Tentative agreement reached in coal strike

Damage to Nimitz may total $100 million

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The aircraft carrier USS Nimitz, in port after a jet crash that left 62 crewmen dead or injured and about $100 million in damage, may be cleaned up and ready to resume its training cruise by Saturday, Navy officials say.

killed in the crash of the Marine EA-6B and its fiery aftermath.

The body of Marine 1st Lt. Laurence Cragun, the plane's electronics officer, still had not been found by today.

Twenty-one of the injured crewmen were flown to hospitals in Florida and Texas after Tuesday's accident off the Florida coast. The other 27 injured crewmen were treated in sick bay. The Nimitz sailed into its home port Thursday, returning damaged aircraft and the bodies of 13 of the 14 crewmen

Nimitz carried about 3,000 sailors and 2,500 airmen.

Four young sailors severely burned in the crash were "alert and responsive" but still in critical condition at the Brooke Army Medical Center burn unit at Fort Sam Houston in Texas. Col. Basil A. Pruitt Jr. said Thursday afternoon.

The wreckage of four planes — the EA-6B Prowler that crashed and three F-14 Tomcats — was discarded overboard. Seven other aircraft suffered major damage and were sent off for repairs. Minor damage to another nine planes had been repaired.

There was no official value placed on the damage, but $100 million would not be a bad estimate, said Vice Adm. Gus Kinnear, commander Naval Air Forces Atlantic.

On Thursday, Dale Stewart, a 19-year-old airman apprentice, had a bandage around his fractured knuckles, stitches up his chin and a missing tooth. "I got clear and then a grabbed a firehose," he said. "There was just one big boom. All you could see was flying pieces of aircraft. The A-6 just got too close to the island. It was hitting one airplane after another in a chain reaction."

Texan describes Nimitz crash scene

CONROE, Texas (AP) — Parents of a Conroe man injured in the fire that followed a plane crash aboard the USS Nimitz said their son described the scene to them in a telephone conversation from his hospital bed Thursday night.

Airman Apprentice Michael J. Anderson, 19, said he was hospitalized in Portsmouth, Va., with a throat injury after the disaster aboard the world's largest warship.

His parents, Jerrel and Shirley Anderson, said he told them he was struck by a piece of flying metal while fighting flames. He said a man standing behind him had been killed.

Fourteen sailors on the aircraft carrier were killed and 48 injured when a plane crashed while trying to land on the ship's flight deck shortly before midnight Tuesday.

At least one Texan — Airman Arturo Hinojosa, 25, of San Antonio — was killed.

A Navy serviceman met Hinojosa's mother, Rebecca Gonzalez, at her door Wednesday with the four word phrase: "Your son is dead."

Mrs. Gonzalez said her son was waiting for a discharge and wanted to go back to school.

She said he had been a Marine for four years before being transferred to active sea duty 10 months ago.

Marine 1st Lt. Steve E. White, the pilot of the plane, was reportedly from Houston. Officials at his base in Cherry Point, N.C. were trying to confirm that a spokesman said.

Electrician's Mate 3rd Class Marty Willits of Houston said he was on a firefighting team that was not called into action. He said other firefighters were killed and injured by exploding ammunition and bombs carried by planes aboard the ship.

Willits, speaking from a Norfolk, Va., hotel room, recalled that some sailors cried and others walked around "ghostlike" as the flames burned and explosions erupted.

Willits said he was in his sleeping area talking with friends when the first alarm sounded.

"Usually it's just a drill and we waited to hear at the end that it was," he said. When they didn't, he said, "we took off running."

Willits said three bombs went off and the machine gun ammunition killed and wounded several people during the fire.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of striking miners and the soft coal industry announced tentative agreement on a new contract early today. If approved by the rank and file, the pact will end a walkout that lasted more than two months.

The announcement was made at 12:55 a.m. EST by United Mine Workers President Sam Church. "We have a contract," he said, ending a day of marathon meetings that had begun at 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

Bobby R. Brown, chief negotiator for the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, emerged from the negotiating room in a downtown hotel moments later and said, "We have addressed most of the issues that were outstanding and we believe it's a good contract for the union."

Neither side would discuss changes made in the tentative pact since an earlier proposal was turned down overwhelmingly by UMW members more than two months ago.

Was the new contract a better one, Church was asked. "It's better," he replied.

Asked whether the union had won agreement on the crucial point that the industry pay a royalty on non-union coal it purchases, Church said. "That's no problem."

The UMW president said he would present the new proposal today — on the 64th day of the strike — to the 39-member union bargaining council that must approve the pact before it can be sent to minefield locals for approval of the members.

The council approved the earlier contract by a 21-14 margin only to see it rejected by rank-and-file miners by a margin of better than 2-to-1.

Ratification of the new three-year accord by some 160,000 miners in Appalachian and midwestern coalfields would take about 10 days under rules laid out in the union's constitution.

Today's announcement came two days after the negotiators reached agreement on the major sticking point — the question of unionized coal companies' subcontracting work to outside, nonunion personnel.

As talks ended Wednesday, an effusive Church told reporters: "We made a lot of progress. We've still got some unresolved problems but I'm optimistic I feel much better than I have in quite some time."

Brown, reserved by nature and reticent with reporters throughout the talks, said only, "We're making progress. I'm not pessimistic."

Kidnapping and baseball brawl among indictments

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

An Oklahoma man accused of kidnapping and aggravated robbery and a Pampa resident charged with assaulting a baseball player after a recent game, were among those indicted by the Gray County Grand Jury Thursday.

The grand jurors, gathered in the 31st District courtroom of the Gray County Courthouse here, handed down 11 indictments on charges ranging from theft by check to aggravated assault and kidnapping.

Michael William Hargrove, 26, of Wewoka, Okla. was indicted for kidnapping and aggravated robbery. The indictments stemmed from an incident on Feb. 26 near McLean.

Texas Highway Patrol officers said a rented 1979 International truck driven by Timothy Clifford Wilbur of Santa Ana, Calif., was hijacked by a hitchhiker. Wilbur had picked up earlier. Police said that Wilbur reported the hitchhiker robbed him of $250 and a .22 caliber pistol.

In addition, Wilbur told police he was tied up, booted out of the vehicle, his life was threatened and he was shot at by the hitchhiker. After the fourth shot, Wilbur reported the man drove away in the rental truck.

Hargrove was arrested near Lutie by the highway patrol shortly after the incident. Sheriff Rufe Jordan said today Hargrove remained in Gray County Jail in lieu of bond.

Manuale Villaria of Pampa was indicted on aggravated assault charges Thursday. The charges were filed following a brawl after a baseball game on April 12. Pablo Soto, 44, of 517 S. Ballard was treated for injuries to his head and hand after he was reportedly struck by a baseball bat in the altercation. Soto's son, Alfredo, 16, was also treated for injuries to his face.

An indictment against Morlan Clarence Shuman Jr., 26, of 1223 S. Banks was handed down by the grand jury for charges of possession of amphetamines. Shuman was arrested by Pampa police on April 11. Substances found in Shuman's possession were sent to a Department of Public Safety laboratory for identification. Police said the results showed the substances were amphetamines.

Four burglary indictments were given Thursday by the grand jury. Charles Edward Dykes and Mark Basden, addresses unavailable, were indicted separately for the burglary of a 1974 Ford stationwagon belonging to Adele Bean, 815 E. Gordon. Stephen Stokes received indictments for two March 1 burglaries reported by Jerry A. West and Ronnie J. Brascum.

Charles A. Engles, address unavailable, was indicted for the alleged theft on March 12 of a 1972 Chevrolet van belonging to Bill R. Greer, 1125 Crane.

An indictment for theft by check was given by the grand jury to Judy Hiser in connection with a $361.19 First State Bank of Mobeetie check written on April 22, 1980 to Altie M. Orr of 1031 N. Sumner.

One closed indictment was handed down in Thursday's session of the grand jury.

Pampa High School seniors will receive their diplomas tonight in graduation exercises to begin at 8 p.m. in the Senior High School Fieldhouse.

Confrontation with Pantex officials fizzles

By SHEILA ECCLES
Staff Writer

It had all the ingredients of an interesting confrontation between U.S. government representatives — who were willing to talk — and people from the Panhandle — who had some questions about the safety of the Pantex Plant. However, Panhandle residents failed to show.

Perhaps the question of the safety of the nuclear weapons assembling plant, Pantex Plant located on Highway 60, 17 miles north of Amarillo, versus the future of the Panhandle environment is not so pressing to farmers, ranchers, workers and residents of this area.

Only two Panhandle residents requested time to address the Department of Energy (DOE) officials during the first of two public hearings conducted in Amarillo Thursday.

The meeting was conducted by the DOE as a result of a lawsuit filed a year ago by the Panhandle Environmental Awareness Committee (PEAC), addressing the future of the nuclear weapons assembly plant and its environmental effect on the Panhandle.

The civil suit asked the court to declare the continued operations at Pantex unlawful until the plant officials comply with laws to protect the quality of human life.

The suit against Pantex was dropped in exchange for DOE guarantees that an environmental impact study that details the plant's operations would be completed.

The meeting was called a scoping meeting — giving Panhandle residents a chance to question the DOE about the Pantex Plant and its effect on the environment.

Amarillo Attorney Betty Wheeler who represents PEAC had some questions for the DOE.

"Our first area of concern is of the water usage and water disposal. It is our understanding that in 1973 Pantex used 410 million gallons of water. In 1982, the plant expects to use 750 million gallons.

"Where does the water used by the Pantex Plant come from? How much water is projected for use in the future? What are the reasons for the significant increase in water use?"

In regard to the possible contamination of Panhandle water supplies, Wheeler asked, "Do any of the contaminants in the water disposed of have any potential for affecting the permeability of the playa lakes into which they are disposed? Where does the run-off water disperse from the test site area?"

"Does the soil testing in the drainage basin for Lake Meredith indicate any contamination that may be attributable to Pantex operations?"

Questions on future land use were also put to the DOE by Wheeler.

"We are interested in a detailed analysis of the suitability of adjacent land for agricultural use," Wheeler said.

Texas Tech University leases a parcel of land for farming and research adjacent to the Pantex Plant. Wheeler asked for the test results of the crops and cattle on the Texas Tech property.

"We are also concerned about safety and environmental hazards that may be posed to the Panhandle because of tornadoes.

"We are concerned about the problems posed by the transportation of nuclear materials and high explosives in and out of Pantex," Wheeler said.

Information concerning the location of Pantex and the increased chances of targeting by the Soviets in case of an attack was needed, Wheeler said.

With regard to the expansion planned at the Pantex Plant, we are concerned about the degree to which dust pollution will be caused by construction — what energy source will the plant use and how much will it use," Wheeler asked.

The government came to the meeting well prepared, explaining the alternatives available to Pantex in a slide presentation.

The preferred alternative is to continue operations at Pantex, including nuclear weapons assembly, stockpile monitoring, maintenance and modification and nuclear weapons retirement. DOE representative Alan Stoker, H-8 Deputy Group Leader, Los Alamos National Laboratory.

The environmental impact statement will aid DOE officials in the decision-making process regarding the modes and locations of continued nuclear weapons assembly, Stoker said.

The alternatives also included a range of options from construction of only the minimum required new facilities through new construction plus upgrading or replacing the existing facility.

The replacement alternative was explained by Stoker. "Alternatives include reopening the existing, formerly used nuclear weapons assembly facilities near Burlington, Iowa to accommodate the increasing workload."

"The new location alternative is to relocate all operations to some site other than Pantex with construction of new facilities," Stoker said.

The statement concerning relocation was about the only statement from DOE officials that rankled residents at the meeting.

"The plant does add to our economy," a Panhandle resident at the meeting said.

Pantex employs some 2,300 persons including some 75 to 100 from Pampa, said Marvin Johnson of Mason and Hangar at Pantex.

The yearly payroll for Pantex is at $56 million, according to Pantex officials.

The commercial procurement is $9 million. This figure includes everything from pipe fittings to paper, M.L. Ott, Pantex division manager for administrative services said.

Redistricting expands Whaley district

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

State Representative Foster Whaley of Pampa said today the renumbering and addition of three counties to his congressional district is final except for the Senate's "rubber stamp" and Governor Bill Clements' approval.

Whaley, 66th District representative, has had his district changed to the 84th district and expanded to include Carson, Hardeman and Crosby Counties.

"The Senate has always in the past accepted anything we send them and, likewise, we accept anything they send us on their redistricting," he said.

"The next step is whether the governor will sign it or not, and I believe he will sign it," Whaley added.

He explained that if Clements refuses to sign the proposed measure, the bill would go to a state elected redistricting board made up of Democrats — Lt. Governor William Hobby, House Speaker Bill Clayton, State Comptroller Bob Bullock, Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong and Attorney General Mark White.

"Now the courts might kick it (the redistricting proposal) out," Whaley commented. He said district courts in contested areas may judge differently from the proposal, but he does not anticipate a problem.

Despite State Comptroller Bob Bullock's question Thursday about the constitutionality or a possible violation of the Voting Rights Act, Whaley said the redistricting was not violating either of these.

"The redistricting changes were made to even up congressional representation to reflect population growth and shifts in the districts," Whaley said.

"Ten years ago, a legislative district had approximately 72,000 constituents within the district," he said. "The population of Texas has increased now where the average is 94,585 persons in a district."

The reason for the expansion in the upper portion of Texas was needed because most of the population increase occurred in eastern part of the state.

"That's the reason I had to add three counties on the average size of what mine were," Whaley added.

"The combined agricultural income of those counties (in his new district) according to 1979 statistical data, the income of those counties exceeded $550 million, more than a half-billion dollars," Whaley said.

Poles pray at Cardinal's bier

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Hundreds of grieving Poles prayed through the night at the bier of Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski as the government joined church leaders in preparations for the funeral of the man who led the Roman Catholic Church's struggle to survive under communism in Poland.

The body of the 79-year-old primate was to lie in state at the seminary church on Krakowski Przedmiescie until the funeral Sunday.

The mourners sat silently in the pews, waiting for one of the wooden kneelers around the closed, flower-bedecked coffin with the red cardinal's hat among the blossoms.

One woman, after kneeling for a long time, finally whispered to a priest who took her rosary beads and touched them briefly to the foot of the lead-colored casket. A man in a blue suit knelt before the coffin, rose and hesitated, then knelt again before moving on.

Wyszynski, leader of the Polish church since 1948, died Thursday after a six-week battle with cancer. Thousands stood in the rain to file past the coffin at his residence, then packed the sidewalks as priests, members of the Solidarity labor federation and firemen carried it to the church a mile away.

After a Requiem Mass at the church Sunday, there will be an open-air service in Victory Square, where Pope John Paul II celebrated Mass during his homecoming visit in 1978. Interment will follow in the crypt beneath nearby St. John's Cathedral.

A joint church and state commission met to plan the funeral, which is expected to draw church leaders from around the world. The Vatican secretary of state, Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, is expected to represent the pope, who as Karol Wojtyla, a Polish priest and cardinal, was a protege of Wyszynski.

The pontiff, recuperating in a Rome hospital from an assassination attempt two weeks ago, asked to be left alone to pray when told of the death of his mentor. Later he celebrated a memorial Mass in his room and sent a telegram to Poland saying he shared his homeland's grief and prayers.

Poland's communist government - officially atheist in a country whose citizens are overwhelmingly Roman Catholic - described Wyszynski as "an outstanding priest and a great patriot."

"We are convinced that his life, thoughts and hard work have created a model of cooperation of the church with a socialist state," the government said in a statement.

Solidarity said the independent union "has a special debt to him, a debt of gratefulness."

Among the other messages of sympathy was one from President Reagan, who said: "My compatriots and I fully share Poland's deep sense of loss."
Wyszynski was born Aug. 3, 1901, near Warsaw, the son of a farmer. He was ordained a priest in 1924 and was appointed bishop of Lublin in 1946. Two years later, he became archbishop of Gniezno and Warsaw and primate of the Polish church.

Sources at the Vatican would give no indication of Wyszynski's successor, who will be appointed by the pope after consultation with the Polish government.

Lawmakers looking forward to weekend action on spending bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - With only four days left in the 1981 Legislature, lawmakers still have to deal with the mammoth state spending bill, now expected to appear this weekend.

House and Senate negotiators resolved their differences Thursday, agreeing on a $25.6 billion compromise bill to pay for running state government during the two years beginning Sept. 1.

Optimistic conferees had said when negotiations opened May 17 that lawmakers would have the bill in their hands by May 27, but late Thursday the measure was still being prepared for publication.

The crush of work in both houses as the June 1 adjournment nears, and extended committee debate over funding the state prison and welfare systems, delayed action. Meetings were often interrupted, postponed or abbreviated while conferees conducted other legislative business.

But committee co-chairman Rep. Bill Prensall, D-Bryan, said he still hoped debate could begin Saturday.

The original Senate version of the bill was $191 million more than Comptroller Bob Bullock said was available in state revenues. The House bill left $12 million on the table, Prensall said.

The final spending bill must be within the amount Bullock says is in state coffers or it cannot become law.

Bullock said Thursday he probably would not issue a new estimate of available revenues, but would "just wait and see what happens."

He said that he would decide if enough money is available when he sees the final bill.

The most difficult compromises - money for the state welfare and prison systems - were worked out in midnight agreements Tuesday.

Thursday's meeting spent $8.5 million more for state bilingual education programs, gave the attorney general $5 million to pay judgments against the state, and set aside $135 million for centers for battered wives.

The Texas Department of Corrections budget brought out some of the least temperate rhetoric in committee negotiations. Representatives took a hardline attitude toward appropriating money to meet expenses related to the federal civil rights suit on conditions in state prisons. They said they hoped the judgment that Texas prisons violate inmates' civil rights would be overturned on appeal.

Prensall called U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, who is presiding over the case, a "dictator."

Senators said they wanted to respond positively to the court order. They proposed spending $68.9 million more than the House for construction to relieve overcrowding, and created a $6.4 million contingency fund for "flexibility" and $7.5 million contingency item for security.

Negotiators slashed the Senate's $191.3 million biennial prison construction budget by $45 million. Prensall said the Senate appropriation was more than could be spent in two years because sites for new prisons had not been selected yet. The new figure is $25 million more than the House wanted to spend.

Prison construction could also be funded from $28 million earmarked for site acquisition, architectural development, purchase or construction of new facilities. The House had originally proposed to spend nothing on acquisition.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said the figure was $3 million above the minimum that Department of Corrections officials said they could live with.

Welfare spending, another sticking point, was also settled at the wretched hour Tuesday. The compromise proposal includes two-year totals of $34.6 million for family planning services, $253 million for community-based alternative care facilities, and $80.3 million for day care centers.

Pampan new regional planning head

AMARILLO - A Pampa native, Jarry McGuire, has been named the new executive director of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission (PRPC).

Formal approval of his appointment came during the PRPC board of directors meeting held Thursday.

McGuire is a 1967 graduate of West Texas State University, with a degree in public administration. Previously he had served as an administrative intern to Amarillo City Manager John Stoff and has recently served as city manager at Huntsville.

McGuire will replace George Louder as head of the PRPC, which serves the counties of the Panhandle.

The PRPC reviews Panhandle activities such as transportation, which included recent work to keep the Rock Island Railroad intact; housing and new government construction; senior citizen aid; and various government programs and grants to area counties and cities.

The job was given to McGuire among some controversy. He was tentatively approved for the position after PRPC board members held an "emergency" telephone hook-up conference on May 13.

PRPC board chairman Warren Jenkins introduced McGuire to the board members Thursday.

Board members formally approved his hiring without discussion or dissent. His salary will be $35,000 annually.

Nimitz victims 'alert, responsive'

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - Four young sailors severely burned in the fiery airplane crash on the USS Nimitz flight deck have been termed "alert and responsive" by the commander-director of the famed Brooke Army Medical Center burn unit.

However, Col. Basil A. Pruitt Jr. said the four received burns ranging from over 32 to 73 percent of their bodies and were all listed in critical condition.

The four Navy men were airlifted to Brooke late Wednesday night to begin what could be weeks of treatment in the military hospital at Fort Sam Houston.

They were identified as Airman Recruit Richard Simpson, 22, Gray, Me.; Petty Officer Second Class Richard M. Hokanson, 21, Hauppauge, N.Y.; Airman Apprentice George W. Butz, 23, Hockens, Del.; and Seaman Apprentice Stephen Pass, 21, Calhoun, Ga.

Pruitt said at a Thursday afternoon news conference that the four men's burns covered 32, 35, 35 and 73 percent of their bodies, but he declined to specify extent of burns of each patient by name. He also would not identify two of the patients whom he said suffered "inhalation stress."

Generally, the mortality chances are 50-50 for a person who receives burns over more than 60 percent of his body, and the chances of survival improve as the percentage of body area burned decreases, the doctor said.

He said personnel at the burn center were working around the clock to guard against shock by giving the patients plenty of liquids and prevent infection by treating the burns with special creams developed at the center.

"The period for shock is during the first 48 hours and they're nearly through that phase," Pruitt said. "In at least three of these patients, the preponderance of the burns are third degree, which will require skin grafts," he said.

Pruitt said if the patients continued to progress, skin grafting could begin in three to four weeks.

The family of one of the victims was able to visit and talk with him Thursday morning and an Army spokesman said other relatives were scheduled to arrive at the post.

The four sailors will benefit from 35 years of research that has made the Brooke burn ward one of the best equipped and staffed burn wards in the world.

The sailors joined 27 other burn victims who already were being treated at the center.

Dr. William McManus, chief of the clinical division, said the burn center accommodates an average 31 patients a day and 300 a year, both civilian and military.

Personnel at the center have improved burn treatment techniques since it was opened in 1946, gaining expertise through treating victims of the Korean and Viet Nam Wars, the 1977 Canary Island air crash, the fiery fuel tank explosion at the Mount Fuji, Japan, Marine Training Camp, and the aborted 1980 raid that tried to free the Americans held hostage in Iran.

Congressional redistricting committee named

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The House and Senate on Thursday selected members of a conference committee that will try to work out a congressional redistricting bill that satisfies members of both bodies.

The 10-member committee will work with a House bill that went through some rewriting before receiving Senate approval. The bill does not pair any incumbents, and sets boundaries for the three new congressional seats Texas has gained. The new districts would be in Houston, the Houston suburbs and the mid-cities area between Dallas and Fort Worth.

House Majority Leader Bob Bush, D-Sherman, has said the House version is favorable to Republicans. Speaker Bill Clayton appointed Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, as chairman of the House delegation to the conference committee. Also appointed were Bob Davis, R-Irving; Craig Washington, D-Houston; Bill Messer, D-Belton; and Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi.

The Senate conferees are Jack Ogg, D-Houston; chairman; Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler; Ike Harris, R-Dallas; and Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas.

Democrats reject tax cut elements

WASHINGTON (AP) - Key Democrats in the House, rejecting basic elements of President Reagan's tax plan, are holding firm for a one-year tax cut that favors lower- and middle-income Americans.

Dashing hopes for a quick compromise, most Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee turned thumbs-down Thursday on Reagan's plan for a three-year, across-the-board cut of 30 percent. Similarly, they would have no part of an administration-backed alternative for a 25 percent cut over three years.

"They may win it on the floor (of the House) and they may win it in the Senate, but we're not going to give it to them," declared Rep. William Brodhead, D-Mich., a member of the committee. "Most everybody said that if they (the administration) are adamant about three years and across-the-board cuts, we can't deal with them."

At the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan "remains hopeful that a bipartisan coalition can be built in Congress."

President Reagan's position remains firm: across-the-board, multiyear tax cuts are just as essential to economic recovery as across-the-board, multiyear budget cuts, said Speakes.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of Ways and Means, said there was no consensus during a two-hour Democratic caucus for a multiyear tax cut or for any plan that would give equal relief to the rich and poor. He favors a one-year tax cut tilted toward families with incomes between $20,000 and $50,000 a year.

Rostenkowski expressed hope the caucus position will not end negotiations with the Reagan administration. But no further meetings are scheduled, he added.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said he still feels there are enough areas of agreement to continue three-way discussions with Rostenkowski and the administration.

Dole said he talked with 15 of the 20 members of his committee Thursday and found strong support for a compromise.

The 23-member caucus of Ways and Means Democrats acted after Rostenkowski, Dole and Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan had agreed over breakfast that a compromise was near.

"We think the ball was advanced," Regan said of his meeting with Dole and Rostenkowski.

But it took House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill little time to throw cold water on any expectation that the administration's 25 percent compromise would find acceptance among his fellow Democrats.

Judge says appeals court order unreasonable

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) - A federal judge says an appeals court ruling is unrealistic in its demand that he formulate a comprehensive desegregation plan for Beaumont's South Park Independent School District by the fall.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Thursday that U.S. District Judge Joe Fisher was too idealistic in dismissing complaints of school desegregation in the district and ordered a full plan implemented at the start of school in September and said no extensions would be permitted.

"I think it's very unrealistic to think a desegregation plan can be formulated that quickly," Fisher said Thursday night.

Fisher had dismissed Justice Department complaints earlier that some schools remained racially segregated 10 years after it was ordered to redraw school district lines to achieve integration in all grades.

The judge held that he had no jurisdiction over the plan and that implementation did not require court supervision.

However, the appeals court ruled he did have jurisdiction and now must draft a constitutionally acceptable plan.

The appeals court ruling is "contrary to the law as I see it and contrary to the cited decisions" offered by the district and Justice Department lawyers during the court brief and testimony, said Fisher.

However, Leantha Reed, NAACP executive director in Beaumont, said the decision is "wholly and totally in accordance with the law."

"Many teachers and parents have wanted for some time to get within the law. Frankly I feel the school board is capable of coming up with a plan if they put their mind to it," she said.

School district officials declined comment on the ruling, but scheduled a meeting next week to decide whether to appeal.

The 5th Circuit said that 13,059 students enrolled in the South Park school district in the 1969-1970 school year, 33 percent were black.

In the 1979-80 year, with 11,075 students enrolled in district schools, 40 percent were black, the court noted.

Prior to the 1970 desegregation order, 15 of 20 schools were predominantly one-race in enrollment, the court said. After nine years under the plan, 11 of 18 schools were either all white or all black, the court said. And 10 of the schools were one-race in makeup throughout the period the desegregation plan was in force, the court said.

In 1970, 71 percent of the district's students attended one-race schools, and 76 percent attended one-race schools in 1979, the court said.

"Here, the simple numerical evidence of student enrollment reflects the effect, or lack thereof, of the desegregation plan," the court commented.

No indictments two years after murder

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Two years ago this Friday John Wood, a hard-nosed federal judge called "Maximum John" by drug dealers, stepped from his fashionable town home and was felled by a sniper's bullet.

It was the first assassination of a federal judge in modern times and the most massive U.S. investigation since the killing of John F. Kennedy immediately was thrown into gear.

But 174,970 manhours and more than $7 million later, the bottom line is — no indictments. Yet. Government sources have pronounced for seven months that the case was near solution. FBI agent-in-charge Jack Lawn and prosecutors recently approved a statement by the Committee for Justice which announced that "one or more persons" had qualified for the $100,000 reward it is giving for information leading to a conviction and that no one else need apply.

FBI Director William Webster said on March 26 in Washington, "I don't think it's wise for me to project indictments, but we are very close to a solution. We intend to solve this. We already know the players."

Attorneys for these "players" have practically invited the grand jury to indict their clients, contending the Justice Department does not have a case that would hold up in court.

Prosecutors — apparently relying heavily on wire taps and electronic surveillance of the key suspects — have operated in almost complete secrecy since direction of the investigation was taken over by the Justice Department in Washington last December.

Since that time news reporters have gathered most of their information from witnesses called by the grand jury and pronouncements of their attorneys.

However, reporters have been told by their attorneys that these five persons are the major "targets" of the investigation:

— Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, 35, convicted narcotics trafficker and high-stakes gambler now serving a 30-year no-parole term for continuing criminal enterprise. He was scheduled for trial before Wood at the time the judge was shot in the back with a .243-caliber bullet. Chagra had unsuccessfully attempted to have Wood removed as the judge in his case on grounds Wood, 63, was biased against him.

— Charles Voyde Harrelson, 42, the convicted "hit man" held without bond at Houston on three unrelated state charges. Harrelson was acquitted of one kill-for-hire murder and convicted of another hired killing. Government sources said several witnesses identified Harrelson in a December police lineup as being at the apartment complex the day Wood was killed.

— Joe Chagra, 41, an El Paso attorney who represents both his brother and Harrelson. He has said he expects to be indicted, but says he has taken a lie detector test to clear him of any complicity.

— Joann Starr Harrelson, 40, who married Harrelson in January 1979, four months after he was paroled from a 15-year state penitentiary term for the 1968 killing of grain dealer Sam Degelia Jr. Like her husband, Mrs. Harrelson claims to gamble for a living. She pleaded the Fifth Amendment during her first grand jury appearance and is fighting against testifying in the next session in June.

— Teresa Starr Jasper, 23, daughter of Joann Starr Harrelson, who has been jailed at Uvalde since she refused to testify on March 27. Other witnesses have said grand jury questions indicate prosecutors suspects she received a "payoff" in June 1979 from the Chagras, either at Corpus Christi or Brownsville.

Both Jimmy Chagra and Harrelson jumped bonds and were fugitives for several months during the investigation.

The grand jury has concentrated its investigation on acquaintances, gambling foes and family members of the Chagras and Harrelson.

Three attorneys speculate that the government's case may all hinge on circumstantial evidence and recorded conversations that may never be admitted into a trial, and that the government does not have any hard facts to back up circumstantial evidence.

Bob Tarrant, a Houston attorney representing Harrelson, has accused the FBI of "harassing" Harrelson and his family members with bugging devices since Harrelson ripped a tape recorder from beneath a table in a visitor's area of the Harris County jail while his step-daughter was visiting him last November.

"I think it is irresponsible (for Webster) to say we know who the players are," added Tarrant's law partner, Don Ervin, when the government seeks to disqualify from representing all three members of the Harrelson family. "I think they don't know who the players are. I think that's the whole thing. I feel like they are doing a lot of illegal tape recording, a lot of illegal monitoring of conversations that we will probably never know about."

Plot revealed to have witness slain

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A key suspect in the slaying of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. also allegedly tried to have a witness in his trial killed while serving time in Leavenworth Prison, a newspaper reports.

The San Antonio Express quoted sources as saying Jimmy Chagra allegedly attempted to arrange the death of ex-convict Henry Wallace, the government's star witness in Chagra's narcotics smuggling trial in Austin in August 1979.

Testimony of Wallace, a federally protected witness, aided Chagra's conviction and subsequent 30-year, no parole prison sentence for continuing criminal enterprise.

The man Chagra asked to arrange the killing was Jerry Ray James, a fellow inmate of Chagra's at the Leavenworth, Kan., federal penitentiary, according to James' attorney, Don Montoya.

"Chagra asked Jerry to arrange the killing," Montoya said.

Montoya, of Santa Fe, N.M., confirmed the alleged murder plot, but would not name the purported target. However, the Express said it learned from other sources that the intended victim was Wallace.

James has emerged as a key government witness in the investigation into the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., who had been scheduled to preside at Chagra's trial at the time the judge was gunned down in San Antonio on May 29, 1979.

Last month, New Mexico governor Bruce King granted James, a former member of the FBI's 10 most wanted fugitives list, a conditional release from prison for his cooperation in the Wood case. Federal agents taped conversations between James and Chagra at Leavenworth from August 1980 until February 1981.

"The attempt on Wallace's life was never carried out because James was working as an informant for the FBI and allowed his prison conversations with Chagra to be tape recorded," the Express reported.

James has been removed from Leavenworth and now is in the federal witness program. Chagra was moved to the maximum security prison at Marion, Ill.

It was during the prison conversations between Chagra and James that Chagra not only allegedly asked James to arrange Wallace's death, but also allegedly told James that he contracted with convicted hit man Charles V. Harrelson to have Wood slain, Montoya said.

Oscar Goodman, a Las Vegas attorney representing Chagra, said he had not heard the tapes of the conversations between James and Chagra and added, "I question those types of discussions, whether they are figments of a person's imagination, puffing or the like. I don't put too much credence in those conversations."

Goodman said that Chagra had a reputation for boasting and was only telling James what he wanted to hear. "When he (Chagra) was out here (Las Vegas) he was telling everyone he was the world's greatest gambler, when in fact every representation to me was that he was a loser all the time," Goodman said.

Solid waste bill approved

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate has approved a solid waste disposal bill that Sen. Carl Parker claims is at least as strong as one sent over by the House. An environmental group said Parker's bill is a sham.

"It's as strong if not stronger than the bill that came out of the House," said Parker, D-Port Arthur. "I would not agree with anybody that it's weaker."

"With minor exceptions, the Senate bill does not strengthen the Texas law" on hazardous waste, said Rick Lowerre, spokesman for the Lone Star Chapter of the Sierra Club.

"Given the cutbacks in agency spending to regulate hazardous waste, Texas will be in a worse position after this legislative session than it was last year, unless the Senate bill is strengthened significantly," said Lowerre.

He said "industries were successful in lobbying to knock off provisions which would solve many of the serious problems which many Texas communities have faced and will continue to face with hazardous waste contamination of our land and waters."

The Senate approved Parker's proposal on voice vote Thursday and returned it to the House with amendments.

Lowerre said the Sierra Club has asked the House to reject the Senate version and to set up a conference committee that would insist on the "stronger House language."

The Senate bill provides fines of up to $1 million for corporations that knowingly endanger Texans by violating solid waste disposal regulations.

The bill also would authorize the state to consider an applicant's "past sins" in reviewing a request to operate a disposal site.

"If the applicant has a prior history of violating regulations, that could be used to deny a permit, and the applicant could be required to clean up an old site as a condition for granting a new application," Parker said.

The State Health Department would regulate municipal solid waste and low-level radioactive waste, and the Texas Department of Water Resources would regulate industrial solid waste.

Parker said the bill also provides: — At least one public hearing in the county where a disposal site for hazardous waste would be located.

— Revocation of a disposal permit and emergency action without a hearing.

— Doubling civil penalties for violating non-hazardous requirements to a minimum fine of $100 and a maximum fine of $2,000.

— New civil penalties relating to hazardous wastes of up to $25,000 per act and per day of violation.

— New criminal penalties for hazardous waste violations of up to $25,000 and 180 days in jail, with a second offense punishable by a fine of $50,000 and a year in jail.

"Last, but not least, is the addition of a new criminal offense of 'knowing endangerment,' which subjects individuals to possible fines of up to $250,000 or five years in jail, or both. The penalty for corporations would be up to a $1 million fine," said Parker.

Parker said his bill was designed to comply with the Federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

Clements' wiretap bill okayed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements smiled from above when the House vote board lit up green, signifying approval of his wiretap bill.

Opponents of the bill — a major piece of Clements' anti-crime package — took last shots at the measure Thursday, but they failed and the House voted 97-46 to send the bill to the governor's desk.

"This has been a great day for law enforcement and the continuing war on drugs," Clements said after he came down from the House gallery. "Time will demonstrate its success."

The bill, which will get a quick signature from Clements, allows prosecutors to ask judges to allow the Department of Public Safety to tap telephones of suspected drug dealers.

Senators changed Rep. Bennie Bock's bill make it expire automatically in 1985 unless that year's Legislature decides it should be continued. Bock said he agreed with all the changes made in the Senate.

"The Senate in my opinion has done some things which probably improve the bill," said Bock, D-New Braunfels.

Opponents of the measure took to the microphones in an effort to win at least a delay. Rep. Wilhemina Delco, D-Austin, said the DPS would need $1.2 million during the biennium to supervise the wiretaps.

"I'd spend $1.2 million to save my kid from a drug pusher," Bock replied.

Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, led the opposition with a motion to reject the bill to conference committee. He argued against a portion of the bill allowing covert entry to plant bugs.

Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman, joined Wilson.

"I don't feel like we can trust human beings with technology with the massive potential for abuse this technology permits," Bush said.

The House voted 96-45 against Wilson's motion for a conference committee. Bush said he thought some members — who gave in to "leadership of people not located in this House" — might have changed their mind on wiretapping in the weeks since it won House approval. He said some newer House members might have been pressured earlier in the session because they thought they "had to vote along to get along" because it was sponsored by a very important person.

Clements, wife Rita, and legislative aide Jim Kaster watched from the House gallery as the green lights on the voting board indicated approval of the bill.

Later, the governor said the bill poses no threat to innocent citizens.

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Congress and the federal judiciary appear to be on a collision course that does not bode well for either branch of government.

Dozens of bills have been introduced in the House and Senate this year to strip the federal courts of jurisdiction over controversial subjects such as abortion, school prayer and busing — all issues on which previous Supreme Court decisions have created deep and often bitter divisions.

Lacking the votes to overturn such

End run around high court rulings through conventional procedures, frustrated lawmakers now are attempting an end run around the high court by seizing upon a seldom-utilized provision of the Constitution that gives Congress the right to restrict the tribunal's appellate jurisdiction.

The pending bills, introduced by legislators unhappy with court rulings on busing, prayer and abortions, would bar the federal courts — including the Supreme Court — from reviewing all state laws affecting those topics.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate subcommittee with jurisdiction in the field and a leading advocate of the court circumvention strategy argues that "the federal judiciary has been courting constitutional disaster by reading its own predilections into the nation's fundamental document."

There is, of course, an eye-of-the-beholder problem with Hatch's argument. He may consider the Supreme Court guilty of "overreaching" in its rulings, but others applauded those decisions as wise and reasonable interpretations of the Constitution. Who is to say which side is right?

Legal scholars disagree as to whether Congress does in fact have the right to strip the court of its power to review the constitutionality of state laws on any subject. But even if the legislature has such a right, that doesn't mean it ought to exercise it.

This is not the first time, after all, that substantial segments of the population have been deeply upset by Supreme Court rulings. In the 1920s, liberals were frustrated when the high court struck down laws aimed at curbing some of the most rapacious practices of big business.

In the 1930s, when the "nine old men" wiped out much of his early New Deal legislation, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was so furious that he tried to push through Congress his infamous court-packing scheme.

The South was in turmoil for years after the court's 1954 school desegregation decision, while liberal criminal-law rulings of the 1960s provoked noisy "Impeach Earl Warren" crusades.

Despite the passions aroused, the court's right to decide those issues never was successfully challenged. But when it has found itself too far out of line with the public and political consensus of the day, the high court has retreated from unpopular positions.

Sometimes such turnabouts have been abrupt. Even as Congress debated the Roosevelt court-packing scheme, two justices suddenly reversed themselves and began finding merit in New Deal legislation — the "switch in time that saved nine."

Sometimes the retreat has been gradual, as with the shift in interpretation of criminal law in recent years.

What is important is that sooner or later the court modified its positions in response to changing times and sentiments. In each instance, it has done so of its own accord — not because Congress took away its power to decide certain issues.

Indeed, if Hatch and his allies would put down their battering ram for a moment, they might notice that the walls they are attempting to breach already are beginning to crack.

In its own peculiar way — with pomp and dignity and denials of any such crassness — the Supreme Court does "follow the election returns," as the inimitable Mr. Dooley once noted. However, the "election returns" on issues such as abortion are not yet very clear.

We do not shoot the umpire simply because we disagree with his calls.

Neither should Congress try to strip the Supreme Court of fundamental authority merely because some legislators dislike a few decisions.

Committees whack food stamps program

There was recently another of those sensible developments taking place in Washington these days which American taxpayers can applaud. The agriculture committees in both House and Senate approved President Reagan's plan to curb the runaway food stamp program.

Food stamps have become a casebook example of how a modest, well-intentioned welfare program can become a rampant rogue. Initially, 15 years ago, an estimated 15 million people were on food stamps. Today that number has risen to 25 million. The program costs $11 billion a year. It is a step in the right direction. Also, a ban on food stamps for striking workers was approved by the House committee. And, moreover, Senate action went significantly further by allowing states the authority, heretofore denied them, of requiring able-bodied food stamp recipients — estimated at more than 2 million persons — to work in public service jobs.

Thanks to some commendable pioneering in San Diego, Calif., that community's pilot workfare program, largest in the nation, played a significant role in the food stamp reform now working its way through Congress. Workfare there proved how worthwhile and practical it can be in operation. Of those eligible to participate in workfare in San Diego County, two out of three gave up their stamps rather than to work.

The difficulty is that federal restrictions about who can participate in workfare are so broad and generous that all too many are ruled out, including for example persons receiving unemployment compensation, students enrolled half-time, and those participating in drug or alcoholic rehabilitation. Even so, enough of the 12,000 food stamp recipients in San Diego County surrendered their stamps in preference to work that almost a quarter million dollars was lopped off the program. Although the initial costs of setting up workfare there were high, they were much lower than studies had forecast and are now at about the break-even point.

Workfare has had even more spectacular results in general relief cases, which, thereby have been cut by 42 percent in that county. As a consequence of what is being accomplished, the general relief rolls in San Diego County are 200 percent smaller than those, for example, in Sacramento, Calif., with less than half the comparative population.

The need for reform and reorganization of the multitude of federal welfare programs has been recognized for a long time and much debated to little avail. No one can believe that it will be easy to correct the accumulated abuses and chaos of nearly half a century of welfarism, but it is getting no sooner and no easier to undertake that enormous task. The Reagan administration is right on track, therefore, in addressing this necessary reform so early and so vigorously.

In the beginning, the intention was relatively modest.

The idea was to provide some insurance for the elderly working population against unanticipated financial need. "Working" was defined in the most basic sense of the word, meaning jobholders in industry and commerce, no high-salaried professionals.

And even so coverage was far from comprehensive. Initially no more than 60 percent of the work force participated and benefits were limited, supplementing an individual's own savings and whatever might be forthcoming from other sources. Participants financed the program through deductions from their paychecks. But they were not thereby investing in an annuity paying in money that they would be entitled to withdraw later.

The idea was not to establish a national pension system. The program was structured not as a cumulative trust fund but as a simple transfer mechanism. Money paid in by the participating portion of the active work force was immediately paid out to the eligible portion of the retired population.

That, briefly, was Social Security as conceived and instituted in the Depression '30s. That is not Social Security in the inflationary '80s and to a considerable extent because the program has changed so much in the last half century it is in trouble. Again.

So now we have President Reagan and Congress revving up for the third rescue operation in approximately as many years. What makes this time around different is that for the first time retrenchment is being seriously addressed as essential to keeping the system solvent.

The administration proposals — principally to set back annual cost-of-living increases from July to October at a savings of billions a year, discourage early retirement, revise the formula for computing future benefits and tighten eligibility requirements for those — are in part a hurry-up effort designed to head off independent congressional action. Both houses are looking at more drastic pruning because the Social Security system is in such clearly bad shape, in real danger of running out of funds.

In a sense it is a victim of its own success. From the very beginning the system functioned not merely as intended but better. So much better that not only did participation multiply, benefits proliferated. With an expanding economy and a growing population, the nation could afford it, particularly in the boom '60s when a number of expensive additions were made to the original benefits package.

The good times came to an end in the sagging '70s, however. Partly it is demographics — a declining birthrate, meaning fewer newcomers to the work force, and more Americans living longer, meaning more retirees to be supported. In the 1930s, the payroll taxes of 11 workers supported one beneficiary. The ratio is now about 5-to-1, and some projections see it hitting 3-to-1 or less within another half century.

The growing problem has been addressed to date through quick fixes that come down basically to raising payroll tax rates to meet recurrent benefit payment gaps. Any more fundamental restructuring of the program has been regarded as politically impossible given the growing and politically active population of retirees.

But there comes a point at which the inescapable can no longer be ignored. Such as now. A program such as Social Security cannot be insulated from the society and more immediately the economy in which it exists. It cannot pay out more in the long run than that economy is capable of putting into it.

The proposals now on the table are only the beginning of a long overdue reconsideration of the entire system. There are plenty of others to fuel the debate, such as spinning off costly Medicare as a separate program and taxing benefit payments above a subsistence level.

The important point now is that a start has been made. Social Security may not have been intended as a national pension system, but Americans have come to regard it as such. If despite the political complications the Reagan administration succeeds in restoring the system to soundness, the achievement could well rank in history's final accounting as its most constructive.

An end to social insecurity

Can Detroit make a comeback

On the morning of last May 4, the Japanese, under duress, acquiesced.

The Japanese agreed to curtail exports of their cars to the United States over the next three years; 7.7 percent the first year.

That same afternoon, Chrysler raised prices again!

Incredibly inept timing; a rude finger in the eye of American consumers.

The indifference to the public interest which has characterized some industrialists invites restraints on them all.

The antitrust chief of the Reagan Administration, Assistant-Atty. Gen. Bill Baxter, has been wondering if American taxpayers should have bailed out the Chrysler Corporation.

He says the bailout did not rescue the jobs of Chrysler workers. Those workers would have been absorbed by the purchases of the bankrupt properties. Actually, says Baxter, the bailout merely bailed out the unwise investors in Chrysler stock.

Can Detroit make a comeback?

Chrysler sales last month were up 51 percent from the same month last year but — sales of imported cars continued to claim a larger share of the American market. Now 28.7 percent — almost one-in-three cars sold in the United States — are manufactured outside the United States.

And the so-far best response by American car makers is to retool for the manufacture of imitation Japanese cars.

There are some exciting exceptions.

Several heretofore unheard of independents are turning out electric cars with ever-improving performance specs.

A former GM executive named De Lorean, in a factory in Northern Ireland, is turning out a stainless-steel roadster.

It's expensive: $25,000. Yet more than 10,000 people have already put down cash deposits to buy the car and the first shipload has been delivered in California.

During the big to-do about whether Chrysler should be allowed to go under, there were few public reminders that in the hectic hundred-year history of the motorcar at least 500 U.S. car makers have gone broke.

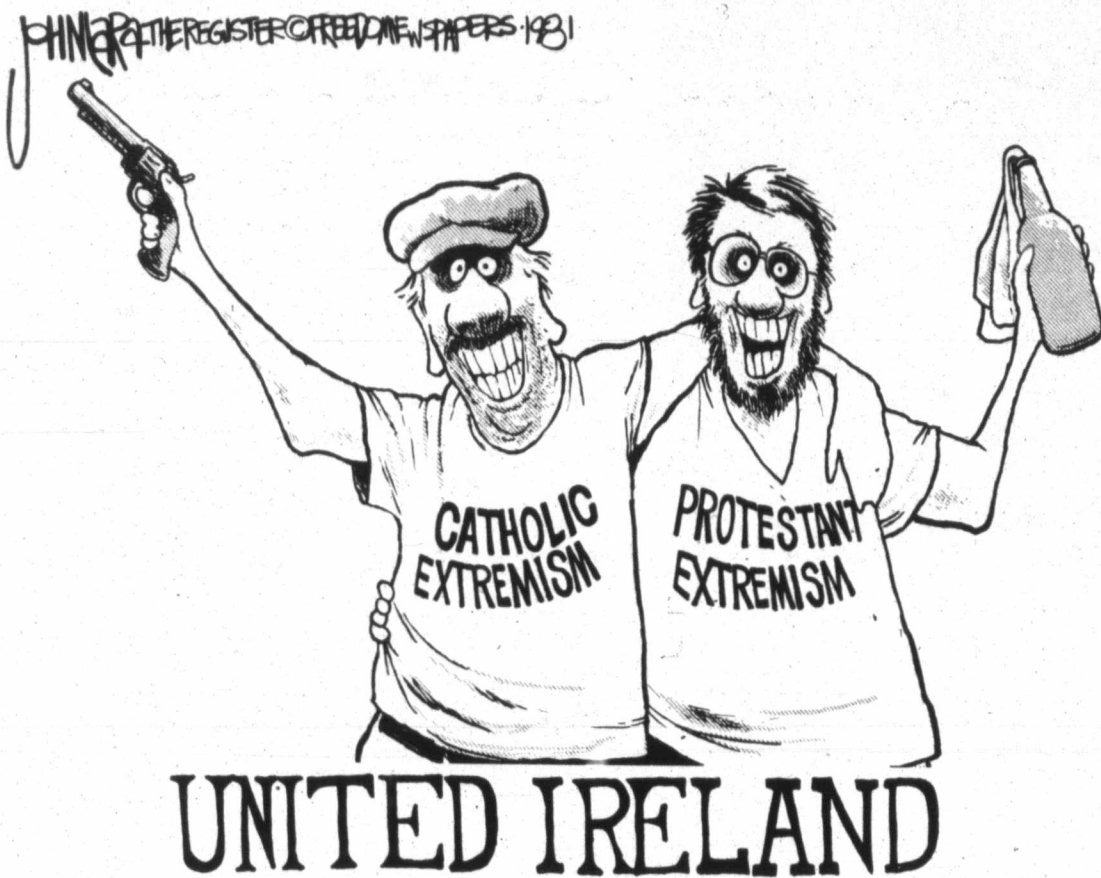

The result of this culling-out was not catastrophic. On the contrary, the innovative survived and the breed improved.

Now, with curtailed imports and subsidized home-mades — instead of encouraging and rewarding the innovators — we are tending to perpetuate unimaginative imitators.

Among Detroit's new generation chief executive officers (CEOs) there are some who recognize the challenge, that the best way to rebuild profits is to produce for the American public the kind of cars the American public wants.

But the giants may not be sufficiently maneuverable, may be overtaken by upstarts with big ideas.

What to tell children when teacher killed?

MARLBORO TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Karen A. Costello is well-remembered at Marlboro Elementary School, where some children call her their "music angel." Some youngsters also routinely mutilate pictures of the man accused of killing the 23-year-old teacher in a $3 robbery-abduction.

The 500 children at Marlboro share a common grief with 27 third graders in Pleasantville and 40 pupils at Piscataway's Wee People Pre-School: Their teachers were slain. And psychologists say the children are among the often overlooked victims of violent crime.

Ms. Costello was a popular singing teacher who was known to nearly all the students at Marlboro. In hundreds of letters to her parents and in interviews, the first through fifth graders revealed poetic recollections of the young woman and anger toward her alleged killer.

"When a friend called me and told me she was shot, I made my Dad get me a paper. I couldn't believe it. I couldn't get to sleep that night," said 9-year-old Elise Labott. "I still feel like shooting him (the suspect)."

Fifth grader Kim Kaufman said she felt "nauseous" after her teacher was slain Feb. 21, and Rachel Werlin wrote that she had visions of Ms. Costello as "an angel watching us cry."

In a common reaction, Cindy Redmin said she told her parents: "You don't expect it to happen to you where you live, maybe in New York, but not somebody you know."

Dr. Arnold Lazarus, a Rutgers University professor and founder of the Multimodal Therapy Institutes in New York and Princeton, said the impact of a teacher's slaying would vary, "but, clearly, it has an impact on most children: some can switch it off, others will carry scars for a long time."

Educators at the three schools said they were surprised at how quickly word spread of the killings — and their grisly details.

Barbara Zitomer, director of the Wee People Pre-school, said all the 4- and 5-year-olds in 26-year-old Deborah Friedman's class knew she had been killed Jan. 4 when they arrived at school the next day. Prosecutors called her slaying a "Looking For Mr. Goodbar" case. A man has pleaded guilty in the killing.

In Pleasantville, Rose Quarles' third graders came to Main Street School with tears in their eyes April 16, aware their 47-year-old teacher had been slain the night before and that her son was charged with her shotgun murder.

"She used to look like Wonder Woman sometimes," lamented 9-year-old Lamont Richardson. "I tell you, she made us learn. I couldn't believe...she was shot in the head."

Trudie Humley, who took over Mrs. Quarles' class, said she tried to talk to the children about the killing. At the Wee People school, a developmental psychologist was called in to speak to parents. And at Marlboro, there were memorial services and many discussions.

"I think talking about it is necessary," said Dr. Edward Docherty, another Rutgers psychologist. "Kids spend a good deal of their time in school and teachers are like parent figures to them."

"Many of our children already have a sense of pervasive fear because of what is happening in Atlanta. For these children (in New Jersey), there are some who can dismiss the deaths with what we call the magical thinking of children. But the death of a teacher forces them to deal at least with the reality that death brings absence, loss," said Docherty.

He said the children's reactions could include fear of being alone, an increased sense of vulnerability and anger.

"This is an area we need to talk more about," Docherty said. "But I think it is very important that we do not, as we often do, deny the children an opportunity for an outpouring of grief..."

Some of the children's reactions were still apparent months after the deaths.

"A friend of mine brings in pictures (of the suspect) and puts it on the floor and jumps on it, and then cuts it up," said Elise. "I know that's not right, but it hurts so much." Or, as fourth grader Rajaharan Nagarja wrote to Ms. Costello's parents: "Sometimes I wonder why it happened. From time to time I feel so sad, I feel like breaking something."

Not all educators feel frank discussion is necessarily the best thing for children. Barbara Zitomer, the pre-school director, said she was content that "simple terms, such as it was an absence that would be final," was sufficient explanation for most children.

But, said Lazarus: "You have to keep in mind that even adults have difficulty coping with these things. For children, who do not have as much experience, it can leave a variety of scars. Death is all around us, and those who don't talk about it are asking for trouble."

War on drugs bill advances

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Texas War on Drugs bill, designed to catch doctors who put "hard drugs" into the illicit drug traffic, gained preliminary approval in the House late Thursday night.

The measure advanced, 89-46, with a final vote expected today. A number of minor amendments would send it back to the Senate for further action.

Doctors would have to write their prescriptions for such drugs as dilaudid, demerol, methaqualones, amphetamines, narcotics and barbiturates on special pre-printed, serially numbered pads provided by the Department of Public Safety. Information on the form would include the name, age and address of the patient.

The physician, the druggist and the DPS each would get a copy of the prescription, which the DPS would record in a computer for correlations that might point to doctors who make a business of prescribing drugs with high street values.

Rep. Walter Grubbs, D-Abilene, the sponsor, told the House the measure would be "a deterrent to illegal prescriptions and illegal drugs."

He said drugs covered by the bill amount to only 7 percent of all prescriptions.

Grubbs added that "prescription forgery is easy and widespread."

Debate on the measure centered on privacy issues, and Grubbs said the DPS would be prohibited from making information in its computers available to the public. He said data on a prescription would be purged from the computer after 180 days.

Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio, attempted to eliminate the requirement that the prescription forms show the name and address of the patient.

"I am afraid we are sacrificing the right of privacy in the name of law enforcement," he said.

Rep. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, answered that without data on patients, law enforcement officers could not identify persons who go from doctor to doctor, persuading them to prescribe drugs that could be abused.

"The bill covers only seriously addictive narcotic drugs," McFarland said.

Garcia's amendment was tabled, 86-50.

John Duncan, executive director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, later issued a statement criticizing the bill as one that "strikes at those persons who are simply unfortunate enough to be in enough pain to have a physician prescribe a pain killer."

Workers give airline president tongue-lashing

HOUSTON (AP) — They lined up by the dozens for a chance to give the president of their company a piece of their minds. They booed and hooted as he spoke, they accused him of breaking his word and spreading "out and out lies" — and challenged his ability to run a major airline.

But Frank A. Lorenzo resisted any temptation he may have felt to fire the lot of disgruntled Texas International Airlines pilots and stewardesses. Instead, the president of Texas Air Corp., TIA's holding company, stood calmly and allowed the dissenters to speak their peace at TAC's annual shareholders meeting Thursday.

For Lorenzo, the victory came when the votes were counted. One resolution proposed by the unhappy employees drew about 35,000 votes but did not come close to passing — ballots against it totaled more than 5 million.

The results were generally the same on every issue pitting Lorenzo and shareholders sympathetic to him against the rowdy group of about 200 pilots and stewardesses among about 1,000 persons attending the meeting.

The dissenters, mostly union-covered workers angry about TIA's unsuccessful efforts to take over Continental Airlines and other "fiscal manipulations," nominated to TIA's board of directors five pilots suspended earlier this month after they wore lapel buttons critical of the company. Lorenzo's slate of officers soundly defeated them, but it did not quell their anger.

"I'm concerned about the out-and-out lies that our employees are being told, an example being your statement that TI pilots are being paid $100,000," said Mike Wood, one of the suspended pilots. Wood said the actual salary is about half that.

Lorenzo, who wants the pilots to fly more hours per month, said the $100,000 he mentioned referred to the cost to the company of pay and benefits for senior captains, and he insisted it was correct.

TIA also announced at the meeting that it has asked a U.S. district court in Los Angeles to halt a move by Continental employees to buy stock and take over their own company.

TIA owns 48.5 percent of Continental and has been trying, without success, to gain controlling interest of the West Coast company.

The attempt to take over Continental is one of the complaints pilots and stewardesses have. But their main complaint centers on last year's creation of Texas Air Corp. as TIA's holding company and the later birth of a sister airline, New York Air.

Stewardess Sheila Hammond complained to Lorenzo at the meeting that TIA employees were kept in the dark about New York Air's creation.

"We found out about it by reading the newspaper," she said. "Our aircraft were repainted and the stars were replaced with apples. The pilots and flight attendants found themselves with worsening working conditions and not enough equipment."

Several resolutions proposed by the dissident group were voted down or overruled, including one that would have put all of Texas Air Corp.'s assets back into TIA.

TIA and its pilots have been trying to agree on a labor contract since February 1979. TIA's agreement with its stewardesses expired last September and no new contract has been signed. The New York airline created by the Texas firm is non-union, another sore point with the dissidents.

In his remarks to the shareholders, Lorenzo touched on his complaints against the pilots and said TIA must reduce its labor costs.

"We cannot expect to be competitive with Southwest (Airlines) when their pilots fly 75 hours per month while TI's fly 52 to 54 hours," he said. The remark was jeered by the dissidents, and pilots later said the reason they fly only 54 hours a month is because that's all they're scheduled to fly.

Cowtown award-a-cop

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — City policemen may soon get more than a pat on the back and a job well done from civic leaders who want to contribute to the reduction of crime in Cowtown.

A blue ribbon group of 40 community leaders have donated $200,000 to state a private endowment program aimed at helping the boys in blue combat Fort Worth's soaring crime rate.

The Fort Worth Police Officers' Award Foundation is designed with the earmarks of an incentive program to recognize and reward excellence by law enforcement officers, said attorney Thomas Law, trustee and secretary of the foundation.

"Our ultimate goal is to contribute to the reduction of crime in our community," said Law.

The civic leaders announced the formation of the foundation during a luncheon Thursday. Law said the program is "unique and unprecedented" and is intended to promote "a more professionally effective police department." He stressed the need for widespread public support.

"We must have the commitment of the total community if we are to combat crime effectively," said businessman J. Edd Lott, foundation chairman.

Lott said the founders, concerned with the soaring crime rate, "have been aware of the need for an all-encompassing program to support the Fort Worth Police Department."

According to police statistics, crime in this city of almost 400,000 skyrocketed 72 percent during the 1970s and included a 14 percent jump from 1979 to 1980 alone.

"Unless we as a community can continue to focus more attention on this problem, crime figures show that one out of every seven Fort Worth residents could be a victim of crime this year," said Fort Worth Police Chief H.F. Hopkins.

A total of 48,492 major crimes were reported to police last year, with robberies at an all-time high of 2,286. Murders, aggravated assaults, thefts and auto thefts also were up.

"In order for the foundation to be successful," said Law, "the urgency exists for all Fort Worth citizens concerned about the safety of our city to participate now."

problems that remain and we've invented the tools to tackle these problems."

He said TEXT is one of the "tools" which will be used to conduct experiments that can fill the "enormous gaps" that remain in the understanding of the basic phenomena of the fusion process.

"The problems that remain are within our ability to solve them," he said.

He predicted at least 10 more years of research would be needed but at the end of that time, "we should know how much energy from fusion plants will cost consumers, how long it will take to build fusion power plants and what their impact will be on the environment."

Clark spoke at the dedication of the new Texas Experimental Tokamak, a device for fusion energy research at the University of Texas in Austin.

"Fusion represents an infinite source of energy," Clarke said, "and TEXT has a very fundamental role to play in the development of that source..."

"We've come a long way. We've learned that fusion can be harnessed for energy. We've identified the key

Hospital firm supports Reagan

Officials of Hospital Corporation of America, now building the Coronado Community Hospital here, has announced the corporation's endorsement of the economic policy recently proposed by President Ronald Reagan.

Highland General Hospital Administrator Norman Knox said HCA has pledged its support for the President's package of substantial cuts in federal spending, tax incentives for business, individual tax rate reductions and regulatory reform.

"With respect to health policy, we pledge our cooperation to the President and to the Secretary of Health and Human Services in finding mutually acceptable areas to achieve a reduction in the regulatory burden on our hospitals."

The hospital administrator said present federal and state regulations add about $25 a day to patients' hospital costs.

"Where we find it inconsistent with basic HCA policy to support a specific budget reduction proposal, we pledge to offer constructive suggestions for amending the proposal or substitute proposals which would achieve at least the same federal budget saving," Knox said after a discussion of the President's proposal with HCA officials.

"HCA welcomes the announced support for the Secretary of Health and Human Services for the health industry's Voluntary Effort to restrain increases in health expenditures," Knox said. "We pledge our cooperation in continuing and strengthening the voluntary effort."

Knox said Highland General Hospital has participated in the Voluntary Effort and received Certificates of Recognition every year since the program began in 1979.

This recognition of the local hospital is given only to those hospitals which achieved the national and state goals for slowing the rate of increase in hospital costs.

Knox said HCA believes that adoption of the President's economic policy can result in a reduction of general inflation while increasing productivity and economic growth, thereby having a significant restraining effect on increases in the cost of delivering quality health care to all Americans.

First lead develops in the perfect crime

CHICAGO (AP) — It looked like the perfect crime: $1 million in cash smuggled so skillfully from the underground maximum-security vault of the First National Bank of Chicago that it was days before officials knew it was missing.

No solid leads materialized after the Columbus Day weekend robbery in 1977. No arrests ever were made. None of the money turned up — until 23 $100 bills confiscated during a Georgia cocaine bust early this month were traced to the 3½-year-old heist.

Now the FBI hopes the lead will help crack the case. "It is the only basic thing we've had to work on since the robbery," said Anthony DeLorenzo, an FBI spokesman in Chicago.

The bank was closed and employees worked storing cash deliveries for the opening of business over that Columbus Day weekend when precisely $1 million in $50 and $100 bills was removed from a locked money cart near the vault. How the 80 pounds of currency was smuggled out has remained a matter of speculation, and where it went, a mystery.

When the loss was discovered, bank officials thought it was a bookkeeping error. By the time it was reported missing to police and federal agents four days later, the trail was stale.

But early in May, authorities who seized $15,000 in a drug raid discovered that slightly more than a score of $100 bills was part of the stolen money.

Five men, including three Peruvian nationals, were arrested in Savannah, Ga. on drug charges. The bank bills were found on one of those arrested, Fred O. Brooks, 41, who once lived in the Chicago suburb of Justice, DeLorenzo said.

Now a resident of Hallandale, Fla., Brooks never worked for the bank and has refused to tell authorities where he got the money. DeLorenzo said. He has not been charged in connection with the bank robbery.

"The main thrust of our investigation now is what trail the bills took, and, frankly, it may produce nothing," he said. "But it is the only basic thing we've had to work on since the robbery. Conceivably, the bills could have been gotten legitimately, like from cashing a check at a bank. We don't know if we are in a blind alley or not at this time."

Republicans wonder about look-alike ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican campaign leaders, in an attempt to blast Democrats in Congress and drum up support for GOP-sponsored legislation, hired a Ted Kennedy look-alike for a series of commercials. Now, they're no longer sure the ads are necessary.

Reagan's economic program seems to be doing so well on Capitol Hill that the television commercials probably are not needed, several GOP sources said.

The ads were to help solve a GOP dilemma: what to do with millions of dollars left over from the 1980 campaigns.

Since their "Vote Republican For a Change" television spots in 1980 were something of a hit — especially the one featuring an actor resembling House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. — the Republicans decided to continue the campaign.

Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, said an initial $2 million was to be spent for the commercials boosting Reagan's budget and tax-cutting plans.

While the earlier ads were run to help elect Republicans to Congress, Vander Jagt said there's no reason why the idea wouldn't work as well in promoting Reagan's bills.

But the ads were never made, even though an actor who looks like Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., is being kept on a retainer.

Meanwhile, the 1980 commercial in which the Tip O'Neill look-alike plays a pudgy, grumpy congressman whose limousine runs out of gas on the highway, is a finalist in the competition for a "Cleo" best-commercial award for 1980.

Jewelry chain agrees to credit billing settlement

SEATTLE (AP) — Zales Corp., the nation's largest jewelry chain, has agreed to refund about $900,000 to charge account customers after being accused of improperly handling billing errors, the Federal Trade Commission says.

Randall Brook, acting regional FTC director, said Wednesday the out-of-court settlement also requires Zales to send about 500,000 letters to customers around the nation.

The case against the Dallas-based company was handled in Seattle because the initial complaint or tip came from a resident of the Pacific Northwest, Brooks explained.

Zales officials in Dallas said they had not seen the agreement and thus were unable to comment on it.

Zales had been accused of improperly handling customer complaints about charge-account billing errors. The 1975 Fair Credit Billing Act requires the company to investigate such complaints within thirty days, a deadline FTC officials say the jewelry chain failed to meet.

Zales also was accused of waiting too long to make corrections in charge-account billings and of keeping money from accidental overpayments without telling customers who had overpaid.

Under the settlement, Brook said, Zales promised to handle future complaints promptly and, over the next several months, to send about 500,000 letters asking customers whether they had experienced billing problems and believed they were owed money.

The question of suicide

By George R. Plagenz

Were the 960 Jewish rebels who committed suicide at Masada in 73 A.D. heroes and martyrs, as the recent TV movie depicted them?

The U.S. Catholic Bishops' Film Office rated "Masada" inappropriate for young viewers because of the mass suicide depicted.

Judaism as well as Catholicism regards suicide as a sin prohibited by the Ten Commandments ("Thou shalt not kill"). The classical position of both Christianity and Judaism regarding suicide has been that, as it involves the voluntary taking of a life, it is murder. However, the question the events at Masada raise is: Can there be extenuating circumstances that would make suicide morally preferable to something else?

For the Jews who committed suicide at Masada, the alternative was a life of slavery under their Roman oppressors. Faced with such a choice, was the action of the Jews not only acceptable but admirable?

The hardened view of the church toward suicide has been modified greatly by many churchmen today. Pastors who once would not give a Christian burial to a person who took his own life now consider each case in its own setting — circumstances, the person's mental state, etc.

While committing suicide may no longer automatically consign a person to hell in the view of the church, can suicide be resorted to with impunity by someone who wants to take early leave of this vale of tears and get an early start on life in heaven? That question never really came up until six years ago when a prominent clergyman and educator committed suicide along with his wife.

Dr. Henry Pitney van Dusen, a Presbyterian minister, was president of Union Theological Seminary in New York from 1945 to 1963. He and his wife believed that following their suicide they would "enter together the afterlife which is the cornerstone of the Christian faith." Their death note, which ended with a prayer, contained two statements that have caused theologians and others to ponder.

"Nowadays it is difficult to die," the note said. This was almost surely a reference to modern medicine, which often keeps people alive into old age and infirmity. Could the van Dusens have been implying that because of medical science some people are living past the time allotted to them by God?

Was an action such as theirs an attempt therefore to adjust things according to the divine plan in which death's role is that of a welcome visitor who will forestall the pains attendant upon old age?

The other controversial statement in the van Dusens' suicide note was, "We feel this way as we are taking will become more usual and acceptable as the years pass."

What this seems to imply is that more people will come to regard suicide as a rational solution to their sufferings and an act that can be undertaken by believers in the assurance that it will not forfeit one's claim on God's mercy or one's place in heaven.

As evidenced in their literature, the ancient Greeks believed suicide to be natural and fitting when life had lost all that made it worth living. In Homer, the motives regarded as worthy for suicide were of a heroic nature — devotion to a high purpose, an intolerable sorrow of personal bereavement ("If I see thee, it were better for me to go beneath the earth") or a state of dishonor suffered or impending — which is what the Jews were facing at Masada.

Most modern ethicists would say that self-destruction is justified now and then by circumstances, although the reaction to circumstances must not be of a cowardly or immoral kind. That was the objection of Plato and Aristotle to suicide: It is a cowardly act.

The school of philosophy most favorable to suicide is the Utilitarian. To a Utilitarian, a good act is one that increases the sum total of human happiness.

Religion roundup

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Protestants and Roman Catholics are cooperating to provide a "theological presence" at the 1982 International Energy Exposition here and to challenge visitors to be responsible stewards of God's creation.

Theme of the world fair, which is expected to attract more than 11 million visitors between May 1 and Oct. 31, 1982, will be "Energy Turns the World."

The Rev. Harold K. Bales, a United Methodist official of Nashville, has been named director of the fair's ecumenical project, which will involve an exhibit hall providing a short film and other materials on stewardship.

Bales says the materials will stress that "the earth is the Lord's."

NEW YORK (AP) — The Lutheran Peace Fellowship, in an open letter to Lutheran bishops and other church officials, accuses church "complicity in support of the evils of the arms race and nuclear weaponry," calling it a "threat to our lives and faith."

A Radiant CLEAN LIFE

The housewife cleans her home until it shines with a radiance that gives contentment and joy to those who view it.

It pleases God to see our lives clean and wholesome. We all need help, to keep our lives clean.

David prayed to God for help in this matter.

"Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."

Lean upon the Lord. Seek his help and he will not deny it. Attend church this Sunday and let your life be centered in the Lord.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Rare harmony, doctrinal firmness at assembly

HOUSTON (AP) — Presbyterians, with a bent for arguing theology, played it with rare harmony at their governing assemblies, overwhelmingly concurring on a key doctrinal stance and bringing sundry differences into accord.

A "love feast," William P. Thompson of New York, chief executive of the mostly northern United Presbyterian church, called the eight-day affair.

"A celebrative assembly," said the charming new moderator of the southern Presbyterian Church of the U.S., Dorothy Barnard of St. Louis.

Governing assemblies of both denominations, divided since the Civil War, met simultaneously in halls at opposite ends of a convention center, but they acted in concert on many matters, gearing up for reunion planned for 1983.

"A very solid stomping ahead," the southern church's administrator, the Rev. James Andrews of Atlanta, characterized the heavy week of morning-to-midnight deliberations, votes and worship, often of both denominations together.

"Liberals, moderates and conservatives were all together here," said the Rev. Robert M. Davidson of New York, moderator of the mostly northern body. "We were far more united."

What was seen as the main accomplishment was the virtually unanimous disposition of a threatening doctrinal cloud hanging over the mostly northern church, whipping gusts into the southern body.

Both dealt with the problem head-on, proclaiming unequivocally their adherence to Christianity's hallmark conviction—that Jesus Christ is truly God and truly human.

"This mystery of God's grace in Jesus Christ... is what ties Christians together in a common faith and life across the centuries," said the United Presbyterian declaration, similar to one by the southern body.

The affirmations aimed at dispelling fears over the church stand resulting from examination answers given by a recently admitted clergyman, the Rev. Mansfield Kaseman of Rockville, Md., who many felt had hedged on the issue.

But the church representatives, north and south, stood together solidly about it, including conservative groups that hailed the action.

In response to doubts cast on the church, Thompson told the assembly, "You have said resoundingly that this church adheres to the theological position it has held through the centuries."

The assembly declared that "God came to redeem this world of lost children and to open the way to eternal life, through the birth, life, death and resurrection of Jesus of Nazareth."

"This Jesus who is one with us in our common humanity is one with God as the incarnation of the second person of the Trinity (the threefold manifestations of one God as Father, Son and Holy Spirit). Therefore, we confess that Jesus is one person, truly God and truly human."

Both denominations also firmed up their links to local congregations, the larger northern church putting into effect specific new provisions that local church property is held "in trust" for the whole denomination. The southern church initiated similar provisions, still subject to ratification.

The change "makes explicit what always has been implied," Andrews said.

But spelling it out was necessitated by a 1979 U.S. Supreme court decision upsetting a long-time precedent and holding that congregational property disputes may be settled under civil law unless a denomination specifies the "trust" connection.

About 66 of 8,832 United Presbyterian congregations and about 12 of the southern church's 4,159 congregations have sought to quit the denominations, often trying to take buildings with them even though usually paid for by previous generations to be part of the denominations.

Presbyterians have "turned a corner" in resolving the problem, Thompson said, noting almost unanimous ratification of the new property provisions, demonstrating the interlinked "organic character of the church of Jesus Christ."

He said deep pain was felt that some members "for one reason or another" are rededicated and take action to sever relations. It's like amputation of a member of the body.

Expressing devotion to congregations that have resisted a new requirement of the mostly northern church that women be included among congregational officers, its assembly authorized a conciliatory letter to them.

The requirement, which allows for exemptions, is one of the practical differences with the southern denomination, which encourages inclusion of women among officers but does not make it mandatory.

"We've found that trying to force it is counter-productive," said the warmly engaging Mrs. Barnard. "Guidelines and persuasion work better with us. We need to be sensitive and listen to the concerns and hurts."

Despite contrasts in style, however, leaders of both denominations spoke optimistically of the planned reunion and said compromises were envisioned for allowing options on some of the variations in custom.

The southern church turned down a move that potentially would have allowed formation of joint regional units (presbyteries) outside the south with the mostly northern denomination, after a reunion leader warned that this might be resented as a roundabout way of achieving reunion through the back door.

Chicago mass transit is headed for insolvency

CHICAGO (AP) — Businesses chartered buses and organized carpools, suburban bus drivers faced layoffs and legislators quarreled over a rescue plan as Chicago-area mass transit lurched toward insolvency.

A Circuit Court judge Thursday refused to order the penniless Regional Transportation Authority to keep bus and train lines running in northeastern Illinois, saying he would "give the legislative and executive branches a chance to resolve this dilemma without judicial interference."

But despite Judge Arthur Dunne's ruling, the state Senate defeated a plan to create a new tax to provide more money for the RTA, the umbrella agency that provides subsidies to local mass transit.

"Are we going to throw more money down that rathole?" Republican state Sen. James Philip asked Thursday, referring to the RTA.

The RTA on Wednesday ran out of money to subsidize mass transit. The RTA's money comes from sales taxes in six counties. Revenue has slipped because of the weakness of the local economy.

The Chicago Transit Authority, which depends on the RTA for money, predicted a shutdown of the city's systems could come as soon as June 6.

The RTA ran out of money for subsidies Wednesday.

Some businesses, including Illinois Bell Telephone Co., chartered buses to get their workers downtown in the event the transit system collapses. But most have either had their workers organize carpools or are keeping their fingers crossed.

"What will I do?" Harold Klein, executive vice president of Plitt Theaters, said when asked how he would react to a transit shutdown. "Oh, nothing serious, just slit my throat."

Every day, 251,000 people from the city and suburbs head for jobs in the Loop, according to a Chicago transportation study. Only 52,000, or 20.8 percent, drive.

Some corporations were trying to reserve rooms in downtown hotels, but many, including the Marriott Hotel, were already booked solid for the weekend, according to night manager Joe Barnes.

Local bus lines in suburban Aurora, west of Chicago, were expected to shut down Saturday because of a lack of money, officials said, affecting about 5,000 daily bus passengers.

Armadillo rejection stirs new debate on state animal

MCQUEENEY, Texas (AP) — The Texas Senate's rejection of the armadillo as the state animal has prompted new debate on which creature best represents the Texan image.

Actor Guich Koock of Fredericksburg is still pushing for the mythical unicorn. Sam Lewis, of San Angelo, inventor of the jalapeno lollipop and president of the World Armadillo Racing and Breeding Association, prefers the armadillo.

And now McQueeney's "Buffalo Phil" Koehne contends the buffalo is superior to either of the aforementioned beasts.

Lewis was livid Thursday that the State Sen. Bob Vale, D-San Antonio, helped kill a measure that would have named the armadillo the state mascot. Vale was quoted as calling the armadillo a "God awful animal."

Meanwhile, Koock used the occasion to plead that the unicorn be reconsidered, and Koehne joined in the continuing humorous encounter by recommending the buffalo as an alternative.

"The unicorn is beautiful to behold, one of a kind. The unicorn represents the true Texas spirit," said Koock, a star of the former "Carter Country" television series who will join with Gabe Kaplan for a network series entitled "Gabe and Guich" this fall.

Koock is referring to a rare angora goat, born with a single spiraled horn in its forehead, that he intends to bring from California and present as "the unicorn" at his Fifth Sometimes Annual Luckenbach World's Fair scheduled for June 26-27 and July 4-5.

But Koehne got into the running spoof by releasing a letter he wrote to Sen. Glenn Kothman, D-San Antonio, backing the buffalo as the preferred state animal.

"First, the buffalo is a Texan and American. The armadillo is a newcomer. Guich Koock, who loves unicorns, says they were first smuggled into Texas under cover of darkness by the unlamented first Republican Governor of Texas, Edmund J. Davis in 1871. This is the only thing Guich says that I believe," Koehne said.

"There is only one choice and that is the American Bison, better known as the buffalo," Koehne wrote.

Koock earlier referred to the armadillo as "lowly, mudslinging and cowardly."

Lewis promised political reprisal for the killing of the measure to make the armadillo the state animal.

"This is base calumny and will not go unnoticed," Lewis said in angrily denouncing Vale.

"Just as there are no ugly babies so there are no ugly armadillos. I am going to bechar County to organize a chapter of LALAC (League of Angry Lovers of Armadillo Characteristics). In the next election, Bob Vale will find himself in an armadillo race," Lewis promised.

Lewis earlier wrote Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who had rejected Koock's plea for the unicorn, lauding Hobby's action.

Higher insurance loan rate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Bob Simpson, bringing back a bill that previously failed in two attempts, has won House approval of a Senate bill allowing insurance companies to charge higher interest rates on loans.

The House voted 99-45 Thursday to approve the measure Simpson started the last-ditch effort by getting a 106-29 vote allowing him to make the third try with the bill.

The bill would allow insurance companies to charge variable interest rates on loans. The interest rate would be based on a bond index.

Dear Abby

Open mouth meets closed ears

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What's my problem? My husband doesn't want me to talk to him. Gerhard asks me not to talk to him during mealtime because he's "busy" eating. He doesn't want me to talk to him while he's driving because he's "busy" driving. And God forbid I should try to talk to him while he's reading or watching TV!

Abby, this is very hard on me because I come from a large, talkative Jewish family and I love to talk. Gerhard is half-Norwegian and half-German. (Cold and bossy.)

He calls me from work every day to find out what was in the mail. Then I get to talk.

Please put this in your column. Gerhard never misses "Dear Abby," and it's the only way to tell him what I think.

ESTHER IN FLATBUSH

DEAR ESTHER: If this is the only way of telling Gerhard what you think, face it, Esther, your marriage is finished in English, "kaput" in German, "ferdig" in Norwegian, and "in drerd" in Yiddish.

DEAR ABBY: National Secretaries Week appears to be going the route of the office Christmas party and the company picnic for boorish managerial behavior.

A few weeks ago, our audit managers took their two secretaries out for a lunch which lasted four hours, and consisted mostly of drinking, a pastime the managers were obviously more accustomed to than were the two young ladies. Consequently, on their return to the office, the secretaries were bouncing off the walls and vomiting on everything from a typewriter to the car upholstery en route home.

Ours is a Fortune 500 company and there is not much one can do with entrenched management, however, by printing this you may elicit some words of wisdom from your readers as to how young secretaries can best cope with such situations.

DISMAYED MALE IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR MALE: Young secretaries can begin by knowing their capacities, and not exceeding them.

DEAR ABBY: May I clear up the answer you gave to A NICE GIRL? She said she had Herpes Simplex and had not slept around, and neither did her husband.

I am also a victim of Herpes Simplex 2, and I contacted it without having had sex with anybody but my husband. And my husband has never had sex with anybody but me!

Doctors call Herpes Simplex 2 a venereal disease because it can be spread by sexual intercourse, but apparently that is not the only way a person can get it.

I have been plagued by it for two years, and I still resent my own doctor insinuating that I must have caught it from another man because I got it before my husband.

I may not know much about Herpes, but I do know what I have and have not done, so how about printing this letter — for me and a lot of other "nice" people out there who are innocent but have Herpes 2?

INNOCENT VICTIM

DEAR INNOCENT: I believe you, and here's your letter. For more information on this subject, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: HELP, P.O. Box 100, Palo Alto, Calif. 94302.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MOTHER OF TWO IN BALTIMORE: One does not get VD from picking up heavy objects in a shipyard. Your husband must have picked up something else.

You're never too young or too old to learn how to make people like you. Get Abby's new booklet of practical advice. Send $1 and a stamped (35 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Popularity, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Orff workshop scheduled

CANYON — Dwight Joiner is an elementary music education specialist in the Dimmitt public schools.

Joiner will conduct an Orff workshop from 12:45 p.m. to 3:45 p.m. June 8 - 12 in West Texas State University's Northen Hall.

One hour credit will be available to teachers enrolling in the undergraduate or graduate course.

The workshop will include methods of enriching the elementary music classroom: activities using the Orff instruments and techniques and useful materials for classroom teachers, specialists and therapists; and actual hands-on experience playing Orff instruments.

Registration is June 1-5 for those enrolling in this and other courses during the first summer session. Individuals registering only for this course may enroll June 8 during the regular class period.

LIFESTYLES

Use proper makeup lights

FAIR LAWN, N.J. (AP) — It won't fit in your makeup kit, but proper lighting is as important as a beauty aid as blush or mascara. "Putting on a face" without it, especially a picture-perfect one, is difficult. The light a woman uses to make up under will make a difference in the way she photographs, lighting experts agree.

For making up and dressing up, the Duro-Lite Home Lighting Institute in Fair Lawn offers these home-lighting suggestions:

For accurate makeup application as well as nick-free shaving for the man in your life, provide shadowless, balanced light that illuminates the face of the person looking in the mirror, not the mirror itself. Border the reflecting glass with three lights — one situated above the mirror and two at eye level, spaced at least 30 inches apart.

Energy-saving fluorescent lighting is often used in the bathroom, both for general illumination and task lighting. Border an average-size mirror with 20-watt tubes, 2 feet in length, along the top and sides. Larger mirrors would use 3-foot long 30-watt tubes. Sunlight-simulating fluorescents are especially effective in bathroom lighting. They show skin tones, makeup and clothing in true-to-life colors — as they would look outdoors in sunlight and appear in color photos.

To evenly illuminate the area, the institute recommends placing a pair of lamps 36 inches apart and as close to the mirror as possible. Height of the lamps, measured to the middle of the shade, is ideally 22 inches above a 30-inch-high dresser and 15 inches above a 30-inch vanity. Shades should be white or ivory for best transmission of light.

For a theatrical effect, surround the vanity mirror along the top and sides with bulbs that provide a soft, even, flesh-tinted glow, free from shadow and glare.

Whether in the dressing room or on a closet door, a full-length mirror with adequate lighting is a good-grooming essential. To appraise overall appearance, the viewer must not be distracted by shadows or reflections caused by poorly placed light sources.

Linear-design fluorescents provide even illumination when mounted vertically on the wall or door, alongside the mirror. Supplement the side lighting with wall- or ceiling-mounted fixtures above the mirror, using either fluorescent tubes or incandescent bulbs.

Travelers' home tips

NEW YORK (AP) — Before you turn the key in the lock and start off on that vacation, take time to check your home thoroughly for any potential trouble spots, advise safety experts who suggest you answer these questions:

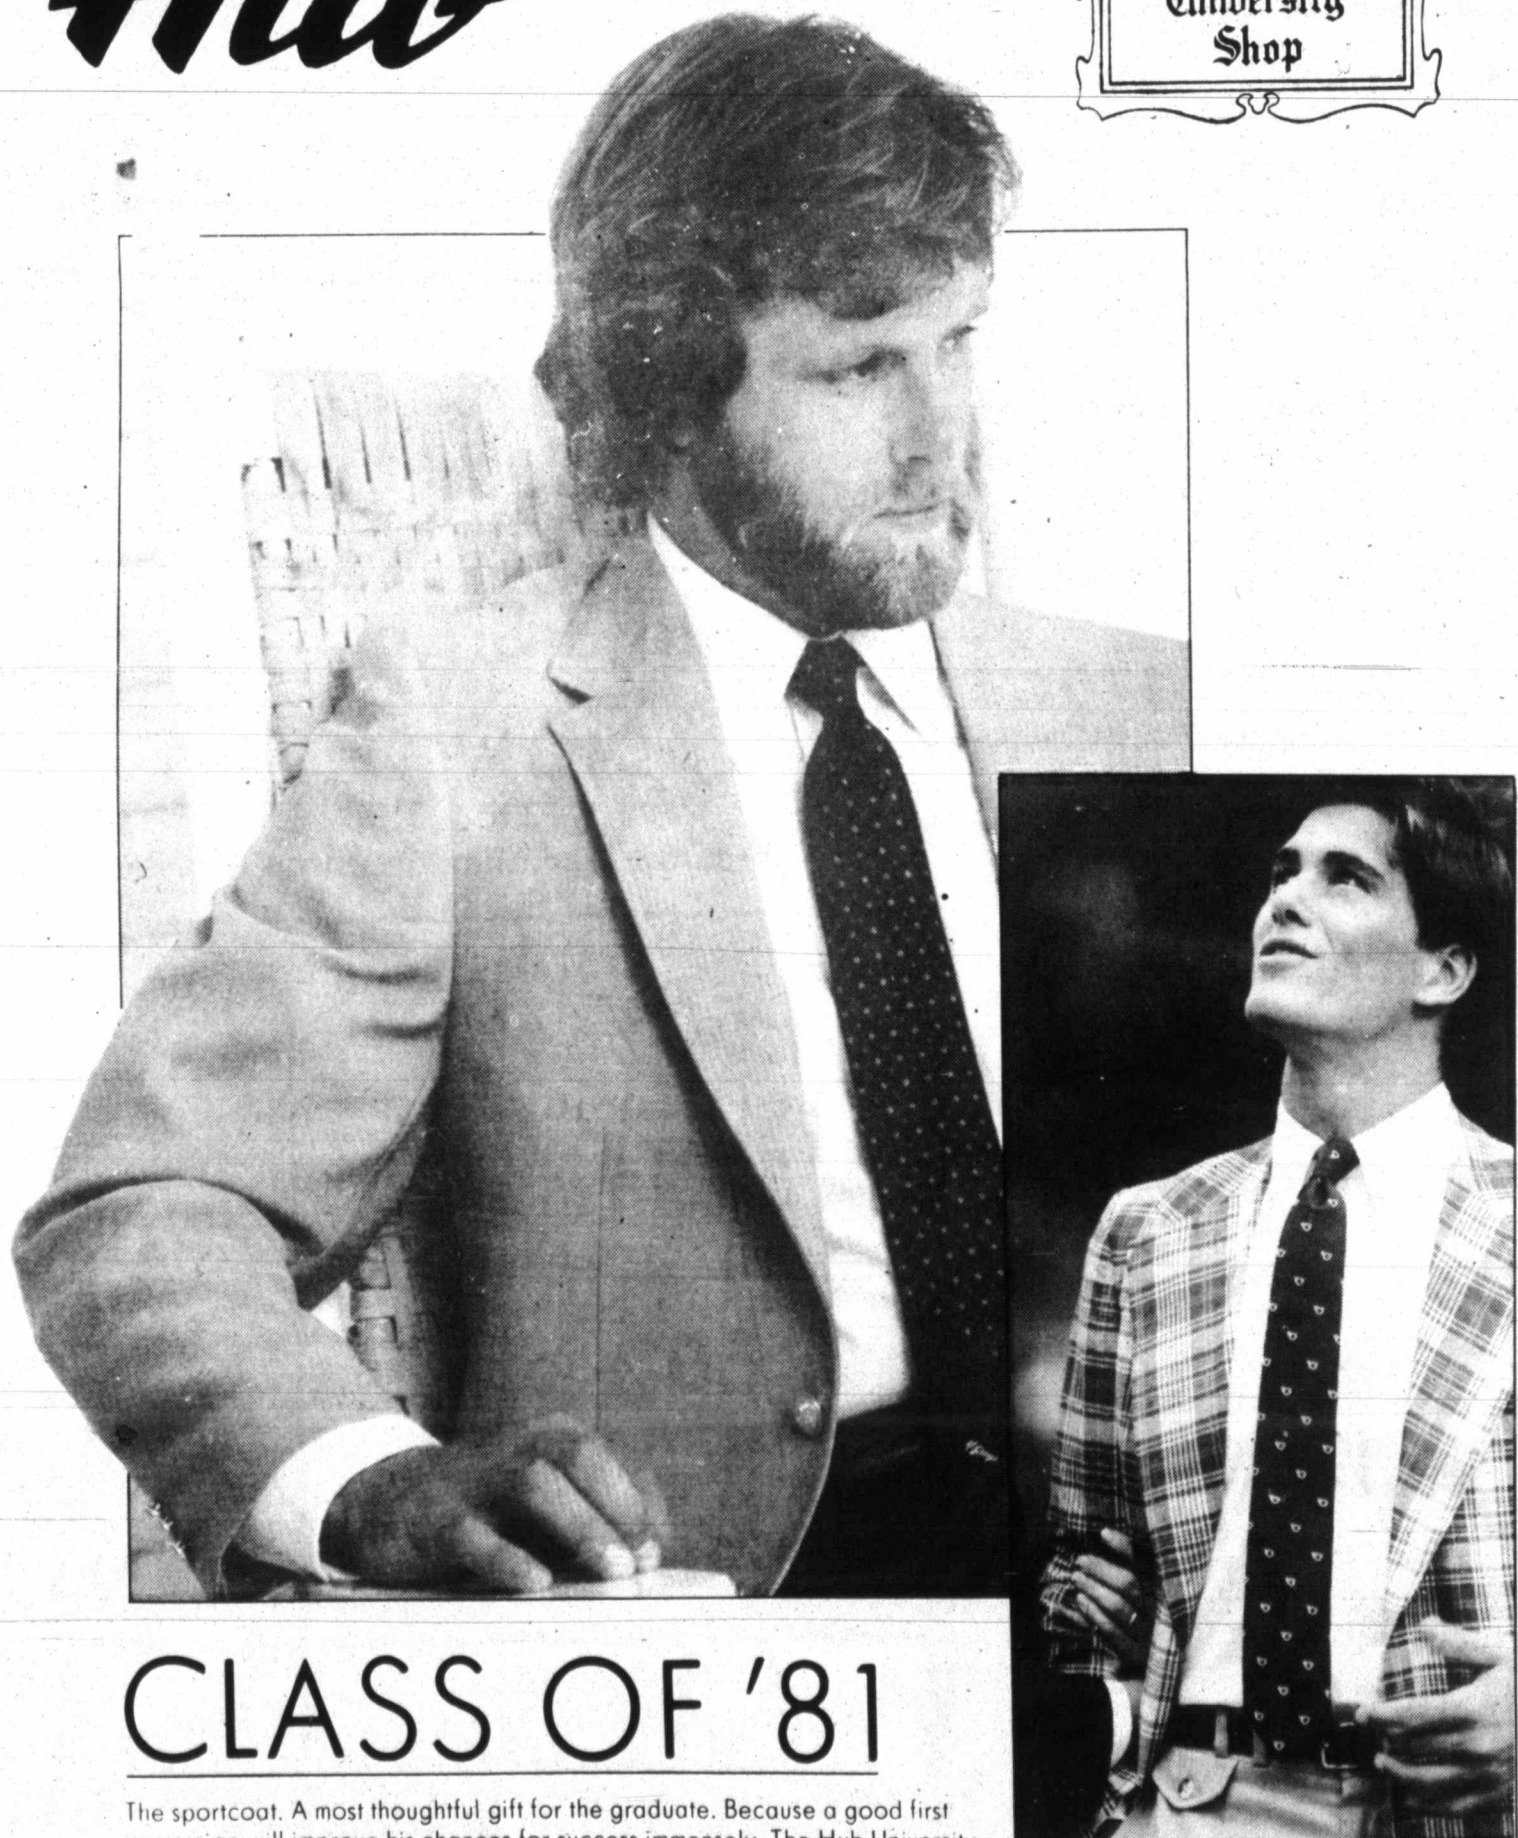

- Has that last cigarette been extinguished?
- Have you turned off the gas?
- Are all your appliances disconnected?
- Have you stored combustible materials such as gasoline, cleaning fluid and open paint cans, and tightly closed the containers?
- Have you discarded kerosene-soaked or greasy rags?
- Have you stored your important papers in a fireproof safe? Such a safe will withstand up to 1,700 degrees Fahrenheit for one hour while maintaining an internal temperature of no more than 350F. Since the charring point of paper is about 420F, the contents of a fire-rated safe would be protected even if your house burned to the ground.
- Does a neighbor or relative know where to reach you while you are away?
- Have you stopped all deliveries?
- Have you arranged either to have your mail held at the post office or removed from your letterbox every day by a neighbor?

Eye-opening omelets made with croutons

Weekends provide that open-minded sense of relaxation that allows for easy entertaining. Undoubtedly, the greatest boon to effortless weekend hospitality is the everyone-help-yourself Sunday brunch.

Since omelets are a recurring theme on many a brunch menu, one may get a feeling of deja vu about them unless the chef in charge aims for something new and different. Adding a surprise ingredient to a typical ham and mushroom omelet, as shown in this recipe, is one way of doing it.

While the omelet cooks, sprinkle a cup of croutons over the top of it. When the omelet is folded over, the croutons become a delightfully crisp, crunchy surprise filling, while adding a tantalizing taste to the dish in the simplest way possible.

The creative cook will find that croutons have great versatility. For instance, they may be used to add an interesting counterpoint in flavor and texture to a dish of freshly sliced oranges and strawberries on the same brunch menu.

HAM - MUSHROOM OMELET WITH CROUTONS

- 8 eggs
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup sliced cooked ham
- 1 can (6 ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained
- 1/4 cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup croutons

well blended. Fold in ham and mushrooms. Heat butter in a large skillet. Pour in egg mixture. Cook without stirring until edges are set. Sprinkle croutons over top of omelet. Lift edges of omelet, allowing uncooked portion to run underneath. Place omelet under broiler and broil until top surface is set. With a spatula, fold omelet into halves and slide out onto a platter. If desired, omelet can be sprinkled with more croutons.

Makes 4 generous servings.

LIFESTYLES

CROUTONS provide a surprise filling for this omelet.

Senior citizen courses offered

AUSTIN — Elderhostel programs will be offered at seven Texas universities this summer.

Elderhostel is a non-credit, liberal arts program designed especially for persons 60 years of age or older. The older students enroll for one-week sessions in a variety of classes, live in college dormitories and participate in campus extracurricular activities.

There are no prerequisites for the program. It is open to all older persons — the high school dropout as well as the college graduate.

Cost of a one-week session, including tuition, room and board, is $140.

More than 450 institutions of higher education in the U.S. now offer Elderhostel programs during the summer months. Texas universities participating in the program this year are Abilene Christian University, Hardin Simmons University, St. Mary's University, Texas Tech University, North Texas State University, Stephen F. Austin State University and West Texas State University.

For more information on dates and courses offered at other Texas universities, contact Ernestine Sisk, Canyon, Texas 79016 or call Governor's Committee on Aging, 512-475-2717.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

May 30, 1981

Explore in depth this coming year any tips given you by persons who are financially successful. You could be luckier than usual in using inside information.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your hunches regarding business situations should be on target today, but in matters of the heart your aim may not be too accurate. Don't jump to conclusions. Romance, travel, luck resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take credit today for things you've done on your own, but in areas where others helped you let them share the limelight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be optimistic today, but also be realistic regarding your hopes. Progress is likely, but it might be measured only in inches, not yards.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may find yourself in a situation today where you could feel impelled to pretend to know something, or be something you're not. Avoid role-playing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're extra-alert today at being able to discover things which others may overlook. However, be careful not to flaunt your ability.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Trust your logic and judgment today, not your feelings, when involved in matters of material importance. Your intuitive signals could mislead you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you have work to perform today which requires concentration, it's best to do it as early as possible. Your attention span wanes toward afternoon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to participate in some form of social activity today which you enjoy. However, be very careful that you don't eat, drink or say more than you should.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is a good day to entertain friends at your place, but be sure your guess list is made up of persons who know when to leave.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Much can be accomplished today with persons whose ambitions are akin to yours. Those whose goals are not in synch with yours should be given a wide berth.

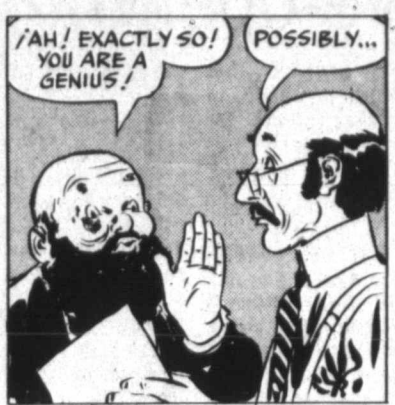

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In business or financial matters today things may only turn out moderately well, because there's a chance you will not take full advantage of what is offered.

SPEAKING OF SOAPS

BY MARY ANN COOPER

Philip Clark stars as Ryan Connor on NBC's "Texas."

The smile has returned to Philip Clark's ruggedly handsome face. It was not that long ago that he was thinking of leaving his role of Ryan on the NBC serial "Texas." "We were all very unhappy with the show," admits Clark. "The atmosphere on the set was very depressing." Since that time the program has installed a new set of writers and a new executive producer which has made a world of difference to the viewing audience and the production crew as well. "I feel very positive about 'Texas' and I think the show's only going to get better and better over the next few months which will, I'm sure, be reflected in a greater audience share," predicts Philip.

For Philip Clark, being star of NBC's "Texas" has fulfilled a childhood dream, in a way. Philip is an urban cowboy at heart. Raised in San Diego, where his spare time was spent in a sail boat, he still had visions of riding off into the sunset like Tom Mix or Gene Autry. Today, instead of owning his own ranch, he portrays Ryan Connor, lawyer to the richest man in "Texas". His love affair with Ginny scorched across the TV screen with such intensity some months ago that one fan offered to name her first born after the character on the show as a tribute to his virility. Philip, quite understandably, declined the honor.

Clark readily admits that he was not always the object of feminine ardor. "I was once a fat kid," he relates, "the only way I fit in with my peers was to perform. The teacher would say, 'Would you like to sing?' and I'd be up in front of the room in a flash. I was a real ham!"

Clark admits that you never really lose the fear of being fat even when you've been thin for years. Philip jogs every day and is into yoga and meditation for the sake of a healthy mind and body.

Though a strict task master when it comes to physical fitness, Clark is not above taking perilous chances. "I knew that I wanted to be either a professional surfer or an actor, so I chose the more dangerous career: Acting," concludes Philip.

Now a look at what's been happening and what will happen on all the afternoon dramas.

Sample sparks Rangers to 6-2 win

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas outfielder Billy Sample has been out of action since April 30, when he fractured his left wrist diving for a fly ball.

Latest medical reports indicate he should be ready for duty early next week, and that has put the tough decision squarely on the shoulders of Texas manager Don Zimmer — what does he do with Leon Roberts?

Roberts, Sample's replacement, has been ripping the ball for a month. He got two hits in three times at bat Thursday night against Minnesota, and his three-run homer highlighted an eighth-inning uprising that gave the Rangers their 6-2 win.

His batting average is up to .307, he has two home runs two game-winning runs batted in, 11 total RBIs and has scored 10 runs — all in 24 games.

But Zimmer has decreed that when Sample heals, he will return to the lineup and Roberts will return to the bench.

"Sample was hitting .317 when he was hurt, and when he is well, he is going back to left," Zimmer said after the Rangers won their third game from the Twins in four tries. "If he was hitting .240, that would be different. Leon has been doing a super job, and I've told him that. But Sample is my left fielder."

"Inside, I don't feel too good," Roberts admitted. "On the outside, what can I do? I've never been one to kick up a fuss. No amount of hollering or screaming will change anything. I've just got to hope something else will happen to let me play.

"I don't want to cause any hard feelings, but you hate to sit down when you are swinging the bat like I am."

Roberts' homer was the most dramatic blow of the game but not the decisive one. John Grubb had singled to drive in the go-ahead run off Minnesota starter Roger Erickson, 1-5, after Al Oliver and Buddy Bell opened the inning with singles.

Roberts, the next hitter, greeted relief pitcher Don Cooper with a towering shot that landed 30 rows deep in the left field bleachers.

The four-run outburst broke up a tight pitching duel between Erickson and Texas starter Rick Honeycutt, 4-1.

"Our pitching has been super — we just haven't had the offense," moaned Twins' manager Danny Gardner.

"We just can't get the hits we need."

Asked if he thought the Twins should trade for some hitting help, Gardner sagged in his clubhouse chair, shrugged his shoulders and said, "Well, I think we need some punch."

The Twins had tied the game with two runs in the fifth on consecutive singles by John Castino, Pete Mackanin and Dave Engle and a double-play grounder by shortstop Chuck Baker.

Texas had opened a narrow 2-0 lead with singles runs in the third and fourth innings. Buddy Bell drove in the first run with a sacrifice fly, and Baker provided the second with a two-base throwing error.

Tatum put on waivers

HOUSTON (AP) — Defensive back Jack Tatum, who rode the bench for the Houston Oilers most of last year after the Oakland Raiders traded him, has been put on waivers.

The waiving of the three-time Pro Bowl defensive back and the signing of wide receiver Mike Renfro to a multi-year contract was announced Thursday.

Coach Ed Biles said the decision to waive the 11-year veteran was "an effort for the Oilers to be along a younger speedier backup defensive player and special teamer."

"Jack's contribution to the Oakland Raiders' success was a major one and he also had a positive influence on some of our players in a reserve role in his one season with the Oilers."

Tatum came to the Oilers last year in a trade that sent seldom-used running back Kenny King and two Oiler draft choices to Oakland. King became a starter while Tatum played a backup role for the Oilers.

Tatum played in the 1973, 1974 and 1977 Pro Bowls and holds the National Football League record for the longest return of a fumble recovery with a 104-yarder against Green Bay in 1972.

Renfro's signing left starting safety Mike Reinfield as the only unsigned Oiler. Renfro led Oiler wide receivers with 35 catches last season.

COW/CALF FORUM

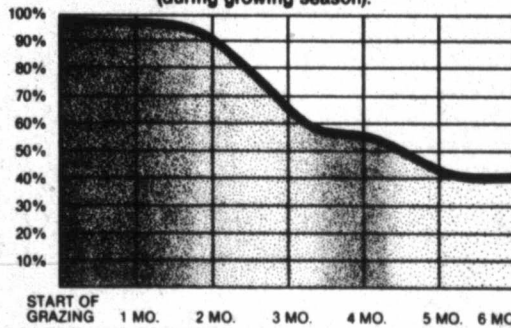

By Dr. Danny Williams, Cattle nutritionist

The Great Grass/Milk Myth. It could be robbing you of 50 lbs. per calf at weaning.

A myth, according to Webster, is "a notion based more on tradition or convenience than on fact." And based on a common practice in the cow/calf business, that definition fits. Because it seems to have become "traditional" and "convenient" to believe a calf can reach his full growth potential at weaning on grass and milk alone. Which is not the case.

TOTAL NUTRITIONAL VALUE OF GRASS (during growing season)

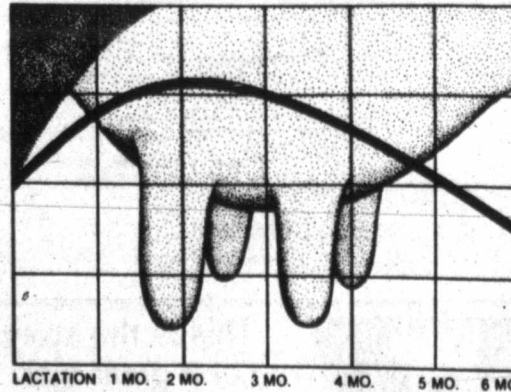

Take grass. As you see above, its nutritional value—which includes both nutrient content and digestibility—declines rapidly as it matures through the hot, dry months. And what you see here is under "ideal" conditions. (Remember last summer?)

Grass also has the limitation of calves just not having the rumen capacity to eat and digest enough of it each day to fulfill their nutritional requirements.

The situation is similar with milk. The graph below shows how a cow's daily production drops off drastically during late lactation, and is insufficient for satisfying the nutritional demands of a calf beyond 200 lbs.

COW'S MILK PRODUCTION

So we have a situation where right at the time a calf's need for nutrition is rising, the nutrient value and availability of grass and milk is declining. Grass and milk together, in fact, can supply only about 75-85% of the nutrients a calf needs to grow to his full potential at weaning. (Thus, the "great grass/milk myth.")

What's the answer? How do you fill in the "missing" nutrition a calf needs for optimum growth? By creep feeding—balancing the nutrient deficiencies in grass and milk with the extra protein, energy, Vitamin A and minerals in Purina® Creep Chow® brand ration.

Purina research, backed by feed trials in cow/calf operations around the country, shows this can make a difference of at least 50 extra pounds in weaning weight. Creep Chow also helps relieve stress on your cows, so they can get back in condition for re-breeding sooner. Why not discuss it with your Purina Dealer?

Steinbrenner upset over Yankee slump

BALTIMORE (AP) — Owner George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees threatened changes, hinting that Manager Gene Michael's job may be in jeopardy, after the Baltimore Orioles completed a three-game sweep Wednesday night.

The fiery Steinbrenner, who watched the series finale in the private box of Baltimore owner Edward Bennett Williams, erupted soon after Terry Crowley's ninth-inning single gave the Orioles a 5 decision.

"I'm worried that we're falling so far behind Baltimore in the loss column," Steinbrenner said after the Yanks dropped 4½ games behind the leaders of the American League East with 120 games remaining.

"I'm not going to allow it to happen much longer," Steinbrenner said. "If change is what is necessary, that's what we're going to decide. We just can't keep going like this. There will be some things happening, very shortly."

Asked if the changes could involve non-playing personnel, Steinbrenner said, "they could be."

National League baseball roundup

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

After a fabulous start, Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers is starting to struggle a bit.

Atlanta's Gaylord Perry knows something about struggling.

"It took a few games to get that one," said Perry after recording his 293rd career victory Thursday night with a 9-4 decision over the Dodgers and their news-making rookie pitcher.

The 42-year-old Perry had misfired on three previous starts for victory No. 293 and currently has a 4-3 record.

"The way some guys (pitchers) were getting demoted around here pretty quick. I decided I better do a little bit better, especially in the first inning," said Perry, who had allowed 11 first-inning runs in his last four starts.

As it was, Perry didn't allow a run until the sixth and left after scattering nine hits in eight innings.

Valenzuela, meanwhile, lasted only 32-3 innings and was shelled in the midst of a seven-run rally in the Braves' fourth. That marked the first time that the hard-throwing left-hander had failed to pitch at least seven innings and reduced his season's record to 8-2 after a brilliant 8-0 start that included five shutouts.

"My control was good but they were getting the hits when they needed them," said Valenzuela. "I was just pitching the same way as always. I know I'm going to win some and lose some."

Elsewhere in the National League, Cincinnati beat San Francisco 7-4 and Pittsburgh walloped Chicago 9-4. In the only American League game, Milwaukee whipped Detroit 7-1 and Texas stopped Minnesota 6-2.

Perry gave up the Dodgers' first run in the sixth on Ken Landreaux's RBI double, then allowed three more runs in the eighth, two on a homer by Steve Garvey, before getting ninth-inning relief help from Rick Camp.

Reds 7, Giants 4

San Francisco reliever Gary Lavelle's wild pickoff throw led in the tying run and touched off a five-run eighth-inning rally that lifted Cincinnati over the Giants. After Lavelle's off-target toss allowed the Reds to forge a 3-3 tie, Sam Mejias, a seventh-inning defensive replacement, singled to put the Reds ahead by a run. George Foster continued the rally with a two-run double and Dan Driessen capped the burst with an RBI single to provide Cincinnati with a 7-3 lead.

The victory was bittersweet for the Reds, who lost first baseman Johnny Bench when he broke an ankle sliding into second base. A team spokesman said he will be out of action for about eight weeks.

Pirates 9, Cubs 4

Dale Berra's three-run double capped a five-run fifth inning and powered Pittsburgh past Chicago. The triumph was the third straight for the Pirates after dropping the opener of the series, while the woeful Cubs went down to their 31st loss in 40 decisions.

Eddie Solomon, 3-3, who contributed a run-scoring single in the third, was the winning pitcher while Bill Caudill, 1-4, took the loss.

Berra has knocked in 12 runs in his last 55 at-bats.

Brewers 7, Tigers 1

Roy Howell hit a grand slam homer in the fourth inning and Ted Simmons added a two-run shot in the eighth, leading Milwaukee over Detroit. Mike Caldwell, 5-4, and Rollie Fingers combined on an eight-hitter, with Fingers picking up his ninth save.

Dan Petry was the losing pitcher.

Rangers 6, Twins 2

Leon Roberts smashed a three-run homer in the bottom of the eighth inning to cap a four-run Texas rally that broke a 2-2 tie and gave the Rangers their victory over Minnesota.

Al Oliver and Buddy Bell opened the eighth with consecutive singles. One out later, John Grubb chased Twins starter Roger Erickson, 1-5, with a run-scoring single. Roberts then greeted reliever Don Cooper with his second homer of the season.

Texas starter Rick Honeycutt, 4-1, walked none, struck out one and gave up seven hits. Honeycutt retired 12 of the last 13 batters he faced.

Angels' manager fired

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — "If it's not you, it will be someone else," California Angels' owner Gene Autry says he told Gene Mauch, when Mauch didn't want to take over for about-to-be fired Jim Fregosi as manager of the Angels.

"Then it's me," Autry said Mauch reluctantly told him after the former manager at Philadelphia, Montreal and Minnesota had turned down the job the night before, and repeatedly told the baseball team's owner in recent weeks he did not want to take the reins in midseason. But the Angels said that three teams have been asking the Angels to talk to Mauch about managing, and Autry did not want to lose him.

On Thursday former Angel shortstop Fregosi was formally fired from the team he had directed to its only American League West Division pennant in 1979.

Former movie cowboy and singer Autry offered the job to Mauch Tuesday night, and was turned down, but when he made the offer again Wednesday night Mauch accepted when he was told the Angels were committed to making a managerial change, Autry said.

Mauch, who managed in the major leagues 20 1/2 years, never has won a pennant but finished second with the Philadelphia Phillies in 1964. He left Minnesota in mid-season last year and joined California this year as director of player personnel.

But Mauch has been highly-regarded for the work he did building the Philadelphia and Montreal teams. In Minnesota his teams never had pennant personnel, largely due to a club policy of turning loose high-priced top players.
