House approves aid to Agent Orange victims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, by approving a bill that would direct the Veterans Administration to provide medical care for Vietnam veterans exposed to the herbicide Agent Orange, is telling the former GIs "we're listening," says a congressman who served in Southeast Asia.

By its 388-0 vote Tuesday, the House sided with the argument that veterans' health may have been impaired by contact with the herbicide, which contains dioxin, considered one of the world's most dangerous chemical substances.

The measure was sent to the Senate. The bill would require the VA to provide hospital care and medical attention for Vietnam veterans who think their health problems may have arisen from exposure to Agent Orange.

The VA has argued that scientific evidence has failed to show that contact with Agent Orange did any such damage. Besides, the agency says, it provides medical care to any veterans needing it, regardless of the cause of their problems.

But in a report accompanying its bill, the House Veterans Affairs Committee said "until the scientific community has been able to make a determination as to the possible cause-and-effect relationship" of Agent Orange exposure and later illness, the VA should do everything possible for Vietnam veterans whose health may have been affected by the spray.

And Rep. Thomas A. Daschle, D-S.D., one of a handful of House members who served in the Southeast Asian war, told colleagues that passage "will tell the Vietnam veteran, 'Yes, we're listening.'"

During the war, the United States sprayed 12 million gallons of the herbicide on jungle and farming areas to deny food and hiding places to communist forces. More than 40,000 veterans have sought VA medical examinations to see if their health was affected by the herbicide.

Veterans have attributed a variety of ailments, from cancer to birth defects in their children, to Agent Orange, but the VA said it has found no evidence linking the spray to any disease except chloracne, a skin disorder.

The bill would also broaden a VA study comparing the health of Vietnam veterans with that of other men of the same age. The study originally was intended to determine dioxin's effects, but the new survey would take other factors into consideration in determining whether Vietnam veterans were exposed to harmful chemicals.

College construction on agenda for summer legislative session

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton says a 50 percent state university tuition increase might have passed if legislators had reached agreement on a college construction fund.

Another go at the college building issue, which has been around since 1974, is expected when Gov. Bill Clements calls the Legislature back into a special session this summer.

Clements told reporters at an oilmen's convention in Fort Worth on Tuesday he probably would call the session "somewhere in late July or early August" to handle their unfinished business from the regular session that adjourned Monday night.

The list of subjects for the session will include a water fund, congressional redistricting and renewal of the Texas Medical Practices Act. Clements didn't mention it, but earlier he said he would add college construction if legislators failed to act.

Colleges outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems want a dedicated source of money for their construction, building repairs, equipment and library needs. UT and A&M have supported creation of such a fund ever since the Legislature threatened in 1974 to spread the Permanent University Fund among all state schools.

HJR111, the latest attempt to set up a dedicated fund, died in a conference committee Monday when legislators couldn't agree on the source of money.

Clayton said he favored raising tuition by 50 percent as a source of $40 million a year for the fund.

"If we'd gotten close on HJR111, I think it (a tuition increase) would have worked," he said.

Otherwise, "the sentiment wasn't there," Clayton told reporters.

Clements said legislators can look for a veto and another special session if they don't pass a congressional redistricting bill that suits him.

What will suit him, he said, will be a bill that gives Dallas a minority congressman. A likely result of that kind of map drawing would be to make the other Dallas congressional districts Republican.

Clayton said he was pleased with the work of the Legislature, particularly the "fair and conservative" bill drawing House districts for the 1980s and "one of the best appropriations bills we've ever passed."

He said he didn't care whether Clements put medical licensing on the special session.

"Deregulation is good enough for gas, why not for doctors," he said.

Spearman trio critical after Canadian crash

CANADIAN — A Spearman family of three remained in critical condition in an Amarillo hospital today, after their auto was broadsided Tuesday afternoon by a semi-tractor trailer at the intersection of Texas 33 and U.S. Highway 83, seven miles south of Canadian.

The truck driver was being held on a traffic violation in Hemphill County Jail early today, authorities said. He was identified by a sheriff's spokesman as Ervin Joe Sieler, 24, of Billings, Mont.

The injured were identified by authorities as William McBroom, 46, his wife, Mrs. Nell McBroom, 45, and the couple's son, Bill McBroom, 14, all of Spearman.

Following treatment at Hemphill County Hospital in Canadian, the three victims were transported to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo. A hospital spokesman said McBroom and his son were "critical but improving" in the intensive care unit. Mrs. McBroom was listed in "very critical" condition.

The sheriff's spokesman said Sieler was taken to the Canadian Hospital where he was treated for shock, then taken to the county jail.

The sheriff's report said the accident occurred about 1:26 p.m. Tuesday, when the Freightliner tractor-trailer rig driven by Sieler, went through a yield sign at the intersection of the two highways and plowed into the 1979 Ford sedan, driven by McBroom.

The McBroom family was trapped in the crushed vehicle, and an extraction rescue tool was required to free the victims. Two ambulances were called to the scene.

The truck was owned by Georgina R. Sieler of Billings, Mont., the spokesman said. She said the rig was loaded, but she did not know what the truck was carrying at the time of the wreck.

Reagan visit emotional for Brady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wounded White House press secretary James S. Brady, trading quips with President Reagan in an emotional hospital reunion, says his boss has been doing pretty well without him. But Reagan insists Brady is missed.

"We are waiting for you to get back," Reagan told Brady during an impromptu hospital visit Tuesday. "We need you."

"Right now, the medical profession is standing in the way," Brady replied. "I have been watching you on the tube and reading about you. You have been doing pretty well on your own."

Brady, recuperating from a bullet wound to the brain, saw Reagan for the first time Tuesday since both were shot in an attempt on the president's life March 30.

The 16-minute visit at George Washington University Hospital, where Reagan himself spent nearly two weeks recuperating from a gunshot wound to his left lung, was at times an emotional reunion, said deputy press secretary Larry Speakes.

"Jim was somewhat emotional a time or two," Speakes said. "I think he choked up. It was an emotional experience for both of them."

But Speakes quoted Brady's wife, Sarah, as saying that after the meeting the press secretary was satisfied "because he thought he'd done well in the meeting with the president and enjoyed it."

Asked whether Brady had been concerned about how such a meeting might go, Speakes replied softly, "I think so."

The president, accompanied by White House chief of staff James A. Baker III, gave Brady a puzzle and a gift-wrapped jar of presidential jellybeans, Speakes said.

He quoted the president as saying, "I am glad I was able to come," and Brady as retorting, "Doesn't everybody get a visit by the president?"

Tornado warning sirens sound in area towns

Funnel clouds were sighted in many parts of the Panhandle during the late evening hours Tuesday, and tornado warning sirens were sounded in both Wheeler and Shamrock.

Pampa received 88 inch of steady rain Tuesday. As of midnight Tuesday, no hail or high winds had been received. The high temperature in Pampa for Tuesday was a muggy 85 degrees.

Wheeler Sheriff's office personnel reported that 1.03 inch of rain was recorded. A funnel sighting was reported near Mobeetie to the sheriff's office, and warning sirens were sounded at approximately 10:30 p.m. There were no incidents of tornado touchdowns and no damage was reported.

Shamrock Police Department officials reported that warning sirens were sounded four times in that city about 10:15 p.m. Tuesday. No touchdowns and no damage was reported. There were no reports of hail in the city but rain fell through the night.

Lefors Post Office personnel reported that 1.75 of rain fell there during the evening hours Tuesday. Water was reported standing in Lefors streets early today.

Gray County Sheriff's Deputy Jimmy

Shelton in McLean received reports of funnel sightings in McLean, but no touchdowns were reported. Rain fell through the night in McLean, no damage had been reported early today.

At 7:38 p.m. a funnel cloud near the Pantex Plant on Highway 60 was reported. The cloud dissipated within minutes and no damage was reported, according to the National Weather Service.

The local forecast includes all the ingredients for more severe weather today through Thursday. One front is holding just east of the Panhandle, another is coming in from the west, and adding to the intense conditions — one low pressure area is stationally over the Panhandle, according to information from the National Weather Service.

"If these fronts all come together, we may see some really severe weather today."

"Panhandle residents are reminded of the danger of flash flooding during times of heavy rainfall. Some cities in the Panhandle have reported up to three inches of rain including Groom which reported four inches last evening. Almost all other cities reported at least one inch of rainfall," National Weather Service officials said.

Youth treated for burns after lawnmower explodes

A 13-year-old Pampa boy, burned when the lawnmower he was working on exploded Monday, was listed in stable condition in the Galveston Shrine Burn Institute today, with first- and second-degree burns over 30 percent of his body.

James Jeter, 13, of 1015 Scott was treated at Highland General Hospital at 5:15 p.m. Monday for burns to his upper chest, back, face, right arm, thigh and hand, a hospital spokesman said.

The boy is the son of Carl Jeter of 1015 Scott, the spokesman said.

Unconfirmed reports say the boy was burned when the lawnmower he was filling with gasoline exploded, possibly when the fumes were ignited by lightning.

After treatment at the Pampa hospital, Jeter was transferred by a private plane owned by J. T. Richardson to the Shriner's burn hospital for children in Galveston.

The free burn center is sponsored by the Shriners, funded through proceeds from the annual Shriner Circus and other events.

School hires Levelland man as tax assessor

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

Following a lengthy, closed personnel session, the Pampa Independent School District board of trustees hired Charles D. Rand of Levelland to fill the city-school tax assessor-collector vacancy.

District Superintendent Bob Phillips said today Rand will begin working as tax assessor-collector July 1. He said Rand is presently employed as assistant tax assessor-collector and appraiser for the Levelland school district.

In addition, Phillips said Rand's wife, Rudelle Rand has been hired as an elementary school teacher for the district. Phillips said Mrs. Rand has not yet been assigned to a class.

Current tax assessor for the school district Dwain Walker resigned in April to take a position with the Amarillo Independent School District. Walker will be assistant superintendent for business services for the Amarillo school system.

A report by Marjorie Gaut, assistant to the superintendent for educational services, on the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills tests was heard by the board in Tuesday's meeting in Carver Educational Center.

The tests were given to third, fifth, and ninth grade students in April 1981.

"These are the minimum skills we expect our students to know," Mrs. Gaut explained. "As you know, the state board (of education) and the legislature say our students weren't learning anything in the basic skills, so we have to give these skills tests."

She said the purpose of the tests was to identify low-achieving students and to help plan educational programs for these students.

Mrs. Gaut said, "There were no areas of great concern in the third grade."

Pampa third graders scored 100 percent in the ability to follow directions. "What more could you ask? That's perfect!" Mrs. Gaut said.

In the handwriting, the 98 percent of the 325 students wrote legibly, she said. However, fifth graders were not as strong in their basic skills, Mrs. Gaut said.

Weaknesses were apparent in solving word problems using multiplication and division, 75 percent mastery; identifying equivalent fractions, 72 percent; and interpreting place value, 62 percent.

The average mastery level should be 85 percent or above, Mrs. Gaut said.

Fifth grade students showed strength in units of measure — 97 percent; interpreting graphs — 97 percent; adding whole numbers, dividing whole numbers, and solving word problems using addition and subtraction at 90 percent.

Mrs. Gaut said reading is the weakest of the higher level skills for the Pampa fifth graders. She said a new reader, adopted by the district, will emphasize the higher thinking skills.

Areas of concern for the fifth grade were interpretive comprehension skills which included a mastery of 72 percent in predicting outcomes; 71 percent in distinguishing fact and non-fact; and 71 percent in drawing conclusions.

The weakest scores for the ninth grade class was mathematics, Mrs. Gaut said.

"We were weak here last year, especially in personal finance and problems with ratio and proportion," she said.

Of the students tested, 54 percent mastered personal finance and 58 percent, the ratio and proportion.

The education service assistant said materials in the current textbooks do not sufficiently cover these areas. She said efforts are being made to find the appropriate books.

In reading skills, 93 percent of ninth grade students mastered following directions and 90 percent mastered reference skills.

Ninth graders showed more problems mastering skills in the use of maps and charts, 68 percent; different portions of a book, 66 percent; and in making generalizations, 55 percent.

Mrs. Gaut said the school board's long range planning committee has approved a course in basic reading skills to be introduced in the 1982-1983 school year. She said the class will be geared to students who are having reading difficulties.

Correct English usage and punctuation gave the ninth graders problems, test results show. English usage is mastered by 69 percent, and punctuation 67 percent.

The students did well on spelling — 94 percent; and capitalization — 91 percent. Over 95 percent of the students submitted an acceptable handwriting sample.

Mrs. Gaut's conclusion was, "All the test performances cannot be attributed to one factor which would cause the scores to be low. All kinds of factors are involved and they all interact."

In the personnel session, L. C. Davis, principal at Woodrow Wilson Elementary announced his retirement. Resignations were submitted by Karen Bridges, English at Pampa High School; Alfred Clark, sociology coach at Pampa High School; Mary Sims, social studies, Pampa Middle School; Janetta Maloney, fifth grade at Lamar Elementary School; and Gerald Sanders, fifth grade at Lamar Elementary School. The resignations and retirement were accepted by the board.

In addition to hiring Charles Rand and his wife, Rudelle, the school board hired Pamela Sue Harris as special education teacher at Pampa Middle School.

Board member Phil Vanderpool was absent from Tuesday's 5 p.m. meeting.

Laser weapon fails

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense scientists are studying the causes of failure of a secret attempt over China Lake, Calif., to use a laser beam from a special laboratory plane to destroy an air-to-air missile.

Both Col. Bob O'Brien, spokesman for the Air Force Systems Command, and Defense Department spokesman Henry Catto acknowledged failure of the test conducted Monday, but offered no possible explanations.

Israel shells Palestinian center

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli gunboats lobbed shells into a Palestinian guerrilla headquarters in northern Lebanon during the night, the military command said today. It was the northernmost Israeli attack in Lebanon in two years.

A communique said the boats returned safely after hitting a building used by the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine at the Naher el Bard River, about eight miles north of Tripoli and 48 miles north of Beirut.

A Palestine Liberation Organization communique issued in Beirut said a 90-minute shelling destroyed two houses in a refugee camp just after midnight, but caused no casualties.

Nahr el Bared houses almost 15,000 Palestinian refugees registered with the United Nations Relief and Work Agency. The camp has long been a major training center for Palestinian guerrillas, who control and govern the premises.

The Israeli command said guerrillas had set out by boat from the building for missions against Israel in the past. It was shelled by Israeli gunboats in April 1979, and the last time Israel struck that far north in Lebanon was in an air attack the following month.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Tuesday he would not halt Israeli raids on Palestinian bases in Lebanon despite Syria's demand for an end to Israeli military operations on the territory of its northern neighbor.

An Israeli air attack Tuesday killed six people and wounded 11 at guerrilla bases near the port of Tyre, about 12 miles north of the Israeli border, the Lebanese government radio reported.

The Christian Voice of Lebanon station said six Israeli F-4 Phantoms destroyed the three-story headquarters of the regional command of Al Fatah, the largest guerrilla group in the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Begin in an interview with CBS-TV said he told U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib "an uncountable number of times that we are going to continue preventive operations against PLO terrorists." The prime minister said he saw "nothing in common" between Habib's mission to prevent a new war between Israel and Syria and the Israeli attacks on Palestinian bases in Lebanon.

However, the Syrian government newspaper Tishrin said Tuesday if Habib's shuttle diplomacy is to succeed, the U.S. government must recognize that Lebanon must not be "penetrated, attacked, violated or be the scene of any practice of sovereignty by outsiders."

It demanded that the United States end Israeli reconnaissance flights over Egypt and end Israeli attacks on Palestinian bases. It said the United States and Israel must also accept Syria's right to deploy all the troops and weapons it needs to keep peace in Lebanon.

Habib, who has been meeting with officials in Washington since last week, is to return to the Middle East this week.

Justice official says mistake by Air Force complicates espionage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Furious that the Air Force granted some kind of immunity, top Justice Department officials say it may take a judge to sort out whether they can prosecute a missile crewman accused of unauthorized contacts with the Soviet Embassy.

Justice Department sources said it would take a careful analysis of the Air Force's promises and might ultimately be up to a federal judge to decide whether the government can try 2nd Lt. Christopher M. Cooke in a civilian court.

Asked about the Air Force's unilateral decision to grant immunity, one Justice Department source said, "It was extremely ill-advised. Basically, they screwed up the case."

Cooke, 25, of Richmond, Va., has been in pretrial confinement at McConnell Air Force Base near Wichita, Kan., since being charged Friday with three counts of violating an Air Force regulation against unauthorized contact with representatives of a communist country. Specifically, Cooke is charged with visiting the Soviet Embassy here three times between December 1980 and May 1981.

The Justice Department has said it is investigating to see whether any civilian criminal charges, including espionage, should be brought against Cooke. If charged and convicted of espionage, Cooke could face up to life in prison.

Justice Department sources, who discussed the case on the condition they not be identified, gave this account:

The original evidence about Cooke's visits was developed by the FBI, which is known to maintain constant surveillance of the Soviet Embassy. The FBI referred the matter to the Air Force after it determined in March that it had evidence of an Air Force officer visiting the embassy.

From that point forward, the case was handled by the Air Force, including an interview with Cooke in May. Concerned about the security of its Titan intercontinental ballistic missiles, the Air Force at some point offered Cooke immunity in return for a full account of what he had done.

Department officials explained that federal law authorizes the attorney general to make grants of immunity. The attorney general can and has delegated that authority to the assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division.

Cooke was second in command of a four-person missile crew which had access to the launching codes for Titan II intercontinental ballistic missiles in silos near McConnell Air Force Base.

Air Force officials said the launching codes were changed after Cooke's arrest, but added that they frequently are changed routinely.

Reagan hasn't retreated on Lefever

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he has "not retreated one inch" on Ernest W. Lefever's nomination as human rights chief, and the White House is stepping up the pressure for confirmation amid warnings of a tough Senate fight and a probable filibuster.

The president renewed his support for the embattled nominee late Tuesday after a hospital visit with wounded White House press secretary James S. Brady.

Earlier in the day, Lefever was called to the White House for a strategy session with chief of staff James A. Baker III on the next round of Senate confirmation hearings Thursday.

White House staff director David Gergen called the session "an effort to bolster" Lefever's nomination to be assistant secretary of state for human rights, and Baker said the possibility of withdrawing the appointment was not even mentioned.

"The president's... not going to walk away from the guy," Gergen said. "We're stepping up the pressure."

Reagan did his part as reporters shouted questions to him about Senate Republican leader Howard Baker's warning to the president earlier Tuesday that it would be "a tough fight."

"I haven't retreated one inch from wanting him," Reagan shouted back.

The president's remark came before The Associated Press, quoting one of Lefever's brothers, reported today that Lefever has said in family conversation that blacks are genetically inferior to whites in intellect.

The brother, John Lefever, who opposes the nomination, said in an interview: "I was somewhat dismayed to learn that he (Ernest) held an opinion which he says is statistically well-founded that blacks are inferior, intellectually speaking."

Lefever, in a statement released by the State Department's human rights office, "categorically" denied ever saying "that blacks were genetically inferior."

House Democrats meet on tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats, pressured by the Reagan administration and conservatives in their own party, are moving reluctantly toward a two-year tax-cut plan but still insisting on an extra relief for lower- and middle-income Americans.

"I hope we can fashion a program that can be enjoyed by all Democrats," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, told reporters Tuesday after a two-hour meeting of panel Democrats. "We're talking about the possibility of a multiyear tax bill."

However, Rostenkowski said, "There were no votes, no conclusions."

He added that Democrats "still are very concerned with working Americans and how we can target dollars" from a tax cut on those earning between $20,000 and $50,000 a year.

But apparently Democrats on the committee were close enough to a consensus that they scheduled another meeting this afternoon. That would follow a morning caucus of all House Democrats to discuss tax-cut legislation.

Rostenkowski and most other House Democrats have been cool to President Reagan's plans for a 10 percent reduction in tax rates for individuals in each of three consecutive years, with the cuts going to rich and poor alike regardless of income. Democrats have viewed a one-year tax reduction as holding less risk of worsening inflation and have urged proportionately more relief for those with incomes under $50,000 a year.

But apparently not enough Democrats are committed to any plan to assure its passage in the House. There are at least three factions.

—Rostenkowski, the key figure in the House on tax matters, is trying to hammer out a compromise but not the three-year, 25 percent version endorsed by the White House. He met privately for lunch Tuesday with a varied group of Democrats and proposed — with no apparent success — a two-year, 15 percent cut.

"He came in here talking about a compromise for two years and he just got battered," said one liberal Democratic congressman.

But Rostenkowski apparently was more successful in the meeting with fellow Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee. Liberal Rep. Tom Downey, D-N.Y., conceded something more than a one-year cut and less than Reagan's full three years is likely.

—Most House liberals oppose any multiyear tax cut. Many talk privately against any compromise, hoping that would force a direct vote on Reagan's original proposal. Such a vote, by most counts, would go against the president.

—A group of 47 conservatives, mainly Southerners, who gave Reagan the margin of victory in a crucial budget vote earlier this year, tried unsuccessfully Tuesday to reach a consensus on a tax-cut plan.

Publicity blocks big land swap

DALLAS (AP) — Oilman Robert O. Anderson says he called off a land swap with the state of Texas because of controversy generated by the proposed trade has clouded the merits of the transaction with insinuations of ulterior motives.

Anderson, chairman of Atlantic Richfield Co., said in a short statement Tuesday that he was withdrawing from the negotiations although he still believed the exchange would benefit the state.

Gov. Bill Clements had engineered the proposed trade that would have exchanged Anderson's sprawling ranch near Big Bend — which would have been converted to a wilderness park — for an equal amount of state land in Hudspeith County near El Paso.

Under terms of the exchange the state would have kept the mineral rights to both tracts.

The proposed trade drew sharp opposition in Presidio County, and in the Legislature.

Clements said he knew Anderson was disturbed by "some innuendoes by the press and some legislators."

"He felt this amounted to allegations of ulterior motives," Clements said in Fort Worth, where he addressed the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

"Unfortunately, the controversy that has been stirred up not only clouds the true merits of the transaction, but clearly makes it inadvisable for us to continue discussions," Anderson said in Dallas Tuesday.

However, one West Texas official says he thinks Anderson now may work a deal with federal authorities on his 190,000-acre Big Bend ranch.

Presidio County Judge Charles Henderson, a vocal opponent of the land swap proposal, said he expects future negotiations between Anderson and federal officials concerning the land in Brewster and Presidio counties.

"The federal board is interested in that land," he said. "If the state boys can't get all their eggs in their basket, then maybe the federal boys can. I feel that he may take up negotiations with federal officials."

"It is unfortunate," said Clements. "He (Anderson) is a strong believer in wilderness areas and this has upset him and his family. Clements said he had not decided whether to talk to Anderson about changing his mind."

"My guess is he (Anderson) would still have stayed with the trade if there had not been just a bunch of basic controversy," said Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, who has tried for years to get the state to buy Anderson's land.

Armstrong said he and Clements would "look at what — if any — possible alternatives there might be and then make a decision. If this is his decision, that's his decision, and there's nothing we can do about it."

"It's Mr. Anderson's ranch, and I think he's entitled to do anything he wants to with it," Armstrong added.

"It's sad for me that ... you literally have. I guess it's fair to say, hundreds of thousands of people that have been interested in this and have wanted this to be a park that would be available to them and you have very few people who don't want it to happen."

Brilab figure wants cases joined

HOUSTON (AP) — A lawyer for a union official indicted for the second time last week by the federal grand jury says his client will ask that the cases be consolidated into one trial.

Jim Ramsey, attorney for labor leader L.G. Moore, made the statement Tuesday as a Houston port commissioner and three union officials entered innocent pleas to charges they conspired to influence the awarding of health insurance contracts.

The pleas were entered before U.S. Magistrate Frank Waltemire.

Moore, regional director of the International Union of Operating Engineers, and Commissioner John Garrett were charged last week with conspiracy and aiding racketeering. They were ordered to stand trial July 20 before U.S. District Judge Norman Black.

The charges stem from their alleged attempts to influence the city of Houston to change its health insurance contract from Republic National Life of Dallas to Prudential. The indictments named two Louisiana men as unindicted co-conspirators.

Sherman Fricks and Harold Grubbs, officials of Local Pipefitters Union Local 211, entered their innocent pleas to charges of conspiracy and bribery. They were scheduled to stand trial July 20 before U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald.

Moore will seek a single trial on last week's charges and those returned against him in the original Brilab case, Ramsey said.

"The two cases come out of the same government scam," Ramsey said. Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton and two others were acquitted last year in the first Brilab case.

"The defensive argument for Moore will be that the entire thing is a government conspiracy," Ramsey said. "That was proved in the Clayton case, and I expect it will be proved in this case."

Tax shelter promoters are indicted

SEATTLE (AP) — Five men have been indicted on charges stemming from an income-tax shelter program and a sixth on a charge of obstruction of justice, the U.S. attorney's office said Tuesday.

A statement from the office said the charges stem from operation of the American Law Association to promote the tax shelters, and of a chapter in Washington state called the American Law Education Society.

According to the grand jury indictment, the scheme used phony transactions with "foreign trust organizations" to reduce the apparent taxable incomes of individuals who paid as much as $12,000 for the tax-shelter programs.

Named in the main indictment are Karl L. Dahlstrom of Bryan, Texas, president and founder of the association; R. Bruce Ripley, executive vice president of the association; Hiram E. Conley, David J. Morris, and Gaze Durst.

Ripley, Morris and Durst were identified as Seattle-area residents, while Conley was said to have resided in Anchorage, Alaska; Tucson, Ariz., and Seattle.

A second indictment charges Ronald Kelly with obstruction of justice by causing the records of witnesses to be removed from the jurisdiction of the grand jury.

Efforts to reach those named in the indictment were unsuccessful Tuesday.

Dahlstrom, Ripley, Conley, Morris and Durst each face one count of conspiracy to hinder efforts by the Internal Revenue Service to assess and collect income taxes and six counts of advising and assisting in the preparation of false tax returns of individuals who purchased the tax-shelter program.

The five also are accused of making fraudulent representations to purchasers of the program.

Several of those charged in the case went to Belize and the Turks and Caicos to execute documents concerning the foreign trust organizations, the indictment says.

First doctors graduate from college station

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas' newest medical school graduates its first physicians here Saturday when the charter class of 32 new doctors receive their diplomas from the Texas A&M University College of Medicine.

Dr. Steven Beering, dean of Medicine at the University of Indiana, will deliver the commencement address at the new college of medicine which just received five years' full accreditation by the national Liaison Committee on Medical Education.

The LCME, composed of members from both the Association of American Medical Colleges and the American Medical Association, had originally considered four years' full accreditation for the Texas A&M program, but later extended the approval period another year.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

The special interests manipulating media

As the special interest groups who may be affected by proposed Reagan budget cuts resist their possible return to honest employment, it has not been surprising to see them fighting back, using whatever means are at hand to protect their places at the public trough. Most of them have extensive resources at their disposal.

Each public agency has a Public Information Office, consisting of a number of professional writers and publicists whose primary job is building public support for bigger appropriations for their agencies. More films are made in Washington than in Hollywood, and most of them are directly or indirectly designed to tell the people that the government is doing a dandy job and ought to have more money.

These professional people are adept at the planted story, the heart-tugging example of the person who just doesn't know how he or she will survive (or continue to help those less fortunate) if this or that budget cut is actually made. Their fulltime job is to find the kind of stories that might attract reader interest or sympathy and then point them out to media people. Of course, in the vast panoply of federal programs, they are going to find some. Some agencies even provide pre-written, type-set stories with pictures or illustrations for low budget newspapers or magazines.

Sometimes wire service reporters allow these stories whole, culling their prefab quotes from one side and passing them along as news. Sometimes these stories make their way into newspapers.

Thus in recent weeks we have seen what appeared to be a routine feature story on a "creative" food distribution program in Detroit headed by an "imaginative, shrewd Catholic priest," which wonderful program, we learn in the middle, may be threatened by Reagan budget cuts. A story based on an interview with a doctor who is chairman of a peer review program (obviously an interested party) begins: "Doctors' groups are moving to thwart, or at least modify, a Reagan administration proposal to kill a program that evaluates the work of physicians." The peer review program is widely criticized in the medical community, but only one doctor is quoted, without noting his obvious self-interest in the matter.

A story suggesting that a project to publish the papers of Washington, Jefferson the Adamses and Franklin "is threatened by funding cuts proposed by the government they created" doesn't tell us until the end that what is really happening is that the project will have to compete with others for less money, decisions haven't yet been made about its continued funding, and it has been going on since 1943.

Taking government handouts at face value, especially under severe deadline pressures, is a common shortcoming of the Washington press corps. Everyone in the business has written stories that we knew were incomplete or served somebody's interest at one time or another. But some stories sound almost like advocacy. The media should be more careful.

Goldwater's retreat on conscription

What's a nice guy like Barry Goldwater doing with an idea like this?

Senator Goldwater, as he himself once noted, was one of the first public officials to come out against the draft, back when it was in full force. Now he's come full circle, and it's more than a little sad. He's contending that the volunteer military is a failure, and suggesting that what we might need is universal military training, or some form of compulsory government service for everybody who turns 18. That's a quintessentially socialist idea, one that seems especially dissonant coming from Barry Goldwater.

The idea that the real and imagined shortcomings of U.S. military forces can somehow magically be cured by some sort of enforced conscription program is a durable one. Unfortunately, it is also a tragically mistaken one.

Put to one side, for the moment, the violence that the idea of conscription does to traditional American ideals of voluntarism. Consider, for a moment, whether an army of conscripts, many there against their will and deeply resentful, would provide a superior defense force. Think of how many of the problems in the Vietnam fracas — fraying, drug abuse, mutiny in the ranks, rock-bottom morale, desertion, and poor performance — were at least partly attributable to the fact that many of the soldiers were draftees who didn't want to be there. A new draft, or some kind of universal service, would only intensify such problems. Any form of conscription is detestable to people who believe that no purportedly "higher" goal justifies the enslavement of human beings. The tragic aspect of a military draft is that there is little evidence that it would even give us an improved defense force in exchange for violating American principles.

Rather than listening to the Goldwaters, we hope the Reagan administration will remember its own promises regarding the draft. Reagan opposed the reinstatement of registration when the Carter administration began requiring it last year. The time has come to redeem that promise and cease draft registration.

In lifting the wheat embargo against the Soviet Union, Reagan has demonstrated a more sophisticated understanding of the interrelationship between foreign policy and American ideals than have some of his supporters. He has shown that it doesn't mean you're "soft on communism" just because you don't support every possible anti-Soviet idea that comes along. He has shown a commendable willingness to drop ideas that are ineffective and inconsistent with American traditions.

Draft registration is another such idea. Creating a computerized list doesn't impress the Soviets, but it does undermine the idea of a free society. Registration should be ended.

BY BUTLER D. SHAFFER

Suppose you had hired a construction company to build you a house. You paid them the agreed-upon price, the house was completed, and after you moved into it, the roof collapsed, the foundation sank, and the plumbing failed to work. You confront the construction company with your complaint and they tell you: "If you will pay us more money, we will come in and fix it properly." Would you do so? Would you consider yourself a prudent person for having thrown good money after bad in order to get what you thought you had paid for?

That very approach is presently being suggested in city after city across this nation as police departments respond to soaring crime rates with pleas for more money. "If only we can hire more officers, raise salaries, purchase more equipment, etc., we can deal with all this crime," they intone. But how different from the house-building hypothetical is this? Aren't the police departments making the same limp plea for more compensation to overcome prior incompetencies? Having failed, in other words, to deal adequately with the crime problem — a problem that has, in fact, greatly increased in spite of the injection of billions of tax dollars into the system — the incompetents are back for more: "Just give us more money and this time for sure... maybe."

One begins to understand how and why the police system is dependent upon the continuing — if not escalating — presence of criminals. As long as the rest of us are foolish enough to keep falling for this racket of paying someone more for doing less, we create a premium for incompetency. Were this a marketplace arrangement — like the faulty house example — we would stop dealing with the admitted incompetents. If we were hiring a private security company to protect our home, and we experienced an increase in burglaries, we would not take too well to the security firm's suggestion that we pay them more money. We would more likely put in a call to the local screwball farm for a rubber wagon. But let a grim-looking, jut-jawed police chief get on television with his horror stories of "crime in the streets" and many of us can't wait to get to the telephone to support his plea for more tax dollars.

The auto makers and the police

Firms that operate in a free-market are not blessed with the benefits of such institutional insanity. If the American auto makers, for example, do not put onto the market the kinds of cars consumers want to buy, the consumers will take their business elsewhere — as they in fact have, to Germany, Japan, and other nations.

That is, of course, as long as the auto makers are operating in a free market. But, as we all know, they are not. Government import restrictions, emission and safety controls, and a seeming endless variety of other government regulations, have the effect of altering the competitive advantages some firms otherwise enjoy over others, and the Detroit automakers are as disposed to take advantage of these controls as anyone else. The analogy between the police departments and the Chrysler Corporation are all too familiar to us. In a free market, Chrysler would have gone under and should have been permitted to do so. Their loss of earnings — like the soaring crime rates confronted by the police departments — was a signal that Chrysler was not performing properly.

The growing tendency of consumers to look to foreign auto manufacturers is also a signal that Detroit is not adequately serving the demands of the American car buyers. Whatever the quality of American automobiles might be in the abstract, the fact is that a sizeable number of Americans found Detroit cars less of a bargain than what Japanese and German manufacturers offered.

Again, in a free market, Detroit would have to "take its medicine" and "return to the drawing boards." But again, like the police, the American auto manufacturers have an "out," a way to avoid many of the consequences of their own decisions: increase import restrictions in order to cut back on the numbers of foreign cars allowed into the country. At this point, Detroit is in the rather unenviable position of appearing to advocate an increased amount of government intervention at a time when the Reagan administration is endeavoring to reduce the involvement of government in the economy. Corporate officials are suggesting, therefore, that the administration simply "talk" with the Japanese (in particular), without formally tightening import restrictions. But we ought to be able to see through his approach. Like it or not, the Detroit auto manufacturers are saying the same thing that local police departments are saying: please excuse us from the consequences of our past decisions, and make the American public pay the added costs of rehabilitating us. After all, as we have been so often reminded, "What's good for General Motors is good for America."

Airline food for a crash diet

By D.R. SEGAL

A desperate awfulness typifies airline chow, which is all the more painful because they insist on bragging about the dreadful stuff. Some companies take out ads to say M. Pierre le Poiseux has been hired to preside over the five-star kitchens of the Orville & Wilbur airline. Pierre's last post having been 21 club in beautiful downtown Cheyenne, Wyo. To be fair, the food is neither vile nor dangerous. It's just disappointing, is what it is.

There must be some remedy in tort or equity which could be undertaken against anybody who takes a fine piece of tenderloin and tans it like the uppers of a pair of Bass Weejuns. I should think airlines would savvy up to the fact that prime meat cannot be served under airline conditions. Spaghetti and meatballs would be better — and I suspect that the airline that puts in a grill and fixes hot, fresh, smelly hamburgers will chase the competition right out of the skies, crepes, souffles, prime filets and all. Now, wouldn't you really rather have a fresh odorless hamburger right off the fire than a slab of incinerated beef which has languished for hours in the warming oven of an L1011 between Philly and Kansas City?

Oh, well, I skip the tenderloin and go for the chicken. It occurs to me that the Russians have gotten even for what happened in the Crimea by exporting Chicken Kiev just as the Greeks have taken Pompeii out on us by introducing the nefarious practice of sloshing grapes over dishes where they shouldn't ought to be. But chicken is about the best suited provender for airlines since it's hard to overcook it after the first six hours. Very likely it's been frozen for a month or two anyway and brought back to life in a microwave oven and there's not much can happen to it that hasn't happened already.

Occasionally airlines will assay stuffed pork chops, incredible as that may seem, and on the Hawaiian flights they dunk it in a grisly wash of pinkish pineapple juice and maraschino cherries. Aloha — oy! Cheapo airlines serve "snacks," also known as junk food. Braniff didn't used to serve anything, and five hours on a Braniff was tantamount to going on the water diet, but they made a pot of money. Now they are doing the roast beef and chicken Kiev gavage and they're losing their fannies. It's the grub that did it.

Years ago I took a young relative of mine to Philadelphia to soak up the historic atmosphere and what she liked best was the horse racing at Liberty Park and the bean soup at Bookbinders. We bought two enormous hunks of Bookbinders' chocolate cake to take home with us, but en route (Braniff) we got hungry and asked the stewardess to bring us each a fork and carton of milk. Presently she came back and said, "Listen, good buddies, you are giving me a fit. Everybody on this gol-darned li'l airplane is ordering their piece of cake and I am having a terrible time explaining you." I asked her if she'd feel some better if we gave her a bite, so she said that would help a bunch and she went for another fork. If we'd thought to bring the whole cake, we could have made expenses.

BY PAUL HARVEY

Will cable 'dirty' your house?

My schedule requires that I retire before television's sex, violence and swear words come on.

Perhaps that's just as well. Highly impressionable as I am, a steady diet of such could not be constructive.

And cable TV means more of the same — for better or worse.

The other day I broadcast an obituary for a virile lion named Caesar. This mighty lion of the Winston, Oregon, Wildlife Safari had died at the age of 23 having left a potent legacy.

I mentioned Caesar's reputation for mating 150 times a week; for fathering more than 110 cubs.

Then gratuitously I added, "Caesar will also be remembered for his smile."

The number of people who were offended by that remark surprised me. The innuendo seemed so innocent by contemporary standards.

That, my critics, including my wife, explained, is precisely the point.

When traditional values are no longer held sacrosanct by anyone, then all of us become what Dr. Karl Menninger calls "smoking lamps" — where the smoke obscures the light.

He says clergymen must remain alert to this erosion of absolutes. Perhaps we all must.

So now how are we going to respond to the intrusion of cable TV into our homes with their already demonstrated proclivity for pornography?

Cable has introduced X-rated movies to the Bible Belt.

Already there are a half-dozen cable services that deal exclusively with hard-core material.

Cable operators in sections of the country where you would least expect an appetite for pornography report that the so-called "adult services" are attracting more customers than any other kind.

Local standards may keep "adult" movie theaters and bookstores off the street — and yet cable TV is allowing local people to circumvent local standards by inviting counterpart entertainment into their homes.

And in Utah, where they passed a state law barring "indecent" material from home television channels, a federal judge is preventing enforcement of that statute.

In Mesquite, Texas, religious leaders demanded dirty movies be put to vote — and the dirty movies won, three-to-two.

Cable companies cite the ready availability of sexually explicit video cassettes and protest that restrictions on cable would be unfairly discriminatory.

Legislating morality always has been an exercise in futility.

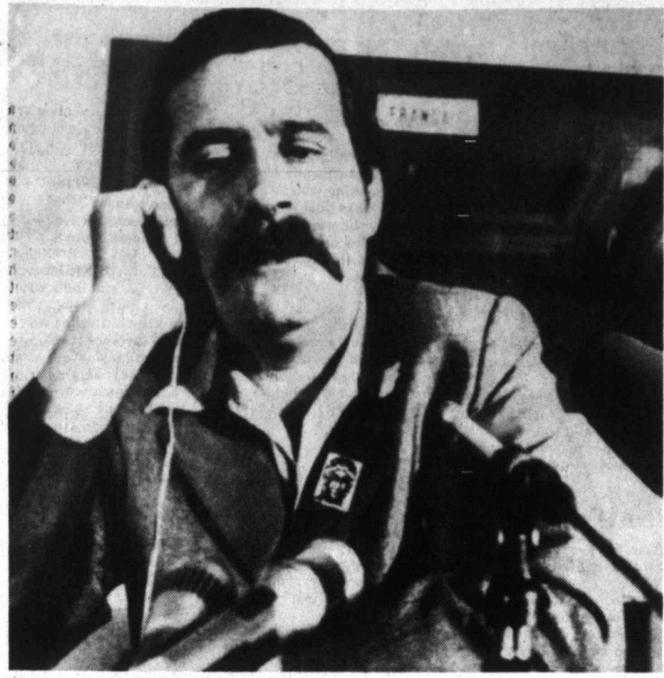

Indeed, it can be argued that ideals are meant to be unattainable; that ideals serve best as a kind of moral alarm clock which goes off at the right time, whether we heed it or not.

Tax cut efforts termed 'reconciliation'

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's called reconciliation, but it's likely to be as rancorous as a divorce court as President Reagan and his allies press Congress to deliver the $36 billion in federal spending cuts it already has promised. The time has come to fill in the blanks, in a hurry. There are Democrats who argue that the process — cutting specific programs to stay under spending ceilings already set — is an opportunity for liberals to regroup and regain funds for domestic spending programs slashed under the Reagan budget. House Speaker

Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. is among them. Not so, counters the Republican administration, with an ample corps of Democratic supporters. "Policy has already been decided," said budget director David A. Stockman, arguing that what should happen now is almost routine. He knows it won't be handled that way — not with a Republican administration bent on changing the way Congress does budget business, and not with assorted pet projects at stake. "As we start this grand legislative experiment...it's likely to unfold less like a family reunion and more like a divorce court," Stockman said the other morning, launching a White House drive to make sure the cuts are enforced. He spoke as congressional committees began work on the details of budget cutting, with a deadline of June 12. That's not much time, and it is no small task. For example, programs under the supervision of the House Education and Labor Committee will have to be pruned by $10 billion to fit the budget. And Democrats, many of whom do not want such cuts in social programs, are still the majority there. Besides, even if they can't win, O'Neill and Democratic liberals may decide to make a stand and fight for more money for their preferred programs — college student loans and school lunch funds are two of them — in order to make a political case they can talk about later. In the opening phase of budget action, the issue was the broad one: austerity in government spending. For all the debate, it was clear that was what the voters wanted, and Congress got the message. Now the question is where to be austere, which specific program is cut — and who loses what as a result. That's tougher. "This covers every sensitive program politically that you can possibly imagine," Stockman said.

He said the administration is willing to bend on the allocation of funds within the guidelines already set. "Our approach will be one of flexibility on the details but insistence on honest scorekeeping and the bottom line," the budget chief said. That flexibility apparently will be limited. Stockman said it isn't going to be feasible to restore large programs or undo large cuts because there isn't any place left to make offsetting reductions.

Teenage girl is dead after routine surgery

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A grieving mother says she is afraid to ask why her teen-age daughter lapsed into a coma and died after routine dental surgery — frightened she will discover it could have been avoided. "It was just routine surgery, nothing to get alarmed about. It's done every day," said Mattie Crumpton, a registered nurse whose 17-year-old daughter died late Tuesday afternoon. Shonia Crumpton had planned to begin a college preparatory program for gifted minority students this week. She wanted to have her wisdom teeth removed first. But she never regained consciousness after last Wednesday's operation. Mrs. Crumpton said she was told her daughter's brain was deprived of oxygen after a tube inserted to keep her breathing became dislodged or was inserted improperly. She said her daughter had no reflex signs and Harris Hospital test indicated no brain activity after the girl slipped into a coma. An autopsy is scheduled today, a spokesman for the Tarrant County Medical Examiners office said. "There have been no questions answered, and I'm not brave enough to ask," Mrs. Crumpton said while her daughter was still in a coma. "I can't ask the questions because I'd have to assume some of the guilt. I brought her here. I had faith in the system. I had the utmost confidence that it would take care of her," said Mrs. Crumpton, who works in the hospital's surgical recovery room. "The questions — Why? What happened? Could it have been avoided? — will have to be asked," said Mrs. Crumpton. "I can't deal with it, but the community is going to have to ask those questions." The surgery could have been completed in two visits to an oral surgeon's office, but Mrs. Crumpton said her daughter — anxious to begin the summer school program at Texas Christian University — wanted it done all at once. "Shonia said, 'Momma, can't the doctor just put me asleep and do it?'" her mother recalled.

Teamsters union refuses to form ethics committee

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — In an emotional response to the government indictment of interim Teamsters President Roy Lee Williams, convention delegate havafejet overwhelmingly a proposal that the union police itself with an ethics committee. Resentment over the bribery-conspiracy charge and an earlier Senate investigative report accusing Williams of being a tool of organized crime burst onto the convention floor Tuesday when union dissidents pushed for creation of an ethics committee. In the tense and bitter debate that ensued among the 2,200 delegates, a member of the Teamsters for a Democratic Union suggested top officers have something to hide by opposing such a panel. And a delegate attending his first convention apologized to Williams for believing he was "a bad man." The union's fighting mood — epitomized by Williams' refusal to cooperate with Senate investigators — surfaced on the floor the day before, when union members cheerfully approved a resolution denouncing the news media. On Tuesday, Diana Kilmurray, a dissident Teamster from the union's Vancouver, British Columbia affiliate, sought approval of the ethics panel on behalf of the TDU faction.

"Are all these people working for your government agencies liars?" she asked as other delegates booed and told her to sit down. But Williams urged the convention to let Ms. Kilmurray have her say. "I didn't say you all were a bunch of crooks," she continued. "I don't think that. But what I do think is that we've had rotten apples before and if you're too scared to have an ethical practices committee... then you must be up to something." International Vice President Edward Lawson of Vancouver said he had a better idea for an ethical practices board — one that would stop the TDU and its Convo magazine "from printing all the lies and distortions about the officials of this union." He promised that "if the TDU will stop telling lies about us, we'll stop telling the truth about the TDU." Roy Munson, representing a union local from Baltimore, told Williams: "I have to apologize to you. I judged you before I came here. I judged you as being a bad guy in so many words." Williams accepted the apology and thanked Munson "for having the guts to stand up here and admit you made a mistake."

FOR EASY TO MAKE, fun to eat sandwiches, place a spicy beef filling in the pockets of pita bread.

Snacks 'shape up' with pita bread

When it's a foursome for an evening of cards and conversation, there's always the same old question: "What shall I serve at the end of the evening?" Hot sandwiches are always popular for a late night snack, but they can become routine.

An easy way to give a new look to an old favorite is to simply change the shape of things. For instance, hot beef sandwiches take on a whole new dimension when the spicy beef filling is tucked into pockets of little round loaves of pita bread.

You'll know you have a winner when you start with delicious and tender sliced roast beef and simmer it in a tangy homemade barbecue sauce as in the recipe for Saucy Beef in Pocket Bread. The sandwiches are convenient for entertaining because the filling can be made well in advance, refrigerated, then reheated at serving time. If it's a group of friends to be served, simply double or triple the recipe and cook a beef roast for the preparation. A variety of beef roasts — rump, tip, top round, cross rib — will provide delicious slices of cooked beef for the sandwiches. The most economical way to make these handy — to — eat beef sandwiches for a foursome is to plan them to be a second meal to a roast beef dinner.

To initially prepare the beef roast, it should be placed on a rack in an open-roasting pan and baked in a slow oven. A roast meat thermometer should be used to determine the exact degree of doneness. The left over beef should be promptly wrapped and placed in the refrigerator.

For extended storage place in the freezer. The cooked beef will keep at top quality longest if it is stored in a large piece and sliced at the time the filling is made.

SAUCY BEEF IN POCKET BREAD
 1 pound cooked beef, thinly sliced
 1 cup catsup
 1-3 cup water
 1 tablespoon vinegar
 1 tablespoon brown sugar
 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
 1/2 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
 Dash ground cloves
 4 green onions, sliced
 4 loaves pita bread
 Combine catsup, water, vinegar, brown sugar, Worcestershire sauce, mustard, hot pepper sauce and cloves in saucepan. Cook slowly 7 to 8 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add cooked beef and green onions, stirring lightly to coat with sauce. Cook slowly 5 to 8 minutes or until heated through. Cut bread in half crosswise and enlarge pockets when necessary. Place slices of beef and sauce in pockets. Serve hot. Makes 4 servings of 2 sandwiches each.

For a late evening snack, all that's needed to accompany the pocket sandwiches are a few relishes and cold or hot drinks. The sandwiches will be delicious, too, for a family lunch or supper. For a well-balanced meal serve the beef in pita bread with a mixed green salad and milk. For dessert, pass a bowl of fresh fruit and a plate of homemade oatmeal cookies.

Dear Abby

Second opinion might save breast

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to your request to hear from women who had been treated with radiation therapy instead of undergoing a mastectomy.

On my 35th birthday I learned that a golf ball-sized lump that had been removed from my right breast a few days before was malignant. After discussing the situation with my surgeon and learning that he felt he had removed all of the cancerous tissue (the procedure is called lumpectomy), I could not bring myself to accept the "usual" next step of a modified mastectomy.

My surgeon referred me to a radiologist who, after reviewing my medical record, decided that I was a good candidate for radiation therapy.

I then underwent six weeks of radiation therapy. Unlike the side effects experienced when many other parts of the body are treated, those produced by radiation on the breast are minimal — a slight cough, loss of hair under the arm, and the skin that is treated becomes less soft, darkens slightly, peels, and becomes itchy.

It has been five years since my lump was removed, and the only visible evidence of my bout with cancer is a barely noticeable 1/2-inch scar!

Please feel free to use my name.
 SUZANNE PHILLIPS, ROCHESTER, N.Y.

DEAR SUZANNE: Thanks to Juliet R. Ristom, who refused to accept her doctor's decision to undergo an immediate mastectomy for breast cancer, California became the second state (Massachusetts was the first) to require every physician to give a written summary of all options available to breast cancer patients.

I would urge every woman with breast cancer to get several opinions before deciding on therapy. Ask to be referred to a surgeon and a radiation therapist. And please, practice breast self-examination faithfully every month, because the only women who even have a choice are the ones who detect it early.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a healthy young man, married one month, who says to his bride: "I won't bother you very often for sex. I want a pal, not a sweetheart." And he's living up to it, too.

NOT BOTHERED

DEAR NOT: He may be "healthy," but your marriage is sick. Tell him that unless he tries to fulfill his role as a husband, as far as you're concerned, the marriage won't work — that you didn't get married to live with a "pal." If he wants to be a husband, but can't, he should see a doctor. If he just plain doesn't want to, you should see a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for something I read in your column a long time ago that came in very handy when I needed it. It was the perfect answer to a rude and prying question.

Yesterday I ran into an acquaintance I had not seen in a long time. I am now in my eighth month of pregnancy.

Zucchini makes new main dish

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
My young friend Christy Pines, who is getting married soon, is rehearsing her cooking. Recently she had a supper party for six.

Christy and her friends are for the most part vegetarians. When I asked her what she served for the supper-party main dish, she told me she had adapted a recipe from the April 1981 issue of Cuisine magazine. It is made with zucchini plus other vegetables and has a creamy ricotta topping. Christy accompanied it with buttered egg noodles flavored with minced fresh dill. She also served a salad Cuisine recommended to go with the zucchini dish. For dessert a friend brought an apple pie.

Christy made two of the main dishes, so each of the six eaters could have "seconds," but she said the double offering would have served eight because there was some left over.

We tried it at our house and found Christy's zucchini discovery delightful.

ZUCCHINI RICOTTA MAIN DISH

- 28-ounce can whole peeled Italian plum tomatoes
- 4 tablespoons unsalted or slightly salted butter
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- ¾ pound zucchini (ends trimmed, unpeeled and sliced ¼-inch thick)

make about 3 cups)
¾ pound (about) onion (chopped medium-fine to make about 1½ cups)
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ teaspoon crushed dried basil leaves
Pinch of ground or freshly grated nutmeg
Salt and pepper to taste
2 large eggs
1 cup ricotta cheese, sieved
1 cup heavy cream
¾ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
Turn the tomatoes into a wide-mesh strainer to drain; with a kitchen scissors quarter each; continue to drain until there is 1½ cups juice. Use juice in some other dish. Reserve tomatoes.

In a 12-inch skillet over medium heat, heat 2 tablespoons of the butter and the olive oil until the foam subsides; add the zucchini and cook, stirring several times, until tender-crisp—5 to 7 minutes. With a slotted spoon, remove zucchini to brown paper or paper toweling to drain; reserve.
Over medium heat, melt the remaining 2 tablespoons of butter in the skillet and add the onion; cook, stirring often, until wilted—about 8 minutes. Stir in the garlic, tomatoes, basil, nutmeg, salt and pepper. Cook over medium-high heat, stirring often, until most of moisture evaporates—about 8 minutes.

Whisk together the eggs just enough to blend yolks and whites; whisk in the ricotta, cream and Parmesan.
Arrange half the reserved zucchini in the bottom of a shallow 2-quart oblong or square baking dish (11¼ by 7½ by 1¼ inches or 8 by 2 inches). Spread with tomato mixture; top with remaining zucchini and pour the ricotta mixture over it.

Bake in a preheated 450-degree oven for 15 minutes; reduce oven temperature to 375 degrees and continue baking until top is browned and slightly puffed—about 20 minutes longer for the oblong dish and about 30 minutes longer for the square dish. Let stand 5 minutes or so before serving. (There may be some juices in the bottom of the baking dish.)
For easy removal with a wide spatula or server, cut into eighths—4 servings, 2 portions apiece.

SUMMER SCENE. The blazer, bolder and brighter, is a big part of the new summer look. At left, a slim two-button one in such vivid hues as daffodil yellow and cornflower blue, makes an ideal topper for a georgette blossom-print shirt and matching pleated skirt. At right, a jazzy two-tone striped blazer serves as a sporty knitmate for a flattering crepe de chine tied shirt and color-coordinated pull-on pants. (Fashions by James Kenrob.)

Psychologist advocates theory of educating children at home

WACO — A nationally known developmental psychologist, Dr. Raymond Moore, believes that children who do not start school until they are 8 or 9 years old may experience many advantages over the child who is pushed into school at 5 or 6.

Dr. Moore, a pioneer in the movement to encourage parents to teach their children at home, claims that research reveals many advantages for late entry into school. Readiness for learning is one such advantage.

"Despite early excitement for school," he said, "most early entrants (ages 4, 5, 6) are tired of school before they are out of the third or fourth grades—already burned-out at about the ages and levels they should be starting." His findings indicate that their vision, hearing and other senses are not ready for continuing formal programs of learning until at least age 8 or 9.

Socialization takes place faster at home than at school, he maintains. "Little children are better socialized by parental example and sharing than by other little children," according to Dr. Moore. "Negative, me-first, sociability is born from more peer group association and fewer meaningful parental contacts and responsibility experiences in the home during the first 8 to 12 years."

Dr. Moore and his wife Dorothy announced their conclusions in a book of guidance for parents. Their new book, "Home-Grown Kids," follows their research-based "Better Late Than Early" and "School Can Wait." Their new work, aimed for parents rather than the academic community, focuses on ways parents can enhance the child's development from birth through the ninth year.

The reception nationwide to the Moores' warnings of too-early departures from the nest has created a movement in many states to change laws that forbid home schooling. The movement in many cases is based on the moral responsibilities as well as the legal rights of parents. On this point Dr. Moore issues a warning: "The mother and father who unnecessarily turn from their youngsters for personal fulfillment or who casually send them away for day care or early institutional life may, without realizing it, be damaging their children."

Even so, Dr. Moore is a firm supporter of public and private schools. "There are a lot of very good nursery schools, kindergartens, and elementary schools in the world," he said. "We have visited many and administered quite a few. Yet there are none whose programs can match education by loving parents of even modest ability, working with their own children in the simplest of homes. And we must not lose this heritage and art."

Dr. Moore added that "on the family rests the opinions of our society. Nevertheless, we have gone a long way toward putting it down and substituting parenting-by-state. If we are to retrieve our democratic society—and our schools—we would do well to look to the home."

Dr. Moore's writings and public appearances underscore the conviction that parents are better teachers than they think they are, and actually possess many resources unavailable to teachers in schools.

"Some parents realize this and are finding surprisingly simple answers to complex questions about the rearing of children," he stated.

A permanent solution

The average perm will hold its shape for up to three months, depending on the type of hair you have. Here are some hints for helping a perm last longer. First, don't forget to wait at least 24 hours after perming to wash your hair—those new curls need time to set. After shampooing, fluff hair dry with a "perm mitt," which you can stitch up easily from two washcloths. Perk up a fading perm by setting your hair in little pin curls all over your head. Spray lightly with water, then let dry. You'll bring new bounce to your tired curls.

Brewery waste eyed for shellfish food

GLOUCESTER POINT, Va. (AP) — David Gussman, a graduate student of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science here, is finding ways to turn the wastes from a nearby brewery into an inexpensive, nutritious feed for oysters and clams.

And, say officials of the institute, his research may have tremendous benefits for both the beer and shellfish industries.

If his research is successful, it will remove a major barrier to development of large-scale shellfish hatcheries. Success would also give the Anheuser Busch Inc. plant in Williamsburg a safe, maybe even a profitable, way to dispose of its effluent.

Gussman, 28, got the idea for the project when he heard about the problems Anheuser Busch has in getting rid of the by-products of its brewing process.

"It occurred to me, 'I wonder if we can use some of these wastes in mariculture (cultivation of saltwater plants and animals)?" he said.

First, he tried feeding the molasses-like wastes directly to his oysters. But because almost all the syrupy substance dissolved in water, they were unable to digest the food.

So now Gussman is using the wastes to grow certain micro-organisms, or flagellate protozoa, which in turn can be fed to oysters.

"This looks encouraging," said Gussman, who's doing the research as part of his dissertation for a doctoral degree in marine biology.

"I find that they (the protozoa) do extremely well" if the brewery by-products are properly diluted, he said. "We believe that the protozoa will be very good food for oysters."

In the research funded by the federal Sea Grant program and Anheuser Busch, Gussman is raising five kinds of protozoa, seeking the best diet for shellfish. He plans to feed his concoctions to clams as well as oysters.

Providing food for shellfish has been a significant problem for hatcheries, said Gussman, a student at VIMS — a division of the College of William and Mary — for about a year.

Oysters, for instance, reproduce quickly — a female can release a million eggs in a single spawning, he said — but the food requirements have always been a big hangup.

Another benefit of Gussman's process is that it would use up the wastes from Anheuser Busch. The sweet-smelling wastes represent the "bottom-of-the-barrel" sludge left over from the distillation process, Gussman said.

Right now, he said, the brewery's by-products have limited use. A poultry farm buys some of the wastes to coat corn fed to chickens.

Writer wants to go back to Afghanistan

By PETER HAWES
Associated Press Writer
MANCHESTER, Conn. (AP) — It's a long way from central Connecticut to Afghanistan, but Rhea Talley Stewart has made the trip eight times and would love to do it again.

But Mrs. Stewart is not a tourist. The 65-year-old woman was the last Western journalist to interview Afghanistan's former president, Hafizullah Amin, shot to death after being ousted in a Soviet Union-backed coup in 1979.

She longs to be the first Western journalist to interview the country's current president, Babrak Karmal, a man she calls "the original communist, a perfect stooge." Karmal, installed as Afghanistan's president in December 1979, has been called a Soviet puppet by Western leaders.

It will not be easy for her to return to Afghanistan: the country no longer issues visas to American journalists.

"I am part of their folk history now," she says of her involvement with the Afghan people and their reaction to a book she wrote about them, published in 1973. The book traces Afghan history through 1929.

"It was the first book that I know of that is written about the Afghans from the Afghan point of view," she says. "The British, in their histories, tend to be a little condescending."

Because of her book, called "Fire in Afghanistan," she has become very popular among the Afghan people and she maintains close friendships with the families of several former rulers.

"I get along very well with the Afghans. They are very realistic and they believe I was fair," she says. During her last visit, "people greeted me in the bazaars and, you know, I'm like a curiosity. When they saw me, they would reduce their prices."

"I was doing an expose. There were a lot of things in their history that were just whispered about, things the powers that be preferred not to have come out. I told them."

Not many people want to visit Afghanistan these days, but Mrs. Stewart doesn't worry.

"I won't be in any danger, at least not from the Afghans," she says. But she concedes, "The Russians, now, they're a different breed. The Afghans have a certain chivalry. They don't shoot women."

"The Russians are there to stay. The power of the Russian war machine is hard to top, but they'll never control more than the roads and the cities," she says, referring to the mountainous terrain controlled by Afghan rebels.

Mrs. Stewart chose Manchester as a place to settle after years of jumping from city to city in pursuit of a journalistic career. She has written for newspapers and magazines in Richmond, Va., Louisville, Ky., and New York.

She lives with her husband in a "modest Cape Cod house," decorated with mementos from her eight visits to Afghanistan and pictures of American Indians "and some Asian ones, too."

She spends much of her time working on her second book, which will bring her first story up to date.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

June 4, 1981

You are likely to strike a very good balance in your personal affairs this coming year. You will devote time to pleasurable pursuits and adequate effort to fulfilling ambitions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Conflicting events today, instead of letting them dominate you, especially in matters relating to your finances. Taking the initiative assures success. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with our birthday. Mail $1 for each Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You have the ability today to handle critical situations for yourself, as well as for others. You're apt to be tested in both areas. You'll do well.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Others need much to admire in you today. They know you are aware of their shortcomings, yet you're tolerant, understanding and helpful.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Even though associates may do things for personal gain today, your aspirations are likely to be much nobler. You'll put good deeds to rest.

BRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Winning won't come that easy today, but you will. What's more important: You won't make a big deal about difficulties you had to overcome.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Instead of challenge discouraging you today, it's likely to increase your resolve and bring out those better, assertive qualities that urge you on.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Unfortunately, others may not be as eager to share today as you are. However, this won't stop you from divvying up fairly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're very good today at sizing up others to determine what it takes to make them allies; yet you won't use this edge unkindly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You could find routine work a trifle too boring today, but tasks requiring imagination will arouse your enthusiasm and give you pride of accomplishment.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You have a knack today for managing others while letting them think that they are the boss. You won't be seeking personal credit, just solid results.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A situation may arise today requiring you to make a serious decision regarding a loved one. For happiest results, permit your heart to rule your head.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A matter affecting your security may look more ominous on the surface today than it really is. You have the smarts to convert negatives into positives.

Solar energy boom in soggy Oregon

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Soggy Oregon is hardly a place where Ole Sol could be expected to warm houses, heat water and fry potatoes. "This is more like the rainbelt," says Dan Merkle, owner of the Sunworks company in Portland and founder of the Oregon Solar Energy Industries Association.

Yet, solar energy in recent years has become a multi-million dollar industry here in the Pacific Northwest, where it rains 200 inches a year in some places.

There are solar housing projects in Portland, a solar-heated goat milking barn in Bend, and on the coast, where rainfall is the heaviest, motels are using the sun's infrared rays to heat their tapwater.

The solar boom has been encouraged by federal and state tax credits, the popularity of environmentally safe energy and the push to replace dwindling gas and oil supplies with renewable energy sources.

Also, the Legislature and several cities are working on "right to light" proposals. Officials want to assure Oregonians that once they invest in solar energy their access to the sun will be protected from new buildings and tall trees.

"The thing that is unique about Oregon is it is not a place where the solar industry grew up, like Florida, New Mexico and California," says Rich Gallagher of the Oregon Department of Energy. "You'd expect them to be in the forefront."

But Gallagher said solar energy works here because the state has a mild climate and about 70 percent of the sun's infrared rays penetrate even on cloudy days.

Additionally, Oregon offers tax incentives to those who take advantage of solar energy. Residents who install a solar system that supplies at least 10 percent of a home's energy requirement are eligible for a state income-tax credit of up to $1,000.

The Department of Energy has received "about 3,500 applications for the credit since the program started in 1979. Applications now arrive at the rate of 100 a week," Gallagher says.

The state has a similar program for business and commercial buildings, which has attracted about 130 applicants so far.

State energy officials say commercial solar projects include nursing homes, motel chains and taverns with solar water systems.

A potato processing company in eastern Oregon is switching to solar power to produce 2,000 pounds of steam per hour to heat the cooking oil used to fry more than 4 million pounds of french fries per day.

Merkle started his business in 1979. Working alone, he did about $230 worth of business the first month, building solar water heaters and systems for greenhouses.

He now employs nine people and does about $250,000 in business a year. He says the state solar industries association has about 150 members and is the second largest in the nation, next to California.

"Oregonians are very receptive to solar because they are aware of the energy and environmental implications," says Merkle, a chemical engineer. "Solar power can reduce our dependence on foreign oil."

Merkle says owners of solar equipment need to be assured that sunlight will fall on the equipment.

"We've gone from 30 solar houses in 1974 to 3,000 in 1980 and people don't know if they have solar protection," says Republican state Sen. George Wingard, a Eugene builder. "I believe that people who have built solar homes ought to be protected from the problems of somebody growing trees in their way in the future."

The state Senate this month passed a bill that states that all applications for building permits must certify that passive solar energy was considered as a source of heating.

Paper money challenged

In a case that could shake the foundations of inflation prone paper money, a New Jersey man is seeking to force the State of Maryland to pay him in gold and silver coin in accordance with the Constitution of the United States.

Richard L. Solyom, a retired civil engineer living in Fort Lee, New Jersey, has raised the issue at a property condemnation proceeding before the Circuit Court for Montgomery County Maryland. His counterclaim asks the Court to compel the Maryland - National Capital Park & Planning Commission to honor the "gold and silver clause" of the Constitution when it compensates him for taking a parcel of his family's land for public use as a park.

Solyom bases his action on Article I, Section 10 of the U.S. Constitution which declares: "No State shall ... emit Bills of Credit: make any Thing but gold and silver Coin a Tender in Payment of Debts." He notes that this provision is no less valid than those mandating "just compensation" for private property taken for public use or his right to have a jury determine the amount of compensation. Park Commission attorneys in court papers filed recently, termed his claim for payment in gold and silver a "frivolous pleading."

One who regards Solyom's position as anything but "frivolous" is Representative Ron Paul (R - Tex.), who introduced HR - 391 on January 5, 1981. Paul's bill will provide, among other things, that Federal Reserve notes be made redeemable in gold. The Congressman agrees with Solyom's basic contention that gold and silver coins are the only Constitutional money and that fiat paper money is clearly unconstitutional.

Solyom contends that, in spite of the Constitution's explicit language, our government, since 1968, has been printing irredeemable paper money, the inevitable consequence being uncontrollable inflation. "The money question has been raised in court by many persons," he said "but, until now, the government has always been able to sidetrack the issue and avoid defending its position." Solyom believes his case will now force the government to face the money issue. He will accept whatever amount the jury decides is "just compensation" but will insist on payment in the same kind of money (gold and silver coin) his grandfather used when he bought the old homestead 106 years ago.

Solyom, who heads up the Sound Dollar Committee in Fort Lee, N.J. said: "A favorable decision by the U.S. Supreme Court will mean that the States can no longer use irredeemable Federal Reserve notes to extinguish their debts. Furthermore, such a decision will help guide the Federal government back to a specie backed currency." First courtroom action will be a hearing on the Park Commission's Motion to Strike Solyom's Counterclaim, scheduled for June 26th in Circuit Court for Montgomery County, Rockville, Maryland.

Beach prospector gets okay to dig for gold

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A beachfront prospector armed with a state contract and a newly granted county excavation permit says he will start digging in about two weeks for lost Spanish gold he believes is hidden beneath the sands of north Padre Island.

One Nueces County Commissioner, J.P. Lucy, had expressed concern that the treasure hunt could disrupt treasurers from another source — weekend crowds at the beach.

But Luby was outvoted 4-1 Tuesday when commissioners agreed to give J.C. Gautreaux of Freeport permission to comb the sands of Padre Balli Park for gold and silver bullion lost when treasure-laden Spanish galleons sank off the Texas coast during runs between the New World and Spain.

The state had already given Gautreaux a salvage contract, but the Dune Protection Act required him to get a digging permit from the Nueces County commissioners.

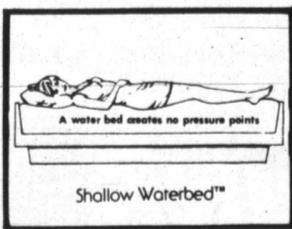

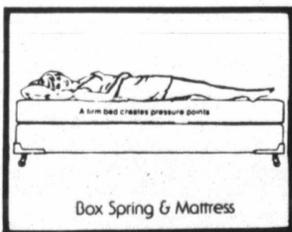

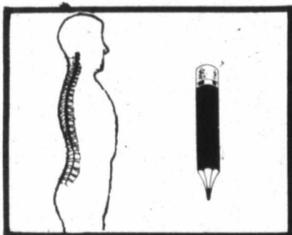

Luby argued against granting the permit before September, saying if the treasure had remained hidden for 400 years another 90 days wouldn't cause it to spoil.

Astros rally in ninth to edge Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Craig Reynolds lined a two-out, run-scoring triple to cap a two-run ninth inning and give the Houston Astros a 2-1 victory over the San Diego Padres Tuesday night.

Loser Chris Welsh, 2-4, was working on a 1-0, one-hit shutout going into the ninth when he gave up a leadoff infield single to Luis Pujols which bounced off the third-base bag. Pinch-runner Rafael Landestoy took second on Joe Pittman's sacrifice, and, after pinch-hitter Dave Roberts flied out, Terry Puhl lined a run-scoring single to right to tie the game.

Puhl stole second and came home with the game-winner on Reynolds' triple down the line into the right field corner.

Frank LaCorte, who worked the eighth inning in relief of starter Bob Knepper, picked up his third win in four decisions. Joe Sambito pitched the ninth inning for the Astros, gaining his sixth save.

Knepper, the National League's earned run leader, had not allowed a run in 151-3 innings, but the Padres wasted little time in ending that streak.

Juan Bonilla drew a one-out, first-inning walk and Luis Salazar lined a double to the left field wall for his seventh consecutive hit to score the Padres' run.

Timely hits give Texas 5-3 win

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The Texas Rangers didn't get many hits Tuesday night — only seven — but they scored runs just about everytime they did and the result was a 5-3 victory over Minnesota.

"We got some timely hits tonight," said Manager Don Zimmer, whose club scored twice in the eighth on run-scoring singles by Al Oliver and Buddy Bell to snap a 3-3 standoff. "We did what we needed to do to win."

Oliver, a career .303 hitter who had grounded out weakly three times during the game against Jerry Koozman, finally put wood on a hanging curveball after the Twins had intentionally walked Bill Stein with two outs.

Mark Wagner, who had tripled, scored when Oliver laced his sharp single up the middle. It isn't often that an opposing team will pitch around someone else to set up Oliver with the winning run on third, but this time the Twins did and they paid the price.

"Tonight I was prepared for it," said Oliver, a lefthanded hitter. "I was 100 percent sure they'd walk him (Stein). I hadn't hit Koozman (a leftie) all night. It was the only curve he hung during the game."

Oliver's hit snapped a 3-3 tie and Bell then followed with another single to score

Stein, who was hitless in three at-bats and saw his 18-game hitting streak expire.

"It was the only thing to do," said Twins Manager Billy Gardner of the move. "Kooz had him handcuffed most of the night."

Zimmer agreed with Gardner, even though the strategy backfired.

"Everybody in the league knows Stein has been hot right now," Zimmer said.

"There was nothing wrong with that move. It just worked out nicely for us."

Danny Darwin, 6-4, gave up seven hits and struck out six before leaving the game with two outs and two on in the bottom of the eighth. Steve Comer came on to retire the last four Minnesota batters and record his fifth save.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A warrant has been issued for the arrest of actor Timothy Bottoms, who portrayed a law student in the film "The Paper Chase," on charges he failed to appear at a court hearing in his divorce case.

Superior Court Judge Charles Stevens issued the bench warrant Tuesday after finding Bottoms in contempt of court for failing to obey a previous order to return a 1973 Mercedes-Benz to his estranged wife, Alicia.

Mrs. Bottoms, 34, told the judge that when she and two sheriff's deputies went to Bottoms' Monterey County ranch recently, she saw the car but couldn't get it because the actor's father, James Bottoms, was armed with a rifle and refused to give it up.

The younger Bottoms, 29, was found in contempt last year for harassing his estranged wife, but the citation was dismissed after he promised to stop bothering her.

The couple were married in 1975 and had a son in 1977. A date for the divorce trial is expected to be set at a July 7 hearing.

ROME (AP) — Although Ann Odre's doctor says she could be released from the hospital this weekend, her daughter says her mother is still "very weak" from injuries suffered in the assassination attempt on Pope John Paul II.

Vatican Radio quoted Mrs. Odre's doctor, Federico Meneghini, as saying she appeared slightly pallid but was slowly regaining her strength. The 58-year-old, Buffalo, N.Y. woman was struck in the chest in the May 13 shooting attack on the pontiff, and she underwent surgery to remove her spleen.

"My mother is very weak," said her daughter, Joanna Kenjarski.

Vatican Radio also said Mrs. Odre has expressed a desire to meet the pope before she leaves for home, as did Rose Hall, the other American woman who suffered an elbow wound in the shooting.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Screen siren Rita Hayworth, the popular World War II pin-up girl whose marriages scandalized Hollywood, is suffering from a fast-developing form of senility, according to her lawyer.

Attorney Leonard Monroe, who also is Miss Hayworth's business manager, said in a court petition filed Monday that the 62-year-old actress is suffering from Alzheimer's disease and cannot care for herself. The petition asks that Monroe be named conservator over her medical and personal care as well as her property.

The petition says Miss Hayworth does not wish to appear in court but doesn't oppose Monroe's appointment.

The sultry star was married five times. All the marriages ended in divorce. Among her former husbands were actor and director Orson Welles, singer Dick Haymes and Aly Khan, a Moslem prince.

We must not say that she is dead, For she is just away
Away upon a journey
To a land that is bright and fair
And though we all miss her here
We know she's happy there
And memories of her will bring
New comfort every day
As we recall she is not dead
For she is just away

The pleas stemmed from a June 27, 1980, fire at Jim Bob's Game Room and a June 2, 1979 blaze at a Pasadena building adjacent to a game room furnished with machines from Wombles' jukebox and pinball distributorship.

Eighteen-year-old Rodney J. Ryans received probation for setting both fires.

Assistant District Attorney Bill Eggleston said the 1979 blaze burned a building whose owner had complained about the game room.

Wombles' company, the Dixie Distributing Co., employed Lunsford as general manager and Moss as a route man, Eggleston said.

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — An organization of Mexican journalists has selected Laredo Mayor Aldo Tatangelo and San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros to receive the Lopez-Portillo medal at a Mexico City ceremony on June 6.

Each year the Agrupacion Nacional Periodistica de Provenca chooses a number of Mexican mayors for the award, but Tatangelo and Cisneros are the only U.S. mayors to be so honored.

The two Texas mayors were selected for their contributions toward international good will.

As a member of the Mayors Advisory Board for three years, Tatangelo has accompanied Gov. Bill Clements on several visits with Mexican governors, and Cisneros in April became the first Mexican-American ever elected mayor of a major American city.

Selecting wedding gift is a problem

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Decisions, decisions. I have been wondering what to give Prince Charles and Lady Diana for a wedding present. Not knowing them all that well, I suppose we will only be invited to the church and not the reception. Still, noblesse oblige, honi soit etc.

As a matter of fact, I don't know Lady Diana at all, but I met the Royal Highness the Prince of Wales when he came to address our American Correspondents Association a few years back at the Savoy Hotel in London.

He told us a couple of jokes, one of which, being a British joke, I just got the other day and found it rather amusing. Something about a cricketer crossing the road at tea break to get out of the shade of the pavilion. A spin-off on "mad dogs and Englishmen." Anyhow, it was better than that one he told colonial Williamsburg about being a Redcoat.

If Prince Charles is going to go in for this sort of stand-up comedy, perhaps he would like the Collected Jokes and Stories by Myron Cohen, although they might be a bit Borscht Belt for British tastes.

Nostalgically relevant, I wonder if the Prince and Lady Diana would have any use for a macrame owl. Life sized. Pristine condition. Never hung. Or a fondu pot? We seem to have four of them around somewhere. Having spent most of my life sitting in the kitchen, I never have become a fondu fan nor of anything else bubble up right at the table. It would be no trouble at all breaking up a set.

I wonder if Harrod's has Lady Diana's pattern on display in the china department? We might manage to spring for a napkin ring or a toothpick holder or a gherkin fork, provided the set is set in 24 karat gold or hand painted by Her Majesty's minions at the Crown crockery works in Staffordshire.

Perhaps Fortnum & Mason's are doing (as the British say) gift certificates for a really ripe old wheel of Stilton or some of those oak smoked kippers that the British seem to love even more than warm beer. Cornish pasties and the other additional treats that contribute so much to the high incidence of dyspepsia in that other Eden.

Personally speaking, I wish I could bring myself to part with my treasured copy of "The Most of P.G. Wodehouse" as a wedding gift to the affianced royal duo, especially "Jeeves and the Song of Songs." Perhaps the BBC will do it as the book at bedtime.

Cutting dairy imports would be very costly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers would pay millions of dollars more and the Treasury would save very little if imports of the milk protein casein were restricted, Agriculture department analysts conclude.

If casein were subjected to either a tariff or a quota, the analysts say, "users of casein would shift to soy-based protein and other ingredients wherever possible, although product quality could suffer."

"Some casein use would be replaced by skim milk solids but not enough to significantly affect (government) purchases under the dairy price-support program," they add. "Import restrictions would increase the cost of producing goods containing casein and thus raise prices to consumers."

"This might add to inflationary pressures at a time when efforts are being made to reduce the general rise in prices," the analysts said.

The year-long department study on casein imports, issued Monday, also noted that the "imposition of import restrictions often has far-reaching impacts on relations between the United States and its trading partners." It said some casein exporting nations could retaliate by closing their markets to U.S. producers.

The study's conclusions refute arguments of House and Senate members that imported casein is competing directly with non-fat dry and skim milk in food uses, forcing the government to spend more to keep the prices of U.S. dairy commodities at specified levels.

Those legislators have been unsuccessful, however, in winning import restrictions on the grounds that casein is interfering with the operation of the dairy price-support program.

The International Trade Commission, in a 1979 study, found a statistical correlation between casein imports and the cost of the federal dairy price-support program during a five-year period in the 1970s.

William Leshar, the department's economics chief, said it may be several weeks before Agriculture Secretary John R. Block is prepared to make any recommendations based on the new study's conclusions. Block has said restrictions would run counter to the administration's free-market philosophy.

The United States imported about 152 million pounds of casein last year, using about 128 million pounds for industrial and food uses and storing the rest. More than two-thirds of the imports come from New Zealand, Ireland and Australia.

No casein has been produced in the United States since the late 1960s, partly because federal dairy price-support levels made production uncompetitive.

Casein is used in production of animal feed and pet food, coffee whitener, imitation dairy and meat products, medical and special diet products, glues and paint.

The 77-page USDA study said the rapidly expanding use of casein in food items, especially imitation cheese, could increase competition with non-fat dry and skim milk in the future.

"However, there has also been increased research and development activity directed towards discovery of viable alternatives to dairy protein in many uses," the study said.

"Any import restrictions that result in a higher price for casein would increase the research effort directed toward such development," it said. "Thus, domestically produced skim milk solids would meet considerable competition in the market even in the absence of imported casein."

Imposing the maximum 50 percent quota, cutting imports to about 76 million pounds a year, would more than double casein prices to the equivalent protein cost of non-fat dry milk, the study said.

But the high price would reduce consumer demand for some products and force some manufacturers of others to begin using non-dairy ingredients, it said, meaning demand for casein would exceed the quota by only 3 million pounds.

Making up the difference with non-fat dry milk would save the government only $9.3 million in price-support payments, less than 1 percent of the cost of this year's dairy subsidies, the report said, while driving consumer costs for the affected products up $115 million.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Farmers Home Administration made six major changes aimed at tightening operation of farm disaster emergency loan program.

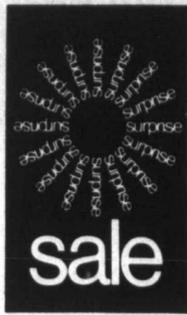

"The emergency loan program was never intended to compete with commercial credit," said acting FmHA Administrator Dwight Calhoun.

"Emergency loans often completely replaced commercial financing by offering loans for purposes and on terms with which commercial lenders cannot compete," Calhoun said. "It is important that we now take action to enable FmHA to use its resources to assist farmers who truly need federal assistance in overcoming disaster-related difficulties."

The new regulations will affect emergency loan applications completed by natural disasters after May 26.

The changes call for:

- The agriculture secretary instead of state FmHA directors make a disaster declaration if more than 25 farmers are involved in any one county.
- A ban on using emergency loans to expand farm operations beyond the normal operation before a disaster.
- Borrowers to obtain the minimum level of all-risk crop insurance if available.
