Vehicles law gets quick approval

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

City commissioners today wholeheartedly gave their approval on first reading of a nine-page ordinance giving the City of Pampa the right to haul away abandoned vehicles from both public and private property in the regular commission meeting today at city hall.

Commissioners and city officials, alike, defended the proposed ordinance in discussion before action on first reading was taken. The ordinance will be read a second time before becoming law.

Commissioner Coyle Ford commented, "I'd like to get over to them that we're not after the shade tree mechanic. We're after abandoned cars."

City attorney Don Lane said, "People are apprehensive that we're going to walk in and start taking away their property. There are safety and health problems involved."

"Cars that are properly stored don't come within the act," he added.

Mayor H. R. Thompson said, "We've had a lot of requests to get a lot of these old junkers off the streets."

"It's a well-proven plan, giving everyone consideration of their rights, and get them (the autos) cleaned up, too," he said.

Commissioner Clyde Carruth said, "A number of people have talked to me about it and every one of them wanted us to go ahead and enact this."

Carruth added, "It might be when someone received notice of confiscation of his vehicle, if he has any interest in the vehicle, he'll take the steps himself to do something about it."

City Manager Mack Wofford said the city would contract for removal and storage of the vehicles judged to be abandoned from the numerous descriptions listed in the ordinance.

He said the city would first remove the abandoned autos from the public streets and then expand the project to include those autos left on private property.

"There are definitions provided in the ordinance for bona fide antiques, and special interest vehicles," Wofford said.

Lane said the ordinance included three different descriptions of abandoned vehicles that he believed were "accurate."

Officials said Pampa's city ordinance was patterned after the Texas Abandoned Motor Vehicle Act.

Lane said cases tried under the act have been upheld in court.

A five-year report on turnover in the Pampa Police Department was heard by commissioners, who made no effort to discuss the findings of Personnel Director David Callison.

Callison termed his findings as a "balanced" turnover.

"There was no year where there was really more turnover than the others," he said.

Callison said his study ranged from 1977 to 1981, his term as personnel director at the city.

His findings were as follows: 1977 — 56 percent, 1978 — 44 percent, 1979 — 67-68 percent, 1980 — 53 percent, and 1981 — 55 percent.

Callison said that the majority of the reasons listed for leaving the department were low salary and heavy work load.

"Crime statistics are certainly going up," he said. "The salaries went up but not as fast as the crime has."

The personnel director referred to a United Press International article which showed Pampa was not unique in their turnover numbers.

"Pampa police are also underpaid compared to other police departments across the state of Texas," Callison said.

Wofford interjected his comments to Callison's report to the commission, saying the numbers may be inflated because of including the civilian statistics.

"On the report, we combined all of the activities in the police department, including civilian personnel," Wofford said.

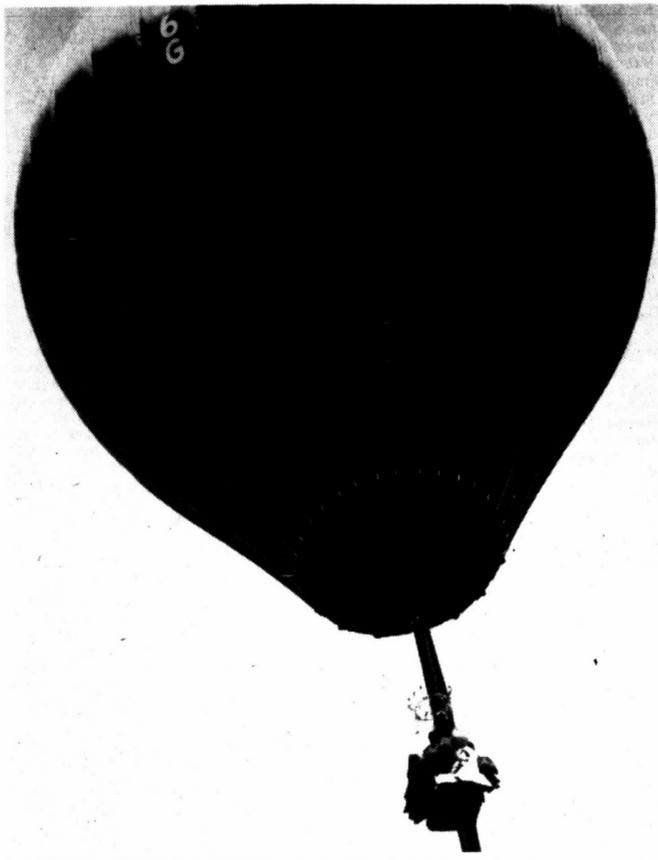

He said in the patrol division, the percentages were not as high.

Wofford also mentioned the UPI release. "The article we borrowed from the UPI report speaks of general problems keeping police officers from the state of Texas."

Callison said the Pampa Police Department is now fully staffed with 18 patrolmen and nine officers ranging from corporal to chief. Civilian personnel include traffic control officers, clerical personnel and five dispatchers.

The personnel director commented that "historically" the police department has been the second highest of the city departments in turnover rate.

The first was the sanitation department, he said. Now the sanitation has a zero turnover rate. Callison added.

Balloons over Pampa

Panhandle skies were filled with sudden bursts of color Memorial Day as ten helium-filled balloons raced to land at designated airports located within 50 to 150 miles of Amarillo.

Perry Lefors Airport was designated one of the targets in the Jack B. Kelly Jr. Memorial Day Balloon Race, originating in Amarillo.

A silver streak balloon made the first pass over Perry Lefors Airport and landed on the south edge of the airport perimeter, according to Floyd Hanson flight manager of Perry Lefors Airport.

"No one told us anything about the balloon race and we didn't know much about it. The balloon landed here and the landing was certified by someone from Amarillo. Then they packed it on a truck and left," Hanson said.

"It was one of those nice afternoons at the airport and there was a large crowd assembled here to see the balloon land," Hanson said.

Gray County Sheriff's Deputy Paul Ortega said, "There were two or three balloons over the city and one landed about seven miles east of the city in a wheat field. The balloon crew had radio communication and there was a ground crew there to help the balloonists."

Hemphill and Roberts County Sheriff's Departments also had a busy afternoon with several reports of downed balloons in their area.

"We heard a report that indicated there was a downed balloon in Hemphill County, but we never did find one," Hemphill County Deputy Susan Innis said.

"Our reports said that a balloon had landed on Highway 60 near Miami. We didn't find any balloon," Roberts County Sheriff Eddie Brines said.

The contest was an accuracy competition for ten balloonists, some of whom are seasoned artists of the air. The goal of the competition was to be the closest balloon to land at one of the designated targets.

In the early afternoon hours of Memorial Day, several bright balloons were seen hovering over Pampa.

It was the Marian Airport in Wellington that had the distinction of hosting internationally known ballonist Maxi Anderson and his brightly colored balloon.

"Anderson landed at the airport at 6:50 p.m. exactly," according to airport manager Joe Fickling. "There was no one else here — so a Collingsworth County Sheriff's Deputy and I certified Maxi Anderson's landing."

The race which started from Thompson Park in Amarillo is the first event of the International Gas Balloon Challenge Series, which will determine the gas balloon world champion for 1981. Two other races are tentatively planned for the fall.

OPEC close to agreement on $2 oil price boost

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is close to an agreement calling for a $2 price increase by leading producer Saudi Arabia in return for a price freeze by all other members, two oil ministers said today.

"The Saudis are ready to go to $34," Gabon's oil minister, Edouard Alexis M'Bouy-Boutzit told reporters. The Saudis currently have OPEC's lowest price of $32 a barrel and produce more than 40 percent of OPEC's output. A $2 Saudi increase would raise gasoline and heating oil prices in America about a half penny a gallon.

Another minister, who asked to remain anonymous, also said the Saudis would raise their price.

The two ministers also said that other members would freeze their prices in return for the Saudi increase. They did not say how long the price freeze would last but conference sources predicted it would be at least until fall.

The two ministers said the Saudis had refused to cut their record high production at this time but would consider doing it later.

The Gabon minister said most OPEC countries were considering across-the-board production cuts to help mop up a world oil glut that is depressing prices.

"I am freezing my price and cutting production by 18 percent," said Qatar's oil minister, Sheik Ali Khalifa al-Sabah.

Qatar, one of OPEC's smaller producers, has an output of 500,000 barrels a day. Like most OPEC producers its price is about $36 a barrel.

Kuwait and Nigeria have already reduced their output this year by between 17 and 20 percent.

OPEC President Subroto of Indonesia said the meeting would be finished by about 7 p.m. — 1 p.m. EDT.

The oil cartel's semiannual price-fixing meeting began Monday with predictions the Saudis would raise their price $2. But Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, told reporters his government would "never" go to $36, the base price charged by most of the other members of the 13-nation group.

Saudi Arabia was also enforcing a price freeze on the other governments by refusing to reduce its record production of 10.3 million barrels a day, more than 40 percent of OPEC's total output. This, coupled with increased exports from non-OPEC countries and conservation in the industrial nations, has resulted in a glut on the oil market that is keeping the price down.

The average OPEC price is now slightly more than $35 for a 42-gallon barrel. A Saudi increase of $2 would raise the average about 80 cents a barrel and add about half a penny a gallon to the price of oil consumed by the United States.

Reagan assembling policy team for Central America

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, assembling a team to handle U.S. policy in the volatile states of Central America, is drawing heavily on men who played active roles in the Vietnam War and other past international hot spots.

From Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. to military advisers on the ground in El Salvador, Reagan's Latin American policy team has considerable experience in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

Other key State Department officials were on the scene in Chile during U.S. efforts to "destabilize" the Marxist government of Salvador Allende in the early 1970s, and several were in the Dominican Republic when 14,000 U.S. troops occupied the island in 1965.

Administration officials say it is only natural for Reagan to turn to people with such backgrounds in a situation that has "gone beyond talking." Critics, however, contend Reagan selected officials who are likely to seek military answers to largely political problems.

"They're emphasizing the military aspects," said Enrique Baloyra, a University of North Carolina professor on Latin American affairs. "They see only one side."

Reagan dispatched 56 non-combat military advisers to El Salvador to help the ruling military-civilian junta defeat leftist guerrillas, who the State Department contends are supplied and directed by Cuba and the Soviet Union.

"A friendly country in our hemisphere is trying to halt the infiltration into the Americas by terrorists, by outside interference and those who aren't just aiming at El Salvador but, I think, are aiming at the whole of Central and possibly later South America and, I'm sure, eventually North America," Reagan said March 6.

Among officials involved with U.S. Latin American policy:

—Haig commanded troops in Vietnam from 1964 to 1967 and later, as deputy to National Security Adviser Henry A. Kissinger, played a prominent role in U.S. efforts to block Allende from taking office.

—Thomas O. Enders, 49, Reagan's choice to be assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, was deputy chief of mission in Cambodia from 1970 to 1974.

—John Bushnell, 47, acting assistant secretary for inter-American affairs and a spokesman for U.S. policy in El Salvador.

—Retired Gen. Vernon A. Walters, 64, a behind-the-scenes figure on El Salvador and Guatemala, was an aide to Kissinger during the secret Paris peace negotiations with the North Vietnamese.

Perot ruse in Iran nearly foiled by Clark

DALLAS (AP) — Computer magnate H. Ross Perot says a ruse in which he sneaked into a Tehran jail to plan a daring rescue of two of his employees almost was thwarted by an accidental encounter with former Attorney General Ramsey Clark.

Perot, who got into the jail in January 1979 by saying he was delivering food to the two employees, said he was not recognized until he ran into Clark, who was accompanied by an Iranian general.

Afraid that Clark, in Tehran on another mission, would ruin his cover, Perot said he walked up to the former attorney general and asked, "Ramsey, what are you doing in jail in Iran?"

Although the two Americans actually are on opposite ends of the political spectrum, Perot said he tried to convince the general that they were old friends.

The plot worked so well, he said, that the Iranians gave him a guided tour of the jail that proved invaluable in the rescue of Electronic Data Systems employees Billy Gaylord and Paul Chiapparone about a month later.

Perot said he then decided either he or Clark was "on the wrong side ... but in his own unsuspecting way, he helped us."

The EDS founder, speaking to a reunion of former Vietnamese prisoners of war in Washington Sunday night, also revealed that he was smuggled into Iran aboard a jet chartered by NBC.

After learning that an NBC employee ferried tapes from Jordan to Tehran and back every day, Perot waited until a day when no one showed up with tapes "and simply got on board posing as an employee." EDS corporate communications director Bill Wright said Tuesday. "No one asked him if he was (an employee) and he didn't volunteer I'm sure NBC didn't know what was going on."

Ron Najman, director of news information for NBC, said Monday that the network had no idea of Perot's scheme.

"We did not charter a jet for Mr. Perot's purposes and would not do anything like that for any purpose," he said.

The two EDS employees were arrested by the Iranians during the political turmoil that accompanied the return of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Perot claimed the Iranians were asking for $12.7 million in ransom.

Perot sent in a rescue team composed of EDS employees with military backgrounds. They induced an Iranian crowd to storm the prison under the guise of rescuing political prisoners left from the regime of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

About 11,000 prisoners were freed by the mob, including the two EDS employees.

The late Col. Bull Simons, a longtime Perot friend, led the rescue, which was planned after Perot's secretive visit.

Perot said he learned Simons and others had set up daily trips to the jail to bring the Americans food by bribing guards with $5 each day.

"Bull Simons planned everything — there was no committee thinking on this whole thing and that's why it succeeded," Perot said of the escape.

The EDS employees stole gasoline to make the 540-mile trip to the Turkish border and forged a pass with an official-looking Farsi seal that stated "Public Library of Tehran," Perot added.

Vietnam soldiers, Atlanta slain remembered on holiday

Americans remembered the nation's war dead, the young blacks slain in Atlanta, the plight of Vietnam veterans and the pleasures of sun and food in celebrations of Memorial Day.

Former South Vietnamese army soldiers honored the sacrifice of American GIs at a ceremony in Oregon on Monday. Vice President George Bush visited Arlington National Cemetery, and in a little town in Tennessee they held tobacco-spitting contests and wheelbarrow races. And wherever there was sun, there were picknickers and sunbathers.

Accidents marred the weekend, however. By the end of the three-day holiday, 346 people had been killed on the nation's roads, according to the National Safety Council. During last year's Memorial Day Weekend, 411 people were killed, the council said.

Bush laid a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier after a 21-gun salute and the sounding of taps as about 5,000 tourists and dignitaries watched.

A dozen veterans of the army of South Vietnam joined present and past American servicemen in a service at Williamette National Cemetery in Portland, Ore. Thuan Q. Pham, formerly a lieutenant colonel in the Army of the Republic of Vietnam, presented a wreath of flowers at a memorial to the unknown soldier and told the Americans, "The people of Vietnam will never forget your sacrifices."

In New York City, Josephine Holmes attended a service at the Soldiers and Sailors Monument, wearing a Gold Star pin on her dress. Her son was killed at Guadalcanal in World War II.

"I'll never forget the day," Mrs. Holmes said. "Sept. 19, 1944. He was 19."

She later went to the Veterans

Administration Hospital in Manhattan as part of what she called her duty "to take care of those who come home."

At the Wadsworth Veterans Hospital in Los Angeles, eight Vietnam veterans continued a fast and another group staged a sit-in in the hospital's lobby to demand an investigation into health care for veterans and into the effects of Agent Orange, a chemical defoliant used in the Vietnam War.

The two groups plan to remain at the facility until President Reagan or other administration officials answer their complaints.

"If they (the administration) have no response, we have no response," said hunger striker Dane Stewart, 25. "They know what our demands are, we're staying here. If we all die, we all die."

The protesters left the facility briefly to attend a memorial service for ex-Marine James Hopkins, whose May 17 death triggered the demonstration. Hopkins drove his Jeep through the hospital's glass doors in March and fired shots in the lobby. He said he was suffering from the effects of Agent Orange. Hopkins was awaiting trial on charges stemming from the incident when he died, apparently of an overdose of liquor and sleeping pills.

Atlanta's 29 missing or murdered black youths were remembered in several ceremonies across the nation.

In Washington, members of the Committee to Stop Children's Murders, including some of the mothers of the victims, marched in the streets. A vigil was held at the state capitol in Salt Lake City by the recently formed group, Save Our Children. A moment of silence for the slain children was observed in Los Angeles.

A FITTING MEMORIAL DAY TRIBUTE was placed in Fairview Cemetery by the Pampa veterans organizations. Members of the organizations placed the small American flags to spell out "veterans" on the holiday set aside to remember America's war dead. (Staff Photo)

28th Atlanta victim identified

ATLANTA (AP) - The 28th victim in Atlanta's string of murders of young blacks was identified today as Nathaniel Cater, a 27-year-old Atlanta man who becomes the oldest victim on the list of killings being investigated by a special police task force.
Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown released the man's name at a morning news conference two days after the victim's nude body was pulled from the Chattahoochee River northwest of Atlanta. Authorities ruled Monday that he was asphyxiated like 16 of the earlier victims.
Police withheld the identity for almost 48 hours in order to notify Cater's family and conduct "preliminary investigative activities," Brown said.
Cater's case was added to the task force list Monday along with that of 22-year-old Ronald Crawford, who had been missing since May 18.
Brown said Crawford will remain on the list despite a report from Crawford's mother that her son called home about 11 p.m. Monday to say he was picking peaches in east Georgia.

"The investigation is continuing until we set eyes on him," said Brown.
Cater was added to the list "by virtue of... similarities in where the body was found and method of death" although he was older than the earlier victims, the commissioner said.
"We're in a process of looking at what this means, in terms of this being the oldest one," he said. "We're trying to determine what the connection might be. Up to this point, we've seen all the victims fitting a profile in terms of physical stature. Age is only one variable."
Asked if older black men in the city should be concerned that a killer is after them, Brown said it is "premature to make any decision about what this means."
He refused to comment further on the investigation or to release any detail's on Cater's background.
Crawford's mother, meanwhile, told The Associated Press early today that her son had called her from Augusta, Ga.

"I heard from him, but we don't know exactly where he's at," Virginia Crawford said. "I'm not pleased with it. All he told me was he was working and he's down near Augusta, Ga. He's picking peaches."
"He asked me was I worried about him. I told him 'Yes,'" she said. "I said, 'You haven't seen your picture on TV?' He said 'No.' He told me he had been working."
She said her son did not tell her why he had gone to Augusta. "And I was worried," she said.
With Crawford still on the task force list, caseload includes 28 slayings and two disappearances. The other missing youth is 10-year-old Darron Glass, who disappeared Sept. 14, 1980.
Fulton County Medical Examiner Robert Stivers said Cater, who was identified through fingerprints and medical records, had not been reported missing before his body was found.

Begin wants Lebanon peace talk

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - Prime Minister Menachem Begin has offered to open peace talks with Lebanese President Elias Sarkis in Beirut or Jerusalem, Israeli Radio reported.
The radio report said Begin extended the offer Monday during a campaign speech in northern Israel. There were no further details and no indication that the talks Begin was proposing would involve Syria, whose anti-aircraft missiles installed last month in eastern Lebanon have been the focus of the current Mideast crisis.
There was no official comment from Beirut on Begin's offer, but the newspaper al-Anwar quoted presidential palace sources as saying the proposal was a "maneuver not worthy of a reply."
Militia clashes between Lebanese supporters of Iran and Iraq, border shelling in southern Lebanon and artillery attacks on the Christian city of Zahle left at least 10 people dead and several wounded overnight, police reported today.

Pro-Iraqi and pro-Iranian Lebanese Moslems have been waging their own proxy war since the Persian-Gulf war between the two oil-producing nations broke out last September.
The Soviet-made missiles shot down another pilotless Israeli reconnaissance plane Monday, Israel said it was the third plane, all pilotless drones, lost to the Syrian batteries this month, while Syria claimed it was the fifth.
A Syrian communique said it was hit as it flew through Syrian air space and the wreckage landed near the village of Madaya, six miles east of the Lebanese-Syrian border. The Israeli military command said the remote-controlled plane was directed to fly over Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, where the Syrian missiles are in place, but could have strayed into Syria.
Begin insists that the Israeli air force will knock out the Syrian missiles unless they are withdrawn from Lebanon so that Israeli reconnaissance flights can proceed unhindered. Syrian President Hafez Assad says he will not bow to the Israeli demand.

U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib, trying to arrange a diplomatic solution to the crisis, was still awaiting a response from Saudi Arabia to a proposal concerning the Syrian missiles. No details about the proposal have been disclosed. Meanwhile Habib met Monday with former Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.
The Soviet news agency Tass denied Begin's charge that Soviet advisers were with Syria's 22,000 troops in Lebanon, calling it a "provocative fabrication."
"There were no Soviet advisers who accompanied the Syrian units into Lebanon, nor are there any now," Tass said.

Hijacked Turkish airliner returns

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) - A hijacked Turkish airliner returned to Istanbul from Bulgaria after the Turkish crew and passengers overpowered the hijackers to save five American bankers and three other foreign passengers.
Five of the passengers and two of the four hijackers were wounded, but the five Americans were unharmed.
"We owe our lives to the courageous and brave Turkish stewardesses and particularly to the Turkish passengers," George C. Clark, a senior vice president of Citibank told reporters after the plane returned to Istanbul Monday night, some 41 hours after it took off.
The bold escape came at a military airfield near the Bulgarian Black Sea resort of Burgas where the Turkish Airlines DC-9 landed Sunday after four armed Turkish left-wing extremists took the plane over during a flight from Istanbul to Ankara, the Turkish capital. Clark, 56, said he and the four other vice presidents of the New York-based bank "started to get frightened" when the hijackers ordered them to the front row of the plane.

"They checked our identities and found that we were all Americans, and their attitude toward us got worse as the negotiations continued," he said.
"The terrorists told the passengers... that at 5 o'clock they were going to release all but the first three rows and at 6 o'clock they would kill the Americans," said Brian Carlson, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Sofia.
"Turkish passengers began plotting, apparently with the pilot, to save the lives of their fellow hostages."
One of the passengers, Kemal Deniz, said several men used hand signals with the stewardesses to communicate a plan of action.
Two of the hijackers were lured from the aircraft with the promise of holding a news conference. Pilot Metin Ikizoglu "gunned the engine forward, then stepped on the brakes hard, causing a lurch in the plane, and the passengers rose up and grappled with the terrorists," Carlson reported.

"One gunman was disarmed, he said, and the other fired "at random" before he, too, was overpowered. He said explosives were found on the plane.
The four hijackers remained in Bulgaria, but all the passengers and crew members returned to Istanbul.
The hijackers were reported to be men in their mid-20s who belonged to the Turkish Marxist group Dev Sol, or Revolutionary Left.
They threatened to blow up the plane along with themselves, the Americans, the Japanese couple and a French passenger unless Turkey's military government paid them $500,000 and freed 47 imprisoned leftists.
The government rejected the demands and told the hijackers told the hijackers if any of the hostages were killed, it would execute the 47 leftist prisoners.

Americans oppose AWACS sale

NEW YORK (AP) - Americans generally oppose U.S. arms sales to foreign countries and they make no exception in the case of the Reagan administration proposal to sell advanced radar warning planes to Saudi Arabia, an Associated Press-NBC News poll says.
The proposal to sell the sophisticated radar planes to the oil-rich Middle Eastern nation draws nearly 3-to-1 opposition from the public. At the same time, Americans think U.S. aid to Israel is about the right level.

Earlier this year, the Reagan administration said it planned to sell five Airborne Warning and Control Systems (AWACS) planes to the Saudis. The administration said it also would sell the Saudis missiles and additional fuel tanks for the advanced F-15 fighter planes they have on order from the United States.

The plan drew immediate opposition in this country and in Israel. The AWACS are large, sophisticated airborne command posts that use computers and advanced radar to watch and direct air battles over a 250-mile radius.
The sales can not take place without Congress' approval and the administration is not expected to formally submit the proposal until later this year.

Laugh-maker Jessel 'one of kind'

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Comedian Bob Hope, saddened by the death of his friend and fellow laugh-maker George Jessel, nevertheless was able to remember the jokes Jessel figured in over the years. Hope summed up his feelings by saying simply, "He was one of a kind."
The 83-year-old Jessel, whose long how business career and endless stints in the speaking circuit earned him the nickname "Toastmaster General of the USA" from President Harry Truman, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack.

He died in the UCLA Medical Center where he was admitted last week, according to his friend and publicist, Stanley Cowan.
"You know," said the 78-year-old Hope, "he once said he toured 8,500 miles a week, 40 weeks a year, to address 200 gatherings. He introduced the concept of the celebrity roast. He really was a 'Toastmaster General.'"

"They say he even officiated at the Last Supper."
Another of Jessel's old cronies, Milton Berle, recalled he and Jessel were "brought up together" in New York's Harlem, where Jessel was born April 3, 1898, on the same street as Berle. Berle called Jessel "one of the wittiest and cleverest" men he had known.
Funeral services were scheduled for 1 p.m. Wednesday at Hillside Memorial Park and Mortuary for the comedian.

Brine threatening boom town

SOUR LAKE, Texas (AP) — Salt water seeping from a leaking sinkhole may force state officials to abruptly halt this Southeast Texas town's third oil boom of the century to preserve an ecologically-sensitive forest.

The Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates the state's oil and gas industries, will decide June 4 whether to stop much of the production in the 1-million-barrel-a-year oil field.

Such a decision, producers say, will put them out of business and cut off this town's major income source.

Geologists say that eons ago, a huge mushroom of salt was shoved within 600 feet of the earth's surface, trapping pools of oil and gas and forcing even larger pools around the flanks of the salt dome.

One of many oil companies founded at the turn of the century took out a $1 million option on a 865-acre tract at Sour Lake and agreed to drill three wells.

The first two were dry. But the third blew in a gusher on Dec. 8, 1903, signaling the birth of a company later named Texaco Inc., and turning Sour Lake into a muddy tent city of 15,000 almost overnight.

Other parts of the field were carved into oil leases — some only 29 feet wide — along a roadway dubbed "The Shoestring," and wells were drilled so close together the legs of the wooden derricks interlocked.

Prior to World War I, the Hardin County community 65 miles northeast of Houston experienced a similar boom when oil was discovered in pools locked beneath the salt dome.

But on Oct. 9, 1929, so much oil had been pumped from the ground that a 10-acre area in the field started sinking. The ground collapsed, creating a lake. The sinkhole was little more than a local curiosity until last September when officials discovered the seeping salt water.

State's land swap questioned

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It has been suggested in the Senate that a ranch mentioned in a possible trade for University of Texas land is so remote a helicopter might be the best way of getting there.

"A helicopter would be helpful," agreed Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson, D-Midland.

Other senators Monday questioned whether the proposed West Texas swap — 190,000 acres near Big Bend National Park for 190,000 acres of UT land in Hudspeth County — is as good a deal as Gov. Bill Clements insists.

No vote was taken on the proposed land exchange.

The Diamond "A" Cattle Co.'s land in Presidio and Brewster counties would be used for a state park.

House members approved a resolution earlier this month urging the exchange of land, and Clements called it a "marvelous acquisition for the people of Texas."

Clements said the state land was valued at about $50 an acre, while the land owned by former U.S. Treasury Secretary Robert Anderson was valued at $75 an acre. The state would retain mineral rights on both parcels of land.

However, The Austin American-Statesman Monday quoted real-estate agent Paul Juen of El Paso as saying, "You could pay $100 or $150 an acre for that stuff (state land) and sit on it and make money. For $50 an acre, I'll sell it all day long for the state."

Juen said Anderson is asking $150 an acre for a ranch he owns west of the UT property.

Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, said Anderson "has been trying to get rid of this land for 10 years. ... If he wants to do something for the state of Texas, he ought to give it to the state."

The Senate changed the House resolution in committee to direct UT regents "to promptly consider the relative merits and comparative values" of the land.

Southern Presbyterians reaffirm belief

HOUSTON (AP) — Southern Presbyterians, plunging into a modern renewal of a basic and ancient religious issue, have strongly reaffirmed belief in the "full deity as well as the full humanity of Jesus Christ."

That conviction, though challenged periodically from the start of Christianity, has stood through the centuries as the distinguishing foundation of the faith in all its major historic branches.

But "much false accusation and confused uncertainty" has arisen about where Presbyterianism stands on the matter, says the Presbyterian Church U.S., referring indirectly to controversy over views of a recently admitted pastor.

The misimpressions "should be put to rest by a healthy reaffirmation of our catholic and apostolic faith in the full deity and the full humanity of the Lord Jesus Christ," the church governing assembly said. It said laws of the church "require and mandate confession in good faith" of that concept of Jesus by all ministers and other officers of the church in their ordination and installation vows.

The southern denomination's action came late Monday, ahead of pending action late today on the same issue by a concurrent assembly of the mostly northern United Presbyterian Church in which the question had directly risen.

Alarmed outcries have resounded in that church, claiming a minister, the Rev. Mansfield Kaseman of Rockville, Md., was admitted but then declined explicitly to affirm that Christ was fully God as well as fully man.

Although admitted by a Washington, D.C. area unit (presbytery) jointly affiliated with both denominations, the case was appealed up to the other church's top court, which upheld Kaseman's admission.

A group of conservatives contend that unless the situation is thoroughly corrected, the church has fallen into "apostasy," betraying the faith.

Austin cleaning up from floods

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Austinites piled furniture on lawns and spread their soaked carpets on driveways in the hot sun that followed an overnight flood that left at least nine dead and millions of dollars of damage.

"I feel like either laughing or crying, but I have better things to cry about," said Jill Mueller as she looked through her water-ravaged home along Shoal Creek.

Mayor Carole McClellan made a Monday morning inspection of damage resulting from downpours that dumped almost seven inches of rain on some sections of the city between late Saturday night and early Monday morning.

"I think we are fortunate we didn't lose more lives, when you look at the devastation," the mayor said. She asked for a disaster area declaration for the flooded areas.

Austin Police Sgt. Ernest Shugart said authorities had recovered nine bodies, including a man whose pickup truck swirled into a drainage ditch whirlpool and a woman whose car was found 12 feet off the ground in trees.

Shugart said four others were listed as missing, including a mother who was swept away with her baby as her husband watched.

The Austin Municipal Airport recorded just over four inches of rain Sunday night and early Monday, and that brought the total since Saturday night to about seven inches.

Flash flood quickly pushed water to 20-30 feet deep in parts of town.

Homes along Shoal Creek suffered the most damage. The creek, usually a placid stream, wanders from north to south through a residential area and empties into Town Lake.

"The homes at the turns of the creek were demolished," said area resident Cam O'Keefe. "It looks like we had a week of hurricanes."

Mrs. O'Keefe and husband Kayo helped rescue a stranded woman and son, whose home was battered by the water.

"We put our boots on first to avoid snakes," said Mrs. O'Keefe.

One of the dead was identified as Michael Villarreal, 18, whose pickup truck wound up in a flooded drainage ditch in North Austin.

Mike Sheridan, a night auditor at a hotel near the ditch, said he saw the truck go down like a sinking ship.

"It looked like someone was pushing the back of the truck. Then it looked like it floated backwards. I could've sworn I saw someone jump on the tailgate before it went down. I saw arms..." Sheridan recalled.

Water ran "like the muddy Mississippi" in a ditch that usually carries a trickle, he said.

Shugart said the body of an unidentified woman was found early Monday morning in the back seat of her Cadillac, which was tangled in branches 12 feet off the ground.

Thousands of cars were soaked, floated and stranded on Austin streets. Auto dealerships several blocks from the Texas Capitol lost scores of new cars, and spent most of Monday trying to get rid of mud piled four inches deep.

Other fatalities reported by police and sheriff's deputies included:

— Jeffrey Grove, 27, and his mother Carolyn Grove. The bodies were found two blocks apart on Shoal Creek Boulevard. No details were available.

— Cao Chin Lu, 44, who was driving home from work when the water began to rise. Her husband was following in another car and was able to stop in time. Her body was found a quarter-mile from her car.

— Sally Dexter, 52, was found dead near the western side of Zilker Park.

— Phyllis Millner, 23, whose body was found at 11 a.m. Monday by police near Shoal Creek.

Shugart said police still had not identified one of the two remaining bodies and were withholding the identification of the other.

Federal gas leases are offered in three states

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Sealed bids will be opened June 23 here on the lease of 11 tracts of public land in New Mexico for oil and gas purposes, U.S. Bureau of Land Management officials say.

The tracts, totaling 2,265 acres, are located in known oil and gas production areas in Lea, Eddy, Sandoval and Rio Arriba counties.

At the same sale, the BLM will offer leases on nine parcels of public land totaling 380 acres in Major, Dewey, Woodward and Ellis counties in Oklahoma.

In addition, seven tracts of acquired lands totaling 1,100 acres in Pittsburg, Alfalfa, Woodward and Roger Mills counties in Oklahoma and one tract totaling 87 acres in Ochiltree County, Texas, will be offered for oil and gas leasing.

The BLM will open bids on all the tracts at 2 p.m. June 23 in Sweeney Convention Center in Santa Fe. The tracts will be leased to bidders offering the highest bonuses at the sale.

Royalties payable to the United States on future production from the leases ranges from 12½ percent to 25 percent for oil and 12½ percent to 16-23 percent for natural gas.

Annual rental on the leases is $2 an acre.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Lament for the poor

Poor people will be hurt. Such has been said of every program President Ronald Reagan has suggested to revive the sagging economy and shrink the mushrooming federal bureaucracy. The cuts probably will hurt, at least in the short run, all people who look to government for their support, in whatever fashion.

Latest among impact studies is the one by the American Gas Association which claims natural gas decontrol could force the poor to spend up to 19 percent of income for fuel. Gas bills for the average U.S. family could rise to 3.9 percent of income. Currently, families making $7,000 or less per year pay up to 10.6 percent of income for gas; those between $7,000 and $35,000 spend 2.2 percent.

The above - average in earning power, families with $35,000 or more, pay a smaller percentage now - one percent - and would do so under decontrol - 1.7 percent.

Now, that does sound like discrimination against the poor, doesn't it? Well, the statistic is meaningless in relation to the question of whether gas should be controlled. Poor, average or rich - you pay the same for the gas. The lower your income, the higher the percentage committed to all necessities, and the more dearly come the luxuries.

Reagan, in his various programs to cut expenses, has shown no prejudice toward the poor. Elected on a platform of cutting the federal bite out of the private economy, Reagan fulfills campaign promises by hurting the poor, the average, the rich. That the poor hurt more is not Reagan's fault - they simply started with less and they tend to get more benefits and contribute less on taxes.

Each individual will probably lose something as the federal government shrinks its obligations to society. With Reagan, more people stand a chance to lose less economically than under previous administrations.

Under the "Great Society" federal concept, the U.S. was in danger of losing its middle class, the average income people to whom befell the major responsibility for making the poor less poor. Medium and median-income people cannot afford the investments that lessen the tax burden in higher money brackets. Meeting federal guidelines for poverty removes a large percentage of the U.S. population from tax responsibility. The result of admirably - intentioned, but overly expensive, programs to raise living standards for the poor, eventually, would have been middle class dissipation into poverty. This is the stark reality, the economic axiom. Reagan forces us to face - the poor have to get either poorer or more productive.

By its own admission, the gas association is less concerned with the poor than with profit. Natural gas distributors belonging to the association say they fear decontrol would decrease usage. Without a government price ceiling, the distributors further theorize, prices would inflate.

Without a government price ceiling, the industry would have itself to blame for inflation. The natural gas industry, no industry, can blame the cost of its goods on lack of government controls.

Too many industries for too long have used government as the excuse for all their woes. Industry, say its members, has been encumbered with excessive regulations, driving up the cost of consumer goods and services.

Now, such industries as the natural gas handlers would blame inflation on that same government for withdrawal of those same regulations. You can't have it both ways.

Federal bureaucracies in danger of losing funds, say, "Pity the poor, for they shall lose most." Public and private industries seem prone to jump on the bandwagon of the poor, when the truth is, everyone stands to lose something in the president's program to strengthen the economy by reducing the federal burden.

Everyone might pay more for gas. Equally possible, everyone might use less gas, thereby reducing the industry's profits. Basic laws of supply and demand will decide the losers; and that is as it should be.

The cliché is, "The truth hurts." The truth is that all Americans have to accept vulnerability to hurt to fulfill the Reagan mandate. That is why he was elected, to improve U.S. economy regardless of the pain involved.

In closing we should like to note that the pain you keep reading about in budget circles will be immediate as the federal cutbacks will prove less injurious to American society as a whole than continuation of the pre-Reagan course. Continued inflation caused by an unnatural, government - regulated economy, prolonged irresponsible fiscal policies at the state and local, as well as federal levels only would postpone the pain. Operating now gives the patient, American society, a better chance for surviving the knife.

Rail aid off the track

Although most Americans are cognizant of and concerned about federal financial assistance to the moribund Chrysler Corporation, many are unaware that Washington is running a bankrupt railroad system that has already cost the taxpayers $6 billion.

Five years ago, the government bailed out the defunct Penn Central and other faltering eastern lines which collectively amount to a 17,000 - mile, 16 - state network. For going along with a government - sponsored railroad, the labor unions extracted some of the costliest wage agreements ever made, including a lifetime salary for senior laid - off employees.

The Consolidated Rail Corp., better known as Conrail, is operated by the Department of Transportation, which holds 80 percent of the stock. Predictably, the government has been no more successful than private enterprise in dealing with the problems that drove the predecessor railroads into bankruptcy. Last year, Conrail had a net loss of $243.7 million. In other words, the taxpayers are paying more than twice as much to keep Conrail going in a given year as the total cost of operating the executive branch of government.

Such a financial hemorrhage was made to order for the Reagan torniquet. Accordingly the administration has just submitted legislation to Congress to get the government out of the railroad business. Under the broad three - point plan, the Transportation Department would sell portions of Conrail to profitable railroads, mostly in the South and West. Conrail commuters, some 485,000 primarily in the New York and Philadelphia areas, would be served by Amtrak or commuter authorities, with $50 million allocated to smooth the transfer. And current labor - protection agreements would be repealed in favor of a graduated lump - sum payment based on length of service.

As advisable as the divestiture of Conrail is, it is far from certain because of fierce opposition from organized labor and congressmen from affected states. The administration and the country's taxpayers should push all the harder, therefore, for passage of this legislation to avoid further squandering of untold additional millions of dollars. If Congress succumbs to parochial pressures and keeps the government tied to a losing railroad system which it has no business operating in the first place, then there isn't much hope for ever getting control over our disordered fiscal affairs in Washington.

What does Ronald Reagan have that Jimmy Carter didn't?

Stop. Don't even try to come up with a comprehensive answer. We haven't time to go into all of that now.

The real subject of this discussion is not presidents but the federal budget - rather, the budgeting process.

And we all know already what Reagan has in that context that his predecessor could never quite hack a budget plan tailored to his specifications from a Congress prepared to give him essentially what he wants.

The key word there is prepared. Whether this Congress is entirely willing to go all the way is another matter, but more of that later.

What matters now is that Senate and House, the later in defiance of its own leadership, have given preliminary assent to a new economic plan that deviates in details but not in philosophy and practical effect from the president's original requests. This despite continuing controversy as to the goals of that plan, which would rewrite or reject much of the social engineering legacy of Democratic and Republican administrations alike of the last half century. Not to mention doubts as to the effectiveness of the measures proposed to implement it.

Not since Lyndon Johnson have we seen a president with such a way with Congress - and Johnson had a Congress overwhelmingly of his own political persuasion and receptive to his social policies.

Reagan's public popularity, extraordinary even for a new president still on the post - election honeymoon, has contributed enormously to his bipartisan support. But let it be remembered that Carter also enjoyed a good measure of public good will in the early months of his presidency.

The difference is in how presidential popularity has been put to work. Reagan has used it to reinforce his personal political skills in courting - coercing is also a good word - a partisanly divided and potentially contentious Congress. It has been a masterful presidential performance in manipulating the legislative process to his ends.

Carter gave every indication of not knowing what to do with public popularity until it was too late. He had lost it. Meanwhile, he persisted in addressing a Congress controlled by his own party as if it were a potentially hostile foreign power - until it was no longer a case of "potentially."

Reagan has provided ample evidence that he is not one to make that mistake. His refusal in the preliminary skirmishing to compromise on the essentials of Reaganomics suggests that neither is he likely to rewrite the plan should the congressional going get rough or the economy throw a few unforeseen curves. Carter seemed to confuse revising budgets as a remedy per se for setbacks. Toward the end, he was dealing them out like a pack of cards.

Reagan's initial triumph is still far from a final victory in the budget war. The differing budget resolutions of House and Senate must first be reconciled. Then come the decisive battles that will be fought out in many separate votes over the actual appropriations for specific programs outlined in the budget. Also pending is Reagan's comprehensive tax - cut program, which is essential to his long - term economic plan but for which the White House has to date had less success in marshaling bipartisan support.

Many of the Democrats and some of the Republicans who went along on the budget resolution did so against their real convictions. They are more likely to vote those convictions in the coming votes on the fine print of the Reagan plan.

This is the decisive phase of the budgeting process and it will require of the president all the political and public relations skill he has demonstrated to date - if not more.

His predecessor did not do so well in objectively more favorable circumstances. But Reagan does enjoy an advantage Carter did not - a recent example of what not to do.

How to and how not to

Virtuous vices of Americans

BY CHRISTOPHER FLANNERY

"What a happy land the New World is, where man's vices are almost as useful to society as his virtues!"

This sage paradox issued from the pen of Alexis de Tocqueville, a Frenchman who travelled our country during the early 1830s taking voluminous and memorable notes, which have come down to us in the form of his two volume classic Democracy in America.

It is fashionable these days to think that any idea antedating the 20th century is hopelessly outmoded. Indeed, novelty has won such a name for itself that to say an idea is new is as much as to prove it is true! Intellectual epochs are measured in decades, if not in days. Earnest souls eager for direction scan the best - seller lists so as not to miss the latest philosophy of existence rendering irrelevant all previous thought of man. Still, there is reason to suspect that the wisdom, and that what Tocqueville saw in the New World 150 years ago is not without meaning in the merely newer world in which we live.

What had caught Tocqueville's eye was the enterprising, independent spirit of the Americans of his day, which counted for so much of their prosperity and was so central to the functioning of their political institutions. This quality, which was seen by the Americans as a virtue, was viewed by Old World Europeans as a vice. And far from being central to their own institutions - the Europeans considered it a dangerous threat to political stability. What the New World welcomed as "praiseworthy industry," Old World aristocrats eschewed as a dangerous "love of gain."

And who can gainsay them? That restless search for a better life that first led oppressed Europeans to these shores (and still brings millions of immigrants across our borders today), and then drove them further west to populate the vast expanse of the country's interior; that independence and self - reliance that sustained numberless families while they eked out a living on the inhospitable frontier, was absolutely essential for the well - being of such a country as America. But such attributes would be disruptive in the extreme in a static, semi - feudal, traditional aristocracy.

What is remarkable is that, in recent years, the most progressive and least aristocratic - minded Americans have looked upon this peculiarly American trait with a disdain and dread even more intense than that of the 19th century European aristocrat. Until only a few months ago, it seems, hardly anyone with an ounce of social consciousness would admit to harboring a "profit motive" in his bosom. Seeking, or worse yet, making a profit was almost anti - social. It was worse than eating peas from a knife. One blushed and excused oneself.

The awful decline of our economy may have revived - for the moment - some of the customary and commonsensical regard for this useful, American "vice." What wonders might not be achieved, if we recalled some of our ancient virtues!

Doctor in the house

"When I saw Glover the other day, he looked sick."

"Why don't you go to your doctor?" I asked him.

"I did go. He wants me to see a specialist."

"So why don't you go see the specialist?"

"He's delivering a paper in Sydney, Australia, on his specialty. He won't be back until July."

"All right, then go to another specialist."

"I called another specialist and his secretary said he can't see me until September. I told her I might be dead by then. So she said she'd move me up to August."

"This is May - that seems like a long time to wait. Did you go back to your regular doctor?"

"Yeah. He called around and he finally found a guy who would see me right away."

"That's great," I said. "Why don't you go to see him?"

"Because I'm not sure how good a specialist he is."

"Why? Did you check him out?"

"No. But if he's such a hot doctor, how come he isn't delivering a paper in Vienna, instead of seeing patients?"

"Maybe he is in between lectures," I suggested.

"All right. But if he knows his stuff, why doesn't he have a two - month waiting list like everybody else?"

"That's a good question. He can't be a great medical man if he's willing to see you right away. Maybe he's just starting out in practice."

"I thought the same thing. So that means if I go see him, I'm going to have to get a second opinion."

"Wasn't your family doctor suspicious when the specialist said you could come over so soon?"

"It did make him nervous. He said he had never known a specialist who would see a patient right away. But he also said I didn't have any choice. It was either go to him or (ital) NOT (unital). See the best man in the field because he was in Australia."

political stability. What the New World welcomed as "praiseworthy industry," Old World aristocrats eschewed as a dangerous "love of gain."

What had caught Tocqueville's eye was the enterprising, independent spirit of the Americans of his day, which counted for so much of their prosperity and was so central to the functioning of their political institutions. This quality, which was seen by the Americans as a virtue, was viewed by Old World Europeans as a vice. And far from being central to their own institutions - the Europeans considered it a dangerous threat to

The cocaine trail rarely ends in jail

MIAMI (AP) — On a pitted, makeshift runway cut into ranchland deep in a Bolivian jungle, Richie Fiano watched nervously as peasants loaded $9 million worth of cocaine aboard his airplane.

Fiano and three other Americans were surrounded by dozens of Bolivians loyal to Roberto Suarez, reputed kingpin of Bolivia's biggest drug smuggling gang.

"I'll tell you what scared me... They thought we were legitimate drug dealers. So I was thinking: 'What's to stop them from ripping us off or from holding us hostage?'"

"What's gonna happen if all of a sudden they start coming out of the fields and they say, 'You'd better tell Miami to release the $9 million or you're all dead?'"

Fiano and fellow U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents, posing as lieutenants of an organized crime family, went on to pull off the biggest cocaine sting in U.S. history — a haul the DEA estimates at more than $107 million on the street.

But like many undercover agents trying to crack the spiraling cocaine import business, Fiano risks his life and spends hundreds of hours on an investigation only to be frustrated later.

In the case that sent Fiano to the Bolivian jungle, only one person was taken into custody — Alfredo Guterrez, owner of an air taxi service in Santa Cruz, Bolivia, and alleged "money man" for Suarez' organization.

Guterrez was indicted in Miami on multiple drug conspiracy counts. But his son soon arrived with cashier's checks and paid the $1 million bail. Guterrez fled to Bolivia, out of the grasp of U.S. officials.

"What bothers me more than anything is here I am with the biggest case in history — 854 pounds of dope — and no bodies to put on trial," Fiano said. "Nobody is paying for it and these guys are back in business...."

Few cocaine smugglers go to jail because many never go to trial. Some, like Guterrez and alleged Colombian cocaine gang leader Martha DeGaviria-Montoya, skip bond. There are an estimated 2,700 drug fugitives — 700 more than the number of DEA agents.

Raising bail is no problem for those in the lucrative cocaine trade. The DEA's Con Dougherty says: "these guys come up with their bond money right out of their pockets."

When trials are possible, the judicial system moves slowly. Most arrests have been in the southeastern United States, overloading dockets there. U.S. Attorney Atlee Wampler said the backlog in southern Florida is so severe that if his office stopped opening new cases today, it would take 9½ years to clear it.

There have been some major drug seizures, and some convictions:

—A federal jury took just over 20 minutes to convict Isaac Kattan-Kassin of possession with intent to distribute some 20 kilograms of cocaine.

—Two leaders of the Black Tuna gang received long prison terms and heavy fines after being found guilty on various drug counts. The gang's alleged Colombian ringleader, Raul Davila-Jimeno, also known as "Black Tuna," was never apprehended.

—In February, DEA agents seized 826 pounds of cocaine and arrested two men, including the director of a federally funded youth program in Miami. Charges later were dropped against the director, who has resigned, but are pending against the second man.

—An estimated 831 pounds of cocaine were seized on the high seas in Operation Grouper, the DEA-Coast Guard effort that brought some 120 arrests.

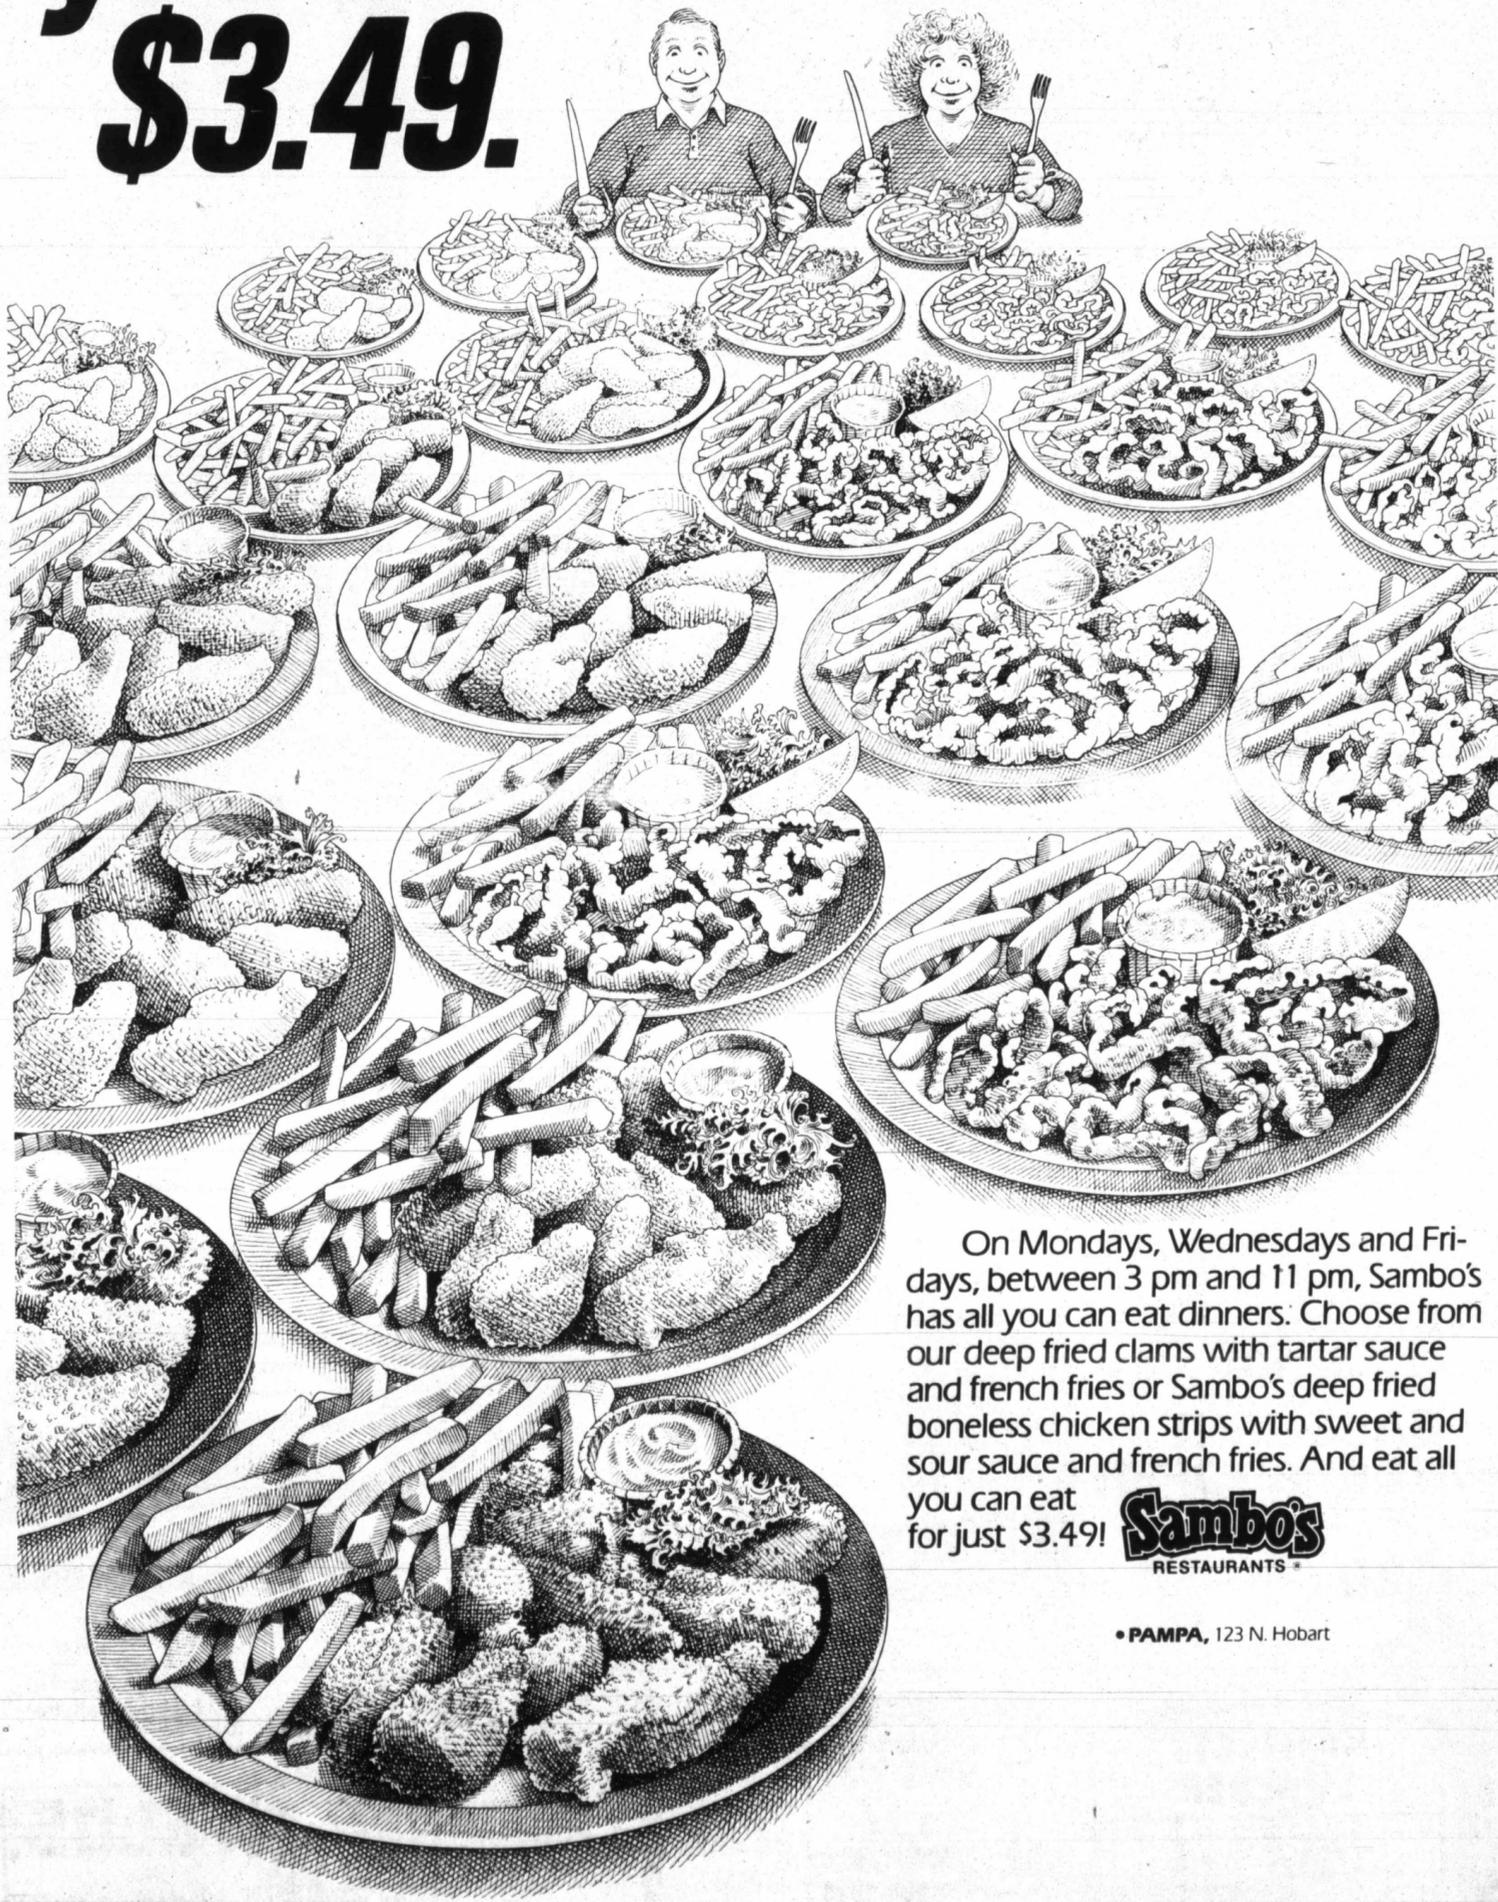

—On May 11, agents in Hawaii confiscated 30 pounds of cocaine that had been smuggled in from South America.

—Customs agents in Miami confiscated 233 pounds of cocaine in two crates that arrived on a commercial flight from Ecuador this month. No arrests were made.

El Paso, Juarez: happy economic pair

BUSTLING DOWNTOWN. Spanish language signs and throngs of pedestrians mark downtown El Paso. In a period when many downtown areas nationwide are dying, El Paso's central business district is thriving because of business from nearby Ciudad Juarez, Mexico. (AP Laserphoto)

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — To outsiders, Juarez still evokes thoughts of quick divorces, gambling, drinking and scantily clad women at wild nightclubs. But to people in neighboring El Paso, Juarez is a partner in economic stability — the source of pesos that are welcome north of the border.

With no other major cities for nearly 300 miles, El Paso and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico have learned to depend on each other for commerce, creating an economic climate that is virtually oblivious to changes in the rest of the United States and Mexico.

"We're pretty isolated here," said Mark Miles, director of the El Paso Chamber of Commerce. "The nearest city is too far for much trade to go on. There is relatively little monetary connection between Juarez and Mexico. Very little comes into Juarez from the balance of Mexico."

The cities, with a combined population of about 1.5 million, form the second largest metropolitan area along the border. Juarez is larger, with nearly 1 million residents, and both cities are growing rapidly.

"We're really one big community separated by a stretch of water and some bridges," said Don Shuffstall of State National Bank, referring to the Rio Grande. "There are 70 million to 80 million bodies crossing the bridges here every year. More than 70 percent of the businesses in El Paso accept pesos. It's big business here."

A survey by business consultants Thomas F. Lee and Associates indicated Juarez residents spent nearly $90 million in El Paso in 1978. The survey said the average Juarez family made less than $270 a month then, and spent an average of nearly $30 in El Paso every week.

The retail industry gets most of those peso-dollars. Signs and most salesclerks are bilingual, and many pricetags are in both dollars and pesos. While downtown areas in other cities are decaying, El Paso bustles at all hours.

Sid Rosen, president of the Downtown Development Association Inc. and owner of two men's stores, said about 70 percent of the downtown customers are from Juarez. "Our salvation certainly has been the border," he added.

"Some of it has to do with price," said Juarez business leader Guillermo Ochoa. "Some of it has to do with availability and some of it has to do with variety."

To a lesser degree, dollars also flow into Juarez from El Paso. A Chamber of Commerce survey this year showed more than 35 percent of El Paso residents visit Juarez regularly, spending a median amount of $17 per visit, mostly on food and liquor.

"Juarez has pretty well always been a net profit to El Paso," Miles said. "It's tended to be a bedroom community. They do their business in El Paso and live and sleep in Juarez."

For U.S. citizens, crossing the border is generally merely a matter of waving at customs agents. Mexicans officially need documents to allow entry into Texas, but thousands cross illegally every day.

Retailers monitor government policies to keep the traffic and money flowing. Rosen said he and others fought for retention of temporary bridge crossing permits, which the government planned to discontinue. They convinced officials to keep issuing the permits, protecting El Paso's cheap labor pool.

Tourism once was the main business in Juarez, and visitors could buy cheap liquor, gamble, go to nightclubs or get a quick divorce. In an effort to change that image, Mexico banned rapid divorces and cleaned up much of the other activity.

Now, Juarez and El Paso jointly vie for convention trade and the new tourism pours millions of dollars into the area, said Bob Knight of the El Paso Convention Bureau. He said tourism in El Paso was up 19 percent last year.

Many U.S. companies have discovered labor-intensive work can be done as cheaply in Mexico as in Hong Kong or Taiwan, and in the past several years, 112 American companies have located plants in Juarez. The plants have had a big impact on Juarez' economy, Ochoa said.

Madame Mao a nonperson

PEKING (AP) — Four months ago, Mao Tse-tung's widow was China's public enemy No. 1, the avenging fury of a bygone revolution, still calling for blood from the defendant's dock.

She dominated her trial on charges of treason and mass persecutions, many of them fatal. Front pages of the official press denounced her as a "snake," a "scorpion" and "evil incarnate."

The highest echelons of China's Communist Party deliberated over the politically explosive issue of her fate.

Last Jan. 25, after six stormy weeks, Mme. Mao, Jiang Qing, was sentenced to death with a two-year reprieve to give her time to repent. For the last time, the 67-year-old former actress was dragged struggling out of court, screaming, "Making revolution is right!" and

"Long live Chairman Mao!"

Today Jiang Qing is a nonperson. Her vaunted trial no longer is hailed, or even mentioned. A promised second wave of trials of other radicals has been postponed indefinitely.

There is no word of Jiang Qing's condition or her place of confinement. Chinese officials do not answer inquiries about her.

She is believed to be confined, under comfortable conditions, in the prison on the outskirts of Peking where she was held, segregated from other prisoners, after her arrest following the death of Mao in October 1976.

Jiang Qing and her co-defendants of the "Gang of Four" were convicted of plotting to usurp the power of the state and to defame leaders of the party and state and of persecuting millions of Chinese during the 1966-76

Cultural Revolution. Five elderly military defendants were convicted of plotting to assassinate Mao in 1971.

The exact terms of Mme. Mao's suspended death sentence are not known.

Teacher insurance approved

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — All school teachers and employees in Texas would be entitled to group health insurance under a bill that won final legislative approval Monday.

House members, on voice vote, accepted Senate changes in the bill, sending it to Gov. Bill Clements for signature or veto.

The bill would authorize local school districts to set up group insurance programs so long as they complied with minimum benefit standards set by the state. For teachers without a local program, there would be a statewide program administered by the Teacher Retirement System.

A teacher would have the choice of joining the group insurance program or staying out.

Retired teachers also could join the group plan.

The state could pay part of teachers' insurance premiums, but there is no money in the 1982-83 general appropriation bill for the contributions.

If the state paid as much toward teachers' insurance as it does toward state employees' group coverage, estimated cost would be $200 million to $300 million per biennium, said Rep. Hamp Atkinson, D-New Boston, the sponsor.

Wrong pesticide causes headaches in school

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — After investigating complaints of headaches by students and teachers, school officials have discovered a banned pesticide accidentally was sprayed inside a local school last week.

A maintenance worker mistakenly used chlordane, banned by the Environmental Protection Agency for above-ground use, to spray hallways, restrooms and possibly classrooms of the Alternative Education, said Eugene Schilhab, maintenance and operations officer for the Corpus Christi Independent School District.

Principal Jim Todd said some of the 300 students and 16 teachers reported headaches but no one felt ill enough to leave school.

Five teachers complained to the American Federation of Teachers after becoming ill and the organization relayed the complaints to Schilhab.

On advice of Dr. Christopher Buttery, city-county health director, the school's furniture and floors will be scrubbed and the rugs steam cleaned.

"The amount here is very small," Buttery said. "It was an accidental exposure, a once-in-a-blue-moon type of thing. I wasn't supposed to happen, but we just don't want to take any chances."

Schilhab said he suspects chlordane was sprayed in some classrooms but maintenance officials halted use of the pesticide before the entire facility was covered.

Rangers rally past Twins

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Bill Stein set an American League record Monday night doing something he never thought the Texas Rangers would let him try — pinch hitting.

"I didn't feel they would use me for a pinch hitter since they had John Ellis, but I got that first one early in the year and they just kept sending me up there," said Stein, who came to the Rangers in the off-season as a free agent.

Stein's ninth inning, bases-loaded single—his seventh consecutive pinch-hit this year for Texas—gave the Rangers a 4-3 come-from-behind victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Bob Johnson of Baltimore, who had six consecutive pinch-hits in 1964, and Stein were tied for the record. Dave Philley of Philadelphia established the major league record of eight in a row in 1958.

"Is Philley the one who has the major league record?" asked Stein. "I didn't know. I'm just amazed. In fact, I was amazed after I got three in a row."

Stein has now hit safely in 15 consecutive games, seven of those with only one at-bat in a contest. For the season, Stein is 21 for 39, a .538 batting average. He's had eight RBIs.

The fans kept applauding after Stein's game-winning hit until he came out of the dugout for a bow.

"That's the first time that ever happened," said Stein. "I didn't know how to act."

Stein signed a three-year contract for $125,000 a year with the Rangers after he played out his option with the Seattle Mariners.

"I was picked by the Chicago White Sox, the California Angels and Texas," said Stein. "I told my agent there was no way I wanted to go back to Seattle. I knew I would probably be a backup infielder for the Rangers but I also felt I would get my chances."

Stein's record hit came off reliever Doug Corbett after Buddy Bell's third single of the night had tied the game 3-3.

"I knew he had to throw the ball over the plate and I'm glad it was a game winner," said Stein of the single up the middle. "The hit I had to tie the record also won the game."

Stein said that in three instances on his hit streak "I just got lucky. But that was a solid stroke there tonight."

The Twins had gone ahead in the top of the ninth inning on a run-scoring single by Ron Jackson. Minnesota got its other two runs on RBI ground-outs by Mickey Hatcher.

Bell knocked in three runs for the Rangers.

Stein's streak began April 14 off Cleveland's Rick Waits. He tied the American league record May 23rd in Seattle with a single off Larry Andersen.

Swope wins NRA rifle title

AMARILLO—Rick Swope of Pampa downed 32 targets Sunday to win the National Rifle Association (NRA) Regional Hunter's Municipal Rifle championship.

Swope, using a .357 caliber pistol, downed 58 of 80 targets in the two-day shoot. Swope is only in his second year of competitive silhouette shooting.

Jerry Todd of Muleshoe won a shootoff with Ronda Sides of Vega for second after both tied with 55 in regulation.

Glenn Brummett, also of Pampa, hit 54 targets to win the AAA aggregate, while fellow citizen Gerrett Helton of Pampa placed third in the B aggregate with a 27.

In the women's division, Fran Gross and Nancy Moreland of Pampa came away winners.

Mrs. Gross downed 41 targets to win the AA aggregate, while Mrs. Morehead won a shootoff with Grovone Carey. Dumas, after the two had tied at 24 in the B aggregate.

Pampa trio place in marathon

Three Pampa runners placed in the Funfest half-marathon Saturday in Amarillo. Austin elementary coach Louis Allred was clocked at 1:20.56 to finish in a tie with Dennis DeNuccio of Amarillo for 16th in the overall results.

Bruce Belcher placed 28th in 1:24.25, and Tom Byrd was 40th in 1:28.41.

Gary Friemel of Groom finished in 71st place.

Bruce Washburn, Tucumcari, New Mexico, set a new record in the men's 19 and under division when he crossed the finish line in 1:11.31. The old record was 1:11.53, set by Cliff McCurdy of Lubbock last year.

In Monday's SWAT fun run, Ann Johnson of Pampa finished fourth (29:43) in the women's 18 and over division.

Red Raider Day tees off Wednesday

Texas Tech coaches will be the guests of Pampa boosters during the annual Top O' Texas Red Raider Day Wednesday at the Pampa Golf and Country Club.

Registration begins at 12:30 a.m., followed by a shotgun golf tournament at 1 p.m., a dinner at 6:30 p.m., and a program by the Tech coaching staff at 7:30 p.m.

Jerry Moore, new Tech head football coach, will be introduced. Moore replaces Rex Dockery.

Head basketball coach Gerald Myers is also expected to be on hand.

Elmer Wilson is president of the Top O' Texas Red Raider Club.

Last year, Pampa members raised $4,000 for a scholarship fund for two future Texas Tech athletes.

Danny Buzzard was last year's recipient of a Red Raider Club football scholarship.

Niekro claims sixth win as Astros defeat Padres

HOUSTON (AP) — The specter of a possible baseball strike was apparent Monday in the clubhouse of the Houston Astros.

The Astros appeared to have their act together in a 6-3 win over the San Diego Padres, but there was visible concern as to whether the season might end Friday if the owners and players cannot come to terms.

Pitcher Joe Niekro claimed his sixth victory, reliever Joe Sambito upped his consecutive shutout innings to 10 in earning his fourth save and Art Howe, though he lost his 23-game hitting streak, remained the National League's leading hitter with a .367 average.

"I've been feeling real good lately," Sambito said after his seventh appearance in the last eight games. "I feel like I'm in a groove, like I've zeroed in. It's the feeling I've been waiting for all season."

But the 1981 season could end quickly should a strike begin Friday.

"The way I'm looking at it, there's definitely room for compromise. Both sides will be hurt badly. We all take the risk of turning off the fans," Sambito said.

Howe was disappointed about the end of his hitting streak, a club record and the longest in the majors this season, but he agreed a strike would hurt everyone, including the league's top hitter.

"I knew sooner or later the streak would come to an end," Howe said. "I just hoped it would go on a bit longer. I hope it doesn't come to a strike, but if there is I'll just try and stay in shape. I'm sure some of the guys will get together and take some batting practice. Everybody's going to suffer."

Houston helped Niekro with three first inning runs on Howe's sacrifice bunt and singles by Jose Cruz and Rafael Landestoy. San Diego narrowed the count to 3-2 on Luis Salazar's second inning sacrifice fly and Broderick Perkins' run-scoring single in the third.

A two-run triple by Craig Reynolds and Cesar Cedeno's sacrifice fly in the fourth made it 6-2.

Perkins' sacrifice fly cut that lead to 6-3 in the fifth.

The Astros got all their runs off loser Steve Mura. 1-7. Mura allowed six hits in four innings, striking out one and walking four.

Celane down Glo-Valve, 5-1

Greg Clayton struck out 14 batters as Celane defeated Glo-Valve, 5-1, last Friday night in a National Little League game at Optimist Park.

Celane is now tied with OCAW for second place in the National League—standings with a 5-1 record.

Clayton allowed three hits, walked six, and either made or assisted on four putouts.

Bryan Hogan and Donnie Samuels shared mound duties for Glo-Valve, each pitching three innings and giving up a total of seven hits.

Celane's Mike Lynn continued a home run trend he started late last season, belting his third round-tripper of the season.

Clayton foiled an attempt at a second intentional walk for him in the game by hitting the fourth pitch for a single.

Chad McDougal, Glo-Valve's right fielder made two outstanding catches off Celane power hitters Sandra Farrah and Mike Lynn.

Celane meets first-place Dixie at 8 p.m. tonight for the final game of first-half play.

OCAW meets Cabot at 6 p.m. in the early game.

The Dallas Cowboys led the National Football League in scoring in 1980 with 454 points.

NEW INDY 500 WINNER. Mario Andretti poses in his car with the Borg-Warner trophy and a quart of milk at the Indianapolis Speedway Monday after being named the winner of the 65th Indy 500. Andretti was named the winner after officials determined that Bobby Unser passed several cars on the inside of the yellow line during a caution period. (AP Laserphoto)

Andretti declared winner of Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mario Andretti's first day as a two-time winner of the Indianapolis 500 was a rollercoaster of emotion. When the 1969 Indy winner went to sleep Sunday night, he was a second-place finisher in that day's Indy classic. But the 41-year-old racer from Nazareth, Pa., awoke on Monday to find that the race stewards had snatched the triumph away from Bobby Unser, the man who took the victory laps at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, and made Andretti the winner.

"I didn't know what to say or how to feel," Andretti said. "When (chief mechanic) Jim McGee called me at about 8:30 (a.m.), it was a shock. My first feeling was 'Hey, I won.' But then my emotions were very mixed."

"Winning here is supposed to be a delightful experience. I'm sure in time it will be. It's a plus and a minus for both of us, though. It's a very unusual way to win an event."

It's unfortunate for him and for me. "The unfortunate thing is that Bobby went through all the hoopla, all the things the winner gets to go through. Then it was taken away from him. And I did not get to go through any of that. "I know how Bobby must feel. The 1978 Italian Grand Prix was taken away from me precisely that way because I supposedly jumped the line at the start. Maybe this makes up for it a little, but I don't know whether anything really makes up for it."

"And that doesn't make Bobby feel any better." Andretti, teammate Gordon Johncock and A.J. Foyt all complained to the stewards following the race that Unser had illegally passed a group of cars on lap 149 as he came back on the track from the pits during a yellow flag caution period. The stewards, who are in charge of the race course, looked at videotapes and other race data and agreed.

penalizing Unser one lap. That left the two-time Indy winner nearly a full lap behind Andretti, but still in second place ahead of Australian Vern Schuppan. However, it also cost Unser and the Roger Penske team about $100,000 in prize money. A pair of protests by Penske — one pleading that Unser was innocent of the charge and the other accusing Andretti of the same type violation — were denied.

by the stewards after nearly six hours of hearings Monday. Although the checks for both first and second place were being held up pending an appeal on those decisions, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway released the tentative figures. "If nothing more changes, Andretti and team owner U.E. "Pat" Patrick will eventually receive a check for $262,424 from the record purse of $1.6 million.

Second-place money for Unser and Penske, the man Andretti drove for last year, would be $168,674. Those figures would change if the positions were again reversed because accessory money that is part of the prize fund is based on individual car sponsorships. In 1980, Johnny Rutherford and car owner Jim Hall took a record winner's payoff of $318,819 because of additional accessory and lap money.

Texas League roundup

Stan Davis slugged two home runs as the El Paso Diablos took an 8-5 Texas League baseball victory over the Arkansas Travelers Monday night.

In other Texas League action, Tulsa beat Midland, 7-2, and Jackson whipped San Antonio, 9-2. Amarillo's scheduled game at Shreveport was postponed because of rain.

Davis had a three-run homer in the fourth inning for the Diablos and added a two-run homer in the fifth inning.

Mariners sweep slumping Royals

SEATTLE (AP) — Rick Auerbach and Lenny Randle homered to lead the Seattle Mariners to a 5-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals and a sweep of Monday's two-night doubleheader from the slumping defending American League champions.

In the first game, Gary Gray drove in four runs with his third two-homer game in 10 days and rookie Brian Allard checked Kansas City on six hits as Seattle won 7-1.

In the second game, Kansas City's Juan Berenguer, 0-3, made his first start of the season and struck out five batters over the first three innings. However, Randle led off the fourth with his second home run of the season to tie the score 1-1.

Notorious burglar hopes career is over

GAVEL PRESENTATION. House Speaker Bill Clayton, right, presents Representative Foster Whaley of Pampa with a commemorative gavel, acknowledging his work as vice chairman of the Constitutions Amendments Committee of the House during the 67th session of the Texas Legislature. Clayton said it was the committee system which provided leadership for the five-month session which began Jan. 13.

HOUSTON (AP) — Michael Nycum abandoned the affluent neighborhood where he grew up, the exclusive private schools, the expensive cars and his influential friends to feed a voracious drug addiction. Nycum is a professional thief, but not one who steals for extra pocket change. Instead, he lifts jewelry and silver from the homes of Houston's rich.

Local law enforcement officers estimate Nycum, who has spent 10 of the last 15 years behind prison bars, has stolen up to $500,000 worth of valuables a year.

But the 35-year-old professional burglar says he's miserable and hopes his so-called career is over.

Nycum now faces 22-year prison sentence — his fifth term — on a recent burglary conviction. But he says he's not repentant.

"I never used a weapon. I never get personally involved in any burglaries. I have never hurt anybody in any crime. I probably haven't ever taken anything people could afford to lose," he said.

Born in Leavenworth, Kan., Nycum's family moved to Victoria, Texas, where his father opened several businesses in 1956.

"My father and I weren't that close," he recalled. "He was more into business. And I was spoiled. I had pretty much everything I wanted. He and my mom were getting ready to split up. I had a choice of who I wanted to go with... and I picked her."

A couple of months later, Nycum's father committed suicide.

"I didn't even cry for a couple of months. Then I realized I'd lost my father. I think my mother tried to make it up to me by giving me everything I wanted."

He was sent to an expensive, exclusive private school in Daytona Beach, Fla., for a year. He then returned to Houston and "started stealing, mostly for kicks, mostly automobiles."

Nycum was arrested in Del Rio, Texas, a short time later on a stack of outstanding warrants for forging checks on his mother account. He was convicted and sentenced to two years in prison. He was released after serving 18 months.

"Nine months after I got out of prison I decided I didn't want to go to school or work."

Nycum also became hooked on heroin, and started stealing again to support the addiction. He burglarized businesses got "some notoriety. I liked that. I was getting recognition for what I did."

But on Jan. 22, 1968, at age 19, he began serving a five-year sentence for burglary at the Ellis Unit — the Texas Department of Corrections toughest facility. For two of those years, he picked cotton for the state.

"I was lost. I was scared. I didn't know anything about the world. I didn't know anything about Vietnam. I thought everyone with long hair was a homosexual," he said. "What was I going to talk to people about? Last year's cotton crop?"

Americans on the move

Americans are taking to the highways again for summer vacations, but the high price of gasoline and the uncertain state of the economy is causing them to stay closer to home and hunt for bargains.

"The discretionary dollar is getting tighter or drying up," said Tom Rohner of the California State Automobile Association.

An Associated Press spot check of the travel industry on the eve of the Memorial Day weekend showed a trend toward shorter trips, by car rather than by plane, to family-type attractions offering low-cost amusements and to campgrounds or parks.

Tourist officials were reluctant to predict what will happen as the summer wears on, but they were generally optimistic, encouraged by the availability of gasoline and the fact that fuel prices, while high, appear to have stabilized.

In St. Louis, Mike Right, public affairs director for the AAA Auto Club of Missouri, said the organization has handled about 25 percent more requests for tour information packages this year than last. "People, especially those with families, are driving more because of the high air fares," Right said. "The gas supply situation is much better. And people are becoming accustomed to the kind of prices we are paying for gas."

Patricia Duricka, spokeswoman for the Travel Industry Association of America, said a recent survey by the U.S. Travel Data Center showed 49 percent of American adults planned to take a trip in the next six months. That compared to 42 percent who said they planned similar travel at this time last year.

There are signs of worry in the industry, however. The airlines launched another round of promotions last week, designed to lure travelers and boost sagging business. Car rental companies also have announced discount rates to win customers. And many hotels, particularly in big cities, offer special weekend packages to fill empty rooms.

Olof Arnheim, general manager of the Philadelphia Marriott, said business has been helped by "promotions and gimmicks." The hotel wooed local residents with "Escape Weekends." There is a "Lollypop Lounge" for children, with a skunk as an attraction.

Ben Segal, assistant manager for the domestic travel department of Pennsylvania's Keystone Automobile Club, said people definitely are taking shorter trips. "Our members are going as far south as Williamsburg, Va., and north to the mountains of Pennsylvania and New York and into Cape Cod, Mass."

The story was the same in California. "More short trips and fewer long trips," said Howard Goetzman, manager of touring and licenses for the Automobile Club of Southern California. Goetzman said business was really bad in 1979, when motorists had to line up for gasoline — if they could find an open service station. "Travel came back a little last year," Goetzman said. "although it still wasn't up to where it was in 1978. It's still too early to tell if this year will be better...."

More. For that extra measure of satisfaction.

"I'm More satisfied."

Oil company employees receive $53 million

KILGORE, Texas (AP) — When the men come after the fortunes of Elder "Catfish" Daniels, the 57-year-old heavy equipment operator just tosses their letters aside. Although he's worth more than $100,000 in cash and stocks, Daniels can't read or write.

Daniels is one of 87 workers at an East Texas oil company who, under an unusual employee participation payoff, received a chunk of a $53 million windfall bonanza.

He had no idea how rich he was until a bank teller began peeling off $100 dollar bills to the tune of an $11,600 check Daniels had received from his employer. He also owns $94,000 in company stocks.

Delta Drilling Co., after 50 years as a closely held private company, opened some of its stock to the public on March 17. Under the employee participation plan, worked out in the early 1970s, workers were promised stock in the company should it be merged, sold or taken public.

The "participation units" were increased if the employee stayed with the company or purchased by the company if the worker retired.

The average payoff was $612,000, with the allotment based on salary and time in service.

The employee payoff plan was conceived in 1974 by several top-level officers at Delta, including its aging founder, Joseph Zeppa.

For years, Delta had been a struggling oil-rig operation. But in the early 1970s, after the Arab oil embargo and subsequent restructuring of oil prices, business started to boom.

The employee participation program emerged as a way to protect Zeppa's most loyal employees — many of whom had little education — if the company were merged or sold and old-time workers found themselves without a job.

At least 13 employees became millionaires. One of those millionaires was Jack Elkins, a trucking coordinator, who says he was at home when he heard the news.

"I told my wife to come on, and booked us a flight to Las Vegas," Elkins said. "And for the first time in my life I could have a vacation where I didn't have to worry about how much money I was spending."

Many of those who received part of the proceeds were oil-patch roughnecks or longtime secretaries.

Herman Smith, a 58-year-old rig assembly supervisor, received $971,000. He says he will bank the money and keep working in the oil yards with Catfish and the others until someone can convince him he should do otherwise.

And 62-year-old Doyce Maywald, a secretary who has been with Delta for 28 years, says she's contemplating a trip to Europe as one way to celebrate her $278,000 check.

"Some of these people have worked in the oil patch for 40 years," said Keating Zeppa, whose Italian immigrant father founded Delta Drilling in 1931.

"They worked hard and long, sometimes under the worst conditions you can imagine," he said. "The company didn't give them anything. They damned well earned it. Every penny."

No one realized how much the employee participation units would grow.

Between 1974 and 1980, company revenues quadrupled from $38 million to $161 million and earnings quadrupled from $5 million to $20 million.

To stockholders, it became apparent that with public trading their stock would be worth millions. And when the company finally offered 10 percent of its holdings to the public, they asked for — and received — $17.50 per share.

Most of those who cashed in on the participation program are middle-aged, native East Texans who insist they would prefer that their lives remain basically the same.

"How has my life changed?" said Smith. "Not a bit."

There are problems, however. Big taxes always follow big money, as many of the lucky workers are finding out.

For each of the 87 workers, only 30 percent of the payoff was in cash; the remaining 70 percent was in company stock. From the cash portion, 20 percent of the total payoff (cash and stock) were withheld for federal taxes.

But since payoffs are considered income, the recipients find themselves in the 50 percent tax bracket — owing tens of thousands of dollars to "Uncle Sam."

"I don't know what I can do about it," Daniels said. "I'm told I will owe another $40,000 in taxes. And short of selling half of what I got, there's no way a man can come up with that kind of money."

Some have been told they should borrow money they don't need to pare down their income tax debts.

"I've always paid cash for everything," Elkins said. "I never figured I could get credit, even if I wanted to."

Others have been plagued by calls and letters from financial promoters offering investments in everything from oil wells and silver mines to unseen real estate.

After 20 years, mother and daughter are reunited

DALLAS (AP) — Social workers had decided that 59-year-old Annette Davidson's poor health and hospitalization made her unable to care for the child she bore 22 years ago.

When her daughter was two years old, she was taken from her mother and put up for adoption.

Mrs. Davidson had just about given up hope of ever regaining her daughter, given the name Susan Lane by her adoptive parents.

But after a long, tiresome fight with the courts and her daughter's adoptive parents, Mrs. Davidson and Susan were reunited in an emotional meeting Saturday afternoon.

"After all those painful days of wondering, I can't believe the time has come," said Mrs. Davidson, as she anxiously waited at Dallas' Love Field for more than three hours for her daughter's flight to arrive.

"I've been crying all day," she said.

When Mrs. Lane finally arrived, she tearfully embraced her mother and older sister, Mary Stallings, both of whom she had not seen since she was a toddler. She now lives in LeMarque, a small town about five miles northwest of Galveston.

Her mother reflected back upon the day when her child was taken away.

"I don't see how anyone could be so cruel," said Mrs. Davidson. "Didn't they know I have feelings, too?"

Mrs. Davidson was hospitalized at the time.

About two weeks after she was discharged, she tried to find Susan — without success. The distraught woman hired an attorney to fight for custody of her child, but the court ruled against her.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.

Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness or pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in depth consultation in Layman's terms.

SAUSAGE CASSEROLE. This dish saves both time and money.

Sausage dish quick, economical

Recipes in the "budget" category usually focus on money savings. Yet another resource — time — needs budgeting, too. This Quick 'n Easy Sausage Casserole is fast to fix and economical, so the dish qualifies for the "budget" title on all accounts.

Convenience comes from using brown 'n serve sausages that are fully cooked and merely need reheating before serving. The sausage links are arranged atop sliced, cooked potatoes that have been sauced with a mushroom soup - cheese mixture. Either canned potatoes or leftover cooked potatoes may be used. Sliced celery adds a little "crunch" to the casserole.

Brown 'n serve sausages are available in an original sage-seasoned flavor as well as seven additional variations, including beef. Any variety may be used successfully in this recipe.

Quick 'n Easy Sausage Casserole is a basic recipe that can be varied according to inspiration, or what's on hand. Try adding a half cup or so of cooked peas or carrots. It adds a bright dash of color to the dish and is a good way to use leftovers.

QUICK 'N EASY SAUSAGE CASSEROLE

- 8-ounce package brown 'n serve sausages (any variety)
- 2 cans (16 ounces each) potatoes, drained and sliced (OR 4 cups cooked sliced potatoes)
- 4-ounce can mushrooms, drained
- 1-3 cup sliced celery
- 10 1/4-ounce can condensed cream of mushroom soup
- 1 cup shredded cheddar cheese, separated
- Combine potatoes, mushrooms, celery, condensed soup and 1/2 cup shredded cheese. Spoon into buttered 1 1/2 - quart casserole or baking dish. Arrange sausage atop casserole. Sprinkle remaining 1/2 cup cheese over top. Bake in 350-degree oven for 35 to 40 minutes. For crispier sausage, broil casserole 4 inches from heat source for 5 minutes before serving.

Women may give men flowers

It is perfectly acceptable today for a woman to give a man flowers to mark a special occasion, or simply to say "I'm thinking of you."

Emily Post and other social arbiters have given the practice their blessings.

The custom of bestowing flowers on men is hardly new. As far back as the Roman Empire, conquering heroes were showered with flowers as they rode along triumphal parade routes and later were crowned with wreaths of laurel.

For those who continue to maintain the attitude that flowers are unmasculine, consider this group of "manly" flowers recommended by florists for gift-giving: bachelor buttons, carnations, birds of paradise, blue irises, anthuriums (painted tongue), narcissuses, tulips and proteas. Roses in the deeper shades of red are also an appropriate gift for a man.

If still in doubt, a foliage plant for his home or office is a handsome substitute.

In this era of rapidly changing social patterns and customs, there are few hard, fast rules concerning the "etiquette" of giving flowers.

WTSU to offer summer music camps

CANYON — Three music camps for junior high and high school students will be offered June 14 - 20 at West Texas State University.

The summer camps include instruction in choral, piano, and flag and rifle.

The flag and rifle camp will emphasize basic drill and movement, designing routines, films, recreational activities and opportunities for individual school squads to work as independent units.

The choral music camp will be conducted by Dr. Eph Ehly, choral director at the University of Missouri in Kansas City, and by Dr. Hugh Sanders, WTSU director of choral activities and dean of the School of Fine Arts.

The program will include private lessons, theory, conducting, beginning piano classes, guitar, music sight reading, development of popular music, stage choreography, madrigal groups, men's quartets, women's ensembles and recreational activities.

Dr. Stefan Bardas of North Texas State University and Stanley Potter, WTSU assistant professor of music, will present the piano class.

The piano program will consist of students participating in a daily master class, two private lessons, and an opportunity to attend supplementary sessions in theory, music sight reading, guitar, pipe organ, harpsichord, development of popular music, conducting and recreational activities.

Enrollment deadline for the piano camp is Monday, June 1.

For example, the cost of a bride's wedding bouquet, traditionally was assumed by her parents. Today, it is not unusual for the groom to provide the bridal bouquet as well as the flowers for her attendants. In some areas of the country it is even expected.

At one time elaborate corsages were considered 'de rigueur' for dress-up occasions. But, often the man's choice of flowers clashed with his date's gown.

Now it is proper for the man to ask his date what she is planning to wear, and if she prefers some other floral arrangement over a corsage.

Another popular American tradition, borrowed from our Old World ancestors, is to present one's dinner hostess with a bouquet of flowers. It is considered a compliment to her, cooking as well as her charm.

If the dinner is a formal, black-tie affair, it is still customary, but not absolutely necessary, to have the florist deliver fresh-cut flowers in advance.

However, most home entertaining today is more casual and it is permissible to bring the flowers with you. A small bouquet of seasonal flowers or a flowering plant is preferable to an elaborate arrangement.

It is also a gracious gesture to bring flowers when you visit someone's home for the first time, whether the invitation is for dinner or just a friendly get-together. Again, a simple bouquet or flowering plant is in good taste.

Dear Abby

Readers respond to bowlegged boy

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE was both unkind and unhelpful. You advised this 18-year-old boy to see a psychiatrist or psychologist. Now the poor kid will not only worry about his bowlegs, but he'll think he's mentally disturbed, too!

Your only other advice was to recite a prayer to an imaginary deity. What cop-out advice! Why didn't you name some famous people who are bowlegged, yet attractive? Or you could have suggested wearing loose trousers.

Your blanket advice that people seek psychiatric help for minor problems is lazy, uncaring and potentially harmful to the spirit and the pocketbook. Next time someone like this boy writes, give him what he asks for — common-sense advice.

INDIGNANT IN MADISON

DEAR INDIGNANT: BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE got my best advice. A good-looking 18-year-old who perceives himself to be "deformed and inferior" (his words) and is afraid to ask a girl for a date because he's moderately bowlegged needs more than a list of "bowlegged yet attractive" people. He needs a more realistic perception of himself.

Furthermore, one need not be mentally disturbed to seek psychotherapy. A temporary emotional upset is sufficient reason. And as for psychotherapy being "harmful" to the spirit and pocketbook — poppycock! The spirit will be nourished, and there are mental health clinics everywhere that charge only what the patient can afford.

DEAR ABBY: This is not a request for advice, it's a message to BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE.

I grew up with one side of my face paralyzed, and although it set me apart from everyone else and caused people to remember my name, I yearned to be like everyone else. At times I begged God to make me look "normal." But having to accept my flaw has helped me become emotionally stronger than I would have been had I been able to "correct" my condition — which, of course, was impossible.

Now I have my own separate identity. I saw a psychiatrist, as Abby suggested you do. A trained professional will let you lay your cards out, then the two of you will go over them together. In the end, however, it is you who will decide how your cards will be played. Try to be less preoccupied with your appearance, think positively, and keep a sharp eye out for that villain of all villains — self-pity.

Because I can accept myself as I am, I have made it. By the way, I am 26 and pulling for you.
HAPPY IN HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY: This is for that 18-year-old boy who is BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE. I am a 30-year-old single male, considered attractive by women, and I am about as bowlegged as they come.

When I was 18, I also felt self-conscious, but that never stopped me from asking a girl for a date. I just made up my mind that nobody's perfect and there are worse imperfections than having bowed legs. At least mine were strong and healthy and got me where I was going. (They even took me to the beach where my legs were in full view of the public.)

Keep this in mind: Any girl who would refuse to go out with a guy because he is bowlegged isn't worth spending your time and money on.

So, from one bowlegged guy to another, ask girls for dates and forget about your legs. Life is too short to do otherwise.
BOWLEGGED AND NOT MISERABLE

DEAR ABBY: Tell BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE not to waste any more time feeling sorry for himself. There are plenty of girls who would be glad to go out with him. I, for one, think bowlegged guys are sexy.

Dr. Lamb

Blood flow affects warmth

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Will you please explain why some of us get cold so easily? Air-conditioning has already started here and I find many buildings too cold. Others are so hot-natured they complain that buildings are too warm. What is the difference? I don't smoke.

DEAR READER — This happens winter and summer. Some people are quite uncomfortable in slightly warm environments and others feel cold at what most would consider comfortable temperatures. Sometimes it is psychological. That is why in some buildings managers have resorted to dummy thermostats that employees can play with. But it is a real sensation.

We all feel hot or cold in relation to the blood flow through our skin. There are many nerve fibers in the skin that sense skin temperature. It follows that even if your inner body (core temperature) is normal or even slightly above normal and there is a limited blood flow through the skin, you will feel cold.

Likewise, if you are embarrassed and bluish, the flushed skin is associated with the feeling of warmth. And you may even sweat. Increasing or decreasing blood flow through the skin is a major mechanism used by the body to get rid of or conserve body heat.

I have explained in detail how the body controls heat and the normal body temperature mechanism in The Health Letter number 7-6, Body Temperature and Fever, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. If you feel cold and exercise enough to stimulate the body to eliminate heat there will be an increased blood flow to the skin and you will suddenly feel warmer.

Others feel cold because of nervous reactions that cause constriction of small blood vessels in the skin. Smoking will do this in some cases. In others, anxiety may release chemicals that increase blood flow through the skin causing a sudden sensation of warmth.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 64 years old. About a year ago I had a checkup and my Pap smear came back abnormal. I was sent to a gynecologist and have seen him about every three months.

After the first examination he froze me and considered an operation. Then he discussed it with the doctors at the hospital and said he was not going to operate. When he examines me he says he does not see anything that looks too bad.

Now I have a report saying my Pap smear is atypical. He puts dysplastic on my insurance papers. What should I do? Should I continue like this or make some changes?

DEAR READER — Be glad you have a good doctor. Dysplasia refers to some minor changes in the cells from your cervix. They are not malignant. In many cases these disappear and the cervix may become normal.

In other cases the cells slowly change to carcinoma in situ, a mild malignancy that is very slow in growth.

At Wit's End

By Erna Bombeck

Every once in awhile, something happens in our lives to cause us to reshuffle our priorities.

Sometimes, it's a traumatic birthday or a friend facing a crisis. To me, it was the funeral of a good friend that left me vulnerable, confused, and doubtful as to what I am all about.

I wanted to draw all our savings out of the bank and go to Tahiti. I wanted to put the plastic dishes in the driveway and back over them with a car. I wanted to take ballet lessons. Throw away all the fake flowers and replace them with a jungle of vines and greenery. I wanted to take up all the throw rugs and let the dirt fall where it wanted to.

That very night, I took a look at my life, rearranged

Try dill in dip

1 cup creamstyle cottage cheese
3-ounce package cream cheese
Salt and Tabasco sauce to taste
1-3rd cup minced fresh dill

In an electric blender whirl together all the ingredients except the dill; empty into a serving bowl and stir in the dill. Cover and chill. Makes about 1 1/2 cups. Especially delicious served with cucumber sticks.

my cards into a whole new hand, and made a vow. I am not going to be like the woman on the Titanic who, as she climbed into the lifeboat facing an uncertain future, sobbed in anguish. "If I had known this was going to happen, I'd have had the chocolate mousse for dessert."

So get ready, world! Miss Practical is going to start living each day like it's her last.

You know that drawer full of pantyhose that I save? The ones that don't come up to my thighs and depress me every time I look at them? Well, I pitched them.

Remember that big candle in the hallway that's shaped like a rose and gathers dust and gets soft in the summer? I torched it yesterday.

And the car window... the one on my side that has a two-inch crack in it that we said we'd have fixed when we sell the car? Well, it's fixed.

Guess who's coming to dinner Sunday? Evie and Jack, whom we have seen at 16 weddings and say the same thing to every time: "We've got to get together."

And that big can of tuna that I didn't want to open because I'm the only one who eats tuna and I couldn't bear to waste the rest of it? Well, so what!

As I washed my hands with a little sliver of pink soap shaped like a sea shell, my husband said, "I thought you were saving those. You got them wet and they don't look like a shell anymore."

I looked down at the handful of suds. A shell only holds life. I had just given it a chance to be something more.

FLASH FLOOD TOSSES AUTOS. Compact cars at this Austin dealership were tossed about by the raging waters of Shoal Creek Sunday night. Heavy rains during the night caused numerous floods throughout the city and brought death to several persons along the flood areas. (AP Laserphoto)

Public's tax anger has declined

NEW YORK (AP) — Three years after the "Tax Revolt of 1978," Americans are convinced that federal income taxes are too high, but many no longer consider property tax rates excessive, according to an Associated Press-NBC News poll.

The poll indicates that public anger over some taxes has declined, but the concern about federal income taxes is a key to the strong public support for President Reagan's economic proposals.

In June 1978, voters in California approved Proposition 13, an initiative that slashed property taxes in the state and put a lid on future increases. That vote set off the Tax Revolt of 1978, triggering moves in a number of other states to limit property and other taxes. Some of those efforts were successful and some were not.

Opinions about federal income taxes haven't changed much since an AP-NBC News poll in June 1978.

Sixty-nine percent of those questioned May 18 and 19 said federal income taxes are too high, versus 75 percent in 1978. Twenty-five percent said these taxes are about right: 1 percent said taxes were too low; and 5 percent were not sure.

From this perception, it is easy to see why Reagan's plan to cut income tax rates by 10 percent a year for the next three years draws strong backing. Supporters outnumbered opponents of the Reagan cuts by almost 3-to-1.

Anger over property taxes — the key to Proposition 13 — has dropped a good bit.

Forty-one percent of those questioned last week said property taxes where they live are too high, down from 57 percent who said that in 1978.

Forty-nine percent now say property taxes are about right, versus only 36 percent in 1978. Three percent said property taxes are too low and 7 percent of the 1,599 adults interviewed nationwide by telephone.

In the June 1978 AP-NBC News poll, the results were about reversed: 45 percent said the taxes were too high and 38 percent said they were about right.

Is economy getting better or worse?—No one knows

NEW YORK (AP) — Just about everyone agrees inflation is too high, money too tight and jobs too scarce. Some even say the economy is downright depressed. But practically no one can figure out whether things are getting better or worse.

Even the nation's economists, whose job it is to make sense of such things, are divided on the question of whether the economy is growing or slackening.

Says Karan Wasserman, an economist at Chemical Bank in New York: "I think economic expansion is here, and it's going to be with us for a while."

Says Ralph Fletcher Jr., the senior economist at Industrial National Bank of Rhode Island: "I'm in the camp that says the economy is slowing."

The disagreements abound. But don't turn to the government for a clearer picture: its economic reports this past week varied enough to support just about any forecast.

On Monday the Commerce Department provided some evidence that the economy was losing steam, reporting that personal income for April rose by the smallest rate since last June. It also reported that personal consumption spending — which represents about two-thirds of the nation's total output of goods and services — showed the weakest gain since last May.

A day later came a signal of unexpected strength in the economy. The Commerce Department revised upward its estimate of first-quarter growth in gross national product. A month ago the department had said GNP rose at annual rate of 6.5 percent. The new estimate put the number at 8.4 percent, an extraordinarily large revision and evidence that the economy expanded at a remarkably strong pace in the first three months of the year.

But later in the week it was reported that new factory orders for durable goods dropped slightly in April. Because the decline followed a strong increase the previous month, it was taken as a sign that the economy was slowing.

Finally, on Friday, the Labor Department reported that inflation as measured by the Consumer Price Index slowed to a 5.1 percent annual rate in April.

It all adds up to a lot of uncertainty. And that means trouble for the credit markets and for businesses as well.

Meanwhile, among other business and economic developments this past week:

—Economy Savings & Loan of Chicago shut its doors. The Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. began paying about $60 million to insured depositors.

—Most of the nation's retailers reported improved earnings in the first quarter.

—An OPEC agreement to cut oil production appeared more likely after Saudi Arabia backed off from its demand that other countries first cut their prices.

FOR over forty-five years a popular Mexican Food Restaurant in Clovis, New Mexico has seasoned enchiladas and other Mexican food specialties with a unique blend of Southwest herbs and spices with outstanding success and acclaim. Now their secret is yours with El Monterrey Enchilada Sauce. El Monterrey will make your meal a sure winner. Try the recipe below, we think you'll agree enchiladas have never before tasted so good.

- Real Enchiladas:
1. Soften tortillas by briefly dipping them in cooking oil heated to medium/high and lay them flat on a cookie sheet.
 2. Cover the tortillas with El Monterrey Enchilada Sauce on both sides.
 3. Spread 1 to 2 Tbl. of chopped onion, 1/4 cup grated cheese and 1/4 cup browned ground beef diagonally on each.
 4. Roll the tortillas and cover with El Monterrey Enchilada Sauce; sprinkle with additional grated cheese and bake at 350-400 degrees for approximately 15-25 minutes until the cheese is melted inside the enchilada and out.

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

May 27, 1981

Set your sights high this coming year. Your possibilities for achieving what you go after are better than usual. The degree of your success is up to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be prepared to put forth a solid second effort today if you hope to fulfill your ambitions. You could do it on the first try, but it's not likely. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone may come to you for help today. Your initial impulse could be to let him or her go it alone. However, your nobler instincts will prevail.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This is not a good day to try to swing a business deal on friendship alone. Base your case solely on the merits of the proposition.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You could be uncharacteristically envious of an associate today. Instead of worrying about his or her accomplishments, try harder yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You can be quite productive today, but it may take you a long time to get started. Get to what needs doing without wasting critical time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In partnership situations today, especially those with your mate, don't do anything without your counterpart's consent which could be mutually harmful if it goes wrong.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Persons with whom you associate today will have a great influence over your work habits. Triflers could substantially lessen your productivity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Even tasks which you normally enjoy could become a bore today. It might be helpful to break away from your routines for some pleasurable activities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Try to focus your efforts and energies today on things which contribute to your security or enhance your income. Scratch other projects from your list.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're very capable today, provided you are allowed to operate independently. When others get into the act they could slow you down considerably.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You can be more helpful to others today by encouraging their strengths rather than by excusing their weaknesses. Make constructive suggestions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today it may be necessary to exercise extra discipline over spending. Your extravagance is lessened in the company of frugal pals.

Texas legislature briefs

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Businesses with more than $25 million in assets could agree with one another to waive the protection of the Deceptive Trade Practices Act under a bill that gained initial approval in the House on Monday.

The measure advanced on a voice vote. If passed, it will return to the Senate for action on amendments.

The measure is designed to recognize that when large businesses buy from one another, they are sophisticated enough to avoid deception and do not need the kind of protection that ordinary consumers require.

The House has tentatively approved legislation that would require the State Health Department to protect animals in circuses, carnivals and private zoos.

The Senate passed a measure advanced on a voice vote Monday, with final action expected Tuesday.

Zoos operated by cities or counties would be exempt, as would zoos, carnivals and circuses required to be licensed under the federal Animal Welfare Act. Also exempt would be zoos accredited by the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums.

Operations that are not exempt would have to get a license from the Health Department, which would inspect them to assure animals are humanely treated.

If animals are mistreated, an operation's license could be revoked and its animals seized and sold at auction.

The Legislative Budget Board estimated 20 zoos, circuses or carnivals would require licensing each year.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Manufacturers of glue and paint would have to add agents to their products to make them unpleasant to sniff under a Senate bill that won tentative House approval on Monday.

The measure advanced on a voice vote, and comes up for final action on Tuesday.

Oil of mustard added to glue or paint causes nausea in anyone who sniffs it, according to the House Study Group.

The measure is designed to reduce the amount of glue- and paint-sniffing by youngsters.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The House has tentatively approved a bill authorizing the state to help pay the salaries of resident physicians at hospitals affiliated with Texas medical schools.

The Senate passed a measure advanced on a voice vote Monday, with final action expected Tuesday.

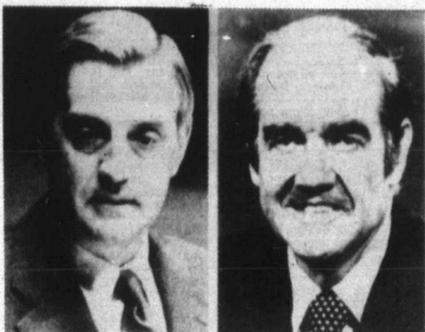

The bill would allow the state to pay up to $15,000 per year for each resident at a teaching hospital if the resident is a Texas citizen. Hospitals would give priority to applicants for residencies who indicate they are willing to practice in rural areas and other medically underserved parts of Texas.

Sponsors say the increased number of residencies would help keep medical school graduates in Texas. Teaching hospitals now pay residents' salaries and have complained of the cost.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A bill dedicating part of the cigarette tax to construction of a Texas Sesqui-centennial Museum in Austin won final House approval Monday.

The measure, by Rep. Chris Semos, D-Dallas, was sent to the Senate on a voice vote.

The bill would take half the cigarette tax money now dedicated to purchase and development of urban parks and earmark it through 1986 for construction of the proposed art and history museum.

WALTER MONDALE GEORGE MCGOVERN

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor, recovered from a week-long hospitalization for a respiratory infection, is back on the Broadway stage for the revival of Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes."

The Monday night audience at the Martin Beck Theater welcomed her back with an thunderous ovation, and Fred Nathan, a spokesman for the play, said the actress was "in good spirits" and feeling "a lot better."

"She's back now until Sept. 5," the spokesman said, referring to the date the play ends.

The actress was released from Lenox Hill Hospital Saturday. She was admitted to the hospital May 16 suffering from the infection and from torn rib cartilage resulting from severe coughing.

Eight performances of the play were canceled, costing the producers about $10,000, a show, Nathan said. Each sold-out show yields $37,000, but insurance covers $27,000 of that.

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Vice President Walter Mondale, who lost his job when Jimmy Carter lost the presidency, has found a new position in television.

Mondale will debut Thursday on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" as a current events specialist, the program's executive producer, George Merlis, said Monday.

Merlis said Mondale will appear monthly on the program to comment on national and international affairs. Mondale's first topic for comment has not been decided, said network spokesman Peter Heller.

OSBERLIN, Ohio (AP) — Former South Dakota Sen. George McGovern says both the United States and the Soviet Union have the capability "to pulverize this planet in a few minutes."

So, he says, the United States should take the first step to end the "maddening" arms race and seek detente with the Soviet Union.

"As matters stand now, the chances for annihilation are stronger than the chances for survival," McGovern told 650 graduating seniors at Oberlin College on Monday.

"Let us not have it written on our tombstones that we knew what happened at Hiroshima but did not take the first step," he said.

The one-time Democratic presidential nominee said he opposed the proposed MX missile system because it could lead the Soviet's to increase their missile capability.

VIDALIA, Ga. (AP) — A grain-holding tank collapsed as it was being loaded by three men, who died in an avalanche of grain, authorities said.

Investigators were trying to determine whether the victims suffocated or were crushed to death.

Toombs County Sheriff Charles Durst said the three were unloading the grain into a 2,000-bushel tank at a farm center near here Monday.

The victims were identified as Hillary Warnock, 43, of Tarrytown, James M. Ethridge, 34, of Mount Vernon, and Jerry Braddock, 24, of Lyons.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former nightclub comedian Dick Gregory has vowed to start another fast and take no solid food until police find who is responsible for the slaying of 28 young blacks in Atlanta.

Gregory urged thousands of sympathizers at a Lincoln Memorial rally Monday for the Atlanta children to pray, saying prayer saved the lives of President Reagan and Pope John Paul II after they were shot by would-be assassins.

"Our future is being wiped out," said Camille Bell, mother of one of the slain children. She called on Congress to do something to protect the living.

Mrs. Bell, whose 9-year-old son Yusef was found slain on Nov. 8, 1979, said 12,000 children have been murdered in recent years and 50,000 are currently missing across the country.

News at a Glance

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A man who recently got the city's Good Citizenship Award for scaling a 180-foot crane to make a rescue has been charged with attempted murder for allegedly doing a favor for a friend, police say.

Police said a friend asked Charles Price Jr., 27, to "beat up" Parker Hunt and Karen Hunt because they had "verbally abused" her. Price allegedly kicked down a door at the Hunts' house Saturday and started shooting — hitting Kevin Gill, 25, five times, police said.

They said Price may have thought he shot Hunt. Gill was in stable condition.

Mayor Bill Frederick honored Price two weeks ago for saving a distraught man who was contemplating suicide.

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — Five people were hospitalized after a driver lost control of a bus taking a group of people to a Memorial Day picnic, causing the bus to flip over on its side. Nineteen people were injured.

Two people were in guarded condition in St. Mary's Hospital here, and three people were in fair condition in another hospital. The other 14 were treated and released.

The vehicle was one of four buses going Monday to Bottomless Lakes State Park.

BYE - BYE. Daniel Goodwin, 25, of Kennebunk, Maine, waves goodbye to the scaffold placed in his path as he continues his ascent of the 1,454-foot tall Sears Tower building in Chicago Monday.

Climber of world's tallest building being held in jail

CHICAGO (AP) — Still dressed as a comic-book hero, Daniel Goodwin was in jail today as he expected after becoming the only person ever to climb to the top of the world's tallest building — on the outside.

The 25-year-old professional acrobat and gymnast from Las Vegas, Nev., used suction cups and metal clips to climb up the metal-and-glass west side of the Sears tower on Monday, outwitting authorities who tried to stop him and bringing cheers from dozens of spectators 110 stories below. It took him 7½ hours, battling 40 mph winds.

He agreed that this wasn't something everyone should do," said Jack Rimkus, the police officer who arrested Goodwin atop the 1,454-foot building. "He said he expected to spend a few days in jail."

Goodwin, still wearing his custom-made, red-and-blue "Spider-Man" outfit, was led away in handcuffs at the summit.

He was held for investigation of disorderly conduct, criminal trespass, and criminal damage to property, Cmdr. Robert Casey said.

"He said he grew up where there's lots of trees and had always been impressed with tall buildings and cities," Rimkus said.

The 5-foot-7, 180-pound Goodwin, originally from Kennebunkport, Maine, "behaved like a perfect gentleman" while handcuffed and led away, Rimkus said. Goodwin suffered no ill effects from the climb, except for a sore hand, police said.

"He was very grateful to be on top," Rimkus said. "He held out his arms for the cuffs, and thanked all of us."

The climb became a Memorial Day event downtown, where streets are usually deserted on holidays. Parents brought children, bicyclers stopped to crane their necks and a vendor hawked sunglasses at the tower.

Goodwin climbed a ladder and from there used 8-inch iron climbing hooks to attach himself to grooves used by window washers. He would twist a hook until tight, use it as a step, then remove one from below to make a new step higher up, Rimkus said.

Authorities gave up trying to stop Goodwin when he reached the 55th floor. After 15 minutes of negotiation — while Goodwin dangled — they allowed him to climb unhindered while the scaffolding was pulled up behind him for safety.

Sears, Roebuck and Co. officials said they considered the stunt a crime and would try to see if the building was damaged.

Richard Harris, 26, said he heard about the climb on the radio and brought his 5-year-old son, Michael, to watch because the boy is an avid fan of Spider-Man.

Turkey exports, at 34,049 metric tons, were worth $46.2 million, compared to 22,685 tons and $37.1 million in 1979, the report said.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

Exports of eggs in the shell for table use rose to 52.9 million dozen worth $34.7 million last year, compared

Poultry exports soaring

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Poultry exports have been at a record level and are getting larger, the Agriculture Department says.

Last year, according to the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, shipments of poultry products — which include meat, eggs and live birds — rose to a record value of $569.1 million, up 45 percent from $391.6 million in calendar 1979.

A further increase is expected in 1981, perhaps an additional boost of 25 percent to 30 percent, according to department experts.

The increase in poultry exports comes at a time when sales of U.S. commodities overall is booming. Those rose to a record of $41.3 billion last calendar year, up from $34.7 billion in 1979.

Although the figures for poultry are overshadowed by the traditional leaders such as wheat, corn and soybeans — exports of grain and grain products, for example, totaled about $18 billion last year — the exports are important to those who produce eggs, chickens and turkeys.

The actual quantities of poultry items climbed sharply in 1980 as well as their cash values, the agency's annual report showed.

For example, exports of "young chickens" or broilers were reported at 257,214 metric tons last year, a value of about $293.5 million. In 1979, the shipments were 182,348 tons, a value of $195.5 million.

to 1979 shipments of 18 million dozen valued at $11.9 million.

Shipments of live baby chicks were reported at 33.7 million birds valued at $44 million. In 1979, exports of 28.9 million chicks were worth $37 million.

Officials said Asian and Caribbean countries were the major markets for chicken parts, with Japan, Hong Kong, Singapore, Jamaica and the Leeward-Windward Islands leading the way.

Shipments of whole broilers also rose sharply, with Iraq and Egypt "by far the leading importers" last year, the report said. The Middle East also was a big market for chicken parts.

Other major markets for whole broilers included Venezuela, Saudi Arabia, Mexico, Romania and Nicaragua.

Looking at the turkey market, the report said Egypt and West Germany together took 65 percent of the U.S. turkey parts exported last year. Nigeria also was a major market.

Leading markets for table eggs included Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Hong Kong and the United Arab Emirates. Top buyers of U.S. hatching eggs were Canada, Mexico, Trinidad-Tobago, Jamaica and Argentina.

Canada, Mexico, Thailand and Japan were the leading importers of U.S. baby chicks, but shipments also increased significantly to Indonesia, Brazil, Mexico and the Caribbean area.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has almost twice as much butter in storage as it had a year ago, according to the latest Agriculture Department inventory report.

As of April 30, butter stocks held in private and public storage facilities totaled 445.2 million pounds, an 87 percent increase over the 238.1 million pounds a year earlier.

About 375 million pounds of that was surplus butter owned by the department's Commodity Credit Corp. It was purchased to carry out milk price support operations required by federal law.

The monthly "cold storage" report also showed cheese inventories at 633.2 million pounds, a 24 percent increase from 510.5 million pounds a year ago. Some 376.8 million pounds of that were held by the CCC as surplus, also bought under the price support program.

Teacher explanation bill given approval by House

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rejecting arguments that the measure would help incompetents, the House passed a bill Monday requiring school administrators to give teachers reasons for not renewing their contracts.

The Senate passed measure was approved on voice vote and returns to the Senate for action on amendments that made the bill protect superintendents, as well as teachers.

The measure would not apply to teachers on probation or to those on continuing contracts but would provide a new right to teachers with contracts limited to a fixed term of years.

A principal would have to give a teacher, in writing, the reasons for not renewing his or her contract. There also would have to be a periodic written evaluation of each teacher.

"What this does is establish tenure for teachers," objected Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Sugar Land.

He contended that the need to write reasons for non-renewal in careful, legal language that would stand up in court would discourage principals from dismissing teachers.

"I feel this would be bad public policy in light of the people saying in the last elections they want competent teachers ... and want to get at the bad teachers," DeLay said.

Rep. Ernestine

Glossbrenner, D-Alice, said a teacher should have the right to know why his or her contract was not renewed.

"It hurts both sides," DeLay replied.
