Pampa Pride tops at Hawaiian parade

HONOLULU — The Pride of Pampa High School Band took First Place Marching Band - Division A, First Place Outstanding Marching Unit - Flag Division and Outstanding Unit of the 65th Annual King Kamehameha Celebration Parade in Honolulu Saturday.

A cheer of 400 voices filled the air when the Pampa High School Band awards were announced at 2 p.m. (Hawaiian time) at the judging stand in Fort De Russy.

Both Hawaiians and tourists lining King Avenue clapped and cheered loudly during the parade when the "Pride" passed. "We love your band," the crowds said.

Band members were not sure they did well when they were in front of the judging stand, but the first place awards showed they thrilled the judges as well as the crowds.

Jim Duggan, Pampa High School Band director, marching in front of the band, just kept smiling as the crowds cheered.

There was a party at the Holiday Inn Waikiki Hotel Saturday for the band members as they looked forward to their first free day on the sunny Hawaiian beaches and shopping areas.

Early Saturday morning there wasn't a trace of noticeable nervousness in the Pampa High School Band members just before the main event - the King Kamehameha Parade.

Band members were transporting their equipment to the parade site early Saturday and all of Hawaii was ready to celebrate the parade.

The 4.3-mile long parade started at 9:30 a.m. and wound its way through the business district of Honolulu, past the Ala Moana Shopping Center, along Kalakua Avenue, past the Ilikai Hotel, through the central Waikiki Beach area, past the Holiday Inn and into Queen Kapiolani Park where it terminated.

The King Kamehameha Day Parade was initiated by King Kamehameha IV in honor of the First King Kamehameha's birthday. The first King Kamehameha is known through the Hawaiian islands as the king who destroyed the aristocracy on the islands and established a free government.

Several Pampans on the Hawaii trip were seen sporting uncomfortable pink sunburns - but fortunately - no reddened skins have been noticed on band members. The Friday trip to Sea Life Park kept most of the group outdoors for several hours, thus the sunburns.

The large number of Pampans arriving in Hawaii has produced several interesting elevator encounters. The friendly Panhandle groups always strike up a conversation with whoever - often to find another Panhandle neighbor enjoying the visit.

On Friday night a part of the Hawaiian group, including Virgie Wesner, Martha Hadley, Mr. and Mrs. Don Butler and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baxter found time to see the Jim Nabors Show.

Nabors reportedly talks much like Gomer Pyle but it was a very friendly show and the Pampa group enjoyed every minute. The first view of Nabors was an impersonation of a Hawaiian tourist - complete with flashing flash cubes and camera. To make the show more memorable the audience participated in celebrating Nabors' birthday complete with two cakes.

The Pampa High School band members were unable to attend the Nabors Show as Band Director Jim Duggan enforces a 9:30 p.m. lights-out. However one night due to Tavana's Polynesian Review - lights-out was extended to 10:30 p.m.

The weather conditions on the Pacific island are clear and warm. The Hawaiian humidity, which is described as a constant mist, has not been a problem.

On Sunday, with the main event now completed, the group will attend a morning worship service in the hotel and then off to Kuloa Beach for a picnic.

Reagan's eco policies criticized

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The nation's mayors opened their annual meeting Saturday with a blast at President Reagan's manners as well as his economic policies, accusing him of snubbing their chairman and proposing budget and tax cuts that could destroy the cities.

Mayor Henry Maier of Milwaukee even called Reagan's treatment of Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., "shameful," and demanded a White House apology.

Republican mayors fought back as a highly partisan split developed among the mayors, but even the GOP city executives called for more local voice in the programs that Reagan wants to turn over to the states through block grants.

While local officials have been aiming most of the rhetoric, criticism and fears recently at state governments which would administer the new grants, the fire turned directly on Reagan Saturday in the first frontal assault on the new president by a major block of public officials.

Hatcher, the conference president, accused Reagan of "a cavalier abandonment of the cities," in his plan to turn over to the states many programs now funded and directed from Washington.

But Hatcher and Maier, both Democrats, also accused Reagan of deliberately shutting Hatcher and other critics out of White House conferences on the economic program and of offering mayors "a snow job" instead of serious consultation.

"Just this past week about 60 mayors have been invited to the White House," Hatcher said. "There was a purposeful exclusion of the president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors from those meetings."

Maier was even more critical, saying "I don't think that there is any parallel in my memory" to the White House treatment of Hatcher. He said mayors had met with past presidents of both parties and "didn't go in there to get a snow job, and I can't remember but one instance when a member of the opposition was blocked from entering the White House."

"This has been a horrible thing for Mayor Hatcher," Maier said. "This man particularly has had to do a great deal of soul searching, and he has had to come out expressing his views. And I think it is shameful that the office of the president allows itself to be soiled by this kind of pettiness."

"I also think it is a bad mistake to just take our mayors in there and not allow them to come forward, or ask them to come forward with our views," Maier said.

Maier said as a Democrat he had argued forcefully with then-President Jimmy Carter when such issues had come up at the Carter White House, "and I think that all the mayors should have the same opportunity with the present White House."

"I think an apology is due Mayor Richard Hatcher," Maier said, "not just because he's president of this conference, but because he's one of the outstanding men in America today."

Hatcher, speaking at the conference's opening news conference, said Reagan plans "to dismantle the intergovernmental relationship that has developed over the years between the federal, state and local government."

"President Reagan stands ready to dismantle the direct federal-city relationship," Hatcher said.

"He seeks to substitute instead some still undefined concept of state's rights, which would make cities dependent on rural-suburban dominated state legislatures," he added.

"This new state's first concept would abandon national laws and national goals at the expense of the cities," Hatcher said. "I reject this cavalier abandonment of the cities, which ignores the wisdom and historical precedence of the last 3 1/2 decades."

Hatcher called Reagan's proposed budget cuts "disproportionate, unjust and uncivil" and said his proposed tax cuts "simply mean that cities once again will be forced to take the brunt of the nation's economic policies."

Mayor Richard Carver of Peoria, Ill., a former conference president and one of the country's leading Republican mayors, challenged the Democratic criticism, contending "There is no proposal that I am aware of that would change the federal relationship with the cities."

Carver pointed out that the highly prized Community Development Block Grants and Comprehensive Employment Training Act funds still would flow directly to the larger cities.

Summit aided Mexican relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although enormous problems remain, last week's meetings between President Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo went a long way toward eliminating the mutual suspicions which have been so much a part of relations between the two countries in recent years.

"A lot of my Mexican friends have been calling me and saying this was the best thing that has happened to our relations in 20 years," said an American expert with long experience in Mexican affairs.

Normally, when a foreign head of government comes to Washington on an official visit, he has a 90-minute meeting with the president at the White House, joins the president again for a state dinner — and then departs.

Given the large stake the U.S. has in establishing good relations with Mexico, Reagan decided the traditional format was inadequate to the task at hand.

So he invited Lopez Portillo to the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., on Monday where they spent all afternoon and evening and part of the next morning. The discussions then continued back at the White House. The two leaders spent almost 20 hours together.

Lopez Portillo was impressed. After a state luncheon Tuesday, he said in a toast to Reagan, "The relationship for some reason or another had always been a tense one. But for the first time now, I have felt totally relaxed."

Reagan's election last November did not appear to augur an improvement in Mexican-American relations. Unlike Reagan his predecessor Jimmy Carter spoke Spanish. Carter also took more interest than Reagan in Third World problems and, ideologically, was closer to Lopez Portillo than was Reagan.

On the question of Cuba, for example, Reagan and Lopez Portillo could not be further apart. The Mexican leader has called Cuba the Latin American country "most dear" to Mexico. Reagan has suggested he would consider a blockade of Cuba as one way of penalizing Soviet adventurism.

Their summit meeting did not bring Reagan and Lopez Portillo any closer on the Cuba question, and neither side expected that would be the case.

But both sides agree at least the mood has changed.

Teen-ager fires blanks at Queen

LONDON (AP) — A British teen-ager, described as a jobless former marine wearing a Prince Charles and Lady Diana souvenir button, ran up and fired six blanks at Queen Elizabeth II from a range of 10 feet Saturday as she rode horseback through London in a pageant watched by millions.

The monarch was startled but unhurt and continued on to the Trooping of the Color, the biggest ceremonial event of the royal calendar marking her official birthday.

Several policemen and a scarlet-coated British army guardsman pounced on the young man, who reportedly had been waiting hours for the monarch to appear. As he was dragged away in handcuffs by agents of Scotland Yard's Special Branch there were shouts in the crowd of "lynch him."

Authorities identified him as 17-year-old Marcus Simon Sarjeant of Folkstone, England, and charged him under the 1842 Treason Act with "willfully discharging at the person of Her Majesty the Queen a blank cartridge pistol with intent to alarm her." The charge carries a maximum penalty of seven years in prison, Sarjeant was to appear Monday in Bow Street magistrates court.

Neighbors of Sarjeant described him as a "quiet, well-behaved youth who never got into trouble." Friends said he joined the Royal Marines last year but left after the three-month trial period because he did not like the "bullying."

The 55-year-old monarch's horse, Burmese, reared at the noise of the blanks, and one witness reported a "look of fear" flashed across the queen's face. Her husband, Prince Philip, and the heir to the throne, Prince Charles, spurred their mounts to shield the queen, seen by thousands in the crowd and millions more on television.

But Elizabeth, dressed in scarlet military tunic and black riding skirt, controlled the horse, and within a minute she was again smiling and waving.

The attack was believed to be the first such assault on a British monarch. Scotland Yard sources, who asked not to be identified, said it was certain to lead to a tightening of security around the royal family — particularly before the wedding of Prince Charles to Lady Diana Spencer on July 29. Throngs of visitors are expected to jam London for the event.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said the gunman, who had been standing in the crowd lining the royal route, fired the blanks from a "good replica" pistol — a realistic copy of a handgun that can be adapted to shoot bullets.

Haig will arrive in Peking today

HONG KONG (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. will explore ways to bolster China's defenses against increasing Soviet military pressure during his visit to Peking, a senior U.S. official said Saturday.

Haig, who is carrying a letter from President Reagan for China's leaders, will leave here Sunday for a four-day visit to Peking, the first by a top official of the Reagan administration.

Officials declined to discuss the contents of the letter, but it was believed to contain an invitation for Premier Zhao Ziyang to visit the U.S.

A U.S. official who briefed reporters on the trip Saturday said a main topic in the talks with Chinese leaders, including Defense Minister Geng Biao, will be ways of confronting Soviet military moves in the region.

"We plan to listen to his views on how the United States might be helpful in insuring China has an adequate defense against increasing Soviet pressure, direct and indirect — indirect primarily through Vietnamese proxies," the official said.

"The official said Haig is willing to discuss the broad framework" of arms sales to Peking. However, officials have said they don't anticipate much Chinese interest in purchasing large quantities of U.S. arms.

Foreign military experts said China is more interested in upgrading its armed forces with sophisticated technology, rather than in purchasing expensive jets or tanks.

The official briefed reporters with the understanding he not be identified. But he holds a very senior rank in the State Department and in the administration and is in a position to accurately reflect Haig's own thinking.

Haig was in Hong Kong for two days of rest and preparation for his visit to China. Following his visit to Peking, he will travel to the Philippines and New Zealand for high-level conferences before returning to Washington to report to the president.

Rescue abandoned, Italians angry

FRASCATI, Italy (AP) — Italians by the thousands shouted obscenities and offered last-minute rescue suggestions in telephone calls to authorities Saturday as workers abandoned efforts to save 6-year-old Alfredo Rampi, trapped in a muddy artesian well more than 72 hours.

"There has been no sign of life for more than 12 hours and it's unrealistic to expect him to be alive," said Dr. Evasio Fava, one of two physicians who had been monitoring the child's condition with listening devices.

An amateur cave explorer, who slithered 200 feet down the well near Frascati, a hillside community nestled among vineyards and olive trees 15 miles south of Rome, reported at dawn that the child's body showed no signs of life.

"He's rigid. He's stiff." 24-year-old Donato Caruso told rescue workers at the surface via walkie-talkie. A crowd of several hundred bystanders, including President Sandro Pertini, groaned. The boy's mother, Franca, left the site in tears.

The 4-foot-3-inch Caruso entered the shaft after five other volunteers failed to rescue Alfredo from the well, which townspeople dubbed "Il Maladetto" — "The Damned" — after the child's fall. The spelunker tried, hanging head down, to attach a handcuff to the boy's wrist, but it slipped off.

After Caruso emerged, shivering from the cold, authorities said they would not send any one else down the well. "It's not worth risking other human lives," a rescue supervisor told the Italian news agency ANSA.

Instead, he said, workers would finish drilling a parallel shaft in hopes of reaching the boy's body.

Alfredo's father, Fernando, rushed back to the site in panic when he heard that workers had decided to resume drilling the parallel shaft.

"If the drill starts again my son will fall even deeper to where the water is ... and then it really will all be over," he said.

Since young Alfredo stumbled into the well Wednesday evening while playing at his grandparents' home, millions of Italians have followed the rescue effort in television broadcasts from the scene.

The Italian president, his dark-blue suit covered with dust, kept an all-night vigil near the mouth of the well.

Syrians down Israeli spy plane

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) - Syrian jets shot down an Israeli spy plane near Damascus Saturday and Syrian armored units began war maneuvers, the military announced. Israel conceded a pilotless drone was apparently shot down over Syria or Lebanon.

The action rekindled the six-week-old missile crisis between the two Middle East antagonists that had been dormant since Israeli warplanes raided and destroyed Iraq's nuclear reactor near Baghdad last Sunday. U.S. envoy, Philip C. Habib flew to Saudi Arabia to continue efforts to defuse the crisis.

Syrian armored forces, backed by air force jets and helicopter gunships, staged war exercises designed to train in rapid intervention to "repulse a surprise enemy attack and then crush enemy defenses," the official Sana news agency reported.

The location of the drills that were shown later on Syria's state television was not disclosed. The commanding general of the maneuvers was quoted as telling his troops to "keep up combat readiness for the decisive battle against the enemy."

A military communique on the downing of the plane said "air force jet fighters intercepted the intruding aircraft and shot it down northeast of Damascus." It did not indicate what kind of plane was brought down or whether it was piloted, saying only "the wreckage has been collected."

In Tel Aviv, the Israeli military command said an unmanned drone failed to return to base and apparently was downed during a "routine flight" over Syria and Lebanon.

Habib was in Saudi Arabia on his second visit to the oil-rich kingdom since the missile crisis arose. Diplomatic sources could not say how long Habib would stay but said he was to meet Prince Fahd in Riyadh after a briefing by U.S. Ambassador Robert Nuemann in Jidda.

Saudi Arabia sent two emissaries here for talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad after Habib's trip to Riyadh last month.

Habib's efforts to defuse the Mideast tensions have been complicated by Israel's destruction of a nuclear reactor on the outskirts of Baghdad, the Iraqi capital, a week ago.

The Israelis used U.S.-supplied warplanes in what was seen in Washington as a possible violation of its ban on Israeli use of American arms for offensive purposes.

Przemysl and Rynik have been targets, according to the Polish media, and dissidents have been reported distributing pamphlets denouncing the Soviets.

A letter from the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee to its counterpart in the Polish party earlier this month was sharply critical of "anti-Soviet" leaflets and posters - and of the inability of Polish leaders to subdue the independent labor federation. The letter gave rise to new fears that the Soviets might interfere militarily in Poland.

Letters supporting club missing

MCLEAN - McLean resident Neal Middleton, who tried earlier this year to establish a private club in his McLean Dixie Restaurant, revealed last week that an inspection by the US Postal Service concluded that 26 letters written to Gray County Carl Kennedy in favor of the McLean club - never reached Kennedy's office.

Postal Inspector Steven Atterbury of Lubbock, in a letter to Middleton, explained that due to lack further information in the case - no added action would be taken.

The postal investigation was initiated by Middleton in March. Middleton had expressed an interest in establishing the private club, which would serve alcoholic beverages, in McLean. Several people made their objections to the club known, including McLean ministers and Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan.

Judge Carl Kennedy was called into the club issue when it was made known that the awarding of the license was based on the approval of the county judge, the county attorney and the county sheriff.

The county attorney had no legal reason to object to the club and the county sheriff made his objection known. It was up to Judge Kennedy, who expressed a desire to represent the people on the issue and asked for their opinion in the form of letters.

On March 17 Judge Kennedy issued the statement of his objection to the club - based on 248 letters opposed to the club and 19 letters in favor of the club.

Middleton conceded at the time, "the private club issue was dead but contended that he personally knew of several letters that were written in favor of the club in addition to the 19 received by Judge Kennedy."

"Where did the letters go," Middleton wanted to know and he called in the postal inspection office to find out.

Postal Inspector Atterbury interviewed five McLean residents who also claimed that they were aware of 26 letters not received by Judge Kennedy.

"Both the inspector and I have come to the conclusion that the mail was definitely tampered with," Middleton said Friday.

Middleton said, "Judge Kennedy did not have to ask for the letters on the private club issue - but in fairness he felt that was the only way to see what the people wanted. Kennedy cooperated with me completely during the poll."

"The mail from the McLean post office goes first to Amarillo where it is rerouted and then to Pampa. Atterbury talked to postal employees in both McLean and in Pampa," Middleton said.

"Right now the private club is a dead issue again because it is a very busy season for me. However I might consider following the issue later. The main reason for this inspection of the missing letters is to show the people of McLean that I was not going into the private club business with only 19 supporters."

Atlanta launches ambitious program to protect children while playing

ATLANTA (AP) - A city fearful that a child killer may treat summer's school vacation as an invitation to kill again has launched an ambitious summer recreation program called "Safe Summer '81."

About 8,000 children ages 6 to 15 streamed to 61 recreation sites this past week to ensure that, as one 11-year-old boy said, "We won't be killed."

Children at Anderson Park Recreation Center seemed carefree at play under the hot sun, but they knew why they were at the park in northwest Atlanta.

"So we won't be kidnapped," one boy said.

"We need this," another said.

The program is a response to the series of 28 unsolved murders of young blacks in the city since July 1979. All but five of the victims were children or teen-agers, and most apparently were abducted while they roamed the city's streets alone.

Officials say they hope the program of all-day activities eventually will attract 15,000 youngsters and that private agencies will draw up to 17,000 more. In addition, Fulton County and suburban DeKalb County this week will start programs expected to serve several thousand more children, county officials said.

The agencies involved got partial federal funding to operate the $4 million program, which is costing Atlanta $1.2 million more than its normal summer recreation program.

Security measures include three daily roll calls, color-coded T-shirts for children and staff and frequent checks by police. Officials even require reporters to get one-day permits to visit.

"That's another safety measure," said Parks and Recreation Commissioner Gerri Elder. "You never know, sometimes people can disguise themselves as press people."

Wilkins said the program opens at 7:30 a.m., and after roll call, children spend the morning on lessons in soccer, basketball, softball, swimming and crafts.

Mortorized hang glider aids March of Dimes

Why would a seemingly sane man, known as "Bruce the Spruce Goose" want to fly a mortorized hang glider from El Paso to 10 Texas and New Mexico cities and back?

Surprisingly enough, Bruce Thompson, 22, of El Paso is combining his passion for hang gliding and his concern for children born with birth defects to help raise funds for the March of Dimes.

Thompson will be landing in the Coronado Shopping Center parking lot Sunday sometime between 3 to 5 p.m. A special runway for the craft will be blocked off in the parking area.

"We know it's dangerous and kinda crazy," Thompson said. "If I fall, though, I may get hurt but I'll heal pretty soon. A child born with birth defects has to live with that the rest of their lives."

Shallow Waterbeds, Inc. is sponsoring Thompson's three week glide through Texas and New Mexico. Thompson, himself, is a waterbed salesman and assistant manager at an El Paso store.

Thompson said it was his idea to use the mortorized hang glider to promote the March of Dimes. "It was my idea back in November. I didn't even fly a mortorized hang glider when I first thought of it."

Although he was hang gliding back in 1976, he did not begin flying with a mortorized glider until the first of this year.

His journey began June 6 in El Paso, and he has already bumped through some bad winds and survived a couple of "hairy" takeoffs. But Thompson said it's worth the trouble.

"I just want to see how much I can raise for them (the March of Dimes)," Thompson commented. He said in the two cities he has landed in, $800 has been raised for the prevention of and assistance to those who are born with congenital defects.

The "Spruce Goose" described his hang glider as light blue with yellow wheels, a canard wing in front of the main wing, and in the rear a push-prop engine. The name of his glider is "Pterodactyl Traveler."

He said he will fly 50 to 75 miles before landing for a pit stop where his craft is serviced by a four member pit crew. The crew members are: Jessie Keese, Victor Hugo, Terry Overstreet, and Russell Page.

The crew travels on the road under Thompson in a recreational vehicle christened "Apollo," with a painting of the Apollo aircraft on the side.

"Everyone knows who we are, anyway," Thompson said, laughing.

Thompson said he challenges the people of Pampa to turn out in the forces he has met so far in his trip. Hobbs, N. M. citizens numbered 1,000 to see him fly and to contribute to the March, while 3,000 persons turned out in Clovis, N. M.

Recent canine parvovirus increase noted

The recent rise in temperatures has brought an increase in the incidence of canine parvovirus, according to information from the Texas Veterinary Medical Association, (TVMA) and Pampa veterinarians have started treating more cases of Parvo with a new parvo-vaccine.

"A survey of the disease shows an apparent correlation between the warmer weather conditions and the number of dogs infected," TVMA information stated.

"Parvovirus is a potentially fatal intestinal disease that has been diagnosed in a few Pampa dogs recently," Dr. Ron Hendrick of the Hendrick Animal Clinic said.

The disease is highly contagious and dog owners are urged to vaccinate their animals.

Close contact between animals is the likely factor in the spread of the infection. Cleanup and sanitation are crucially important since the disease appears to spread principally through contact with contaminated feces, TVMA research has indicated.

"There is a supposedly superior vaccine available this year," Dr. Hendrick said.

"We believe that parvovirus is a mutant of feline or cat distemper and it is not considered a threat to other species or to humans.

"Dogs who have the disease succumb rapidly - they lose their appetite, become lethargic, begin to vomit, and sometimes have a watery diarrhea. The symptoms cause dehydration and an untended dog can die within 24 - hours," Dr. Hendrick said.

The TVMA research finds that vaccination still provides the best protection for dogs. Pet owners are also reminded that dog runs, cages, food bowls and other equipment should be thoroughly disinfected with a diluted chlorine bleach. One part bleach in 30 parts water is effective even though the disease is extremely resistant to heat and many other disinfectants.

Realtors urge residents 'Pause for the Pledge'

The Pampa Board of Realtors, Make America Better Committee, is inviting the residents of Pampa and the surrounding communities to join the thousands of Realtors across the nation with President Reagan today in Pledging Allegiance to the Flag.

The Pledge will be the Second Annual Flag Day observance known as "Pause for the Pledge."

The Realtors believe that citizens everywhere welcome an opportunity to demonstrate their faith in their nation and privileges they enjoy as Americans.

The "Pause for the Pledge" will be observed at 5 this afternoon.

Houston man drowns in flood waters

By The Associated Press
 A Houston man drowned in high waters Saturday as rivers and creeks over wide stretches of Texas bolted out of their banks for the third straight day, closing streets and highways and threatening homes.
 The body of Billy McFerrin, 45, was found about 4:25 p.m., about 16 hours after a pickup truck was washed into Bedias Creek in Madison County.
 McFerrin's body was recovered on a barbed wire fence, about 15 feet from the truck, after the high water dropped about a foot, said Department of Public Safety Trooper Charles DeFord.
 DPS officials said McFerrin was one of four people who managed to climb from the pickup after it plunged into the flooded creek.
 The other three reached safety, the DPS said.
 Rescue workers in Frio County late Friday recovered the body of Alfred Breeden, 82, of Devine, after he was swept away when a wall of water overturned a fire truck that was carrying Breeden and three fellow campers to safety.

 Officials also said 33 Campfire girls had to be airlifted out of their campsite in the northern part of the county when their camp was threatened by rising water.
 None of the girls were injured.
 In Austin, where a flash flood warning was issued Saturday, creeks went out of their banks for the third day in a row and some residents left their homes. Heavy rains forced postponement of the state schoolboy baseball playoffs.
 In San Antonio, fire department crews rescued a 73-year-old woman whose car had stalled in high water on a city street.
 Officials in San Marcos said all streets leading in and out of the city were closed. Authorities evacuated "quite a few people" from their homes, but no injuries were reported, according to police dispatcher Sherry Sanderson.

"If we could keep it from raining for about an hour we'd be all right," Ms. Sanderson said.
 The National Weather Service issued flood warnings for several South Texas rivers Saturday, predicting flooding of low-lying areas and the closing of roads and highways.
 The warnings were issued for the Brazos, Colorado, Neches, Lavaca, Guadalupe, Frio, Trinity and San Jacinto Rivers.
 Warnings also were issued for San Miguel, Caney, Village, Caney and Peach Creeks.
 The NWS said moderate lowland flooding could be expected along the Colorado River from LaGrange to Bay City in the next several days, with the river cresting from one to six feet above bank-full.
 Flooding on the Trinity from Goodrich to Moss Bluff was also predicted for the next several days, with the river expected to rise from two to eight feet above flood stage.

HALF OF HIS QUADS. Joe Muench of Las Cruces, N.M., proudly holds two of his new children Saturday — half of the quadruplets delivered Friday by his wife, Sheila, at the University of New Mexico Hospital. The babies, two boys and two girls, were born in the span of three minutes and were reported in good condition Saturday. All four could not be brought together for a picture because of physical restrictions in the newborn intensive care unit. (AP Laserphoto)

Woman uses fertility drugs, gives birth to quadruplets

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Joe and Sheila Muench wanted another baby before they were in their 40s. At delivery time, they got four within three minutes.
 "The mildest fertility drug the doctors prescribe" gave the Las Cruces, N.M. couple two girls and two boys Friday.
 "One of the doctors at the hospital told me that he prescribes that drug like water," Muench said Saturday.
 He said the doctors aren't sure if the drug had any effect, but he's convinced.
 Muench, 33, and his wife, 31, wanted another child "before we were in our 40s" and the fertility drug seemed to be a good idea.
 The couple has one other child, Joseph, 5. Muench said when he told his son of the news in a telephone call, the youngster said, "I guess I have to start being a big brother now."

have exhibited none of the conditions that are typical in premature babies.
 A hospital spokeswoman, Dell Kump, said the first quad, a boy weighing 3 pounds, 15 ounces, was born at 2:37 p.m. Friday. He was followed in quick succession by a girl weighing 2 pounds, 14 ounces, a girl weighing 3 pounds, 3 ounces, and a boy weighing 3 pounds, 5 ounces.
 The largest baby measured 17 1/2 inches.
 Muench said the doctors told him his wife and children can return home by the middle of the week, but the quadruplets will be admitted to the hospital in Las Cruces for continued observation.
 He said each one must weigh at least 4 pounds before they will be able to come home.
 Muench said the quadruplets were no surprise because he and his wife learned in early January through ultra-sound sonar tests she was carrying quads.

 He said his wife has the honor of naming the babies. He said some of the favorite names for the girls are Courtney, Marissa and Mary, while some of the boys names considered are Ryan, Matthew or Travis.
 "My wife sat there and looked at them last night trying to figure out which one looks like a Ryan," he said.
 The babies were in bassinets labeled Baby A, B, C and D Saturday afternoon when photographers were allowed in the intensive care unit to take pictures.
 Muench said the biggest worry on the minds of he and his wife is the diaper bill. He hopes that friends will be able to donate some baby clothes.
 "We did save all of Joseph's clothes and about 40 pairs of his shoes," he said.

Victoria man charged with murder surrenders

HOUSTON (AP) — A Victoria man questioned in the slaying of U.S. District Judge John Wood Jr. has turned himself in following his murder indictment in the slaying of a long-time friend.
 Hampton Robinson III was free after posting $25,000 bond with the Harris County sheriff's office late Friday.
 The son of a prominent Houston surgeon is charged in the May 12 death of William Scott Green, 35, of Stafford. Robinson was indicted June 4, but the indictment was made public this week even though he had not been arrested.
 Green's body was found in a dirt bike field in Missouri City. He had been shot twice in the head.
 Don Stricklin, Harris County assistant district attorney, said Robinson is an acquaintance of Charles Harrelson, a convicted hit-man who is a suspect in the 1979 Wood slaying. Both men have been before a federal grand jury investigating that case.
 Robinson was sentenced to one year in jail and fined $2,000 in after being convicted of negligent homicide in the 1976 slaying of Victoria rancher Thomas Taylor Bauer, 32.

Pilot rents car after crashing twice in one day

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It wasn't the forced landing on an Austin highway that convinced Don Imhoff of Baton Rouge that it might not be a good day for flying.
 It was the second emergency landing of the day — a crash landing at an airport here — that sent Imhoff to the rent-a-car desk.
 "I'll remember this day for a long, long time," the chemist said Friday after his single-engine plane failed twice. "This has been quite a trip."
 Imhoff, his 9-year-old daughter Kim, his brother Ken and sister-in-law Lou Ella were headed home to Louisiana from El Paso when the trouble started.
 The private plane was scheduled for a refueling in Austin. About eight miles from the airport Imhoff heard trouble.

 "The engines started sputtering, and I radioed the tower and told them I was out of gas and was not going to make it," Imhoff said. Airport officials advised Imhoff to set the plane down on Loop 360, a half-mile south of where it intersects with U.S. 183.
 "There were some cars on the road on the way down, but there weren't really any very close," he said.
 Imhoff gilded the unfueled plane in for the highway landing. Nobody was hurt.
 After 90 minutes on the road the plane was ready to make the short hop to the airport here. The passengers went by car. Imhoff took the plane back up.

 Firemen at the scene noticed the plane's landing gear had been damaged by the highway landing. Imhoff knew nothing about it.
 "I wasn't told of the problem until I was approaching the airport. They wanted me to circle so that they could see how bad the problem was," he said.
 The left side of the rear landing gear collapsed when the plane landed at the airport. It skidded on its belly and tilted onto its left wing.
 For the second time Friday, Imhoff walked away from an emergency landing.

Houston banker dealt secretly with Latins

HOUSTON (AP) — Wealthy Latin Americans from several nations entrusted millions of investment dollars to a former Allied Bank senior vice president who never told his employer, the fired banker said in a 500-page deposition.
 W. Darrell Higgins, accused of siphoning $17 million of bank funds over 10 years, gave the testimony in the bank's state district court lawsuit against him.
 Wiggins, 49, denied throughout his testimony that he profited from the alleged scheme. In fact, he said, most of the $17 million was interest charges that built up over 10 years and currently owed to two New York banks with which he was dealing. The banks are not accused of knowing about the purported scheme.

 Wiggins says he was almost caught several times and was surprised routine auditing did not expose him.
 Allied President Walter Johnson and Joe Dooling, an accountant and former FBI agent, confronted Wiggins in Denver six months ago. Wiggins admitted the scheme and said he had closed his last account with the Latin Americans the week before.
 According to his deposition, Wiggins began using banker's acceptances to lend money to a group of Mexican businessmen whose application for a loan had been turned down.
 Banker's acceptances are negotiable instruments which commit a bank to pay a certain amount on behalf of a customer. They can be sold to other banks.
 Without his bank's knowledge, Wiggins said, he would create fictitious banker's acceptances and sell them to banks in New York, then intercept the funds as they were sent to Allied.
 Wiggins said he sold his first false banker's acceptance along with some legitimate ones. He advanced the money to the customer, but the company never repaid the loan.

 "I decided I would go through the fictitious thing one more time and give them another period of time to do it," Wiggins testified.
 "I kept thinking that somewhere down the line I could make enough money and gradually reduce that, and if my luck held out and I was not found out, that I could make enough money outside the banking industry to pay that off," Wiggins said.

Ellington AFB candidate for refugee detention center

HOUSTON (AP) — Ellington Air Force Base is being considered by the Reagan Administration as a possible detention site for Cuban, Haitian and other refugees, a government source has told the Houston Post.
 The Post reported in its Saturday editions that a cabinet-level task force headed by Attorney General William French Smith lists Ellington among five possible government sites for refugee detention centers.
 The source said the panel's recommendations are scheduled to go to President Reagan sometime in the next two weeks.
 Congressman Ron Paul, who represents the 22nd District where Ellington is located, said he "won't hesitate" to block the detention center if residents of the community oppose it.
 Paul said he wants Ellington, which was deactivated in 1976, reopened as an Air Force facility. The base is now run by the General Services Administration.

The Post reported that other government installations being considered as refugee detention centers include Craig Air Force Base, Ala.; Hamilton Air Force Base, Calif.; Roanoke Rapids Air Force Base in North Carolina; and a Department of Labor facility in Indiana.

Local opinion

Local citizens are not informed on legislation

It is clearly evident that most Pampans have almost no idea what is going on in our municipal government.

Five private citizens stood before city commissioners in city hall Tuesday and, sparing no words, said they were against a proposed ordinance allowing the city of Pampa, through the Pampa Police Department, to go on private property and take what the ordinance has defined as "abandoned" or "junked" vehicles.

Harry West stood before commissioners, holding a petition he said was signed by 400 persons protesting the ordinance.

No one requested to read the petition. West did not offer to show it to them.

West said later he feared retaliation measures against the persons signing it.

We feel that had they seen it, city officials would have pooh-poohed it as being invalid.

The reason for the petition's invalidity?

The city charter has outlined a set of procedures to follow for submitting a proper petition for consideration.

How many Pampa citizens know that?

Certainly it would be convenient to say "It's invalid," at the presentation of a large negative petition when commissioners are preparing to pass a measure they favor.

In the meeting Tuesday, West said he had contacted a large number of people against the ordinance.

Mayor Ray Thompson answered, "I have seen no vast uprising of citizens."

No, you haven't. Mayor Thompson. We feel that is because most citizens of Pampa do not know what that ordinance says.

They had not seen the ordinance nor had the opportunity to read it before its passage. Not because it was impossible, but because they had no knowledge of how to obtain the nine-page legal document.

They did not know that any day they could have walked into City Manager Mack Wofford's office and asked for a copy of it.

One person commented he did not even know where the city manager's office is. Besides, he said, it's closed after normal working hours.

In addition, few people in Pampa who do not personally know the city manager would feel comfortable walking into his office to ask for a copy of an ordinance.

Because of this, we believe Pampans were not able to read the ordinance to judge for themselves whether their rights will be violated or not.

Auto ills begin here

The restraints on auto exports adopted by the Japanese government serve a purpose.

But, according to the man credited with coaxing the cutbacks, they are unlikely to offer much help to the ailing U.S. auto industry. William E. Brock, the U.S. special trade representative, believes that the chief value in the agreement is that it discouraged congressional settlement for protectionist legislation. The result could have

The city, directed by state statutes, paid to have the entire ordinance printed in The Pampa News as a legal advertisement, and it was included in Friday's edition — three days after its passage by the city commission.

Although reading the ordinance in Friday's paper would have been too late for those who were interested in whether it was passed or not, it would be interesting to know how many persons were aware that it was printed.

At the commission meeting, someone commented, "If there are so many people who are against the ordinance, where are they?"

They were working, the same as those people for the ordinance who didn't show up. How many employers will smilingly let their employees off to attend a city commission meeting at 9:30 a.m.?

Whether for or against the ordinance, Pampans did not make their wishes known at the start of the procedure to make this proposal law.

Again, we feel the reason for the lack of response in this and other issues brought before the commission is that the majority of the local citizens do not know that a public hearing is conducted on an ordinance. It is read once for approval by the commission and read a second time for final approval. At this point, the ordinance is official.

Also, Pampans failed to let their elected officials know their thoughts on the abandoned vehicles ordinance.

Like all humans, city commissioners form their opinions by whatever input they receive.

Tuesday, three of the commissioners contended they had received only positive input, with the exception of one telephone call to Commissioner O.M. Prigmore.

A fourth commissioner, Melvin Hammons, said he had some persons ask him about the ordinance. He was ambivalent about their reactions.

By the time Pampans began reacting to the abandoned vehicle issue, it had, in effect, become past history. The commissioners had already made their decision to pass the ordinance.

Only the appearance of those 400 persons who signed the petition against the ordinance would have deterred the city fathers Tuesday.

If the citizens of this town want to do something about what is going on in it, they will have to learn the procedures of city government and the loopholes we believe city and elected officials use to their advantage.

Rescue plan for the thrifts

WASHINGTON (NEA) — As reported previously, the nation's savings and loan associations are in bad financial shape. These so-called "thrift institutions" are being forced to pay high interest rates on the money that they borrow from the government and from commercial banks while receiving their income from loans made at earlier, much lower rates. The result has been a continuous flow of red ink that is threatening the whole system of savings and loans.

Dale Riordan, a spokesman for the National Savings and Loan League, says that U.S. thrift institutions lost $688 million in the first three months of 1981. He forecasts losses of about $1.5 billion for the first half of this year. Others are predicting losses closer to $2.5 billion for the first half and $6 billion for the year.

More than 90 percent of the nation's savings and loans are insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. That federal agency is the thrift institutions' counterpart of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which insures most of the nation's commercial banks.

An average of fewer than one FSLIC-insured savings and loan has failed in each of the past 35 years. When a small institution goes under, the agency simply pays off its depositors and sells its loan portfolio to another savings and loan in the area. In other cases, the FSLIC arranges the merger of the failed savings and loan with a stonger one in the area and compensates the acquiring thrift for any losses suffered in the transaction.

This plan works fine when the failure rate is only one or two institutions a year. But now the FSLIC has 251 institutions on its "problem list" of those that must be watched closely because of their financial conditions. The list is said to be larger than ever before and to be growing by the month.

An agency source says that if interest rates continue at or near current levels for the rest of this year — as many forecasters think they will — as many as 150 thrift institutions may lose their entire net worths and be at least technically insolvent by year's end. Another 150 could become insolvent if high interest rates continue into 1982.

The FSLIC is not equipped to handle a problem of such magnitude. Its reserves, which are used to bail out failing institutions and to assist in mergers, amount to about $6.5 billion. Last year alone it used up almost $1 billion to rescue three savings and loans.

Worse still is the near impossibility of finding healthy savings and loans willing to merge with insolvent institutions despite the FSLIC's ability to make up any losses incurred in the transaction.

The problem was until recently compounded by legal restrictions that such mergers occur only between savings and loans in the same state. Although the FSLIC now can go out of state to arrange mergers, few thrift institutions are secure enough to be viable partners for failed institutions, especially those of any size.

The FSLIC has proposed an answer to this problem that could change the whole system of banking in this country. The agency is seeking permission from Congress to sell ailing thrifts to commercial banks — even those in other states.

This proposal has drawn fire from many commercial bankers — and especially from the owners of small banks. For years the nation's large commercial banks have sought to expand out of state over the opposition of their smaller competitors, who maintain that such a move would drive them out of business. Traditionally, Congress has sided with the small bankers and resisted the pressure to allow this "multi-state branching."

But multi-state branching may arise through the back door if the FSLIC plan is approved. Most experts think that full multi-state branching will quickly follow a decision to allow major banks to buy ailing out-of-state thrifts. The small commercial banks say that this would be tantamount to signing their death warrant.

If the small banks defeat the FSLIC plan, the only real hope left to the nation's thrift institutions is that interest rates will somehow plummet over the next few months. But no one has much confidence that this will happen. (rprise Asn.)

By ART BUCHWALD,

An outraged Reagan

Michael Reagan is outraged because he has been accused of using his father's position as president to get defense business for a firm he was "vice president" of. He wrote a letter to military installations soliciting contracts, noting that "with my father's leadership at the White House, this country (sic) Armed Forces are going to be rebuilt and strengthened."

Young Reagan was quoted after the flap as saying, "It's just so silly. Somebody else can write a letter to military bases or anybody else, and say my dad's a great president, and I have the press at my doorstep." He maintained that he was being penalized because his father was president, and he was being kept from making a living.

One can only sympathize with Michael Reagan. But at the same time it's not as easy for a general to ignore a letter from the president's son, as it is one from Arnold Dopperdinger, who is trying to get the same contract.

Michael did not have a chance to make a follow-up telephone call to his letter, because he resigned after the news stories. But the conversation might have gone something like this:

"General, this is Michael Reagan, as in Ronald Reagan... Dad is doing just fine. I talked to him the other day. What I'm calling about is that I understand you're in the market for grommets for our new missiles. As you know, if you got my letter, Dad is intent on getting the military back on its feet, and he told me he is going to insist our grommets are as good as, or better than, any the Soviets are making at this time.

"My company makes the best grommets in America. General, if I say so myself. But I don't want you to consider us just because my father is your Commander-in-Chief."

"At the same time I don't want you to consider us for the contract, just because my dad happens to be President of the United States and somebody I love and admire very much."

"The decision of where you will buy your grommets rests solely with you. Dad told me on the phone the other day he is leaving the grommet problem to his generals because they know much more about them than he does."

"I want to make it perfectly clear that Dad does not know I'm calling you. If you see fit not to give us the contract, I will be personally disappointed but it will have no effect on your future promotion or procurement assignment. Dad doesn't operate that way. That's why I respect him and am proud to be his son."

Appeasement revisited

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN
While the U.S. Senate has approved President Reagan's $136 billion defense bill, the anti-defense lobby is as hard at work as ever urging unilateral disarmament.

The Cato Institute, which is active in opposing national defense measures, just published a revealing anti-defense study entitled "Strategic Disengagement and World Peace" written by Prof. Earl G. Ravenal, who is an associate of the Institute For Policy Studies which the "Washington Post" has described as a leftist think tank.

"Strategic disengagement," as described by Dr. Ravenal, is another term for appeasement, withdrawal from commitments, and unilateral disarmament.

In Dr. Ravenal's own words, "It is a prescription for an orderly withdrawal from our political-military commitments." He hopes for a "limited definition of national security and... acceptance of revolutionary change in the world." One may judge from these words that he would have the United States accept a revolutionary takeover of El Salvador and the Soviet conquest of Afghanistan.

There's no mistaking what Dr. Ravenal and the Cato Institute seek: He writes that "The United States would withdraw to a mid-Pacific position... We would seek no positions in the Indian Ocean... We would initiate the thinning out of our troops (in Europe)." In his words, the doctrine of "strategic disengagement" would center on "the dissolution of alliances."

Elsewhere in this Cato Institute study, Dr. Ravenal urges "unilateral moves" towards disarmament. Specifically, he would have the United States "abandon all fixed land-based missiles" and put new restrictions on the President's control of nuclear defenses.

If Dr. Ravenal's doctrine were official U.S. policy, there would be unprecedented rejoicing in Moscow. There would be nothing in the way of a Soviet conquest of Western Europe and other areas of freedom. Castro would be free to serve as the USSR's surrogate in conquering Latin America.

It is important for the public to know of the existence of these notions. The Cato Institute, which cooperates with the Institute For Policy Studies, is well financed. Charles G. Koch, chairman of the board of Koch Industries and one of the nation's wealthiest individuals, is a prime mover of the Cato Institute. There is abundant funding to promote disarmament and various attacks on defense institutions.

In view of broad public recognition of the need for a stronger national defense, it isn't likely that the anti-defense bias of the Cato Institute will be translated into public policy in the foreseeable future. Nonetheless, it is essential for Americans to realize that the advocates of unilateral disarmament and withdrawal are still in there pitching.

SURREY RIDES with C.T. Rasco and his two mule team were a highlight of the Cabot Picnic he'd on Saturday. Rasco drove the team and offered rides through the afternoon to a steady stream of children.

PITCHING HORSESHOES is a science to Robert Adcock, shown, son Joe Adcock, stands behind to get the hang of it. The two were participating in the Cabot Corporation annual picnic held Saturday at Lake McClellan and included volleyball, horseshoe pitching, washer pitching, mule wagon rides, frisbees, egg toss, bottle races, tug of war, sack races and nail drive for the women.

THREE-LEGGED RACE winners were Melvin and Peggy Dennis, front. The pair were awarded the prize - a $2 bill. Bill Dingus and Robert Adcock, back, tried their best but couldn't get anywhere - their legs were tied together.

One person dies as tornado sweeps through Ohio town

CARDINGTON, Ohio (AP) — One person was killed and at least 15 others were injured when a tornado smashed through this north-central Ohio town Saturday afternoon, causing heavy damage and trapping some people in damaged buildings, officials said.

Gov. James A. Rhodes called out the Ohio National Guard to secure the area and was on his way to Cardington along with the head of the state disaster services agency, said Rhodes spokesman Chuck Shipley.

"The damage is heavy. Electricity and other services are out," Shipley said. He said one person had died in the storm, and 15 to 20 others were injured.

An amateur radio operator monitored in Columbus, about 50 miles to the south, said the town was extensively damaged.

"The whole town is a shambles," said the operator, a member of the National Weather Service's amateur radio system. "Four to seven families are trapped in a building. People are laid out in streets waiting for ambulances."

"It pretty well tore the town up," said Morrow County Deputy Sheriff Carroll Sears. "We've got buildings down, trees have been uprooted, power lines are down, we've got gas leaks and people are injured."

The tornado ripped through the community of about 2,000 at approximately 3:45 p.m., according to meteorologists.

Strike talks snagged on pay television

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The prospect that the fall television season could be seriously delayed for the second straight year by a labor strike increased Saturday after contract talks between producers and striking film and TV writers broke off indefinitely.

Negotiators for major producers and the striking Writers Guild of America called it quits Saturday after more than 14 hours of bargaining when a stalemate was reached in the latest attempt to divide up the lucrative home video entertainment market.

The breakdown in talks in the nine-week writers strike was particularly ominous because of an impending showdown with the powerful Directors Guild of America, whose contract expires July 1.

The directors have said they will strike over the home video issue, a move that would certainly shut down the film-TV industry and delay the fall TV season — as did the actors strike last summer.

Producers spokeswoman Barbara Brogliatti said Saturday that no new talks were scheduled with the writers, and that negotiators would turn their attention again to the directors.

The break-off in the writers talks was a surprise since both sides had expressed optimism last week that a settlement was near. But the controversial issue of home video residuals scuttled the talks once again, with writers holding out for approval of an agreement they already have with many independent producers.

"The writers kept insisting that we use their formula that is currently in existence with the independent producers in an interim agreement," said Ms. Brogliatti. "But we felt that in order to get into pay television we were going to have to at least adapt the writers' formula with a more realistic money break."

The WGA's independent producers agreement, which the guild says has more than 100 signatories, gives writers 2.75 percent of the gross of pay TV programs after producers have recouped $1 million per hour in production costs.

Negotiators for the writers reportedly have worked out all other contract details compensation and the length except minimum of the contract.

Aftermath of a bold and unprecedented attack

The ground thundered for three minutes outside Baghdad, Iraq, last week and the flimsy structure of peace in the Mideast is still swaying.

The Israeli bombardment of Iraq's nuclear center led the Arabs to demand United Nations sanctions against the Jewish state. The Israelis call anew for a "nuclear-free zone" in the Middle East, and the Soviets to push once more for an international conference on the troubled region.

Those ideas were expected to go nowhere, but repercussions from Baghdad have drawn Arabs closer together. They could affect the fleeting chances for peace in Lebanon and the future of Egyptian-Israeli relations, have already stirred anguished reassessments in the U.S. and altered the political picture in Israel, and could even change the course of the Iran-Iraq war.

The most urgent question: Will Prime Minister Menachem Begin drop the other shoe and send his spectacularly successful air force against the Syrian surface-to-air missiles in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley?

Here is a review of events that followed last Sunday's Israeli raid and what they may portend: ARAB REACTION

Representatives of 20 Arab nations meeting Thursday in the Iraqi capital called on the U.N. Security Council to impose sanctions against Israel — they could be an arms embargo or economic boycotts — and calling on the U.S. and other supporters of Israel to "work seriously to put an end to Zionist aggression."

The league resolutions were mild compared with the theoretical alternatives, such as an anti-U.S. oil embargo or even military retaliation against Israel. Analysts said the envoys, with Saudi Arabia playing a key role, opted for a moderate position to maintain broad support among the Arabs and internationally.

Even Egypt and Syria, Iraq's longtime rival, lined up beside the aggrieved Baghdad government.

The one fractious voice was Moammar Khadafy's. The Libyan leader declared that Saudi King Khalid and Jordanian King Hussein should abdicate in shame because the Israeli bombers used their countries' airspace to reach Baghdad.

MISSILE CRISIS

Inter-Arab relations were given an earlier boost when an Arab League delegation achieved a preliminary cease-fire agreement last Monday in the fighting between Lebanese Christians and Syrian peacekeeping troops in Lebanon. The truce held through the week.

But the potentially more explosive confrontation in Lebanon — between Syria and Israel — simmered dangerously.

U.S. diplomat Philip C. Habib has been trying to mediate a peaceful end to the standoff. Israel demands that the Syrians remove anti-aircraft missiles from eastern Lebanon, and Syria demands that Israel end its interference in the tiny war-ravaged land.

After the raid, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin warned that his planes might soon knock out the missile batteries if Syria did not remove them. Syrian President Hafez Assad declared, "We shall destroy the Israeli forces and planes that try to attack these batteries and we may destroy even more than that."

U.S.-MIDEAST

The Reagan administration swiftly condemned the Israeli bombing raid, and on Wednesday suspended delivery of four new F-16 fighter-bombers to Israel while deciding whether the attack was an improper use of U.S.-supplied arms.

Some within the administration were reported to have pushed for tougher penalties against the Israelis. President Reagan was quoted as telling Arab ambassadors he was "shocked and disappointed" at the raid. But U.S. officials rushed to reassure the Israelis that the affair would not affect the basic U.S.-Israeli relationship.

Arab commentators accused the U.S. of collusion in the reactor attack, and all Arabs looked to the U.S. to rein in Israel. An Iraqi official said U.S. reaction would be a test of whether Reagan will apply an "even-handed" policy in the Middle East.

EGYPT-ISRAEL

The surprise attack embarrassed Egyptian President Anwar Sadat before the Arab world because it came just three days after a summit meeting with Begin. It could undermine whatever mutual trust the two countries have built up in their unfolding peace agreement.

ISRAELI POLITICS

The popularity of the raid inside Israel propelled Begin's Likud bloc comfortably ahead of the Labor Party in opinion polls leading up to June 30 general elections. Laborites grumbled that this was why Begin timed the attack for June.

IRAN-IRAQ WAR

Even the Iranian government, locked in an 8-month-old border conflict with Iraq, denounced the reactor attack. The Arab League ministers urged the two warring neighbors to settle their dispute and turn full attention to confronting Israel. Mideast diplomatic analysts speculated that Syria, which has supported Iran, might use the opportunity to end its cold war with Iraq and mediate peace in the Persian Gulf.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini threw an unknown into this equation, however, when he fired President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr as Iran's military commander-in-chief on Wednesday. Bani-Sadr has been the most conciliatory figure on the Iranian side in the war.

Senator Bill Sarpalius

Reports

AUSTIN — The 67th session of the Texas Legislature, my first, is over, but another session is soon to start. The next session is a "special" session. It is unscheduled, and convened for the purpose of finishing business undone in the regular session.

During a special session, the Legislature may only consider matters that the Governor tells us to consider. High on the Governor's list this time are Congressional redistricting, a new bill to license physicians, the water trusts fund and college construction funding.

We have asked the Governor to include gasohol in the special session. Now he needs to hear from you. Write to Governor William P. Clements, Jr., Capitol Station, Austin, Texas 78711.

Each of these subjects is important to all of us. Congressional redistricting, for example, will determine what kind of representation in Washington we get for the next ten years. The law that licenses doctors expires September 1, so we certainly need to pass a new one.

All of us in this part of the state know how important a plan to supply water needs for the future is. Water is life, not only for the farmers and ranchers in our district but for cities as well. We have problems of shortages of water, and flood and drainage problems. We need to address all of these in the next special session, and it really is good that we have time to do so, free of the political pressures that the regular session brings.

Special sessions are nothing new. Ten years ago, which was when the last redistricting process took place, the Legislature also went through a special session.

The success we enjoyed this session would have been impossible without the help of the fine people of the 31st Senatorial District. But we hope you don't quit now. We still need to hear from you. Please write to Senator Bill Sarpalius, P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711.

Teacher harassment cited

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Five students are receiving blank diplomas from Hope High School because school officials say they were among 12 teen-agers who intimidated their 61-year-old teacher into giving them passing grades.

The unidentified English teacher was left "on the verge of a nervous breakdown" after being berated by the students and some of their parents last Wednesday, says Acting Superintendent Robert Ricci.

He said that after being told the teacher was giving them failing grades, one of the students smashed his fist through a plaster wall, one pounded on her desk and another had to be restrained from pursuing her down a hallway.

There was no physical contact with the teacher, "but it was a very threatening and intimidating situation," Ricci said.

Small-town police chief's job lacks television drama

MILTON, N.H. (AP) — Police Chief Raymond Gaudet was eating breakfast at home when dispatcher Bill Minichiello called.

"Cows are on the loose on the Governor's Road again, and the neighbors are complaining."

On the way to the station, Gaudet received another call.

"Burglary in progress at Fernald Shores."

Gaudet raced to the scene, but it was too late. Minutes earlier, three youths had tried to kick in the door of a house, failed and drove away. After searching for more than an hour, Gaudet went to the police station.

"It's a rickety, one-room wooden structure, a stone's throw from the town dump. Outside, a droopy-eyed hound dog lounged in the shade under the front stairs. She is no watchdog or bloodhound. We found her in the woods half starved to death," Gaudet said.

Inside, there is barely enough room for two desks, some chairs and a few file cabinets.

"It's all a long way from the murder and intrigue and excitement of television and the movies. This is police work in a town of 2,600."

Gaudet, a professional musician for 22 years, was elected early this year as the town's only full-time officer.

"I put in up to 16 hours a day. With about 66 square miles to patrol, it's next to impossible to cover the whole town. But we're trying."

Most of his days are spent patrolling, responding to minor traffic accidents, burglaries, vandalism and complaints. Minichiello handles most of the paperwork, but Gaudet gets some of that, too.

Since taking over, he has drawn his revolver once — when a frantic woman reported seeing a man who fit the description of an escaped convict break into a neighbor's house.

"The man had said that he wouldn't be taken alive," Gaudet said.

"I drew my gun when I approached the house because I'm not taking any chances. I have a wife and children to go home to."

No one was in the house, and Gaudet still doesn't know if the woman was "just imagining things."

One afternoon, Gaudet cruised into the hills to look for stray cows. Found none.

He did see a group of young people on a road under construction, standing around smoking cigarettes with scattered pieces of broken beer bottles at their feet.

He politely informed them they were not allowed there and asked them to leave.

"The tough part of the job is teaching these kids that police officers are their friends and not pigs," he said. "We're nice guys. We're not always running around going bang, bang, bang."

Later, he drove to a trailer park to repossess a car after the buyer failed to make the payments.

"She was a little upset, but she was in the wrong and she knew it," he said. She handed over the keys and slammed the door shut.

Then he went to check out a deserted shack suspected of being a cache for stolen goods. No luck; the shack had been demolished.

At 6:30, he went home for dinner. He was watching television with his children when a call came in about a possible burglary in progress.

He found a man unloading a logging truck who explained the truck was his.

The chief drove home for the last time that day.

Nixons are moving out to the suburbs

SADDLE RIVER, N.J. (AP) — After a year in busting Manhattan, former President Richard M. Nixon and his wife are moving to the suburbs.

An aide says the Nixons are buying a $1 million house on a quiet cul-de-sac in this small Bergen County community, which has the highest per capita income in the state and only one welfare recipient.

And the new neighbors apparently are tickled about the prospect of living near the former president.

"He'll be most welcome in Saddle River," said Mayor Duncan H. Cameron, a retired stockbroker. "We've never had a Democrat serve as mayor or councilman since the beginning of time."

Nixon aide Nicholas Ruwe said Thursday the Nixons are moving to a sprawling seven-bedroom, contemporary house now owned by John Alford, also a retired stockbroker. The two-story, wood-trimmed house with a circular drive is near a peach orchard and surrounded by woodland.

Although Ruwe declined to give the purchase price, he said the house had been offered for $1.2 million.

Among its features are three built-in stereo systems, a 900-square-foot swimming pool, a tennis court and a 1,000-bottle wine cellar.

The closing of the sale is scheduled for late July, when Ruwe said he expects the Nixons to move from their $750,000 Manhattan townhouse. The townhouse where the Nixons have lived a little longer than a year probably will be sold, Ruwe added.

"The Nixons are not tired of New York, they loved that house," said Ruwe. "But a lot of their life right now is their grandchildren. Four acres in the country would be spectacular for the grandchildren."

"They loved the house and the pool is very important to him," he said.

The community does not have a tavern, supermarket or any industry. Nor does it have a sewer system, public water supply, library or sidewalks.

Anti-crime group organizing

HOUSTON (AP) — This week, a spokeswoman says, the founder of the Guardian Angels, the anti-crime group that first drew attention with its patrols of the New York City subways, will begin organizing a Houston chapter.

The Angels have established chapters in Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Atlanta and Cleveland. The first group was established in New York in 1979.

Is actor man declared dead?

PRESCOTT, Ariz. (AP) — Edna Cabral doesn't remember that her husband, Francisco, ever showed much interest in theater. But just a few months after Cabral was declared dead by drowning, a fellow dentist and an insurance investigator insist he was alive and active in a community theater here.

Police in Mendocino County, Calif., have reopened their missing persons investigation, and an insurance company has filed suit for the return of $100,000 it paid Mrs. Cabral.

A man who gave his name as Frank Cabral spent several months here, including about a month acting with the Prescott Fine Arts Association and doing stage carpentry, before he disappeared.

He was "a good character actor and, I might add, a helluva nice guy," said Bryan Gackle, who directed the group's presentation of Neil Simon's "The Odd Couple," in which Cabral played Murray the cop. "Everyone loved him dearly."

The man told troupe members that he had been a dentist in Ukiah, Calif., but little else. "All of us classified him as a mystery man as far as money was concerned" because he was able to devote lots of time to the theater, Gackle said.

In addition, although residents believe he arrived in town last December, no one knows where he lived.

"He wasn't in the phone book, and nobody seems to know that much about him," said Jean Oiswang, a Prescott Courier reporter who has been covering the story. "Nobody seems to know how he supported himself."

Cabral "was very good," she added. "I saw him in a play and he was really very good."

Then, on May 24, Cabral vanished about six minutes after refusing to talk to Dr. Pat Henrie, a dentist from Ukiah who approached him after the play's last performance.

Henrie was here visiting his brother, Sam, who said Pat thought the actor looked like Cabral.

Mendocino authorities say Cabral was last seen Oct. 30 at Fort Bragg, Calif., 36 miles west of Ukiah. Cabral told people there he was planning to meet a friend on a beach, but the friend said he never arrived. Searchers found a shoe and pocket calculator belonging to Cabral on the beach, deputies said.

About four months after a judge declared Cabral legally dead, the Sentry Life Insurance Co. paid Mrs. Cabral $100,000.

Non-polluting mosquito killers

MCALLEN, Texas (AP) — Al Shurte, a retired plumber from Flint, Mich., has a natural, non-chemical weapon against the plentiful, blood-sucking mosquitoes of South Texas.

More than two dozen purple martins inhabit the two "apartment houses" he built for them in his back yard.

Even with an irrigation canal nearby and heavy rains, Shurte and his wife say they can stay outside long after their neighbors are chased indoors by the biting insects.

"They say a purple martin can eat 2,000 mosquitoes a day," said Shurte, a handyman who builds and sells martin houses in a range of sizes.

His 12-room model, complete with wire porches and a 20-foot stand runs $45.

The houses are plastic flower pots wired together with plywood fronts mounted on a 4-inch-by-4-inch post. Openings must be at least 2 inches wide, he cautions, or the birds will not use them.

Shurte says once the house is available, it's up to the martins to find it provided sparrows have not beaten them to it.

"The first year I had them, I had to fight off the sparrows with a B-B gun," he said.

Martins migrate to South America during the winter, stop in Texas between late January and mid-summer and then take off for northern states until beginning the cycle again in the fall.

"They send out a scout to check things out. He'll circle around and stay a few hours. Then he'll come back two or three days later with another bird," Shurte said.

Gradually, a colony will move in. Both males and females help build nests with sticks, straws, plant stems and other material. Females generally lay two eggs and both parents help incubate the eggs until they hatch.

"They say the young ones that hatched out here might come back to roost," he said.

The iridescent black males and duller females soar gracefully and catch insects in-flight.

Eighteen adult martins and six young live in Shurte's backyard this year.

"They're very friendly little things," he said. The birds sit chirping on their perches until a stranger enters the yard. They take off for a nearby telephone wire until Shurte coaxes them back.

He always checks for young ones that have fallen out of the nest before letting his cat outside.

"If they fall out on the 30th day, they won't make it. But on the 31st day, they can fly," he said.

Texas taxpayers' future is uncertain

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas taxpayers know they can expect a tax break in the Nov. 3 election, but they don't know what to expect from the summer special session of the Legislature.

One thing is sure, property taxes will be involved and almost every property owner will be affected.

The homestead exemption act was approved by the recent regular session of the Legislature and will be on the general election ballot.

However, efforts to "tune up" the 1979 tax appraisal law failed in the regular session as did all efforts to find a new way of supporting state college construction without a state property tax.

Both issues are certain items for the special session that Gov. Bill Clements says he will call this summer, probably in mid-July.

The homestead exemption act was intended to soften the blow to homeowners of big increases in taxes resulting from the market value of residences as required by the 1979 law.

The new tax appraisals are effective in 1982 and will shift some tax burden from commercial and industrial property to residential property instead of the past practice of assessing taxes only on a fraction of the market value. Business property has been appraised at closer to true market value.

The Nov. 3 amendment would let local governments give exemptions of up to 40 percent of market value for 1982 through 1984, up to 30 percent for 1985 through 1987, and up to 20 percent after 1987.

The "tune up" bill that died in a conference committee the last night of the regular session would have made more than 100 changes in the 1979 law, which was a major rewrite of property tax laws.

In addition to requiring market valuation of property it required a single appraisal of property by local government, not separate tax bills from city, county, school district and other governmental units.

"We were very close that last night," said Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, author of the "tune up" bill and the 1979 bill. "The real holdup was the Texas Farm Bureau. They wanted the moon."

Peveto said the controversy centered on two points.

Finally the Senate negotiators agreed to take a House amendment that would allow all "implements of husbandry" to be exempted from local taxes. Anything used to produce food or fiber could be exempt.

The five Senate members and two House members agreed to a Senate amendment changing the procedure in computing agricultural land appraisals. Land could be appraised on the owner-operator budget system or if there was insufficient data, the going rental rate could be used, Peveto said.

"The Farm Bureau wouldn't go for that and that tied up three House members," he said. Since a majority of the House members would not sign the conference committee report, the compromise failed.

Peveto said he had received no indication from Clements that the "tune up" bill would be included in the governor's special session call. "but it's almost got to be there. Harris and Bexar counties particularly need the phase-in period that they would get in the bill."

The measure gives Harris County, because of its complex taxation problems, two years after January 1982 to begin market value appraisals. Bexar and other counties could get a one-year phase-in period.

The second property tax issue likely for the special session involves the 10-cent state tax that once was used to provide construction money for state colleges outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems.

The 1979 Legislature cut the tax to an uncollectible .0001 percent per $100 valuation. However, Midwestern University filed suit asking the courts to reimpose the 10-cent tax.

State officials feel the university will win the suit and the 10-cent tax will be effective again unless the Legislature provides the construction money.

In the regular session different House and Senate plans failed the last night also. House members wanted to establish a fund, put a little money in it but wait until 1983 to choose a permanent financing method.

Senators wanted to create a permanent endowed fund, similar to the Permanent University Fund that provides for the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems.

House won't block weapon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is refusing to block development of the neutron warhead despite claims that the weapon could be a first step in bringing the world closer to nuclear destruction.

The House, in a 293-88 vote Thursday, rejected an attempt by Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., to bar use of federal money for production of the neutron weapon or its components.

The vote came after Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., attributed the controversy over neutron warheads to Soviet propaganda "convincing people that somehow this was somehow even a more horrendous form of weaponry than what they have. And they have done the job."

Without the neutron weapon, Stratton said, NATO forces defending Europe would be forced to use conventional nuclear weapons to defeat an attacking Soviet tank force.

The neutron warhead produces less blast and heat and more radiation than a conventional nuclear bomb, allowing enemy soldiers to be killed with a minimum amount of damage to land and buildings.

Its supporters argue that because it causes less destruction, the neutron warhead is a better tactical weapon than ordinary nuclear devices to defend Europe against massive Soviet tank attacks. The tank crews would be killed by radiation with the minimum physical destruction of European cities and towns.

But opponents argued vainly on the House floor that the very concept was dangerous because it makes it easier to fire the first nuclear weapon.

Once such weapons are used, they warn, the conflict would be out of control because the Soviets would respond with a full-scale nuclear barrage.

GRASSHOPPER SURVEY

Personnel with the State and Federal Department's of Agriculture inspected Gray County for grasshoppers on Monday.

Grasshopper counts varied considerably from a low of 5 to a high of 44 per square yard on 14 different locations surveyed over the county. These checks were made on native range sites. Southern parts of the county generally has mostly 1st and 2nd instar grasshoppers while the northern areas of the county has the older, mostly 3rd and 4th instar grasshoppers.

There is money available this year for cooperative - spray programs. However, rangeland acreage would have to be signed up quickly and in large blocks to get the hoppers sprayed before egg laying starts.

INTERNATIONAL RANCHER'S ROUNDUP LURES TOP SPEAKERS

The largest, most comprehensive conference ever organized in the Southwest for ranching industry — the International Rancher's Roundup — will be held August 10-14 at the Del Rio Civic Center. Hundreds of ranchers from across the country are expected to attend.

Thus far, 110 speakers have been confirmed, representing seven agricultural universities in five states, eight state and Federal agencies, six producer concerns, two international organizations, plus two dozen ranches and numerous commercial firms.

Specialists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, organizers of the event, say several speakers have not yet confirmed. Included among that group are U.S. Department of Agriculture Secretary John Block, Texas Governor Bill Clements and U.S. Congressman E. "Kika" de la Garza.

However, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown will be keynote speaker during one of the evening banquets.

The roundup consists of two day - long tours (Monday and Friday) and three days of intensified educational sessions. A general session will be held each of the three days along with concurrent sessions in beef cattle, sheep and goat production, ranch business, ranch horse management, animal nutrition, managing range resources, wildlife management and mineral lease agreements.

Agricultural representatives from Mexico, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa will be present to discuss their respective nation's ranching situation and what they need from American producers. U.S. - Mexican agricultural interdependence and foreign market development will be highlighted along with government influences on the ranching industry.

Pre - registration deadline for the roundup is June 30. Individuals will be assessed $125 and couples, $150, if received by the deadline. After that date all registration fees increase by $50. Cost of the two tours is $50 for each per person, most of which is absorbed by transportation, meals and entertainment enroute. Three evening meals, including entertainment, will be $10 each per person. Registration fees in most cases are tax deductible and a large bound copy of all presentations will be available to each person who registers.

Interested persons can write to IRR, P.O. Drawer 1849, Uvalde, Texas 78801 for their pre - registration packet. For more information contact your County Extension office.

PREVENT PTO ACCIDENTS

Preventive measures and care are the best way to combat serious tractor accidents involving rotating reactor power takeoff (PTO) shafts.

The most common PTO accident is getting caught by the rotating shaft. Occasionally an operator is struck by a broken or disconnected shaft as it swings behind a tractor.

Following proper installation, maintenance and operating procedures can help eliminate these accidents.

An unguarded PTO shaft can catch on your clothing and may result in strangulation or mutilation.

Proper guarding is the best preventive measure as manufacturers provide various types of PTO shields.

Follow these safety practices to prevent injury from entanglement.

1. Always disengage the PTO and shut off the engine before getting off the tractor.
 2. Keep the master shield in place.
 3. Make sure integral shields are in good condition.
 4. Keep tunnel shields in proper alignment over the powershaft.
 5. Never step across a rotating powershaft.
- PTO accidents can be prevented, but only by safe work practices and proper shielding.

Texas farmers to plant more wheat, soybeans

COLLEGE STATION — Texas farmers indicate they will plant a million more acres to crops this year, with wheat and soybeans leading the way.

"How well they fare will depend on weather conditions and the marketplace," points out Dr. Carl Anderson, economist with the Texas Agriculture Extension Service, Texas A & M University System.

The largest increase is in winter wheat, where acreage is estimated at 7.7 million acres. This is up from 6.8 million in 1980.

According to Anderson, the increased wheat acreage is due to a strong market last fall at planting time, the need for winter grazing to supplement drought - reduced forage supplies, and the opportunity to gain cash flow sooner in the year than from cotton, grain sorghum and corn.

While wheat grows over a large part of Texas, leading counties usually are Ochiltree, Hansford and Deaf Smith.

Soybean acreage may total 800,000 acres, up 100,000 from 1980.

Is George Wallace gearing up to run?

By Tom Tiede

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (NEA) - When the black limousine stopped outside the state capitol building the other afternoon and George Wallace was wheeled into the street, a small crowd gathered to gawk and take pictures. It was as if the winds of time had blown open the familiar back pages of a history text.

"How are you, governor?" someone asked.

"I'm just fine, thank you," Wallace replied.

And so he is. Nine years after he was crippled by the bullet of a would-be assassin and three years after completing his third term as Alabama's chief executive, 61-year-old George Corley Wallace seems to be doing quite well. He looks good, he says he feels good and he's still raising controversy.

Recently he announced plans to marry a former campaign aide named Lisa Taylor. Miss Taylor is blonde, shapely and 33 years old. She is also the daughter of a wealthy coal-industry executive and at one time worked as a country-western singer with a sister; they were billed as "Lena and Lisa."

The engagement brought Wallace back into newspaper in Alabama. And it may only be the beginning of his public revival. Observers here report that Wallace may be getting ready for another dip in active state politics; the common speculation is that he wants to run once again for governor (in 1982).

The speculators say Wallace has increased his visibility and availability as of late. He's speaking more and traveling wider. When he showed up at a plumbing convention recently, sitting before a toilet-seat display, the delighted organizers said he wouldn't have bothered if he wasn't running for something.

Some say a similar motivation is behind the engagement to Lisa Taylor. The thought is she might add youth and vigor to the former governor's aging image. When asked why she would marry a senior citizen, Miss Taylor squeals, "I just love the man." There is a big country-western vote throughout Alabama.

There is also a danger that Miss Taylor could backfire as a campaign factor, if that is the intention. A good many people in Alabama wonder if the coal miner's daughter is first-lady material. Cornelia Wallace wonders most of all. She is Wallace's previous wife; they were divorced after 10 years of marriage in 1978.

Cornelia Wallace was shocked at the news of her former husband's engagement. And at first she was plain mad. "Well," she said early on, "it's a 33-year-old woman making a commitment to a 61-year-old man in a wheelchair." She also made waspish comments about the former governor's loss of virility.

However, Cornelia's anger soon turned to nostalgia. She recalled how she had thrown herself on Wallace, to protect him, when he was shot by Arthur Bremer in the 1972 assassination attempt. She said she loved him enough to die for him then. And, truth be known, she says she still loves him.

At last word Mrs. Wallace said she was not giving up. She wanted a reconciliation. She asked for "the prayers and support of all Christian people that George will search his heart and find God's perfect will in this matter." She said prayer is a powerful thing, and she concluded that "it works."

Meantime, Wallace himself avoids the romantic issues and sticks to business. He works as the $60,000-a-year director of rehabilitation services at the University of Alabama, but he notes he also serves as a special counselor to the present governor, Fob James; that means that he keeps his oar in.

Wallace also keeps that oar in national politics.

GEORGE WALLACE. "The things Reagan is saying are the things we were saying back in 1968 and 1972: a lot of the things I wanted, like tax cuts and less government, have now become popular."

Farmers' problems not being considered

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congressman Jack Hightower told a luncheon meeting of the National Farmers Union recently that "the first and foremost problem of this nation's food and fiber producers is still not being addressed in Washington. Nothing before the House of Senate, nothing proposed by the Reagan Administration, is aimed at helping farmers and ranchers receive a reasonable price for what they produce."

Hightower said before the group of farm-state representatives at the Holiday Inn here. The panhandle Congressman reviewed the budget and appropriations decisions so far this year in Congress and assessed their impact on agricultural policy for the large group of Farmers Union Board members gathered in Washington. Altogether some 25 states were represented including Texas, represented by Mike Moeller, Texas Farmers Union President.

"While agriculture did not receive the percentage cuts some other areas of government did during the recent budget fight, agriculture really didn't have the kind of funds that could easily be cut in the first place," Hightower explained.

"Agriculture research fared very well and for that I'm pleased. I know we don't have to tell a farmer or rancher why research is important to both him and the nation."

"Agriculture lending programs are being hit the hardest in the cuts. But if we can't make some gains in the prices farmers are paid for their crops, lending programs can't do anything but dig a deeper hole for farmers and ranchers in the end. I think efforts to take the Small Business Administration out of farm lending wouldn't be so bad if we were going to increase the role of the Farmers Home Administration, but Congress isn't doing that. It looks like Farmers Home will be cut, too," Hightower told the group.

"I can't retreat from the 25 percent, across-the-board cut in personal tax rates. Reagan told a group of labor leaders Thursday at the White House. 'I've dug in my heels.'"

At the same time Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee were telling one of the president's chief tax advisers that the across-the-board concept - meaning the same rate cuts for rich and poor - is not acceptable.

Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said Reagan's bill fails to increase earned-income credits benefitting working families with incomes less than $10,000 or standard deductions which help those making less than $20,000.

As a result, Rostenkowski told Assistant Treasury Secretary John E. Chapoton, "people in those brackets will be paying more tax" even if Reagan's proposed cuts are approved.

Rep. Donald J. Pease, D-Ohio, cited estimates by Treasury Department and congressional experts in an effort to prove that low-income families will lose under the president's plan.

Meanwhile, the last of the House's 15 committees - all dominated by Democrats - was trying to meet today's a deadline for recommending $35 billion in specific cuts to meet the bottom-line figure in Reagan's budget.

Though the committees are making the cuts, Democratic leaders are mounting a strategy to force a series of individual floor votes on the most popular programs, such as school lunches and student loans, in hopes of saving them.

Though the committees are making the cuts, Democratic leaders are mounting a strategy to force a series of individual floor votes on the most popular programs, such as school lunches and student loans, in hopes of saving them.

At the same time Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee were telling one of the president's chief tax advisers that the across-the-board concept - meaning the same rate cuts for rich and poor - is not acceptable.

Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said Reagan's bill fails to increase earned-income credits benefitting working families with incomes less than $10,000 or standard deductions which help those making less than $20,000.

As a result, Rostenkowski told Assistant Treasury Secretary John E. Chapoton, "people in those brackets will be paying more tax" even if Reagan's proposed cuts are approved.

Rep. Donald J. Pease, D-Ohio, cited estimates by Treasury Department and congressional experts in an effort to prove that low-income families will lose under the president's plan.

Meanwhile, the last of the House's 15 committees - all dominated by Democrats - was trying to meet today's a deadline for recommending $35 billion in specific cuts to meet the bottom-line figure in Reagan's budget.

White Sox win make-believe game

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A two-run, seventh-inning rally keyed by Greg Luzinski's RBI double down the first base line gave the Chicago White Sox a come-from-behind, imaginary baseball victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday.

With major league players in the second day of their strike, The Milwaukee Journal convinced Brewers general manager Harry Dalton to visit the newspaper for a game-table re-creation of what might have happened if the Brewers and White Sox had played as scheduled. Dalton acted as manager of his team.

with sports columnist Bob Wolf of The Journal managing the White Sox. The mathematically formulated, commercially marketed game used a chart telling the outcome of various plays, based on the roll of a die.

For those with vivid imaginations, the Brewers jumped to a 3-0 lead on Charlie Moore's first-inning homer, but Chicago pulled within 3-2 on Ron LeFlore's run-scoring double in second and Lamar Johnson's RBI single in the third.

Milwaukee made it 4-2 on Moore's RBI sacrifice fly in the fourth. Chicago rallied to tie in the fifth, then put the game away in the seventh, as Carlton Fisk reached on Robin Yount's error and scored on the double by Luzinski, who scored on a single by Chet Lemon.

The imaginary contest was not without its touches of reality.

Johnson's single, for example, came on a line drive off Brewer third baseman Don Money, who has had considerable problems with injuries. The game counted Money as injured and sidelined three days.

"Can you believe it?" exclaimed Dalton. "Even in this game, Money got hurt."

Holmes stops Spinks in third round

DETROIT (AP)—Larry Holmes knocked Leon Spinks down with a series of head shots, then stopped him with another barrage of blows in the third round to retain his World Boxing Council heavyweight championship Friday night.

With the crowd at Joe Louis Arena roaring, referee Richard Steele called a halt shortly after a towel was thrown into the ring by Spinks' corner and as Spinks' brother, Michael, stood on the ring apron pleading with his brother to do something.

Holmes stopped Spinks after landing 10 or 12 head shots in the third round. Leon struggled to his feet about the count of six. Holmes then marched purposely across the ring from a neutral corner and resumed the attack, mixing his punches to the body and the head before Steele stopped it.

The bout was halted at 2:34 of the third, writing a sensational ending to the 31-year-old Holmes' 10th title defense. It was a major loss for the 27-year-old Spinks, who was fighting for the heavyweight title for the second time in just his 15th pro fight. He won the universal championship back in 1978 with a split decision over Muhammad Ali, but he lost the World Boxing Association share of the crown to Ali that same year after being stripped of the WBC crown.

"He's definitely getting knocked out," said Holmes before the fight. "It don't matter that he's been knocked out before."

Spinks was knocked out in one round in 1979 by Gerrie Coetzee, but he battled back from that knockout. It's a big question as to whether he can battle back from this one.

The 6-3 Holmes, who had a five-inch reach advantage over Spinks and at 212½, outweighed Spinks by 12 pounds, came out in the first round moving from side to side, keeping Spinks off balance by changing the angles. He had said that Leon was a good rope fighter and he wasn't, and that he would try to keep the fight in the center of the ring. Holmes had an edge in that round by landing some solid jabs and a good right to the head.

In the second round, Spinks started to get inside Holmes. He landed a hard right to the head a little past midpoint, then had the best of a toe-to-toe exchange, getting his edge with a couple of solid rights. The round ended in confusion when a couple of Holmes' cornermen thought the bell had rung and got into the ring. They got back out again as the two fighters exchanged head blows in Spinks' corner.

Then, in the third round, Holmes hurt Spinks along the ropes. Before the fight, when asked how he would overcome Holmes' reach advantage, Spinks had said, "How do you expect to escape anybody who swings at you...move your head."

But, suddenly, Spinks' head was a stationary target, and Holmes zeroed in on it with radar accuracy. He landed about 10 or 12 shots, climaxed by a right that dropped the challenger on his hands and knees. He struggled up, but it was only a matter of time.

The late, great heavyweight champion for whom the arena is named once had said, "He can run, but he can't hide." And Leon Spinks had no place to hide once Holmes stalked out of a neutral corner to resume the attack that finished the fight.

Torres wins Hilton Open with sudden-death playoff

SOCORRO, N.M. (AP) — Professional Gene Torres of Las Vegas, N.M., captured the Hilton Open golf tournament Saturday, roaring back from a 6-stroke deficit on the back nine to win a sudden-death two-hole playoff.

Torres trailed professional Jim Dickson of Rio Rancho by 6 strokes going into the 12th hole. Dickson carded a 4-under-par 32 on the front nine for a 7-under-par.

Torres birdied the 12th, 13th, 15th, 17th and 18th holes for a 5-under-par 31 on the back nine.

Follett downed by Bremond in playoffs

Danny Roberts whiffed 10 batters Friday in pacing Bremond to a 6-2 decision over Follett in the Class A state baseball playoffs.

Bremond met Palmer, a 12-7 winner over Harleton in the Class A finals Saturday.

Follett mounted bases-loaded threats in the first and last innings of the contest, but came up empty each time. Bremond scored two runs in the first on a throwing error by Follett pitcher Mike Freeman and three more in the third on three Follett errors.

In other action, Lubbock Estacado moved into the Class 4A finals with a 2-1 victory over Waco Midway. Estacado played South San Antonio West, a 10-2 winner over McKinney in today's finals.

Hector Limon was the star for Estacado as hit a 400-foot triple, scored and started two double plays from his shortstop position. After his triple, Limon scored on another triple by Danny Griffin and a single by Deshawn Avery knocked in Griffin for the winning run.

GONE FISHIN'. Pitcher Tom Hausman of the New York Mets gets a laugh from his wife, Renee, over his "catch" Saturday as they fished on a beach near their Long Island home. The fish was thrown back in the water.

Hausman spent the second day of the baseball strike fishing for the first time in 11 years.

Marcum is averaging 19.1 runs per game, while giving up only 4.2 runs each outing.

The top three hitters are Diane Snell, .700; Rhonda James, .689; and Kellye Richardson, .586.

In a home run hitting contest at Hutchinson, Richardson finished second. James took second in a throwing contest and Peggy Terrell took third in a baserunning contest.

Marcum returns to Hutchinson June 26-28 for the National Invitational Tournament. The team has also qualified for the state tournament at Grand Prairie in August.

DON'T ASK TED
NEW YORK (AP) — Ted Williams, the last man to bat .400, is rooting for George Brett or anyone else for that matter to reach that magic figure this season.

"If somebody does hit .400," Williams, a .406 batter in 1947, said, "people will stop asking me if I think anyone can go that high ever again. They'll have to ask him."

The foursome won a tiebreaker from Chunky Leonard, W.A. Gipson, Tom Kitchens, and LaWanda Baker. Both teams had 31 after regulation play.

In third place with a 32 were Harold Friga, Nita Hill, Orville Heiskell and Monica Leonard.

Caponi has two-stroke lead in LPGA tourney

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Donna Caponi went on a birdie binge on the first nine holes Saturday and held up on the back side to shoot a 2-under-par 70 and expand her lead to 2 shots in the weather-plagued Ladies Professional Golf Association Championship.

The 36-year-old veteran, bidding for her fourth major championship in 17 professional seasons, birdied five of the first nine holes, three of them in a row. That helped her to a front side 5-under 31.

Caponi double-bogeyed the 10th and, after NBC-TV cameras cut away, bogeyed the 13th to slip to a 39 on the back side.

The 1969 and 1970 U.S. Open champion and the 1979 winner of this major, had a 54-hole total of 207, nine under par for three trips around the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center Grizzly Course.

Jerilyn Britz, the 1979 U.S. Open winner, birdied the last two holes, playing in the last threesome with Caponi. That sliced the leader's margin in half and gave Britz a 71 for a 7-under 209.

Pat Meyers, the other member of the final group, matched par of 72 and stood at 210, six under, for three rounds over the 6,258-yard layout just north of Cincinnati.

The players were hampered by weather delays twice, marking the third time in two days that their competition in the first of three 1981 majors had been interrupted. The delays totaled one hour, 51 minutes. Play was suspended for three hours Friday.

Caponi, winner of more than $915,000 in her career, appeared headed for a runaway victory with her fast start. She birdied the first, second, seventh, eighth and ninth holes to go 12 under par and assume a 5-shot margin over Meyers.

However, the leader caught a bunker on the 10th hole and 3-putted for a double bogey 6. Her approach shot on 13 sailed over the green and she hit a poor chip for a bogey 5.

However, none of her challengers could move closer than two strokes down the stretch.

JoAnne Carner, who needs a victory here to qualify automatically for the LPGA Hall of Fame, struggled to a 1-over 73 and was 7 shots behind Caponi at 214. Nancy Lopez-Melton, the year's leading money winner, matched par for the second straight day and also was at 214.

Sandra Post, who can earn a $100,000 bonus from McDonald's restaurants by posting back-to-back victories in as many weeks, all but shot herself out of contention for the huge payday with a 76. She was at 217, 10 shots in arrears.

Sally Little, the defending champion, also appeared out of the race for a second straight LPGA title, something only Mickey Wright has done in this tournament's 27-year history. Little shot a 69 for 217.

The total purse is $150,000, with $22,500 going to Sunday's champion.

Ickx in lead Driver, field marshal killed in opening hours of Le Mans

LE MANS, France (AP) — One of the most exciting Le Mans 24 hours races in many years turned to tragedy in the opening hours Saturday as a driver and a race marshal were killed in separate accidents.

Veteran French sports car racer Jean-Louis Lafosse, 41, died en route to a hospital after his Rondeau crashed and disintegrated for unknown reasons. Swiss Grand Prix driver Marc Surer described it as "the worst accident I've ever seen."

Lafosse was a Le Mans regular who placed second overall in 1975 and 1976. He was married and had a son.

A French marshal, whose name was withheld, was killed and another badly injured earlier when the suspension failed on Belgian Thierry Boutsen's WM Peugeot at some 200 miles an hour on the Mulsanne straight. Boutsen miraculously escaped unhurt although the car was in three pieces.

Another accident had the pace car out slowing the field later. About one hour of the first four hours were run under the yellow accident flag rules.

The accidents cast a pall on the efforts of Belgian ace Jacky Ickx to win a record fifth time in the classic. He set a track record in the works Porsche 936 speedster to take the pole in qualifying. With Briton Derek Bell, another past winner, Ickx led the race as night drew on despite early engine problems.

But the racing was close and the Rondeau driven by Briton Gordon Spice and France's Francois Migault was on the same lap as the Porsche. Five of the cars built by local driver Jean Rondeau were entered in a bid to repeat Rondeau's 1980 victory, the first ever by a constructor-driver.

Other early leaders were the 1979 winners, Florida brothers Don and Bill Whittington and Chicago's Ted Field in a Porsche 935 K3 coupe, but they slipped down the field with mechanical problems.

The third Whittington brother, Dale, 21, spun his Porsche 908 speedster — the car Ickx placed second in last year — into the guard rails and it required extensive front-end repairs, also dropping off the leader board.

Players say strike could be lengthy, talks resume this week

By The Associated Press

Some major leaguers predict the first mid-season strike in baseball history could be lengthy as the walkout entered its second day Saturday and fans settled in for a weekend without the summer game.

The 650 big league players struck Friday following a deadlock with owners over free agent compensation.

Negotiations ended following a 2½-hour session Friday and, according to mediator Kenneth Moffett, the earliest that talks may resume would be Monday or Tuesday.

"My personal feeling is that I don't think the players will bust ranks for quite a while, if ever," said Atlanta Braves pitcher Gene Garber. "This is something no player wants, but supports."

First baseman Chris Chambliss of the Braves predicted some owners eventually would break ranks in an effort to end the strike.

"The owners can't afford not to play the games for the remainder of this season," he said. "As for the players breaking ranks in such a situation, the teams would break ranks before we would. The owners don't want their TV contracts canceled."

At least one club president, Cal Griffith of the Minnesota Twins, said his team should be able to meet financial obligations during the strike, despite the loss of gate revenue. But Griffith suggested he might have to take a pay cut if the strike lasts too long.

"When uncle Clark Griffith died in 1955, the Washington club owed him $550,000 in back salary. Uncle Clark took only enough money during hard times with the Senators to put food on the table. I may have to do the same thing if it comes to that with this strike," said Griffith, who earns an estimated $125,000 to $150,000 annually.

"We don't have our Twins' player payroll during the strike, but we've got 10 players optioned to the minor leagues off our roster who we have to pay, plus our manager, coaches, trainer, scouts and our personnel in the front office," he said.

A last-minute move to thwart the walkout ended Friday when the National Labor Relations Board in Washington delayed a decision to appeal a federal judge's ruling that eased the way for the strike by the Major League Players Association.

The ballparks slammed their gates and fans made other plans.

So did the players.

Pitcher Bill Lee of the Montreal Expos said: "I'm going to Toronto on a bicycle and after that to Prince Edward Island for the Shakespeare Festival. Then I'm going where there are no telephones and no newspapers. I don't want to know when this strike is over."

"I don't want to talk about it anymore," said St. Louis pitcher Mark Littell. "Just let 'em go at it. I'm going to get in some fishing."

Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees went to St. Paul, Minn., his hometown. Had the Yankees-Twins game been played, Winfield promised 1,500 youngsters tickets for Friday's game at $4.50. He also was to help sponsor health exams for youngsters.

Instead, Winfield saw to it that 200 children received the exam and dinners at his old high school, St. Paul Central.

The strike centers on whether teams losing a free agent are entitled to another major league player as compensation. In essence, owners want to be fully compensated for a player if he becomes a free agent and leaves for another team.

The players aren't happy with that stipulation, saying it would greatly reduce the value of free agents in the eyes of other teams if they have to give up an equal "quality" player, as the owners insist for their new acquisition.

Players and owners were no closer during Friday's negotiations than they have been over what type of compensation would be agreeable for teams losing free agents.

"Every indication is it's a total roadblock, and we don't have any answers," said Rusty Staub, the New York Mets' player representative, following Friday's session in New York.

For many years, the only compensation awarded a team losing a free agent was a first-round pick in the amateur draft. But, in February, the owners implemented their compensation plan into the contract. It would require teams losing a "ranking" free agent in the re-entry draft get a roster player from the team signing him.

Under an agreement reached in May, the players were given the right to strike over the issue, but they would have to do so by June 1 or lose their right to walk out over compensation for the remainder of the agreement. The deadline was extended by mutual agreement just before a May 29 strike date set prior to the season by the players.

The NLRB, acting on a request by the players, sought an injunction to delay implementation of the owners' plan for one year. But U.S. District Judge Henry Werker, in Rochester, N.Y., denied the injunction, setting the stage for a strike.

Since the NLRB didn't act Friday to appeal Werker's ruling, an NLRB spokesman said no appeal could be filed with federal courts in New York until Monday.

While the players have no strike benefits, according to Marvin Miller, executive director of the players union, major league owners have $50 million in strike insurance and a mutual assistance fund reportedly worth as much as $15 million.

After 152 games are canceled, it guarantees each owner $100,000 per game until the $50 million runs out, or until around Aug. 1.

Nevertheless, Pittsburgh Pirates Teasener Douglas McCormick said "This is the worst weekend of all weekends that we've played this year for a strike to happen." He estimated the Pirates' three scheduled weekend games against the Los Angeles Dodgers normally would bring in $400,000 to $500,000.

Heavyweight fight dedicated to Louis

DETROIT (AP) — This one was for Joe, and Martha Louis brought all the kids, whom she has christened "The Wrecking Crew."

"Joe has been put away in dignity," said the widow of the man many proclaim as the greatest heavyweight fighter of all time. "All of us can be very proud."

Martha, Joe Louis' tower of strength during the last 22 years as his wife, was flown in with the four adopted children and two nurses for the heavyweight title bout Friday night between WBC titleholder Larry Holmes and challenger Leon Spinks. The event was dedicated to Louis, the legendary black champion who died two months ago on Palm Sunday.

Her 24th-floor suite in one of the plush hotel headquarters was a weekend beehive of activity. The phone rang every few minutes. Television and media crews came and went.

Two rambunctious Louis boys — Joe Jr., 13, and John, 10 — restlessly kept the elevators going between the lobby and the tower, roaming the hotel shops in between. Pretty Joyce, 7, who wants to be a singer like Diana Ross, combed her hair while little Janet, 4, who almost drowned at the age of 15 months, sat wide-eyed in her stroller.

"I have always accepted responsibility," said Martha, checking correspondence, hospital bills and programs of Joe's funeral services, while she carried on a non-stop interview.

"Joe was never one to be concerned about details, even when he was active. He left everything to me. He was always playing golf or off traveling somewhere and left me to hold the fort."

"I didn't mind. He loved people and crowds — especially boxing crowds — and he had an obsession about golf."

It's no secret that Joe Louis loved golf almost as much as boxing and reportedly was separated from much of his fortune by golf course hustlers.

"He was always gambling and losing," Martha recalled. "I don't think he bet the big sums attributed to him, but there were times that $100 meant a lot in keeping the family budget straight."

Once, she said, she bought Louis a sports car to drive to and from the golf course.

"He was making the monthly payments for all the fellows he was playing golf with," she added. "I thought he might as well pay for his own."

She said the "Brown Bomber," who allegedly owed the Internal Revenue Service $1.5 million in back income taxes, had little understanding of money.

"Sometimes he would see me with $2,000 around the house and think that there was a surplus," she said. "He didn't know that our bills maybe amounted to $3,000."

Martha Louis, a lawyer and Joe's third wife, still has not fully caught her breath from the grief and pressures that accompanied the champion's death.

"I don't even know how much I owe in doctor's and hospital bills," she said. "Caesar's Palace had a good hospital plan, but I am not sure it covers everything. One hospital bill for a single month — from Dec. 13 to Jan. 13 — amounted to more than $25,000."

Louis was a public relations representative for Caesar's Palace, the Las Vegas, Nev. casino, and, even after suffering a serious stroke, was wheeled into the arena for big championship fights. The last was the Holmes-Trevor Berbick bout the night before his death.

"He looked so good that night and, as usual, he was pleased with the great ovation that he got. He collapsed the next morning. It was sudden but we knew it might come at any time."

In his final months, Louis flew between Las Vegas and Houston for special medical attention, but still managed public appearances such as the dedication of the Joe Louis Arena here Feb. 12 a year ago and a visit to the 100th anniversary of New York's Madison Square Garden.

Stadler leads Westchester Classic

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Craig Stadler broke out of a four-way tie for the top with a six-foot birdie putt on the final hole and took a one-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Westchester Golf Classic.

Stadler, a winner two weeks ago in the Kemper Open, had a steady, no-bogey round of 3-under-par 68. He completed three trips over the hilly, 6,603-yard Westchester Country Club course in 205, 8-under.

Ray Floyd, Tom Kite and J.C. Sneed, who shared the top spot until Stadler's closing birdie, were at 206 going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

Sneed, in a long slump and still fighting an erratic driver, put on a birdie-eagle finish for a 4-under-par 67. Floyd, winner of two tournaments earlier this season, and the steady Kite, who has finished seventh or better in his last six starts, each had a 68.

Kite had an excellent chance to join Stadler at 7-under par, but left a six-foot, downhill birdie putt a quarter-roll short on 18.

Ron Streck, whose 5-under-par 66 was the best round of the day, and Gibby Gilbert, who has a habit of playing well on this suburban New York layout, were at 207. Gilbert, twice a runner-up here and a co-leader after 36 holes, matched par 71 in the warm, hazy weather.

Leonard Thompson, who was tied with Gilbert for the lead after two rounds, slipped to a 73 and was four strokes back at 209.

"I've always been a streak player," said Stadler, a two-time winner last season. "I haven't had a good year but I've been playing well the last few weeks and that's the difference."

He had a very steady but unremarkable effort going until the last two holes. He was 2-under par for the day and tied for the lead going to the 17th, where he drove deep into the rough. He had to play his second shot under a tree and got it into a bunker, but saved par and a piece of the lead with a good sand shot and a six-foot putt.

With the other leaders finished, he put his second shot on the back left fringe of the par-5 finishing hole, chipped it down to about six feet and, with the national television cameras finished for the day, rapped in the go-ahead putt.

Matson track open to public

Randy Matson Track, located inside the Harvester football stadium, is now open to the public for walking and jogging, Pampa High Athletic Director Loyd Waters announced today.

A gate, located on the east side of the stadium next to the athletic building, will remain open at all times for entry onto the track, Waters added.

"Those using the facility are asked to wear shoes with a soft sole so that damage to the running surface can be avoided," Waters said.

'I'm not like Pete Rose'

What the Phils think about heroics

SAN FRANCISCO (NEA) - While Pete Rose tromps through the thickets of baseball statistics, knocking over a fresh record with virtually every swat, there are others on the Philadelphia Phillies who take a much wryer view of a life full of decimal points.

One such is Frank Edwin 'Tug' McGraw, the esteemed and seasoned (36 years old) relief pitcher of the defending world champions.

Tug has been laboring through baseball crises on the mound for most of 15 seasons, and he doesn't even want to know how well he has done.

"I know I hold a National League record for saves," admits Tug, "but I don't know what it is and don't remind me of it. (It's 164 going into 1981, Tug.)"

"I don't want to be standing out there in the bottom of the ninth with the bases loaded, and the score 3-2, and know that if I get the guy out I'm setting a new record. My knees would start shaking."

"I never read the box scores unless it's to see how a friend is doing. I don't even like incentive clauses in contracts because then you're thinking more about them than about doing your job."

To a degree, Mike Schmidt echoes those sentiments. Mike is the reigning Most Valuable Player in the National League, perhaps the best all-around player, a long-distance hitter and a brilliant fielder, with eight consistently productive years behind him.

"Statistics only mean something," he says, "when you reach a certain stage of your career. I'm not like Pete Rose. I won't be able to play that long. I won't come near his figures. I can't see myself playing 19 years."

And yet while Rose was trying to surpass Stan Musial's record of 3,630 career National League hits, Schmidt knew he has certain goals within his reach this season, too.

"I didn't think when I played my first year in the big leagues, I'd ever hit 300 home runs," admits the man who has led the National League in circuit blows four times, most recently in 1980. He started the season with 283 home runs.

More important to Mike than the figures are the memories of the moments that produced them, and they remain very poignant to him. And meaningful.

"I remember my first base hit," he muses. "It was in 1972, and I was recalled from the minors late in the season. The hit was off Jim McAndrew (a New York Mets pitcher). I hit the ball through the hole for a single."

"Hey," says outfielder Bake McBride in the next dressing stall. "I got my first hit off Jim McAndrew, too. A year later."

"Bob Boone and Craig Robinson got their first major league hits off him," continues Schmidt. McAndrew, a losing pitcher for six of his seven years in the majors, will be more than a box score line to at least four big leaguers.)

Schmidt has the distinction of hitting four consecutive home runs on two occasions and once had a streak of seven straight hits over two games. He doesn't recall the details as vividly as his first major-league home run.

"It was against Balor Moore in Montreal," he says. "It was a three-run homer and won the game. It also stopped a scoreless streak of 25 innings by Moore."

"My 200th was off Vida Blue, to deep centerfield here in San Francisco."

"That right?" says Blue when the information is relayed to him. "I wasn't aware of it. But, hmmm, that must have been in '78 when he got one deep straight-away on me. I remember that blast."

"I also remember my 1,000th base hit," Schmidt notes. "It was off John Montefusco when we were playing the Giants in Philadelphia. It was a ground ball that Darrell Evans knocked down in the hole (between third and short), but he couldn't throw me out."

The memories grow dimmer, though, when a slugger such as Schmidt transfers his recall to defense. Although he has won five straight Gold Gloves for his fielding prowess at third base, he can't dredge up one diving stop that's fixed in his mind.

"Wait a second," he says, "I do remember trying for a double play on a slow grounder hit in the hole. I threw high to second base and then I ran down my own error in right field. I can't forget that."

"And one time I made a put out at first base. That had to be unusual. I threw wild in a game in San Diego. While Pete Rose ran the ball down, I kept coming across the infield, and I was on first base when the runner rounded the bag. He tried to come back to the base, and Pete threw the ball to me for the putout."

Holmes wants Cooney next

DETROIT (AP) - Larry Holmes accepted praise Saturday for his devastating performance against Leon Spinks and was plagued by questions about Gerry Cooney.

"That's a fight I'd like to close the books on," the World Boxing Council heavyweight champion said of a bout against top-ranked Cooney. Holmes, 31, has indicated he wants to retire soon.

"It's only a matter of time," Dennis Rappaport, Cooney's co-manager, said of a Holmes-Cooney match. But first Cooney is going to fight Mike Weaver, the World Boxing Association champion, in October, although the WBA has threatened to withdraw title recognition from Weaver if he does not first defend against James "Quick" Tillis.

"The fight has been signed with or without the WBA's blessing," said Rappaport, who added that Sam Glass of Tiffany Promotions would offer Holmes $5.5 million to fight Cooney within 90 to 120 days of the Weaver fight.

Sportsmen spend more for hunting, fishing

Americans who hunted and fished last year spent $418 million on licenses, tags, permits and stamps, G. Ray Arnett, Assistant Secretary for Fish, Wildlife and Parks of the Department of Interior, said today.

Total income collected from license sales of all kinds was $45 million over the fiscal year 1979, including $222 million for hunting licenses (up $23 million from 1979) and $196 million for fishing licenses (up $22 million from 1979).

Total number of hunting license holders in the United States reported during fiscal year 1980 was 16,257,074, down from 16,551,886 in 1979. Fishing license holders amounted to 27,994,917, compared to 27,947,397 in 1979.

Texas had 939,267 hunting license holders last year. There were 1,745,119 fishing license holders in the state in 1980.

The figures don't fully reflect the actual numbers of hunters and anglers in the United States. They don't include persons who are exempt from buying licenses to hunt or fish. In many states, special provisions are made for senior citizens, persons under 16 years of age, the handicapped, certain military personnel and many coastal states don't require licenses for salt water fishing.

In addition, some persons purchase licenses in more than one state, and therefore, are counted more than once.

The license sales figures are compiled by each state, and provided to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Revenues from the sale of hunting and fishing licenses are used by each state to conduct their fish and wildlife management, and restoration programs.

The number of license holders in each state are used by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in determining the amount of funds apportioned to the states under the Federal Aid in Fish and Wildlife Restoration programs.

Under these programs, states are reimbursed for up to 75 percent of the costs of approved projects.

For the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30, 1981, $114 million was apportioned in federal aid funds for fish and wildlife conservation.

Shiner romps, 13-7, in state semi-finals

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Shiner returned with vigor after a four-hour rain delay Saturday and belted Gladwater Union Grove 13-6 in the Class 2A semi-finals of schoolboy baseball.

Rain again dominated the state baseball tournament, which was washed out Thursday and now must be carried over to at least Monday to crown champions in all five divisions.

Playing in a hard rain, Union Grove scored three runs in seven minutes of the first inning and had John Abney on third base with a triple when the game was called temporarily.

The game resumed four hours and five minutes later and Abney came in on a sacrifice fly by Donald Johnson to give Union Grove a 4-0 lead.

Defending champion Waskom and Pottsboro were tied 0-0 in the second 2A semi-final game when driving rain forced a delay, then cancelled their game and championship games in Class A, 4A and 5A.

Shiner rebounded behind a base-clearing double by Rodney Kalich to tie Union Grove 6-6 in the second and added two runs in the third with Glen Dolezal slamming an RBI triple, and five in the fourth on three walks, two errors, three wild pitches, a double by Chris Blair and a single by Pat Hajek.

Shiner had nine hits, and three Union Grove pitchers walked a total of 11. Kenneth Machacek, who has credit for 15 of Shiner's 18 victories this season, allowed only three hits after the first inning outburst in the rain.

Summer activities lure local youngsters

CAN THEY DO IT? Instructor Betty Casevier does her best with this 8 a.m. Advanced Beginner Class at the Pampa Youth and Community Center. The two week class will end with the young swimmers able to perform the two-minute survival float, dive into deep water, swim five feet under water, swim 20 yards above water, and tread water for 30 seconds - hopefully!

Sheila Eccles*

DIVING SKILLS can be perfected during the summer months and Kathy Burnett, shown, 12-year-old Pampa Middle School student practices almost daily at the City Municipal Pool. The city pool is open daily from 1 to 6 p.m. and these summer hours may be extended based on the crowds and weather conditions.

There is never a shortage of summer activities for local youngsters.

Activities can be those started in a neighborhood, or traditional ones from rope skipping to going swimming, or organized activities such as baseball, tennis, etc.

Summer is a time for youngsters to grow in every way. Physically they seem to spurt up like summer gardens, mentally they have time to explore all the areas that interest them.

The baseball diamonds, from those at Optimist Park, to the practice fields in any vacant lot, come alive in the summer with the youngest farm league players to all the adult industrial, church and women's leagues.

The Farm league is made up of boys and girls 8 - years - old and younger. There are eight teams in Farm League.

Little League is for youngsters ages nine to twelve and there are 16 Little League teams. Babe Ruth League has two divisions ages 14 - 15 in one and age 13 in the other. There are eight teams in Babe Ruth League.

It is obvious from the number of little and big sluggers out there on the local diamonds that summer is a busy time for parents and their offspring.

In summer youngsters have a chance to try out their skills, their competitiveness, their enthusiasm and their stamina. If the sport doesn't suit them, next summer they are free to try something new.

Swimming pools offer new social contacts, and continued activity throughout the summer. Swimming skills can be perfected and possibly an interest in a future swimming career will be started.

Libraries offer activity for the minds of all school age youths who take advantage of their free time. The library is a land of reality and make-believe - hope and promise. It is a niche in the world where the seeds of greatness for countless men and women are sown.

There is a Summer Library Program for those students who are unable to reach library facilities offered to all of the Pampa residents.

Students from Austin School can visit the school library from 8:30 to 11:30 each Monday and Wednesday through June 24. Baker School students attend their library every Tuesday and Friday from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Travis School students can go to their school library from Monday and Thursday, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Lamar students can use the school library Monday and Wednesday from 1 to 4 p.m., Horace Mann students on Monday and Thursday from 1 to 4 p.m., Woodrow Wilson on Tuesday and Friday from 1 to 4 p.m. to June 26.

TAKING A SUMMERTIME DIP IN THE MARCUS SANDERS POOL, was the perfect way to spend a warm Panhandle day. Eight-year-old Chandra Dunn from Baker School had this end of the pool all to herself and took advantage of the room to practice her swimming.

A STITCH IN TIME is what it takes and Austin 4-H Club member Stacie McDonald, 11, left; Baker 4-H member, Beverly Payne, 14, center; and Austin 4-H Club member Sherrie McDonald, 9, are learning the art of sewing. The girls are making their garments for the County Fashion Review which will be held June 30th in the First Christian Church.

FUTURE HARVESTERS? Garland Nichols, shown, Pampa High School coach is spending part of his summer teaching youngsters the fundamentals of basketball. Three basketball camps are being held at the Pampa Youth and Community Center this summer. The camps help young aspiring basketball players to learn the basic information and gain skills of the game for future use.

Home canning enjoyable, money-saving

HOME CANNING
DIFFERENCE IN WATER - BATH
PROCESSING IN HOME CANNING

For those who have ever wondered about the difference in water-bath and pressure cooker processing of foods in home canning, here's an explanation.

The water-bath method is used for processing fruits, rhubarb and tomatoes and is done using a pan with a lid and rack. The rack is used to hold the jars off the bottom of the cooker.

The pan is large enough to cover the jars with one to two inches of water, so that the jars are surrounded with boiling water.

The lid is used to help retain the heat. The acid in some fruits and vegetables helps prevent the growth of some bacteria, which is the reason the water-bath process can be used.

However, low acid fruits and vegetables must be canned using the pressure cooker. The spores ("seeds") of some bacteria are highly resistant to heat, which makes it necessary for them to be destroyed by high heat. This is accomplished with the pressure cooker.

The water bath is used for such foods as peaches, plums and tomatoes. The pressure cooker is used for such foods as beets, peas, corn, beans, greens and okra.

BUYING FRUITS AND VEGETABLES FOR HOME CANNING

It is possible to determine how many fruits or vegetables to buy for home canning. About 30 to 44 pints of peaches may be canned from one bushel of peaches. And about 30 to 40 pints of snap beans may be canned from one bushel of green beans. Knowing this can help homemakers decide if it is economical to buy beans for home canning. For information on yields of other fruits and vegetables, call or write the Gray County Extension Agent for a copy of B-194 "Home Canning Fruits and Vegetables."

JELLIES, JAMS, PRESERVES
AND MARMALADES MADE AT HOME

Jellies, jams, preserves and marmalades are easy to make at home and add variety to family meals. Most of them provide a good way to use fruit not at its best for canning or freezing, the largest or smallest fruits and berries, and those that are irregularly shaped.

Basically, these products are much alike. All are fruit preserved with sugar and usually all are jellied to some extent.

Jelly is made from fruit juice and is clear and firm enough to hold its shape when turned out of the container. Jams are made from crushed or ground fruit and tend to hold their shape, but generally are less firm than jelly. Preserves are whole fruits or large pieces of fruit in thick syrup, often slightly jellied.

Not all fruits have the properties needed for making satisfactory jelled products, but with the commercial pectins now on the market, home canners need not depend on the jelling quality of the fruit for successful results. Jellies not only make taste treats for the family, but friends will love them as gifts.

Those interested in knowing more about jellies, jams, preserves and marmalades may call or write the Gray County Extension Agent for a copy of H&GB 56 "How to Make Jellies, Jams and Preserves at Home" and MP-279 "How to Make Jellies, Jams, Preserves, Marmalades and Butters at Home."

CANNING BERRIES

It soon will be berry season again. Berries may be available for cobblers in the middle of winter or for jelly making by canning them.

To can berries, just wash, drain and cap them as though preparing them for eating

WORTHWHILE

HOMEMAKERS CLUB

Members of the Worthwhile Extension Homemakers Club met recently at the courthouse annex, with Gladys Stone as hostess.

County Extension Agent Elaine Houston presented a slide show entitled "Taking a Look at What We Are Taking," which gave information on the interaction of drugs and alcohol.

Pauline Beard gave a program on "Medicine Mix-Up."

Three guests and 17 members attended. The next meeting will be June 19 at 2510 Mary Ellen, with Ann Hull as hostess.

fresh. Fill clean jars to one-half inch of the top of the jar, shaking the berries down for a full pack. Cover them with boiling syrup made with 2 cups sugar and 4 cups water — a thin syrup — or add more sugar for a sweeter taste.

Leave a one-half inch space at top of the jar. Wipe off the sealing surface of the jar and close according to the type of lid being used, following the manufacturer's directions.

Place the jars in a water bath canner, which is a large container with a rack in the bottom to hold the jars about one inch from the bottom. It should be tall enough to have space to cover the jar with about one to two inches of water, and about the same amount of space above the water.

The water should be hot but not boiling when the filled jars are placed in the canner. Place lid on canner and bring the water to a rolling boil, but reduce the heat, just to boiling. This prevents the juice from being drawn out of the jars.

Boil pint jars 10 minutes and quart jars 15 minutes.

Remove the jars from the water bath and let them cool.

The berries may also be canned without sugar. Then sugar can be added according to the way they are to be used — cobblers or jelly.

For more information about canning, call or write the Gray County Extension Agent for a copy of B-194 "Home Canning Fruits and Vegetables."

Dear Abby

Foreigner exchanges wedding vows for visa

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Put yourself in my shoes. Here's the situation: Your husband works with a 21-year-old foreigner who is in this country on some sort of two-year exchange program to learn a profession. His visa will expire in two months, and he is not yet qualified to practice his profession in his home country. In order that he might stay in this country longer to earn his professional ratings, he is marrying an 18-year-old American citizen. This girl works part time with both your husband and the young foreigner, and is head over heels in love with him. She has accepted his proposal of marriage and is planning a big church wedding for the end of June.

Your husband tells you that the young foreigner has told him that he is marrying the girl only so he can stay in this country a while longer, and has no intention of taking her home with him when he returns to his native country. You have only a speaking acquaintance with this girl, yet you are upset to know of her fiance's less-than-honorable intentions toward her. What would you do, if anything?

NAMELESS

DEAR NAMELESS: I would abide by the old caveat: "Let the buyer beware." But first I would find some way to make the "buyer" (namely, the bride) aware.

DEAR ABBY: When my granddaughter asked me when she would be 6½, I counted the months and days with her. We celebrated with half a cake and six and a half candles! I gave her half a birthday card and my husband put in a half-dollar. We sang "Happy Half-Birthday."
The next year she reminded me when her half-birthday was due, and her brothers also marked their half-birthdays on my calendar. Now my granddaughter is learning to play "Happy Half-Birthday" on the piano.

My husband says I was foolish to start this celebration. I claim the kids enjoy it and it does no harm. What do you think?
FLORENCE B.

DEAR FLORENCE: I think it's clever and fun. Tell Grandpa if he doesn't want to go along with it, he doesn't half to.

You're never too young or too old to learn how to make people like you. Get Abby's new booklet of practical advice. Send $1 and a stamped (35 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Popularity, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Friendly insects eliminate pests

By Sheila and Allan Swenson

Every year more people look for ways to banish bugs without pesticides. If you learn to encourage beneficial bugs, they'll help you win the war against unwanted and destructive pests.

Ladybugs are lovable. They have voracious appetites, too. Ladybug larvae and adult beetles can consume nearly 500 aphids a day.

These quarter-inch-long orange insects with black spots on their backs will hungrily help protect many of your garden crops. They lay yellowish-orange spindle-shaped eggs in clusters on foliage and ground litter. Their larvae, as hungry as the adults, are alligator-shaped.

Mail-order seed firms and some forward-looking garden centers have ladybugs available by the pound. You can set them free and watch them go to work protecting your treasured plants.

A helpful cannibal among good insects also merits your attention. The praying mantis is a fierce-looking relative of the grasshopper. There the similarity ends. The Chinese mantis is 4 inches long and eats insects from its nymphal state through its adult stage.

You can buy egg cases of mantises by mail and at some garden centers. These are frothy, hard cases that you simply place in bushes before normal hatching time in the spring.

Hundreds of tiny mantises emerge in April to June, depending on locale, to eat their way through your garden. They'll devour many pesky, harmful bugs. Then, females lay more eggs to provide you with more mantises for the coming year.

Aphids, mites, scales and leafhoppers ruin many plants by sucking juices from them. Green lacewings help you by sucking the juices from these insect pests. You can identify this helpful insect with its four delicate, filmy wings and its long antenna. It has distinctive reddish-gold iridescent eyes.

Most likely, it will be found wandering among the foliage preying on harmful insects. These insects, too, can be ordered from mail-order garden-supply firms.

All of these beneficial insect allies are worth befriending. Some firms also sell tiny wasps that dive bomb harmful fruitworms. They lay eggs as they sting their worm victims. Eggs hatch and wasp larvae devour the destructive worms that would otherwise feed on your plants.

Consider going natural this year in your garden. Armies of these useful insect allies can help control destructive pests for you.

Blind woman reads stories to kids

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Virginia Baker is blind. She is also a favorite "reader" among the day-care preschoolers at the Downtown YMCA's Prime Time Center.

Accompanied by her guide dog, Mugsy, and using the Braille method to read, Mrs. Baker entertains the children every Thursday morning.

"I love to read. I love children, too," she said. "I get magazines especially for this. If there's anything I think they can't understand, I explain it to them."

Mrs. Baker, 65, began going to the Prime Time Center in 1979. She had been a widow for 2½ years since her husband DeWayne died. And she was lonely.

"I just lost interest in living after he was gone," Mrs. Baker said. "I would just cry. Even two years after he was gone, I'd come upon something of his and I'd just start crying."

Several months after venturing to the Prime Time Center, Mrs. Baker suggested that the children and the elderly in separate programs could benefit from a story time together.

Being with children has helped ease the emptiness she sometimes felt from not having children of her own, she said.

The toddlers also remind her of her last memory of the sighted world, when she was 2 years old.

"My mother had gone up to the attic for something. I toddled up, too, as children do," Mrs. Baker said. "Then someone came to the door.

She hurried down and I hurried down after her and went crashing down the stairs."

The fall damaged her optic nerves and her sight deteriorated.

"I could see light until I was about 22, then it went, too," she said.

Mrs. Baker said she tries to help the story-time children understand about blindness.

They are fascinated by her guide dog and by the way Mrs. Baker reads with her fingers, sorting out her Braille dots.

"I told them when I first started out that I read altogether differently than their mommies read because I can't see to read," she said. "I tell them being blind is like being in a room with the light on — and your mother turns the light off and it's completely dark."

Ten ways to cut down on summer watering costs

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent
REDUCE WATERING
Reduce the use of water in home gardens and landscapes by using the following tips:

—Mulch to conserve water. A mulch is anything which covers the ground around plants and between rows. Mulching conserves moisture in the soil by reducing the rate of evaporation. Mulch also greatly reduces the presence of weeds, which compete with plants for precious water and nutrients.

Many organic materials may be used as mulches, such as grass clippings (let the grass dry a bit before applying to the garden), straw, hay, partially decomposed leaves or compost.

Plastic mulch also works well, is easy to use and prevents surface evaporation. Plastic mulch, when applied in the spring, keeps soil warmer and gives summer crops like tomatoes and peppers a faster start.

Try to put out mulches when the soil is moist, even if you're not ready to plant. Organic mulch can easily be pushed back at planting time; slits or holes may be cut in plastic mulch. Ground mulched when dry is apt to stay dry if rain is sparse.

—Grow cool-weather crops. In many areas, rainfall is heaviest in spring and fall. Ground water evaporates more slowly in cool weather, too, so take full advantage of spring and fall growing seasons for crops that like cool conditions: beets, broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, collards, kale, kohlrabi, lettuce, mustard greens, onions, peas, spinach, Swiss chard and turnips. Plant these crops early in spring so they finish production before hot summer.

For fall crops, sow in summer as recommended on seed packets, but keep the seed bed constantly moist for good germination.

—Plant summer crops early. Transplant indoor-started tomatoes, peppers and eggplants — and direct-sow beans, cucumbers and squash — a little earlier than usual to encourage bearing before sizzling temperatures arrive. If unusually late spring frost threatens, cover the young plants at night with hotcaps, inverted plastic milk jugs or other protective devices. Remove covers in the morning.

—Use shade to advantage. Moisture evaporates more slowly in shaded soil than in sun. Leafy vegetables such as cabbage, lettuce, spinach and Swiss chard do well in partial (not complete) shade — that is, areas which receive full sun for only part of the day. Basil, mint, parsley and tarragon are a few herbs which thrive in partial shade. But fruiting vegetables such as tomatoes, peppers and vine crops need full sun for satisfactory production.

—Space plants closely. Space plants and rows so maturing plants just overlap. This will shade the ground to reduce moisture loss and weed competition. Gardeners who use a mechanical cultivator may need to switch to hand cultivation in narrower rows.

—Harvest young. Pick vegetables when they are at their prime — don't let them overripen. Picking reduces moisture requirements of plants and encourages continued production.

—Weed regularly. Weeds compete with vegetables and flowers for every drop of water — and often the stronger, deep-rooted weeds win the competition! Remove weeds as soon as they show themselves in the garden. Some weeds, like purslane, lamb's quarter and chickweed, may be eaten if picked young.

—Water deeply, not often. Water in the evening or early morning. Use special soil-soaking hoses which allow water to drip slowly into the ground, and place hoses close to plants. Or set a garden hose, nozzle removed, directly on the ground to irrigate one part of the garden at a time.

Let water run slowly for as long as necessary to soak deeply into the soil. A deep soaking is needed only every seven to ten days unless plants show signs of wilting from insufficient moisture.

Remember that oscillating-type lawn sprinklers, if used, throw water where it may not be needed and allow much more evaporation than other watering methods. Sprinklers also cause salt burn on leaves when the water gets on the leaves while the hot summer sun is shining on them.

—Provide windbreaks. Strong or constant winds speed up evaporation. If the garden is fairly small, it may be possible to set up a temporary windbreak using fencing materials, cast-off construction materials or even worn-out bedsheets strung from posts. Just be sure windbreaks do not shade plants that need full sun.

—Save water — literally. If possible, route roof gutters and downspouts into barrels to save every drop of rainwater for vegetables and fruits.

Combine spinach, rice

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
DINNER FARE
Turkey Roll Spinach Rice
Chutney Rolls

Strawberry Custard
SPINACH RICE

Lots of the vegetable compared to the rice.
10-ounce package chopped frozen spinach
2 tablespoons butter
1 small onion, chopped fine (about 1/4 cup)
1 small rib celery, chopped fine (about 1/4 cup)

1/2 cup long-grain rice
1 cup clear fat-free chicken broth
Salt and pepper to taste

Thaw spinach, pressing out all liquid. In a 1-quart saucepan melt the butter; add onion and cook gently, stirring often, until golden. Stir in celery, rice, broth and spinach. Bring to a boil; simmer covered until rice is tender and liquid has been absorbed. With a fork stir in the salt and pepper. Makes 4 servings.

Fruit mousse: fast, fancy

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Like many other cooks these days, I love to serve guests delicious desserts that can be made quickly. A recipe I cherish for Raspberry Mousse, made with frozen, sweetened red raspberries, fits into this category. And because the mousse itself is frozen, it is made well ahead of serving. The recipe I'm offering is enough for a dinner for four, but the formula is easy to double for a dinner for eight.

Another feature of this Raspberry Mousse: it may be served various ways. Frozen in individual dessert dishes, it's ready to be topped with cut-up fresh fruit, as I suggest in the following recipe. Or it may be topped with whipped cream and garnished with fresh red raspberries. It may also be frozen in a single container and scooped into dessert dishes alongside vanilla ice cream: the combination is great.

vanilla ice cream, leaving the top plain. Properly protected, the cake goes into her freezer. On the day she is entertaining, she defrosts the cake and garnishes the top with scoops of the Raspberry Mousse (which has also been stored in the freezer) plus sweetened fresh raspberries flavored with kirsch. As you can imagine, this lovely creation always delights her guests.

RASPBERRY MOUSSE

10-ounce package frozen whole red raspberries in syrup, undrained
1/2 cup heavy cream
1-3rd cup confectioners' sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons domestic or imported kirsch, if desired
Mixed cut-up fresh fruit: pineapple, membrane-free orange sections and strawberries or raspberries

Thoroughly crush raspberries in their syrup to make a thin puree; force through a fine-mesh strainer to eliminate seeds. Beat cream until thick, adding sugar and salt; add pureed berries and beat gently to blend. Turn into an ice-cube tray without dividers. Freeze until ice crystals form around the edge — this may be only 5 minutes; stir until smooth adding kirsch if used. Turn into four 1/2-cup soufflé or other individual dessert dishes or glasses; freeze until firm; cover tightly; store in freezer. Before serving, let stand briefly at room temperature or in refrigerator to soften somewhat. Top with the mixed fruit. Makes 4 servings.

Mending Mature Marriage Husband should be smooth talker

By LOUISE PIERCE
"DEAR LOUISE: My wife is the most glib woman on earth! She's a soft touch for anybody selling anything. Last week she bought six bottles of black shoe polish because a neighbor kid had only that many left. "Last month she bought a hundred light bulbs, four mops, a dozen magazine subscriptions, a bag of paper flowers and an updated encyclopedia to supplement last year's set." All these things were stuff she already had. "We have a good retirement pension and a little savings besides, so we're not broke. But we may be if I can't stop her stupid spending."

He goes to the store for groceries for a whole bunch of people who don't have cars or are sick or are all right but just impose on him. "And me? Well, it's pulling teeth to get him to do one thing around our house. I can't ask him to work on the plumbing when he gets home at midnight from working for other people. "Would you put up with it or would you leave him and hope for a little break from getting so mad all the time? M.V." DEAR M.V.: I'd never leave such a good-hearted, helpful man. I'd be so thankful because he wanted to assist less fortunate people, or even spongers, that I'd love him for it.

"DEAR LOUISE: My wife plays bridge five afternoons a week. I thought that when we retired, we'd take walks and plant flowers and do a lot of visiting with each other. But she never has time for that. "She rushes home when she should have been here an hour before and slaps some lunch meat and bread on the table. She's been nibbling all afternoon so she's not hungry. Well, me, I'm starved for fried chicken or roast beef and maybe a pie or cake once in awhile. "Can I change her? V.C." DEAR V.C.: You can try, by explaining that you are lonesome when she is gone, that you treasure the time you have together and would love to spend at least half of your afternoons with her. If that fails to reform her, find yourself some afternoon pastime, such as dominoes or fishing or swapping stories with other men. If that fails, learn to cook. Write problems to DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

"Why do older women get taken in by fast-talking, good-looking, mealy-mouthed young salesmen? I get so mad that I order anybody off our property if I think he's selling books or chances on cars or even packages of needles. But I can't be home every minute to catch them all. Have you any advice about how I can stop my wife wasting our money like this? K.H."

Then I'd start going with him on his errands. I'll bet you have never offered to do that. I feel sure you sulk at home, getting ready to unload your resentment on him when he gets home. The two of you could enjoy his little jaunts. You could help him make new friends that you both might enjoy.

Peeking at Pampa

Oops! Goofed in last week's column. Said that Juanita Barnes and Tom Hill had planned an evening wedding in Aspen Park but were rained out, so they had had to wait until dawn the next morning. Truth is, they HAD PLANNED the wedding for dawn on Saturday, May 30, instead of the Friday evening before, so they hadn't been rained out at all. The happy couple and members of their families got together for supper Friday night, May 29, in Coronado Inn, and then they said their wedding vows at 6 a.m. Saturday in Aspen Park. Heard it was a beautiful ceremony, with breakfast served afterwards at the Coronado Inn. Someone said that the beginning of a new day was picked as the time of the ceremony to symbolize the beginning of a new life together. What a lovely idea. Pampa is really a dancing town, you know it? Adult couples enjoy square dancing, country-western, disco, ballroom and other types of dancing. Small children and young adults also take classes in dancing and perform in recitals. A little over a week ago, two lovely recitals were held in the M.K. Brown Auditorium and both were well received by applauding audiences.

Lovely dances were performed by students of the Madeline Graves School of Dance and the Beaux Arts Dance Studio under the direction of Jeanne Willingham. Both Jeanne and Madeline spend untold months of work on their annual recitals. They are appreciated by the community. Hope you went to hear the U.S. Air Force Band Concert last week. It was a truly magnificent performance, playing numbers from Beethoven to Broadway and from Sousa to the Bee Gees. It was brought by our Chamber of Commerce. Don't they do the loveliest things for us? Heard that Mildred and Roy Sullivan, Pampans for many years but now residents of Oklahoma, have been visiting here recently, much to the delight of their many friends. Jean and John Tatum, Hesta and Rue Hestad, Eunice and Walter Bohot enjoyed a dinner in honor of the Sullivans. Roy says he does a lot of gardening - and, among other things, raises beautiful radish tops but not such spectacular radishes. Ditto here in the Panhandle, right? Seems we have several look-alikes here, especially in profile. Somebody said that Bill Arrington and Gene Sidwell Jr. are "near twins" from the side view. Think both should be flattered since both are outstanding Pampa citizens. Partnership golf tournament is over for another year. According to golfers, Roy Milliron and Jerry Simpson won first place; Bob Baker (not the court reporter, the other Bob) and his partner won second. Players and gallery reported a great two days. The Calcutta on Friday night drew a big crowd. Doc Ed Williams said he did fine on Saturday but fell apart on Sunday. Understand that happened to a lot of the players. Weren't we all pleased to learn that four Pampa H.S. students will take part in a three-week European art history trip? Jana VanZandt, Jere Hink, Melinda Snow and Sandy Warner will tour Europe, making stops in France, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, Holland and England. Leta Olson, Pampa art history teacher, will be counselor for the trip. Potpourri: Ruth Osborne looking stunning at the recent Chamber of Commerce luncheon. Nancy Paronto doing a fine job in a cheerful mood as one of the Ladies' Auxiliary at the hospital. Barbara Jon doing important volunteer work at the hospital. Lots of kids of all ages enjoying the annual P.H.S. band carnival at Coronado Center. P.H.S. band members practicing on city streets before leaving for Hawaii and the King Kamehameha parade. Tell you more about a lot of things next week! PAM.

ALARMING TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) - A neighbor saw nurses going into Marlene Uhlens' home at 7:30 a.m. recently and called to inquire if anything was wrong. It turned out that the nurses, who had worked the 11 p.m.-7 a.m. shift at a hospital, were merely holding a baby shower.

'Grease' producer now tries 'El Bravo'

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1972, "Grease," the Fifties rock 'n' roll hit, opened here and became Broadway's longest-running musical, logging 3,388 performances before expiring on April 13, 1980.

Ken Waissman produced that show, which grossed over $8 million from stage, film and album rights and helped launch such stars as John Travolta, Richard Gere and Marilu "Taxi" Henner.

Now he's trying again with a new musical, "El Bravo," a Hispanic "fairy tale" about a make-believe barrio here, a young Puerto Rican lad, a villain named Honest John and the triumph of true love.

By sheer coincidence, honest, it's playing at the same elderly theater where "Grease" began — the Entermedia, known as the Eden in the "Grease" days, on Manhattan's Lower East Side.

"Who ever thought we'd be back here again? But I like the theater. It's perfect for a show that has a young cast and no major star. And of course, we also thought, 'Well, this will be terrific. Because we're back home.'"

He's not the only one come home to the old theater. Five others who helped "Grease" start there also are back with "El Bravo," including co-director Patricia Birch, Tony-nominated for her "Grease" choreography.

The new entry is billed in TV ads as from the same folks who brought you "Grease." But it arrives with a much larger cast, a far higher budget and a very different point of origin.

Waissman and his then-wife, Maxine Fox (they parted a year ago), discovered "Grease" in 1971 as a workshop production in Chicago. Co-authored by Jim Jacobs and Warren Case, it was a play with music then.

The discoverers persuaded the authors to make it a musical. Then they brought it here, running it for three months downtown under a Broadway contract before moving it to Broadway proper.

In the case of "El Bravo," the show came to Waissman, a youthful-looking man of 40 who prefers designer jeans to the usual business suit.

"We started from scratch four years ago when one of the writers, Jose Fernandez — an actor who'd written a comedy I liked — came to me with an idea for a musical," he says.

"A simple idea. It was about a young man from Puerto Rico who tries to win his girlfriend's hand. And we started collaborating then."

A free-lancer writer, Thom Schiera, was brought in to work with Fernandez on the show's book, which evolved into sort of a Latino Robin Hood tale set in modern Manhattan.

Only in this case, the star — played by an unknown, Aurelio Padron — hits only the businesses owned by the villain, Honest John, whom it seems has gypped not only our young hero but most folks in the barrio.

Joan Van Ark stopped is very unusual

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — To keep up with Joan Van Ark, a pair of track shoes might be handy — she's probably the film world's most dedicated runner.

At the moment, however, she's motionless but excited that she is going to have her picture taken for Runner's World, the magazine for serious runners. "That's such a compliment," she says. "It's like the cover of Vogue. They're tying my name with an article on women who run seriously."

Miss Van Ark, a star of the CBS series "Knots Landing," is most serious about running.

She has run in 12 marathons, including the 1979 Boston Marathon. She could hardly contain her pleasure that the women's marathon would become an Olympic event for the first time at the 1984 games in Los Angeles. "My husband played a small part in that, with his coverage and getting the Olympic committee together."

The actress is married to her high school sweetheart from Boulder, Colo., John Marshall, an Emmy-winning newsman for KNBC-TV in Los Angeles. She started running when he was in the Air Force in Germany.

"It was the first time I wasn't working," she says. "I was a little nutsy, so I went out on the base football field and started doing laps. Pretty soon I got into a mile, then three. That's when I really started running."

She became a serious runner when she started rehearsals in Ann Arbor, Mich., for "A School for Wives," the Broadway-bound play that won her a nomination for the Tony award. She started running with Jimmy Greene, a character actor from the play.

"We'd put away 12, 13, 14, 15 miles every morning before rehearsal," she says. "And I want to tell you it was 20 below, with the chill factor and everything. There were times when I came back with my feet bloody because I'd cut my toes on the ice."

"When we got to New York we ran along the East River, and on tour in San Francisco we ran in Golden Gate Park. That's how I got into distance. Obviously, I have the energy, but I had this wonderful pacer, and we would just talk. It just became a wonderful thing, and it was never just something I made myself do. Nowadays, with the schedule I've got, I have to make time for it and make myself do it."

Her busy schedule, which includes that of wife and mother, centers on "Knots Landing," a popular CBS prime-time soap opera that is connected to "Dallas."

Connie Stevens back in Hollywood, ready to work

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) -

Picture Hollywood as a place where all the available actors are lined up, waiting for their time in the spotlight. And if one of the actors has to leave for any reason he loses his place in line and has to go to the end to start over.

Certainly, that's an oversimplification, but there's truth in it. And, says Connie Stevens, she has lost her place in line.

Connie was, for a time, on her way to stardom. Warner Brothers, for whom she did the TV series, "Hawaiian Eye," had her under contract and slipped her into several movies, none of which were very good. Still, she sang and danced and was certainly as good-looking as a woman can be. So everybody figured she was going to make the world forget Monroe and Mansfield and Harlow and those other ladies.

She had her place in the line, and there were only a few ahead of her. But then she left and did Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe and all those other watering holes. She made a fortune, she says, but she was almost totally away from Hollywood for a decade.

"And I lost my place in line," she says.

But now she has come back, and she's begun to elbow her way up, because she looks as gorgeous as ever and, she says, she is a better performer than she ever was.

"I've been out on the road," she says, "for so long that the producers don't think of me any more. But I'm trying to jog their memories."

She wants to come back, settle in, stay home more so her two daughters — Jolie is 13 and Tricia is 12 — can go to the fine private school to which they were recently admitted. Until now, the girls have always traveled with their mother, getting local tutors wherever they stopped. And the girls loved the life, and, apparently, thrived on it. When Jolie was four, she learned how to call for room service — pretzels and Fresca was her first order.

But they are fast approaching high school and Connie realizes they need something more than room service, nightclubs and tours. They need the good old everyday life of girls and boys and dates and proms and education.

She says she recently realized, for the first time, that her daughters are different from her.

"I was thinking about their school," she says, "and I realized that they will be going to a school now with mostly affluent people's daughters. Until now, they were in a Catholic girls' school, and there was a cross-section of girls, but here they will all be affluent kids."

"And it made me realize that my daughters are rich kids. I was always a poor girl, and it gave me a start to realize that my daughters are rich."

They are Eddie Fisher's children, of course. And, Connie says, Fisher is not very visible in the girls' lives. She recognizes that he has his problems,

Long finds hit in 'Caveman'

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) - Lots of people like "Caveman," the nutty comedy with Ringo Starr and Barbara Bach.

Lots of people despise "Caveman," the stupid comedy with Ringo Starr and Barbara Bach.

And so we have here another example of that old philosophy: You pay your money and you take your choice. But the anti-"Caveman" people and the pro-"Caveman" people seem to agree on one thing: Shelley Long is pretty good as Ringo Starr's on-screen girlfriend. She's the one who sighs after him while he is lusting after Barbara Bach.

Shelley Long plays what might be called the Girl-Next-Cave. It isn't a flashy part, but, then, Shelley Long isn't the flashy sort. Very reliable, very decent and upright.

You would hardly expect the truth — that that sweet, demure, blonde and blue-eyed exterior is just coating. She is actually one of those Second City zanies, a very funny woman who can't help it if she happens to look like a Miss Fort Wayne doll.

And she is from that Indiana city, the only child of dotting parents. Her father took her to see plays and her mother took her to the movies. Between the two, by age 4 she had decided on a show biz career.

"Somebody asked me what I wanted to be when I grew up, when I was 4," she says, "and I said I wanted to be a clown."

That in itself is somewhat curious. She had never been to a circus. She says perhaps she had seen a clown on television — except that she doesn't think her family got a TV set until she was 5.

Still, that desire to be funny was firmly fixed in her little tow-headed skull. And she aimed at that eventuality.

June 15, 1981

Two old friends with whom you haven't been too closely associated in the past couple of years are likely to re-enter your life now. All will be glad to get together again.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be supportive of friends today. They, in turn, will back you up. If for some reasons you compete against them, it will then be a case of every person for himself. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll be very productive and industrious today, provided you don't have anyone looking over your shoulder telling you how to do this or that. Avoid kibitzers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll be rather determined to do things your way today. Your ideas will be good ones. However, someone could step in and disrupt or challenge your plans.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Give top priority today to matters important to your security and that of the family. Don't let unrelated issues get you off on an unproductive tract.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Unfortunately, not everyone today will be as broadminded or philosophical as you are. Be wary of discussing expansive thoughts with little minds.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be helpful today to persons who are truly in need of your aid. By the same token, watch out for a "taker" who's merely looking for something for nothing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Agreements you work out today with friends who have stood by their word in the past will do so again at this time. One who didn't still won't do so.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have the ability today to achieve difficult goals and make this look easy. This could arouse jealousy in an associate who is not as skillful as you are.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be patient with your long-range hopes and plans today. Trying to speed things up before their proper time could put you behind schedule.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're very patient and skillful today at handling persons important to you financially or careerwise, but perhaps not so adept with family members.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Associates will strive to be helpful today, provided you're not too pushy or demanding. Rather than dictate terms, be tactful and diplomatic.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In joint venture situations today, don't act impulsively without the consent of those involved. You could be held responsible for what you initiate.

US teen-agers 'raised to spend' in 1981

NEW YORK (AP) — Adam Rogers doesn't save his money. That troubles him.

"The highest my savings account ever got was $200. I see something I want and I spend all of it but $15," said the 17-year-old resident of Carmel, Calif. "If I'd saved it all, I'd have about $2,000 now."

Adam spends his money on his friends. When they don't have money for the movies and Adam does, he pays. He dips into his savings to buy himself clothing or a watch that catches his eye.

"I buy stuff I could wait and get for Christmas or my birthday. But I get impatient and buy it myself," he says.

Adam's not alone.

"If I really want something, I just go out and get it," says Charlie Eberle, a rangy, blond 17-year-old who lives in Peoria, Ill.

None of this surprises Lester Rand. With his Rand Youth Poll, he has been measuring teen-age attitudes about spending for 28 years. And, in the last inflationary decade, Rand has seen the economic verities steadily reverse.

"Our young used to be told that a penny saved is a penny earned and to save for a rainy day. That is not the prevailing philosophy today, Rand says. "Young people in this country today are being raised to spend."

Rand's poll has measured some interesting glitches. Consider:

In 1981, 65 percent of teen-agers told Rand's pollsters that thrift was seldom or never discussed at home or in school. Twenty-five years ago, 69 percent said thrift was mentioned "a great deal."

Rand's survey, a geographically balanced poll based on interviews this year of 3,091 teen-agers nationwide, has a statistical margin of error of about 3 percent. He sells the poll to major companies seeking to attract teen-age customers. Coca Cola is a customer. So is General Motors. So is General Mills.

Rand says the vast majority — some 60 percent — of American teen-agers are suburbanites and they're spending money like crazy. Last year, teen-age consumers pumped $39.1 billion into the U.S. economy.

"People ask, 'What can a kid buy?' Well, obviously, they've never had one in the house," Rand says.

What teen-agers spend money on has changed over the years. In the 1960s — when most people under 30 felt out of step wearing anything other than raggedy jeans and used flak jackets — Rand measured a large dip in teen-age girls' spending on grooming products and clothes.

Since then, Rand has observed a steady increase in spending among boys for grooming products like deodorants, hair dryers, colognes.

But inflation and the increased availability of personal credit have worked a dramatic, apparently enduring change in teen-age spending habits and attitudes, Rand says.

"There's a lot of inflationary psychology at work. People are throwing a lot of money around because they know it won't be worth as much tomorrow," he says. "And people are buying everything from clothes to cars on credit."

But kids usually can't get credit, he notes, and that produces this result: "On a percentage basis, kids may well save more than their parents because they have to save to buy big items that their parents can charge — clothes, cars, stereos."

Kids know it, too: In 1981, 67 percent of teen-agers told Rand their parents were not thrifty; in 1956, before the credit card revolution, 56 percent of the teen-agers said their parents were thrifty.

Kimberly Chambers, a 17-year-old from Pikesville, Md., saves her money for "long term" objectives. Since January, for instance, she has been tucking away money for a summer vacation trip.

"Most of the time if I know I'm going to be doing something big, I save for it," Kimberly says. When she's not saving, she says, she spends her money on records, tapes and cosmetics. She doesn't worry about inflation:

"It's going to be expensive anywhere," says Kimberly. "You can't beat it."

In Rand's 1981 survey, he found that 69 percent of teen-agers viewed themselves as "gullible consumers" who spend money on things they later realized they didn't want. In 1956, most teen-agers considered themselves good shoppers; only 41 percent felt they were gullible.

In Brookfield, Wis., Mariann Bobrowitz, a bespectacled 13-year-old, says she often regrets the way she spends her babysitting income.

"A lot of times when I'm in a store with my friends, I buy food and stuff that I don't really want."

Rand says that "kids feel badly about being gullible consumers because when they spend money on things they don't really want, that leaves them with no money."

Charlie Eberle does not classify himself as gullible. Mostly, he buys baseball and fishing equipment, Charlie says, and he knows what he wants. But his friends are different:

"If they like something, they just get it. They don't even think about it. They figure they can always get more money."

THAT'S CHINA. A transistor radio built into a Chinese flower vase is among the many attractions presently seen at exhibition of the Chinese People's Republic which opened Friday in Cologne, Germany. Whoever wants to buy a Chinese radio and a flower pot can kill two birds with one stone. Of course, the plastic flowers in the pot are delivered with the whole thing. (AP Laserphoto)

News in brief

BRISTOL, R.I. (AP) — The state Human Rights Commission says a male teacher who was denied a job as a physical education instructor for girls at Bristol High School was a victim of sex discrimination.

The panel, in a ruling made public last week, said Douglas J. Lanzire must be given the job by the start of the next school year. It said Lanzire was denied the appointment "even though he was more qualified than the female who received the job."

A school committee said appointing Lanzire to the post would have left the high school with four male and two female physical education teachers, not enough to provide proper supervision of the girls locker room. It plans an appeal.

SEATTLE (AP) — A Roman Catholic archbishop is urging people to refuse to pay half their federal income taxes as a protest against the nuclear arms race.

The Most Rev. Raymond G. Hunthausen, archbishop of Seattle, made the proposal Friday in an address to the annual meeting of the Pacific Northwest Synod of the Lutheran Church in America at Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma.

"Our paralyzed political process needs that catalyst of non-violent action based on faith," the archbishop said. "We have to refuse to give income — in our day, tax dollars — to our nuclear idol."

But Hunthausen said he hadn't taken his own advice yet. "In all honesty, my vision of a sizable number of tax resisters is not yet one which I have tried to realize in the most obvious way, by becoming one of their number."

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Health ministry officials say contaminated, unbottled cooking oil may be the cause of a flu-like ailment that has killed at least 31 people.

Two people hospitalized with the symptoms died Saturday, the latest victims in the seven-month medical mystery that has stricken primarily rural areas.

Officials said autopsies on some of the victims showed common traces of an unspecified toxin.

Distribution of unbottled cooking oil has been banned until it can be determined whether it is the source.

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos has dispatched three army battalions to the southern Philippines to deal with increasing violence as Election Day — Tuesday — nears.

Police in Zamboanga City said about 40 Moslem rebels ambushed a convoy of loggers Saturday, killing six, and wounding four others, before the private security guards escorting the trucks could drive the guerrillas off.

Military sources here said eight soldiers and policemen on an "intelligence" mission were killed Friday in the Zamboanga area by Marxist insurgents.

On the light side

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A frantic feline had enough lives left to survive a 50-mile ride from Newington, N.H., to Portland while trapped in the wheel well of a car, authorities say.

The fluffy black cat apparently crawled into a structural recess inside a fender when the vehicle was parked Thursday at Pease Air Force Base in New Hampshire, police said.

An unidentified woman, unaware of her stowaway, then drove the car to Portland. She became suspicious when she stopped for a red light and heard a yowl.

Brian Hill, a parking enforcement officer, was at the scene when the woman pulled into a gasoline station, and employees tried unsuccessfully to scare the cat out with an air hose.

When the cat finally bolted and headed out a garage door, Hill grabbed it.

The animal was taken to the city's animal pound, where it will be watched for 10 days for any signs of illness.

The driver of the car said the cat, which was wearing a collar and what appeared to be a rabies tag, may belong to one of her neighbors.

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Police Department will launch an advertising campaign to attract minority recruits if a $357,000 budget addition is approved, police chief B. K. Johnson says.

"There's a general mistrust of police officers by the minority community," Johnson said Friday. "We're trying to turn that around to prove to them that the police officers are here to serve them...and that they have nothing to fear."

Johnson called the department's minority recruiting problems "extreme" at the same time he announced a new class of cadets is one of the biggest in the Police Training Academy's history.

HOUSTON (AP) — Child welfare officials say four children left in the emergency room of a Houston hospital last week still "don't realize they're abandoned"

HOUSTON (AP) — Phillip Daniel Tompkins had to take a strong position in the family after his father died, but remained sensitive enough to write love poems, the convicted killer's sister has testified during the punishment phase of Tompkins' trial.

No one was sure how long the four children had been sitting in the Ben Taub Hospital emergency room last Saturday when a security guard noticed the note pinned to the shirt of one of the boys.

"I am not able to take care of them. Will somebody help them please," the note read.

Welfare workers want to find the children's mother to see if they can help her keep the children or arrange for a swift adoption.

"Maybe we can find a way to help her keep her children," said Harris County Child Welfare spokesman Judy Hay. "Or maybe she could help speed up the process of finding them a new home."
