Murchison's widow, 54-year-old Lucille "Lupe" Murchison, as she and a friend returned home about 11:30 p.m. Police said one of the robbers also had a walkie-talkie.

Murchison, who died in June 1979, was the son of oilman Clint Murchison Sr. and the brother of Dallas Cowboys owner Clint Murchison Jr. Police said the robbers tied up and blindfolded Mrs. Murchison's escort, 64-year-old William Lamont, and placed him in the back seat of one of the family's cars. Mrs. Murchison was forced into the trunk.

A few minutes later, Mrs. Murchison's 25-year-old daughter Barbara arrived with Terry and Ann Murphy of Richardson, a Dallas suburb. The men tied the Murphys together by their hands and took Miss Murchison inside the house, where they made her deactivate home alarm systems, officers said.

They then took Mrs. Murchison and Lamont from the car and took all the victims into a living room, where they again were tied up.

While one robber watched the victims, the other forced Miss Murchison to show him where the valuables were kept.

The robbers ransacked the house until 3:30 a.m. After they left, Murphy found a knife and cut himself and the others free.

At least 6 killed in West Bend tornado

WEST BEND, Wis. (AP) — Savage winds tore through the north edge of West Bend early Saturday, mowing down homes in a curving, multimillion-dollar path of destruction. Officials counted six storm-related deaths, and said at least 50 people were injured.

The National Weather Service at first termed the storm a tornado, and the mayor called it the first tornado ever in the city of 20,000 some 25 miles northwest of Milwaukee. But the Weather Service later backed off, saying it may have been "severe thunderstorm downbursts" — very high winds.

The storm cut through quiet streets of single-family homes — seemingly exploding some houses into splinters and leaving houses on either side untouched.

A tornado specialist was to survey the area Sunday, forecasters said. They said they could not estimate the force of the winds.

The storm claimed three deaths outright, and officials attributed three highway deaths to the weather.

Officials said 39 people were treated and released at hospitals, and 12 people were admitted. Another 100 people were processed at an emergency center, including an undetermined number with minor injuries.

Police Chief James Skidmore estimated damage at $15 million, but Mayor John Pick put damage at $6 million. Forty-six homes and apartment buildings were destroyed by the storm, which struck in darkness at 12:08 a.m., and another 47 were damaged.

"It was just absolute, abject destruction," said Pick. "I've never seen anything like it."

Pick said he did not believe the National Guard would be needed.

A widespread storm system moved across the Midwest on Friday and Saturday. In all, eight people were killed and about 125 injured. Hundreds of homes and buildings were wrecked.

The National Weather Service said about 20 tornadoes and 121 severe storms were reported Friday and Saturday in Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Kansas, Arkansas, Illinois and Oklahoma. High winds also struck Indiana and Texas.

Among the dead in West Bend was 10-year-old Scott

Schlefke, whose body was found in the ruins of his home by a team of firefighters that included his father.

Gov. Lee Dreyfus said West Bend could become eligible for federal disaster assistance, Pick said.

Police Sgt. Jim Schwartz said police received two phone calls simultaneously at 12:08 a.m. and emergency sirens were sounded. "By that time the tornado was pushing its way through," he said.

Rescuers completed the search for victims Saturday morning. Police reported snarled traffic in the devastated area, and urged people to stay away. Only residents were being allowed

Chagra link weak

DALLAS (AP) — Evidence purportedly linking El Paso lawyer Joe Chagra to the 1979 assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. is probably insufficient to support a charge of conspiracy against Chagra, a Dallas newspaper has reported.

The Dallas Times Herald quoted federal sources as saying the government is considering lesser charges against Chagra based on evidence gathered in a Feb. 27 search of his El Paso house. Although an inventory of the property seized in that search was ordered sealed by a federal judge, sources said "controlled substances" were listed on the search warrant, the Times Herald reported.

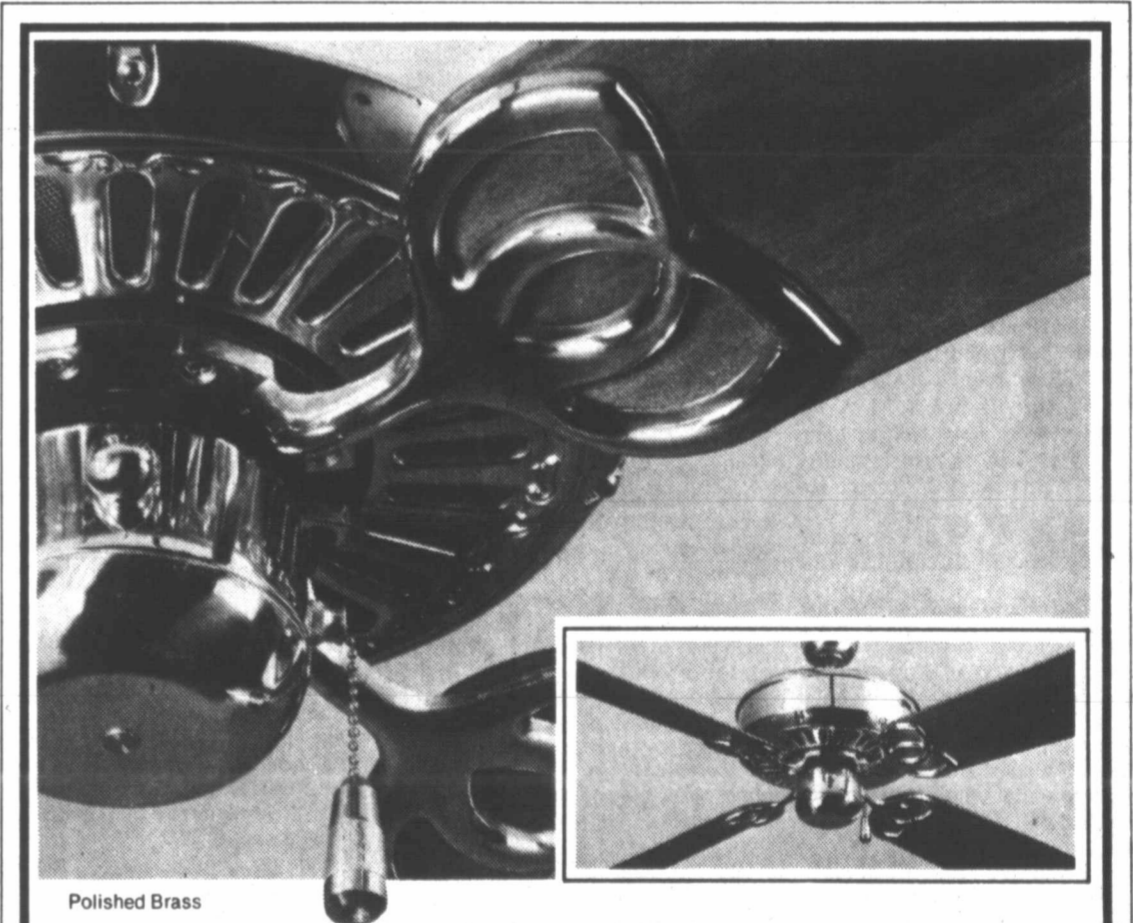

Chagra has contended his only knowledge of Wood's slaying in San Antonio has been gained as a defense attorney for his brother, convicted drug dealer Jimmy Chagra, and convicted hit man Charles V. Harrelson, who also are being investigated.

Doubt pales Hinckley's Nazi ties

Man in Nazi uniform not Hinckley

Was John W. Hinckley Jr. a member of the Nazi Party of America? That question about the man charged with the assassination attempt against President Reagan on Monday was the subject of growing doubt by Friday.

The evidence that Hinckley was connected with the neo-Nazi group consists of statements from two Nazi leaders — former American Nazi Party leader Harold Covington, and Michael C. Allen, president-elect of the Chicago-based Nazi Party of America. Both insist Hinckley was a member.

But law enforcement authorities say they have found no evidence thus far to corroborate the claim of the Nazi leaders. And both Allen and Covington say the party keeps no records that could prove his membership.

Meanwhile, The Daily Oklahoman, a morning newspaper in Oklahoma City, reported Friday that statements by Covington and Allen linking Hinckley as a former member of their organization are being viewed by federal authorities as vague and insignificant.

Absence of documentary proof and inconsistencies in statements from Allen and Covington have led some federal authorities to believe the Hinckley-Nazi connection may have been fabricated for publicity purposes, according to the story by Oklahoman investigative reporter Jack Taylor.

The Associated Press on Friday killed a photograph made available by freelance photographer John Wells and transmitted Wednesday that showed a man dressed in a Nazi uniform and said by Wells to be Hinckley at a meeting of the Nazi party in St. Louis on March 12, 1978.

On Friday, the news agency located the man shown in the photo. He said he had been a member of the Nazi party but quit shortly after attending the rally in St. Louis where the photo was taken. The man said he had severed all Nazi connections and asked that his name not be published now.

Covington said in an interview that Hinckley had written him 10 or 12 letters, but that Covington no longer had the letters.

"The man was a member and I did correspond with him for a while. That happens to be the truth," said Covington.

Allen said Friday that Hinckley was a party member.

Allen said he learned the day Reagan was shot that Hinckley had been expelled from the party in November 1979. He said Covington called him to tell him that the man who is charged with shooting Reagan was Hinckley, a former member.

Allen said he recalled Hinckley from a 10-minute meeting in St. Louis and had assumed that he became a member.

"I looked him in the eye. I looked at John W. Hinckley Jr. and he appears to be the same man."

When I talked to the man, I talked to him for about 10 minutes like you would any man when you're a host," Allen said. "He said he was up from Texas and on his way to Chicago and would meet with Frank Collin and become a member."

Prior to the demonstration (in St. Louis) we were on, he seemed like a likeable enough guy. After the demonstration he was flustered, shook up. It was a very heavy demonstration."

Allen said there are no written records of Hinckley's involvement with the party. Written records are destroyed when a person either leaves the party or is expelled from the party.

"We do not keep documents of that nature, specifically for this reason," Covington said. "If there is a raid on our place there will be a minimum amount of information that they could get. We do not have any records whatsoever and I didn't keep any of our correspondence."

Covington also said he was "just paranoid enough" to believe Hinckley was working for the government when he was arrested following the wounding of Reagan in Washington Monday.

"It just doesn't add up," he said. "He isn't stupid. Why would he use a junk gun like a .22-caliber pistol when going after big game like the president? Maybe he didn't mean to kill anyone. Maybe he was just trying to discredit the party."

Philip Cruz, head of the Illinois Division of Criminal Investigations, said Friday he had unearthed no evidence beside Michael Allen's statements to prove Hinckley was a member of the party.

But Cruz said he has interviewed former Chicago Nazi leader Frank Collin, who is in the state penitentiary and, according to Allen, accepted Hinckley for membership in the party.

Cruz said the statements made by Allen and Collin "were not dissimilar." They agreed "for the most part."

Cruz said the results of his investigation are being given to the FBI and he declined to provide any further information.

Allen said earlier in the week that Hinckley was denied renewed membership in 1979 because of what Allen called his "violent nature."

Allen has been interviewed by the FBI, the Illinois State Police and is scheduled to be interviewed Monday by the Secret Service.

The FBI would only confirm Friday that it is still investigating Hinckley's political associations.

"We have not acknowledged or passed out information about anything with regard to whether the man was a member of any type of group," said FBI Agent John Morrison in Washington.

Covington said on Thursday that Hinckley had considered moving to North Carolina in 1979 because Lubbock, Texas, had no Nazi chapter.

At Texas Tech University, officials confirmed Hinckley was a full-time student in March 1978, when the St. Louis rally took place. The prior semester he made dean's list. He took a German history course at Texas Tech, but not until the summer after the St. Louis rally.

Sgt. Tim Murphy of St. Louis police intelligence said Friday in a telephone interview that he'd "never heard of Hinckley," and that his department had no knowledge of his ever participating in a Nazi rally.

Houston police sources who keep track of extremist political groups in Texas said they had no knowledge that Hinckley was a member of the Nazi party.

In New York, Alan G. Schwartz of the Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith, which keeps records of persons in extremist groups, especially anti-Semitic ones, said Friday the group had no evidence that Hinckley was a neo-Nazi.

On Tuesday, Irwin Suall, another official of the league, had told the AP his records were "silent" on Hinckley.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press has learned that information it received and distributed identifying a man wearing a Nazi uniform in a 1978 photo as John W. Hinckley Jr. was incorrect.

The picture, distributed on Wednesday, was obtained from a freelance photographer, John Wells, who provided the identification of Hinckley. Hinckley is charged with attempting to assassinate President Reagan.

On Friday, the news agency located the man shown in the photo. He said he had been a member of the Nazi party but quit shortly after attending the rally in St. Louis where the photo was taken.

The man said he had severed all Nazi connections and asked that his name not be published now.

The picture showed a man Wells said was Hinckley in the uniform of the Nationalist Socialist Party of America attending a meeting of the party in St. Louis on March 12, 1978.

William Sells, spokesman for the Hinckley family in Evergreen, Colo., said Thursday Hinckley's parents had seen the photograph and said they did not believe the man in the photo was their son.

contacted the man in the photos who confirmed the pictures were of him and asked that his identity not be revealed. A spokesman for the Hinckley family, Colorado said the family not believe the man in photos was their son. (AP Laserphot)

BEARERS CARRY CASKET of Eddie Duncan Jr., latest victim to be investigated by the Atlanta child special task force, to the grave site Saturday. His father, Eddie Duncan Sr., and his mother, Betty Duncan,

Atlanta buries two more victims, as search for killer continues

ATLANTA (AP) — A city that has buried a score of young blacks mourned two more victims Saturday as 125 searchers fanned out across rugged terrain seeking clues to the string of killings.

"How long will these attacks go on?" said Mayor Maynard Jackson at funeral services for Eddie "Bubba" Duncan, a 21-year-old retarded black man whose body was fished from the muddy Chattahoochee River last week.

"How long will the families of Atlanta be able to take it? How long will I, as mayor, be able to take it? How long will the police, working 24 hours a day, seven days a week, be able to take it? The answer is: as long as we have to... We have no choice but to endure, to be tougher than those who would attack us," he said.

Duncan is the only adult on the list of a special police task force investigating the slayings of 22 blacks. The task force also is investigating the disappearance of two black youngsters.

Funeral services were scheduled later Saturday for 13-year-old Timothy Hill, whose body was pulled from the same river last Monday.

A light-colored coffin covered with red, white and pink flowers held Duncan's body as his sobbing mother Betty was helped into Thornton Mortuary. Duncan was buried on the hillside of a southwest Atlanta cemetery.

"Eddie's family today is citywide," said the Rev. Terry Moncrief, director of the Clark Howell-Techwood Baptist Center, in the housing project where Duncan lived.

Meanwhile, some 125 searchers spread out across an 81-square-mile area that encompassed stretches of the river where the two bodies were found. The area south of Atlanta included developed roads as well as dense, wooded areas laced with small creeks flowing into the Chattahoochee.

Searchers had lists of the clothes Duncan and Hill were wearing when they were last seen in March, as well as the clothes that one of the missing youths, 16-year-old Joseph Bell, was wearing when he was last seen March 2.

Hill and Duncan, like at least two other victims, were clad only in undershorts when their bodies were found.

Medical examiners said Hill, like most of the other victims, was asphyxiated before his body was dumped into the river. No cause of death has been established for Duncan, but authorities classified his death as a homicide because of similarities with some of the child slayings.

Passengers weep after jet plunges 2,000 feet

CHICAGO (AP) — Some injured and frightened passengers wept after a powerful downdraft sent their DC-10 jetliner hurtling a reported 2,000 feet toward Earth, but one passenger said there was "no real panic."

Just before the United Airlines jetliner dropped, the pilot warned of possible turbulence, asking passengers to fasten seat belts. But some people were caught in the aisles and bathrooms — including a man and his 13-month-old daughter.

Twenty-one of the 154 people aboard the United Airlines flight were injured, and seven remained hospitalized Saturday. The plane made an unscheduled landing in Chicago after hitting the turbulence Friday.

The big jetliner, bound for Newark, N.J., from Los Angeles, flew into a powerful downdraft over central Illinois, according to a United Airlines spokesman, hurling passengers about the cabin.

"There was duck and green goddess salad all over the place," said 35-year-old Ted Juraski of Jersey City, N.J. "It was a mess. People were hurt and crying, but there was no real panic."

Federal Aviation Administration officials said the plane plunged about 2,000 feet before stabilizing.

But Joseph Hopkins, the United spokesman, said the plunge could not have been so far. He said United could not estimate how far the jet plummeted.

An inspection Saturday revealed no structural damage to the DC-10, Hopkins said, adding the jetliner would be returned to service after minor repairs.

He said National Transportation Safety Board officials had indicated they might investigate. NTSB officials could not be reached Saturday.

FOSTER WHALEY

A 10 hour battle on the floor of the House ended in the final passage of House Bill 1228 on Thursday, March 26.

To give you some idea of all the confusion caused by the National Federal Reserve Policy of runaway interest rates, no two lending institutions have the same ceiling on the amount of interest they can charge.

Corporate borrowers of over $5,000 can pay up to 18 percent. Federal Credit Unions can get up to 21 percent. A bank consumer loan has a 14.5 percent ceiling.

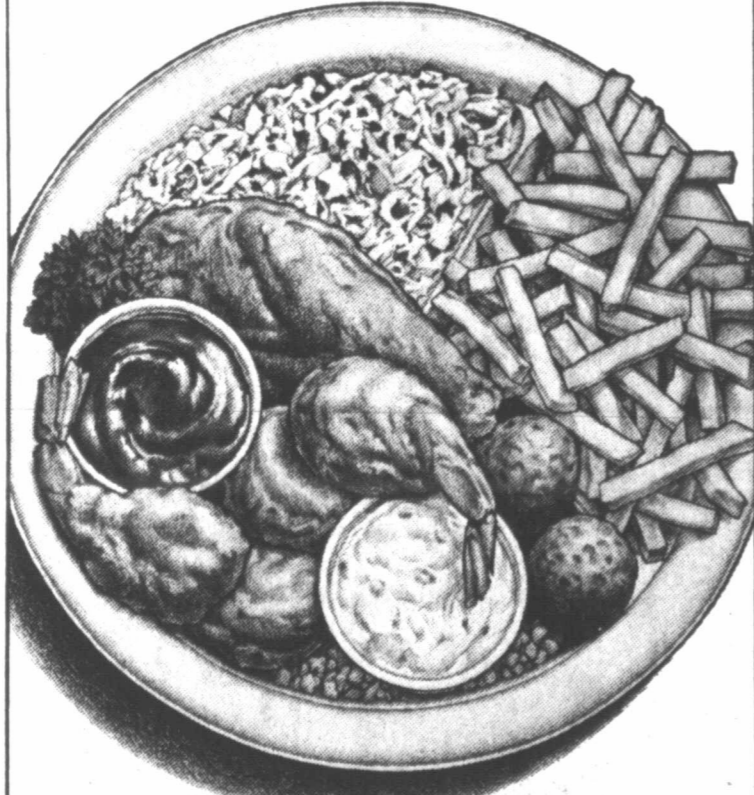

Because the present declining rate of Treasury bills, it is predicted the rate ceiling will drop to 18 percent before summer.

House Bill 197 mandating compulsory liability insurance for certain vehicles was passed the House last week.

We have had lots of calls about the governor's master plan. This is a merit plan. I have been advised the plan has little chance of passage.

The past week has been the busiest of this session. One or two days started at 6:30 a.m. and ended shortly after midnight. We anticipate an increasing number of similar days as we progress to this session which will end June 1.

Sheriff suggests residents arm themselves

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Pick up the telephone and call for help. Tell the sheriff's dispatcher it's a "dire emergency." Then wait 20 minutes. If you're lucky, a deputy will show up.

And if it's better protection you want in isolated Pima County, the advice from the sheriff is to buy a gun and do the job yourself.

Sheriff Clarence Dupnik has advised some residents to arm themselves because his department lacks the manpower to protect them in the sparsely populated desert range southwest of Tucson.

"Not only are things not good, they are going to get worse," he told about 100 Arva Valley residents at a meeting Thursday night. "For those who are so inclined, it's time to start protecting yourselves."

The sheriff said he was not suggesting people take the law into their own hands or form vigilante committees. But he said they should keep guns in their homes and learn how to use them for protection.

The residents complained they had to make repeated emergency calls to get a response.

Lt. David Fisher, officer in command of the 500-square-mile suburban area, said two deputies normally are assigned to the area during the day, and one deputy works the midnight shift.

Although the vast area of mostly isolated ranch houses is not a prime target for serious crime, Dupnik said that burglaries in the county were up 47 percent in 1980 over the previous year.

Yet because of budget problems, his department has gone from having 354 officers in 1974 to a current staff of 284 officers to cover an area larger than the state of Connecticut, he said.

There is no dispute from those who make up the budget that more deputies are needed. But the county Board of Supervisors points out the stack of budget requests now under consideration would put Pima County roughly $18 million in the hole. It's illegal in Arizona for a county to operate in the red.

Last June, voters passed a tax-break initiative similar to neighboring California's Proposition 13. The measure, Proposition 200, included a clause stipulating that budgets cannot stretch beyond 7 percent of the previous year's budget — a limit that has been unable to catch up with inflation.

Dupnik says his staff is even more thinly stretched than usual. Since early March, some men have been assigned to the Pima County Jail as a result of a federal order to improve conditions there.

Dupnik said volunteers could help offset the manpower shortage and offered to work with interested people. He said a group of volunteers who don't carry firearms already has been trained in one area.

Third skeleton found on jailed man's land

WEEKI WACHEE, Fla. (AP) — Investigators have found the partial skeleton of a third person on the property of jailed sex offender William Mansfield, but they do not yet know whether it was that of a man or woman.

Lt. John Whitman of the Hernando County Sheriff's office said a medical examiner identified the bones as human late Friday. The skeletal remains had been unearthed earlier in the day.

Whitman speculated that the bones were those of a missing middle-aged woman, but would give no further details. The skull and leg bones were found under a foot of sandy soil beneath a trash pile, Whitman said.

Only one of the two skeletons unearthed earlier has been identified. Police said the skeleton was that of Elaine Ziegler, a 15-year-old vacationer from Warren, Ohio, who was missing for five years.

Scientists said the other skeleton apparently is that of a woman about 24 years old.

Four is a crowd for Suzanne Somers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Suzanne Somers has been dropped as the sexy blonde in ABC-TV's "Three's Company," but viewers who blinked may not have known she still was in the cast — her appearances were down to one minute a week because of a salary dispute.

NRW Productions declined to exercise its option on Miss Somers' services for a sixth season in September, NRW spokesman Mickey Ross said Friday.

A spokesman for the actress said she will begin work on a CBS series expected to go on the air next season.

Miss Somers, who played Chrissy Snow, was replaced in the hit ABC series by Jenilee Harrison, who plays her "country cousin," Cindy. The show's other stars, John Ritter and Joyce DeWitt, are expected to continue in their roles.

"There were too many problems involved," said Bernie West, a partner in NRW Productions. "There was too much unhappiness. She's been passing around T-shirts saying 'Free Suzanne.' Well, she's free now."

Miss Somers was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Hughes dead, but his money is not forgotten

DUSTON (AP) — An elderly man pauses beside the secluded grave to read aloud a personal tribute to the man whose tremendous wealth, in a manner and globe-trotting ways intrigued and perplexed a generation.

The lonely vigil is a stark contrast to the hordes of onlookers who once thronged the century-old Glenwood cemetery searching for the simple marker locating the final resting place of the eccentric reclusive billionaire's protector of the fabled billionaire's assured solitude. And time has passed to dust the mounds of flowers and wreaths, friends, distant relatives and the heirs heaped on the grave.

The eccentric reclusive achieved in life the privacy he so desperately sought, but lingering questions about the disposition of his vast wealth remain unsettled.

The 70-year-old Hughes died of a heart failure aboard his private jet plane on April 5, 1976 — a year after he had shunned the last 21 years of his life.

The emaciated body of Hughes, the once-dashing movie maker, daring adventurer and unchallenged captain of a national and industrial empire he had built from a Houston oil tool company, was buried beside his parents two days later in a brief, dignified ceremony without the pomp and fanfare associated with the life.

For about a year after he died, eight to 10 people would come by looking for his grave (daily). One evening, a bunch of them even climbed the fence after we'd closed," said a cemetery caretaker.

"Flowers used to be sent to the grave regularly from all around the world. Now about the only one who seems to remember him is a little lady who comes about once a week and sits on the grave and reads out loud to him."

While time has diminished curiosity about the veiled latter years of his life, the scramble for Hughes' wealth has mounted steadily as a worldwide search failed to produce a legitimate will.

Houston Probate Judge Pat Gregory predicts about 500 people will attempt later this year to prove they were related to Hughes and entitled to a share of his fortune.

Millions more are at stake in a long-awaited courtroom battle between California and Texas, a battle that could end with the U.S. Supreme Court eventually having to decide Hughes' legal residence and which state can levy inheritance taxes.

Colleagues have said Hughes, twice divorced and childless, had intended to leave his wealth to the Miami-based Hughes Medical Institute.

A search of storage rooms and safety vaults failed to find a will, however. Also fruitless were advertisements placed in 40 newspapers across the country by the Summa Corp., the Las Vegas-based umbrella company formed in 1972 to oversee Hughes' holdings.

About 40 purported wills turned up but only two — the "Morman will" and the so-called "lost will" — were seriously offered for probate, Gregory said.

The Morman will, a handwritten document delivered to the Morman Church in Salt Lake City, surfaced mysteriously after Hughes' death. The document, later declared a forgery by juries in Las Vegas and Houston, would have left the fortune to the Morman Church, whose practitioners were Hughes' most trusted aides, and to a Nevada service station attendant, Melvin Dumar, who reportedly once gave Hughes a quarter.

The "lost will" — so dubbed because a document was never found — reportedly left the estate to the medical institute. But Gregory denied the claim on Feb. 27, ruling Hughes left no valid will and that the estate be divided among legal heirs.

After Hughes' death, an agreement was signed by 22 relatives outlining a division of the estate. However, Gregory said, as many as 500 people have claimed they were related to Hughes.

Gregory said a trial probably will be scheduled "sometime in the next nine months" to determine legal heirs.

The size of the inheritance will hinge on the determination of the legal residence and inheritance taxes.

In February 1978 a Houston probate jury ruled Hughes was a Texan, basing its decision on testimony of 100 witnesses and 2,500 documents.

But the State of California made similar claims and is vying for the hefty inheritance tax.

Attorneys representing California earlier asked the Supreme Court to block the Houston probate trial. The court refused and advised the administrators of the estate to file a motion to resolve the issues.

The motion was filed in an Austin federal court, but U.S. District Judge Jack Roberts said he had no jurisdiction and dumped the question on California and Texas state courts.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans disagreed, reversed the order and kicked the case back to Austin federal court.

But California appealed on March 12 and asked that the Supreme Court either hear the case or designate Colorado or another state to hear the matter.

Austin attorney Rick Harrison, handling the case for the Texas attorney general, said a ruling from the high court is not expected before June.

Although it is doubtful the case can go to trial before 1982, both states are gearing up to prove their claims.

A favorable verdict would net California up to $300 million, based on its $1.1 billion appraisal of the Hughes estate. Texas would stand to gain from $50 million to $80 million under its inheritance tax, Harrison said.

Harrison says Hughes was born in Houston, filed federal income tax forms giving his legal residence as Texas, and once testified in a California court that although he lived in Beverly Hills, his residence was Texas.

"You can't go two or three years during Hughes' adult life when, at some point, he did not declare in writing, testimony or on tax returns his legal residence was Texas," Harrison said.

But the apparent heirs have said Hughes' domicile was Nevada, Harrison said, "not because that state doesn't have an inheritance tax but for other reasons."

"If Nevada were ruled the legal domicile of Hughes, then 77 percent of the estate would go to the federal government. That would equal what would be taken in Texas. In Texas, the federal government would get 61 percent and the state would take 16 percent."

"Hughes was born in Texas,"

Harrison said. "And to change your domicile you first have to show mental intent — that is, you have to show you intend to live in a new place — and then you have to physically do it. And there's no proof Hughes ever revoked the origin of his domicile."

But the trials could only serve to tangle the cases in a legal labyrinth of appeals and chip away at the estate, which has more than 60 claims pending, some individual claims for as much as $200 million.

Gregory conceded the final resolution still may be years away.

"I plan to retire in 1999. I'm certainly hoping the whole thing is settled by then," the probate judge said.

Automatic extension on windfall profit tax filing

The Internal Revenue Service reports that individuals claiming an overpayment on windfall profit tax on their 1980 income tax returns will have an automatic extension until June 15, 1981, to file their individual income tax return.

No penalty for late payment will be asserted if the balance due is paid by June 15, 1981; however, interest, at the rate of 12 percent a year, will be charged on any unpaid tax after April 15, 1981.

Taxpayers who wish to avoid payment of interest on the total tax due should file Form 4868, Application for Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return by April 15, 1981, and pay the tax estimated to be due on the return when filed.

Although the late payment penalty is generally asserted even if an extension of time to file is granted when the total tax is not paid by April 15, the IRS, in view of its previous conflicting and ambiguous instructions, will not assert the late payment penalty in this instance, if the return is filed and any balance due is paid by June 15, 1981.

Tubing, casing shortage intensified by decontrols

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Bill Welch says President Reagan's control of crude oil prices eight months ahead of schedule is increasing pressure on an already tight supply of premium tubular goods.

Welch is president of NL Atlas Bradford, which produces 30 to 40 percent of the world's premium threaded connections essential for linking pipe used in ultra-deep wells and wells in severe environments.

Welch said that even before the Jan. 28 price decontrol the drilling industry was concerned potential shortages of tubing and casing could bring a world wide drilling boom to halt.

"The tight supply situation was already more acute for the premium segment of the tubulars market, those products specially designed to withstand the higher pressures and temperatures found in deep drilling operations," he said.

Reagan's decontrol action, he said, is providing increased incentive to drill more deeper holes, thus providing a greater demand for premium threaded tubulars.

Premium products presently account for 10 percent of the annual tubular goods market totaling 3.5 million tons but Welch expects this share to increase to 15 percent within five years.

"It takes an average of 12 tons of tubulars for every 1,000 feet of drilled hole," he said.

"This means that, as drilling activity increases, the need for tubular goods in general also increases."

But average figures for the overall industry, he said, do not reflect the demand for premium tubulars tied specifically to the deep well segment of the market.

"Looking at the number of wells 15,000 feet and deeper, the compound annual growth rate for this segment over the next five years could be in the range of 20 to 25 percent, well in excess of the industry as a whole."

At present, Welch said, operators either have to wait for premium threaded pipe or substitute a pipe with less than premium quality connections.

"Once the supply picture improves, the people now substituting will be going back to using premium connections," he said.

Conventional connections that meet American Petroleum Institute specifications rely solely on the threading compound to prevent leaks. Premium connections use multiple seals.

"That is, if one seal should fail, others are present to hold the pressure," Welch said.

He said one significant factor behind the strong demand for premium threaded connections is the increased deep drilling activity in areas such as the Overthrust Belt in the Rocky Mountains, the Tuscaloosa Trend in Louisiana, and in the Gulf of Mexico.

Another factor, Welch said, involves harsh downhole conditions encountered in Alaska's North Slope and the extremely sour gas fields of Mississippi.

Welch estimated that more than 95 percent of the premium connections being used in the deep, high pressure sour gas wells in Mississippi are manufactured by Atlas Bradford, a division of NL Industries Inc., a world wide manufacturer and supplier of petroleum services and equipment.

Oil and Gas News

Ice roads important to Alaskan oil search

DALLAS — The worldwide search for oil and natural gas has taken the petroleum industry to the remote corners of the world where one of the toughest challenges faced is working in extremely harsh environments. One such harsh environment is Alaska's southern Beaufort Sea, a relatively new petroleum province where the average temperature hovers at -5 degrees F.

While this hostile offshore environment presents many obstacles to normal drilling and production operations, it also presents a ready source for constructing supply routes for equipment and personnel to and from the drill sites — ice roads.

R. E. Potter and J. T. Walden of Sohio Petroleum Company and R. A. Haspel of Senco Consulting Ltd. will discuss the concept and design of ice roads at the Offshore Technology Conference in Houston, May 4-7.

"The ice on which the roads are to be built is floating," Walden said. "Auger pumps are used to pump water from underneath the ice to the surface, where it freezes, forming a new layer of ice on top."

Walden said four feet of new ice must be added to the top of approximately two feet of existing ice to make enough depth for a road.

Once the ice is thick enough, bulldozers smooth the ice, and graders periodically clear the road.

"The construction of ice roads is a very slow process," Potter said.

"It takes about a month to build up enough ice to provide support for heavy equipment," Walden said.

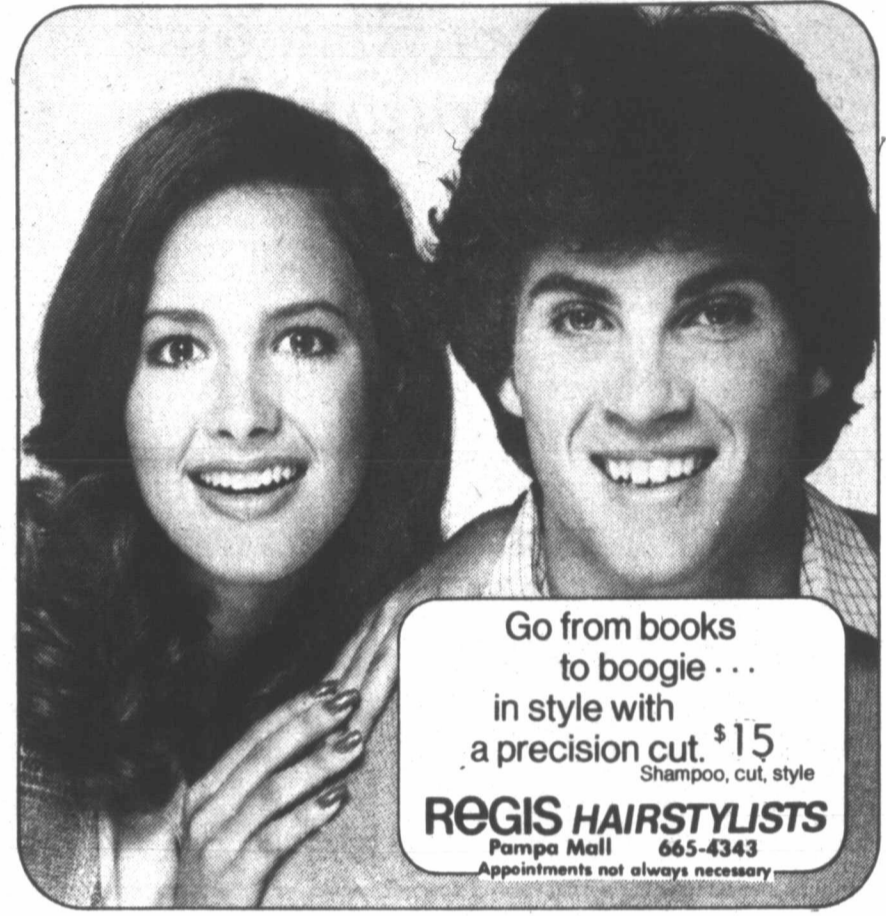

One mile of ice roads costs approximately $500,000. Without them, however, everything into and out of this hostile environment would have to go by aircraft since ice obstructs ship transportation practically year round.

Marketers plead guilty

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Two Texas oil marketers pleaded guilty Thursday in federal court here to charges that they made false statements in connection with an oil fraud scheme involving petroleum firms, investigators said.

Terry O'Connor, Oklahoma City FBI head, said the scheme involved miscertification of 77,500 barrels of domestic, old crude oil as new and stripper crude oil, to take advantage of higher prices.

The oilmen were identified as John T. Trolund and David W. Ratliff.

SEWING PROGRAMS are among the educational services Mrs. Houston and members of her office staff provide for area residents.

RESULT DEMONSTRATIONS are given by Mrs. Houston on a one - on - one basis as an aid for homemakers. Here, she helps organize a closet for Kirk McDonald, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee McDonald of 2413 Comanche.

Elaine Houston: Woman of Year

Elaine Houston, 1981 Beta Sigma Phi Woman of the Year, celebrated her seventh anniversary as Gray County Extension Agent in home economics on April 1.

She was chosen by the seven local chapters of Beta Sigma Phi through secret ballot, and will be honored with a tea at 2 p. m. today in First Christian Church's Fellowship Hall. The 37th recipient of the title, she will be an honorary Beta Sigma Phi member during her term as Woman of the Year, and will preside over the organization's Founder's Day activities.

"You're trying to help people learn more about helping themselves," she said of her duties as County Extension Agent.

Those duties are numerous. Mrs. Houston conducts and participates in educational programs, extension homemaker club meetings, 4 - H meetings, seminars, newsletters, media work, individual contacts and result demonstrations, which are at a one - on - one basis to help a homemaker improve on a specific activity.

She provides four programs per year for the 180 members of the 12 extension homemaker clubs in Gray County, and also works with a study club in McLean and community improvement programs in Alanreed and Lefors.

Two committees associated with the County Extension Office, the aging and family living committees, decide on programs to be conducted each year. The committee on aging is responsible for starting the Pampa Meals on Wheels program and the community transportation service for senior citizens.

"I'm real proud of those two," Mrs. Houston said of the committees.

Programs conducted by Mrs. Houston are on textiles and clothing, family housing, family life, health and nutrition, family resource management and community environment and leadership. She also trains new extension agents.

Mrs. Houston has a weekly radio program on KGRO radio station, weekly newspaper columns and a monthly newsletter.

She said she also gets telephone requests for information.

"They ask things like, 'The freezer's stopped working. What do I do with all this meat?' Somebody will call and say, 'I read about your bulletin on freezing food,' or something like that, and we'll send it to them," she said.

In addition to her numerous activities as an extension agent, the Plainview native is a member of Altrusa Club and the National Association of Extension Home Economists.

She is past director of District J. Texas Home Economics Association, and has served on that organization's state board and nominating committee. She is a voting delegate to the American Home Economics Association's national meeting, and has served on state committees for the Texas Association of Extension Home Economists.

In 1978 Mrs. Houston received the Texas Superior Service Award for outstanding programming in the areas of nutrition and health. She has been named to Who's Who Among American Women, Outstanding Young Women of America and Personalities of the South.

She is president of the Carter Sunday school class at First Methodist Church, member of the education committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, and board member and secretary of the Gray County Heart Association.

Mrs. Houston received her bachelor of science degree in 1966 from Texas Tech University, and her masters degree in agriculture education from Texas A & M University in 1979. She was an extension agent in Llano County for two and one - half years before coming to Gray County in 1974.

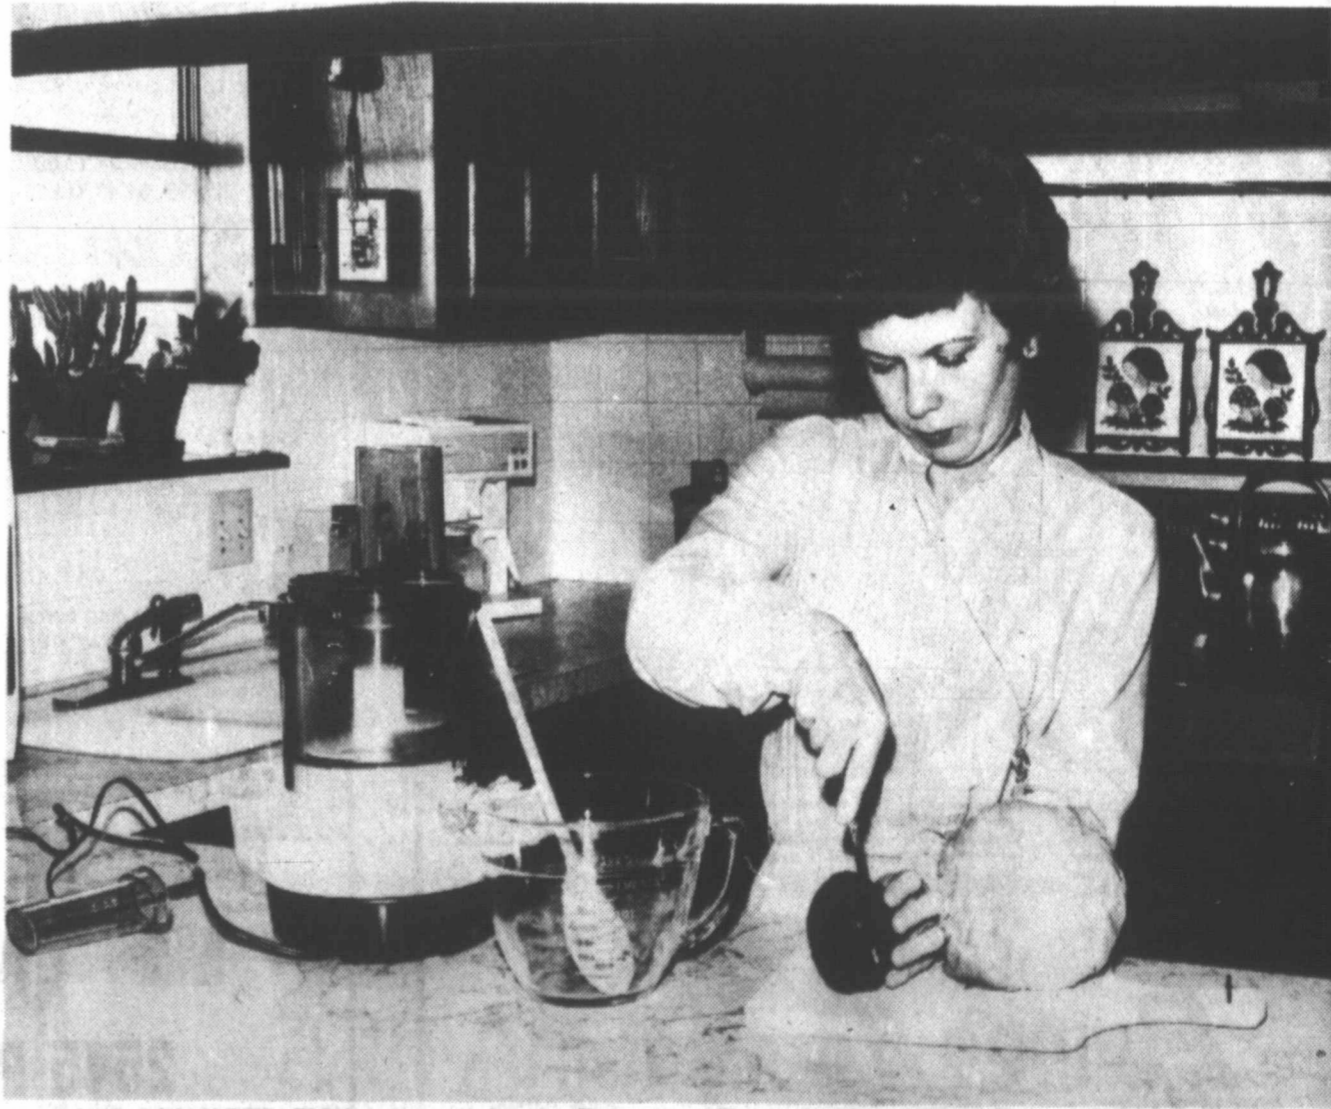

She resides with her husband, Larry, and their two daughters, Michele, 12, and Renee, 10, at 2317 Comanche.

Spring shoes fit fashion look

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) - Shoes are fun this spring. Every fashion look has the right shoe: flats for knee-length pants, pumps for day dresses, scalloped metallic sandals for romantic evening dresses.

For the nautical trend, in sailor dresses or pants outfits, the Footwear Council likes a low-heeled, white leather slip-on with the vamp in navy canvas, or an ankle-strapped striped flat or a slingback two-color spectator.

The new blouson knicker takes a pin striped flat with perky grosgrain bow. More classic Bermudas or culottes need equally classic Indian mocs, a shirred canvas flat, a rope-soled oxford or a low wedge pump.

Heels come both low and high - low heels with anything at or above knee length, high heels with midcalf skirts. Low-heeled styles include flats, wedges and curvy underslung heels. High heels can be stacked and sturdy, or thin and sexy.

Trims are used sparingly; it's material and color that count. Woven and smooth leather contrast on the same shoe. Canvas, chintz, linen, ribbon and raffia are just a few of the new shoe materials. Color explodes as never before on shoes. Contrast piping, such as red on white, stripes, tone-on-tone, pastels and folkloric mixes create new shoe drama.

The idea, of course, is to choose the shoe as a striking accent to the costume, whether it be a delicately scalloped pale gray pump for a soft gray dress, or a red, white and blue wedge for a white sailor dress. You can mix or match, as long as costume and shoe don't clash and you keep the heel height right for the skirt or pants length. Best news is that shoe fashions come in a wide range of prices without any sacrifice of style or colors.

Save cigar boxes

NEW YORK (AP) - Empty cigar boxes, nuts and bolts from your cigar boxes and dust off those old makeshift storage boxes. And, while you're at it, save your cigar bands.

Both cigar by-products are becoming collectibles - and they may be worth something one day.

They may even be worth something today although the blue is difficult to establish, says the Cigar Association of America.

Part of the reason for this difficulty is that cigar-item collectors are what auctioneers call "esoteric." In the World Almanac's "Book of Buys," cigar-band collector Myron Reedman is quoted as calling cigar-band enthusiasts, "secret collectors. They don't let other people know about what they collect."

Several collections are known to exceed 100,000 cigar bands. Cigar boxes, particularly those of the late 19th and early 20th centuries, are also found in collections around the country.

Auction galleries have sold cigar band and box collections, but - at the request of participants - they won't disclose the prices.

Dear Abby

Mom upset over 'the pill'

By Abigail Van Buren

1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I was heartsick, but not terribly surprised, to find birth control pills in my daughter's bathroom. Rhonda (not her real name) just turned 18 and is a senior in high school. She's been going steady with a young man since last summer. Rhonda is an excellent student and plans to start college away from home next fall.

In today's world, what are a girl's chances of being harmed permanently by premarital sex? Rhonda is my only daughter. I love her dearly and never dreamed I would have this problem.

A MOTHER'S PROBLEM

DEAR MOTHER: A girl's chances of being harmed permanently by premarital sex would be infinitely greater were she not taking precautions to prevent an unwanted pregnancy. Many mothers whose daughters have had an abortion or a child out of wedlock would have welcomed your "problem." I am not condoning premarital sex, but when it's a fact, it should be dealt with intelligently and responsibly.

DEAR ABBY: Apparently neither you nor PERPLEXED IN N.Y. has ever been to a dance where there was a considerable number of unescorted women. I have, and believe me, the burden on the escort is nothing compared to that of the woman who must sit smiling while those parasites "borrow" her husband.

My husband and I both love to dance, and in the 40 years of our marriage we have attended many dances and exchanged dances with other couples during the evening. Now, however, there are increasing numbers of widows and divorcees to be waltzed around the floor, and if my husband danced with each one of them once, it would leave me without a partner all evening, so now we attend dances for "couples only."

While I sympathize with women who don't have husbands, it doesn't follow that I should give up mine.

ADAMANT IN N.Y.

DEAR ADAMANT: Read on for another view:

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow and I love to dance. When I go to a dance alone or with another woman and there aren't enough men to go around, it is torture for me to just sit and tap my toes while others are dancing, so I ask a woman to dance. It's not quite as much fun as dancing with a man, but it beats sitting.

Oh, I get a few funny looks, but that doesn't bother me. Do you see anything wrong with it?

LOVES TO DANCE IN HIBBING, MINN.

DEAR LOVES: No. But if two men started to dance together in public, they'd promptly be asked to dance out of the place. Unfair? Yes. But who ever said life was fair?

DEAR ABBY: I agree, the word "hopefully" is woefully overused — and incorrectly at that. It would be much simpler if "I hope" were used instead, because that is what is meant.

Another word that is overused is "very." I once knew an editor who told his reporters that he would fire any reporter who used the word "very" — they should substitute the word "damned" instead! But since it was a family newspaper, he blue-penciled all the "damned" before the stories went to the composing room.

NOVELIST

DEAR NOVELIST: That's damned interesting — I hope!

Peeking at Pampa

A lovely wedding shower was given for Janyth Lackey by Charles Bowers recently, hosted by the Win - Some class of the First United Methodist Church. Jessie Swberry was general airman with most class members assisting. Hesta Stand was in charge of the table, where decorations were in orchid and cream, the bride's colors. Velma Tomson's silk butterflies in the appropriate colors enhanced the decor.
Among the guests at the shower were Janyth's parents, Joyce and Joel Lee Lackey of Gruver. Also present were Fay and Coy Palmer of Spearman, former of Pampa Coy's musical programs used to be much enjoyed here, the year was associated with Warren Hasse at KPND.
Malcolm Hinkle was slightly busy for a few days last week, being host to his grandson. When a friend asked how the boy liked sitting in Pampa, Malcolm said, "He likes it fine. He's liking the roost!"

Mending Mature Marriage

Remembering slights, slanders harmful

By LOUISE PIERCE

Do we hang onto slights and slanders we should have let go long since? I do — and I'm trying desperately to get over this debilitating annoyance.
I can close my eyes and recall dozens of galling unkindnesses that have been done to me through the years.
I remember when, during my senior year in college, I hung one pair of stockings in the window one time — and the housemother, spotting the breaking of a rule, took away my $5 "breakage fee" in entirety. It was supposed to cover damaged goods for a year — and in those days $5 was a fortune.
I remember all the times when trusted people broke their promises to Otis or to me.
I remember, in more recent times, when a meeting was planned that I was expected to attend. But I was ill when the date was announced and so was absent.
I learned later that one lady said, "Oh, well. Louise is real busy, you know." Then, so I was told, another "friend" rasped, "She's not THAT busy!" Nobody seemed to recall that I could not have known about the get-together.

The results of these hoarded hurts can be disastrous. Sometimes when Otis comes home, all peppy and smiling, I can't echo his pleasure in living because I'm so upset about what happened a week or a year or 40 years ago.
I know that worrying over what is past can be damaging to personal tranquility and to married happiness. If your spouse is not the permanently-happy person that mine is, guard against upsetting him along with yourself in this way.
"DEAR LOUISE: My wife and I quarrel a lot about our differences on things. She says I brood too much when I'm upset. But when people cheat me or lie to me or break their promises, I brood over."

back six months ago and grabbed a sale for himself that we had agreed to share. He made a lot of money and thinks he made a fool of me.
"Don't I have the right to feel righteous indignation — and tell this lying cheater what I think of him? D.N."
"DEAR D.N.: In my opinion, you have that right. But since the deal is done and there is probably nothing you can do to reverse it, it will hurt you, but not him, if you continue to brood over it. Even bawling him out will affect only you.
As I said above, I'm a brooder over wrongs done to me. I've got to change that attitude. So have you, if you want to keep your sense and sanity, plus the respect and affection of your wife.
My husband, Otis, NEVER upsets himself by holding grievances in his mind and heart. He tries to keep alert and avoid being cheated. But sometimes he finds himself put upon.
I used to tell him he should go to the offender and tell him he knew what happened, let him know that Otis was not fooled.
But my wise husband said then, and says now, that what is done is done. And, he contends, he would only make himself miserable if he stirred up a big scene, informed everybody what the offender did and tried to ruin the man's reputation. It would be justified, granted. But that's not my mate's tactic.
He insists that a wronged person could ruin his own outlook on life by yelling at the offender in private or in public. He just makes sure that that man never gets another chance to pull a fast one on him.
I know he's right. I intend to work on being like him, the way I've worked for 44 years. I hope you'll do the same.

"DEAR LOUISE: My husband won't say he's sorry for anything, not ever. We've been married 46 years and he's hurt my feelings more times than I could count. Do I have to go on taking it? C.N."
"DEAR C.N.: It seems to be that, after 46 years, you could not have been hurt irreparably. You've lived through your annoyance over his slight and have kept your marriage intact. That's most commendable.
Some people can't say they're sorry. Sometimes they atone for it by doing favors of some kind. If your husband does not even do that, then you must accept the fact that his nature won't let him act sorry about anything he does.
You can make yourself accept it by considering the alternative to refusing to do so. If you walked out, you'd be alone. And isn't your husband of 46 years, non-apologetic as he is, better than trying to start a new life alone in your older age?

festivities included a steak dinner topped off with a beautiful cake. It's always good to have May Alice back in Pampa, where she and Mr. Sone lived so long. He was superintendent of schools here for many years.
Speaking of birthdays and schools, the teachers at Travis Elementary School honored their principal Jack Bailey with a surprise birthday party this week — a delightful way to show their appreciation for his fine work. Didn't hear how many candles the cake had.
Another family party was the one given by Fred and Gay Ammeter, honoring her brother, Vincent Vestring, and his wife of Burns, Kan., where Fred and Gay both grew up. The Vestrings were delightful visitors and good dancers, too.
Always good to see Charlie Cook back home. But he seldom stays here long.

School. The showing was sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association.
Glad that these young people did not lose all their art and photography work in the recent fire at PHS.
Gave space to a few men golfers last week. Guess I'd better mention Pampa's women golfers, too. There are a lot of them, including Dot Allen, association president; LaWanda Baker, vice president; and Pam Deeds, secretary. The group in charge of planning activities for the coming season, along with the officers, are Linda Stevens, Marge Gipson, Mary Nelson, Fay Harney, Nita Hill, Linnie Schneider and Mackey Scott.
Be happy! PAM

GARDEN AND HOME SHOW

All persons interested in learning more about a wide variety of horticulture subjects should plan to attend the Pampa Garden and Home Show, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday, April 9 in the Gray County Stock Show Barn (Clyde Carruth Pavilion).

Business firms will have exhibits relating to gardening, outdoor living or cooking, horticulture, home energy conservation, home remodeling and related areas.

Free professional programs and advice will be furnished by three Extension Service specialists, Everett J. Anne, landscape horticulturist; Sammy Helmers, fruit and nut horticulturist; and Roland Roberts, vegetable specialist. They will present short programs and demonstrations throughout the day. These specialists will be available during their off-time for consultation on individual problems or questions.

Door prizes donated by participating business firms will be given away periodically.

Merchandise exhibited by the firms will be for sale.

THE HOW AND WHY OF TRANSPLANTING

While it's best to seed some vegetables directly in the home garden, others do best if transplanted.

In this area of Texas, tomatoes, peppers and eggplant should always be set out in the garden as transplants. The reason for this is the weather. These vegetables are somewhat fickle when it comes to ideal environmental conditions for setting fruit. Bloom and fruit set must occur before temperatures get too high. Setting out transplants after danger of all frost allows these plants to bloom during ideal conditions and to set a bountiful harvest during optimum weather.

Such so-called "cool season" crops as cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, lettuce and onions may also be transplanted. Transplanting allows them to mature under ideal conditions and also saves growing time in the garden. Using transplants can lessen the garden growing time by several months or more. However, setting out transplants of crops such as okra, squash, cucumbers and melons offers no real advantage and is usually not a recommended practice.

What about the "how of transplanting?" Handle transplants like eggs! Make every effort to avoid undue stress to young plants. Be sure plants do not suffer from lack of moisture, wind damage or excessive heat prior to and immediately after transplanting.

Most plants that are available locally will be growing in plantable containers such as peat pots or peat cubes. If possible, plan to transplant during late afternoon or at least on a cloudy day. It is a good idea to set transplants in a bucket or pan of water for several minutes prior to planting so the root system is thoroughly wet.

Determine the proper spacing for the crop and dig a hole 4 inches wide and 4 to 6 inches deep. Put about a cupful of water directly in the hole and allow it to soak in. Set the transplant in the center of the hole and fill in with soil. Make certain the peat container is completely beneath the soil level as it may act like a wick and rapidly dry out the rootball, thus killing the plant.

Depth of planting is important and often beginners make the mistake of setting plants too deep in the soil. Set most transplants only slightly deeper than they were originally growing. If tomato plants are tall and "leggy," plant them as shown in the accompanying drawing. If plant roots are set too deep below the soil level, especially in heavy soils, they will be slow to grow and the plant will have to produce roots along the stem near the surface. The original roots may, or may not, grow eventually. Either way, the advantages of transplanting are lost and harvest may be delayed greatly.

When filling the hole with soil at planting, leave a slight depression around the plant to hold additional water from spot watering or from rainfall. Also protect young plants for a week or so from high wind and excessive heat. This can be done easily by placing a shingle, board, milk carton or some similar protection on the windy or sunny side of the plant. A can placed around the transplant when it is set in the garden will also prevent damage from pesky cutworms.

The next column will give details on how to grow tomatoes.

Fine hair's fine

If you think your hair is fragile because it's fine, you should know that fine hair is really the most elastic. It can be styled in hundreds of pretty ways and takes color and perms beautifully. However, it does tend to go limp with just a little extra humidity. To counteract this, use an acid-balanced shampoo, stay away from rinses and consider getting a body perm.

MAKE-AHEAD FRIED CHICKEN
Cut up two small (each about 2 pounds) chickens (each into 10 pieces). Wash and drain but do not dry. Roll in a mixture of 1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour, 2 teaspoons salt, 2 teaspoons paprika. Beat 1 large egg with 1-3rd cup milk; stir in 2 tablespoons lemon juice — mixture will look curdly; dip chicken in this mixture. Roll again in the seasoned flour. Dip again in the egg mixture. Roll again in the seasoned flour. Let stand 20 to 30 minutes to dry coating. Sprinkle any moist spots with flour. Heat 3/4 cup shortening or oil in a large skillet; add as many chicken pieces, skin side down, as will go in without crowding. Fry over moderate heat until golden-brown on one side — about 15 minutes; turn; cook through and brown other side — 10 to 15 minutes. Drain on absorbent paper. Cook remaining chicken this way, adding more shortening if necessary. Cover and refrigerate. Reheat in a large shallow pan lined with foil in a preheated 350-degree oven until coating is crisp — 20 to 30 minutes. Serve at once. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Drug prevents heart attack recurrences

TON (AP) — A new medicine that helps protect heart victims from suffering recurring bouts of heart trouble someday may become routine therapy for most who survive a heart attack, a researcher predicts.

A major test of the medicine, called timolol, doctors found the drug reduced the death rate among heart attack victims by 39 percent over a 33-month period.

The medicine has been used in Europe for six years to treat blood pressure and angina, or chest pain. But it has not been cleared yet by the Food and Drug Administration for use in the United States. A spokesman for the federal agency says the status of the medicine is being reviewed.

Dr. Terje R. Jensen, who directed the latest study, said in an interview he thinks they represent a breakthrough in the management of heart patients.

The predicted timolol or a similar drug may someday be used routinely by as many as 80 percent of the people who survive heart attacks.

The latest study was conducted by the Norwegian Center Study Group and directed by Pedersen at Sarpsborg Hospital in Sarpsborg, Norway. It was published in the issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

A spokesman Wayne Pines said timolol was approved for use in the eyes by glaucoma patients, but it is not approved for heart patients because "animal studies showed the possibility that it could cause cancer," according to its manufacturer, Merck Sharp & Dohme.

Female mice receiving high doses of timolol had a slight increase in breast tumors.

Real estate broker works both ends

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The real estate broker told the young couple he would find them the right house. "Consider me your scout," he said. "I'll find you the best house for the least money."

The couple was reassured, and on the way home they mused about their good fortune. They had a man working just for them. With prices so high, it was nice to think they had professional help on their side.

So did the family selling the house. They carefully chose the broker because, they observed, with home prices all over the lot these days they felt a good broker might win them several thousand dollars more.

They had another reason: At today's prices, the 6 percent sales commission comes to a lot of money. "If we have to pay it," they reasoned, "we're better off paying it to the best broker."

How can both parties expect the best deal? Critics are sometimes confounded that regulators haven't made greater efforts to clarify matters. Two explanations are sometimes offered:

The first is more a human than a legal problem. Even if warned, buyers will continue to assume brokers are working solely for them, rather than, as is usual, for the seller who is paying them.

Secondly, a good broker sometimes can come close to serving the desires of both parties. The point is arguable, but the justification offered is that his compromises may save a sale from falling through.

A somewhat similar situation exists in the stock market, where many small investors view their broker as a confidant and adviser. That relationship can and does exist, of course, but it isn't always so.

To begin with, the broker's income depends on his making sales to his customers. He earns nothing for giving advice. Sometime, he is not even in a position to offer professional advice on specific stocks.

Sometimes the broker is put in an even more complex position: As a salesman, he is asked by his brokerage house to sell a certain stock, perhaps a new issue in which his firm has an underwriting position.

Insurance agents sometimes find themselves in a comparable situation, in which they are torn between the need for income and the desire to serve buyers with whom they seek a continuing relationship.

Senator Bill Sarपालius Reports

STIN — Once again, a group of people is in a beating the same old horse. That horse, appropriately enough, is mutual betting.

I have received many reports opposing legalizing gambling on horse races, but few from our district in favor of it. This is not surprising, though, because in our district there is a lot of common sense and a strong feeling that the lure of gambling is not worth the price it would bring.

I also have received reports from other parts of the state in favor of pari-mutuel gambling, but our job is to listen to the people in Dallas and Houston.

is issue is a perennial — boms every session. The ing public gets a little e creative with their ments each time, but e are some things they can't talk their way out of them is the waste of urses that gambling rates. Money lost at the k is not used for more ictive activity — like ily expenses, education, firm or ranch expenses. ither is time lost from e productive pursuits — e lost from the job, from urches, from the ols and from the fields.

ut by far the biggest lem about gambling, at t from the point of view of egislator, is the kind of ple that gambling acts. Just compare the he statistics, the number eople in financial distress, he general atmosphere city like Amarillo with a e like Las Vegas or New City.

e live in a very special e and most of us want to p it that way. We have a ng community spirit and w rate of crime. Most of e streets are clean, and st people don't fear king them.

Special hospital treats life-threatening allergies

By ALLEN K. SHORT Associated Press Writer DALLAS (AP)—Life at the Brookhaven Environmental Control Unit is considerably less hectic than the rush hour traffic that surrounds it twice daily, blanketing the hospital in an invisible cloud of hydrocarbons.

For some of its patients, a whiff of the automobile emissions just a few yards away could mean wheezing and uncontrollable gasping for breath. For others, even the slightest taste of peanut butter can produce a toxic reaction.

Brookhaven is a man-made oasis in a world of man-made chemical pollutants and poisons, an internationally known center for the treatment of severe allergies.

Since its founding in 1975, it has provided safe haven for people like Becky Dial, a 31-year-old Dallas woman who two years ago couldn't ride in a new car without her legs hemorrhaging, the capillaries within them burst by chemical poisons. The "new car smell" was toxic to Mrs. Dial.

As the freeways begin to jam each weekday morning in northwest Dallas, the 25 patients at Brookhaven toast the new day with one of eight different brands of bottled spring water. Never mind the noxious clouds that gather outside, settling on the trees and flowers and water.

Inside, all is clean steel and porcelain and ceramic tile. The sunlight pouring through the unit's windows betrays but a few particles of airborne dust. The light bounces in flashes off walls covered with aluminum wallpaper.

The green bottles of Perrier water contain no chlorine or fluoride. The aluminum wallpaper contains no grout. The ceramic tiles contain no wheat paste. Banned outright are after-shave lotions and perfumes, aerosol sprays and cleaning fluids. The patients and their hospital rooms are cleaned with baking soda.

So pervasive are these and other modern substances that there is a lengthy waiting list of allergy sufferers trying to get into Brookhaven. Most of them will remain hospitalized for a month or more. All suffered from allergies for years and chose isolation only when life on the outside became untenable, doctors at Brookhaven say.

Such was the case last month for one of the unit's most celebrated patients, former British pop singer Sheila Rossall. Ms. Rossall, 31, was stricken with "widespread allergy syndrome" about the time she recorded a chart-topping pop tune three years ago.

By the time she was admitted to Brookhaven following a trans-Atlantic flight on Feb. 24, her weight had fallen from about 120 pounds to less than 80 and she could breathe only with the aid of an oxygen mask. She was highly allergic to thousands of substances, both

Frisbee ordinance is relaxed

GALVESTON, Texas (AP)—Frisbee lovers went on a "fling" here, forcing City Council members to back down from a beach ban on the flying plastic discs.

An ordinance approved two weeks ago made it illegal to play Frisbee or ball without prior permission from a lifeguard but Thursday, council members amended the ordinance to include only games using hard objects.

"Beach lovers no longer have to have permission to have fun anymore," lamented Pete Fredriksen, a former councilman and chairman of FLING — Fun Liberation in Galveston — after the original ordinance was passed.

Lake Meredith depth shallow

SANFORD — Boaters at Lake Meredith Recreation Area should be aware that the water depth becomes very shallow just above Harbor Bay, and boating beyond that point could be unsafe, according to Superintendent John Higgins.

Lake depth just east of Sandy Point is only five feet. Wind and light conditions often make it difficult for the boater to recognize when water is becoming shallow.

With spring weather upon us, more boaters will be visiting Lake Meredith. Visitors are reminded that there is much less lake than when perhaps they last put a boat in.

natural and man-made, her doctors said.

British press reports said Ms. Rossall was "allergic to the 20th century." Her physicians at Brookhaven say that's an exaggeration, if only a slight one.

Ms. Rossall's case is among the most severe of those observed at Brookhaven in the six years the center has been in operation. The former singer has gained weight since her admission but like many of Brookhaven's patients, no dramatic changes in her condition were recorded during the first month of her stay, a hospital spokesman said.

Her doctors report her condition as stable, ending at least the life-threatening deterioration that led to her emergency, trans-Atlantic flight to Brookhaven.

The theory that highly industrialized nations may be creating thousands of people like Sheila Rossall and Becky Dial is one that has circulated among immunologists and allergists for years, said Dr. Robert Stroud, one of Brookhaven's four staff physicians. They are specialists in a new field of medicine known as clinical ecology.

Brookhaven has treated patients from four different continents, but never had an admission from an underdeveloped, pre-industrial nation, Stroud said.

If underdevelopment affords a measure of protection, it may be only temporary. One of modern man's most pervasive industrial byproducts — hexachlorobenzene — was detected on a remote Pacific atoll last year, leading scientists to conclude that industrial pollution of the atmosphere is now worldwide.

Although no definitive statistics exist, doctors at Brookhaven estimate that as many as one person in every one hundred in the United States suffers from severely debilitating allergies, frequently involving chemicals.

In Becky Dial's case, her physicians speculate that her repeated long term exposures to laboratory chemicals, first in nursing school and later during anesthesiology training, bombarded her with poisons that her body was unable to accept.

"Life was really a kind of hell for a while," said Mrs. Dial, who still must receive injections to ward off serious allergic reactions. "I couldn't eat anything without becoming violently ill."

After losing nearly a third of her normal body weight in a year and watching her extremities turn purple from internal bleeding and bruising, Mrs. Dial was referred to Brookhaven by a South Carolina allergist in March, 1979.

Following several stays at Brookhaven totaling more than two months, she resumed a near-normal life last year as a college student and mother.

Mrs. Dial and other "universal reactors" undergo a standard course of treatment that includes a fasting period of several days, followed by intensive testing of the patient's sensitivity to various food substances.

"We provide a rigidly controlled environment in which reactions can be observed closely and selectively," said Stroud.

Foods to which patients highly allergic are avoided in some rare cases, though not in others. More often, organs raised beef, pork and poultry suffice, he said.

Gradually, after receiving sometimes hundred injections of small amount of an allergin serum, a patient "provoked" into accepting the substance, Stroud said. The key is limiting testing to one substance at a time under carefully controlled conditions, he explained.

Four movies rolled into one

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — It's hard enough to make one movie, but producer Matty Simmons is involved in making four. And they're all part of a single feature film.

It may sound complicated, but it really isn't. Simmons is the man who brought you "National Lampoon's Animal House," and now he has embarked on another exercise in exquisite taste. "National Lampoon Goes to the Movies" is actually four short movies in one, each a spoof on a common motion picture type.

The four movies that will make up "National Lampoon Goes to the Movies" are (not necessarily in the order in which they will be shown): "The Municipalians," a cop story; "Growing Yourself," which spoofs introspective films such as "Manhattan" and "Kramer vs. Kramer"; "The Success Wantaers," which mimics those films based on books by Jacqueline Susann and Harold Robbins; and "The Bomb," a disaster movie take-off. There will be no connection between the four movies.

Simmons has two separate crews, each headed by a different director, and is shooting two of his four movies at once. When those two are done, he'll move on to the next two. It makes for a bigger payroll, but cuts the shooting time virtually in half.

On the set of "The Success Wantaers," they are shooting a scene in which the wife of the president of the United States (in Sweden to receive the Nobel Peace Prize) and the president (ditto) are both consorting with her heroine, a young lady with ambition.

Ann Dusenberry plays the young lady, a blonde, who uses her feminine wiles, and Fred Willard is Mr. President. Playing the wife is an actress named Margaret Whitten, chosen by director Bob Giral-di because he had worked with her in a successful TV commercial — Miss Whitten is the lady in the Japanese bath in the traveler's check commercial who says, "Please don't get up."

In this scene, Ann and Fred are in bed. She takes off her jewelry — many pieces, each one bigger and heavier than the one before — and puts them on the table next to the bed. When Giral-di gives the signal, the special effects man pulls a string, or something, and the glass table smashes under the weight of all those gems.

After each take, Willard pulls a book out from the Pittsburgh Steelers out from beneath his pillow and reads a few pages. When questioned why he's reading while sharing the bed with a gorgeous blonde, Willard looks surprised and says, "Of course I read — what else should a man do when he is in bed with a beautiful blonde?"

Simmons says that originally he was going to have six movie spoofs in "National Lampoon Goes to the Movies." But it would have been too long, so he axed two of them (one dealt with pictures about such fad topics as roller skating, the other was a horror film spoof.)

Simmons says it has taken him so long to do a follow-up to the very commercial "Animal House" because they had a false start that held them up for a long time.

"We were going to follow 'Animal House,' with a film called 'Jaws 3, People O' at Universal — a film about what it's like in a big studio," he explains. "But Universal apparently got cold feet and thought it was too close to home. So eventually they dropped it."

Actor doesn't slam Los Angeles

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's traditional for New York actors to denounce Los Angeles as a hamlet of sham and plastic, a place where underneath all that phony tinsel you find real tinsel. Not Richard Thomas.

"You will not find this native New Yorker griping about L.A.," says the 29-year-old actor, known to the nation for five years as the sensitive, poetry-writing John-Boy of CBS' "The Waltons."

"You can have the nicest life out there, particularly if you like the outdoors as I do. I love New York, but even when I'm outside here I always feel as if I'm in a big room."

He sat at breakfast, munching on a croissant. "But I've never really felt the need to set one place against the other."

A good idea. Particularly since he'll be here through June, maybe longer. He's starring as the war-crippled Vietnam vet, Ken Talley, in Lanford Wilson's "Fifth of July" on Broadway. He succeeds Christopher Reeve in the role.

Thomas is the second "Waltons" graduate to return to the stage here, the other being Ralph Waite, who played his father in the series and now stars in Strindberg's "The Father" at the Circle in the Square.

Like Waite, the blonde-haired, boyish-looking actor is no stranger to Broadway. He made his debut there at age 7, playing a son of Franklin D. Roosevelt in "Sunrise at Campobello."

"The last time I was on stage in New York I was a juvenile," says Thomas, last here 14 years ago in Edward Albee's "Everything In The Garden." "Now I'm an aging juvenile. But it's good to be back."

He allowed as how it'll be even better when his wife, Alma, and their 4½-year-old son, Richard (the fifth in a line of Richard Thomases) get here to join him during his "Fifth of July" run.

He and his family live quietly in Los Angeles, far from the Sunset Strip and the Hollywood ramble, in a pleasant, tree-lined area known as Los Feliz. Their house is just a short ways from an old Spanish-style manse W.C. Fields once owned.

Thomas' idea of whoopee is to study Chinese, putter in his garden or listen to opera or recordings of jazz singers like Sylvia Syms and Blossom Dearie. He comes from a show-biz family.

Both his parents once were dancers, first in Cuba, then with the New York City Ballet. He took up theater at the ripe old age of 6, singing "You Gotta Have Heart" in a production of "Damn Yankees."

"That was my brief but uneventful career in musical comedy," says Thomas, who toddled into drama with "Campobello" and has been at it ever since, mostly in TV but also on stage and in a few films.

His parents never pushed him to be an actor: "To be on stage was very natural for me. My aptitude for acting showed early. I guess, so they encouraged me. And I had a good time doing it."

"Of course, we're a theatrical family, so it was a natural part of the environment in which I grew up. But the work was always emphasized, not the social aspect of being a performer."

During and after his "Waltons" days, he's mostly busied himself in TV movies, making shows like the "Roots" sequel, "The Silence" and remakes of two war-movie classics, "The Red Badge of Courage" and "All Quiet on the Western Front."

But he's not neglected the stage. In Los Angeles, he's done Kaufmann and Connelly's "Merton of the Movies," Shaw's "St. Joan" and David Rabe's Vietnam drama, "Streamers."

And last year, before starting rehearsals for CBS' "The Berlin Tunnel," he played the bedridden, permanently crippled hero of "Whose Life Is It Anyway?" in summer stock. He briefly loafed — collapse was more like it — in 1976, after he left "The Waltons." He says he did "Merton" on stage, then raced back here and "spent the summer flat on my back."

"One would have thought I was recuperating from some awful downward slump, not from a great success of five years. But I just didn't realize how physically exhausted I was."

"I enjoyed doing the series, it was a nice show. But five years loads up on you — I was making TV movies when we were on hiatus, never took vacations — and it can get to you."

"All of a sudden, you're finished. And it's quite a change in your life."
