Travel, fireworks safety urged during July 4th

BY DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

With Independence Day approaching, local fire and law enforcement officials urge Pampans to use safety precautions while celebrating the national holiday.

Even before the holiday began—a house fire late Wednesday was caused by a firecracker being exploded in the home of Beth Ledbetter at 329 N. Wells. Firefighters said Pampa Fire Department officials said the fire occurred at 11:55 p.m. Wednesday. A mattress and the surrounding floor was damaged in the fire, officials said.

As a part of the local safety effort, Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) officers here will join in the "Operation Motorcade" which begins at 6 p.m. today and will continue through midnight July 4.

DPS officials predict 44 Texans will die in traffic accidents during the 78-hour holiday period.

Major C. W. Bell, regional DPS commander, said all available highway patrol troopers will be on the highways during "Operation Motorcade."

The troopers will be especially aware of drinking drivers and violators of the speed laws, he said.

"All drivers should be aware of their condition and the condition of their vehicles," he added.

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said today that eight officers of the Gray County Sheriff's Department will be in the field for the next four to six days from 8:30 p.m. until 2:30 a.m. The officers will be enforcing trespassing and the use of fireworks laws.

Jordan said his department "solicits the cooperation of the people of Gray County to be as careful as possible when celebrating the Fourth of July with fireworks."

We are the first to mention the fact that we are proud to celebrate throughout America on the Fourth of July, but we do not see the necessity of being destructive both financially and physically to the taxpayers because of fireworks," he said.

Jewel heist value now at $55,000

WHEELER — A Wheeler woman remained in satisfactory condition in an Amarillo hospital early today while Wheeler County Sheriff's officers try to piece together who beat her and took $55,000 in jewelry from the store where she worked Monday.

Roxie Hanks of Wheeler suffered a broken jaw, a broken nose and several broken ribs when she was beaten by someone who entered the Koshare Shop Monday afternoon. Wheeler County Sheriff Doyle Ramsey said the shop is located south of Wheeler on Texas 83, the sheriff said.

Because of Mrs. Hanks' injuries, law enforcement officers have been unable to talk with the victim for more details of the robbery, Ramsey said.

The jewelry heist occurred at about 3 p.m. Monday, while Mrs. Hanks was alone in the store, the sheriff said. Mrs. Hanks was discovered by a customer at 3:25 p.m. who tried to enter the locked building, Ramsey said. Although the woman had been unconscious, the customer at the door roused her enough for her to unlock the door, he said.

The sheriff said that the jewelry was "mostly bracelets," made of gold, silver and platinum and holding such precious stones as diamonds and sapphires.

It was previously reported that the jewelry was valued at $48,000, but Ramsey said the estimate now is about $55,000.

Mrs. Hanks' purse was also taken in the robbery, he said.

Ramsey said there were no witnesses to the incident and that he has no suspects.

Last year, Pampa firefighters battled more than 100 grass fires in the Gray County area over the Independence Day holiday period. July 4 firefighters fought more than 75 blazes caused by fireworks exploding in dry grass, fanned by high winds.

Assistant Fire Chief J. D. Ray asked Pampans to be cautious when using fireworks.

"The ideal situation would be for those who want to use fireworks to get a farmer's permission and explode them in an open plowed field," he said.

Ray said there is less chance for grass fires this year because of recent rains.

He added, "There will be two days for it to dry out, though, so we'll still be susceptible to grass fires."

Ray said no extra fire fighters will be on duty, unless there is a need for them.

No large fireworks displays are planned this year.

In the past, the Pampa Chamber of Commerce and an area civic club had hosted the displays, but the groups have discontinued the practice because of expense and safety problems.

City Manager Mack Wofford said City Ordinance No. 275 prohibits the sale of any type fireworks within the corporate limits of Pampa. Section 7-54 of the ordinance says that it is also unlawful to discharge any type fireworks within the city limits, he said.

Violation of the ordinance is a misdemeanor crime, he said, which could result in a fine of up to $200.

"Fireworks has really become a problem," Wofford said. "Number one, by disturbing people by the loud noise, and number two, by causing destructive grass fires and other type fires."

Fireworks also pose a safety problem to the public as well as being potentially destructive to property.

Nationally, 9,400 people were treated in hospital emergency rooms for fireworks-caused injuries, a release from the Texas Society to Prevent Blindness said.

Of the total injuries, 1,700 were to the eyes—a 40 percent increase from 1979, the release stated.

These figures could be misleading, however, because they do not include injuries treated in doctors' offices or those admitted directly to the hospital, the release said.

Dr. R. E. Margo, State Medical Chairman of the Society, said there is no "safe" firecracker. "Even sparklers can sizzle at temperatures over 1,500 degrees."

The Texas Safety Association has listed the following precautions when using fireworks:

- Follow the manufacturer's directions carefully.
- Never explode firecrackers in crowded public areas.
- Keep children and pets away from the firing areas.
- Never set off the devices near areas where flammable liquids are kept such as boats, garages or barbecue areas.

The Association also said the most firework injuries are the result of these four situations: children using fireworks without adult supervision, persons attempting to enhance the effects of fireworks by combining elements from several devices, people setting off devices inside buildings, and persons, particularly teenagers, who use fireworks to startle others.

Those who plan to travel during the holiday are asked by safety officials to check the tires, belts and hoses of the vehicle, stop at least five minutes every hour for rest, and don't mix alcohol and driving.

Opening the windows or fresh air vents, playing the radio and shutting in the seat will help drivers stay awake, officials add.

Fifty-two persons died from traffic injuries suffered in the July 4 holiday period last year, DPS officials said. Texas traffic deaths for 1980 totaled 4,424—a record high for the fourth consecutive year.

The July 4th holiday will be sparked with numerous rodeos and festivals playing for residents in the Panhandle throughout weekend.

Due to the Independence Day observance many local offices and businesses will be closed Friday. These include all county offices, city offices, and U.S. Government offices with the exception of the Post Office which will close on Saturday.

Pampa Mall stores will be open Friday and will close at 3 p.m. on Saturday. Downtown merchants will follow individual schedules.

All banking and Savings and Loan institutions will also be closed.

Most local physicians offices will be closed on Friday but an emergency room doctor will be available at Highland General Hospital.

The Pampa News will publish a newspaper on Friday.

Congress studies tax break for themselves

WASHINGTON (AP)—At the same time Congress is slashing domestic programs, it is considering giving itself a $3 million tax break to offset the high cost of living in the nation's capital.

The House Appropriations Committee is scheduled to take up the measure next week. The proposal by Jamie L. Whitten, the panel's chairman, could be worth an average of $5,600 a year to each member of Congress.

The Mississippi Democrat's amendment, which also has the support of other top congressional leaders, would allow members to deduct Washington living expenses from their federal taxable income in the same way other people can deduct out-of-town business expenses.

"I don't think people really know that members of Congress do not receive an expense allowance for being in Washington," Whitten said in an interview.

The amendment also might be offered to President Reagan's tax-cut package, Whitten said.

His amendment informally accepted on June 18 by the legislative appropriations subcommittee would repeal a 1952 law that limits to $3,000 the amount members of Congress can deduct for living expenses.

The Joint Committee on Taxation has estimated that such a move could cost the Treasury about $3 million annually in lost tax revenues. That would work out to an average tax savings of $5,600 for each of the 535 members of Congress.

House and Senate members maintain residences in Washington as well as in their home districts.

Whitten said the $60,662 annual salary of House and Senate members just isn't enough to enable many members—especially for freshmen who don't already own houses in Washington—to make ends meet.

"A number of new members came to me and said they couldn't bring their families here, couldn't pay their rent. It's a bad situation for them and for the country," Whitten said.

Whitten drafted the tax-break plan as an amendment to a $11 billion appropriations bill to provide funds for running Congress for fiscal year 1982.

Rep. Silvio O. Conte of Massachusetts, the ranking Republican on the Appropriations Committee, also supports the tax break, as does Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee.

Rostenkowski tried a similar move himself in 1979 before he assumed the chairmanship of the powerful committee, proposing a $50-a-day deduction for members while on public business.

Lady Bird's shopping privileges revoked

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—The Air Force Commissary Service has ordered Lady Bird Johnson to stop unauthorized shopping at the Bergstrom Air Force Base commissary in Austin, a newspaper reported today.

"It is a totally unfortunate situation," a spokesman for the Air Force Commissary Service, headquartered at Kelly Air Force Base here, told the San Antonio News.

The former first lady was out of the country and could not be reached for comment, but a spokesman for her in Austin said she would be embarrassed when she returns from overseas.

The Commissary Service spokesman said that Mrs. Johnson or a member of the Johnson household has been shopping at the Bergstrom Air Force Base commissary on a regular basis since the death of former President Lyndon B. Johnson in 1973.

Commissaries offer products at prices generally below those charged in the civilian community.

The Air Force last month had denied former President Jimmy Carter permission to shop in commissaries and base exchanges. Carter sought the privileges by citing his four years in the presidency and as commander-in-chief of the armed forces.

"We had no idea of the practice, but apparently it has been going on for several years," Lt. Col. Julius DuBois, a commissary service official, said of the Johnson family commissary shopping.

DuBois said it was confirmed that a kitchen maid for the Johnson household had been making monthly trips to the Bergstrom facility.

He said that several years ago, while Johnson was in office, that Johnson asked an aide to procure a "green card" authorizing personal use of such military facilities as barber shops, post exchanges and commissaries.

Both President and Mrs. Johnson traveled about 140 miles roundtrip from their Central Texas ranch to stock up on such sundries as groceries, paper goods and soap, the spokesman said.

Apparently after Johnson's death, the card was used to permit purchases by family members or household staffers, DuBois confirmed.

"AFSCOM (Air Force Commissary Service) was formed in 1976 so we were totally unaware of this happening," he said.

DuBois said the Johnson family shopping came to light as a result of a directive issued last March 19 to base stores ordering a halt to resuance of the green cards.

He said the practice eventually would have surfaced, but the process was speeded up by the recent denial of shopping privileges to Carter.

"Even if the Carter thing had not come up, it would have eventually turned up anyway," DuBois said. "But the people at Bergstrom just began asking more questions."

Cable billing problems blamed on Dallas computer

BY SHEILA ECCLES
Staff Writer

A large number of Pampa residents have been enjoying cable television service since 1966. However, recent cable system billing irregularities have finally driven one Pampa woman to call for a public explanation.

"I pre-pay my cable bill — two months at a time — and I still receive those monthly overdue notices. Then one day they turned off my cable service — and I had paid for it," she said.

After repeated sessions in the cable office, the woman says she is afraid they will still turn off her service.

"All the overdue notices are prepared in Dallas so it doesn't seem to do a whole lot of good to complain here," she said.

The woman also alleged that Pampa cable personnel told her that they had to disconnect a number of subscribers each month to collect the $5 re-connect fee to augment the regular revenues.

The cable service was re-connected for the widow, but the bitter taste lingered. She wondered how such a thing could happen to a customer who pays their bills.

Through 16 years, there have been only two actual owners of the cable system Bruce Merrill, who at times has had various partners and the Dallas-based Sammons Communication. The system has operated under four names during the 16 years: Pampa Cable TV in 1966, American Cable TV in 1972, Merrill Cable in 1974 and Sammons in 1979.

General Manager for Sammons is Wayne Steddum who has carried out Sammons' decision to rebuild the system locally.

But the billing problem is currently raising the ire of a growing percentage of Pampans.

Bills — and overdue notices from the Sammons Communications computer in Dallas — still arrive regularly at many homes.

"No one in the system, which includes Pampa, Berger, McLean, White Deer, Fritch, Panhandle and Stinnett, receives a bill," Steddum said.

"Twelve payment coupons are sent to new applicants upon connection of the cable at their home."

"The coupons are sent through the main computer in Dallas, and the coupons are not dated. Each customer's bill is due at the first of the month."

"The coupons are just Sammons way of billing and are used by the company in states from Pennsylvania to California. Sammons is the tenth largest cable operator in the nation, serving over 418,000 subscribers."

"It seems that people forget to use the coupons or they lose them. We see a very large percentage of people in our office who do not have their coupons."

So the local offices of Sammons Communications should actually receive 13,500 payments at the first of each month," Steddum said.

The widow's case involved human error, Steddum admitted, and quickly explained that someone was dispatched to reconnect the cable at her home the same day it was mistakenly turned off.

"Concerning the $5 service charge — we do not need the extra $5 to add to revenues. We have such a large write-off every month from people who leave town or just do not pay that a $5 re-connect charge wouldn't add up to any substantial sum. It was probably just a misunderstanding."

"The local cable system disconnects approximately 140 to 175 subscribers per month, for non-payment of service."

"We give these subscribers 45 days to pay their bills before the cable is turned off," Steddum said.

As for all the overdue notices received, Steddum explained, "When people receive the monthly overdue notices, it is generally due to a missed payment somewhere from the time the cable was installed. A missed payment triggers the computer to send the monthly reminder notices."

"Usually when someone comes in with an overdue notice — and they think they have paid — we usually find somewhere back in the books one payment has been forgotten," Steddum said.

In Pampa there are 7,000 cable subscribers, and according to City Council records, the last rate increase was approved in November 1979. The rate hike effective March 1980 was for 75 cents monthly — raising rates from $7.75 to $8.50.

The previous rate hike was in March 1977.

According to law, all cable service rate hikes must be approved by the city councilmen.

Sammons asked for the 1979 rate hike due to a decision the company made to rebuild the aging technical parts of the system.

The city in turn receives three percent of the gross receipts from the cable service and since 1966 has received over $99,000 in revenues from the cable service.

On Nov. 10, 1980 a House Bill was passed relating to local regulations of cable TV.

Taking effect in September 1981 is the following amendment. The governing body of a municipality that franchises or regulates cable TV services shall provide for the selection of an advisory board to consist of at least one member from each racial, religious and nationality group, constituting more than 3 percent of the total population of the municipality. The municipal body may not grant or renew a cable TV franchise or make any other decision concerning regulation of the cable TV services unless it first considers the recommendations of the advisory board.

Steddum said, "The quality of this system is very good since the rebuilding and we get very few complaints on the quality."

"However, we did have some problems during 1979 when we first took over. Sammons had to change the billing to their own computers and, of course, there were some errors," Steddum said.

But according to Steddum, if you want to stop those overdue notices, come in and have the books checked to see if there was a payment missed. From then on, if subscribers pay on the first of the month, there should be no more billing problems.

"The sooner the people using the system get this billing straightened out the less calls we will have — eventually," Steddum said.

Meanwhile, the Pampa widow is able to watch her cable without interruptions, but she is nervous about how long it will be before it starts all over.

BOUND FOR SENTENCING. Six mercenaries who pleaded guilty of plotting to overthrow the Caribbean island of Dominica head to federal court in New Orleans for sentencing Wednesday afternoon. They are, from left: Christopher Anderson of Oklahoma City, Wolfgang Droegge of Toronto, Michael Perdue of Houston, Larry Lloyd Jacklin of Ontario, George Mulvaney of Jackson, Miss., and Robert Prichard Jr. of Raleigh. All were given the maximum sentence of three years except Jacklin and Mulvaney who will be sent to a facility for youthful offenders. (AP Laserphoto)

Credit card high-rollers jailed

RICHMOND, Texas (AP) — Three men and two women who lived lavishly in a rent house for nearly three months were held in custody in the Fort Bend County Jail today accused of fraud.

Detectives said they were so reckless with their credit card purchases that they never washed their clothes — they simply put on brand new garments whenever the ones they were wearing got dirty.

Sheriff's Detective Jackie Wilke said Wednesday the five defendants in jail could be part of a much larger ring of credit card thieves reaching from California to Alabama.

"This is just the tip of the iceberg," she said. She theorized the suspects bought the credit cards from someone who stole them from a post office in Los Angeles.

"We are working with the Los Angeles sheriff and the L.A. police department, and we have connected the activities to several other states — Mississippi, Alabama, and Louisiana, as well as Texas and California," she said Wednesday.

She and about a dozen other deputies surrounded a two-story rent house in an unincorporated section of the county near Houston and executed a search warrant during the weekend, arresting the five suspects. All are from Los Angeles, where they were wanted on various charges in California.

They had leased the house in April, but were foiled by suspicious neighbors who saw them loading furniture in and out in U-Haul trailers in the middle of the night and alerted police.

Inside, deputies found $150,000 to $300,000 worth of televisions, stereos, videotape recorders, fine furniture, loose diamonds, clothing and other items. Two stolen cars were also recovered.

"They bought the best of clothes. There was a lot of stuff from Neiman-Marcus. One article of clothing appeared to have a $589 price tag on it. And they didn't wash their clothes — they just piled them in a corner and put on some new ones," Ms. Wile said.

The defendants, who had several sets of fake identification and 10 to 25 aliases each, were held in lieu of $150,000 bond while prosecutors prepared charges of credit card abuse against one and felony theft against the other four.

The 50 stolen Mastercard and Visa credit cards were all renewal cards issued by the Bank of America of Pasadena, Calif., and had been returned to the post office as undeliverable.

Tests planned to learn cause of redfish kill

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Marine scientists puzzled by a tide of dead adult redfish washing ashore on Gulf Coast beaches are planning a series of tests in an effort to determine what is killing the fish.

"It's just redfish — that's the strange thing," Dr. Pat Parker of the University of Texas Marine Science Institute said Wednesday after officials found remains of the kill along a 140-mile stretch of the coast between Port Mansfield and Brownsville.

Parker said samples of the dead fish have been sent to laboratories at Texas A&M where tests will be conducted to see if scientists can determine how the fish died.

Officials said they did not know when the tests might be completed on the fish that is caught and sold commercially and also is popular with sports fishermen.

Parker said he flew over beaches between Port Aransas and Brownsville Wednesday, and that "there was a dead redfish about every 300 feet."

Tom Hefferman, director of the Coastal Fisheries Division of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, said he counted more than 1,100 of the dead fish to the north between Port Aransas and Port Mansfield.

That area includes the Padre Island National Seashore.

Hefferman said most of the fish spotted along the beach weighed from 30 to 40 pounds and were as much as 4 feet long, adding that experts are puzzled because the "kill" seems to be affecting only adult redfish.

Officials said they have tentatively ruled out a "red tide" effect because no other fish are involved, and a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said there were no indications that any toxic spills had occurred in the area during the past three weeks.

Scott and Joan Holt, a husband and wife research team at the Marine Science Institute, also were planning to net live redfish and study water conditions to see if it could be learned how the fish were being killed.

Mrs. Holt said another puzzling aspect of the kill is the fact that the fish are in fairly shallow waters where they generally come only in the fall to spawn.

Houstonians air gripes about Post Office

HOUSTON (AP) — That perennial butt of jokes and source of aggravation — the post office — was the target of Houston residents who got a chance to air their gripes at a public hearing.

Congressman Mickey Leland, chairman of a U.S. House of Representatives subcommittee on postal personnel, convened the half-day forum Wednesday to hear complaints about Houston postal service.

Saying he has lived in the same house for 40 years, Joe D. Thomas told the forum he discovered in the spring of 1979 that some of his mail, including dividend checks, was being returned to senders stamped "undeliverable."

Though he has complained numerous times and been assured the problem is solved, Thomas said, he still can't depend on the mail.

Businessman Jim Reed said he sent his complaints about service and delivery to the postmaster, only to be told the postmaster receives so many complaints he can't answer them all.

"You can take the biggest company in Houston and I can write the chairman of the board and I'll get a reply," Reed said. "I can write my congressman and I get a reply. But I write the postmaster and my letter self-destructs."

New York Congressman Robert Garcia, also a member of the House post office committee, joined Leland at the hearing. They heard from postal service officials and union leaders as well from citizens.

National Association of Letter Carriers local president, Vernon Wade charged that change-of-address mail is routinely "shuttled to one side" by postal stations and is not being forwarded.

Local NALC vice president Winston Johnson said circulars announcing special sales often are delivered days after the sale has ended.

Emmett E. Cooper Jr., southern regional postmaster general, agreed there are some problems in the Houston operation, but said a new stamps-by-mail system and the hiring of additional employees would alleviate long waits at post offices.

Braniff debts extended to February

DALLAS (AP) — For the second time this year financially troubled Braniff International has gotten its creditors to postpone interest and principal payments on a $600 million debt, a day after the deadline for the original extension passed.

"We are pleased with the agreement," Braniff board chairman John J. Casey said Wednesday of the terms reached by the airline and its 39 creditors.

About $40 million in principal and interest payments would have come due if the lenders did not agree to the extension.

"It constitutes an expression of confidence in Braniff and its employees as well as in the soundness of its operations. We are optimistic that an acceptable restructuring agreement will be negotiated in the near future."

Under terms of the agreement, "the lenders will enter into intensive negotiations with Braniff with a view towards reaching an agreement in principle by early fall covering the complete restructuring of Braniff's private debt," a company statement said.

The agreement provides that the final restructuring be completed as soon as possible after that and "that all sums due on the privately-held debt will be deferred until Feb. 1, 1992," and that no interest will be charged on the debt.

The Braniff Group had received an earlier deferral of all sums due on its private debt from Feb. 1, 1981 until this Tuesday, and also will be deferred until next February.

Braniff reported a net loss of $131.4 million in 1990, after a net loss of $44.3 million in 1979. Airline officials blamed a 1981 first quarter deficit of $24.7 million on its debt payments and have been seeking an easier repayment schedule.

On Tuesday, Boeing Co. said it had sold to Air Florida the five 727-200 aircraft originally ordered by Braniff. Braniff and Boeing still have to get rid of the three larger 747s originally valued at $173.6 million.

According to Braniff's 1980 annual report, the delivery price of the 727-200 planes was 775.7 million. Braniff was to pay Boeing for storage and interest costs under a deferred delivery agreement.

Families return to their homes

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — About 130 families returned to their homes early today after a butane line rupture forced their evacuation from a mobile home park and a nearby subdivision.

Chambers County Sheriff Chuck Morris said the families were allowed to return home after authorities determined it was safe for them to do so.

An Exxon U.S.A. spokesman said Wednesday that the break occurred about 6 p.m. when a valve on a 10-inch line stuck, causing the pipeline to rupture and leak.

Deputies went from door to door in the Cedar Bay trailer park and subdivision and asked residents to evacuate the area.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Covering Commandment.

Increasing Japan's defense spending: A Japanese view

By HIDEICHIRO NAKANO
American pressure on Japan to increase defense spending is based upon two arguments. First, that Japan should have "appropriate" armed forces because it has succeeded in building a strong economy under the U.S. military umbrellas (specifically its nuclear "umbrella") without paying the due cost of its national security. This is the so-called "Free Rider Theory," which is frequently expressed by those Americans who are suffering from an excess of Japanese cars in the U.S. The second argument is that it is Japan's duty to take a responsible military role in maintaining regional security in the Far East as a member of the Allied Forces. This role by Japan would help the United States cope with Communist expansionism in other corners of the world.

A future date for achieving a modest buildup to a level originally planned in 1976. This is quite a correct judgement as a top Japanese political leader, but there seems to be misunderstanding over this issue in America.

How do the Japanese see this issue? What are some of the negative reactions which would be caused by a rapid military buildup in Japan?

Though there appears to be merit in the argument to press Japan to strengthen her armed forces by appealing to the nationalistic feeling of people who feel menaced by the flood of competitive Japanese cars and electronic goods, it is misleading because it criticizes Japan by mixing causes and effects of the Japanese economic growth.

Certainly there may have been an intuitive calculation in the mind of the late prime minister Shigeru Yoshida when he insisted on the "Economy First Principle" within the shield of the so-called "MacArthur Constitution." He correctly judged that militarism should not be the future course of Japan.

The Japanese people have accepted the denunciation of war as a means of settling international disputes.

Article 9. Aspiring sincerely to an international peace based on justice and order, the Japanese people forever renounce war as a sovereign right of the nation and the threat or use of force as a means of settling international disputes.

Proudly written in the preface of the present Japanese Constitution is the phrase:

We the Japanese people, desire peace for all time and are deeply conscious of the high ideals controlling human relationship, and we have determined to preserve our security and existence, trusting in the justice and faith of the peace-loving peoples of the world.

The "Disarmed Neutral Policy" formulated and still maintained by the Japan Socialist Party and the "UN Centered Policy" or "All Direction Diplomacy" formally proclaimed by the Liberal Democratic party are seen as very unrealistic idealism in the eyes of foreign people. But the general feeling of the Japanese people is that the buildup of the military to cope with international problems is unrealistic, since the next world war will be a nuclear war, destroying everything on earth.

The common Japanese response to the "Soviet threat" is quite simple. They do not share the geopolitical image of the contemporary world with the Pentagon strategic analysts. The Japanese people simply think that if they do not harm the Russians the Soviet army would never invade Hokkaido.

The Japanese people are enjoying a stable and prosperous economic success. When asked, almost 90 percent of the Japanese people answer that they belong to the "middle class." Their attitude toward the status quo is very conservative. Even the oil shocks of the 1970s have been weathered without leaving any serious after-effects on the Japanese economy. There is no foreseeable social "crisis" which would drive Japan into a drastically new military policy.

Recent opinion polls show that only 20 to 30 percent of the population favor a strong buildup of the Self Defense Forces. Very few think that we should have an army commensurate with our economic power. Such action would require amending the Constitution. This would mean a Japanese military second only to that of the United States in the Free World.

Such a massive buildup of Japanese military force would always induce negative response from neighboring countries, particularly China, the Soviet Union, and southeast Asian nations. They still regard Japan warily as a result of memories left from World War II. A full scale conventional and nuclear buildup of Japanese forces might cause even the United States to consider retargeting its ICBMs to include Japanese bases.

In the longer perspective, Japan should continue to deal with the problem of military buildup in the spirit of the "peace Constitution," even though such an option draws criticism from the U.S. as a little bit "idiotic" or unrealistic.

Except for a few well-informed intellectuals, the image of Japan in the United States is terribly distorted. Reports on Japan in the media are usually fragmented, lacking in the complete context or background for the reader to accurately judge the reported story.

Because the two countries are important partners in the Free World, both peoples should try to understand each other better, particularly on the important issue of defense.

OPINION PAGE

Wonderful world of judicial circus

The relentless hunt for legal error took an unusual turn in the Queens district of New York City last month, according to the New York Times.

Justice Kenneth N. Browne, a member to the State Supreme Court in Queens, determined that a murder confession offered freely by a 16-year-old Brooklyn youth could not be used in court because the young man's rights had been violated — not by the police or district attorney but by the suspect's own lawyer.

Justice Browne, throwing out the confession of Agnel Claudio, claimed Claudio's attorney was "incompetent" when he permitted his one-time client to confess. Browne cited an Indiana justice's opinion that a defense attorney's "sole duty" is to "protect his client — guilty or innocent — and that in such capacity he owes no duty whatever to help society solve its crime problem."

Under this concept of criminal procedure, wrote the Indiana judge, "any lawyer worth his salt will tell the suspect in no uncertain terms to make no statement to police under any circumstances."

Meanwhile, former Dallas Cowboy football star Bob Hayes had his 1980 cocaine conviction overturned by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin a few days ago.

The court said Hayes' indictment was defective because it used the word "cocaine" rather than the approved wording, "derivative of the coca leaf."

And in San Francisco — same day — the former attorney for a California man who confessed four times (once on national television) to multiple murder wrote a letter to the U.S. Supreme Court protesting the court's reversal of the conviction because, according to the court, two of the confessions violated the Miranda rule requiring that suspects be told they have the right to remain silent and obtain legal counsel.

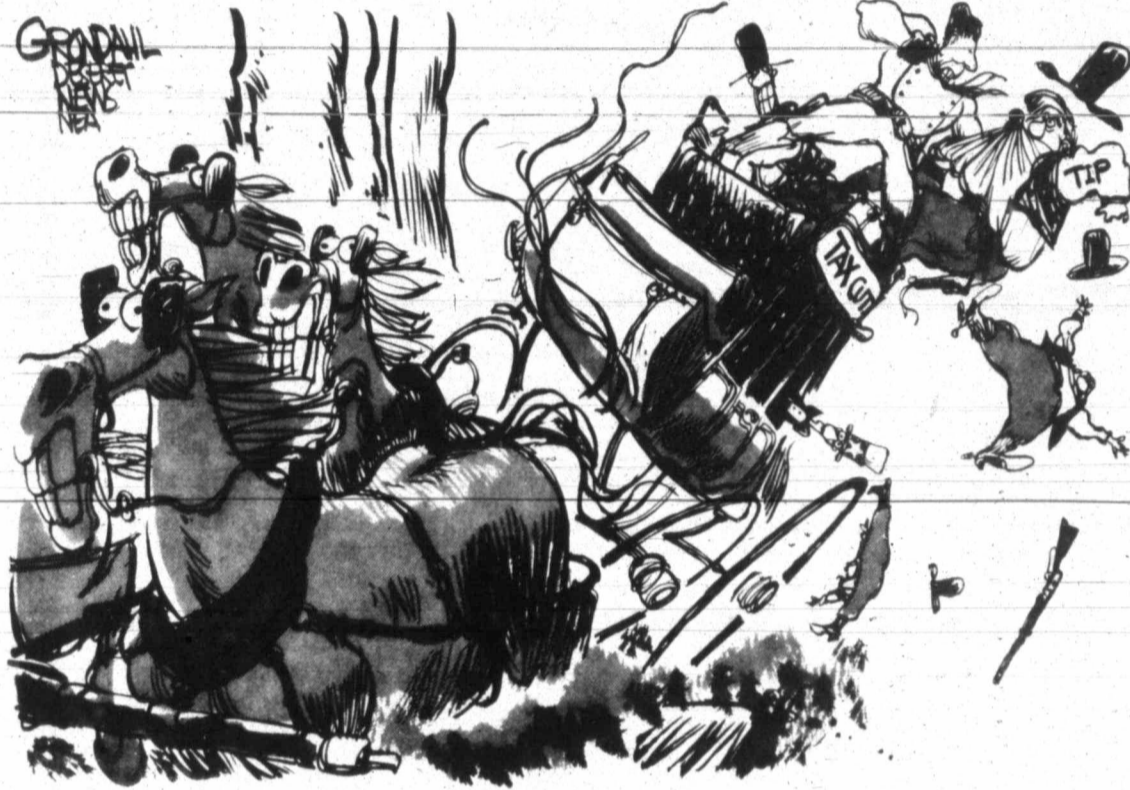

The attorney, James Leonard Crew Hayward, wrote the court:

Your recent decision in the case of People vs. Barry Braeseke was predictable. On the other hand, it's difficult to understand how a system of laws conceived to protect innocent people can become twisted to give freedom to a person who deliberately kills three innocent human beings, thereafter confesses four times to these killings, the last confession being on national television, and with all this somehow finds that freedom awaits him.

"I am a responsible citizen in my community and shudder that my family has now been given less protection by our courts. No wonder the citizens in this country refer to attorneys in a disrespectful fashion and to many of our courts with comparable lack of respect."

Braeseke, 25, accused of slaying three members of a family as they watched television in their home, will now be retried. Prosecutors are hoping to include as evidence Braeseke's confession during an interview with Mike Wallace on the CBS program "60 Minutes." That confession is important, because a prior California Supreme Court ruling had not only knocked out two of the first confessions but eliminated the murder weapon because, said the court, the rifle was found during an "illegal search."

Is it any wonder crime flourishes as the endless court hunt for legal nits intensifies?

The 'New' New Left

By EDWARD J. WALSH
When the polls closed last November 4, it was widely suggested that the United States had tried to turn the clock back thirty years to the stability and security of the Eisenhower era, when inflation was near nil and no one had heard of Vietnam, let alone El Salvador.

Certainly, Americans showed that they have gotten over the agonies of the sixties and seventies, and now want their political leaders to affirm traditional values, not remind them of new fears and doubts.

Still, the Reagan administration and the new Congress are grappling with the problems — economic, diplomatic, spiritual — that were brought on by nearly two decades of the leadership of the left in the United States. And it is profoundly wrong to believe that the left has submitted to the overwhelming evidence that its policies have failed, and given up. Instead, the left is alive and well, and wearing new stripes. Liberal Congressmen today, for example, are stoking opposition to the Reagan tax cut plan by worrying about federal deficits. That is a worry that has much to commend it, but from the mouths of liberals whose voting records display indifference to the consequences of deficits year in and year out, it is a sign that the left is trying to sidestep, rather than confront, the will of the people.

In California, the same thing is happening in a nutshell — the Campaign for Economic Democracy, a statewide grassroots organization led by one-time radical student activist Tom Hayden, is promoting a deliberately blurred brand of socialism called "the humane economy." That is because socialism is exactly what Americans, including Californians, voted against. So the left isn't calling for wholesale state ownership of industry, nationalized health care, or massive government jobs programs anymore. Even Tom Hayden referred to the British economy as "lemon socialism."

Instead, he says, "Economic democracy is less concerned with form and more concerned with content." The operative question is: "Is the (name of institution) 'responsive'?"

Tom Hayden is a man who more than once advocated the overthrow of the United States government, and refused to criticize the Vietnamese communists, even after the wholesale drownings of Vietnam's boat people provoked the anger of the entire civilized world. Instead, he is pushing "economic democracy" and rubbing elbows with respected political figures in California. He was invited to the White House in 1977 by President Carter.

This is not to say that a man can't change his mind. But Tom Hayden has not. Like many on the left today, he has only changed his tactics.

Missing Persons Bureau

"Bureau of Missing Persons, Sergeant Callahan speaking."

"I wish to report the disappearance of a kitchen appliance repairman."

"Come again, lady?"

"My kitchen appliance man is missing. He was here one day working on my dishwasher, and said he was going back to the shop (for a part, and I haven't seen him since."

"When was that?"

"Ten days ago. The dishwasher is in my kitchen in a hundred parts and I'm worried sick."

"Did you call the shop to see if he was there?"

"He's never there when I call. His answering service says they haven't heard from him in over a week."

"Don't start crying, lady. Did you have a quarrel with him?"

"It wasn't really a quarrel. I thought the hose had broken, but he said the washer needed a new motor. He said he had been having a lot of trouble with this particular type of machine, and I'd be better off buying a new one. I said I'd rather he fix it, and he just muttered to himself as he took it apart."

"Do you have a name we can work on?"

"I never got his name. I found his company in the Yellow Pages, under '24 Hour Service — Satisfaction Guaranteed.'"

"That doesn't help us much. Did he take his tool kit with him?"

"Yes, he did. Why do you ask?"

"It sounds as though he really meant business. When a repairman packs his tool kit up it usually indicates he's running away."

"But I was so good to him. I gave him an ice-cold beer, and a turkey sandwich. I treated him just as if he were part of the family."

"Don't blame yourself, lady. A lot of repairmen take off before they finish the job. He's probably somewhere in town working on another dishwasher."

"But suppose he was in an accident and was hurt? I'd never forgive myself.

My husband and I can't sleep at nights wondering if he's all right."

"We'd check the hospitals for you, lady. But it isn't easy without a name."

"Wait a minute. I think he did have a name. He made a telephone call when he was in the kitchen and identified himself to the other person as Jerry."

"At least that's something to go on. Could you give us a description of him?"

"He was about five-foot-eight, rather heavyset, and had grease all over his face and hands."

"We can't put out an all-points bulletin on that. You have to understand something. We get reports on maybe 50 runaway repairmen a day. They don't like to finish a job. They love to take things apart, but they don't like to put them back again. They don't even care if they get paid or not. We don't have the manpower to track them down, and even if we did we don't have the legal authority to send them back to your house to finish the work."

"All we can do, if we find your man, is try to persuade him to call you, and then it's up to you to talk him into coming home."

"So what you are saying is that I may never see him again?"

"I think you have to face reality. We haven't had too much luck in locating missing repairmen. Once they decide to leave an unfinished job they're rarely heard from again. The only thing you and your husband can do is hope that perhaps someday he'll come back and put your dishwasher together of his own free will. If you were as kind to him as you say you were, he might turn up at your doorstep any day."

"If you hear anything, will you let me know?"

"We'll put his name on the ticker. But don't get your hopes up. He could be in California by now working on a garbage disposal unit, under another name. If a repairman doesn't want to be found, there isn't a Missing Persons Bureau in the country that can locate him."

Concrete

In 1824, an English bricklayer, Joseph Aspdin, invented portland cement, so named after a look-alike stone on the Isle of Portland. This was (and is, for it is 98 percent of cement made in the United States today) a high quality cement, made by pulverizing limestone and clay, burning the mixture into a clinker, and then grinding it into a fine powder. When sand, gravel, and water are added, it makes concrete.

Handicapped climbers ascending Mount Ranier

A KISS FOR LUCK. Sheila Holzworth, a blind member of Project Pelion, set on reaching the summit of Mount Ranier on July Fourth, gets a goodbye kiss from her mother, Martha. The team of 11 handicapped climbers trudged to Camp Muir at the 10,000-foot level of Ranier Wednesday and hoped to reach the 14,410-foot summit by Saturday. (AP Laserphoto)

PARADISE, Wash. (AP) — Eleven disabled climbers, seven of them blind, sang and joked as they and their guides inched up 14,410-foot Mount Ranier in a conquest they hope will show the handicapped can surmount any obstacle.

The party, led by Jim Whittaker — the renowned mountaineer who was the first American to scale Mount Everest — reached Camp Muir at 10,000 feet Wednesday night. The camp, served as the base for rescuers searching for the 11 climbers who were buried under tons of ice and snow that fell from a glacier on the mountain June 21.

The 20-member party began its assault on the summit shortly before noon Wednesday amid near-perfect climbing conditions.

In addition to the seven blind climbers, two are deaf, one has epilepsy and another is a Vietnam veteran with an artificial leg. Each is accompanied by a guide.

Leaders of the expedition, nicknamed Project Pelion after the Greek mountain said to be the giants' stepping stone to heaven, said the group may try to reach the summit by Friday and return Saturday, the Fourth of July.

Phil Bartow, leader of Project Pelion and president of the Pennsylvania-based Institute of Outdoor Awareness, said the goal of the climb is not only to reach the summit, but to destroy the image many people have about the limitations of the handicapped.

The expedition is one of the projects being recognized nationally by the White House to mark the International Year of Disabled Persons.

Svein-Gilje, a reporter for the Seattle Times who is accompanying the party, is sending back reports of the expedition via radio. He described the climbers' mood during the first day of the ascent as "joyful and enthusiastic."

"They forget how tired they are, and they breathe deeply when they sing," he said. "It's good for them."

As the climb began, Paul Stefurak, 35, a deaf climber from Federal Way, Wash., who has trouble speaking, grabbed a pen and wrote in a reporter's notebook: "I can hardly wait to reach the summit. I want to go now. I feel so great and ready to climb. Apparently all of us feel that way, too."

"Let's go for it!" shouted Sheila Holzworth, a 19-year-old blind woman from Des Moines, Iowa.

Youth survives after being swept into sewer

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — A 10-year-old boy, swept into a flooded storm sewer and carried two blocks underground, reached the surface of a nearby lake naked but alive, authorities say.

Patrick Taylor was in fair condition Wednesday at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Taylor was sucked into a manhole by a swirling whirlpool Tuesday afternoon while playing across from Fire Station No. 7, where his father, firefighter Richard W. Taylor, works, according to fire Capt. Robert Stelhorn.

Mooring weighing 100 pounds floated off the manhole and others in the city as heavy thunderstorms brought two inches of rain and flash flooding.

Stelhorn said the child was dragged at least two blocks underground before surfacing in a lake at St. Francis College.

The rushing water tore the boy's clothes off, and when he surfaced, his body was covered with cuts and bruises. But the boy was conscious and able to drag himself to the bank, Stelhorn said.

In what Stelhorn called a "miracle," the child said he was okay before he was taken to the hospital.

Legislator praised by Baptists

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The Mexican Baptist Convention of Texas has approved a resolution praising a San Antonio legislator for voting against the pari-mutuel gambling bill in the state legislature.

The church group, which ended its annual meeting Wednesday, also became the first statewide group to support raising the state ceiling on aid to families of dependent children.

Representatives of many of the state's 600 Spanish-speaking Baptist churches adopted a resolution praising State Rep. Frank Tejada, D-San Antonio, for opposing pari-mutuel gambling in Texas even though Tejada's district voted for it.

The Texas House of Representatives voted in the regular session 94-50 against the bill to legalize race track gambling on a local option basis.

"We feel he (Tejada) has taken a strong stand against legalized gambling because it's in the best interest of Hispanics and other people for him to do so," the Mexican Baptist resolution said.

Another resolution adopted at the centennial celebration of Mexican Baptists in San Antonio supported a study being done concerning a working relationship between Mexican Baptist Bible institute of San Antonio, and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

The resolution on aid for families of dependent children supports a proposal to increase the ceiling on AFDC payments to 1 percent of the state budget.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

July 3, 1981

Greater responsibilities are likely this coming year but, by the same token so are your chances for larger gains. Be cheerful regarding your duties.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Socializing with business contemporaries could prove rather lucky for you today. In a congenial atmosphere, deals might be put together that wouldn't otherwise jell. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 459, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're likely to be the one who stands out the most in any gathering today. Your warmth and good humor will draw others to you, like the flame that attracts the moth.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The aspects continue to indicate you are fortunate in receiving benefits through others. However, what's occurring may not be totally evident now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You will make a welcome addition to any social gathering today. Don't be surprised at all the attention you may get from members of the opposite sex.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Lady Luck continues to tilt the odds in your favor concerning your ambitions. Keep aiming high. Don't settle for second-best.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You have the ability today to sort out complicated situations on which friends can't get a handle. Others are likely to seek your suggestions and counsel.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone with whom you've had an advantageous arrangement in the past could be very lucky for you again at this time. Stay with winners.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Usually you prefer to function independently, but today your best results are likely to come from situations requiring team effort.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Larger rewards than usual are likely today from things you transform into something more useful and functional. Use your inventiveness.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to arrange some type of activity today that includes old friends you've not seen much of lately. Perhaps you can get together for a cookout.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Being with a sizable group could prove to be a lot of fun today, especially if you are performing the host or hostess role at your place.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your restlessness can be soothed today by selecting companions who enjoy moving around and doing different things. Avoid those who are too fond of routine.

Dear Abby

Bitter mother wants baby back

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm tired of hearing that unwed mothers give up their babies because they want them to have a better life. Here's what happened in my case:

When I was 15, I was raped by my brother-in-law. (My sister was pregnant with her fourth baby in five years.) I was afraid to tell anyone the truth, so I lied and said I wasn't sure who the baby's father was.

My parents called me a "whore," and when they dropped me off at the home for unwed mothers, they gave me orders to "get rid of the bastard or don't come home."

From the minute I arrived at the home for unwed mothers, everyone started to work on me to give my baby up for adoption. "You can't earn enough money to care for it properly. Who will take care of it while you work? You'll be branded as 'immoral' and no decent man will want to marry you. You owe it to the child to give it a home with two parents."

I had this drummed into my head until I finally signed the adoption papers. The very next day I changed my mind, but they said it was too late.

It's been 22 years, and every day of my life I think about that beautiful little boy I supposedly "gave away." But God knows I never gave him away. He was taken from me.

EMPTY ARMS

DEAR ARMS: Unfortunately you (and your child) were born too soon. Today, no woman is "worked on" to give up her child. In fact, counseling is available in order to help the unwed mother make a choice she can live with. And in many states, the adoption is not final until six months after the papers have been signed.

DEAR ABBY: My son is getting married, and the bride's parents are paying for the wedding. The bride's mother asked me to please keep my guest list down to 30 people because of the cost, so I did.

Now I have a lot of people mad at me because they weren't invited. We have a large family, Abby, and 30 people won't even cover all our relatives, let alone some friends we would like to invite.

I always thought the groom's side was entitled to have as many guests as the bride's, even though it's customary for the bride's family to pay for the wedding. I heard they have over 100 guests from their side. Is this fair? We know that the bride's family is not rich. Neither are we, but we would gladly help out by paying for about 50 more guests. Do we dare suggest it?

GROOM'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Why not? It's a silly, unfair, outdated custom that makes no sense today. Tell the bride's mother that you'd like to invite more people and you will gladly pay for them. How can she refuse?

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you had a letter in your column about a man who made love with his socks on. It interested me because my husband always comes to bed with his socks on. It's no earth-shaking problem, but I find it rather annoying. I've tried to break him of the habit, but so far I haven't had much luck.

Could it be a regional thing? My husband is from Kansas.

DEBBIE

DEAR DEBBIE: Possibly. I checked with some Midwesterners and was told that the men who come to bed (and make love) with their socks on do so only during the winter months. And in the summer, they sleep in their shorts.

DEAR ABBY: This question has been on my mind for years. How can you discourage people who seem unable to talk to you without grabbing, touching or patting you? I find this very irritating.

H. IN BLUFFTON, OHIO

DEAR BLUFFTON: Most people who grab, touch and pat do so unconsciously. If your unresponsive reaction and drawing away don't communicate your irritation, try the more direct route — the verbal one.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (35 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Want to see a mother fall apart before your eyes? Just watch her when she asks a child what he is doing and he answers, "Nothing."

Children usually do "nothing" in a room where the door is shut, a dog is barking, water is running under the door, a sibling is begging for mercy, there is a strange odor of fur burning and there is the sound of a thousand camels running in place.

Most mothers refuse to face whatever it is they're not doing so they simply yell, "Do you want me to come up and see what you're up to?"

Surprise! The answer is always "NO!"

Some of the more famous children who were doing

"nothing" when they were asked are Damian in "The Omen" when he was riding his tricycle on the balcony; Patty Duke Astin in "The Bad Seed"; Lizzie Borden, who just wanted to go to the orphans' picnic, and Cain when he was annoyed with his brother Abel for "stealing" the banana out of his school lunch.

There is possibly only one thing that is more frightening than a room with children and noises. That is a room of children in silence.

When a child whispers behind a closed door, get a SWAT team and be prepared for anything.

Among the more memorable times my children were doing

"nothing" were: The time they dressed a stray cat in my mink hat and I was the only woman in town who wore a flea collar for costume jewelry.

The time they floated a miniature navy in the bathtub and it floated to the kitchen before it sunk.

The time they ironed a sheet for home movies and burnt a hole in the rug and we had to live with a small table in front of the closet door.

The time they opened all their Christmas presents on Dec. 19.

The time they directed grandma in Ohio and got a shoe store in Mexico.

Motherhood is not for sissies. Oh sure, it's easy when you can open a door and in a glance assess the damages. But it's when you hear two voices and a hammer behind a door and they swear they're doing "nothing" with "nobody" that makes your blood run cold.

Dr. Lamb

Slow heart rate not danger signal

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: When I was pregnant I developed jaundice. When my son was born he was born without jaundice, but when he was about 7 years old I was told he had a heart murmur—but not to worry about it. He is now married and has no problems but the doctor said his heart was slower than average. I don't understand. They haven't given him any medicine or put him on any restrictions. What does it mean to have a slower heart beat? Is it better than a fast beat?

DEAR READER: It all boils down to the fact that your son's doctor doesn't think he has anything wrong with his health. A slow heart rate is often an indication of good health rather than something being wrong. Endurance athletes tend to have slow heart rates. Roger Bannister had a heart rate of only 38 beats a minute when he was in training to break the four-minute mile. Before training his resting heart rate was in the 70s. That should tell you that developing high levels of physical fitness can produce a slow heart rate.

I think the resting heart rate is one of the most neglected simple indicators of health. If a person has a resting heart rate much above 80, it usually means that he is anxious, has bad habits such as smoking cigarettes, drinks too much coffee or other beverages containing caffeine, is in poor physical condition from lack of exercise or may have an underlying medical problem. The most common cause for high normal heart rates in adults is poor levels of physical fitness accompanied by being overweight and having bad habits. You'll appreciate the number of things that can affect the resting heart rate better by reading The Health Letter number 9-8, Your Heart Rate. What It Means, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Now, heart disease can cause slow heart rates. This is most commonly seen in middle-aged or older people with heart disease that produces a form of heart block. These are the people who often need a pacemaker to maintain their heart rate at adequate levels.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My wife and I will be trying to have children in the near future. We need to know whether taking regular hot baths can affect a man's fertility by killing sperm.

DEAR READER: Studies show that heat will decrease the number of live healthy sperm cells. That will include hot baths. It includes jockey-type shorts that prevent normal descent of the testicles away from the body to maintain a lower body temperature. It includes a varicocele (varicose vein to the testicles that prevents normal temperature control.)

Zimmer returns to Boston to watch horse racing

BOSTON (AP) — Don Zimmer was back in Boston, but the former Red Sox manager, now skipper of the Texas Rangers, did not head for Fenway Park. He went to Suffolk Downs for thoroughbred horse racing.

The major league baseball players' strike has made a parttime vacationer of Zimmer, who said he came to Boston to visit his daughter, Donna Mollica, an airline flight attendant.

She had to fly to Las Vegas, but was due back, and the Zimmer family planned to remain a few days and visit with her family, Zimmer said.

"To tell the truth, I told her that I really didn't have time to talk with her, anyway," Zimmer said Wednesday. "We flew in late, and I told her I was hoping to make the second race at Suffolk. I made it. Yep, I lost," he said.

"This is my life, and I love it. I care about my family and baseball. I like the horses and the dogs a little. I know I've received some criticism because I come out to the tracks. But that doesn't make me a bad person," he said.

Zimmer owns a three-year-old horse named

Zimmer that races in Cleveland and has earned more than $9,000 this year, he said.

He's been mixing work with vacationing during the strike, he said, and will check out the Mexican League if the strike continues.

"I've been watching our clubs in the minors," he said. "I spent two days in Florida when the strike was called. But since then I've driven from my home to Shreveport, then from there to Dallas, and from Dallas to Tulsa and Wichita and back.

"It's been interesting, and traveling by car reminds me of the old days in the minors," he said.

He may be working out of the Southwest, but he hasn't become the complete cowboy. "One of my coaches (Tommy Helms) has been trying to get me to wear boots and blue jeans, but I don't think anybody likes a fat cowboy," Zimmer said. "The thing that I do like is that the Texas heat isn't nearly as bad as I thought it would be. It's a dry heat."

Zimmer wonders what effect the strike will have on the Rangers, who were 11 games over 500 and 1 1/2 games out of first place when the strike began.

"During the first week, I had a lot of ideas of what I thought I could do with players when it ended," he said. "But those ideas won't work anymore, so I had to come up with some new ideas.

"If it goes much longer, I'll have to come up with more ideas. It's hard figuring out what to do."

Hearings set for pro sports studies

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House Judiciary Subcommittee will begin hearings July 14 into the effect of antitrust laws and policy on professional sports, including baseball's exemption from the antitrust laws.

"The hearings will take up a task left unfinished by the Select Committee on Professional Sports in 1977," said Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., chairman of the Subcommittee on Monopolies and Commercial Law. "That committee recommended that the antitrust treatment of professional sports receive further study."

Rodino said the first round of hearings would hear from league officials of the major professional team sports, club owners, representatives of players associations and the media.

Besides baseball's long-time exemption from the antitrust laws, Rodino said the hearings would deal with league restraints on the purchase and sale of franchises, territorial restrictions on the movement of franchises, restraints on players' entry into a league and on their mobility between teams and the antitrust aspect of sports broadcasting. A 1961 law granted an antitrust exemption to permit a league to sell the television rights to all its games as a package.

A spokesman for Rodino said the hearings will look into the control of owners in the professional leagues. The spokesman added that if the hearings lead to Congressional legislation, the new laws could change the ways owners operate leagues.

Woman wins lawsuit after Masters mishap

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — An Oklahoma woman and her husband were awarded $75,000 in damages in connection with an accident at the 1978 Masters golf tournament.

A Richmond County jury made the award Wednesday to Mary P. Silas and C.J. Silas after a two-day trial of a 1980 lawsuit in which Mrs. Silas claimed she broke her leg and suffered permanent injuries when she tripped on a television wire laid across a designated walkway at the 1978 tournament.

The jury first awarded Mrs. Silas $55,000 from CBS television and her husband $20,000 from the Augusta National Golf Club, the two defendants in the suit.

Amarillo rallies for 4-3 win

By The Associated Press
A single and a bases-loaded walk in the ninth inning gave the Amarillo Gold Sox two runs and a 4-3 come-from-behind Texas League baseball victory over the San Antonio Dodgers Wednesday night.
In other Texas League action, El Paso beat Midland, 6-2. Shreveport defeated Arkansas 5-2, and Tulsa edged Jackson, 2-1.
With Amarillo trailing 3-2 in the ninth inning, James Steele singled and moved to second on a grounder by Aaron Cain. Frank Castro singled, driving in Steele. The next two batters were walked, forcing in the winning run.

Dave Dravecky, 7-3, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Tom Niefenfuhr, 8-1.
The El Paso Diablos collected 11 hits and took advantage of three errors by the Midland Cubs to take a 6-1 victory.
The winning pitcher was Tim Cook, 6-2. Jim Rothford had a two-run homer, a triple and a single in four plate appearances as the Shreveport Captains beat the Arkansas Travelers, 5-2.

Lloyd, Mandlikova post semifinal wins

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Pam Shriver was outplayed by Chris Evert Lloyd in the Wimbledon women's singles semifinals Wednesday and then explained why she wants her conqueror to win the tournament.
"I think it means a lot to Chris to win this time," said Shriver, who was beaten 6-3, 6-1.
"She's 26, and it would be a great way for her to finish before fading out of tennis. Then maybe she could start a family, which I know she wants to do. I'm rooting for her."
Lloyd, who has played in seven Wimbledon singles finals and won only two of them, faces the remarkable Hana Mandlikova in Friday's final.
The 19-year-old Czechoslovakian won a bitterly contested baseline slugfest with Martina Navratilova to post a 7-5, 4-6, 6-1 victory in the other semifinal.

Mandlikova, the reigning French and Australian champion, served brilliantly to outlast the 24-year-old Navratilova, winner here in 1978 and 1979.
"The final is all in Hana's hands," said Shriver. "If she plays a good match, she will win because she has an advantage on grass, but if she plays only a fair match, and Chris plays it as smart as I know she will, then Chris will win it."
Shriver said that losing the last three Wimbledon finals will be a motivating factor for Lloyd.
"I think Chris really wants to win this final and go out in a blaze of glory," Shriver said. "It has to be a fairy tale. To come out a loser in four straight finals would be sad."
Lloyd watched some of the Mandlikova-Navratilova semifinal and was impressed with the way Mandlikova played.

"Hana certainly played well. She has all the shots," said the top seed. "She can be brilliant, but is a bit moody. On her off days she can lose to a number of players."
However, Lloyd refused to comment on Friday's match.
"I don't want to look ahead. It has hurt me too much in the past," she said.
In contrast, Mandlikova was looking forward to the arrival of her parents — former Olympic sprinter Vilem Mandlik and his wife, Hana — from Czechoslovakia.
"They went to watch today's match on television near the German border," she said. "I had told them on the telephone that I wanted them to come over if I reached the final, and they will be here," said the delighted Czechoslovakian teen-ager.

Baseball talks resume under pessimistic cloud

NEW YORK (AP) — The baseball strike marked its three-week anniversary today. And although stalemated negotiations have resumed, both sides agreed there was no cause for optimism.
The casualty count added 10 more canceled games today, pushing the total to 261 since the strike began June 12. And from the tone of both sides' observations Wednesday, when talks resumed for the first time this week, the toll will go considerably higher.
"Am I optimistic?" management representative Ray Grebey asked — rhetorically — following the three-hour session. "No."
It was a position with which Marvin Miller, executive director of the striking Major League Players Association, could not argue. "If Mr. Grebey said there was no progress," Miller began. "I find nothing to disagree with there."
Management used Wednesday's session to alter certain aspects of their last proposal on compensating teams who lose ranking free agents in the re-entry draft — the only issue in the strike.

The major revision involved the formula used for determining the number of Type B or second-level free agents who would require professional player compensation. Type B free agents are identified as those falling between the top 25 and 40 percent statistically of all available re-entry draft players. Type A players fall in the top 25 percent.
Under the revised plan, a limit of eight Type B players would require compensation in the form of a professional player and that number could be reduced based on the number of Type A players (all of whom would require compensation) available. The number of Type A players in the draft would be subtracted from 12 (reduced from last week's 14) to produce the number of Type B's requiring compensation. For example, if there are nine Type A's, then three Type B's would generate compensation. If there is one Type A, then eight Type B's would require compensation.

Miller was unimpressed.
"They revised their formula ever so slightly," he said. "The gap is so wide it defies my vocabulary to describe it."
Grebey agreed with the latter comment, too. "There are wide differences between us still," the management representative said.
Still the two sides agreed to return to the bargaining table today for yet another round of talks. "You keep hoping in conversation that as a result they'll go back and re-think the issue," Miller said.
The absence of a quick settlement eliminated any chance that the Fourth of July holiday weekend games could be salvaged.

Saturday morning television reserved for Wimbledon

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer
If NBC-TV has its way, "Breakfast at Wimbledon" will be a brunch.
For the third straight year, NBC will televise the men's singles final from the famed All-England Club live for six hours Saturday, beginning at 9 a.m. EDT.
"Ever since we went to this concept two years ago, we have desperately wanted a long men's final — a real exciting match," said Geoff Mason, executive vice president of NBC Sports and producer of the Wimbledon telecasts. So far, the event has been even better than he would have dared dream.
"Two years ago, we had Roscoe Tanner, who was seeded fifth, in the finals and we were dreading that Bjorn Borg would wipe him out in three quick sets," Mason remembered.
Instead, Borg, the Swedish "machine," was extended to five sets before pulling out a 6-7, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 victory.
"Last year was John McEnroe," Mason said. Last year was a classic, considered by many tennis observers to be the greatest final ever staged on the hallowed grounds of the All-England Club. It was a blockbuster, a Center Court battle that thrilled television audiences, made NBC executives ecstatic and sent the rival networks — ABC and CBS — searching for another Borg-McEnroe clash.

More than 15 million Americans woke up early to watch the precision shot-making Swede take on the brash New Yorker. They saw the world's top two players slugging it out from the baselines, counter-punching with drop shots and dinks, smashing volley after volley, racing from one side of the court to the other to make spectacular saves.
In the end, Borg prevailed 1-6, 7-5, 6-3, 6-7, 8-6. But McEnroe also walked off the court a winner in the hearts of everyone who witnessed his heroic fight as he fought off seven match points, repeatedly clawing his way back from the brink of defeat to carry the match to its pulsating conclusion.
NBC also was a winner.

Traveler's travail

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Some air lines offer benefits to frequent travelers — unlisted reservation numbers, that sort of tidbit. These are deserved. Frequent travelers, these days, get few breaks.

The few they get are often short-lived. Have you tried to find a road map at a filling station lately? You're lucky to find an attendant at a filling station. Both have become as rare as the snail darter.

Or take wash-and-wear shirts. These were once a blessing. Rinse one in the motel sink and hang it over the tub on a wooden coat hanger. That small convenience has long since ended.

It ended when they took the hooks off the coathangers. If this is a conspiracy, it is, in turn, the dream of every frequent traveler that someone will discover a use for a hookless coathanger and they will all be stolen.

It seems glamorous, doesn't it, spending half your time on the road, traveling to America's less-traveled places, meeting the people, discovering their regional folkways and customs, all expenses paid. And glamorous it certainly is, but wearying.

That was my assignment the past five years, as a reporter. I have no regrets. It is given to few Americans to see their country that close up. The view is rich, the discomforts rewarded.

If you should choose such a life, though, be forewarned: the travail of the traveler doesn't end with uncharted by-ways and hookless coathangers. (Not to mention one-handed showmen; what was wrong with "hot" on the left and "cold" on the right?)

The travail of the traveler continues all along the Interstate Highway system and off it, north and south, east and west.

Now there is a blessing, the Interstate Highway system. (At least, it is widely considered to be.) But north and south? East and west? Cast your gaze on those green signs and try to divine which is which.

You get off at your appointed exit and want to go, say, north. The exit ramp divides. You must choose. Quickly.

Strangers seem to be the last considered when signs are put up.

Let him get through the airport frieker without removing his watch, belt buckle and class ring, let him find the promised rent-a-car actually there, get him in a motel with a dial-out phone and a working ice machine, and you will see a satisfied man.

Killers bypassed thousands of dollars in triple slayings

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Three gunmen who shot down three men gangland-style at a local bar bypassed "several thousands" of dollars carried by the victims, according to a homicide detective.

Lt. I. L. Alardin said Wednesday that investigators had ruled out robbery as a motive for the triple slaying because no effort was made by the gunmen to take "several thousands" of dollars found on the three dead men.

However, Alardin would not elaborate on police theories about the motive for the killings.

Witnesses told police that three armed men walked into Jeanie's Bar late Tuesday night and fired at least 13 shots, killing Daniel Fuentes Martinez, 50, Olivido Ortiz, 44, and Ramiro Ortiz, 36.

Alardin would not say whether Laredo police suspect the killings were narcotics-related, but in response to a question he said that the federal Drug Enforcement Agency had been consulted. "That angle has been covered," he said.

"We've been in contact with several cities for background information," he added.

Martinez and Olivido Ortiz were identified as living in Corpus Christi, and although Ramiro Ortiz had a Laredo address, he had moved to this border city recently, the detective said.

"The case is still under investigation," Alardin said. "We're checking several motives."

Justice of the Peace Raul Vasquez, who pronounced two of the victims dead at the bar, said officers found at least 13 shell casings on the floor. He said it appeared that at least three different weapons were used in the slayings.

Ramiro Ortiz was still alive after the shooting, but died later at a Laredo hospital.

Alardin said police interviewed several witnesses who were inside the bar when the three men walked in and opened fire.

Ag economists say livestock prices will rise

By DON KE (DALL)
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department economists continue to forecast that livestock prices will keep edging up in the second half of the year.

"Higher livestock prices will be encouraging to cattle feeders, but significant expansion is not likely until more is known about 1981 crops," the department's Economic Research Service said Wednesday.

"This year's crops are projected to be much larger than 1980's drought-reduced harvests. The acreage seeded to corn this spring is likely to about match a year ago, while soybean plantings are slightly smaller."

The analysis was in a summary of an agricultural outlook report to be issued later this month.

Meat production is declining, and that has helped boost livestock prices. Hog prices currently are in the "low $50s per hundredweight, up from a $41 winter average," it said.

Prices of fed cattle have increased less sharply, the report said, but at midyear were running about $70 per 100 pounds for Choice-grade steers on the Omaha, Neb., market.

"In the second half, pork production will continue about a tenth below year-ago levels," the report said. "Beef output will likely be a little larger than last summer and fall — pushed up by larger fed-beef production, particularly in late summer.

"Broiler production will be 10 percent larger than last summer, when prolonged heat waves reduced output. By fall, production will be up about 5 percent from a year ago."

With wet fields and delays in planting this year's feed grain crops and soybeans, the prospective feed supply and use situation "has tightened somewhat in the past month" from earlier indications, the report said.

"Still, if the weather favors higher yields, feed production will be up substantially" from last year. "Exports of grain will remain strong, but a large harvest may ease feed costs in the fall and winter, just as consumer demand is rising with an improved economy."

The report indicated little change from prospects a month ago for net farm income in 1981, forecast at between $22 billion and $27 billion, compared with $22 billion in 1980.

However, as previous reports have indicated, economists do expect farm income to increase modestly from last year.

"Although interest rates may ease in coming months, farmers should not expect their borrowing costs to fall as much as the moderate decline expected for the prime rate — just as agricultural rates did not rise as much as the prime did during the spring," the report said. "Agricultural interest rates are generally less volatile than the prime rate."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Butter production declined slightly in May, but the nation's output of cheese and non-fat dry milk continued to edge higher, the Agriculture Department says.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said Wednesday that butter production in May was about 116.2 million pounds. That was a decline of less than 1 percent from almost 116.9 million pounds in April and also down slightly from May of last year.

Meanwhile, production of American-type cheese rose 7 percent to 253.5 million pounds in May from 237.5 million in April. Production was up about 6 percent from a year earlier. Non-fat dry milk output was reported at 135.3 million pounds, up 10 percent from April but about the same as a year earlier.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hot weather is raising speculation about grain crops in the Soviet Union.

The Agriculture Department said Wednesday that generally hot and dry conditions have prevailed in important rain areas of the Eastern Ukraine, North Caucasus and Lower Volga the past few weeks.

Amtrak wins battle of survival

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a frontal attack by the Reagan administration, Amtrak is a survivor of the battle of the budget, but the victory couldn't have come without the help of some staunch Reagan loyalists.

While the administration wanted to cut Amtrak's subsidies next year to $613 million, the House and the Senate recently approved $735 million after strong pressure from congressmen who have trains running through their states.

The budget battle not only demonstrated Amtrak's ability to withstand the attack from the White House, but it also put focus on the pressures and compromises that often shape legislation and decisions on Capitol Hill.

"A great many members of Congress had Amtrak trains running through their states," said one House transportation subcommittee staffer interviewed this week. "And I don't think many of the members wanted to be blamed for the trains no longer running."

The dilemma clearly left some senators, such as Alabama Republican Jeremiah Denton, in a quandary. Denton, a fiscal conservative and loyal supporter of Reagan's budget cuts, also faced stacks of letters from constituents fearing their train, the "Southern Crescent," might be scrapped.

"He wanted to support the president but also support a passenger railroad system," explained Donald Ubben, an assistant to Denton.

Saving the sport of wild trout fishing

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer

CLEAR CREEK, Colo. (AP) — Not so many years ago, a good fisherman could wade into this foaming stream west of Denver and fill his creel before noon.

A fisherman on Clear Creek nowadays is more likely to hook up with a traffic jam on U.S. Highway 6 than he is to catch his limit, and he must watch for broken bottles and tin cans when he steps into the chilly water.

Clear Creek, fortunately, is an exception rather than the rule in the Rocky Mountain region, where fishing is more popular than ever. But some of the area's famed trout streams are being polluted or dwindled to dribbles in the dry months when developers and vacationers make impossible demands on them.

State wildlife officials are fighting back with policies aimed at ensuring that fishing for wild trout does not become an endangered sport. These include no-kill or limited-kill regulations, limitations on size, periodic closures of certain areas and bans on fishing with bait, permitting only flies and lures.

Utah, for the first time ever, is limiting anglers to a catch of only two trout longer than 13 inches. "Perhaps the fish are as numerous now, but the number of people fishing is so much greater," said

Barbara Hansen of the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources.

Both Montana and Wyoming are considering catch restrictions of a half-dozen trout or fewer in some areas, with only one fish over 20 inches allowed — a marked change in a region where 50-trout limits once were common.

In Colorado, the state Wildlife Commission is considering an unprecedented "wild trout policy" that would implement many of the new policies but also discontinue stocking hatchery fish on selected streams.

State fish manager Ed Kochman said the proposed wild-trout policy is opposed by fishermen who think the answer to any trout problem is to add more hatchery fish.

But many fishing experts now believe that stocking can backfire in wild trout streams, reducing rather than increasing the number of trout because hatchery fish compete for space and food with wild trout.

A study on Montana's Madison River indicated the trout population increased by 180 percent when stocking was halted for two years, according to state fisheries chief Art Whitney.

Kochman said Colorado would continue to stock reservoirs to accommodate fishermen who want to keep their catch, but the state also wants to offer the "high-quality experience" of fishing for the more elusive wild trout even if the fish have to be tossed back in the stream.

The answer, Kochman said, is to expand the state's no-kill policy known as "catch-and-release" and limit the number of fish to be caught and kept in other areas.

"It's a challenge," he said. "Since the mid-'60s we've doubled the number of fishing licenses (to more than 600,000) and funds are harder and harder to get."

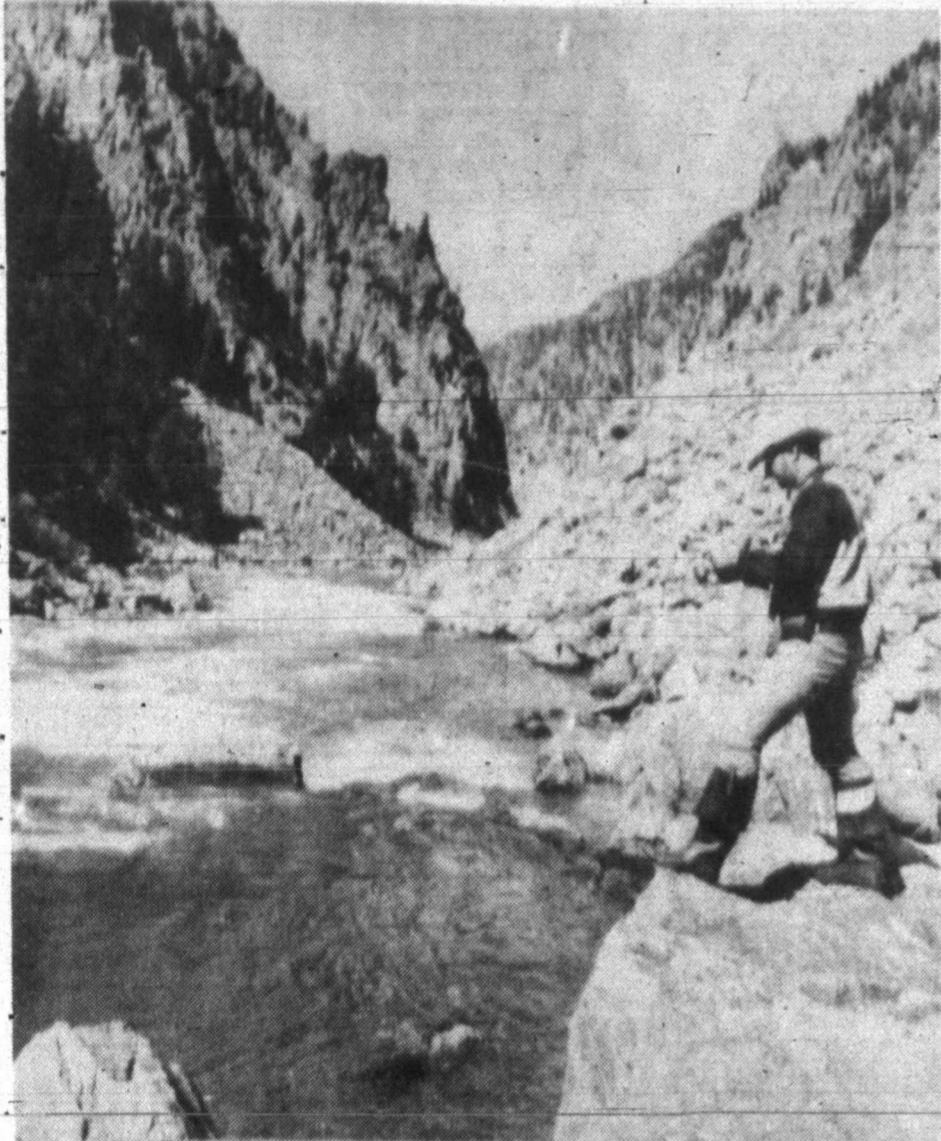

Barry Nehring, a biologist with Colorado's Division of Wildlife, said some streams that historically have had a flourishing trout population have felt "an extreme impact" in recent years.

Among the reasons, Nehring said, are the big increase in the actual number of fishermen and improved fishing techniques.

"It used to be rare to find a really good fly fisherman," he said. "Now there are thousands of them."

Nehring said the "catch-and-release" policy may be the best answer for many streams. He said trout are larger and more abundant in catch-and-release stretches than in open waters just yards downstream.

Dan Belsey, executive director of the Colorado chapter of Trout Unlimited, said wild trout are more spirited than hatchery stock and are more likely to grow to the 14-inch-and-up size prized by most fishermen.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN FISHING. This fisherman is trying his luck in the Colorado River of central Colorado. It, like many streams and rivers in the area, is beginning to show the effect of increased use by growing numbers of fishermen. Employee of Oklahoma's state treasurer suspended

By RON JENKINS
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — State Treasurer Leo Winters says he has suspended his long-time chief cashier after discovering the state treasury is short $87,000 in cash as the result of an elaborate check-issuing scheme.

An investigation by the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation was continuing today. No charges have been filed in connection with the case.

Winters told reporters the cashier, Betty Kime, was suspended Wednesday after explaining to him that she allegedly took funds for her personal use and covered the missing cash with checks when it came time for an audit.

The treasurer said the shortage was confirmed Wednesday after he received a tip by telephone Tuesday night. He said he confronted Mrs. Kime with the problem and she told him about the missing money.

Contacted by a reporter, Mrs. Kime, who lives in northwest Oklahoma City, freely discussed the shortage and said she used the money "just for personal and business expenses."

She said she was interviewed by two agents of the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation and was allowed to go home Wednesday afternoon.

Winters said the employee was bonded in the amount of $300,000 and there would be no financial loss to the state.

He said he is confident the $87,000 is the total amount of the cash shortage. It was not known immediately whether any of the $87,000 ever was returned to the treasury.

Mrs. Kime, 43, had been an employee of the treasurer's office since 1969.

She confirmed Winters' account of how the fund shortage occurred, saying it occurred over a period of "five years or something like that."

Winters said his investigation indicated no other employees were involved in the shortage.

Asked about that, Mrs. Kime said, "No, there was not."

Called back later in the day after the case was publicized, she refused to comment further.

Winters said the shortage had gone undetected because the money was taken from the vault, then a check, or checks, were placed with state deposits before an audit to cover the amount of missing funds.

He said there were several checks during the period, including one for $10,000 and one for $17,000.

None of the checks ever bounced, since they would be covered by additional money taken from the treasury, he said.

Winters said the checks were drawn on the business account of Mrs. Kime's husband, Marvin, a plumbing contractor.

The state official said a routine audit Wednesday, before the disclosures, by the office of State Auditor and Inspector Tom Daxon, did not discover the shortage.

Unorthodox program attacks downtown decay

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — So grass is taking over the pavement of your town square, and downtown merchants spend more time playing dominoes than waiting on customers?

Maybe what your city needs is The Main Street Project, which attacks downtown decay with an unorthodox blend of historic preservation and hardheaded business advice like keep dead bugs out of your display windows.

Nostalgia is good for business, say the Texas Historical Commission folks who run Main Street.

The private National Trust for Historic Preservation selected Texas last year as one of six Main Street states, and the historical commission chose Hillsboro, Plainview, Seguin, Eagle Pass and Navasota as the first cities to benefit.

"This is where we think preservation is right now. We are moving away from the time when you pickled buildings and made museums of them. We've pickled all we need. ... We are now at the stage where economic vitality is what makes preservation go," commission director Truett Latimer said in an interview.

Five cities of under 50,000 population will be selected each year through 1990, and 100 communities have shown interest in being picked for 1982.

Unlike most government efforts, Main Street does not throw tax dollars at a problem.

"Primarily, it's technical assistance. ... We are helping them help themselves," Latimer said.

Latimer's budget includes no funds earmarked for Main Street, and he makes do with the staff he had before. He does seek foundation grants, however, and has begun asking corporations to donate $1,000 a year for three years.

A city picked for Main Street takes on a bunch of responsibilities, including hiring a project director and persuading businessmen to cooperate. Then there's the effort of talking lenders into offering low-interest loans for restoring the facades of historic buildings in the business district.

What a city gets is plenty of expert advice, with the commission and the National Trust for Historic Preservation footing the bill.

There are parking experts, restaurant experts, marketing experts, architects, historians and tourism consultants, plus assigned helpers from 25 state agencies.

Cities also share experiences and ideas. The Main Street Newsletter for June advised merchants that better window displays mean a better downtown image.

"Dead insects in windows are an immediate 'turn-off,'" said one tip.

Top objectives of Main Street include "visible change" in downtown appearance, organization of a strong downtown association, reduction in downtown vacancies and nomination of downtown areas to the National Register of Historic Places.

"We try to teach them the same things that have made the malls successful and apply the same principles to downtown," said Latimer.

He readily admits that the "bottom line" is different for the historical commission and Main Street businessmen.

"We think the bottom line is the retention of most of the basic fabric of many of the great downtowns that exist throughout the state and include late 19th Century and early 20th Century architecture. ... For the Main Street people, the bottom line is increased business, increased profits," Latimer said.

Often, he said, it doesn't take much to return a building to its turn-of-the-century appearance.

"Many times, buildings have been 'slipcovered,' and it's just a matter of removing the slipcovers — restoring windows, repointing the brick and doing some painting," he said.

Although Main Street didn't get started in Texas until early this year, Latimer says each of the five local programs already has success stories to tell.

—Eagle Pass has its first active downtown merchants association. The University of Texas architecture school has completed a survey and plans for the historic buildings in the central business district. The second story of M&M Supply is being converted to a 2,600-square-foot apartment at a cost of $12 a foot and will be shown as a model.

—Hillsboro merchants attracted 15,000 visitors with a two-day sidewalk sale and joint promotion. Four historic buildings are in various stages of restoration. Four lenders are making 8 percent loans for rehabilitation. Safeway is building a large supermarket a block from the square as a result of Main Street's efforts.

—Navasota lenders have created a $60,000 loan pool for downtown revitalization, and a Main Street Committee has been organized. A commission architect spends four days a month in Navasota and helped one owner get a tenant for a vacant historic building, which is to be restored.

—Seguin has applied to put its entire central business district in the National Register of Historic Places, which would enable building owners to take large tax deductions for restoration expenses. Two buildings are being rehabilitated, and four new businesses have located downtown.

—Plainview has a new downtown merchants' association, which sponsored a Downtown Day that doubled sales for at least one store. The Texas Tech architecture school has completed a survey of historic downtown buildings, and Plainview is seeking a National Register designation. Four lenders have established a $100,000 facade loan fund.

Clerical error leads to 'premature' release

DALLAS (AP) — An elderly arsonist who can neither read nor write is having trouble grasping why he must return to his prison cell because a Texas Department of Corrections records clerk couldn't add.

Larry D. Eddings had served less than one month of his six-year sentence when he walked out the prison gates May 13 with $200 in his wallet and discharge papers in his hand.

Embarrassed TDC officials, who discovered a records clerk had erroneously calculated the time Eddings had served, issued a bulletin for his arrest Tuesday and on Wednesday Longview police found the 61-year-old man relaxing at his home on the city's southside.

"He didn't offer any resistance, but he was quite surprised and taken aback that something was out of line regarding his release," Kennedy said.

"He thought he'd been honestly released, and he had been very happy about it," said Longview police spokesman Tom Kennedy. "There he was sitting on the front porch enjoying life, having no idea anything was amiss."

"No one explained. They said I was released through a mistake," a dumbfounded Eddings said. "I didn't break out, I didn't run away. They gave me a discharge that was signed by the warden, which his name is Mr. (W.E.) Estelle, and I also had all my papers that said I was free."

"My discharge ain't no good?" he asked. "It's signed by the warden and he's in charge, ain't it?"

Kennedy said police couldn't explain to Eddings because TDC officials would not explain the matter to them.

"They're pretty tight-lipped. I guess there are some pretty red faces down there," said Kennedy.

Eddings had been convicted of arson and sentenced to prison in 1977 for setting fire to the garage of his Waco home, said Waco police detective Wanda Bass. No one was hurt in the blaze at the house she said had been insured for $12,000.

Eddings was free on bond while he appealed the conviction, but TDC spokesman Rick Hartley said records showed — wrongly — that Eddings was in jail the entire time.

Hartley said when Eddings reported to Huntsville on April 15 to begin serving his time, his records showed he had almost finished the sentence.

"The chaplain come and told me I'd be getting out on the 13th (of May). I sat down with 'em, and there was a man there to help me because I can write my name, but I can't read too good, I'm not educated," said Eddings.

"It's sad that a mistake was made, but he was sentenced for violating a state law and he still has time he owes the state," said Hartley. "We have no other choice."

"I have a janitary service and I don't have no time to notify the peoples," he said. "They're going to think the worst in the world of me now."

New prexy at UT-Tyler

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — University of Texas regents chose Dr. George F. Hamm, a vice president of Arizona State University, as president of UT-Tyler on Wednesday.

The university said the date on which Hamm will assume the presidency will be determined later. Until then, John R. Sawyer, vice president for fiscal affairs, will continue as acting president.

Hamm succeeds Dr. James H. Stewart Jr., who resigned the UT-Tyler presidency.

"We are delighted with the selection of Dr. Hamm and pleased that he has accepted our offer. He will bring strong academic and administrative credentials to UT-Tyler. We are fortunate to have him and look forward to working closely with him in the years ahead," said regents Chairman James L. Powell.

Hamm has been vice president for student affairs and professor of education at Arizona State since 1969.

He holds a Ph.D. degree in counseling and a master's degree in psychology from the University of Wyoming and a bachelor's degree in psychology from South Dakota State University.

His name was one of three presented by an advisory committee composed of regents, UT-system administrators, presidents of other UT campuses, UT-Tyler faculty members and students.

UT-Tyler was created in 1979 and has about 2,000 students in upper-level and graduate courses.

Oil field anti-theft program underway

Texas lawmakers and oil and gas officials have initiated a statewide anti-theft program aimed at combating thieves that steal an estimated $100 million worth of oil field equipment yearly in the United States.

Officials from six oil and gas trade organizations put into effect Wednesday a theft reporting system where individuals can call collect to report a theft or information regarding a theft. The telephone number is (817) 723-1114. Prompt reporting of an oil field theft increases the chance of getting the property returned by 10 fold.

This is the first statewide reporting system for equipment stolen from the oil patch.

This reporting system — coupled with the passage of two new laws by the 67th Texas Legislature and signed into law by Governor William P. Clements — was devised to stop the growing crime wave in the oil patch.

The new laws increase the penalty for stealing oil field equipment and require more detailed record keeping on the sale and exchange of used oil field equipment.

The theft-reporting system will be based in Wichita Falls.

After the information regarding the theft has been taken, the proper law enforcement officials and area news media will be notified.

Several associations have established a reward program of up to $2,500 for the arrest and conviction of a person or persons who have stolen oil field equipment.

The organizations involved in the theft reporting system include the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association in Austin; North Texas Oil and Gas Association in Wichita Falls; West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association in Abilene; Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association in Amarillo; Permian Basin Petroleum Association in Midland and the Petroleum Committee of East Texas Chamber of Commerce in Longview.

These organizations urge land owners and royalty owners to take note of suspicious-looking vehicles or persons on oil and gas leases, and report these sightings via the anti-theft telephone number.

The two new laws state:

Individuals whose primary business is dealing in used oil and gas equipment must keep records when they obtain used equipment. These requirements include name and address of dealer; serial number, if any; kind, make, size, weight, length and quantity of the used materials purchased or acquired by exchange; date obtained; name and address of seller or person who exchanged the materials; the location of the property at the time of sale or exchange; license number of vehicle used to transport the item to the dealer; and the driver's license number of the seller of person who exchanged the materials. These records must be kept for two years. Failure to comply could result in a fine of not less than $500 per violation.

Theft of oil and gas equipment or petroleum itself, regardless of price, was raised from a third degree felony to a second degree felony. Previously, theft of material worth less than $10,000 was a third degree felony. A third degree felony in Texas is punishable by two to ten years in prison and a fine of up to $5,000. A second degree felony is punishable by two to twenty years in prison and a fine of up to $10,000. This law does not increase the minimum penalty for oil field thieves. It does, however, give prosecutors more discretion concerning the punishment which can be sought. The revision also simplifies the law by removing the need to establish the precise value of the material stolen.

Farm commodity price index dropped in June

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite some improvement in the livestock market, the government's overall price index for farm commodities dropped last month, largely because of lower prices for grain and soybeans.

The Agriculture Department said Tuesday that the price index declined 0.7 percent in June but still averaged 11 percent higher than a year ago.

Officials said lower prices for wheat, soybeans, corn, hay and lettuce led the decline.

However, higher prices for hogs, tomatoes, potatoes, broilers and turkeys helped offset the decline for the other commodities, the department's Crop Reporting Board said.

Meanwhile, the prices farmers pay to meet expenses rose 0.7 percent from May and averaged 10 percent above a year ago. Higher prices for farm equipment and family living items contributed most to the increase during the month, while lower prices were reported for feed and fuel, the report said.

According to the preliminary June figures, which are based mostly on mid-month averages, prices of meat animals as a group rose 3.3 percent from May. The index was 4.7 percent above a year earlier.

Prices of food grains as a group, including wheat and rice, dropped 6.4 percent from May. The index was up 2.6 percent from a year ago.

The June index for oil-bearing crops, including soybeans and cottonseed, declined 4.2 percent from May but still was 28 percent above a year ago.

Vegetable prices at the farm dropped 10 percent from a month earlier, with lower prices for lettuce, celery and onions accounting for most of it, the report said. Higher prices for tomatoes partially offset the decline. Compared with a year ago, the overall index was up 4 percent.

Department economists predict retail food prices will go up an average of about 10 percent this year, compared with an 8.6 percent increase in 1980, the smallest one-year gain since 1977.

After sagging earlier this year, livestock prices are expected to move up gradually and help boost overall food prices in the second half of 1981, compared with their relatively slow gains in the first half.

Farm prices in June averaged 141 percent of a 1977 base price average now used for comparison, according to the preliminary figures.

The June parity ratio was 62 percent, down one point from May but the same as a year ago.

At 100 percent, the indicator would mean, theoretically, that farmers have the same buying power they had in 1910-14.
