HOME AT LAST The first group of tanned and happy Pampans arrived home by bus this morning at 9:15 a.m. as the last leg of their journey to Hawaii came to a close. These women, part of the first group to arrive, await transportation to their homes. Pampa High School Band members were to arrive at approximately noon today. (Staff Photo)

If air traffic controllers strike will be prosecuted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is prepared to prosecute air traffic controllers if they carry out their threat to strike next week and ground more than half the nation's commercial air traffic, the president's spokesman said today.

Negotiations between the government and the controllers broke off Wednesday when union negotiators walked out of informal talks after rejecting the Federal Aviation Administration's wage offer.

"We have made a generous wage offer," spokesman Larry Speakes said. "We will not tolerate an illegal strike," Speakes said, confirming that the administration was considering court action in the event of a walkout.

By law, controllers are forbidden from striking and a federal court injunction against a walkout is in effect. Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said Wednesday he would not rule out prosecution of those who strike, even recommending that some controllers be jailed.

Robert Poli, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (PATCO) said he stands firm on a 7 a.m. Monday strike deadline if an agreement is not reached by midnight Sunday.

FAA Administrator J. Lynn Helms told a House Public Works and Transportation subcommittee hearing today that he has received no indication that the union is interested in further negotiations.

He said the government is ready to resume negotiations within the framework of its offer.

"We are not going to tolerate an illegal strike," Lewis told a news conference. By law, controllers are forbidden from striking and a federal court injunction against a walkout is in effect.

A strike would be felt across the economy as travelers and shippers of air freight would find long delays and no aircraft at all along many routes.

"If a strike occurs it will come at a high cost to the union, seriously inconvenience thousands of air travelers, and it will cause millions of dollars in economic loss to the airlines and to air commerce," Lewis said.

He called the controllers "among the best paid employees of the federal government" and accused them of "breaking faith" with the public with their demands for a minimum $10,000-a-year pay increase and other benefits.

Lewis described the FAA's wage offer as "serious and reasonable" and said it would cost the government $40 million a year, an overall figure he said the administration cannot exceed. The union's wage demands would cost three times that amount and are unjustified, he said.

Even those major carriers who are able to fly might not choose to do so if the feeder lines bringing passengers into their system are shut down.

Economy growing faster than in any quarter since 1978

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy grew even more rapidly than reported earlier during the first three months of this year, expanding at an 8.6 percent annual rate, the most for any quarter since early 1978, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department also said that before-tax corporate profits rose 3.8 percent in the January-March quarter rather than 3.7 percent as originally reported.

The revisions came one day after separate new reports on Americans' personal income and on U.S. factory use indicated the national economy was barely crawling along by May. But analysts described that situation as a nearly inevitable "breather" after the robust first-quarter growth.

"Real" GNP — the inflation-adjusted total value of the nation's goods and services — rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $2,853 trillion in the first quarter, today's Commerce Department report said.

The annual rate of increase had been reported at 6.5 percent two months ago, then was revised to 8.4 percent last month. Even the lowest of those figures was the biggest quarterly gain since the 9 percent growth in the second quarter of 1978.

Real GNP rose 3.8 percent in the final quarter of 1980.

Meanwhile, the report also revised a GNP-connected inflation measure downward — setting the broadly based GNP implicit price deflator at 9.8 percent. The deflator had been first reported at 7.8 percent, then was revised to 10 percent one month ago.

The report also said that before-tax corporate profits rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $259.1 billion in the first quarter.

Corporate profits from current production, adjusting for depreciation and inventory replacement costs, rose 10.7 percent rather than 10.5 percent as first reported.

As reported earlier, Commerce Department officials said rising personal consumption spending and exports helped push the rapid growth in the first-quarter GNP.

That gain, the most in about three years, surprised many economists. They later said the first quarter pushed by auto rebates and other retail sales promotions, apparently had borrowed economic growth from the following three months.

Private analysts said there was no cause for concern in Wednesday's Commerce report that personal income rose a lackluster 0.6 percent for the second month in a row in May, a gain which probably was eaten up immediately by inflation.

The Reagan administration, meanwhile, is predicting little or no overall economic growth in the second and third quarters. If Congress passes the president's economic package, that should spur some recovery by the end of the year, administration officials say.

Haig calls for stand against 'forces of evil'

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., speaking today at a memorial to America's World War II dead in the Pacific, said the monument was a reminder that Americans and other free peoples must stand together to confront "the forces of evil."

Haig laid a wreath at the base of the circular memorial to 36,279 servicemen killed or missing in action.

The sacrifices "of those heroes of 40 years ago must serve as a reminder that there are forces at work today who seek to force a stark change through bloodshed, through terrorism, through so-called wars of liberation," Haig said.

"Our presence here this morning reminds us that we too must sacrifice, sacrifice with vigilance and unity to ensure that we maintain collective strength to prevent the forces of evil, who would resort again to conflict, from having their way."

Haig also laid a wreath at a nearby cemetery for Filipino war dead.

The secretary had lunch with President Ferdinand E. Marcos at Malacanang Palace. The government radio station said Haig delivered President Reagan's congratulations on Marcos' re-election Tuesday and told him Vice President George Bush will represent the United States at his inauguration June 30.

Haig arrived in Manila Wednesday from China to meet with the foreign ministers of the five members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations — Thailand, Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore and the Philippines. The foreign ministers are holding their annual meeting and this year discussed ways of pressuring Vietnam to withdraw its 200,000 troops from Cambodia.

Haig is scheduled to meet Friday with Japanese Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda, who is also here for the ASEAN meeting.

The American secretary goes to New Zealand Saturday for a meeting of the ANZUS pact nations — Australia, New Zealand and the United States.

Justice Stewart will retire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice Potter Stewart, a polished writer of opinions and a "swing vote" between conservatives and liberals on the Supreme Court in recent years, will retire next month after nearly 23 years on the high court, it was announced today.

Neither the court nor Stewart, 66, in a letter to President Reagan gave any reason for his retirement. Stewart, named to the Supreme Court by President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1958, will hold a news conference Friday morning.

The announcement prompted immediate speculation over whom Reagan would select as Stewart's successor.

The president has promised that one of his first Supreme Court nominees will be a woman. In a statement in Los Angeles last Oct. 14, during the presidential campaign, Reagan said, "One of the first Supreme Court vacancies in my administration will be filled by the most qualified woman I can possibly find."

In the court's 193-year history, it has been served by 101 men and no woman.

The court released a letter Stewart sent to Reagan, dated May 18, in which he said he would retire "at the end of the day on July 3, 1981."

That date may be revised, however, because the court has agreed to hold a special summer hearing to determine the legality of the agreement that former President Carter negotiated for the release of 52 American hostages from Iran.

Stewart was appointed to the Supreme Court in 1958 by President Eisenhower. Before that, he had served as a judge on the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Neither the announcement nor Stewart's letter to Reagan gave any reason for his retirement. A court spokesman said Stewart would hold a news conference Friday morning.

Airports, border points alerted for Bani-Sadr

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Tehran's revolutionary prosecutor alerted airports and border checkpoints today to prevent missing President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr from fleeing Iran, the state radio in Tehran reported.

Prosecutor Assadollah Lajvardi said contact with the beleaguered president has been lost for the last two days, prompting the alert at the airports and border posts.

This was the first official confirmation that Bani-Sadr had disappeared. Earlier reports said the president was on the run from his fundamentalist foes.

"I have not got any information on him or his family," Bani-Sadr's sister Robabeh Sakineh, a nuclear physicist, said when reached in her Tehran residence by telephone from the Associated Press office in Beirut. "We have entrusted him to God. May God keep him."

Other sources in Tehran said there were unconfirmed reports that the now-powerless president had taken refuge in his native city Hamadan, in western Iran, as the nation's parliament prepared to debate his political fate on Saturday.

There was speculation that the first elected president in Iran's history was planning to flee to Paris, where he spent 16 years in exile during the reign of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

But Mehdi Bazargan, Iran's first post-revolution prime minister and a Bani-Sadr friend and supporter, told The AP in a telephone interview he believed the president still was somewhere in the capital.

Bazargan said he and his supporters in the Freedom Movement and the moderate National Front Party have resolved to boycott Saturday's and all other open sessions of Parliament "because we are being threatened and insulted and we are all in physical danger."

France tells of secret agreement with Iraq

PARIS (AP) — French officials have disclosed a secret agreement which they said gave France the right to oversee the operation of Iraq's nuclear reactor until 1989 to prevent the Arab nation from building a nuclear bomb.

The reactor in Baghdad was destroyed this month by an Israeli bomber. Israel said it had information that the Iraqis planned to use the reactor to manufacture atomic weapons.

Michael Pecqueur, chief administrator of the French Atomic Energy Commission, disclosed to reporters from the newspaper Le Monde and other newspapers and radio stations this week the terms of a secret agreement between France and Iraq signed in 1979.

Pecqueur said the agreement would have prevented Iraq from using the reactor to build a nuclear bomb. There was no immediate comment from Iraq.

The agreement, Pecqueur said, provided for all experimental programs to be developed by a joint committee of experts of the two countries, chaired by the heads of their atomic energy commissions.

Veto-proof UN resolution is sought

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States and Iraq are trying to negotiate a veto-proof U.N. Security Council resolution that would condemn Israel for its destruction of an Iraqi nuclear reactor. The Reagan administration said while it could not support Israel's claim that Iraq was planning to build a atomic bomb at the Baghdad reactor, that assessment drew a sharp rebuke from Israel's friends in Congress.

Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick told reporters Wednesday night after working for two hours on a draft resolution with Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi, Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and the ambassadors of Britain and Mexico. She said she would confer with officials in Washington on the new draft. Hammadi said there could be a consensus or there could be a breakdown. Mrs. Kirkpatrick would not say whether the draft called for sanctions against Israel. U.S. officials have said privately that Washington might support a resolution condemning Israel's June 7 raid and calling for compensation to Iraq, but certainly would veto sanctions or reparations. The 15-member council has spent five days debating Iraq's demand that Israel be punished for destroying the Baghdad reactor. Israel claims it bombed the reactor to stall Iraqi plans to build atomic bombs for use against the Jewish state.

Texas trucker honored for rescue

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Port Worth trucker who risked his life to rescue a fellow trucker from a burning tractor-trailer rig has been awarded the Presidential Medal of Honor.

Calvert was cited for saving the life of Keith Broadus of Waco, who became trapped in his truck after a tire blew out near Reagan, Texas, on Aug. 5, 1980.

Calvert, employed by Central Freight Lines, was only the eighth recipient of the Presidential Medal of Honor since the civilian citation was authorized 24 years ago.

School board pays bills and hires teachers

The Pampa Independent School District's Board of Trustees approved payment of $132,776.59 in due bills and red four new teachers Tuesday in action not reported in Wednesday's issue on Tuesday's board meeting. Of the accounts payable total, $1,753.68 was taken from the district's general operating fund, $497 from the EA Part B fund, $4,660.88 from the SEA Title IV Part B fund, $13,842.73 from the cafeteria fund, and $2,022.30 from the stadium and gym fund.

Jerry Haralson, business manager, reported no unusual items are transactions in the current school budget. He added a final amendment to the 1980-1981 budget will be submitted at a school board meeting in July. Following a closed personnel session, the board voted to reassign Raymond Thornton from assistant principal at Pampa Middle School to principal of Woodrow Wilson Elementary. New teachers hired by the board include Cheryl Free, mathematics.

Pampa Middle School, Beth Matulich, school nurse; Miriam M. Lynch, home economics co-op; Pampa High School, Suzanne Wood, music; Baker Elementary. The board also accepted the resignations of Jan Seitz, kindergarten, Austin Elementary; Robin Scarborough, third grade, Austin Elementary; Fran Stelman, CVAE Homemaking, Pampa High School; Kristi Ferguson, special education, Baker Elementary.

State senator denies investigation wrongdoing

SALVESTON (AP) — A state senator says he did nothing wrong when ordered a second investigation of a Texas City nursing home which a previous team had cited for deficiencies. State Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, testified for an hour Wednesday before a grand jury looking into the deaths of 12 patients at the Autumn Hills nursing home.

Brooks said he asked Health Department Commissioner Robert Bernstein for the second assessment after a top official at the home complained that members of the agency's first team were "unprofessional." "I'd do the same thing tomorrow," Brooks said.

The first team of inspectors recommended that federal funding of the home be suspended. The second team reported the deficiencies had been corrected and recommended that no money be withheld. Brooks said he frequently responds to complaints from nursing home industry officials and nursing home patients' families by relaying their complaints to state agencies. O.L. Hamilton, who inspects nursing homes for the state Senate committee that Brooks chairs, also testified before the grand jury Wednesday.

Gunman kills 3, is shot by police

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A 37-year-old man who seized seven hostages in a bank and said he "wanted to be executed" was shot dead by police after killing three people, including his mother, officials said. Seven were wounded.

Police said the three-hour siege of terror ended Wednesday when William Bernard Griffin stepped into the view of a police sharpshooter after fatally wounding one of the hostages in the doorway of the Security Trust Co.

officers outside the bank were injured. Attempts to negotiate with the man failed, and a special-weapons team was called. Police Chief Delmar Leach said the gunman had the bank manager read a message over the telephone to law officers.

The shooting began shortly before noon when Griffin, following an apparent family dispute, took a shotgun to his mother's house in a normally quiet neighborhood on the city's west side. He killed her and a wallpaper-hanger working at the house and seriously wounded his stepfather, police said. Griffin left the house and headed toward the bank two blocks away, "walking fast with a rifle over his shoulder," said Scott Daitz, 27, of Greece, N.Y., who was delivering potato chips to a bar across the street from the bank.

The message said he wanted to be executed. Leach said. "He would give police a half-hour before he would start shooting the hostages."

The gunman entered the bank, and then "a whole bunch of people came running out of the bank in all directions — just scattering," Daitz said.

Daitz's partner, Billy Winkler, ran across the street "to help get them out of there," Daitz said, but then a motorcycle policeman arrived, and "a shower of shots began."

After the hostages had been inside the bank about two hours, two employees escaped out a door, followed by a third — Margaret O. Moore, 30, of Rochester — who was shot and fatally wounded by the gunman, police said.

Police said Griffin fired about 80 shots while holding seven people hostage. Four civilians and two police

Local man in jail following chase

A Pampa man remained in jail in lieu of bond today after his arrest following a high speed chase through city streets late Tuesday involving a motorcycle and two city police units.

The pursuit ended in injuries to a police officer and the arrest of the Pampa man when he lost control of his vehicle at the corner of McCullough and Huff.

Denman said Dunham was standing in McCullough at its intersection with Nelson when the motorcycle, traveling west, struck him with the front fork of the cycle. The police captain said Dunham stood in front of the motorcycle waving his arms in an attempt to stop him.

Officer Greg Dunham, 27, was treated at the Highland General Hospital emergency room for injuries to his left elbow and released a hospital spokesman said today.

Randale Moxley, 24, of 1309 Duncar was arrested by city police following the incident.

Seeing the motorcycle was not going to stop, Denman said Dunham moved to the side, but the cyclist reportedly swerved toward him.

Bond for Moxley was set at $1,000 by Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford. Moxley was charged by police with driving under the influence of drugs, driving with a suspended license and fleeing and evading a police officer.

The police officer chased the motorcycle down Browning to Ward and down Somerville to the M. K. Brown parking lot. The pursuit continued down Lincoln to the intersection of Dwight and Gwendolyn where Patrolman Oren Potter had parked his unit crossways in the intersection to block the motorcycle. Denman said The motorcyclist went through a private

House committee restores deleted funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Education and Labor Committee has voted to restore millions of dollars for student loans and programs for the elderly and handicapped by making further cuts. Reagan wants in child nutrition and public jobs programs.

A $37.8 billion package of cuts recommended by House committees was accepted Wednesday by the House Budget Committee and sent to the floor. The vote was a mere formality required under the law and did not indicate Republican approval of the cuts.

law firm representing the coalition, said millions of dollars and thousands of lives could be saved by promoting breast feeding. The Infant Formula Council, which represents the manufacturers, said the rights groups were using outdated and misleading figures.

Debate by the full House is not expected until next week at the earliest. House Democrats are putting up more resistance to Reagan's proposed tax cuts. The House Ways and Means Committee rejected the president's formula for business tax cuts.

—Israel's friends in Congress are criticizing the Reagan administration for questioning the Jewish state's assertion that its bombing raid on an Iraqi nuclear plant was an act of self-defense. Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston vowed to refute today Undersecretary of State Walter J. Stoessel's assessment that there is no evidence that Iraq had decided to develop nuclear weapons.

—A filibuster against an anti-busing amendment continued in the Senate. Backers of the amendment to a Justice Department spending bill said they will not try to cut the filibuster off this week. The amendment, sponsored by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., would bar Justice Department lawyers from seeking court-ordered busing for school integration. Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., who is conducting the filibuster, conceded he does not expect to prevent the amendment's approval.

Astronaut Bean resigns, to paint moonscapes

HOUSTON (AP) — Alan L. Bean says he's through walking on the moon and plans to devote himself instead to painting it.

The idea of becoming a career artist "did not just pop into my head," Bean said. "I've been doing more of weekends going to museums and art shows. I decided if I was going to try and make a contribution, I had to start now."

Bean began studying art while in the Navy in the late 1950s. He said no other artist has had a first-hand view of space.

"I am going to sit in front of my easel and become as fine a painter of moonscapes as I can," Bean said.

Tower says Bentsen will be hard to defeat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, has warned fellow Republicans that Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen will be hard to defeat in the 1982 elections.

In a news conference, Tower refused to be drawn into any remarks that might be taken as critical of Bentsen, who three years ago took a virtually neutral position and gave little support to the race that then-Rep. Bob Krueger made against Tower.

"I think obviously the major Republican effort should be on winnable races. Period," Tower said. "Obviously, there are some very qualified Democrats whose views on national issues probably more closely coincide with the consensus Republican view than with the consensus Democratic view. Obviously we'd like to have them," Tower said.

Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas and State Sen. Walter Mengden are contemplating a challenge of Bentsen, but neither has asked his advice, Tower said.

A reporter asked Tower's opinion of a pollster's view that the best way for Republicans to beat Bentsen is to portray him as a wealthy Texan out of touch with the voters.

Tower was asked specifically if Reps. Phil Gramm of College Station and Kent Hance of Lubbock, who have played leading roles in pushing President Reagan's spending and tax cut programs, are among the "very qualified" possible converts.

His advice, he said, "would depend on who the person was and what the political situation was at the time. But I would think it would be fairly confidential advice, and I would not tell the press."

"I think I'd have no comment on that," Tower said. "Shouldn't the GOP concentrate its resources toward reelecting Gov. Bill Clements and getting more Republicans elected to the House, somebody else asked?"

Tower said. "I'm not going to call out names," Tower said.

Federal judge says Houston schools properly integrated

HOUSTON (AP) — In a stinging indictment of forced busing, a federal judge says Houston's public schools have done the best they can to achieve racial balance and should be required to do nothing more.

"Court-imposed busing is extremely disruptive to public education," U.S. District Judge Robert O'Connor wrote in a 39-page memorandum and order issued Wednesday.

"It tends to divert attention from the foremost goal of the schools to provide the highest quality education for all students and to exacerbate racial conflicts and biases," the ruling said.

The decision by O'Connor was the latest chapter in a desegregation suit filed against the Houston Independent School District nearly a quarter of a century ago.

The original suit was filed in September 1956 on behalf of a 9-year-old black girl who was denied admittance at an all-white elementary school two blocks from her home. The Justice Department intervened on her behalf in the 1960s, and Hispanics entered the case in the 1970s.

Since then, O'Connor said, "The HISD has taken legally required affirmative action to achieve the greatest possible degree of school desegregation, having taken into account the practicalities of the situation."

now 34 years old, could not be reached for comment immediately.

In his order, O'Connor expressed a distaste for busing, noting Houston's streets were congested with traffic and the school district spans about 313 miles.

"Widespread compulsory busing of HISD students would exceed the remedy necessary," he said.

O'Connor noted that 97 of the district's 238 schools were one-race schools, with at least 90 percent of the student body in one racial group.

"The diminishing white population makes it impossible to integrate the one-race minority school in the inner city of Houston," O'Connor said. "There are simply not enough white students in the HISD."

The judge said the proportion of white students in Houston's school has decreased from about half in 1970 to 27.3 percent today.

O'Connor, the fourth federal judge to preside over the long and complicated case, also said the school district has successfully integrated its faculty and staff.

Course publicity stuns principal

HOUSTON (AP) — The principal of a school which had planned to offer a summer course to teach children to shoot guns says he is astounded by the amount of publicity the idea generated.

"Gosh, we got calls from everywhere," said Kenneth Royal, principal of Clear Lake Elementary School. "I got a letter from a gal in Chicago who said I was a legend in Chicago."

Royal said. "It was taken we were going to do all kinds of things, like the Ku Klux Klan was doing," referring to reports that the Klan has run paramilitary camps for teen-agers and young adults.

Royal said the same course had been offered the last three summers. It was held in 1978 and 1979, but was canceled for lack of students in 1980.

The course would have cost $30 per pupil and would have included 20 days of instruction with BB guns at a makeshift rifle range. The children were to fire a 20-gauge shotgun the last day of class.

Suspects charged in cigarette theft

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — FBI agents say charges are pending against a New Mexico man arrested in the attempted hijacking of a tractor-trailer loaded with 800 cases of cigarettes.

Two other suspects, Roy B. Scrivner, 49, of Window Rock, Ariz., and Loren S. Stalcup, 25, of Gallup, N.M., were formally charged Wednesday with theft of an interstate shipment and kidnapping.

Both were returned to the El Paso County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond each.

The course was canceled Wednesday because not enough students signed up.

"We only got about 11 and we needed 18 to make the class," Royal said.

Royal said he believed misunderstanding led to most of the media interest.

"Most of the time a kid gets a BB gun for Christmas," he said. "You go out and hunt the ditch or you go shoot out street lights or whatever. We were just trying to do something constructive."

Harrelson associate called before Wood grand jury

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A man described as a lifelong friend of convicted hired killer Charles V. Harrelson has been called to testify before a grand jury investigating the assassination of a federal judge.

George Edward "Pete" Kay, a Huntsville nightclub operator, was subpoenaed Wednesday but waited all day without being called. He is expected to take the stand today in the panel's investigation of the 1979 shooting death of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Kay was asked to testify as the grand jury looked for evidence of any link between Harrelson and convicted narcotics trafficker Jimmy Chagra.

Government attorneys have listed Harrelson and Chagra as "targets" of the two-year-old investigation.

Kay's attorney, Jim Moore of Houston, said he expected Kay to be offered immunity and compelled to testify. Two others who have refused to answer questions under similar circumstances have been jailed for civil contempt of court.

The bearded Kay would not comment on whether he would testify under immunity and Moore said, "we'd better wait and see what the government is going to do."

The grand jury interrogated eight witnesses on Wednesday, including a casino dice dealer who once received a $6,600 tip from Chagra and two Florida pilots who flew Chagra to Las Vegas.

The panel, meeting for the first time in a month, also pursued an alleged "payoff" for Wood's assassination in 1979.

Robert Mike Springer, who said he was a dice dealer at Binion's Horseshoe Casino in Las Vegas, said he was questioned about whether he remembered Chagra and Harrelson gambling together in 1979.

"They (jurors) thought I could connect Chagra and that other guy (Harrelson), and I couldn't," Springer told reporters after his appearance.

Springer, said, however, he remembered Chagra because the high-stakes gambler "toked" (tipped) him $6,600 one time, but that by house rules the tip had to be divided with all other casino employees on that shift.

Fort Lauderdale charter pilots Dan Pavelka and Bill Dimauro said they were questioned about the all-night flight of Chagra and two Mexican maids from Florida to Las Vegas.

Pavelka said Chagra used the alias "Jimmy Alexander" on the Lear Jet flight and he remembered nothing special about it.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Bureaucrats admit policies' inefficiency

Perhaps the knowledge that they were leaving office in a few weeks engendered the unusual frankness. Perhaps they figured there was nothing to lose in telling the truth. For whatever reason, reports produced by task forces commissioned by the Carter administration in the latter part of his term in office included some unusually sharp criticisms of government regulatory policies.

A bit late, admittedly, but still fascinating. For example: Outgoing Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland released a report contending that federal farm policies helped to destroy the family farm.

"We found that even the programs that were designed to protect the farm sector accelerated and continue to reinforce trends that push families out of farming, keep new farmers out and concentrate control of the resources that produce our food into the hands of fewer persons," said Bergland.

That's not a surprise to students of regulation who look at the phenomenon with open eyes.

Regulation increases paper-work and the cost of compliance, making it harder for the small operator to stay in business.

Subsidy programs naturally favor those with more land to subsidize. Bergland's recommendations to restructure the farm program didn't go far enough, of course. You can move the bureaucrat out of the government, but you can't take the governmentality out of the bureaucrat.

Meanwhile, off in another corner of Washington, the staff of the U.S. Regulatory Council was releasing a report suggesting that coal industry complaints about overlapping and conflicting jurisdictions are mild compared to the reality of the horror. According to the council report:

"It is little wonder that it must seem impossible for coal operators to make their way through the system; some small operators simply don't make it." It is any wonder that the giant oil companies, who already have battalions of lawyers on the payroll and years of experience dealing with regulatory lunacy, are becoming an increasing factor in the coal industry? How widely will it be noted that this move has been facilitated by government regulations?

These and similar reports from the outgoing Carter crowd and now emerging to public view should provide a firm base for Reagan's people to move even more boldly. What is needed is not just a little modest snipping here and there, but wholesale elimination of regulations.

There is now a large and comprehensive body of scholarship on government regulation of the economy, emanating not just from government agencies and congressional reports, but from scores of independent scholars. The most important conclusions to be drawn from this impressive corpus are that government regulations tend to drive up the cost of doing business, stifle competition, drive out small operators, retard innovation and create special interests at the expense of taxpayers.

The new administration, now that Reagan is back at the helm and with even greater public support, has an opportunity to sweep away significant portions of the bureaucratic encrustations of the past few decades. The mandate is there. The scholarly justification is there. Many of the members of the Reagan team have informed us that the intention is there.

Will the actions of the Reagan administration match the boldness of its words? We hope so, though there is at times disturbing evidence to the contrary. But, when even the denizens of the past bureaucracy acknowledge regulatory failures, there can be little excuse for inaction by Reagan.

We'll be watching.

One restriction calls for another

The late economist Ludwig von Mises spent the better part of a productive lifetime elaborating and documenting the point that when the government intervenes in the marketplace it creates distortions and problems that virtually demand further interventions. It is a point that is valid for other limitations of freedom besides economic regulations.

In the early years of this century immigration to the United States was very severely limited by law. An elaborate and discriminatory quota system was erected. This limitation on the free travel and settlement of human beings didn't eliminate the tendency of people to want to move to a relatively free society where they had a chance of making a living. The "tired and poor" continued to flock to this country, and do so even to this day. But because of some arbitrary laws, many of them are officially classified as "illegal aliens."

As von Mises could have predicted, this restriction on freedom has created numerous social problems and as demand for new laws and restrictions to confront them. A presidential panel called the Select Committee on Immigration and Refugee Policy has been laboring mightily to deal with some of them. It isn't surprising that most of its recommendations involve further restrictions on the freedom of more people.

First, the panel will recommend severe sanctions on employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens. In effect, they're demanding that employers become enforcers, doing elaborate background checks on prospective new employees. It's an admission that the authorities can't enforce the laws, but instead of taking the sensible step of repealing the laws, they want employers to start doing the government's work. The result of such a law, of course, will be that people with Hispanic surnames will have a tougher time than they do now getting jobs. If companies know that they'll be subject to stiff penalties for hiring a Gomez or Sanchez without checking his immigration status, they'll be less inclined to hire Gomezes and Sanchezes no matter where they were born or how easy it is to check it out. Is this good for any community?

The next proposal is some "more secure" form of identification for workers. This might mean a registration number for all persons entering the work force—in addition to social security, it could mean a federal identity card for all citizens. If it didn't apply to all citizens, how could employers distinguish between a bona fide citizen and an illegal alien?

And we thought the idea of employers checking your papers and background, and various authorities with the right to demand "let me see your papers," was confined to totalitarian countries.

The progression is logical. If you restrict human freedom in some way, the action is bound to have unintended side effects, and people will still find a way around the law. If you will find a way around the law, you will find a way to maintain the original restriction it's almost a necessity to impose another restriction, another and yet another.

There's another brand of logic available, of course. That is, if a restriction of freedom proves unenforceable and creates unforeseen problems besides, perhaps it's time to repeal that original law. Legislators and regulators like the general run of humanity, are subject to mistakes. But their mistakes affect more people and are harder to correct.

It was at least a well-intended attempt, and considering the deadly seriousness of the situation in El Salvador every good intention is to be welcomed.

The Socialist International had offered its good offices in seeking a solution to the civil conflict that has turned the Central American country into a battleground between right and left at the cost of the lives of thousands upon thousands of Salvadorans caught between the two forces.

The offer of the body representing most of the world's Socialist and Social Democratic parties has been, however, diplomatically declined by the civilian president of El Salvador's military-dominated governing junta.

Jose Napoleon Duarte was being not only diplomatic but politically practical in saying no thanks. It is not the first time the question of outside mediation has come up. Earlier efforts along this line by an ad hoc association of Christian Democratic parties from Europe and Latin America crashed and even before they got off the ground.

And the Socialist gesture was probably if anything less promising of results. It is questionable whether Duarte's right-wing officer colleagues, who color even Christian Democrats pink, would even communicate with Socialists, let alone accept advice from such dangerous radicals.

Also, outside mediation does not have much to show for various efforts in recent years. Consider the marathon U.S. involvement in the Mideast, where Egypt and Israel may have ceased firing bullets and bellicose words at each other but the basic problem, the Palestinian issue, has not noticeably been moved nearer a solution. Also Lebanon, where bullets are still firing. Likewise the Persian Gulf, where both a committee of Moslem governments and a United Nations emissary have been trying to talk the Iraqis and Iranians into calling off hostilities.

So much for practicality, which Duarte did not mention in rejecting the Socialist offer. What he did say was that he was still firmly of the belief that the solution of El Salvador's problem was political and best achieved through the electoral process. Elections are tentatively scheduled for next year.

Well, now. The United States has 56 military advisers in the country and is providing $75 million in military aid, courtesy of the Reagan administration. But even the Carter folks were supplying the junta and army with noncombat odds and ends such as helicopters, plus plenty of advice.

If that's not intervention, what is it? A package tour?

The quiet American ambassador And while we are on the subject of El Salvador you may recall a few months back the dismissal of the American ambassador.

The sacking of Robert White was about as public as such diplomatic shuffles can be. White House and State Department sources, as well as White, kept press and public well-informed as it progressed.

That, of course, was back when we were receiving plenty of information on El Salvador, including the new administration's determination to draw a line there against Communist subversion in the Americas. Which turned out to be a line, with its implications of possible military involvement, that didn't go over so well with the public.

Well, Americans now have a new representative in El Salvador. He is Deane R. Hinton, career foreign service, who has now presented his credentials privately. So privately that the event was closed to the press, even U.S. correspondents whom the American embassy had pledged to keep informed.

Intervention, anyone?

Social Security idea

By WILLIAM STEIF

Tom Woodruff has a dynamite idea: he wants to raise the Social Security payroll tax.

Woodruff, who's executive director of the expiring Presidential Commission on Pension Policy, may have the key to keeping the Social Security system solvent and lowering your income taxes.

Woodruff says "it's essential to link tax policy to retirement policy." He would provide this linkage by giving income tax deductions to all people who pay their Social Security payroll tax—that's the little box marked "FICA" (for Federal Insurance Contributions Act) on your paycheck.

The way Social Security works today is that you, the employee, pay a proportion of your wage, deducted automatically, into the system. Your employer matches your contribution. For your employer, his half of the total payment is a business expense, a deduction that he takes when he files his income tax return, thus lowering his income tax. You and I, as employees, are not permitted to take that deduction.

This year, for example, the FICA will be collected on all wages up to $29,700. The FICA this year is 6.65 percent, matched by your employer. That means that if you earn $29,700 this year you'll contribute $1,975 to Social Security and if you were permitted to deduct that amount from your income tax return next April 15, you'd save yourself hundreds of dollars. Under the theory of "supply side" economics that seems to have gripped the nation, you would presumably invest your savings, stimulating the economy.

But you can't do that now. Only your employer can, by virtue of his matching your 6.65 percent FICA.

Woodruff calculates your 6.65 percent deduction would result in a $25 billion tax cut next year. That's not as much as the $44 billion tax cut supposedly generated by the 10 percent Kemp-Roth proposal next year.

But Kemp-Roth may not fly, because the federal budget would be so far in the red. More likely is the $28 billion tax cut advocated by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. And that's right in the ballpark with Woodruff's plan.

Now here's the other horn of the federal budgetary dilemma: The fear that the Social Security system will "go broke" — be unable to pay benefits — by the fall of 1982, if something isn't done.

Woodruff notes that under current law the Social Security payroll tax rate will rise to 7.05 percent, matched by employers, on Jan. 1, 1985, after which there should be little worry about the system going broke until the turn of the century. He says raising the 6.65 percent to 7.05 percent next Jan. 1, three years ahead of the scheduled increase, would pick up $9.9 billion next year, averting any chance of the system going broke.

"My own feeling," he says, "is that if we keep the (6.65 percent) tax intact, or maybe accelerate it a little (to 7.05 percent next Jan. 1), and make it deductible, the income tax savings will more than offset the raise."

Woodruff's idea has several virtues. I think. For example:

— It is more equitable than Kemp-Roth because it provides more tax relief to hard-pressed lower- and middle-income earners. But higher-income earners will, of course, get their share, too.

— It doesn't take nearly as deep a bite out of the federal budget as Kemp-Roth.

— It is spread to nearly everyone. More than 90 percent of the American workforce pays Social Security taxes; the only large group that doesn't are federal, state and local employees, who have their own favorable pension plans.

— It preserves the basic benefits structure of Social Security at least for people planning to retire within the next generation, so that these people would not be hurt by the Draconian proposal the Reagan administration has recently made to cut benefits.

Woodruff passed his idea on to the Senate savings, pensions and investment subcommittee, headed by Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., the other day. If you think it's got some value, write Chafee, room 5229, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20510, or Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., Room 2213, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20510, or Rep. Daniel Rostenkowski, D-Ill., Room 2111, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515.

Guns and butter

By ART BUCHWALD

The good news from the State Department is that the United States is stuck with 100,000 tons of surplus butter. The bad news is that the only customer for it is the Soviet Union.

According to my friends at the Washington Post, Robert Kaiser and Lee Lescaze, Secretary of State Al Haig is holding up the sale of the butter because he is afraid of sending the wrong signal to the Soviets.

I called my man at the State Department to find out what was happening.

"We're going ahead with the wheat sale," he said, "because we feel that it is not rewarding the Soviets for their aggression in Afghanistan. But if we also provide them with butter for their bread, they'll think we're not serious about our hard-line stand."

"That's good thinking," I said. "I've been to the Soviet Union and they can't eat their bread without butter on it."

"The secretary feels that our butter should only go to countries who play by our rules. If we sell the Russians the butter at the same time we sell them wheat, we would be giving up one of our biggest chips in any summit talks between Reagan and Brezhnev."

"I'm on Haig's side. What's the problem?"

"The problem is that Uncle Sam is up to his eyeballs in surplus butter, and if we don't get rid of it soon, a lot of it will go rancid. Therefore, the Agriculture Department wants to unload the butter on the Soviets now, while they're still interested in buying it. Agriculture is putting pressure on the president to make a bread-and-butter package deal at the same time."

"But don't they see that would be a wrong signal?"

"Agriculture isn't interested in diplomatic nuances. They've been buying up surplus butter from the American farmer at 10 million pounds a week, and if they can't unload it, they're going to have to eat it."

"Why don't we sell the butter to our friends and spite the Russians?"

"Because most of them have enough butter, and, besides, if we glutted the market in the Free World with 100,000 tons, the price would tumble and the president would have every butter-producing NATO country on his back."

"Suppose we sold the butter to the Soviets, but printed on each package in Russian that the proceeds from the sale were going to buy new weapons to prevent them from continuing their expansionist policies?"

"It's not that simple. Butter on the world market is now going for $1.05 a pound, half of what it's selling for in the United States. This means that not only would the Soviets have our American butter but they would be getting it at 50 percent cheaper than what the American consumer has to pay for it. How can the president persuade Americans they have to give up butter for guns, when we're practically giving the butter away to our archenemy?"

I said, "Wait a minute. I have a face-saving way out for you. The State Department announced we were going ahead with the grain sales because the Soviets didn't invade Poland. Why don't you declare you've decided to sell them butter, because they didn't invade Yugoslavia?"

"We're way ahead of you," he said. "We're going to announce it next week."

Letters to the editor

Editor: Is being legal always right? It has been said that the government can do legally what is considered a crime by the public—the taxpayers.

This has happened in Pampa a number of times in the past few years. First our school board when they ignored the voice of the people. Lately, with our city commissioners, regarding entering private property because something may not look good; namely, this time old junk autos.

Surely there is another acceptable way without jeopardizing our rights. Why not a mandatory fine until such nuisances are cleared up.

I have no axe to grind as I consider the mayor and the commissioners as personal friends, but I don't think proper foresight was used. In fact, I'm surprised.

"Supply-side economics, how I love ya, how I love ya..."

Board to stop accepting loan requests

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — With a waiting list of more than 14,000, the Texas Veterans' Land Board has voted to stop accepting requests for loans from veterans because the program is short on money.

The board, however, asked Gov. Bill Clements on Wednesday to allow the July 13 special legislative session to consider two proposals to keep the popular program alive.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong told Clements the program "is almost unbelievably sound."

Armstrong, chairman of the three-member board, wrote the governor that the Senate had approved the proposals during this year's regular session, but they were "bottled up in (House) subcommittee, reportedly at the instruction" of Speaker Bill Clayton.

With the long waiting list, "Obviously there is no lack of interest in the program. For that matter, no opposition, except perhaps that of the speaker, surfaced during the regular session."

Clayton responded that the special session would act on his proposal to set aside part of any state surplus for water projects "and to increase the interest on state bonds authorized but unissued. Should the governor include in the call the issuance of additional bonds, that would be considered in the ordinary way all legislation is considered."

"I do not in any way oppose the veterans' land program, but I believe there are alternatives which might provide better benefits," Clayton said.

The veterans' land program began in 1949, and since then nearly 73,000 veterans have purchased more than four million acres of Texas land. Nearly 31,000 of the veterans have paid their loans in full.

So far, $700 million in bonds have been authorized but only $74 million remain to be sold.

"We are almost out of money to lend now," Armstrong said in a statement, "and if we don't get some help from the Legislature, we have no choice but to stop taking applications."

The land board adopted a resolution asking the governor to include two proposed constitutional amendments in the special session. One would permit the board to sell its last $74 million in bonds at higher than the 6 percent interest ceiling, and the other would authorize an additional $250 million in bonds.

The program offers loans of up to $20,000 to purchase 10 or more acres. The current interest rate is 7 percent on a 40-year loan.

The state retains title to the land until the loans are paid in full.

Repayment of the bonds is secured not only by the credit of the veteran," Armstrong told Clements, "but also by land which has uniformly escalated in value. As a result, the program has consistently received a triple A rating by the bond houses. The chances of the state having to make good on these bonds is virtually zero."

General Telephone vows to try again for rate increase

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — General Telephone officials, unhappy with the tiny rate hike awarded Wednesday, say they'll be back real soon to try to get more money from its 1.3 million Texas customers.

The company wanted a $45.3 million rate hike package, but the Public Utility Commission, unimpressed with GTE service, granted only a $2 million increase.

Monthly rates for residential and business service will not be increased. The San Angelo-based company wanted to hike residential rates by up to $3.34 per month and business rates by up to $11.09 per month.

The commission voted 3-0 to approve a hearing examiner's report that also recommended continuing a $4 million annual penalty for bad service. A hearing will be held by December to determine how long the penalty should remain in effect.

R. W. Britt, president of General Telephone of the Southwest, said the small increase was inadequate.

"We have no alternative but coming back as rapidly as possible (with another rate increase request)," he said, adding another request could be filed by October.

The commission first ordered the $4 million penalty last year when GTE was granted a $35.1 million increase. Customers in the company's widespread Texas service area said the service is bad, sometimes worse than bad.

GTE lawyer Ward Wueste told the commission the penalty causes "a problem and a dilemma" for the company.

"We believe we've had a lot of progress. The progress has a price and that's why we're back here," he said. "It's cost us a lot of money and that's our dilemma."

Further improvements depend on attracting needed capital, said Theodore Brophy, chairman and chief executive officer of GTE. He said the company now meets 19 of 22 PUC service standards.

Brophy said the penalty "serves more as an impediment to improved service," but PUC Chairman George Cowden disagreed.

"Your own activity in the past few months shows the commission sent a message and you received it," he told GTE officials.

John Bell, who was PUC general counsel during last year's GTE rate hearing, appeared Wednesday for the Texas Municipal League, which wanted GTE to refund $9.6 million. Bell agreed with Cowden that the penalty has been effective.

"It's certainly not the ratepayers' fault," he said of GTE's service problems. "It's kind of sad it took a penalty to get the company's attention."

The PUC-approved plan will mean higher rates for mobile telephone service and "foreign exchange" service — which allows local calls to nearby cities. GTE also will be allowed to charge $10 for prewiring of new homes, a service that has been free.

GTE customers no longer will receive a $5 credit for bringing their phones in when they discontinue service. Customers who do not bring their phones in will be billed for a service call.

Judge is appointed to hear Vickie Daniel murder trail

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A Beaumont judge presiding over the trial of Vickie Daniel, accused of killing former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., says he will set up a pre-trial conference for attorneys in the case within two weeks.

Judge Leonard Giblin, of the 252nd District Court here, said Wednesday he had agreed to accept the trial assignment after being contacted by 2nd Administrative District Judge Max Rogers.

The case will be heard in Liberty County.

Pre-trial hearings are scheduled for October in Liberty, but Liberty County District Attorney Carroll Wilborn said earlier this week that he hopes motions tied to the case can be "taken care of" before then.

Mrs. Daniel, 33, is accused of killing her husband with a single shot from a .22-caliber rifle Jan. 19 at the couple's ranch, a mile north of Liberty.

She won an emotional six-week battle April 23 for custody of her two young sons fathered by Daniel. Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph, had filed suit to gain custody of 1-year-old Marion Price Daniel and 3-year-old Franklin Baldwin Daniel.

Wilborn said he might ask for a change of venue if it "would be difficult to get a fair and impartial jury" in Liberty County.

Giblin was appointed to the case after both Liberty County district judges, W.G. "Dub" Woods and Clarence D. Cain, asked in May to be excused from hearing the trial.

Child dies in fire in house

VIDOR, Texas (AP) — A state fire marshal is investigating the cause of a fire that killed 8-year-old girl who refused to follow 11 family members from their burning house, according to Volunteer Fire Marshall Dub Davis.

Davis declined to speculate on the cause of the fire, but a sheriff's deputy said he suspected a gas leak in the laundry room caused the fire.

Rachelle Packard was sleeping in an upstairs bedroom and refused to jump out of a window into her brother's arms, said 17-year-old Steve Packard. She then tried to run down the steps out of the house.

"I said, 'I said I can catch you,'" Packard said. "She said, 'I can't make it.' She made it down to the edge of the stairs before she must have passed out."

Her father, Bernard E. Packard, 42, returned to the house to rescue his daughter, but neighbors finally dragged him from the residence as the blaze intensified.

Packard was admitted to St. Elizabeth Hospital in nearby Beaumont, where he was reported in fair condition with facial burns.

The fire apparently began in the rear of the six-bedroom, two-story house and quickly engulfed more than half the residence, firefighters said.

Firefighters had to drain the family's swimming pool and send for a portable water tank to fight the fire, which was discovered by a paper carrier about 1:30 a.m.

The family said 10 children, ranging in age from 18 months to 17 years, were sleeping at home and an 11th child was staying with an uncle when the fire began.

WALDEN BEACH? Lifeguard Nancy Todd of Boxboro, Mass., cautions some swimmers recently on the beach at Walden Pond in Concord, Mass. This isn't normal oceanside beach. Walden Pond is an international symbol of peace and serenity since Henry David Thoreau built a one-room wilderness hut there in 1845. (AP Laserphoto)

Thoreau would cringe at Walden today

By JAMES SIMON
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, Mass. (AP) — It was a typical June day at the beach: radios blaring, Frisbees flying, a vendor hawking ice cream and a line of sweltering motorists waiting to get into jammed parking lots. But this setting was no average oceanside beach. It was Walden Pond, an international symbol of serenity since Henry David Thoreau built a one-room wilderness hut in 1845, lived alone for two years and later recounted his experiences in the classic book "Walden."

Thoreau would wince if he saw it now. "He certainly wouldn't come here today," Roland Wells Robbins, a member of the Walden Pond Advisory Committee and a past president of the national Thoreau Society, said with a sigh. "Look around you. Beer drinking, pot smoking, dog and pet violations. Motorcycles roaring through the woods. Nude bathing...."

For decades, debate has raged over proper use of Walden, a 417-acre site in a forested suburban area northwest of Boston. The area became a state park six years ago after serving as a county park for 50 years.

Time and the crush of an expanding population have taken their toll on the tranquility that attracted Thoreau. Robbins says the area has steadily waned since World War II and a "mob scene" has existed for at least 10 years.

State environmental officials concede that they have problems managing the popular park. But they say a major question is how to balance the demands of "Thoreauvians" for an unspoiled natural area against the recreational needs of the 632,000 people who visited the area last year.

"It is a state park and there aren't that many major swimming areas in that area," said Gilbert Bliss, state director of forests and parks. "The beach is only at one end of the 142-acre pond, and there is still plenty of wilderness."

Bliss confirmed most of the violations cited by Robbins and blamed them on lack of police supervision. But he said conditions have improved since two years ago, when area teen-agers used the park as a hangout and a rape was reported in the parking lot.

Some visitors say they're surprised to find no replica of the cabin that Thoreau built 136 years ago on land borrowed from friend and fellow author, Ralph Waldo Emerson. A pile of rocks plus a simple stone marker, surrounded by posts and a heavy chain, now mark the location.

"Are you kidding? The vandalism and souvenir seekers would not permit a house to stand overnight," said Robbins, a historian who discovered the exact spot where Thoreau constructed his simple wooden dwelling.

"People have said we could build a very secure replica and have bright lights and a TV camera monitoring it," said Robbins. "But this is a nature sanctuary and that would obviously defeat the purpose."

After Thoreau ended his experiment in rugged individualism in 1847, the pond and shoreline remained in their natural state for the next 75 years. In 1922, the descendants of Emerson, who owned much of the land around the lake, decided to give control to Middlesex County for use as a reservation. Their deed specified that bathing and boating be allowed, but forbade ballgames, bicycling, open fires and development.

Use of Walden Pond became an international issue in 1957 when the county, with little notice, uprooted 100 trees and started to clear a slope of the pond to build a ramp and bath house. The ramp would have allowed buses to drop passengers off just 70 feet from the side of the lake.

"All holy hell rang out," Robbins recalled. "People called it desecration and an illegal attempt to change the deed."

The Thoreau Society formed a committee that sued the county and prevented changes in the pond area.

But interest in the park continued to grow, especially in the 1970s, when Thoreau's work was taken to heart by a new generation worried about a pollution-filled world.

"We see a lot of out-of-staters here — New York, Michigan, Florida...some from abroad," said state conservationist George Manogian, who works at Walden. "But the people from Massachusetts, very few are for history."

Elderly woman crushed to death in her driveway

DEANSBORO, N.Y. (AP) — A 99-year-old woman whose eyesight and hearing "weren't too good" stepped behind a car as her 89-year-old sister was backing it out of her driveway and was crushed to death, authorities say.

Eva R. Peck, 99, and her sister, Clara Adams, were "always together" during the more than 40 years they shared a home, said Barbara Ames, a neighbor with emergency medical training who rushed to the sisters' house after Wednesday's accident and tried to help.

"They were just the sweetest, loveliest, sharpest ladies you could ever meet," Mrs. Ames said.

Other neighbors who ran to the rescue jacked up the car, and ambulance attendants detected a faint heartbeat in Miss Peck. Mrs. Ames said. But she was pronounced dead on arrival at Faxton Hospital in Utica, 10 miles northeast of Deansboro.

"It's hard to believe this all happened," Mrs. Ames said. "We were all looking forward to (Miss Peck's) 100th birthday."

Oneida County Investigator Clifford Baker said, "Mrs. Adams was in an extreme emotional state." He said Miss Peck apparently stepped behind the car, and police were considering the killing accidental.

For four decades, the sisters shared a neat frame house within view of the home where they grew up in Deansboro, a farming community in central New York.

"They were really self-sufficient," Mrs. Ames said. "You'd drive by there and see that house so well kept up with the beautiful gardens. And Clara was always driving them somewhere."

"Miss Peck had some of the usual things you'd associate with being 99. Her hearing and her eyesight weren't too good," said Mrs. Ames. "But she was in very good shape, and very healthy."

Neighbors said Mrs. Adams, who had five children, began living with her unmarried sister after her husband died. Another relative, a nephew, lives across the street. Neighbors said the two women were nearly inseparable, frequently shopping and visiting friends together.

In 1978, police said, Mrs. Adams and Miss Peck were robbed of antiques, jewelry and about $70 in cash by three men who broke into the home while the two women were playing cards. The robbers shoved them into a corner and ripped out their telephone.

Man linked to three bank robberies, officer shooting

DALLAS (AP) — Police say a busy bank robber — who held up three Dallas-area savings and loan offices within three days — apparently has been put out of business after he wounded a police officer in a holdup attempt.

Authorities apprehended William James Hensley, 47, at his Garland home Wednesday afternoon and charged him with the three tick-ups and with shooting a Wylie police officer during his third robbery.

Hensley was arraigned Wednesday in Garland by Municipal Judge Randall Grubbs on three counts of aggravated robbery and one count of attempted capital murder.

He was charged in connection with the Wednesday robberies of a bank at Wylie and a savings and loan association at McKinney and another savings and loan holdup Monday in Richardson, police said.

Hensley was in Collin County jail Wednesday in lieu of bonds totaling $175,000. Also arrested was Betty Johnson, 43, who was charged with aggravated robbery in connection with the Wylie heist. Her bond was set at $25,000.

Wylie police officer Johnny Bridgfarmer was in Collin Memorial Hospital Wednesday night in "very good" condition with a gunshot wound to the hip, hospital officials said.

Wylie police would release no information on how Bridgfarmer was injured during the hold-up there, which occurred about an hour and a half after the McKinney bank was robbed shortly after noon Wednesday.

Bridgfarmer, 21, said Wednesday night from his hospital bed that he could not reveal details of the hold-up, only that the gunman "got the drop on me."

McKinney police said a man fitting Hensley's description walked into the Town and County Savings and Loan office Wednesday and demanding money from branch manager James Underwood.

The man said he had a gun and patted his back pocket, where Underwood told police he saw what appeared to be a pistol.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved two amendments Wednesday that would forbid the embattled Legal Services Corp. from lobbying or filing class-action suits against federal, state or local government.

It also knocked down another amendment that would have given lawyers for the agency the right to go on strike.

Among other amendments still to be voted on was one by Rep. Chick Kazen, D-Laredo, to prohibit the agency from representing illegal aliens.

Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, sponsored the amendment to prevent LSC lawyers from filing the class-action suits. It carried by a 241-167 vote.

"This amendment would eliminate a large number of grievances my constituents have against the Legal Services Corp.," said Wilson, who had indicated he would vote to keep the agency alive if his amendment were approved.

Less than 5 percent of all LSC activity is tied up in class-action suits, Wilson said.

"Doesn't it make sense that if you have something that represents so small an amount of the cases but causes 90 percent of the trouble, to just get rid of it?" President Reagan has called for abolishing the agency, but the House bill calls for giving it $260 million for 1982 and for 1983.

Wilson said approval of his amendment might forestall a presidential veto.

Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Houston, was one of four Texans who opposed the amendment. He said Wilson's measure would deny poor people their most effective way to achieve their rights. They're more effective collectively than individually, he said.

Rep. Jake Pickle, D-Austin, and Rep. Sam Hall, D-Marshall, rose in support of Wilson's amendment.

"It was originally designed to help the poor people with divorces, accidents and things like that. When they establish themselves beyond this, to big class-action suits, it's obvious we should put some prohibition to stop it," Pickle said.

Rep. Jim Collins, R-Dallas, who has asked for federal investigations into LSC lawyers' representation of illegal aliens, rose in opposition of an amendment that would have allowed strikes.

"We've heard so much criticism against this agency, and now we have lawyers trying to strike? Where will this ever end? It started out as something to protect the poor people, and now we've got them trying to protect themselves. This is one of the worst amendments ever offered," Collins said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, says his Armed Services Committee will hold hearings next Wednesday to explore ways to make sure that children of military personnel continue to get free public education.

"Under no circumstances should a soldier be required to pay tuition for his child to attend public school," Tower said.

The hearings have been called in response to the concern expressed by military personnel in light of public deliberations on the future funding of impact aid.

Impact aid is provided by the federal government to school districts with a significant percentage of military dependents in their attendance areas to compensate for the lack of local tax revenue from military installations.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill to increase the donations that corporations can make to charity was introduced Wednesday by Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston.

"The role that efficient and effective charitable organizations play in the American society cannot be over-emphasized," Archer said.

His bill would amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 by allowing all corporations to increase the amount of deductible contributions from 5 percent of their annual taxable income to 10 percent, or 5 percent plus $100,000, whichever is less.

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department energy officials say they will send Congress a plan within three months to ensure that farm interests have needed fuel in times of severe supply disruptions.

The plan, just being developed jointly by the Agriculture and Energy departments, would replace special farm-fuel allocation provisions set to expire this fall, Martin Fitzpatrick, head of the Agriculture Department's transportation office, said Tuesday.

"We will have a proposal that will address the problems of farms in a severe situation," Fitzpatrick said. He said it will be aimed at ensuring both adequate fuel supplies and fair prices.

Earle Gavett, acting chief of the department's energy staff, also told the Senate Agriculture subcommittee on rural development, oversight and investigations that without the special allocation regulations about to expire, farmers would not have been able to harvest winter wheat or plant spring crops two years ago.

Officials of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Farmers Union and the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives strongly supported retention of some emergency allocation plan.

Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., subcommittee chairman, was critical of what he said was the Energy Department's "abysmally indifferent attitude" toward fuel priority for farmers because no Energy Department representative appeared at the hearing.

And Andrews charged that the special fuel allocation regulations were not invoked in the spring of 1979 until "the situation got so bad that the president and the secretary of agriculture got together and told DOE to stop dragging its heels."

He called the problems farmers faced in 1979 "an example of what can happen even when we had in law the type of emergency allocation requirements we are about to see expire."

In recalling President Reagan's pledge during last year's campaign that he would do all he could to ensure farm fuel supplies, Fitzpatrick said the administration remains committed to a "free-market" approach to energy prices.

"In most cases of disruptions, we clearly need to rely on markets and avoid controls and allocations," he told the subcommittee.

But, he added, "In the unlikely event that a very severe disruption of fuel supplies does occur, it is in the national interest for agriculture and its related industries to be protected appropriately by high-priority allocation of fuel and we will consider that alternative."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corn planting in the major production states was about 69 percent completed as of mid-June, compared with 88 percent last year and the normal rate of 85 percent, says the government's Joint Agricultural Weather Facility.

In the eastern Corn Belt, heavy rains and saturated soils continued to delay planting of corn and soybeans, the facility said Tuesday.

"The soil moisture supplies were adequate to surplus in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee," the report said. "Elsewhere, supplies were short to mostly adequate."

Looking at winter wheat, the report said the crop was in fair to good condition and about 94 percent headed, up from 93 percent a year ago.

Soybean planting in the major states was 69 percent complete, lagging behind last year's rate of 88 percent.

A jolting journey in refurbished elegance

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer

ABOARD THE BANDEIRANTE, Brazil (AP) — Not far into the 695-mile train trip from Brazil's gleaming capital to the industrial center of Sao Paulo, a passenger may be pardoned for thinking the journey is the closest thing to riding on the back of a Brazilian armadillo.

The Bandeirante train — named for the bold Portuguese explorers who carried flags, or "bandeiras," as they settled the Brazilian interior 200 years ago — bounces along a single pair of rails at the less-than-breathless average speed of 30.8 mph.

The journey traverses flat plains, dotted with solitary trees and huge termite mounds inhabited by wild parrots, giant snakes and, indeed, armadillos. The train passes the ramshackle houses of subsistence farmers, where faces appear in rough-hewn windows along the way.

Further south, farm houses are surrounded by banana trees full of purple, unripened fruit. Cotton and coffee plantations along the way give a sense of what the American South of colonial days might have looked like.

There is an attempt at elegance on the Bandeirante train, refurbished since it last made this trip 10 years ago. There are comfortable recliner bed-seats in the first class car, and each passenger gets an individual pillow and blanket. The restaurant car serves inexpensive drinks, and the steak is reasonable.

But the reality of the trip sometimes seems like a Peter Sellers spoof.

The train has a sleeper car. But ticket sellers have warned that couples must produce their marriage certificates before paying the special passage of the equivalent of $30 dollars each. Other fares run between $15 and $20. The Federal Railway Authority later overruled the marriage requirement, but admonished that "libidinous acts" on its trains would be punished.

In the dining car, nicely dressed people are trying to sip their

e. A waiter smiles sheepishly. One traveler, a Harvard University graduate student, laughs at the mishap — until a fat man with a cane passing by loses his balance and tumbles into the student's lap.

Despite the glitches, the Bandeirante has become an instant hit. The platform of the modern train station in Brasilia is filled with passengers and curiosity-seekers. Entire families come to the station to look.

"Most of these people have never seen a passenger train before, except in the movies," said one young Brazilian ranch-owner as we gazed at children pressing their noses against the windows to get a look at the lucky passengers.

Motor vehicles have been the preferred mode of travel in this vast country, with a population of 120 million and a land mass larger than the contiguous 48 United States. A car can travel between Brasilia and Sao Paulo in about 12 hours. As the train plods along for 22½ hours, no fewer than 30 modern jetliners fly between the cities, in 85-minute flights.

The rancher said it was more convenient for him to take the train than either a bus or a plane from Brasilia to his home in Ribeirao Preto, 200 miles closer than Sao Paulo. "This trip takes two hours longer than the bus (which makes local stops), but I get a good night's sleep on the train," he said.

The Federal Transportation Ministry projects spending several billion dollars in the next decade to upgrade the nation's subpar rail lines. Despite its size, the nation has only 20,500 miles of railroads, one tenth the number of lines in the United States. It has the additional problem of being forced to run two different rail systems because the track comes in two gauges.

'I like to bring this stuff back'

'Bunt' can restore the rustiest wreck

By Judy Hamilton

BENKELMAN, Neb. (NEA) - Al "Bunt" Reining never knows when he will come home to find a fender, a bumper or a headlight of an old car lying on the ground near his farm home.

He's not always sure where the pieces came from, only that someone is doing him a favor.

That's because Reining restores old cars and trucks and tractors and just about anything else old that is in pieces.

"For years I've picked this stuff up," says Reining. "People know I'm looking for it and they'll drop it off. I'll come home and find a piece of car lying in the yard. When you find a piece you need, it just sort of gives you an excitement."

Organs, rocking chairs, a bobbed, corn shuckers, buggies, a gondola for grape harvesting, coffee grinders, an ice box, a windmill and plows are among Reining's other restoration projects, but the cars and trucks probably gather the most attention.

Reining says he lost count long ago of the number of restored trucks and cars and long before that quit counting organs and furniture.

"I don't know if I'm dumb

"I DON'T KNOW if I'm dumb or stubborn or determined," says Al Reining. Here he poses with his latest restoration, a 1928 Model A roadster.

"but I kind of like to bring this stuff back."

or stubborn or determined," he says, "but I kind of like to bring this stuff back."

Most of his finished vehicles are under plastic and cloth coverings in a large steel building on his farm. He doesn't mind pulling off the protection to show his work to admirers. School children and old-car buffs are frequent visitors.

"I don't know if I'm dumb

There are a lot of things I don't suppose many youngsters have ever seen," says Reining. He adds that he gets as much excitement from spectators' enthusiasm as from the start of an engine after hours of work.

Among the vehicles is the car that started it all: a 1917 Model T Ford touring car that Reining spotted in 1963 on a hillside near Wray, Colo.

Someone had written "granddaddy of them all" on the side of the car. The original side curtains were flapping in the wind. Kerosene park lights were still in place.

Reining fell in love with the vehicle — and with restoration work. Before the car was perfect, future projects had begun to pile up.

His latest completed project is a 1928 Model A roadster. Reining says that it took five vehicles to create the car.

He found the first parts in a wreck with not much motor and no color at all since rust had set in. He needed a spade to dig the dirt from the inside.

A 1914 International 1-ton truck is the oldest vehicle in the collection. When Reining found the vehicle, the hood was being used for a dog house. The fenders had to be dug out of the dirt.

There's a 1923 Model T Ford Coupe that Reining says he literally carried it into the shop in pieces. And a 1924 Model T truck with a cab and steering wheel arrangement so spacious that Reining refers to it as a "fat man's option."

His favorite is the 1931 Chevy Coupe. He bought another car just to obtain the grille he needed to complete the project.

The 1927 Reo got its nickname "flying cloud" because it had a lot of power, Reining says. It was a sturdy car, too.

"Just feel that fender," he says. "Try to push on it. It had a motor like a tractor — a powerful motor."

The 1940 Chrysler New Yorker was more comfortable than the best of today's line, Reining says. It is the kind of car that rich people would have owned.

Reining says he spent nine winters on the Model A roadster with the rumble seat.

There are a 1929 Ford, a 1920 Chevrolet, a 1930 John Deere tractor, a 1920 tractor with a cross-motor case, a plow that once belonged to a Nebraska homesteader. There's a two-holed wooden corn shucker, a one-row corn-stalk cutter, several water-cooled engines.

One of Reining's real collector's items is a 1929 Fleetmaster Republic truck that he is waiting to restore.

"A lot of people haven't seen one like this," he says. "I like to have the parts first, so I don't get one started and can't finish."

Reining usually has several projects under way at one time; yet-to-be-completed projects are spread among the other farm buildings and in the pasture. For the past two decades or so, he has managed to have one vehicle finished for each year's Dundy County Fair parade.

One building is strictly a shop. A coal stove keeps him warm during the chill of evenings and winters, when he has the time to do most of his work.

"I usually try to put a tractor and a car in there and switch back and forth working on them," he says. "Sometimes you work maybe a day just on a taillight or speedometer or getting a screw loose."

The 60ish Reining says he usually needs no guide for restoring trucks and farm implements. He remembers how they looked and how they worked from first-hand experience. For more complicated vehicles, he often relies on books and parts manuals.

He tries to get original pieces, but some of them don't exist anymore. He may have to settle for replicas or create them himself. Reining generally works at the bottom and works up. Wheels and motor get first attention. He says he never gets frustrated with the task.

"It's awful expensive to restore things because you've got so much chrome in things like headlights and taillights, and tires have doubled and tripled in price," he says. "Most of the rest of the things I need, I get from salvage."

Reining is a farmer by occupation. Though he used to dream about doing nothing but restoration work, he had to give up that idea as impractical. For one thing, he finds it hard to part with a vehicle he has restored.

Even the time spent on the tractor in his fields isn't totally time away from his hobby, however.

"I sit out there on the tractor and drive and I can dream this up," he says. "Sometimes I lay there at night and can't go to sleep and I think what this will be and what this can do."

Full society role urged for disabled

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Anne Carlsen was honored recently as recipient of the 18th annual "Woman of Conscience Award" presented by the National Council of Women of the United States.

Ms. Carlsen, herself disabled from birth, has worked as a teacher of the disabled for 43 years. She has been administrator of the Crippled Children's School-Hospital in Jamestown, N.D., renamed the Anne Carlsen School in her honor, since 1950.

"It is a great honor for me to be selected," she said during the awards ceremonies here. She said that as a representative of 35 million disabled persons in the United States, "I am eager that each one of them have a chance of full participation in our society."

Ms. Carlsen identified five problem areas for the disabled: social acceptance, education, employment, transportation and housing. She said work in these areas would require the cooperation of the disabled and the non-disabled as well.

"We have come a long way in giving the disabled a chance to participate in our society, but we still have a long way to go," she said.

Her remarks were echoed by the keynote speaker, Dr. Howard Rusk, founder of New York University's Institute of Rehabilitative Medicine.

"We have a long way to go, tremendous numbers of people, all kinds of problems," Rusk said, "but progress is being made. I feel heartened because I know the dedication of people working in this field. The United Nations has designated 1981 as the International Year of Disabled Persons."

The National Council of Women of the United States is a non-profit, non-partisan, non-political organization made up of 26 organizations throughout the nation. The award included a $1,500 grant from Clairol Inc.

Woody Allen less interested in laughs

NEW YORK (NEA) — "The Floating Light Bulb," a modest new drama which opened to much fanfare, concerns itself with the pathetic aspirations of a Jewish family that's foundering in a shabby apartment in the Carnarsie section of Brooklyn. The time is 1945. Its author relies too heavily on the work of Arthur Miller and Tennessee Williams — particularly Williams' "Glass Menagerie" — to score his points, but an earnest, effective play comes out of it. Keep an eye on this promising playwright. His name is Woody Allen.

Don't be snobbed by his bookwormish demeanor. Woody Allen is a bold adventurer, anxious to explore new terrain. You never know what his next project will be like, a mystery he nourishes by shrouding it in secrecy. One thing does seem clear — he is becoming less interested in making us laugh. Since winning the Oscar in 1977 for "Annie Hall" his movies have grown more serious and introspective — from "Interiors" to "Manhattan" to "Stardust Memories," his latest.

Now he has returned to the stage after a 12-year absence. He hasn't totally found himself as a playwright yet. He still has a bit to learn. But "The Floating Light Bulb" is a remarkable achievement when you consider that it's only his third play and his first drama. It bears no resemblance to his previous stage outings — "Don't Drink the Water" (1966) and "Play It Again, Sam" (1969).

As for ties to his movies, the only link is that the family he writes about is reminiscent of the family that lived under the Coney Island rollercoaster in "Annie Hall."

The Pollacks are grasping at straws. The father, Max (Danny Aiello) is a bargain basement dapper dan, a small-time numbers runner and gambler who's in way over his head to the loan-sharks. "My number's gonna come in, I tell ya," he insists. Meantime, he waits on tables, packs a gun and carries on a tawdry affair with a young cocktail waitress.

His wife Enid (Bea Arthur) is wise to it — the girlfriend lets Max know she's downstairs by phoning the apartment and then hanging up as soon as someone answers. Enid's no prize herself. She's an alcoholic. She nags Max continually ("I don't nag, I encourage.") and holds Max up as a poor example to their sons ("See why I want you boys to work hard?"). Enid has to sell hosiery to make up for the money Max gambles away or blows on his girlfriend, meanwhile hounding her relatives to lend her money for her own assorted get-rich-quick schemes, like mail order personalized matchbooks.

Enid is very much patterned after Amanda Wingfield in "Glass Menagerie." Instead of a lame daughter she has a goony, stooped, 16-year-old son, Paul (Brian Backer), with an IQ of 148 and a terrible stammer. Paul spends all of his time locked in his room working on magic tricks, the latest being the floating light bulb. His magic is his whole life. It should be pointed out that the young actor Backer looks more than a little like Allen.

The fourth member of the family is 10-year-old Steve (Eric Gurry). Unfortunately, neither he nor the father is fully involved with the plot of the play, which is its biggest problem. The family can't interact as much as it needs to. Much is left underdeveloped.

Enid meets the visiting brother of an upstairs neighbor, a hot shot talent agent who drops names like Jack Benny and Cesar Romero. Suddenly she seizes on Paul's magic as a ticket out of Canarsie and invites the agent to come over the next week to see Paul perform. Paul wants no part of it, insists he can't perform. She perseveres, buys him a turban for his performance. "A miracle worker," she explains, "shouldn't look like a CPA."

So, as in "Glass Menagerie," a gentleman caller arrives in the second act. He is Jerry Wexler (Jack Weston) and he's no big shot — strictly a small-time agent who dreams of one day finding that million-dollar client. For now his biggest client is Little Sir Echo, a German Shepherd who can, if his throat is gripped properly, say a few words like "ham-burg-grrr."

Paul's panic-stricken performance before Wexler is a disaster. He storms into his room and slams the door. Wexler and Enid then have a touching, awkward love scene on the living room sofa.

Not surprisingly, nobody lives happily ever after. Allen not only turns the clock back to 1945 but borrows many of the playwright devices of that period.

Spinal cord injuries are summer danger

NEW YORK (AP) — For some teen-agers and young adults, the summer of 1981 could be their last as healthy, active individuals, warns a physician at New York University Medical Center's Institute of Rehabilitation Medicine.

The incidence of spinal-cord injuries, which claims its highest number of victims in the 15 to 22 age bracket, rises dramatically in the summer, says Dr. Kristjan Ragnarsson, who is project director of the New York regional spinal-cord injury center.

Once the spinal cord is injured, the patient becomes paralyzed and is probably doomed to a lifetime in a wheelchair, he points out.

"Each year we see some 80 to 100 new spinal-cord injury patients," says Ragnarsson. "The sad part is that these healthy, active persons need never have been injured. Spinal-cord injury is entirely preventable."

Diving accidents produce a higher percentage of quadriplegia than any other injury, he notes. Yet other forms of summer sports — surfing, roller-skating, bicycling, rock climbing, motorcycling or even riding in a car — can result in irreversible spinal-cord damage.

Ragnarsson offers the following suggestions on how to avoid spinal-cord injury:

- Know the depth of any water before diving in. Be wary of ponds or lakes that may have submerged rocks.
- Familiarize yourself with the ocean tide schedule. Remember that sand bars can shift location.
- When climbing, wear proper safety equipment for protection if you fall.
- When engaging in a sport, know the rules, wear proper safety equipment and be aware of your own limitations.
- Always wear a safety belt when driving.
- Don't drink before driving or participating in sports.

Grasshopper control program underway

An airborne spray program is under way right now to save farmers, ranchers and consumers money. The Rangeland Grasshopper Control Program has been initiated as part of an ongoing effort to combat this summer's heavy infestations of grasshoppers in cattle-producing areas.

According to Ron Johnson, staff officer with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, as many as 30 million acres of rangeland are infested with high levels of grasshoppers. The result is millions of dollars' worth of losses of valuable livestock forages.

Since 10 to 15 percent of infested acreage normally is treated, Johnson says five to seven million acres may have to be treated this summer. More than 5.3 million acres in 1980 and approximately 7.1 million in 1979 were treated as part of this program.

The spray program is organized on a local area basis and is required to meet certain criteria, including: An economic infestation of grasshoppers (usually eight per square yard) must be present.

The room in the basement

Political non-asylum of Siberian Seven

WASHINGTON (NEA) - It's no secret that citizens of the Soviet Union have a most difficult time trying to emigrate from that stubborn country. But sometimes the suffering they endure in the attempts is not so well known. The extraordinary case of the "Siberian Seven" may be a noteworthy example.

The seven are members of two Russian families, the Vashchenkos and the Chmykhalovs. They are Christian people, fundamentalist Pentacostals, and some time in the 1960s they decided to leave their birthplace to seek religious freedom in the West. Specifically, they put their hopes on the United States.

To this end, they traveled back and forth between their Siberian community and the U.S. Embassy in Moscow. Each time they were told they would have to apply for Soviet exit permission. When they did that, however, permission was denied, and members of the families were harassed or even imprisoned.

So, in June 1978, the Vashchenkos and Chmykhalovs tried a different tack. They went to the U.S. Embassy to apply for political asylum. When embassy officials said that was impossible, the applicants said they would not leave the building, and then took up residence in a storage room in the basement.

There they remain to this day, three years later.

The situation is not altogether unprecedented. U.S. embassies have periodically given shelter to other foreign nationals. A Soviet physician is currently under refuge at the embassy in Malta, for example. And the Hungarian Cardinal, Joseph Mindszenty, once spent 25 years at the embassy in Budapest.

But the Soviet physician has only been protected a few weeks, and Cardinal Mindszenty was given freedom of action and movement. The Siberian Seven, on the other hand, have been confined for more than 1,000 days and nights in one room, furnished with two beds, and their movements are restricted.

What's more, the seven are in Moscow. Therefore a solution to their dilemma is all the more complicated. So far Russian authorities have honored the sanctity of the embassy shelter, but they refuse resolutely to just let the families leave the country. They claim the exit visa is a necessity.

The exit visa is also quite elusive. And the penalties for seeking it, are often severe. In 1968, one of the Vashchenkos was sentenced to a year in prison for trying to emigrate, and later his wife spent three years in a work camp. They don't want to let the Soviets have another crack at them.

WHEN U.S. Embassy officials rejected their application for political asylum the Siberian Seven took up residence in a storage room in the embassy's basement. They remain to this day, three years later. Back row: Peter and Augustina Vashchenko, Mari Chmykhalov. Front row: Luiba and Lida Vashchenko, Timofey Chmykhalov, Lilia Vashchenko.

And for all of the Russian contempt for the families, the United States, too, is said on occasion to have treated them badly. A few months after they took asylum in the embassy basement, they were ordered to get out or else. So even after all this time they reportedly still worry about the possibility of eviction.

They also worry about the Soviet employees in the embassy. One-third of the staff are Russians, and it's suspected they are cleared by the Soviet secret police before employment. The families say some of the employees have made ugly remarks, and they believe a few of them are giving regular reports to the police.

Olga Hruby also believes it. She is director of the New York-based Research Center for Religion and Human Rights, and she is in regular contact with the Siberian Seven. She says the United States should take immediate steps to separate the families from the "potentially dangerous" Soviet employees.

Mrs. Hruby also thinks the families should be given more room, more freedom in the embassy, and more assurance of U.S. support. With respect to the last she has helped Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., fashion a congressional bill that would grant permanent resident status to the Vashchenkos and Chmykhalovs.

The Levin bill has 56 cosponsors in the Senate. If passed, it would allow the families to move around the embassy, and even take employment. It would also allow them to apply for U.S. citizenship in two years. Mrs. Hruby feels the measure would give an enormous psychological lift to the families.

It might also lead to an eventual negotiation of their crisis. If the families renounce their Soviet citizenship, Mrs. Hruby says it will give the USSR the opportunity to wash its hands of them. "They could then say the families are undesirable, traitors, and let them leave without losing face."

No one believes this will happen soon, however. And the prospect is that this June anniversary will only be one of many more for the families in the embassy. Mrs. Hruby says the Vashchenkos and Chmykhalovs will probably observe the date with prayer, scriptures and the faith those things provide.

That faith will be necessary in the unpredictable days to come. During an outside stroll in March the Siberians watched in horror as Soviet police beat and killed a man who tried to get into the embassy. Since then they have avoided even short excursions; their whole world now is that room in the basement.

Doll sculptures are homely, but popular

By TERRI PERRIN
The Chandler
Arizonan

CHANDLER, Ariz. (AP) - The first time she saw "soft sculpture" similar to the stuffed dolls that have been selling like hotcakes for Chandler craft enthusiast Mert Stump, her reaction was "yuk."

"My first feelings were that they were repulsive," the artist recalls.

Other people respond with "gee - those things are homely."

"Or sometimes, they use the word 'beautiful,' but they're really using it in the negative sense," Mrs. Stump says.

Contorted little babies with sneering faces stuffed in Mason jars, "kitchen witches" with a pursed look that would curdle honey; a full-size toddler with a cute yellow sleeper and a face that rivals something out of a nightmare - Mrs. Stump says she's been "into ugly" with these creations for several months.

It began near Christmas, when her daughter gave her a bag of nylon hose and asked whether there was anything she could do with them, she says.

"I sat and worked on them at art show," the president of Chandler Arts and Crafts League says, "and it was obvious from the first that they would get a big response from the public."

"People would come up and ask me a lot of questions about what I was doing," she adds, "but at the time I didn't even really know yet."

Stuffed with polyester fiberfill, the nylon gives the figure a realistic flesh-tone that the artist enhances with cosmetic colors.

Beads or moving doll eyes, yarn or fake fur and sometimes even wigs form the features for their faces. Noses are over-size and crooked. Eyes are close-set or grossly uneven. Mouths contort. Chins recede.

They all look a little, well, lumpy. Lumpy and fretful. Or shrewish. Seductive.

How can anyone expect us to go back?

Salvadoran emigrants run for lives

LOS ANGELES (NEA) - Each night before he retires, Luis Castellanos moves a large chair in front of the door to his apartment and opens a window that overlooks a parking lot. If someone tries to break in while he's sleeping, he says, the chair will delay them long enough for him to jump to the ground.

"Then I'll run," he adds, perhaps for his life.

Like millions of other illegal aliens in the United States, Castellanos is worried about being found one day by the authorities and deported. Unlike most of the others, however, his worry is rooted in a genuine fear for his survival; he claims if he is sent back to his homeland he may be murdered.

Castellanos is from El Salvador. He is one of thousands of people who have fled from the civil war in that nation and who are staying in America without permission. He is a part-time gardener here in the suburbs, and he lives with a nervous view over his shoulder; "The police are everywhere," he says.

The police in this case are agents of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. Castellanos says they have no pity. Last year the agents arrested nearly 12,000 Salvadoran aliens, mostly around Los Angeles, and formally deported 2,400 of them; others are said to be deported without benefit of formalities.

The arrests are, of course, perfectly proper; the INS is supposed to discourage people from coming to the United States without papers. But deportations are another matter. Civil-rights advocates believe that when the INS sends Salvadorans back home, it may in effect be condemning at least some of them to death.

Documentation of the charge is not available. But the supporting evidence seems persuasive. Last December, for example, eyewitnesses reported that some or all of 25 deportees were slaughtered on arrival at the El Salvador airport. The witnesses say their bodies were just strewn along the roadside.

MAP INDICATES areas where the Salvadoran refugees have settled on the North American continent. According to the church officials who help them, a total of 600,000 Salvadorans have left their country; perhaps 100,000 to 500,000 have settled in the United States.

Such killings are said to be the work of right-wing forces within El Salvador's military-civilian government. U.S. observers in San Salvador say refugees who return there are intercepted by the forces and interrogated; allegedly, some are then beaten, some are turned loose and some are executed.

Castellanos thinks the brutality is meant to dissuade others from leaving the country. But it doesn't seem to work. Church groups who help the Salvadoran refugees say as many as 700,000 of them have fled in recent years; put another way, this adds up to almost 15 percent of the 5 million population.

Many of the refugees have settled in nations that border El Salvador, notably Honduras and Guatemala. Others have migrated south to Costa Rica and north to Mexico. No one knows how many have come to the United States indications are there may be 200,000 Salvadorans in Los Angeles alone, 500,000 nationwide.

A few of the refugees are wealthy, and some are political outcasts, but the majority are merely confused and fearful peasants. Luis Castellanos, for one, fled El Salvador because he did not want to take sides. "If you take sides," he says, "and your side loses, you can wind up floating out to sea in a river."

Castellanos is 32. And he became a war refugee last November. He says he first walked into Honduras with a brother and then went to Mexico to work in the coffee fields. There he gave $1,000 to a man to take him to California; he rode the length of Mexico in a truck and walked into the United States at Yuma.

The trip was difficult. Castellanos claims there were eight men on the truck and no food, and wicked border officers took the last of his life savings. "When we got to Yuma we were supposed to meet two men with cars. They weren't there. I had to walk to San Diego and earn bus money to Los Angeles."

At that, Castellanos made it. Other Salvadorans have not been so fortunate. Last year smugglers tried to herd 13 refugees across the Southwest desert - without water, and everyone perished from dehydration; Mexican police say the rigors of illicit travel have also killed Salvadorans in that country.

Many human-rights activists say they are shocked at the refugee suffering. And they think the United States should act now to relieve it. For one thing, they want the nation to give legal shelter to the aliens and provide security and public assistance until the current trouble in El Salvador has ended.

So far the United States has denied the help. Probably to avoid offending or destabilizing the government in El Salvador. A State Department man says the official U.S. position on the matter is this: "The war in El Salvador is moderating, and the best thing we can do for the refugees is to help them return home."

Luis Castellanos smiles at that. He tells of the time the guerrillas painted leftist slogans on his Salvador house, and warned him not to touch it, and the next day the government told him to erase it or else. "People are caught in the middle," the alien sighs, "how can anyone expect us to go back to that?"

Court halts gas proration

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The 3rd Court of Civil Appeals stopped the Railroad Commission today from prorating gas produced from wells in the Boonsville Field pending an appeal of the proration order.

An Austin state district judge set aside the order, and the commission appealed to the 3rd Court of Civil Appeals. The appeals court said it was shown during oral arguments May 15 that if the commission order is enforced pending appeal it would block production of 143 million cubic feet of gas per month until the case is settled.

The appeals court said it also was stated that most of the wells produce at capacity.

but the commission has recently directed that one well be limited to 50 percent of capacity. "Relators fear that other wells produced by them will be similarly restricted pending appeal," the appeals court said.

STATE CAPITOL visitors, Michelle, left, and Renee, Houston, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. G.L. Houston, 2317 Comanche, Pampa, were able to meet with State Representative Foster Whatley, left, and Speaker of the House Bill Clayton. The girls also acted as official messengers for the day at the State Legislature. Official messengers have floor privileges and run the many errands for members of the house when the legislature is in session.

Fly-in this weekend

PROPS (Pampa Radio Operated Plane Society) is sponsoring a fly-in Saturday and Sunday at the club's new field with flyers from New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas, and Texas expected to attend.

Both fly-ins get underway at 9 a.m., and will include such events as a water balloon drop, pony express race, climb and glide, and spot landing.

Merchandise will be given to the top three flyers in each event.

"We may have some other events also, but we just don't know yet," said club spokesman Danny Martin. "We will have some events for beginners."

The new fly-in field is located two miles east of the Pampa Country Club off Loop 71. Directional signs will mark the way for spectators.

"There's going to be lots of spills and disasters," Martin added. "It's something that the kids, as well as the adults, will enjoy."

No admission will be charged. A concession stand will be set up where spectators can get sandwiches and refreshments.

"We're proud of our new location," Martin said. "It's much better than the one we had at Kingsmill."

Martin said a much bigger fly-in will be held in October. "We'll have some of the top flyers in the nation here then," he added.

Persons who want more details about PROPS may contact Danny Martin (669-7373), club president Raymond Swaney (883-3911) at White Deer, Tom Spencer (665-5990) or Scott Hall (669-6081).

Ever since she competed in her first Kid Pony Show when she was eight years old, Jo Linda Lowrey knew that rodeoing would become a way of life for her.

Barrel racing, breakaway roping, and goat tying was something the personable 18-year-old wanted to pursue for as long as she could.

Next week, Miss Lowrey of Pampa will be competing in the state high school rodeo finals at Sequin in those three events. She qualified for state by taking first in goat tying, and third in both breakaway roping and barrels at the Region I qualifying rodeo in Spearman.

"I've been practicing every night for the finals," she said. "I try to ride my horses as much as I can."

Miss Lowrey has been a consistent performer, winning first-place ribbons in more than half of the 20 rodeos she has appeared in this season.

Going into the Tri-State High School Rodeo Association (TSHSRA) finals, Miss Lowrey was runnerup to Claude's Renee Rutherford in the overall points standings.

"Breakaway is my favorite event," Miss Lowrey said. "I guess it's the event I do best in. I had a 3 this year in the finals which is my best time."

Miss Lowrey isn't the only one in the family who is entered in the state finals. Her brother, Pampa High freshman Lee Lowrey, qualified in the team roping.

Miss Lowrey hopes her performance at Sequin will clinch a rodeo scholarship to South Plains College in Levelland.

"They have a pretty good rodeo team there, and I think I've got a pretty good chance of getting a scholarship," she added. "Her chances are excellent, I'd say."

A summer without baseball is almost as bad as Brooklyn without the Dodgers.

When Walter O'Malley moved the Dodgers to Los Angeles, it was like taking an invalid's wheelchair away and turning it into scrap metal. It was just too cruel to comprehend.

Branch Rickey (former Dodger GM) would turn over in his grave if he knew the Dodgers were out cavorting in Disneyland, or that today's ballplayers were more interested in reading the stock market report than the box scores.

Negotiators seem to be in no hurry to iron out an agreement in this latest calamity. Maybe baseball just isn't that important to the majority anymore. Maybe there's too many other diversions to keep fans from dwelling on the demise of the national pastime.

In the early 1950s, baseball, and a few splashes in the old swimming hole were just about the only summer activities in a small town.

In the early afternoon, you could tune in the Dodger games on an Oklahoma City radio station.

You could almost visualize the ball rocketing off Duke Snider's bat and over the centerfield fence at Ebbets Field. Sometimes the ball disappeared so fast the announcer was left tongue-tied, Jackie Robinson created another vision when he was on the basepaths, and so could big Don Newcombe when he let go with a fastball.

If you had bubble gum baseball cards, you could line the table with the Dodger lineup, and it was almost like watching the game on the tube.

When the Dodgers were transferred to California, flatbush fans had nightmares of tanned, shorts-attired ballplayers using a surfboard to hit a volleyball into the waters off Malibu Beach.

Well, in reality it wasn't that bad. The Dodgers of LA have always been a respectable team, but the charisma is lacking when you compare Davey Lopes, Bill Russell and Tommy John with "them bums."

Somehow, the Boys of Summer just wouldn't look right in Chavez Ravine. Isn't that right next to Sunset Strip?

Flashback: June, 1976. Chuck Polk and Shorty Hudson shot a 191 total to win the 28th annual Club Partnership Golf Tournament at the Pampa Country Club.

No new proposals

Baseball strike still at standstill

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

And on the seventh day, the negotiators rested.

"I made the suggestion to both sides that they should leave here, rethink their positions, come back here Friday (at 3 p.m., EDT) prepared to go forward, address the issue and come to an agreement and conclusion," said Ken Moffett, who played shuttle diplomacy Wednesday, attempting to make peace between the striking players and the baseball owners.

No new proposals were offered during a two-hour session Wednesday, in which the two sides shot the breeze in separate rooms, never talking face-to-face. "If we did get together, an already deadlocked situation would get into a worse situation," Moffett said.

The mediator, who has described these talks as "the most bizarre negotiations I've been involved in during 22 years as a mediator," was not optimistic that the one-day recess would inspire any changes at the bargaining table.

After all, there was a three-day recess before Tuesday's session, and when the parties got back together they discussed the progress made over the past 18 months — in just two hours. That's less than most games, and the games are played to a conclusion.

You remember baseball games, those nine-inning affairs unencumbered by the clock, which help a nation while away the lazy days and nights of summer.

If those games were being played today, they would have included Philadelphia and Houston in a rematch of last year's scintillating National League playoff and 10 other games, raising the casualty count to 87, one more than the total of missed games in the 13-day season-opening strike in 1972.

But instead of the Astrodome in Houston, Bob Boone of Philadelphia plans to play a round of golf and then take in a round of golf at the U.S. Open in Ardmore, Pa., near his home.

Boone, who has emerged as the main spokesman for the players' five-man negotiating team, said people missed the point when they expressed financial concern for only the players' near the minimum salary level of $32,500. "The high-salary players have obligations and house payments to make, too," he said.

"We feel it's necessary for ownership to come forward with something," said Boone, who was joined at the negotiating table by Mark Belanger of Baltimore, Tom Seaver of Cincinnati, Steve Rogers of Montreal, Rusty Staub of the New York Mets and Don Fehr, counsel for the Major League Baseball Players Association.

The latest proposal for giving teams losing free agents a replacement player came a week ago. The players suggested each team would contribute four players from its 40-man roster into a pool, from which teams losing free agents can pick a replacement.

American League President Lee MacPhail, a member of the owners' negotiating unit, the Player Relations Committee, called that proposal "a step backward. The pro players they're offering are meaningless and we would get less than the amateur draft choice we currently get," he said.

Drysdale, Rozelle benefit from strike

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

It wasn't easy to find, but there are at least two people who can be considered indirect beneficiaries from the baseball strike — Don Drysdale and Pete Rozelle.

Drysdale is the new analyst on ABC-TV's "Monday Night Baseball" series, replacing the same Drysdale who was let go late last year.

Last Monday night's traveling road show with Howard Cosell and Keith Jackson was canceled by the strike, so Drysdale didn't have to face nosey reporters asking questions about his broadcasting deficiencies.

This is a subject that Drysdale and ABC are sensitive about. The ABC public relations department has tread more softly around Drysdale during the first two Monday night games in June. ABC was still pushing baseball, but it was soft-selling interviews with Drysdale.

Some at ABC felt that Drysdale should not be rehired — even though an extensive talent search came up with nobody better — because it would be an embarrassment for the network. If ABC believed Drysdale was the best available man for the job, the network deserves credit for swallowing its enormous pride and taking Drysdale back.

Late last year, Drysdale pressed ABC for a decision on his status. Dennis Lewin, one of ABC's top producers, told him his services were no longer required.

ABC considered some 20 baseball analysts and auditioned four of them — former players Wes Parker, Jim Lonborg and Tim McCarver and former manager Frank Quilici. They decided Drysdale was the best, notifying him in late May just before he was scheduled to do a game for NBC.

Rozelle, the National Football League commissioner, is involved in a messy court case in Los Angeles, which was brought by longtime nemesis Al Davis, owner of the Oakland Raiders.

The NFL, which has a gag rule preventing any club or management personnel from publicly criticizing game officials, other clubs or the league, tries to avoid airing its dirty linen in public. The name-calling in Los Angeles is not good for the league's image, but the big strike story is taking attention away from the courtroom.

No news is good news, as far as the NFL is concerned.

Skellytown defeated in Babe Ruth Tournament

Skellytown-White Deer fell to Panhandle, 22-10, Tuesday in the second round of the Babe Ruth double-elimination tournament at Skellytown.

SWD players with runs and rbis (runs-listed first) were Johnny Brantwein, 3-0; Will Brown, 2-1; Brent Bridwell, 2-2; Bobby Fryrear, 1-1; Tracy O'Dell, 1-1; Jeff Cox, 1-0; Michael Walker, 0-2; and Kent Tice, 0-2.

Brantwein, Bridwell, Furgason, and Glen Wise pitched for SWD.

Powers scored four runs and hit a homer for Panhandle. Other Panhandle players scoring runs were Smith, Bently, and Cunningham, three runs apiece; Fryrear and Rusk, two runs apiece; Russell, Cartwright, Qualls, Curtis, and Skidmore, one run apiece.

Rusk and Fryrear pitched for Panhandle.

Lefors edged McLean, 12-11, in another tournament game Tuesday night.

Preston West and Hugg were outstanding players for Lefors. West hit a two-run homer in the second inning and added a two-run single in the third inning. Hugg had a third-inning homer and knocked in four runs.

Swaner and Wynn scored three runs each for McLean. Swaner also had a home run.

Tonight, Skellytown-White Deer meets Lefors at 6:30 p.m. while Panhandle goes against Clarendon at 9:30 p.m.

Sports in brief

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Jeff Wagner, Round Rock's all-state outfielder, has become the first Texas Longhorn baseball recruit to choose pro ball.

Wagner, who hit over .400 and had a 6-4 pitching record, signed after the Braves made what his mother, Charlene Wagner, said was a "very, very surprising" offer.

"They made him a substantial bonus offer along with a guarantee to pay for four years of college, and he felt it was an offer he couldn't refuse to pass up," said Mrs. Wagner.

Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson said Wagner's "potential is unlimited. He runs well and has good potential as a switch hitter."

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — New Texas Longhorn golf coach Jimmy Clayton has announced the signing of four recruits, including William Tanner, a two-time All-America in junior college who is following Clayton from McLennan Community College.

The other recruits are Ronnie McDougal, who led Stafford-Dulles to two Class 5A state titles and was named the outstanding high school golfer in the Houston area; Steve Gleboff of Dallas Hillcrest, who won the city high school title the last two years; and Marcus Howell of New Orleans, runner-up in the Louisiana state high school championships.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Randy Johnson, a quarterback veteran of the National Football League, plans to play as well as coach the remainder of the season for the Austin Texans of the American Football Association.

Johnson, 37, is expected to start against Jacksonville, Fla., here Saturday.

After 11 seasons with Atlanta, the New York Giants, Washington and Green Bay, Johnson was hired to coach the Texans this year.

He had to play against San Antonio last Saturday, however, when starting quarterback Mike Washington hurt his ribs and substitute Ward Kirk was sick with the pneumonia.

"I didn't anticipate having to play, but we're at the point now where we have to turn things around. If my playing will help, then I'll do it," said Johnson.

The Texans are 0-3 following a 42-22 loss to San Antonio and are averaging only 116 yards a game rushing.

"We're not running the ball well and it's just silly to beat our heads against the wall trying to run," said Johnson. "If we have to throw 35 or 40 times a game to move, we'll do it."

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Hill, a veteran of the PGA tour, ruefully admits he may have set an all-time record for the tour on the first round of the Tournament Players Championship this spring — a record he didn't want.

"I only hit one green all day," Hill said. "The first time I played this same course many years ago, all I had was a one-iron. I hit more greens with that than I did with a full bag of clubs."

TAMPA BAY, Fla. (AP) — Coach John McKay of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers gets a lot of mail advising him on how to run his team and what plays to use. Some of the letters, according to McKay, are a shade on the personal side.

Hogan gave golf its greatest drama

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — Merion and the miracle of Ben Hogan.

Much of the history of American golf is woven into the white-faced traps, subtle mounds and unique basket flagsticks of the Merion Golf Club on the outskirts of Philadelphia, where the U.S. Open again will be played this weekend.

It remained, however, for the grim-jawed Texan to provide the old course with the sport's highest drama.

It was the fabled comeback of 1950 — a story that has been preserved in history books, movie film and word of mouth generation to generation.

Hogan undoubtedly remembers every blade of grass, every difficult lie and every stab of pain that memorably experience, but he doesn't like to talk about it.

"You'll have to write it from what you saw," he said when reached by telephone in his office at the Ben Hogan Golf Company in Fort Worth, Texas. "After all, you were there."

Hogan, an army lieutenant in World War II, won his first Open at Riviera in Los Angeles in 1948 with 276, the first time a winner had broken 280. On Feb. 2, 1949, he and his wife, Valerie, were driving home along a lonely Texas highway from Phoenix, Ariz., when a huge transcontinental bus lunged into the path of the Hogan car.

Instinctively, Hogan threw his body in front of Valerie to shield her from injury, a heroic gesture that probably saved both of their lives. The steering wheel of the car was driven through the driver's seat like a spear.

Valerie's injuries were minor. Hogan suffered a double fracture of the pelvis, a broken collarbone, a fractured left ankle and a smashed right rib.

In order to halt the clotting of blood, doctors performed a two-hour abdominal operation, tying off the principal veins in his legs.

After the accident, Hogan lay flat on his back for 58 days. When he was transferred home, he began by walking around his bed — at first one lap, then two, then three — in agonizing pain.

It was late in August before he could pick up a golf club. In December, 10 months after the accident, he dared to try a round of golf, legs banded around ankles to hips, riding a cart.

In January, the sports world was electrified to read that Hogan had entered the Los Angeles Open. Hogan trudged the course stiff-legged, in constant pain, tying Sam Snead for the title, the playoff delayed by rain.

Then came Merion, bringing with it not only the pressure of the Open but also the supreme test of having to go 36 holes on the final day.

An unknown named Lee Mackey from Birmingham, Ala., shot a record 64 the first day. Hogan was eight shots back. Ben fired a second round 69 to move to within two shots and survived the 36-hole marathon to tie Lloyd Mangrum and George Fazio for the title. The next day he won the playoff with a 69.

Hogan went on to win two more Opens and score an unprecedented Triple Slam in 1953, winning the Masters, U.S. and British Opens, skipping the PGA. He played in five tournaments and won them all.

But nothing compared with the odyssey at Merion.

Rogers signs long-term contract with New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "I'm glad to be a Saint," said Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers after signing a contract Wednesday with the New Orleans Saints that gave him the most money ever paid a rookie on the club.

Rogers, a running back from South Carolina, was the first player taken in the National Football League draft this spring.

"It's a long-term contract — three years — with an option," said Saints owner John Mecom Jr., adding the club never paid a rookie more. "That's the cost of doing business in this day and time."

Neither Rogers nor Rogers' agent, Jack Mills, would discuss contract terms. But it was apparently more than the $260,000 a year offered Rogers by the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.

Coach Bum Phillips, entering his first season with the Saints after building Houston into a regular playoff entry, said he never seriously doubted that the Saints would sign Rogers.

"He wanted us, and we wanted him," Phillips said. "He got a good contract, and we got a good contract. It's something we can live with."

Rogers said he was glad the negotiating was over and glad that he wound up with the Saints, although he said he would have signed with Montreal, if Mills had thought that was best.

"I'd just like to thank the people in Montreal for the hospitality they showed me. I'm sorry things didn't work out for them, but I really wanted to play in the NFL."

Mecom said he never thought Rogers would wind up at Montreal.

"I know a bit about what goes on there, and a bit about the man making the offer," Mecom said. "It would be something like a dog chasing a car. If he caught it, he couldn't drive it."

Rogers said he had few solid plans for using his big new salary.

"Invest it, probably," he said.

"I already bought my Mama a house, and I'm going to buy my aunt a house."

Other than that, he said, his immediate plans included a fishing trip in the Gulf of Mexico and working out in preparation for the start of preseason camp at Vero Beach, Fla., on July 13.

Mills said negotiations with the Saints were harmonious.

"We're just very pleased to have it taken care of now, so we won't have it drag out into the training camp," he said.

Mecom said he doesn't expect any Saints veterans to be jealous of the salary Rogers gets.

"It would be a very disappointing thing if that were to happen," he said. "The New Orleans Saints ball players are paid as well as any in the league."

He said there was enough pressure on the team to improve on last season's 1-15 record without a problem of jealousy over salaries.

U.S. Open tees off today

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — Johnny Miller picks Bruce Lietzke. Lietzke picks Tom Watson. Watson picks Watson if he drives well. Jack Nicklaus? He chooses not to choose.

"I can't pick anybody, including myself," Nicklaus said.

It's not difficult to come up with a list of golfers whose game would seem to fit the snug, elegant Merion Golf Club, where 156 qualifiers tee off today in the 81st United States Open championship.

"About 20 people could win it," said Watson, naming Tom Kite, Lee Trevino, Raymond Floyd, Severiano Ballesteros, Tom Kite, John Mahaffey and Lanny Wadkins among them.

Lietzke, a three-time winner this year, is Miller's choice.

"He has the game to win the Open," Miller said. "He's been sort of overlooked, but he hits the greens in regulation, he's been playing well. I like his chances."

Miller isn't as high on Miller. His right shoulder has been hurting, the residue of a friendly arm-wrestling tussle 2½ years ago.

"If I do well it will be a surprise. I'm just going to go out and have some fun and smell the roses."

Lietzke says he's not putting well and dismisses his chances. Instead he picks Watson, "not because he's the best player, but because they've eliminated the driver in this tournament. That's Tom's biggest enemy."

Watson basically agrees.

"Short hitters have the advantage," said Watson, whose victories this year include the Masters, the Atlanta Classic and the New Orleans Open. "You have to play it like Hogan did, below the hole." Ben Hogan won here in 1950.

"My chances are good if I put the ball in the fairway," Watson said.

The driver is almost superfluous at Merion. It's needed on only three or four holes.

The Open is one of two majors that has eluded Watson, and a win over the 6,544-yard L-shaped course would satisfy his passion.

And then there is Nicklaus, like Watson and Trevino always a force to consider.

He's played well recently. He finished second to Watson at the Masters. He's the defending champion. And, well, he's Nicklaus.

He's won four Opens. No one has ever won five. He likes Merion and over the years he's played it well.

Trevino said his ailing back is feeling better, that he played five straight days last week and that he's ready.

Floyd and Kite have the more impressive credentials of the other major contenders. At 38, Floyd is enjoying the best season of his 19-year Tour career. He's won three times, including last week, and is second only to Watson on the money-winning list.

Kite, one of golf's more accurate strikers of the ball, has an amazing record of consistency. He's been seventh or better in his last seven starts.

The Soviet Union competed for the first time in the Winter Olympics in 1966 at Cortina D'Ampezzo, Italy.

Leonard makes prediction

HOUSTON (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard, between talk of his voodoo punch and a confrontation with Ayub Kalule's medicine man, has a serious prediction concerning his upcoming bid for Kalule's World Boxing Association junior middleweight crown.

"I don't think the fight will go beyond 12 rounds but I hope he'll cooperate and go down in two," Leonard said following Wednesday's training session for the June 25 bout. "I think you'll see a Sugar Ray that is more devastating. I feel very comfortable at this weight."

Leonard said he was not worried about using 10-ounce gloves required in the junior-middleweight class. Eight ounce gloves are used in the welterweight division.

In fact, nothing could shake Leonard's confident mood, not even a visit by Ben Mugimba, a 37-year-old Catholic father of six from Uganda, who attempted to disturb Leonard's workout with a skull carved from wax.

"The skull is to show that there is bad fortune in Leonard's future and to make him think he is likely to lose," said Mugimba, escorted to ringside by a fight publicist.

Leonard was unimpressed. "I'll be throwing a lot of left hooks and a lot of voodoo right hands," he said.

While Mugimba's presence filled a lull in training with pre-fight silliness, promoter Bob Arum said he was completely serious in saying he was forced to promote the fight and that Leonard could lose to the Ugandan junior middleweight champion.

Arum said it was only at the insistence of Leonard's attorney Mike Trainer, that he sought to bring the two fighters together in the Astrodome.

"I don't want to take the blame when Leonard loses this fight," Arum said. "The match wasn't my idea, believe me. They made me do it. (Leonard's attorney Mike) Trainer came to me and said get us Kalule. Ray wants another title."

Mean Joe making Pittsburgh film in Dallas

By BOB PORTER
Dallas Times Herald
DALLAS (AP) — Where do you go to make a film about a Pittsburgh Steeler football player called "The Steeler and the Pittsburgh Kid"? No, Dallas. Where else? Mean Joe, that fearsome presence on the Steelers' defensive line, is currently in the midst of his summer training program. He did not have time to go scurrying off to Hollywood to make a TV film. Dallas, in addition to being a rapidly developing film center, is also Mean Joe Greene's hometown.

So Greene and Franco Harris, another Pittsburgh Steeler terror, have been working out for real and for the movie in the weight room at Southern Methodist University's Ownby Stadium this week. They have been filming a scene that — in fictional terms — takes place in the weight room in Pittsburgh.

We can only speculate what the reaction may be in Pittsburgh when "The Steeler and the Pittsburgh Kid" is telecast next fall and hometown Steelers fans see a film about one of their Sunday afternoon heroes taking place in Dallas.

What conspiracy theories that may set into motion involving the Cowboys, America's team, et al. can only be guessed at.

Tuesday, the weight room was filled with lights, microphones and a camera along with all the other paraphernalia needed for filmmaking — including a Steelers logo hanging on one wall. Greene, dropping a set of weights back into a holder at the end of the first take, said laughingly that he was working out harder for the camera than he would be doing on his own.

The room also was packed with what could pass for prime Steeler beef, supplied by players from the new local semi-professional football team, the Texas Wranglers.

Supervising producer Philip Barry (an Emmy winner for such TV films as "Kent State" and "Friendly Fire") said he was involved in one of those typical cases of the mountain coming to Mohammed — although with Greene one might argue which is the mountain. Since Greene couldn't come to Hollywood, Hollywood came to Dallas. Barry knew the film could be made here as well as in Hollywood. It was the only feasible way not to interfere with Greene's training.

From Greene's point of view, he insists, football remains his No. 1 priority.

"The Steeler and the Pittsburgh Kid" was, obviously enough, inspired by the familiar Coca-Cola commercial in which Greene captured millions of hearts. It showed Greene limping up the ramp at Three Rivers Stadium in Pittsburgh pausing to accept a Coke from one of his young fans, then giving the kid the thrill of his young life by tossing the youth his sweaty jersey.

Such 60-second spurts on TV bring not only capsule dramas but send lines rocketing up sales charts of commercial products. Greene can't supply any figures as to how many Cokes the commercial sold. He does recall numerous letters from grateful Coke bottling plant managers telling him how the commercial had boosted their sales.

From those acorns also grow such ideas as "The Steeler and the Pittsburgh Kid."

"The idea of doing the film came about last summer, but it wasn't until October until we began to talk about it seriously," said Greene during a break in the action. The film, brainstormed by producer George Wallach, is a joint Osmond Television-Jenner Wallach production. It is being shot for NBC's prestigious Peacock Production series of children's specials.

Capsuling the storyline, Barry said it follows the limping Greene into the locker room. A TV sportscaster (being played by Channel 5's peripatetic Jim Brinson) sees something symbolic in Greene handing his jersey over to the young boy, Greene, he predicts, is retiring from football.

This causes the boy to think he may have something to do with that shattering decision. He tries to return the jersey. But Greene and the Steelers have gone to Dallas to play the part in the film. A sympathetic airline stewardess helps the boy get on a plane to Dallas, where he makes contact with Greene. A warm relationship develops between the two.

Ironically, both Greene and the young actor playing the "Pittsburgh Kid" are Texas natives. That might strike yet another blow to Pittsburgh partisan pride. Young Henry Thomas of Houston is playing the "Pittsburgh Kid." This, said Barry, is because the boy seen in the commercial, Tommy Okin, is now 12 years of age and is too old to play the part in the film.

Thomas — who also will be seen soon playing one of Sissy Spacek's sons in the feature film "Raggedy Man" — was suggested for the role by local casting director Shari Rhodes. Another Texas talent, Dallas Cowboys' Harvey Martin, will be seen in the film also. Martin was on the set Tuesday but was not, of course, taking part in the workouts.

Greene, relaxing during his lunch break under an air conditioner in a motor home, parked outside the stadium, laughed softly when asked if he had any serious interest in acting, like teammate Terry Bradshaw (who, unfortunately, had his pilot TV series misfire this season, returning him to the Steelers' fold). "Listen! That guy (Bradshaw) is so talented he can do anything he wants to."

ON TO THE BALL. First lady Nancy Reagan and Britain's Prince Charles leave for a ball following a backstage visit with members of Britain's Royal Ballet at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York Wednesday night. (AP Laserphoto)

Whirlwind visit for the Prince

NEW YORK (AP) — Prince Charles danced with first lady Nancy Reagan under a tent at Lincoln Center after a day that included a bird's-eye view of the city via helicopter, luncheon aboard a yacht and a performance of his very own Royal Ballet.

The gala evening was the climax of a whirlwind 24-hour visit that was to end this morning with the heir to the British throne leaving for home from Kennedy Airport.

Throughout the long day Wednesday, with irate Irish-Americans constantly on the perimeter, the young Prince of Wales maintained a calm and smiling exterior. Even when four of the Irish invaded the Metropolitan Opera House, shouting obscenities and "murderer" before they were hauled out, the prince scarcely appeared to notice.

When the prince moved from the front row of the box after the disturbances, a Met spokesman said it was only so he could talk to other people in the box.

Security was so tight for the princely visit that police bomb-sniffing dogs patrolled the performing arts center not only before his arrival, but off and on during the reception, the ballet's performance of "The Sleeping Beauty" and the gala under the tent.

Uniformed and plainclothes police walked the roofs of the opera house and other Lincoln Center buildings throughout the affair, armed with carbines.

Several thousand Irish-Americans gathered in a park across from Lincoln Center to shout "British Murderer Go Home."

One of the demonstrators was Sean Sands, whose brother, Bobby, died in a Northern Ireland jail after a hunger strike protesting treatment of Irish Republican Army prisoners. Northern Ireland is part of the United Kingdom.

Sands said he asked for a meeting with Prince Charles, but a spokesman replied that the prince "didn't want to get involved in politics."

With the exception of the Irish protesters, the prince received warm greetings throughout the day.

Mayor Edward Koch, who accompanied him on a lunchtime trip aboard the yacht of publisher Malcolm Forbes, gave Charles the key to the city. Koch pronounced the lunch "fit for a prince and a mayor" and revealed that he had discovered the 32-year-old prince is "going to be bald."

The prince himself had nothing to say about hair and very little to say about anything else.

The evening at Lincoln Center was in celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Royal Ballet and was a benefit for the American Friends of Covent Garden, the English-Speaking Union and the Metropolitan Opera Association.

Reagan discusses Israeli attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan strode into the auditorium in the Old Executive Office Building, his face displaying a grin, hair slicked down, the model of confidence.

Then, after an opening statement, he began taking questions, many of them intended to shed light on the administration's foreign policy.

Was Israel's attack on the Iraqi nuclear reactor defensive?

"I can't answer that because, as I say, this review has not been completed."

What about Israel's refusal to sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty?

"Well, I haven't given very much thought to that particular question there. I'll have to think about that question."

Would an Israeli strike against Syrian missiles violate the terms under which Israel obtained its weapons?

"Well, this one's going to be one. I'm afraid, that I can't answer now as to how."

Has Pakistan given assurance that it will not try to build an atomic bomb?

"I won't answer the last part of the question."

The session with reporters was Reagan's third news conference as president and his first since early March, before he was shot in an assassination attempt March 30.

It had been planned for several weeks, and his top aides gathered with the president for a lunchtime rehearsal, peppering him with anticipated questions, just two hours before air time. It was a format at which he was adept during his early weeks in office.

But as he stood behind the lectern Tuesday afternoon, he stumbled several times reading his opening statement. He got caught up in his own language as he fielded questions that kept him shifting from China to the Middle East to Congress.

There was one inaccuracy — quickly corrected by his press spokesman.

Asked about the Israeli threat to take military action against the Syrian missiles in Lebanon, and whether this would violate the terms under which Israel obtained weapons, Reagan responded:

"Well, this one's going to be one. I'm afraid, that I can't answer now as to how — I would hate to see this happen. They are offensive weapons. There's no questions about the direction in which they are aimed. I'm speaking now of the Syrian weapons." Those weapons, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said within an hour, are defensive, and that's what the president meant to say.

Each question on the Middle East, on China, on

Poland and the Soviet Union sought to elicit indications of Reagan's foreign policy — a subject that he has not addressed in a public forum while he and his aides try to keep the focus on the economy.

Nothing found near navigation channel

WAGONER, Okla. (AP) — A search of Arkansas River Navigation Channel backwater has failed to produce a plane that two women thought they might have seen earlier this month.

Oklahoma Highway Patrol lake rangers spent several hours Wednesday searching after receiving the report, which had triggered speculation the sighting might have been a plane missing since June 6.

An Iowa family of the missing plane's pilot left Wednesday for Oklahoma and Arkansas in hopes of finding the two men.

Joyce Strand of Decorah, Iowa, her five children and the parents of her missing husband, Paul, were going to Mena, Ark., to begin posting reward signs, asking hikers to search for him. They planned to put up 2,500 posters in campgrounds and rural grocery stores announcing a $10,000 reward for help in finding the single-engine airplane and its two occupants.

Strand and a passenger, Raymond Haugen, both 50 and from Decorah, were returning by plane June 6 from a business trip to Brownsville, Texas.

Emotions strong when business sold

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Helping the founder of a private business sell out to a larger company is similar to being a divorce lawyer, except that sometimes the emotions are even stronger, says Denis Kelly.

Nevertheless, in a year's time Kelly and Gary Roelke, his associate at Merrill Lynch White Weld Capital Markets Group, help sell 10 to 15 companies with annual sales of between $10 million and $100 million.

To do so, they often must spend 75 to 100 hours in the presence of the seller, and perhaps 40 hours more on the telephone. By then, they say, they know more about the company than any buyer can ever need to know.

"We have all the information," he said, picking up the presentation, a large, loosely bound volume. Information, said Kelly, controls the deal. "The seller has to be in control of the transaction."

Kelly and Roelke, MBAs both, are rarities of high finance, which generally pays scant attention to the needs of smaller businesses. Very few big-name securities firms are organized to help smaller companies sell. Asked to name another, Kelly could think only of Lehman Brothers.

When private business people seek to sell out, they generally turn to accountants or lawyers. Or, if they are in the low multimillion-dollar category, they turn to specialists such as Niederhoffer, Cross & Zeckhauser Inc.

The separate commissions, which might range from $100,000 to perhaps $700,000, may not seem large as Wall Street numbers go, but he points out the costs are low also.

Moreover, there's plenty of business out there in the form of very successful companies begun after World War II whose owners are nearing 60 and thinking more about life's enjoyments than its challenges.

They sell, says Kelly, because the are tired of the company; or the company is "going gangbusters" and needs new debt financing, which is especially costly today; or because the business is going nowhere, or because conflicting interests are busting apart the old partnership.

Fathers of Year named

The 1981 Fathers of the Year have been announced in New York by the National Father's Day Committee.

The men named to this uniquely American honors list represent many different lifestyles, and contribute to the American way in varied occupations and avocations.

Those added to the Father of the Year roster for 1981 include Sugar Ray Leonard for sports, George Will for columnists, Geoffrey Holder for performing arts, Robert De Bolt for humanities, Kyle Rote for football, John Rubinstein for stage, Dan Rather for communications, Richard Vande Sande for workers, and Bruce N. Laingen for statesmanship.

Shepherd Brandon, chairman of the National Father's Day Committee, said before an audience of 1,500 attending the awards presentations, "We take a very deep sense of gratification from the maintenance of a tradition that has become so large a part in the fabric of Father's Day, as a family and community event."

"This is the 46th consecutive year during which the Fathers of the Year Honors List has been named. The men who have been accorded this distinction have been both well-known and unknown.

"But they all represent the finest ideals of responsible American fatherhood, which stands alone, in all the world, as a symbol of family strength, unity and leadership.

"We believe that we have contributed to the stability of the family. Through the nearly half-century of our dedicated activity, we have seen vast changes in social and economic patterns, and we have seen American fathers weather the changes and adapt to them, without flinching from their burden of preparing their children to play the leadership roles in future generations."

Gary Boyson, chairman of the Awards Presentation Committee, said, "The interest in our program has increased over the years. Now, with a leveling off of the changes that rocked our society a decade ago, we find a new and heightened interest in Fathers of the Year, and how they reflect the standards and the philosophies of the country, during the period of their greatest influence."

"Our recently endowed Father's Fund for Children seeks in its small way to interpret our total sense of commitment to American fatherhood, and help alleviate the misfortunes that have befallen a few of those among us.

"We feel that our goals, established in 1931, have been more than fulfilled, now that 95 percent of America pauses, the third Sunday of every June, to pay respect to Dad and have 'fun' on Father's Day.

"In nominating men for the prestigious DAD Award, we seek out men who best reflect the contemporary role model father and, thereby, keep the perception of Father's Day a living and relevant celebration."

The Annual National Father of the Year awards were made in New York at the Sheraton Centre Hotel.

Regional awards presentations were scheduled for Chicago, Los Angeles, Dallas and Atlanta.

Father's Day is Sunday, June 21, and will be observed this year for the 71st time.

Dandelion nominated as Dad's flower

The dandelion, that scourge of fathers who tend summer gardens, was proposed as the official flower for Father's Day in June, 1924. That was the year that President Calvin Coolidge proclaimed the first national observance in honor of those parents sometimes regarded as a down-trodden species.

The Coolidge proclamation followed a 13-year campaign by Mrs. John Bruce Dodd of Spokane, Wash., for such an observance. At the conclusion of the campaign, the citizens of Wilkesburg, Pa., proposed the dandelion as the official Father's Day flower because "the more it is trampled on, the more it grows." The proposal never took root, and the dandelion gave way to the rose as a symbol for the occasion.

Nevertheless, Father still seems slightly trampled on. About 75 million greeting cards are sent on Father's Day compare to 125 million on Mother's Day, according to the National Association of Greeting Card Publishers. With Dad second runner to Mom as a recipient of loving sentiment, perhaps the dandelion for Father's Day wasn't such a bad idea, say the greeting card people.

Time to make berry-peach jam

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

There's a time of year, speaking from a country-wide point of view, when it's perfect to pair two of summer's loveliest fruits — fresh strawberries and fresh peaches. At the end of June, strawberries are in their last peak month of supply; at the beginning of July, peaches start their first peak period of supply.

(There may be a little more or less of either fruit, but use a total of 4 1/4 cups.) Add lemon juice. Stir in pectin. Over high heat, stirring constantly, bring the mixture to a full boil. Immediately add sugar, stirring constantly, bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute. Remove from heat and, with a large metal spoon, skim off foam. Quickly ladle into hot 8-ounce jars, filling to within 1/4 inch of tops; cover with hot lids and screw bands on tightly. Process in a boiling water bath for 5 minutes. Makes about 7 eight-ounce jars.

Note: Here's how to process in a water bath. Place jars on rack in a canner or large saucepot of boiling water that covers jars by 1 or 2 inches. Cover canner and bring water to a boil; boil for 5 minutes. (as Strawberry-Peach Jam recipe directs). Remove jars from canner. Let stand to cool. Check seals. Jar lids should remain slightly concave when pressed. Remove bands and store in a cool dry place.

STRAWBERRY-PEACH JAM. Time to make it is rolling around.

STRAWBERRY-PEACH JAM

1 quart (about) fully ripe strawberries
1 1/2 pounds (about) fully ripe peaches
2 tablespoons lemon juice
One 1 1/4-ounce package fruit pectin
6 cups sugar

Rinse and hull strawberries. Thoroughly crush, one layer at a time — there should be about 2 1/4 cups; turn into a 6- or 8-quart saucepot. Peel and pit peaches. Cut very fine — there should be about 2 cups; add to the strawberries.

Follow tips to save energy, water

Record highs. That's the predicted forecast for this summer as skyscraping temperatures and high-rising utility costs help push the spiraling economic barometer right out of sight.

During the active summer months, with air conditioning, lawn watering and car washing pushing up energy demands, the cost of electricity, gas and water are always more noticeable. And, because of the sharp increase in utility costs in recent years, budget-conscious consumers are finding that conservation is no longer a nicety, but a necessity and "cutting back" has become a way of life.

To aid homeowners in their crusade to conserve, the Water Quality Association has developed a list of conservation tips that work double time, saving energy as well as water.

By following these suggestions, a consumer can save on energy costs while conserving water.

—Save electricity or gas when boiling water. Start with water from the hot water tap. It will take less time and energy to bring the water to a boil.

—Reduce the cost of hot water bills and the amount of water used by filling a pan (or half a double sink) with rinse water instead of letting the water run while doing the dishes.

—Cut water heating bills even more by installing a water softener. According to a recent study sponsored by the WQA, hard water can require the use of up to 29 percent more energy than soft water. The hard minerals found in the water cause a scale buildup in the heater, requiring it to work overtime to heat the water.

—Use the washing machine wisely. Do only full loads and use cooler temperature settings whenever possible.

—Try to take showers rather than baths; they use substantially less water. To see just how much can actually be saved, try this simple experiment: the next time you draw a bath, measure the depth of the water with a yardstick before climbing in. The next time, take a shower but close the drain so water can't escape. Before pulling the plug, measure the depth once again with a yardstick. The difference will make you believe in shower power.

By following the tips outlined by the Water Quality Association, a homeowner can help conserve water and at the same time help cut utility costs down to size.

Dear Abby

Man not interested in young, rich women

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I may be the first 80-year-old man to ask you for advice, but I need some help. After 57 years of a good marriage, my dear wife passed away last year. Now I would like to meet a sensible woman to invite out or to my home occasionally.

My friends want to fix me up with women who are much too young for me. (A man who has daughters 53 and 55 years old does not want to go out with a woman who is 40 or even 50. In fact, I don't want a woman who is under 70! I'm not interested in any woman's money as I retired with substantial income. I am in good health, play tennis three times a week, and walk no less than five miles every day, rain or shine. I enjoy traveling and can do anything a man half my age can do, but I don't go overboard on anything.

I would like a refined woman with a good sense of humor who doesn't run to doctors every day, and preferably one who can play a good game of gin rummy.

So where is she?

LOOKING IN N.Y.

DEAR LOOKING: Have you looked in Florida and California? There are more women there who fit your description than in all the other states combined. But I warn you, if your identity ever becomes known, you'll have to give up walking and start running or get a bicycle.

DEAR ABBY: I have neighbors who are very good people and I don't want to get them into trouble, but lately they've been doing something that is terribly wrong, although their intentions are good.

They have an 11-year-old son who started to wet the bed about a year ago. They took him to a doctor who found nothing physically wrong with him, so they took him to a psychiatrist. He said the boy was all right, so they just assumed he could quit wetting the bed if he really wanted to. If he woke up wet, they paddled him, and made him wash his own pajamas and sheets every morning.

Now they put a diaper on him and make him play outside in the front yard wearing only a diaper, a T-shirt, shoes and socks! All the kids tease him. He's a nice, polite kid, and I hate to see him humiliated this way.

Maybe if the parents see this in the paper they will change their tactics. I hope so.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

DEAR JACKSONVILLE: Well-meaning or not, those parents are being unpeppably cruel to the boy. Should they miss this column, please suggest that they buy a Wee Alert Wet Buzzer (Sears catalog lists it). I have recommended this inexpensive device for years, and according to my readers, it's worked wonders.

DEAR ABBY: We have no ashtrays in our home as a signal to smokers that we do not want them to smoke. (My wife is allergic to cigarette smoke.)

We recently gave a dinner party. There were four smokers present who lit their cigarettes from the candles on the table and dropped the ashes on their plates! They puffed all through dinner. It was disgusting.

How can a host and hostess keep their guests from smoking, short of asking them not to?

DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Most smokers have become more considerate. They ask if anyone objects before they light up. Those who light up without asking should be told at once that their smoke is offensive.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (35 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Preserve garden beauty by photographing flowers

That perfect iris, rose or marigold may live only a few short days in the garden. But you can save that loveliness forever with a camera.

Today, picture taking is easier than ever. Here are timely tips to preserve garden beauty for years to come. Through a camera lens, even a lowly dandelion can be a prized picture and perhaps even an award-winning one.

Often the difference between an acceptable snapshot and an outstanding one is slight. Before shooting, carefully study the subject and decide which angle would be best.

Learn to see the subtle differences in lighting. Is it soft and sunny? Are the shadows dark or "open?"

Does the light come from the top, sides or rear?

Put a plain background of contrasting color or darkness behind the flower. A deep blue or light blue posterboard will simulate a sky background, but don't let shadows fall on the card. Place the background paper a foot or two behind the subject.

Dew is natural on flowers. Make your own dew to add impact to flower photographs by sprinkling a little water on blooms before shooting. Try close-up and medium shots, some with blooms alone and others with the bloom in the foreground of a scene.

Always hold the camera steady with a firm grip and easy shutter release. For close-up shots, a tripod is desirable. With such firm support, you can photograph low-growing flowers by aiming the camera almost straight down for a bird's-eye view. You can also focus tightly on a bee or butterfly alighting on a blossom.

Vary photo subjects. Take photographs in the garden at different times of year. Vary the distance from camera to subject. Photograph the entire garden, then a special corner of it and finally the reigning beauty of that corner.

Use backlit blossoms to make a pleasant background for photographs of people. Catch the earliest spring blooms and return in the fall to capture the autumn foliage, fruits, bright berries and colorful fresh vegetables.

FINDING A PARKING space is no problem for Carol Lee, who keeps her 1963 Aston Martin DB-5 in the game room of her suburban Philadelphia home. She says that the famous car still works as well as it did for secret agent James Bond in the movie "Goldfinger."

Dr. Lamb

How to ease hay fever symptoms

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My son has hay fever in the spring and early summer. His eyes itch and swell. His nose is clogged and runny. He receives some help from Benadryl sometimes. Do you have a Health Letter covering this problem and what to do to help him? He is only 10 and it ruins the better part of his vacation time.

DEAR READER — Hay fever that starts in the spring is usually caused by the pollen from trees. That which occurs in the summer is caused by grass. It is pretty hard for a 10-year-old boy to avoid trees and grass, but avoiding the substance that you are allergic to is one of the best forms of treatment available.

Antihistamines do help. A person may become tolerant to one and it may lose its effectiveness. At that time it is wise to switch to another one. They work because the symptoms your boy has are caused by cells in the nose and eyes reacting to the pollen and producing histamine. The histamine irritation causes the symptoms.

For the best results from antihistamines, they should be taken regularly before the symptoms start. It is easier to prevent the symptoms than relieve them once they have begun.

As you have requested, I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-4, Hay Fever (Allergic Rhinitis). Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. As it points out, a cortisteroid spray is useful in some cases. The small amount needed for local effects should not cause the general effects noted from these medications. Unfortunately, some of these medicines have not yet been approved for this use in the United States.

Your son might profit from desensitization from the pollens he is reacting to. But to get the best results you should start such a program six to nine months before the hay fever season for him begins. It takes that long for the body to develop adequate desensitization.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have observed that all kinds of prepared foods contain coconut and palm oils. They are in every conceivable kind of cracker, snack food, dry cereals and canned foods such as tomato soup. I have learned that coconut and palm oils are very harmful to the health of the blood vessels, even more so than animal fat. Please comment on this and what can be done to stop the widespread use of these oils?

DEAR READER — They are commonly used because they are less inclined to become rancid, which prolongs the shelf life of many products and provides an economic factor.

You are partially right about them. They are very high in saturated fat, about 90 percent saturated fat. Saturated fats increase the formation of cholesterol by your body and appear to increase fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries.

To help control this problem, people can refuse to buy products containing these oils. But many times so-called "vegetable oil" is also coconut oil and palm oil, so unless you know from the label what kind of fat or oil is used, you may still be misled.

We've got 'em!

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK
Does anyone else suffer from "latent genius?"

My brain is just not geared for conversational combat. Put it in a situation that requires speed, cunning and excessive cuteness and it'll stall every time.

It doesn't wake up until after a door slams, the phone is hung up, the party is over, or Johnny Carson is saying good night.

I fantasize about being approached by a tall, dark stranger and having him say, "Have you ever thought of leaving your husband?" and I'd yawn. "Why should I settle for polyester when I have ultra-suede at home, if you get my drift."

Then he says, "I admire your flippancy."

And I reply, "Then you'll love the movie."

"Please," he begs, as I turn to leave. "I love to talk to liberated women who know who they are."

I sigh. "When I can't stand the heat, I'll go back to the kitchen."

He says, "Would you mind if I sent that in Reader's Digest?" and I shrug. "Whatever makes your wheels spin."

It never happens that way. The only time a man asked me if I had ever thought of leaving my husband I answered "Where?" and dropped a smoked oyster in his drink.

A lot of people are brilliant when they're angry. Not me. I usually end up with a colorful, "Well, we'll see about that!" or "Sticks and stones will break my bones but words will never harm me."

I suspect a lot of it stems from a basic shyness or insecurity. All I know is I am dynamite in the car by myself behind the steering wheel. There is no one who can top me in quick retorts, asides, innuendoes, plays on words and insights. I could convulse a convention of nuclear protesters. That is where I rehearsed a comment I was going to deliver at a dinner honoring Arthur Hailey a few years ago. The speech was devastatingly hilarious and I began to feel sorry for poor Mr. Hailey, who would fade into oblivion as the guests crowded around my silver tongue.

At the dinner, I cleared my throat and said, "Mr. Hailey, I've written everything you've ever read."
Luckily, I mumbled and no one heard me.

Astro-Graph
by bernice bede osol

June 19, 1981

This coming year you could be quite lucky and successful with projects or ventures in which you use the very latest techniques and equipment. Keep your eye peeled for the new and unusual.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The harder you work today, the luckier you get. In situations where you're gambling that things will break for you, it could be an entirely different story. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you have a disagreement with your mate today, don't wait too long to patch things up. Time festers what could have been smoothed over quickly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Coworkers will be more cooperative today if you make an effort to explain why you want things done a certain way. Let them offer their suggestions as well.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Some of your ideas today to make or save money may look good on paper, but may not work out too well in practice. More carefully.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) On issues relating to your collective security you and your mate will be in accord today, but in other matters each may pull in a different direction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Much can be accomplished today, provided you don't let old grudges color your thinking. Put the past to rest. Start anew.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The flow from a source from which you're anticipating returns may be shut off today, but you could reap rewards from an area you've never tapped before.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you have to make a choice today between satisfying a self-interest or improving your relationship with a friend, be sure to choose the latter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today, if you see that the methods you are using aren't working out, discard them promptly. Try a new approach. You're very bright at improvising.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Even if asked today, think twice before trying to manage something for another which he or she can't handle individually. It might not be your cup of tea either.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Have alternative ready today. You could run into some opposition where a goal is concerned. You're clever enough to skirt it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't be hesitant to seek advice today if you're stymied by something you can't figure out. A bright associate may have the right answers.

JANE FONDA TOM HAYDEN

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Abbie Hoffman — ex-Yippie, counter-culture hero and all-around activist — says he's planning to use his "celebrity status" to fight heroin addiction.

Hoffman, serving a jail sentence on a drug charge, said at a news conference Wednesday that addiction is a serious social problem — second only to "society's greed for money."

Hoffman, 44, called on others who have a "cultural impact" to join him in an anti-heroin advertising campaign.

Hoffman is serving a three-year sentence for selling $36,000 worth of cocaine to undercover police officers in 1973. He turned himself in earlier this year after spending seven years as a fugitive. On June 10, he began working at the Veritas Therapeutic Community drug clinic under a prison work-release program.

NEW YORK (AP) — The class of 1982 at Georgetown University includes quite a few talented students. But few are as talented — or as outspoken — as 63-year-old Pearl Bailey.

Miss Bailey, a high school dropout some years back, says college "makes you feel younger because it makes you stretch again."

In an interview in Good Housekeeping magazine, the celebrated entertainer, world traveler and conversationalist crowed about her 4.0 grade-point average, the equivalent of straight A's.

"Those gals fussing and fighting to be a '10' have nothing on ole Pearl Mae," she said, adding that, with her grades, she considers herself a "red-hot four."

MASERU, Lesotho (AP) — Actress-activist Jane Fonda, spurned by officials in South Africa, has received a warmer welcome in this small mountainous kingdom surrounded by South African territory.

Miss Fonda, along with husband Tom Hayden and their two children, were denied visas Tuesday when they arrived in Johannesburg from New York City. They had been invited by students to speak at a university in Johannesburg, but officials of the white-ruled nation denied them entry without explanation.

"If they are making the progress that they say they are, and if they want to be understood, then it is in their interest to let people like us in to see all sides," Miss Fonda said after arrival at a VIP welcome in Lesotho Wednesday.

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — President Reagan turned from acting to politics, but New Hampshire Gov. Hugh Gallen is headed the other way.

The state film bureau says Gallen has gotten a bit part in a movie about the 1905 Japanese-Russian peace treaty, which was signed in Portsmouth, N.H. The five-hour film is a project of the Japanese Public Broadcasting System.

Gallen shouldn't have much trouble with his part, according to film bureau head Martha Leighton. The governor plays a governor — Gov. John McLane, who played host to the foreign diplomats 76 years ago.

News in brief

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Supreme Court says it may be an extraordinary step, but a state takeover of the Trenton school district is necessary because of "mismanagement and incompetence."

In a 6-0 decision Wednesday, the court upheld the appointment of a monitor general to oversee the city's troubled school system. It rejected a challenge to the state's right to run the schools.

The school system is in an "abysmal state due almost entirely to the mismanagement and incompetence of the members of the local school board," the ruling said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — High legal bills have prompted the leader of a Ku Klux Klan faction to order his followers to stop brandishing weapons in public. The Tennessean reports in a copyright story.

"We must raise money fast, or we are in trouble," Nashville's morning newspaper quoted Bill Wilkinson, head of the Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, as saying in a Klan publication.

"We must avoid further confrontations which might be likely to result in arrests, even if we feel we are right," Wednesday's editions of the newspaper quoted him as saying.

PEABODY, Mass. (AP) — Thieves who took a rare, 100-pound book of Audubon bird illustrations may plan to sell the lithographs individually to make as much money as possible, says Peabody Institute librarian Thomas Scully.

Volume I of the four-book set called "Birds of America" by John Audubon disappeared Tuesday night from a glass display case in the city-owned library, police said. Three other volumes locked in a cabinet weren't disturbed by thieves who broke through a rear window.

The 155-year-old book is one of two-dozen copies and is valued at $250,000.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate wants to withhold 25 percent of the U.S. contributions UNESCO is making available to a campaign by Third-World countries to "license journalists or their publications."

An amendment saying it is "the sense of Congress" to withhold the contributions assessed by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization was adopted without dissent Wednesday.

The amendment is to a $6 billion authorization bill for the State Department and related agencies. It expressed opposition to "efforts by some countries further to control access to and dissemination of news."
