Evelyn Epps named 1982 artist

BY LYNN HUNTER
Managing Editor

Pampa artist Evelyn Epps was named the 1982 artist of the year Thursday night by the Pampa Fine Arts Association during their annual meeting.

Western art sculptor Gerald Sanders of Pampa, the 1980 artist of the year, unveiled a painting of Mrs. Epps's and announced her as the artist to be honored.

Mrs. Epps was born in Sherman, Texas and was graduated from Sherman High School.

She won her first art award in 1936 during the first Texas Centennial when she and classmates were required to enter small paintings in an art show.

She credits her teacher for her interest in art.

"We had art appreciation in school," Mrs. Epps said. "I had a teacher who enjoyed art, and she passed it on to us children."

"I wish they would do that today. We need to encourage our children to get interested in art," she said.

Her exhibit, the only one - "person" exhibit sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association, will probably be scheduled some time in April 1982, according to Betty Henderson, outgoing president of the association.

Mrs. Epps said she will show portraits of "old timer" cowboys in this area, many who homesteaded their land.

"This is what we really need to preserve," she said. "This needs to be recorded. This is our history."

She said her only formal training was four years of home study courses and several art seminars offered in this area.

She has exhibited in an amateur exhibit of contemporary

Texas art at the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts in 1966 and in the Benedictine Art Awards Show in New York in May 1971. The Benedictine exhibit also showed in France.

She won a first place Shriner Painting award in the 1978 Happy Art Show in Happy, Texas and has received several honorable mentions in the Amarillo Tri-State Fair.

In Pampa, she received the Pampa High School Harvester Award in 1968 from head coach Swede Lee for a life-size seven-foot sculpture of the Harvester. She painted backdrops for the Pampa High School musical production "Oklahoma" in 1970.

She has painted Bicentennial murals for the city, has contributed paintings to her church, the Central Baptist Church, for decoration of the parlor, and painted a 26-foot Christmas mural for the church entry way.

She and her husband Lewis have four children, Andy of Dallas, Barbie, Della and Tim, all of Pampa; 10 grandchildren and one great grandson.

In addition to her art work, Mrs. Epps is employed at Panhandle Industrial.

Natalie Reeve is the 1981 artist of the year.

Members of the Pampa Fine Arts Association presented Celanese with a plaque in appreciation of their increased grant to the association this year. Celanese representative Bill Tuke accepted the award. Mrs. Henderson said, "Because of their support, we were able to do some different things this year."

She turned her gavel over to new president Marion Stroup. New board members include Richard Steele, Kay Warner, Greta Arrington and Jerry Lane, all three-year terms; and Darlene Birkes, one-year term.

Choir calms crowd during blackout

HOUSTON — In the midst of a severe thunderstorm and electrical blackout, members of the Pampa High School concert choir performed in an impromptu, unscheduled concert at the San Jacinto Monument Thursday.

The group was touring the historical monument and museum when a sudden, heavy thunderstorm struck, knocking out electricity, and leaving the choir members and other tourists in the eerie dark halls of the landmark.

Asked by monument officials to gather in the lobby until the storm quieted and electrical power returned, the choir took the opportunity to help break the tension by singing, "Dixie."

When choir director Billy Tally's hands dropped to conclude the number, the lights came on.

The choir received a standing ovation from their audience of stranded tourists.

Following the performance, someone in the crowd looked at the sky and commented, "Any more requests?"

Last night, the choir attended the Houston Astros - Cincinnati Reds baseball game in the Astrodome.

Today's agenda includes a trip to NASA Space Center.

The choir will perform this afternoon at the Astroworld Choral Festival, and the day will end with dinner at the famous San Jacinto Inn.

Saturday, the group will head for the Galveston Beach and then will tour Astroworld Amusement Park.

The choir will begin their return trip to Pampa late Saturday.

Police investigate thefts and beer caper

Pampa police are investigating today two unrelated, late-night incidents, involving burglary and theft amounting to about $6,000, officials said today.

At 7:54 a.m. today, Ronnie Cross of Cross's Sheet Metal and Air Conditioning, 101 N. Hobart, reported his business had been burglarized.

Subsequent investigation showed the neighboring business, D & S Suzuki, also was burglarized and two motorcycles stolen.

Lt. Glen Cardin of the Pampa Police Department said he estimated the value of the two motorcycles at from $6,000 to $8,000. Cardin described the stolen motorcycles as one yellow Suzuki, specially built for racing, and one blue Suzuki. Both motorcycles were new, he said.

Cardin said the burglars entered the businesses through the back of the building. He said he did not know if anything had been taken from the sheet metal and air conditioning business.

On a lighter note, police are looking for possibly three white males and two black males in connection with the theft of two 12-packs of beer and two six-packs of beer from two Allsup's stores last night.

Cathy Simms, an employee of the Allsup's at Wilks and Faulkner, reported the first beer theft at 11:35 p.m.

Simms told police two white men entered the convenience store and took two 12-packs of beer and left outside the building, the two men grabbed two beers each and dropped the rest. Before the clerk could get the beer, two black men ran up and took off with the remainder of the two 12-packs.

Almost an hour later, Elizabeth Mata reported for the Allsup's at 300 N. Hobart, that a similar theft had occurred. In this incident, Mata told police one white male entered the store and took two six-packs of beer without paying.

Police said at press time today no suspects have been arrested and the beer had not been recovered.

Brady responding normally after operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House press secretary James S. Brady is reported in satisfactory condition and responding "normally to questions" after a second operation on his bullet-pierced brain.

But Brady's surgeon says it may be a few weeks before the success of the latest operation can be measured.

Richard Ellis, a spokesman at George Washington University Hospital, said Thursday that Brady's vital signs were normal. "He is readily awakened and responds normally to questions," Ellis said.

Dr. Arthur Korbine, who performed both operations on Brady, said that on rounds late Thursday the press secretary was talking and showed "very little difference" on a neurological examination compared with earlier in the week.

"Ultimately, I don't think there will be significant impact on whether he recovers or the degree to which he recovers," Korbine said in an interview with The Washington Star. But he said "there is still the possibility of a significant infection, which could have happened at any point along the way."

Brady, shot in the head in an assassination attempt on President Reagan three weeks ago, underwent 5 1/4 hours of additional surgery Wednesday night and Thursday to close a hole in a brain membrane that had allowed air to leak in from the sinuses. In addition to creating pressure on the brain, outside air can carry bacteria to it.

Pressure inside the skull, if great enough, can injure the brain stem, which controls such automatic processes as breathing.

Korbine said he remains concerned about the prospect of a recurrence should the opening not heal properly.

"I would like to think that we've solved the problem, but I'm not foolish enough to think that is necessarily the case," Korbine said.

Columbia crew passes on key to 'used' spaceship

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

Astronauts John Young and Bob Crippen are passing their "used" spaceship Columbia to a new crew, unofficially ending a three-year association with the craft that often tried their patience before earning their glowing respect.

"I hope you take care of it," Young said Thursday as he and Crippen transferred Columbia's "key" at a news conference in Houston.

The new commander couldn't resist kidding Young, the 50-year-old veteran of five space trips.

"Would you buy a used spaceship from this man?" asked Joe Engle. "It's been driven only by an old guy from Florida, who didn't go more than 20,000 miles an hour, and it has only 900,000 miles on it."

Young and Crippen set the tone for the conference, interlacing a series of jokes and one-liners with their reports of Columbia's "phenomenal" performance on its maiden flight earlier this month.

They had a right to be relaxed and relieved. For all those years they had watched and waited, sweating out one space shuttle problem after another — little technical things at first, then the engines, then the thermal tiles.

The launch date, originally set for March 1979, slipped — and slipped — and slipped.

Finally, two years late, Columbia roared into orbit on April 12. After 54 1/2 virtually flawless hours, Young and Crippen brought it back to a picture-perfect landing on an arid runway in California's Mojave Desert.

The world's first reusable spaceship was back on Earth, to be refurbished and taken up again.

"It worked like a dream all the way," Crippen said Thursday. "John and I just sat back and enjoyed it."

Since their return to Earth, they have been closeted with the experts, discussing the flight in detail. They will be called on for more information, and there will be a trip to the White House and other public appearances.

But when they turned in their pilots' reports and held the news conference at the Johnson Space Center on Thursday, it was an unofficial end of their association with Columbia.

They signified that when they summoned the spaceship's second crew, Engle and Richard Truly, to the stage and presented them with a large gold-painted key with "Columbia" stamped on it.

The second flight is scheduled in September.

Reagan lifts grain embargo against Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today he is lifting the grain embargo against the Soviet Union.

In a statement read to reporters at the White House, the president said he was lifting the embargo "after weighing all options carefully and conferring fully with my advisers."

Read by deputy press secretary Larry Speakes, the statement also referred to Reagan's opposition as a presidential candidate to the embargo and said the decision to lift the ban was delayed out of concern the Soviets might "mistakenly think it indicated weakening of our position."

The embargo was imposed by former President Carter in response to the Soviet military move into Afghanistan.

The Reagan statement began, "I am today lifting the U.S. limitation on additional agricultural sales to the Soviet Union."

The statement said the administration consulted with U.S. allies before lifting the embargo.

During the presidential campaign, Reagan argued that the embargo forced farmers "to bear an unfair burden" for a policy he also contended did little harm to the Soviet Union.

After Reagan took office, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. led those who argued against lifting the embargo while Soviet troops were poised for possible intervention in Poland.

Haig also said the United States will never accept the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

In his statement, Reagan said, "I have determined that our position now cannot be mistaken: the United States, along with the vast majority of nations, has condemned and remains opposed to the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and other aggressive acts around the world.

"We will react strongly to acts of aggression wherever they take place. There will never be a weakening of this resolve."

Reagan's campaign pledge to lift the ban was thwarted by U.S. fears of a possible Soviet intervention in strike-torn Poland, although the president has come under considerable pressure from farm groups.

Published and broadcast reports said the embargo apparently would be phased out gradually, with the Soviets at first allowed to buy U.S. wheat and soybeans but not corn. But Edwin Meese III, the president's counselor, said Thursday, "I don't know how you phase out an embargo."

Agriculture experts say that if the president ends the embargo, one reason could be that there is an abundance of wheat in the United States, compared with other commodities such as corn and soybeans.

If corn is excluded from any easing of the embargo, it probably would be due to the uncertain prospects for this year's U.S. crop.

During his successful campaign for the White House last year, Reagan repeatedly vowed to end the embargo as soon as possible if he were elected.

"I will, when elected, fully assess our national security, foreign policy and agricultural trade needs to determine how best to terminate yet another of the inequitable and ineffective policies of the Carter administration," he said on July 3.

Officials divided on credence of civil rights group's suspect

ATLANTA (AP) — Authorities are split in evaluating information provided by a civil rights leader who says he has identified a "psychopath" responsible for some of the 25 slayings of young blacks here. The FBI says it is "plausible." But a prosecutor says the information will probably "go down the drain" once checked.

Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton, whose office has jurisdiction in 18 of the 25 killings, also was critical Thursday of the attention the FBI was giving to information from Roy Innis of the Congress of Racial Equality. He said "the FBI really gave it more credence" than it deserved.

Meanwhile, missing persons investigators today were searching for a 21-year-old black man who is similar in stature to three of the last four victims.

Jimmy Payne, last seen Wednesday, was described as standing 5 feet 3 and weighing 130 pounds. No decision has been made on assigning his case to the special police task force investigating the deaths because authorities have not determined that it fits the pattern of the other cases, said police spokeswoman Marion Lee.

Innis announced at a news conference in Atlanta Wednesday that CORE had "broken" the case by finding a "psychopath" responsible for at least six of the killings. Innis said CORE had the person under surveillance.

Slaton said the public statements by Innis would probably hurt the police probe "a great deal" if true.

Slaton said he feared that CORE surveillance would tip off the person being watched.

"If I was the killer, I'd figure I was under surveillance" and try to slip away, Slaton said.

At the news conference, Innis produced an envelope he said contained a picture of a suspect and spoke of a witness who allegedly had information about the suspect.

Innis refused to identify the witness or the suspect, but an aide, Larry Mitchell, said Thursday that the suspect was a black man who obtained victims to be killed by whites.

The Miami Herald and the Knight-Ridder News Service reported today that the witness was a 26-year-old woman from Hollywood, Fla., near Miami, who had a drug problem.

"She's a heroin addict," said her brother.

"Everybody knows she doesn't have all her senses about her," said her father.

Her father was quoted as saying he hadn't known that she was being questioned about the Atlanta case.

The Herald and the news service said the woman was charged with murdering her lover in 1979, but claimed self defense and was acquitted.

Both Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown and John Glover, special agent in charge of the Atlanta FBI office, refused comment on earlier reports that Innis's witness was a Miami woman.

The mother of one of the victims said she had identified a photograph shown her by Innis supporters as that of a black man who frequented her neighborhood. But mothers of some of the other victims said they did not believe the controversial civil rights leader's story and said he was trying to salvage his reputation through publicity.

After the news conference Wednesday, Innis met for three hours with Glover, who later called Innis' information "important."

Glover and Innis met again Thursday, joined by Brown. After the meeting, Glover said only that Innis' story "seems plausible."

Brown said afterward, "We had a crucial discussion with Mr. Innis. We're in the posture now of having an investigation into the information."

Brown and Glover refused to say Thursday whether authorities have questioned Innis' witness, but sources close to the investigation said the witness was in the meeting Wednesday with Glover and a representative of Slaton's office.

Set clocks one hour forward!

Sunday at 2 a.m., we return to Daylight Savings Time (DST). However, since most of us don't have the fortitude to wake up for the single purpose of turning our clocks up one hour, it might be wise to do perform the yearly chore before retiring for the evening Saturday.

Remember, one hour FORWARD, not BACK.

Senate plans to define beginning of life are being scaled down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid charges that congressional hearings have been tilted in favor of anti-abortion forces, Sen. John P. East, R-N.C., is scaling back ambitious plans for legislation that would redefine life as beginning at conception.
 East, one of the most conservative freshmen senators, says he is abandoning his plans to have a Senate panel vote on the legislation by the middle of next month.
 "We've got a long way to go," he said. "When these hearings are over, no one will be able to say that they were not complete, fair and exhaustive."
 The prospectively long and brutal battle over the proposal to give fetuses constitutional rights opened Thursday before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee on separation of powers. Six members of a women's liberation group were arrested on charges they disrupted the hearings.
 Among the eight witnesses scheduled to testify today, only Dr. Leon Rosenberg of the Yale University Medical School was considered a supporter of legalized abortion.

Protestants threaten retaliation

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Protestant extremists, angered by Roman Catholic rioting spurred by the death of a jailed Irish Republican Army member, threatened today to retaliate against the IRA and its supporters.
 The threat of a Protestant backlash raised fears of new sectarian violence in this British-run province, where Roman Catholics militants have promised to unleash a campaign of terror if hunger-striker Bobby Sands dies.
 Sands, 27, was reported near death on the 55th day of his hunger strike in Maze Prison, outside Belfast. Officials of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political front, said he could be dead by Monday.
 "The current situation is considered to be of such a serious nature that all personnel of the organizations have been put in a state of readiness," the Ulster Defense Association, largest of the Protestant street armies, said after forging a new alliance with four other rival groups in a secret summit meeting in Belfast.
 The Protestant threat came after nine days of rioting in Belfast, Londonderry and other towns in support of IRA demands to end British rule in this predominantly Protestant province and unite it with the mainly Catholic Irish Republic to the south.
 The Protestant statement was issued by the "Joint Army Council," which was said to represent the UDA and two outlawed organizations, the Ulster Volunteer Force and the Red Hand Commando, as well as the Orange Volunteers and former members of the "B" Specials, a force of police auxiliaries disbanded by the British in 1970 because of their anti-Catholic activities.

Open-ended mortgages permitted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new type of mortgage, which consumer groups say could make foreclosure likely for unwary home buyers, will allow lenders to raise borrowers' monthly payments — or increase their total debt — as often as every 30 days.
 Government officials say they had to open up loan practices for financially strapped savers and loan associations or else already-tight home-loan money would have dried up almost completely.
 "But consumer groups say the new type of mortgage could 'wreak total havoc' in the housing market and could cause people to overextend themselves when buying a home."
 The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, by a 3-0 vote Thursday, authorized federally chartered savers and loan associations to offer open-ended, adjustable-loan mortgages. Under such an agreement, a lender could raise a home-buyer's monthly payments, raise the total of the loan or lengthen the life of the loan in tandem with increases in market interest rates.
 The lender also could lower mortgage payments.
 Market rates, such as the interest on short-term securities, have been highly erratic recently but generally have been moving upward.
 Ellen Broadman, attorney for Consumers Union, said of the bank board's action: "They're turning owning a home into a game of chance" in which many buyers would face foreclosure if interest rates rose quickly.
 However, board members said financially troubled lenders must be given greater flexibility in designing loans if mortgages are to remain available.
 Many S&Ls lost money in the past year or so because they had to pay interest rates as high as 15 percent to attract deposits, while being repaid for older home loans at rates of 6 percent or lower.
 "We simply cannot continue to have savers subsidizing borrowers," said board member Andrew DiPrete. He called

Ratings up after assassination attempt

NEW YORK (AP) — Ronald Reagan's handling of the attempt on his life has boosted his store of goodwill with the public and has pushed his ratings as a person and as a president to their highest points so far, an Associated Press-NBC News poll says.
 As the end of Reagan's first 100 days in office approaches, more than two out of five Americans say he has accomplished more at this point than past presidents.
 The latest AP-NBC News poll is based on telephone interviews with 1,604 adults across the country April 13-14 and was conducted in part for an NBC News special on Reagan's 100 days broadcast Thursday night.
 More than three-quarters of the public — 77 percent — expressed a favorable opinion of Reagan in general, with only 15 percent saying they have an unfavorable view of him. Eight percent were not sure.
 That is 19 points higher than the results of the January AP-NBC News poll, with almost all of the change coming from the ranks of those who were previously uncertain about Reagan. In that survey, 58 percent had a favorable opinion, 18 percent an unfavorable one and 24 percent were not sure.
 Public opinion of Reagan's work as president also surged after the assassination attempt, with much of the boost coming from the ranks of the previously uncertain.
 Sixty-six percent now say Reagan's work is excellent or good, versus 56 percent who said that in the late February AP-NBC News poll. Twenty-two percent said his work has been "only fair," versus 21 percent two months ago. Five percent rated his work poor each month. Seven percent were not sure this month, compared with 18 percent before.
 Reagan's job ratings now stand higher than those given Jimmy Carter in the opening months of his presidency. In the April 1977 NBC News poll, 53 percent rated Carter's work excellent or good overall, and in May 1977 the mark was 61 percent — both below Reagan's current ratings.

Huntsville woman named mother of year

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Mary Frances Park of Huntsville, described as a "genuine Texas mother," has been selected Texas Mother of the Year.
 The selection was announced Thursday by the Texas Mothers Committee Inc.
 Mrs. Park, 64, is a professor of education at Sam Houston State University, and is married to Mance Park, former superintendent of the Huntsville Independent School District.
 The Parks have one son, an attorney in Huntsville.
 "She is extremely proud of her family and her pride can be viewed by the gracious home she prepares," said a letter nominating Mrs. Park for the honor. "It is comfortable (without being pretentious) and she oversees daily preparation of nutritious meals and commendable housekeeping."
 "She is a genuine Texas mother," the nominating letter said.

Death report awaited

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas police said they would wait for a medical examiner's report to decide whether to file charges in the case of a male fetus dropped from a seventh-story hotel window.
 Police Sgt. Tom Sherman said he expected the report, due today, would tell investigators whether the fetus was alive when it was dropped.
 Sherman said a 17-year-old Midland girl was being held for questioning. He said the girl was found in a search of the hotel. Sherman said a doorman found the dead infant about 6:20 p.m. Thursday on the driveway that runs between the hotel and the Southland Life building.
 Officer R. B. Seitz estimated the child was in its fifth or sixth month of development.
 A hotel official said about 1,000 high school students are staying at the hotel during a convention of the Distributive Education Clubs of America.

Texas vote could aid Reagan budget cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — If everybody got the same reaction from their constituents that he did, Texas congressmen will solidly back President Reagan's spending cuts when the proposed budget hits the House floor for a test vote next week, Rep. Phil Gramm, D-College Station says.

"People of my district definitely want to cut the budget," Gramm said, although he stopped short of the prediction several days ago by Gov. Bill Clements that two-thirds to three-fourths of the 24-member Texas delegation will support the president's budget.

"I hope he's right, but I've not had the opportunity to speak to all the members of the Texas delegation yet," Gramm said.

Clements made his prediction after visiting with Reagan Tuesday, at the end of a 2-day stay in the nation's capital during a governors' conference. He said he would "twist some arms" to help win Reagan more votes among the Texas delegation.

The governor had invited the Texas congressmen — most of whom have been back in their districts during the Easter recess — to come to Austin on Thursday to talk about the president's recommendations.

That meeting was scrubbed, however, because of the death of the son of Texas GOP state chairman Chet Upham.

If Clements proved correct on his prediction, at least 16 Texas congressmen would vote for the bipartisan Reagan budget bill introduced by Gramm and Rep. Delbert Latta of Ohio, the ranking Republican on the House Budget Committee.

The Democratic leadership in the house is trying to get support for an alternative budget, offered by Budget Chairman Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., that gives less money for defense than Reagan has asked and restores cuts to social programs axed by the president's proposal.

"How the Texas delegation is going to vote, I don't know. I feel we're going to have strong support — certainly more than half. I'd be delighted if we could reach the total the governor has said are possible," Gramm said.

Eight Texas congressmen and 38 other Democrats have formed a coalition known as the Conservative Democratic Forum that has given Reagan hope of winning his fight in the House.

The Democrats hold a 243-192 edge in the House, but the Republicans are expected to vote as a block for the Reagan plan and 26 of the 46 CDF members would give the GOP the magic 218 votes needed for a majority in the 435-member House.

"I felt when I left Washington that we had about 20 conservative Democrats that were pretty solid (for Gramm-Latta), another 10 strongly leaning our way and another 10 on the fence, so to speak," said Gramm, in a telephone call from a midweek speaking engagement in his district.

Republicans Jim Collins of Dallas, Bill Archer of Houston, Jack Fields of Humble, Tom Loeffler of Hunt and Ron Paul of Lake Jackson will vote yes on the Gramm-Latta bill.

A Texan, Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, is chairman of the CDF; Gramm is head of its budget group; and another Texan, Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, is head of the CDF tax cut group.

Both of them are expected to join Gramm in backing the president's budget proposal, along with the five other Texas CDF members — Sam B. Hall of Marshall, Ralph Hall of Rockwall, Jack Hightower of Vernon, Richard White of El Paso and Marvin Leath of Marlin.

That would account for 13 of the 16-to-18 votes Clements said would be forthcoming.

VICKIE WINS. Vickie Daniel hugs a reporter upon hearing the jury verdict declaring her the legal mother and guardian of her two children by the slain state legislator Price Daniel Jr. Jean Daniel Murph, sister of Daniel, had asked the court to award her custody of the children, claiming Vickie Daniel unfit to care for them since she has been accused of Daniel's murder. (AP Laserphoto)

Daniel to keep children

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — After the longest child custody trial in Texas history, Vickie Daniel was allowed to keep her two youngest children by default — but that was good enough for her.

"I didn't understand what had happened at first," Mrs. Daniel said late Thursday, after jurors voted that neither she nor her sister-in-law, Jean Daniel Murph, should be awarded custody of the children.

But when a child-custody jury makes that ruling, Texas law provides that custody and all rights automatically go to the natural parent — and once that was explained, Mrs. Daniel was a happy woman.

"I am elated," she said, amid congratulatory hugs from spectators and relatives in the packed courtroom. "I'm so happy I'm going to go home and hug my children."

Jurors had deliberated almost two hours before deciding not to name a "managing conservator" for the two young sons Mrs. Daniel bore former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. — a man she is accused of killing.

The jury had three options in deciding custody of Franklin Baldwin Daniel, 3, and Marion Price Daniel IV, 1.

They could have awarded the boys to Mrs. Murph, their aunt; to Mrs. Daniel, their natural mother; or to neither woman — the option they finally chose.

"Say some prayers and take care of those kids," said Mrs. Daniel's attorney, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, as he shook his client's hand.

Haynes said the decision bolstered his "unbroken, unbridled faith in the jury system," and was the "most acceptable verdict for Vickie Daniel and the system."

Under the "neither" ruling, all rights — including visitation — are denied Mrs. Murph and the rest of the powerful Daniel family.

"I think the issue is closed now," said one of Mrs. Murph's attorneys, Andrew Lannie. "I don't foresee an appeal."

Mrs. Daniel has been charged with murder in Daniel's Jan. 19 shooting death. Her trial has been set for October.

Mrs. Murph filed the custody suit after her brother's death. In the resulting six-week trial, she contended her sister-in-law was an unfit mother.

But Haynes portrayed Mrs. Daniel as a woman victimized by a husband who beat and sodomized her, abused her two children from her first marriage, fondled his own son's genitals, smoked marijuana, drank to excess and had a "weird" relationship with his sister.

Witnesses for Mrs. Murph — including Daniel's father, former Texas Gov. Price Daniel Sr. — questioned those allegations and depicted Mrs. Daniel as an emotionally unstable woman who might harm her children.

In closing arguments, Haynes accused the Daniels of filing the custody suit to punish Mrs. Daniel for the shooting.

Initiative and referendum will receive another test in house

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An initiative and referendum proposal that is a far cry from the sweeping measure sought by Gov. Bill Clements has failed its first test in the House.

Needing 100 votes for approval, the constitutional amendment giving voters the right to cut state taxes and limit state expenditures could do no better than 88-51 on Thursday.

Clements had accepted the watered-down I&R proposal as the best that could be gotten through this session of the Legislature and expressed optimism it could be salvaged.

"Hopefully, there'll be an educational process over the next 24 hours. ... I think we'll be more successful next time," Clements told reporters. Asked if he might make some phone calls to help switch votes, the governor said, "I might."

Rep. John Sharp, a Victoria-area Democrat sponsoring the proposal, said he might accept some revisions if that would help.

"It's not terminal but it's on the critical list," said Rep. Gerald Hill, D-Austin, after Thursday's vote.

The measure would allow voters to propose and pass laws cutting state taxes and fixing limits on state spending. An initiative petition would need signatures of 10 percent of the voters in 190 counties before a proposal could go on the ballot. Legislators could override the voters' will by a two-thirds vote.

Rep. Steve Wolens, D-Dallas, objected that the measure did not go far enough.

"Indeed this is not initiative and referendum. Indeed the emperor is not wearing new clothes. We are giving the people not a voice but a whisper with this legislation," Wolens said.

Rep. Frank Collazo, D-Port Arthur, an opponent of I&R, said even Sharp's limited measure could be misused by "some lobby group."

"Johnny Six-Pack or Joe Hardhat are not informed enough to understand the language on the ballot and could come out on the short end," Collazo said.

Sharp replied he was confident the voters had the intelligence to understand issues.

Gov. Bill Clements made initiative and referendum a major part of his legislative program in both 1979 and 1981, citing Californians' use of Proposition 13 to cut their property taxes in 1978.

Some liberal lawmakers favor I&R as a means for correcting what they see as mistakes made by a lobby-controlled Legislature.

Attorney general outlines code for school behavior

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White, who made classroom discipline a keynote of his 1978 campaign, has unveiled an 18-page list of what school officials, parents and students should and shouldn't do.

Among other things, the code says students should not bring guns to school, parents should be sure their children are "properly attired," and school officials should "maintain an atmosphere conducive to good behavior."

The purpose of the code, which is the result of over a year's work, is to provide a statement of the law as it pertains to school life and the rights and responsibilities of our students," White wrote in a preface.

The booklet was released at a Thursday news conference. White was joined by Joe Kelly Butler of Houston, chairman of the State Board of Education.

White said his proposed code is intended to "permit teachers to teach and students to learn."

Butler said copies of the code would be sent to all school districts, where local school boards can adopt it, adopt some of it, or ignore it.

White told reporters the booklet is "designed to let teachers know what their authority" is in the classroom, and help them avoid lawsuits arising from discipline situations.

Students' responsibilities listed in the code include: "Attend all classes, daily and on time," "Be properly attired," and "Obey all school rules."

School personnel should "maintain an atmosphere conducive to good behavior" and "obey district and school policies and regulations," among other things.

House rejects blue law repeal

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton says a "Bible Belt" feeling about Sunday is what killed a bill repealing Texas' 1961 "Blue Law."
Pressure from automobile dealers and department stores might have had something to do with it, too.
House members voted 82-59 on Thursday to table a bill repealing the law that says stores may not sell 42 categories of merchandise on both Saturdays and Sundays. The items include cars, clothing, appliances, furniture and household goods.
Many House members wore buttons, provided by the automobile dealers' lobby, that said "Preserve Our Right To Rest."
"A lot of people are going to have a lot of explaining to do," grumbled Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Dallas, a sponsor of the bill.
Earlier, he had told the House 69 percent of Texans polled by Texas Monthly said they wanted the Blue Law repealed.

Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, another sponsor, called the law "probably the most unpopular law that has ever been on the statutes of Texas."
"Although the law is unpopular, it (the House vote) comes back down to the old Bible Belt question more than anything else... It's that Old South Bible Belt feeling," said Clayton. He said he did not take sides on the bill.
Some legislators' mail ran heavily against repealing the law, but there were questions about how voluntary some of the letter-writing was.
Rep. Froy Salinas, D-Lubbock, said a woman in his district told him her employer, a department store, was pressuring its workers to write letters on their lunch hours.
"These people don't want to compete. ... And they are the same people who are always screaming about free enterprise," said Salinas.

"There was fierce lobbying on both sides," Clayton said. "I had a crew in my office this morning that included representatives of Joske's, Kroger's and Gibson's."
Joske's broke ranks with other major department store chains and lobbied for repeal of the law. Discount houses, which stay open on Sundays but must rope off much of their merchandise, are strong for repeal.
In Thursday's debate, Willis voiced one of the most common complaints about the law, which was passed to protect department stores from discount house competition.

"You can buy a beer on Sunday but you can't buy a baby diaper," Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, defended the Blue Law as "pro-family" and said repeal would provide "more profits for those who are greedy."
"Can you imagine what it is going to be like for people who work as retail clerks to have Sunday dinner on Wednesday? ... If we pass this bill, we are destroying one more part of the family unit by preventing people from being together," Uher said.

Body of Texas pilot recovered

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Authorities have recovered the body of a U.S. Air Force pilot killed when his plane crashed in the Bay of Panama Wednesday, officials said today.
The body of 2nd Lt. Frederick E. Schulz, 23, of Dallas, Texas, was recovered from the water Thursday, they said.
Schulz is survived by his widow, Teresa, who lives here, and his parents, retired U.S. Army Col. and Mrs. Gerhard W. Schulz, of Austin, Texas.
Officials said the plane went down while on a navigation training mission. An investigation has been ordered, they added.

Mother killed, daughter injured, son unharmed

DALLAS (AP) — A mental patient, released from a psychiatric ward to visit her family, critically wounded her daughter and fired at her son with a shotgun, then killed herself as her husband listened on the telephone, police said.

Patricia Rucker was found dead in her home by a neighbor her husband had summoned, said police investigator Bob Irby. She had been shot once in the head.

Wendy Wade, 15, Mrs. Rucker's daughter, was hospitalized in critical condition Thursday with a gunshot wound to the stomach. Her son, Ryan Wade, 9, was treated for powder burns and released.

Irby said the shootings came after Mrs. Rucker, home on a pass from Presbyterian Hospital where she was being treated as a psychiatric patient, saw her husband off to work Thursday morning, ordered her children to their bedrooms and got a shotgun.

"For some reason, she had decided to shoot her daughter," Irby said. "She already had put her son in his room and told him not to come out."

The woman shot her daughter then walked into her son's room and fired twice but missed the boy, he said.

Meanwhile, said the officer, the wounded girl managed to telephone neighbor Dale Harder for help.

Harder went to the Rucker home, he told police, and Mrs. Rucker said the girl was sick and had stayed home from school. Harder then notified the husband, Max Rucker, who called his wife, police report.

When Rucker asked to speak to the girl, Mrs. Rucker put the phone down and apparently shot herself, Irby said.

A neighbor said Mrs. Rucker was "severely depressed" and had been "quite ill for the past several months."

Irby said the woman left a suicide note.

Edison had his bad days too

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Some days, nothing goes right — even for the man who invented the incandescent light bulb, the phonograph and the motion picture.

Those inventions changed the course of history. Think where mankind would be today if Thomas Alva Edison hadn't flopped with cement furniture and the "perpetual cigar."

Those commercial disasters for one of the nation's greatest inventors are being documented by researchers who have begun a 20-year project to compile nearly 3 1/2 million pages of Edison's papers.

"There's a tendency on the part of most of us to romanticize our heroes. We tend to do a cosmetic job, remove the blemishes, but in doing that we lose the human dimension, the real life blood," said Dr. Reese V. Jenkins, director of the $6 million project.

"Some of Edison's inventions were very minor, some that he considered major weren't commercially successful, and some that were successful commercially didn't turn out well for him," the Rutgers University researcher, who holds a Ph.D. in science history, said Wednesday.

One project that failed to light a fire under the public was Edison's "perpetual cigar."

The stogie consisted of a hollow tube and a spring-loaded plunger that pushed a wad of tobacco toward a flame near the mouthpiece.

Then there was a helicopter-like flying machine designed to use kites for lift. There is no evidence that the machine was ever built, said associate project director Leonard S. Reich.

However, Edison's extensive work in production technology was one of his most significant, if least recognized, contributions, Jenkins said.

The holder of 1,093 patents developed a system to mix cement and move it along on a conveyor belt to areas where it was poured.

The cement was also used to build furniture, but that idea "went over like a cement balloon," Reich said.

In the days when $10,000 was considered a fortune, Edison lost $3 million on an iron ore milling venture during the 1890s.

The work of the five-member team is being sponsored by the National Park Service, the New Jersey Historical Commission, the Smithsonian Institution and Rutgers University.

Edison, who lived from 1847 to 1931, was a resident of Menlo Park and had his main laboratory in West Orange.

Two ships will join 'Aggie navy'

GALVESTON — The Texas A&M University System and its Texas Engineering Experiment Station have announced plans to christen two new sailing vessels here Saturday, adding to the research and training capabilities of the "Aggie navy."

Research vessels "Excellence II" and "Quest" are to be formally added to the A&M research fleet in 2 p.m. ceremonies at the Mitchell Campus of Texas A&M University at Galveston on Pelican Island.

The experiment station plans to operate and be a major user of the newly acquired vessels, university officials said.

"Excellence II," a 72-foot steel-hulled vessel, and "Quest," a 48-foot converted yacht, will be used in environmental engineering and oceanographic research, A&M officials said.

The vessels are to work in the Strategic Petroleum Reserve Project being carried out by the experiment station and Texas A&M's Civil Engineering Department.

The new vessels join five others in the Aggie research fleet. In addition to the training ship "Texas Clipper," a converted oceanliner, A&M operates two mid-size craft, the "Rustler" and "Roamin' Empire." Texas A&M's Oceanography Department has the 38-foot "La Mer" in addition to the 174-foot research ship, the "RV Gyrd" which will be involved this summer in attempts to locate the Titanic.

Some nuts and bolts for college freshmen

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Kym Vanderbilt is accustomed to getting A's. She is used to hearing praise for her writing from teachers at Lincoln High School.

So, does the 17-year-old Miss Vanderbilt think she needs a three-week crash course on the finer points of exposition, the mechanics of thinking clearly, the nuts and bolts of the English language?

"God, yes," Miss Vanderbilt said emphatically.

On Aug. 15, Miss Vanderbilt may be among the 200 freshmen reporting for just such a course at Bard College, a small, liberal arts school located at Annandale-on-Hudson. She is an applicant and is still awaiting word on whether she has been accepted by the college.

For the three weeks before the start of fall classes, Bard freshmen will work in small groups, nine hours a day, six days a week, to improve their writing.

There will be one teacher for every 10 students, and each student will be required to write something every day, generally on literature. In the final week, they will write on the subject of justice.

Three times a week, students will have to submit typed papers in "perfect" form, free of any errors. To help them, the "Syntax and Grammar Crisis Center" will dispense advice in the evenings.

Students pay nothing for the summer program; a group of private donors is picking up the tab for their schooling and room and board. They will get no grades, but all freshmen are required to take part.

"The program really came about after years of frustration on our part," said Leon Botstein, Bard's 34-year-old president.

Bard professors are not alone in their frustration. College educators nationwide complain that incoming students lack basic skills.

At Bard, most students score in the upper 500s in the College Board tests, compared with the national average of 423. Even so, Bard administrators offer these quotes from applicants' writings:

"Depending on Russian foreign aid, Greek rebels were faced with tsarist Russia failing to materialize."

"The summer camp I attended has to be credited for a majority of the person I am today."

"As the beginning of my senior year in school grew near, I decided to make the ultimate most of what was to be offered to me."

Botstein said he believes poor instruction on the level of junior high and high school is only part of the problem. Many students seem to suffer from "a fear of using the language wrong," he said.

"There's a lot of fear — papers are written the night before, at the last possible moment. They wing it, tell everybody they winged it and then, when the grade comes in, they tell everybody they didn't try," he said.

Botstein is wagering that by giving students a firm grounding in the use of language, Bard will increase their self-confidence and allow intelligent students to display their intelligence.

"The students are very studious. They work, they underline, etc., but they don't have the self-confidence to say, not that they care about something, but that in caring about something they actually may have something to say," he said.

Botstein recently outlined his plans to 50 high school teachers, guidance counselors and students who have applied to attend Bard.

"Do you like it?" he asked. The answer: "Yes."

"I feel that I personally need this because I'm not able to formalize ideas in the papers I write," said Adam Distenfeld, 18, a student at Brooklyn Friends School. He blamed the "educational system."

Distenfeld was not entirely pleased with the plan. "It sounds like it's going to be much more intense than college actually is.... It sounds like we're not going to have much time to sleep."

Barr Hogen, 18, a student at Poly Prep in Brooklyn, also approves of the course. She said her writing has regressed recently, as "teachers who have been teaching for 50 years" took weeks to grade essays.

Miss Vanderbilt said she had been "molded and shaped into not thinking for myself — writing other persons' opinions, not my own." She said she wants to do more, but lacks the self-confidence.

"It's a little scary," the Yonkers student said. "I've always been told that I have a talent for writing. But what if I go to Bard, and I find that I can't cut it? It's a bit frightening."

Grimm begins work on buffalo carving

BUFFALO GAP, Texas (AP) — Jack Grimm, the wealthy Texas oilman who has searched for practically everything that's missing, used blasting powder and buffalo steak to start his latest project — a 2,000-foot cliffside carving to honor the American bison.

The monument, which will rise 40 feet high and stretch 2,000 feet along the side of a limestone mesa Grimm owns nearby, will be about four times the size of Mount Rushmore when finished, Grimm said. The sculpture is a few miles outside Buffalo Gap which is about 10 miles southwest of Abilene.

More than 200 people attended the dedication ceremonies Thursday afternoon. Grimm, perched atop the mesa for most of the day, started the carving with a black powder blast.

New York sculptor Richard

Burks says the limestone mural will cost about $3 million and take from five to seven years to complete. When finished, he says, it will represent a chronicle of the buffalo's life in North America.

"It's going to be the tragedy of the buffalo," he said. "If it's going to last a million years, you've got to spend a little time on it."

The sculptor said the mural will give the illusion of the "feeling of endless plains of buffalo," and as the carving stretches from left to right, it will show Indians hunting the animals, their near-extinction and return.

Last summer Grimm mounted an expedition to search for the Titanic, which sank in the Atlantic Ocean of the coast of Newfoundland in 1911. He has said he will return in June to scout 14 locations where the ship might have gone down.

In the past, Grimm has financed expeditions to find, among other things, Noah's Ark, The Loch Ness monster and East Texas' legendary monster, "Bigfoot."

He also is putting together an expedition to search for the lost continent of Atlantis.

Hunt family receives apology from SEC

DALLAS (AP) — A special investigation into the financial dealings of the wealthy Hunt family of Dallas led to new internal guidelines for the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission and an apology by an SEC attorney, he testified.

Kenneth Lay, branch chief for the SEC, was the only witness during Thursday's second day of testimony in a suit the Hunt family brought against the federal agency, seeking to thwart the SEC investigation into the family's financial affairs.

Lay told the court he apologized to his superior for the way he handled portions of the investigation, which began as an inspection of Hunt involvement in last spring's worldwide crash of silver prices.

The Hunts want U.S. District Judge Robert Porter to issue a temporary restraining order halting SEC efforts to obtain financial documents from three Dallas banks relating to real estate deals, oil transactions and other family business.

Lay told the court he had been reprimanded by his supervisor for not being careful in reviewing a series of subpoenas that were served on the Dallas banks in February.

Lay said he apologized to Stanley Sporrin, director of the SEC's enforcement division, for allowing the "update letters" to be sent to the Hunts' bankers.

Asked about a statement attributed to him to the effect that "the Hunts' business activities have been operated in private too long, and that is going to end," Lay said he probably made a remark similar to that but said he meant that "certain aspects" of the family's business would be coming under public scrutiny.

TAMPA RED. Shown in 1976 at his home on Chicago's South Side. Hudson 'Tampa Red' Whittaker, famous for his blues music, was buried three weeks ago without so much as a headstone to mark the spot. (AP Laserphoto)

Remembering when 'Tampa Red' sang

By JAMES LITKE
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — With the sun shining warm overhead, they put Tampa Red in the ground without so much as a headstone to mark the spot.

His age was anywhere from 73 to 81 when a heart attack felled him a month ago, and the sparsely attended services seemed a cruel and obscure way for one of the greatest legends of the blues to meet his maker.

But it's likely Red wouldn't have minded — time had passed his music by one and he was in no mood for a revival when the opportunity came.

"The only arm I ever did was to myself. But other than that, I have no regrets. I met a lot of good people," he told an interviewer several years ago. "I ain't gonna tell nobody that I haven't did good in the music business."

His career began spectacularly during the era of "race" music with 78 rpm disc entitled, "It's Tight Like That" and ended quietly almost 30 years ago.

Sadly, both he and his music might have endured. But in the early 1950s disheartened by the deaths of his wife, Frances, and his pianist, Big Maceo Merriweather, Red laid down his guitar and tarting telling his troubles to a bottle.

At the same time, the hard-edged, amplified blues from Memphis and the Mississippi Delta were fast overtaking the music of men like Tampa Red. While many of his finest blues survived, it was through the more modern interpretation of musicians like B. B. King, Elmore James and Little Walter.

His drinking problem had faded by the late 1950s, but so had most of his money and almost all of his desire to play. He left a hospital and somewhat senile and lived for several years with an old friend on the South Side, the two subsisting on meager government checks and what little money dripped in from Tampa's royalties.

When the blues enjoyed a revival during the mid-1960s at college campuses and small clubs across the nation, Tampa was nowhere to be found.

"When I came back from the road, it took me three or four years to find him, and when I did, he was a total wreck," said Blind John Davis, a pianist who'd recorded with Tampa and was his informal caretaker for the last 10 years.

"Oh, he could still play and his voice was good and strong. He had the same power, but it just seemed like he'd lost all interest after Frances passed," Davis said. "He never did do much good after that."

The end found Tampa in a nursing home, forgotten by all but a few friends and devotees, smoking cigarette after hand-rolled cigarette. It wasn't always like that.

Composed and performed in 1928 by Tampa and "Georgia Tom" Dorsey (who later made his mark writing gospel music for Mahalia Jackson), "It's Tight Like That" was the first in a string of commercial hits that would make the "Guitar Wizard" the most prolific blues artist of his time.

He released more than 78s, over 150 altogether, than such artists as Bessie Smith, Lightnin' Hopkins, Big Bill Broonzy and John Lee Hooker.

Tampa Red was born in Smithville, Ga., sometime between 1900 and 1908, his given name Hudson Woodbridge. His parents died when he was young and he moved to Tampa, Fla., to live with his grandmother. It was there that he "learned" how to play.

"I didn't have no special teacher. It was just a gift," he recalled.

Later, he told an interviewer: "That record of 'Crazy Blues' by Mamie Smith, it was one of the first blues records made. I could just hear it ringing in my head. I said to myself, 'I don't know any music, but I can play that.'"

Toting a guitar picked up at a pawn shop, he moved to Chicago in the 1920s, where his adopted Florida hometown and the shade of his skin earned him the moniker "Tampa Red."

Through the 1930s and '40s, his apartment on the South Side was like a shrine for the blues, with music and musicians spilling onto the boulevard and across the street to a club called H&T's.

Inside, he'd run a bottleneck up and down the frets of his Gibson guitar, which might have anywhere from one to four strings, and sing in a warm, lively tone. Often, he accompanied himself on the "jazz horn" — a kazoo with two horns hung around his neck by a metal ring.

His lyrics, usually a biting, but playful commentary on the battle of the sexes, were full of double-meanings. "Love Her With a Feeling," begins with the caution that women:

"Don't like this half-way stuff
"When you turn 'em loose
"Be sure they've had enough."

He explained why he wasn't more explicit: "After all, kids hear these things. I think anybody should be able to hear them. If some people get a joke out of them and have some fun with them, fine. But the words shouldn't force a joke on anybody who doesn't hear it."

Religion in the news

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — They call themselves "Fools for Christ." These white-faced gnomes who tuck on bulbous noses and play-act the Christian Gospel as buffoons in knitted caps and baggy trousers. Presbyterian clowns, Methodist clowns, Roman Catholic clowns — the groups are appearing in churches across the country. As did mimes of ancient and medieval times, they play the part of "holy interrupters," illustrating theology through their craft.

"Putting on the white face, you have the understanding that you're going to give to people. To me, that's what Jesus did," said Steve Lindsay, who plays a sad-faced Saul at St. George's Episcopal Church in the heart of the Philadelphia Main Line. "People will accept things from a clown that they won't from a straight person," added Anna Waid, another troupe member.

On a Sunday morning in St. George's ornate sanctuary, the clown troupe performs a sermon with Lindsay, as Saul, doing his silent best to breathe the murderous threats against the Lord's disciples.

A clown in a purple jumpsuit, portraying an old Christian named Ananias, enters to convert Saul to the teachings of Jesus.

After an imaginary horse ride to Damascus, Saul is saved from the delight and applause of the congregation, a half-dozen children in greasepaint rush to embrace the new-found Christian, and spread colorful streamers and paper hearts as they return to their seats.

"We're kind of fools for Christ," said Beverly McKendrick, the rector's wife who teaches nursery school when she isn't dressed in baggy overalls and flicking a red featherduster.

The clowns find justification for their ministry through St. Paul's exhortation to the Corinthians to become "fools for Christ's sake" because God has "made foolish the wisdom of the world."

St. George's became interested in clowning after a troupe visited the parish in September.

"They got some training in mime, drama, expression, makeup. Then they began performing. People have reacted very well," said the Rev. James McKendrick, the rector.

Religion roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — The United Methodist Church's world vision has adopted guidelines that in cases of kidnapping of overseas personnel "no ransom will be authorized." Such a response would place "in jeopardy all personnel and programs of the church," the guidelines say.

The guidelines, subject to review by legal counsel and approval of overseas missionaries, are similar to those recently adopted by the Southern Baptist Foreign Missions Board.

The church positions came in the wake of the recent kidnapping and subsequent killing in Colombia of an American linguist of the Wycliff Bible translators.

The Methodist guidelines say the world division would work jointly with local leaders in any country concerned in "seeking solution to the problem" and would "rely on local leadership to determine the motives" of any kidnapers and to suggest alternative solutions to paying ransom.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Rev. Murdale C. Leysath has been elected minister of the United Church of Christ Minnesota Conference, the first woman to hold a top state office in the denomination.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An Islamic scholar, S. Hossein Nasr of Temple University, has been chosen to deliver the famous Gifford Lectures April 27 to May 15 at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland.

He says his theme in 10 lectures will be "the relationship between knowledge and the sacred," tracing "the process whereby knowledge became separated from the sacred in the West, in contrast to all other civilizations, especially those of Asia."

Nasr, born in Iran, is the first Moslem named to give what is considered the world's most famous lecture series in philosophy and religion. Being picked for that role is sometimes compared to winning a Nobel prize in theology. The series was established in the late 19th century.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

FOUNDATION

Our nation is witnessing a building boom, such as has never before been seen. Every day new foundations are being dug and laid. Any builder will tell you that it takes a firm foundation to support today's skyscraper.

Our Lord, in His sermon on the mount, compared those that heed His word, to the wise man that built his house upon a rock, and those that did not heed His word to the foolish man that built his house upon sand and it was washed away.

Build your house upon a rock... Attend church regularly.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Tough new laws stem flow of immigratants to Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP) — Cold and starving, a 21-year-old commune worker from China sneaked into town aboard a rickety boat, hoping to find refuge with her relatives. Instead of a joyful welcome, she was given only a hot meal and commands to get out.

A skilled mechanic from Canton took a different route, swimming through shark-infested waters to reach this British colony, his dangerous journey made bearable by expectations of plentiful work and good money.

Desperate and weary after wandering the city for days without finding anyone willing to employ him, he finally walked up to a police officer and asked to be sent back to China.

Both were victims of Hong Kong's tough new immigration laws designed to curb the flow of illegal immigrants from the Chinese mainland.

Before the laws were introduced late last year, any Chinese who managed to reach the colony's urban areas were allowed to remain here.

This was dubbed the "touch base" policy — meaning that those illegal immigrants lucky enough to evade capture near the border and to reach the city proper were granted the right to live in Hong Kong.

But the touch base regulation was scrapped following a visit by the governor of Hong Kong, Sir Murray Maclehoze, to the neighboring Chinese province of Guangdong last October.

The governor told the Chinese authorities that the influx had to be halted and that all Chinese entering Hong Kong illegally would be deported regardless of where they were caught.

The Chinese raised no objections and promised to do everything they could to stem the flow.

They have increased troop numbers along the border and Chinese gunboats have not hesitated to fire on boats they believe are smuggling human cargoes into Hong Kong. Illegal migrants who are captured are repatriated to China almost immediately across the land border.

Before the new laws were passed, the Hong Kong government granted a three-day amnesty for Chinese who had entered the colony without permission. More than 7,000 turned up at a round-the-clock registration office for their Hong Kong identity cards, required for employment.

One unexpected development of the amnesty was the surfacing of illegal migrants from India and Pakistan, and Chinese from the nearby Portuguese colony of Macao. Most of these aliens were deported to their countries of origin.

The government has also made it an offense punishable by one year in prison or a fine of the equivalent of $10,000 for an employer to hire anyone without the all important identity card.

The government's "g tough" policy was triggered by the huge flow of Chinese across the border in the last two years. More than 80,000 slipped into Hong Kong in 1979 and some 65,000 last year.

The cost of additional social spending to provide for the illegals who arrived here between 1978 and 1980 was almost $800 million in U.S. terms, he said.

Grain reserve plan established

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block has put into effect a grain reserve plan that is part of the Reagan administration farm bill pending in Congress.

The action, announced Thursday, gives farmers with corn in the reserve an indefinite amount of time to repay price-support loans they received on their grain.

Block said in a meeting with reporters that the reason for eliminating the due date on the loans was "to launch our market-oriented administration farm program, considerations administratively," instead of waiting for Congress to act on a new farm bill.

Farmers have about 790 million bushels of corn in the reserve. Loans made to farmers when they put the grain in the program — at the going rate of $2.40 a bushel — were scheduled to come due May 15 under a formula specifying a "call" of the loans as market prices increased.

The call price is $3.15 to $3.26 a bushel, depending on when the grain was put in the program. Market prices rose above those levels three months ago, triggering the loan repayment mechanism.

After the corn loans were called in, mandatory loan repayment was to be no later than April 15. However, Block authorized a 30-day extension until May 15 but ordered a jump in the loan interest rate to 15.25 percent from the previous rate of 11.5 percent beginning on April 15.

The Reagan administration's farm bill recently sent to Congress includes a similar plan for the grain reserve — the elimination of the call price mechanism.

Block said the objective of his action on the current grain reserve "is to take the lid off the market and allow it to work... let it tell farmers to raise more corn this year."

As it was, the call price served as a lid on the market by requiring farmers to repay the loans and, if they chose, to sell the grain on the cash market. That would add to the available supply and automatically dampen price increases.

Block said this was one of the principles of the administration's farm bill sent to Congress.

"I felt it was an excellent opportunity to put into practice, administratively, what we would like to see as part of the legislative package," he said.

Responding to questions, Block said he believes "you'll be surprised at how many (farmers) will take advantage" of the indefinite extension of the corn reserve program, which he also said would be applied to wheat if market prices rise enough to trigger calling in the loans.

But Block said his plan does not mean farmers will keep grain in the reserve much longer.

Asked if he continues to be optimistic about the embargo being lifted, Block said, "I'm just very confident that prospects are improving." But he said he had no new information that suggests a date on when the embargo might be removed.

Group aids military, youth

By MARILYN POWERS
Lifestyles Editor

The Gray County Red Cross will have an exhibition on Red Cross activities beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Pampa Mall, as part of a celebration of its 100th international anniversary.

The local chapter was organized in 1918. One of the services Red Cross provides is aid to servicemen and their families.

During World War I, volunteers met servicemen at the troop trains that ran through Pampa and served refreshments to them. Other World War I services included making bandages and knitting sweaters, socks, mufflers and other items.

Packages containing cigarettes, canned food and personal items were sent to prisoners of war during World War II as part of local Red Cross activities.

Later, in the 1950s, Gray County volunteers provided services such as refreshments to wounded and sick military men at the Amarillo Air Base hospital.

Red Cross services provided during and between wars include notifying a serviceman and his superiors of an emergency in the serviceman's family, such as a major illness or death. In such cases, the Red Cross requests an emergency leave for the serviceman and sees that he gets home and later returns to his unit. Loans from the organization may be made to the serviceman if necessary to enable him to travel.

If someone has lost contact with a family member in military service, the Red Cross will locate the serviceman for the family.

Red Cross Youth also helped in the war effort. During World War I, older members made bandages, slippers and other items after school and on Saturdays for servicemen, prisoners of war and civilian refugees.

Current Red Cross Youth in Pampa elementary schools make items to give to individuals at Pampa Nursing Center and Leisure Lodge, and those enrolled in Meals on Wheels. They have also given items to those at a children's home in Waco and the area Veterans Hospital, among others.

These items include placemats and candy containers in a holiday theme. Candy to fill the containers is provided by the Red Cross chapter. The gifts are made and presented during seven holidays yearly.

"Recently a young person was delighted when he discovered that his handmade item made at school had been given to his grandmother," said Joyce Roberts of the Gray County Red Cross.

Services provided to local children by the Red Cross include first aid, water safety and tornado safety classes, all planned on a child's learning level.

"Practically any child taught swimming is taught by the Red Cross, unless they have a private instructor. And then there's a good chance the instructor was taught by the Red Cross," Mrs. Roberts said.

High school Red Cross members plan first aid and cardio-pulmonary resuscitation classes, disaster workshops and outreach projects.

Outreach projects include Halloween, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Easter and birthday parties at St. Ann's children's home in Panhandle.

Other youth projects include water safety, home nursing and mother's aid classes.

"Red Cross Youth is a very vital link of our vitality as an agency that offers services," Mrs. Roberts said.

YOUNG RED CROSS volunteers prepare place mats and other handmade items for seven holidays each year as a public service to those in nursing homes and to others. Wilson Elementary volunteers, beginning at front left corner, are April Bragg, 4th grade; Anthony Polendo, 4th grade; Darrin Gee, 4th grade; Tammy Stephens, 5th grade; Manuel Jimenez, 5th grade; Monica Jernigan, 3rd grade; Barbara Keys, 3rd grade; and Terry Reeves, 3rd grade.

Dear Abby

Woman brave over mastectomy

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Last spring, my best friend, my lover, my wife of 22 years had a mastectomy. I enclose the poem she wrote while still in the hospital. It is too beautiful not to share with others who may find it inspirational. Sign me, HER HUSBAND, RICHARD, or IN LOVE IN VIRGINIA

"The room smells of roses and Russell Stovers.
"Some foreign arm has been taped to my shoulder.
"The nurses make no sound. (Polyester doesn't rustle.)
"The Metropolitan Opera did 'Faust' for me today on radio. Demerol did the staging. I wish you could have seen it!

"When I open my indolent eyes, the people who love me are searching my face to see how they should feel.
"All the words I can say are so old, so used, so familiar. How I would love to be brilliant!

"As soon as I know anything, I know that I am fine — this is not a catastrophe — it's only an inconvenience.
"If this is a master plan to make me realize how many people love me, I do.
"If this is a grand design to elicit promises of preserving my health, I will.

"If there is no plan to this at all, I'm making it so.
"I'm planning to work and play better.
"I'm planning to appreciate the people who make me feel good about myself.

"I'm planning to savor splendid moments and put hurts in the far corners of my mind.
"Inhale your acrimonious tears; I'm planning not to need them."

SALLY W. COOK, RICHMOND, VA.

DEAR RICHARD and SALLY: Thanks for a real "upper."

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that when a woman announces that she is pregnant, all the other women in the company immediately start to rehash their own pregnancies? Invariably they all had a very hard time delivering, and one keeps trying to top the other with horror stories of how long she was in labor, etc.

My wife is five months pregnant, and she hasn't had one sick day, but all the talk about "rough delivering" has scared her half to death.

What's wrong with some women? Please print this. It may stop the cackling of some of those hens!

FUTURE FATHER

DEAR FATHER: All right, it's done. Perhaps some of those "hens" are looking longingly back on their laying days.

CONFIDENTIAL TO RUDY: If your wife really doesn't care how late you come home, it's later than you think.

BERKELEY HEIGHTS, N.J. (AP) — Domestic water at 120 degrees Fahrenheit is hotter than the hand can tolerate, says the Better Heating-Cooling Council, which advises homeowners not to waste fuel by heating the water much higher.

There's an old-fashioned cookie that each new generation of cooks seems delighted to discover.

Irma Rombauer in her "Joy of Cooking" called these cookies Jelly Tots. Old-time Shaker cooks in Hancock, Mass., called them Jelly Dots. Other cooks named them Thumbprints. But by whatever name they go, they're made from a simple, rich dough, shaped into balls and pressed with a thumb — then each imprint (indentation) is filled with jam, jelly or some other sweet concoction.

One difference among the versions: the Shaker cookies are made with brown sugar instead of the usual white, and they are rolled in nuts — variations our tasters appreciate.

SHAKER-STYLE THUMBPRINT DOTS

- 1/2 cup (one 1/4-pound stick) butter
- 1/4 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- 1 egg yolk (from a large egg)
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup flour - stirred all-purpose flour
- 1-3rd cup (about) finely chopped (rice-grain size) unblanched or blanched almonds, filberts, pecans or walnuts
- Thick homemade or commercial strawberry preserves or imported ginger marmalade. In a medium mixing bowl thoroughly beat together the butter, sugar, egg yolk and vanilla. With a spoon gradually stir in the flour until smooth. Cover tightly and chill until firm enough to handle. Work with half of the dough at a time, keeping remaining portion chilled.

Using 1 tablespoon for each, shape dough into balls; roll in nuts. Place about an inch apart on ungreased cookie sheets; gently press a thumb into the center of each ball to make a shallow indentation; fill indentations with preserves — about 1/2 teaspoon for each.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until lightly browned — about 12 to 15 minutes. With a wide metal spatula remove to wire racks to cool. Store in a tightly covered container. Makes about 1 1/2 dozen.

Save children from poison

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) - No one in his right mind drinks Mr. Clean or Chanel No. 5.

No adult, that is. Toddlers do, because they don't know any better and because anything within reach and easy to open often ends up in their mouths.

So small kids consume all kinds of things: wrinkle cream, glue, shoe polish, tranquilizers. And when they do, they poison themselves - sometimes to death. They even do that with things that are basically good for people.

"From 1971 to 1979 in Salt Lake City, two children between the ages of two and five died from an overdose of adult-strength iron supplement tablets," says Dr. Anthony Temple, president of the American Association of Poison Control Centers and a Philadelphia pediatrician and medical toxicologist.

"People tend to think of iron as a relatively benign substance and not particularly harmful to kids, but if enough is absorbed into the body, iron can cause shock and heart failure. So it should always be stored away from children, in containers with safety closures.

"Even children's chewable vitamins with iron should be kept out of reach," he says, "and treated like medicine, not like candy." But if your approach to medicine is more-is-always-better, you may end up poisoning the child yourself. Says Dr. Temple, "For years, overdoses of aspirin accounted for about 20 percent of child poisonings. Since child-resistant closures on aspirin bottles were instituted in 1973, however, there's been a decrease. Nevertheless, between 1967 and 1978, nearly half the cases of children hospitalized for aspirin poisoning in Salt Lake City and Boston were due to therapeutic or chronic overdose, not accidental ingestion. In other words, the parent was giving the drug too often or too much, for too long a time, and aspirin accumulates in the body. Parents must learn to follow directions."

Parents must also learn, he says, that "poison is any foreign substance that produces toxic symptoms, and if you take enough of anything, it can be poison."

The question then becomes, unless you see it happen, how do you know your child has swallowed, say, five anti-depressant pills, which, even in that small number, can cause seizures and rapid or irregular heart rate?

"If they're playing with the bottle, assume they've eaten the contents," he says. "And watch for unusual symptoms and behavior. Common symptoms of poisoning are the sudden onset of vomiting, diarrhea, or rapid heart rate (put your hand on the child's heart to determine that). Or the child may become disoriented, have a fit, become drowsy at an unusual time of the day, hallucinate or go into a coma."

Don't panic if you suspect poisoning, he says. Do call your nearest poison control center. "There are perhaps 500 throughout the country. Not every city has a major center, and some have more than one because of population distribution. Still, about 5 million children under age 5 ingest toxic substances each year and 80-85 percent of these cases can be handled by phone."

Instead of waiting until you need the number of the nearest poison control center (usually affiliated with a major medical center), get it now, he says, and post it by your phone.

"Also," says Dr. Temple, "be sure to keep a bottle of syrup of ipecac in the house. You can buy a one-ounce bottle at any pharmacy, without a prescription, for about $1. It induces vomiting so you can get an immediate start on getting toxic material out of the child. But," he warns, "do not use ipecac until you're told to. There are reasons not to make someone vomit." For instance, lye, which burns its way down, will burn its way up again.

One more thing. In addition to making it impossible for children to reach or open household products, medicines, cosmetics, insecticides, etc., make sure the containers intended to hold those things, do indeed hold those things.

Some years ago, Dr. Temple recalls, in Salt Lake City, a teen-ager found a bottle of apple cider in the garage. He transferred the contents to a scotch bottle, let them ferment, then brought the bottle to a party. Two days later, a 5-year-old who'd managed to consume a quantity of the "cider" was dead of kidney failure.

Group honors lost causes

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) - To all of those who tried and failed, the Society For Lost Causes says "Nice try."

"We realize that almost everything that ever succeeded in the world began at one time as a lost cause for someone, whether it was the automobile or the rocket ship or the bicycle," says founder Joel Shreck.

Shreck's group has a three-fold purpose: to recognize lost causes that should be saved, to recognize successes that should be lost and to encourage those who gave their best and fell flat on their faces.

Shreck is making a list of nominees for each category and his 35-member group plans to give awards named for former President Millard Fillmore.

Among the nominees for lost causes that shouldn't be lost are those working to preserve the environment.

"With the way we seem to be heading," Shreck notes, "the environment may well be lost already."

Among the successes that should have failed are what Shreck calls "the isms."

"There's chauvinism, nationalism, militarism... all kinds of isms that could, and probably should, be lost," he says.

And then there is the category sure to draw the most nominations: the projects that failed before they really got started.

The early favorite is a local entry, the Hygenic Dog Food Co. of Berkeley, a corporation that tried to sell health food for dogs. Nice try.

Another group, Useful Idiots for the CIA, may well be in the running, but it's so obscure that Shreck hasn't been able to find out much about it.

All he knows about the anti-CIA group is that it apparently consists of short, dark men who wear porkpie hats and carry placards outside New York movie theaters.

Shreck emphasizes that his organization should not be confused with the Society for the Unification of Lost Causes (SULC), which apparently folded before Shreck learned what they did.

"We sent them a certificate of consolation," he recalls.

Allan Fawcett plays Kelly McGrath on "The Edge of Night."

Looks can sometimes be very deceiving, especially in the case of Allan Fawcett who plays Kelly McGrath on "The Edge of Night." When I recently attended the 25th anniversary party for this ABC serial I arranged to arrive early to interview Fawcett. I must admit that I expected to speak to Allan Fawcett, teen idol; I envisioned him to be a little wet behind the ears kid with a Huck Finn grin. What I really encountered was Allan Fawcett, a self-assured, intelligent, and sensitive man who has a clear idea of who he is and where he is going.

Fawcett will readily admit that when he was cast as Kelly he was somewhat concerned about the character's chances for longevity on the serial. "Edge is a crime based drama, after all," admits Allan, "and I spent some time wondering if I would become a casualty." Instead of leaving his fate in the hands of others, Fawcett took steps to mold the character and give him substance. "Nobody really knew what Kelly was about when I was cast. All they knew that he was an 18 year old who was a puppeteer. I added characteristics that gave him strength and color. I gave him a violent temper and, as a result, the writers seemed to pick up on that." Praising their efforts Allan adds, "I can't tell you how rewarding it is to work on a serial like "Edge." It's truly an ensemble. There is a mutual respect between those working before the camera and behind it."

That evening, rather than esquire a pretty starlet to the party, Allan escorted his parents who were visiting from out of town and were celebrating their wedding anniversary. Fawcett was obviously relishing the specialness of the moment. "I'm very happy tonight," affirmed Allan, "It's "Edge's" 25th anniversary and my parents 39th. I'm excited about and fulfilled in what I'm doing and I'm confident of the respect of those I work with." Just then I realized that I may not have been totally wrong about Allan for there was that infectious smile that sends teenage girls' hearts soaring. It was then I realized the Huck Finn I had expected to find was in there somewhere, he was just a bit more mature and aware than I thought he'd be.

Now a look at what's been happening and what will happen on all the afternoon dramas.

PREVIEWS AND RECAPS

Recap: 4/20-4/24
Preview: 4/27-5/1

WARMING UP. Pampa's Randy Slaybaugh (top) gets set to launch the shot while teammate Joe Murray (bottom) does stretching exercises prior to a practice session at Randy Matson Field. Both Harvesters will be contending for medals in the District 3-5A track meet Saturday in Amarillo. (Staff Photos by L.D. Strate)

Spots nearly filled for Pampa Merchants Classic

Only a half-dozen openings remain for the second annual Pampa Merchants Classic May 16-17 at Harvester Bowl.

"There's a lot more interest in it than there was last year," said Harvester Bowl manager Van Vandebrook. "We've increased the entry list to 50, and there's only six spots left to fill." The field was limited to 40 bowlers last year.

Only members of the Pampa Bowling Association with at least 21 games bowled during the 1980-81 season are allowed to compete in the tournament.

The only exception is the defending champion, but Bill Morehead, who defeated Forrest Cole, 226-223, in the finals a year ago, has moved to St. Louis and will not return to defend his title.

The Classic, like last year, will have a PBA (Professional Bowlers Association) format with head-to-head competition among the five finalists May 17. The qualifying round will be held May 16 when bowlers will bowl 10 games across 20 lanes to qualify.

Pampa track team enters district meet

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor

Pampa High coach Wendall Palmer has become somewhat optimistic while pondering the upcoming District 3-5A track meet, and the chances of Randy Slaybaugh and Joe Murray bringing home medals for the Harvesters.

"Randy has a good chance to win the shot put and discus and Murray should place in both the mile and 800," Palmer said.

Palmer has good reason for optimism. Both Slaybaugh and Murray turned in their best performances of the season in the Canyon track meet last week.

Slaybaugh won both the shot and discus while Murray took second in the 800 and third in the 1600.

"Randy has some rough edges that need to be honed down before district," Palmer added. "His left shoulder also slips out of socket, but we rigged up a harness that should help him. He can't use his shoulder at all when he spins around before releasing. This harness should add two more feet to his shot put and 15 more feet to the discus."

Slaybaugh's shoulder problem is the result of a weak muscle rather than an injury, according to a local doctor's diagnosis.

"When he moves his shoulder it sounds like he's got a bunch of ball bearings in there," Palmer said.

A little extra padding also wouldn't hurt the 175-pound junior in events where oversized athletes are prominent.

"He needs about 15 more pounds on him, but if it's the right kind of day he's going to pop some eyeballs at district," Palmer said. "He's got a lot of strength."

"I get a few laughs when I walk up to the shot put ring and there are guys standing around that outweigh me by 30 to 40 pounds," Slaybaugh said.

Slaybaugh tossed the shot 51-8½ at Canyon, only an inch short of his best throw. He ranks fourth in the Panhandle area in distance.

His toughest opposition will come from Tascosa's Cary Cobb, who ranks second in the area with a 53-9¼ heave.

Slaybaugh's best effort in the discus stands at 148-8½, a foot longer than his winning throw at Canyon. Slaybaugh is unranked in the discus.

"Randy has come a long way with the discus when you consider he hasn't thrown it since junior high," Palmer said.

David Helms, Tascosa (ranked seventh) and Leroy Green, Palo Duro (ranked eighth), are the main threats to Slaybaugh in the discus.

Murray, a senior and ranked fourth area-wide in the 800, was clocked at 1:59.96 at the Canyon Meet. "Joe finally got under two minutes, so he's starting to come around," Palmer added. "He was two weeks behind everybody when he came out, and that hurt him. He's been working hard to catch up."

Tascosa's Robert Patterson, ranked third (1:58.6), and Murray are the only district tracksters that are ranked in the 800.

The 1600 meter run will be highly competitive. Murray, unranked, will do battle with Tascosa's David Williams, who is ranked number one in the area with a 4:24.7 clocking. Palo Duro's Justin Raef, ranked third; Tascosa's Harvey Ratliff, ranked sixth, and Caprock's Troy Moore, ranked seventh.

The Harvesters won't have much of a chance in the team standings.

"Randy and Joe are just about all we got," Palmer added. "We just don't have enough people to fill the spots."

The district meet starts at 10 a.m. Saturday at Dick Bivins Stadium in Amarillo.

Texas League roundup

In other Texas League games, San Antonio edged Amarillo, 6-5. Arkansas beat Jackson, 9-5, and El Paso slipped past Midland, 5-4. Rightfielder Paul Szymarek had a homer for Shreveport in the third inning to give the Captains a 1-0 lead. Mark Dempsey, 2-0, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Ted Davis, 0-2. Leo Hernandez had a three-run homer to highlight a five-run outburst in the first inning to give the San Antonio Dodgers a 6-5 victory over the Amarillo Gold Sox.

Rockets hope to end homecourt hex

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets, tied with Kansas City in their National Basketball Association Western Conference playoff series, return home Friday night to seek a remedy to the homecourt "disadvantage" that has plagued both teams throughout the playoffs. "It's been traditional that the homecourt means less in the playoffs than the regular season but it's never been a minus before," Rockets Coach Del Harris said. The Kings and Rockets, surprise entries in the NBA Western Conference finals, have won only four of 24 playoff games going into Friday night's game. Kansas City upset the trend Wednesday night by defeating the Rockets 88-79 on the Kings' homecourt to even the best of seven series at 1-1. The fourth game is scheduled here Sunday.

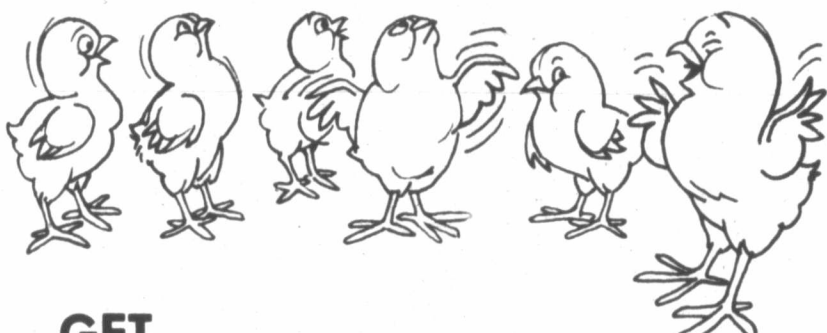

"In a seven-game series, both teams get prepared for each other so the home court doesn't make as much difference," Harris said. "But this is ridiculous." The Rockets, who eliminated defending NBA champion Los Angeles with a rare victory on the Lakers' home court, have won only one of four playoff games in the Summit while the Kings have at least broken even at 3-3. While the Kings have prepared for the injury-free Rockets, Houston is having to adjust to a healing Kings injury list. Guard Phil Ford returned to a starting role in Wednesday night's victory and Kings Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons hopes to get Otis Birdsong back also. "If Birdsong came back they might try to open it up a little more," Harris said. "You've got to go a game at a time and see. But I don't think the pace will be changing. We won't let it become any wild type game. It will be a hard-nosed defensive series." The Kings bottled up Rockets center Moses Malone in Wednesday night's victory, holding him to 18 points in an outstanding defensive effort by Kansas City's Reggie King. "First time I tried to guard Moses and it was no picnic," King said. "I didn't guard Moses by myself. I fronted him, and the other guys helped from behind. You have to hit Moses before he hits you." "He's awfully strong, awfully big, not just tall. I wanted to guard him because I only had one foul." King contributed 31 points, including 21 in the first half, for a personal playoff record. The Kings move into Houston with the momentum of a victory Fitzsimmons said. "I thought it (Wednesday) was a game we had to win, but I didn't tell my guys that," Fitzsimmons said. "Houston goes home tied, so they accomplished what they wanted, a split on the road. If we had to split at home, I prefer winning the second game. Then we can go to Houston with a victory."

CAUGHT ON THEFT ATTEMPT. Shortstop John LeMaster of the San Francisco Giants awaits the throw to tag out Jerry Royster of the Atlanta Braves during first-inning action Thursday afternoon in San Francisco. The Braves won, 7-3. (AP Laserphoto)

Miami girls enter region track meet

LEVELLAND—Defending state champion Miami enters the Class 1A girls' track meet today, but will not play the favorite's role for the first time in two years. Sudan is expected to win the regional crown, based on qualifying performances, with Miami ranked fifth. Miami has won the state title the last two years, but the Warriorettes aren't expected to repeat since only three individuals and two relay teams qualified for the regionals. Susan Bean has the best qualifying time in the region in the 200 meters (26.1), long jump (19-1 1/4) and triple jump (37-5). Joining Miss Bean in representing Miami are Carla Stone in the 100-meter hurdles and Beth Gill in the 3,200-meter run and the 1,600 meters. The Warriorettes' 800 and 1,600 relay squads have also qualified for today's meet.

Enduro race begins Sunday

The eighth annual women's and children's Motorcycle and Dune Buggy Enduro, sponsored by the Track and Trail Riders Association, will begin at 10 a.m. Sunday at the Rosita Off-Road Vehicle Use Area near Lake Meredith. The site of the Enduro is located near the Canadian River Bridge, about 20 miles north of Amarillo on U.S. 287. The motorcycle Enduro will be for ladies of all ages and for boys 15 and under. Trophies will be awarded at the finish of the contest, in which the bikes take off one minute apart, then wind their way through the rough terrain for about two and a half hours. Ranger Chuck Brooks will be on hand to direct traffic. Both groups will meet about 10 a.m.

Astros nudged by Reds, 5-4

Tom Seaver of the Cincinnati Reds had it — but lost it. Then the Reds had it again, but not without a struggle. "Every time we come to Houston it doesn't matter the score, they always make it close," said Cincinnati first baseman Dan Driessen after a 5-4, 10-inning victory over the Houston Astros Thursday night.

"I watched the Astros in the (National League) playoffs last year against Philadelphia when they kept coming back, and they always find a way to do it against us." The multi-directional game was first going Seaver's way. Cincinnati's star right-hander was working on a no-hitter for 6-3 innings and held a commanding 4-0 lead going into the eighth.

Then the roof caved in for Seaver at the Astrodome, as Houston scored four runs to tie the game at 4-4. But the Reds finally pulled it out in the 10th on Driessen's RBI single. "At least we came back and won," said Seaver, who did not figure in the decision. "The way we've been playing, it shows excellent fortitude to keep trying. We didn't put our tails between our legs."

The Astros, last year's NL West champs, lost for the 10th time in 13 games this season. "Those boos will turn to cheers when we start getting hits," said Houston Manager Bill Virdon. "I don't think anybody likes to hear them, but they're part of the game."

In other NL games Thursday, Los Angeles beat San Diego 3-1 and Atlanta stopped San Francisco 7-3. In the American League, Chicago took a doubleheader from Baltimore, 18-5 and 5-3. Two games were rained out — New York at Pittsburgh in the NL and Toronto at New York in the AL.

Seaver had held the Astros hitless until Craig Reynolds singled to right in the seventh. Then Seaver was chased in the eighth when the Astros scored four times, three of the runs coming on a homer by Cesar Cedeno.
