Tired but triumphant PHS band returns home

"Welcome Home" signs adorned a large crowd anxiously gathered in front of the Pampa High School band room before noon Thursday to greet the tired, but triumphant members of the Pampa High School band.

Band boosters furnished soft drinks, brownies, cookies and "Welcome Home" signs.

Greeters waited an hour or more for the first sight of the Continental Trailways bus caravan carrying Pampa High School Band members and friends home from their Hawaiian trip.

Information was transmitted by CB radios as to the exact location of the incoming Pampans.

"They are at the edge of town — they are almost here," the communications were relayed.

Anxious parents and friends rushed to meet the caravan that pulled into the parking lot at 12:10 p.m.

Band members peered sleepily through the bus windows and were obviously glad to be home.

The large bus doors opened and the rush was on — a colorful group of Pampa band members and friends emerged.

It was a tangled array of red-nosed, straw-hatted young people, all wearing bright-colored, bold-flowered Aloha shirts. Almost everyone was carrying a white cardboard box that was definitely Hawaiian. Green pineapple tops rustled through the box tops, and it suddenly smelled like a fruit market.

Everyone was busily hugging everyone, and Hawaiian souvenirs suddenly appeared for those who stayed home.

The 146 band members and numerous friends seemed lost for a moment. What were they supposed to do now?

Charles Johnson, assistant band director, answered that question: "O.K. now let's line up that luggage."

Green band uniforms and cases of musical instruments were soon in order on the sidewalk.

"It was just beautiful," sophomore Debbie Shaw said. "The beach was the best part of the trip — we just don't have anything like that here."

"A lot of the girls got sort of homesick," senior Rhonda Poole said. "I am very tired right now, but next week I will have all the memories. I would like to go back as soon as possible," senior Dina Orina said.

"I liked the church service the best," senior graduate Carol Conklin said.

The best compliment came from Continental bus driver Al Ray. "The Pampa kids are always the best — they are a well behaved group."

Band Director Jim Duggan was still trying to give instructions, but his 16-month-old daughter, Laura, who had not made the trip, just wanted to hug and visit.

LUGGAGE SEARCH. Pampa band members arrived home at 12:10 p.m. Thursday and set out to find all their possessions and Hawaiian souvenirs. Band members became seasoned travelers in the week-long trip, but sorting out the luggage looked almost hopeless. In reality, they became quite seasoned at sorting out luggage, too. (Staff Photo)

Plans made for controller strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government and airlines are putting the final touches on a nationwide emergency plan that would allow half of all commercial flights to operate if air traffic controllers strike next week.

FAA Administrator J. Lynn Helms vowed Thursday not to budge from a government wage package that already has been rejected by the controllers union. He said he could only "assume there will be some kind of (strike) action" by the controllers Monday.

The two sides broke off informal talks earlier in the week and have made clear they have come no closer together despite the efforts of a federal mediator.

Robert Poli, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, accused the Reagan administration Thursday of having an "intransigence and provocative attitude" that may force an illegal strike.

Poli was expected to expand on his views today in an appearance before a House subcommittee examining the impact of a controllers strike.

The union has threatened a nationwide walkout of controllers at 7 a.m. Monday if an agreement is not reached. That would result in hundreds of flights being canceled and the FAA has said long delays should be expected on whatever flights remain in service.

Because controllers are government workers, a strike would be illegal and the Justice Department has told U.S. attorneys to prepare to "seek indictments on short notice" in the event of a strike. The maximum penalty for violating the no-strike law is a $1,000 fine and a year in jail. The government and industry also are expected to seek civil judgments against controllers who strike.

A federal judge in New York City refused Thursday to lift an injunction prohibiting the controllers from a slowdown or strike, saying the controllers' complaints about pay are "no excuse for violation of the law."

"Unlawful conduct (by controllers) cannot be condoned," Judge Thomas C. Platt declared in ruling on a request by the union to have the 1970 injunction lifted.

However, Poli indicated in a letter to

Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., that the injunction would not stop the controllers from striking as "an act of civil disobedience" because of the FAA's refusal to budge from its current contract proposal.

The FAA said about 8,500 commercial flights and 1,500 military and emergency flights could be allowed to operate daily if a full fledged strike is called. That would be about 25 percent to 30 percent of all flights and about half of the commercial flights that flow under normal conditions.

Fran Wilson hospitalized in Hawaii

Two Pampans failed to return home with the band and group from Hawaii. They are Mrs. Fran Wilson and her companion for the trip Earlene Davis.

According to reports from Pampans, Mrs. Wilson doubled over in the tour bus in Hawaii Tuesday, shortly after Pampa travelers viewed the island from Pali (cliff) Lookout.

She was taken in the bus to the nearest hospital, Castle Memorial Hospital in Kailua, located northeast of Honolulu.

On Wednesday, last word before leaving the island was that Mrs. Wilson was hospitalized for complications of a chronic illness. It was first thought she had appendicitis, but this was later eliminated. She was hospitalized as the group left the island and was not supposed to be able to return till the condition cleared, two or three days later.

Mrs. Davis was remaining on Oahu while Mrs. Wilson recovered.

Bani-Sadr eludes persecution net

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran is trying to close the net around its elusive president, Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, but the government concedes it does not have complete control of the nation's borders.

There were rumors that Bani-Sadr had already slipped out of Iran to avoid impeachment, trial and possibly execution by the Moslem zealots who control the government.

Assadollah Lajavardi, Tehran's revolutionary prosecutor, said Thursday on Tehran Radio that Bani-Sadr has been missing since Tuesday.

"Unfortunately, because of the counter-revolutionary troubles inside the country, our borders are not completely under the control of our security forces, and the possibility of being smuggled out exists."

Accidents injure area folks

A rash of accidents Thursday resulted in injuries to seven persons, four of them seriously enough to require hospitalization.

Those injured Thursday are as follows:

—Donald Stroud, 55, of 318 N. Gillespie St. is reported in guarded condition today with alkaline burns in High Plains Hospital in Amarillo, after his eyes and face were severely burned by a drain cleaner. The hospital spokesman said Stroud was trying to open a clogged drain with a plunger when the drain cleaner splashed onto his face and into his eyes.

—Matthew Armstrong, 15, of Borger, Armstrong is listed in satisfactory condition today in Northwest Texas Hospital with a fractured leg, shoulder and severe lacerations he suffered in a motorcycle accident at 8:50 p.m. Thursday. More details on the accident was unavailable at press time today.

—Alan Jones, 9, also of Borger, a passenger on the Armstrong motorcycle. He was treated and released at Highland General Hospital emergency room for injuries to his face and left knee, resulting from the accident.

—An elderly couple, Harvey and Cleo Downs, of 914 N. Christine were treated for smoke inhalation and admitted to Highland General Hospital late Thursday after their home was damaged by a kitchen fire. Both Downs are reported to be in good condition today, a hospital spokesman said.

—Donna Anderson, 49, and Valerie Anderson, 10, both of 1832 Fir were treated at the Highland General Hospital emergency room Thursday morning, after they were involved in a two-car accident at the intersection of Russell and 17th Streets. Mrs. Anderson suffered injuries to her left thigh, and Valerie suffered injuries to her left knee in the mishap. Both Andersons were released after treatment.

—Barry Max Bryant, 22, of 1128 Duncan remained in critical condition in the intensive care unit of High Plains Baptist Hospital of Amarillo, a hospital spokesman said at press time today. Bryant, an employee of Flint Engineering and Construction Co., suffered severe electrical burns to 18 percent of his body, when the mast of the oilrig he was helping to upright touched a high power electrical line. Wednesday afternoon, Bryant suffered second and third degree burns to his left arm, shoulder and back as a result of the electrical shock. The accident occurred at the Gulf Oil Company K Sam No. 10 location, 10 miles north of McLean in Wheeler County, a company spokesman said.

Wheat harvest underway, but price is suffering

BY SHEILA ECCLES
Staff Writers

High-sided trucks to small pickups carrying the golden crop can be seen buzzing along the farm-to-market roads and local highways.

Local farmers had a few setbacks but are finally in the fields harvesting their winter wheat crop.

They are generally in high spirits, due to the good crop — but most farmers feel that prices are still too low.

Wheat is currently bringing approximately $3.64 per bushel.

Memories of the recent grain embargo have left an almost bitter taste for farmers locally and across the nation.

Russia may again be buying wheat from the United States now that the embargo has been lifted, but some area farmers anticipate the Russians will buy more wheat from South American and European countries.

"They saw that the U.S. government could embargo their wheat — so they are not going to depend on our supplies from now on — they will continue to buy from other nations to insure themselves a steady supply," one White Deer farmer said.

In previous years, the Russians have bought 75 percent of their wheat from American farmers. They now purchase only about 23 percent of their wheat from the U.S.

There were 99,000 acres of winter wheat planted in 1980 in Gray County and the crop this year looks even larger.

In 1980 Gray County farmers planted 11,500 acres of irrigated wheat and 87,500 acres of dryland wheat. These figures are from 500 farmers that report to the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) office in Pampa.

Most of the wheat in Gray County comes from the upper three-quarters of the county. The southern McLean area is below the Caprock and has a totally different soil.

The harvest came in slow this year due to the recent rains. Those rains were not exactly in the best interest of the wheat farmers. A heavy rain that falls just when the wheat is headed out can cause damage to the wheat heads and leave battered stalks in the fields. The rain also muddies the fields enough to keep the machines out — just when they are needed.

The hot sunny days and warm winds dried the fields out in no time after the rains and farmers got into the fields and started cutting just after the rains," County Extension Agent Carl Gibson said.

The moisture content of the wheat that has been delivered to the Wheeler-Evans Elevator Company, Pampa, has been running under 13.50, according to manager Lee Heaton.

In Carson County, farmers agree that the recent rains made the wheat crop come in a little slower this year.

"Summer fallow dry land wheat is coming 25 to 33 bushels per acre, some possibly higher," said Owen Lafferty, White Deer and Kingsmill manager of Wheeler-Evans Grain Elevator.

"Wheat on the land that was not summer fallowed is bringing 3 to 15 bushels. The harvest in Carson County should be finished by the first of July — if it doesn't rain," Lafferty said.

The wheat is running at 12.20 to 12.50 protein at the White Deer elevator. The local average is usually 12.85.

The rains are sometime responsible for washing some of the protein out of the wheat. An old saying goes, no rain 30 days before harvest insures high protein.

"There may be a lot more weeds this year due to the heavy rains," Lafferty said.

Area farmers were able to report that so far there have been enough custom cutters.

Although farmers may be short-handed, they prefer to do the work with family and friends. Drivers and custom cutters are among the most common help hired.

The custom cutters come from as far away as Los Angeles to Canada. They bring the equipment and may sometimes have hundreds of thousands of dollars invested in farm machinery, trucks, trailers and house trailers. They travel from the southern United States to the west, then to the eastern states.

Even in times when weather conditions may be perfect, wheat farmers must contend with numerous other pests.

"There are various diseases that claim wheat crops. Through research the farmers are now able to produce almost twice as much wheat on the same amount of acreage than they were able to 20 or 30 years ago. The research has produced new strains of resistant and stronger wheat," Lafferty said.

The loads brought to the grain elevators vary from small trucks to an eighteen-wheel semi-tractor trailer loads.

The smallest loads may run from under 11,000 pounds, or 183 bushels, to 41,000 pounds, or 638 bushels.

In Roberts County, Monday was the first full day of harvest, according to Bill Tolbert of the Miami Feed and Grain.

"On Thursday, June 12, Miami received one inch of rain but the high winds dried the fields and the wheat trucks started to roll," Tolbert said.

The harvest in Roberts County is almost 75 percent finished, and the wheat has been of good high protein quality. The average has been around 63 pounds per bushel.

Couple hospitalized after fire

An elderly woman and her invalid husband were hospitalized for smoke inhalation late Thursday after a fire erupted behind the stove of the kitchen in their home at 914 N. Christine Street.

Mrs. Cleo Downs and her husband, Harvey Downs, both 73, were admitted to Highland General Hospital suffering from the effects of smoke inhalation. A hospital spokesman said today that both Downs were in good condition.

Pampa firefighters were called to the large green and white house, overlooking Central Park at 6:48 p.m. Thursday.

Fire officials said when they arrived the kitchen was in flames, but firefighters were able to contain the fire to the rear of the house.

Fire Captain Ray Fisher said Mrs. Downs apparently inhaled the smoke when she attempted to put the fire out on her own. Mr. Downs was an invalid, almost bedridden, he added.

The Downs were taken to Highland General Hospital by the fire department rescue unit as a precaution, he said.

Fisher said Mrs. Downs tried to put the fire out when it first began behind the stove, but the fire apparently grew, burning the wallpaper and cabinets.

"It spread pretty fast, but we got there in time to take care of it," he said.

The kitchen was heavily damaged by fire, officials said. The rest of the house sustained severe heat and smoke damage, they said.

A small gas leak behind the cooking stove in the kitchen was listed by fire officials as the cause of the fire.

Golden Horseshoe contest begins

Pampa merchants and the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association are again sponsoring the annual "Golden Horseshoe Treasure Hunt" in conjunction with the Top O' Texas Rodeo, scheduled July 9-11.

A Golden Horseshoe has been hidden in the area, and clues will be given each day to give residents help in locating the horseshoe — an original shoe from the Clydesdale horses.

The lucky person who finds the horseshoe will receive a $100 savings bond, and a box seat to all three rodeo performances, valued at $105.

Clues will be carried daily on the front page of the Pampa News, but are placed in selected stores in Pampa a day early. Those interested in getting their clues a day early will know the type of store in which it is located and if they can find these stores, they can pick up the clues.

In order to get the clues a day early, a participant may need to go to several stores before finding the clue.

The clue will be given the following day through the media.

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce will accept local entries for the Top O' Texas Rodeo, beginning June 24 at 9 a.m. in the Chamber offices.

The entries will be taken until 5 p.m. July 1.

Amateur cowboys and cowgirls may enter this professional rodeo provided they live in Gray County and pay their entry fee prior to the July 1 deadline.

This is one of several promotions planned during the weeks preceding the rodeo.

FIRST RODEO CLUE — The first clue can be found in a department store all day on Saturday, June 20.

Rodeo entries open

Late entries will not be accepted.

This year the Top O' Texas Rodeo will feature an Amateur Jackpot Double Muggin' event. This event is a fast moving and exciting contest between three member teams. The entry fee for the contest will be $35 plus a $5 stock charge with the entry fees split 40 percent, 30 percent, 20 percent and 10 percent.

minor accidents

Three Pampans were injured in a two-vehicle accident at the intersection of Russell and 17th Streets, at 9:20 a.m. Thursday.
Donna T. Anderson, 49, and Valerie Elaine Anderson, 10, both of 1832 Fir, were taken by a police vehicle to Highland General Hospital. Fountain Farris Tubb, 73, of 1721 Evergreen reported injuries at the scene of the mishap, but was not treated at the hospital emergency room.
The accident occurred at the intersection of Russell and 17th Streets when a 1966 Chevrolet, driven by Mrs. Anderson, came into collision with a 1978 Chevrolet, driven by Tubb. Anderson was cited for failure to yield right of way at a stop sign.

WORLD'S LARGEST FLAG. The project would take an estimated $650,000. The flag, made of reinforced polyester, is about two football fields long. Each star is 13 feet in diameter and the stripes are 16 feet wide. Justice Stewart's retirement sets off large guessing game

WASHINGTON (AP) - Justice Potter Stewart's departure from the Supreme Court is two weeks away, but it already has set off the biggest guessing game in town: Who will President Reagan select for the first opening on the court in six years?
Within hours of Stewart's surprise announcement Thursday, a White House spokesman said the search for a successor got underway informally a month ago when Reagan was told of the justice's decision to retire.
But no one in a position to know, least of all the president himself, was giving any hints as to who would be selected beyond dangling the possibility that it could be a woman.
"There will be an announcement shortly," Reagan said. "We won't leave that vacant."
The chief executive added that he was "always" on the lookout for someone to possibly become the court's first female member. He has hinted at that before, but has always stopped short of a public commitment to fill the first opening on the court with a woman.
Stewart, the affable Republican jurist long identified with the court's moderate middle ground, gave no reason for his decision to retire July 3 and his office tried to quiet any speculation.
"He's not going to be an ambassador, and he's not dying. There is no ulterior motive here," said Stewart's secretary, Carolyn Sand.
She said the wealthy, 66-year-old justice was "retiring just to retire."
Stewart invited reporters to a press conference today, possibly to give some reasons for leaving - after 23 years - the post he was entitled to keep for life.

The last vacancy on the high court was created by the retirement of Justice William O. Douglas on Nov. 12, 1975. He died in January 1980.
Thus Reagan will get to make an appointment in the first months of his presidency that eluded Jimmy Carter in four years in office.
The pressure from women's groups and others pushing their own candidates is expected to be intense.
Last Oct. 14, then-candidate Reagan said, "I am announcing today that one of the first Supreme Court vacancies in my administration will be filled by the most qualified woman I can possibly find."
Reagan also has been under pressure from conservative groups demanding administration nominees more in line with their thinking.
The president learned of Stewart's decision in a secret Oval Office meeting May 18.
Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan directed Attorney General William French Smith at that time to quietly start looking for a successor to Stewart.
Speakes said Smith had been informally compiling names for a month, but had not yet checked with any potential nominees or submitted the names to the White House.
The search now will become more formal, according to Speakes. Any nominee will have to be approved by the Senate.
Another presidential spokesman, David R. Gergen, said, "What we're looking for is the best qualified person, man or woman, but in that process highly qualified women would be given careful consideration."
Most immediate speculation focused upon Smith, the attorney general and formerly Reagan's personal lawyer, and William Clark, a former California Supreme Court judge and close friend who now holds the No. 2 job at the State Department.

Among the women being mentioned as possible nominees are Elizabeth Hanford Dole, Reagan's special assistant for public liaison; Carla Hills, secretary of Housing and Urban Development in the Ford administration; Rita Hauser, a New York lawyer; Cornelia Kennedy, a member of the 6th U.S. Circuit of Appeals; Mildred Lillie, a member of the California appellate court; and Sylvia Bacon, a District of Columbia Superior Court judge.
Stewart's departure will leave the court with two consistently conservative members - Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and William H. Rehnquist - and two consistently liberal members - William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall.

It has been the five justices of the middle ground, where Stewart usually stood, who have been giving the court its direction.
Since the late 1960s, Stewart has been influential in helping to draw the limits of police intrusions on individual liberties.
Early in his career Stewart had been a champion of First Amendment freedoms of press and speech, but that interest appears to have wavered in recent years.
Stewart was usually in the majority that approved sweeping civil rights legislation in the 1960s, but in recent years he has grown more conservative.

House budget cuts may be vetoed

WASHINGTON (AP) - House cutbacks in the U.S. legal aid program - including first-ever curbs on assistance for poor people who are homosexuals - may not be enough to avert a presidential veto, Republican leaders say.
Legislation to keep a scaled-down Legal Services Corporation alive for two more years was approved by the House late Thursday and sent to the Senate.
Reagan wants the seven-year-old program - once a major part of the War on Poverty but now under attack by conservatives - dismantled entirely, with its responsibilities given to the states and local bar associations.
House GOP Whip Trent Lott, R-Miss., and other Republican leaders suggested that the House-backed restrictions on use of legal aid funds may not be enough to meet administration objections.

"It's still a likely candidate for a veto," Lott said.
Although the legislation's fate in the GOP-run Senate is uncertain, the House's 245-167 vote was below the two-thirds margin needed to override a veto.
The most fervent debate on the legislation was over an amendment, adopted 281-124, barring the legal aid corporation from using tax dollars to "promote, defend or protect homosexuality."
It was the first time either chamber of Congress has voted to deny federal assistance of any kind to homosexuals.
The amendment, introduced by Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., also prohibits the use of federal funds to enforce a corporation regulation opposing discrimination against potential clients based on their sexual orientation.
The measure would deny government-paid legal aid to homosexuals in cases in which their sexual orientation became an issue, according to sponsors of the amendment.

"Taxpayers' money will not be used to defend homosexuality or a homosexual lifestyle," McDonald told the House.
He said the move was in keeping with the new conservative mood in the country.
But legal aid proponents called it discriminatory and probably unconstitutional.
"It's mean-spirited and unworthy of members of this House," said Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass.
The restrictions would not apply in criminal cases, where defendants unable to afford an attorney could still get court-appointed counsel or be represented by a public defender's office.

-The Senate Democratic Caucus voted to support legislation creating a Cabinet-level narcotics control office with power to order the CIA and agencies involved in narcotics control into the government battle against illegal drugs.
-Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., agreed to end his filibuster and let the Senate vote on a far-reaching amendment that would prohibit the Justice Department from seeking court-ordered busing to integrate schools. Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker gave Weicker one more hour to wrap up his arguments today.
-Army Brig. Gen. William C. Louisell, the Pentagon official in charge of drug and alcohol abuse control programs for the military, told a House subcommittee that he was "not satisfied with the levels of reported use or with the consequences we suffer due to that use."

Republicans develop battle strategy

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republicans are developing their strategy for an all but certain battle on the House floor over a $37.8 billion package of budget cuts that the Reagan administration says isn't enough like the president's proposal.
Republican lawmakers were expected to reveal today how President Reagan wants them to move on the budget cuts recommended by Democratic-controlled House committees.
Also Thursday, Reagan's plan for a three-year individual tax cut cleared one hurdle in the Republican-dominated Senate Finance Committee. The panel voted 12-2 for the principles of Reagan's proposed personal tax cut: a 25 percent reduction in rates over three years with the same cut going to rich and poor alike.
In other congressional action Thursday:
-The House voted 281-124 to prohibit the use of federal money by the Legal Services Corp. to "promote, defend or protect homosexuality." That measure was an amendment to a bill to keep alive the legal aid agency, which Reagan wants to eliminate. The House approved the overall bill 245-137 and sent it to the Senate.

-Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., an opponent of abortion, told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee that defining life as beginning with conception would stop a "holocaust of the unborn." But Sarah Weddington, who successfully argued the Supreme Court case that led to legal abortions, said the proposed bill is unconstitutional and its impact on human rights unknown.
-Some members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee denounced Israel's bombing of an Iraqi nuclear reactor as "vigilante violence." Others on the committee defended the attack, saying Iraq was developing nuclear weapons to destroy Israel.
-The Senate urged the Reagan administration and the baby formula industry "to support the basic aim" of a World Health Organization code restricting sales promotions of formula.

-The Senate Democratic Caucus voted to support legislation creating a Cabinet-level narcotics control office with power to order the CIA and agencies involved in narcotics control into the government battle against illegal drugs.
-Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., agreed to end his filibuster and let the Senate vote on a far-reaching amendment that would prohibit the Justice Department from seeking court-ordered busing to integrate schools. Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker gave Weicker one more hour to wrap up his arguments today.

Abandoned children from another country?

HOUSTON (AP) - Four children abandoned at Ben Taub Hospital last week may be from another country, child welfare officials say.
"Their English is very precise. Each word is pronounced very distinctly," Harris County Child Welfare Unit director Judy Hay said Thursday. "We think they may be from some other country. We've guessed Haiti, Jamaica or maybe some country in Africa."

Hay said the children, two sets of twins aged four and six, do not know their parents' names and said efforts to find their parents have been unsuccessful.
The two boys and two girls were found last Saturday night in the Ben Taub emergency room. A note pinned to one of the boys' shirt read, "I am not able to take care of them. Will someone help them please."

Officials want to find the parents and try to help them keep the children, Hay said.
"If they truly need to give these children up, they can speed up the process," Hay said, and added that without the parents' cooperation, the adoption process could take six months.

UN plans harsh rebuke of Israel

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - The United States, traditionally Israel's staunchest ally, is planning its harshest-ever U.N. rebuke to the Jewish state with a vote strongly condemning its destruction of the Iraqi nuclear reactor.
U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick was to vote today for a U.N. Security Council resolution that was expected to win unanimous approval from the 15 council members.
Its key provision said the council "strongly condemns the military attack by Israel as a clear violation of the United Nations Charter and the norms of international conduct."
A spokesman for Mrs. Kirkpatrick's office, after checking the record books, told reporters it was the first time the United States had supported a resolution in the council "strongly" condemning Israel, though it had backed condemnations eight times since 1953 and censure of Israel 15 times.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick and Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi agreed on the wording of the resolution after the Arabs dropped demands for economic and military sanctions against the Israelis. The United States opposed sanctions during the five days of council debate and was expected to veto any resolution calling for them.
Instead of sanctions, the resolution urged Israel to pay damages to Iraq, saying the Arab state was "entitled to appropriate redress for the destruction it has suffered, responsibility for which has been acknowledged by Israel."
Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Z. Blum, who is expected to reject the U.N. condemnation today, has already told the council his government will not pay Iraq "a brass farthing."

Another provision calls on Israel, which has never signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, to open its own nuclear facilities to the inspectors of the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna.
In a rare show of U.S. agreement with a hardline, pro-Soviet Arab state, Mrs. Kirkpatrick drafted the compromise condemnation in closed-door negotiations Wednesday and Thursday with the Iraqi foreign minister.
Iraq agreed to forego the demand for sanctions in the hope that U.S. endorsement of the condemnation clause would drive a wedge between Israel and its closest ally, veteran U.N. observers said.

Top O' Texas Rodeo bolo ties on sale

The Top O' Texas Bolo Ties are now on sale at the Chamber of Commerce office and other locations in Pampa. Chamber officials announced.
People wishing to purchase the $7.50 ties can check with merchants to see if they are selling them.
The ties will be a part of the official rodeo week dress. They are blue and white with the Top O' Texas emblem on them.
These promotions, sponsored by the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association and Pampa merchants, are being conducted to help create a more western atmosphere in Pampa during Rodeo Week, July 6 through July 11. It is also a way for these two groups to show their interest in Pampa by providing the ties for the public on a non-profit basis.
It is recommended that the purchases of the ties be made as early as possible as only a small quantity of them will be available and they promise to become collectors items in the future.

Hightower will seek Buffalo Lake funds

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Texas congressman pledged Thursday to introduce legislation to provide for money to preserve a lake in the Texas Panhandle as a wildlife refuge and a recreational area.
Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Vernon, said he will "continue to push for action in every way I can" to resolve the problems affecting Buffalo Lake in Randall County, a few miles west of Canyon.
He met Wednesday with two representatives of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and said the Southwest division engineer for the U.S. Corps of Engineers is scheduled to visit with him in Washington next week "to get things moving."

The first part of solving the problem is to develop a coordinated and workable interagency plan, Hightower said. The second part is getting the funding, either from money already already within the agencies' budgets or from special appropriations.
"I am prepared to introduce legislation to provide funding for whatever action may be necessary, even in view of the general budget restraints," Hightower said.
His meeting with Jim Pulliam, deputy assistant director of the Fish and Wildlife agency, and Gordon Hansen, assistant regional director, lasted for about an hour Wednesday.
They discussed ways to develop a coordinated plan of action among the departments of Fish and Wildlife, the Army Corps of Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation, he said.

"One of the frustrating roadblocks we face in getting action to strengthen the spillway and dam is that after six months, the position of director of Fish and Wildlife has still not been filled by presidential appointment," Hightower said.
"Until we have a director who can make decisions for his agency, Fish and Wildlife will not be fully involved in a solution. And it will take all three agencies' involvement to make Buffalo Lake safe and useful again."
Hightower said he wants to preserve the lake as both a wildlife refuge and a recreational area.

Clements vetoes Senate redistricting

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has vetoed the Senate redistricting plan, calling it "unwise, unjust and unlawful."

Clements said Thursday the plan "does not go far enough" in assuring the election of a black senator, pits country against city folks and does not reflect population shifts within the state.

Clements, however, signed into law the House redistricting measure, which would force 16 incumbents into contests against another incumbent if they seek re-election next year.

Clements' veto gives the Legislative Redistricting Board the task of drawing new Senate districts based on 1980 census figures.

The Republican governor's veto was a surprise in that the five-member board is made up entirely of Democrats — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Speaker Bill Clayton, Attorney General Mark White, Comptroller Bob Bullock and Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong.

White, who is frequently at odds with Clements, responded to the veto by saying, "I am disappointed that the hard work of the Texas Senate has been frustrated by the governor's veto. I felt that they had done a constitutionally acceptable job."

Bullock advised board members to move cautiously in preparing a new plan. "I'm concerned that the plan be fair and as squeaky-clean as possible from a legal standpoint," said Bullock.

"This upsets me," said Sen. John Traeger,

D-Seguin. "I feel this is a big mistake. I can't understand why (he vetoed it). I don't think the Legislative Redistricting Board will change it much, if any. One thing about it. He can't veto whatever they do about it."

Hobby called the board's first meeting for next Wednesday.

Clements' veto message said the Senate redistricting plan denies blacks "a fair and equal opportunity to elect to the Senate candidates who will best represent their interests."

"There are no black senators today and I, for one, do not believe that increasing the percentage of blacks in the 23rd senatorial district in Dallas from 46.3 percent to 50 percent is the best that the Senate could do in enhancing the prospects for electing a black to the Texas Senate," Clements said.

Proposed new Senate districts, he told a news conference, were "nothing but a subterfuge to keep incumbents in office."

The Senate proposal would have paired four incumbents — Sen. Dee Travis, R-Garland, with Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, and Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, the bill sponsor, with Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston. Mengden, however, has said he has a home in a district which has no incumbent and he would run from that area.

Clements said the bill "divides and fragments counties, towns and communities with historic common interests; it gerrymanders district lines to pit voters in rural parts of the state against citizens in our urban areas. This is particularly true in the Dallas-Fort Worth metropolitan area.

"The common interests, needs and concerns of the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex will not be represented in a plan which willy-nilly divides the metroplex into districts that reach from Lubbock County to Dallas County, from Dallas County to Texarkana, from Comanche to Dallas and from Tyler to Dallas."

Thirdly, Clements said, the bill ignores the state constitutional requirement that Senate districts be drawn on the basis of qualified electors and relies exclusively on total population figures.

"Finally," he said, the plan "violates the United States constitutional requirement of 'one man, one vote' by failing to take into account the significant shifts in population that have occurred since 1970 and that will continue to occur over the 10-year period this plan would be in effect. Many counties are growing at twice the rate of other counties. In particular, the Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth and San Antonio metropolitan areas are experiencing explosive population growth. Other areas — the Lower Rio Grande Valley, Bell, Williamson, Travis, Brazos, Smith and Gregg counties, for example — are growing rapidly as well."

"It creates districts that will already be unequal by the time of the first general election in 1982," he said.

TO PROVE HIS POINT, Entomologist John M. Owens holds an insecticide sprayer and a handful of dead cockroaches to illustrate that the insects can be contained. Owens, a Texas A&M

Harrelson friend says he faces jail or death

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A longtime friend of convicted killer Charles V. Harrelson says government attorneys have forced him to make a choice between going to jail or being killed.

George Edward "Pete" Kay was scheduled to find out today whether he will be held in contempt of court for refusing to testify in the grand jury investigation into U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.'s assassination.

"It looks like jail or death," the bearded Huntsville nightclub operator said. He contends he has received threats he would be killed if he testifies before the grand jury.

"They're probably going to lock me up (this) afternoon," Kay said Thursday.

Kay, 39, said he had known Harrelson, a native of Lovelady near Huntsville, since childhood and that their fathers worked together at the Texas Department of Corrections. Harrelson is married to the woman that was Kay's common-law wife for six years, Kay said.

Harrelson, 43, who served a 15-year prison term for the hired killing of Sam Degelia Jr., is a key suspect in the May 29, 1979, slaying of Wood outside his San Antonio apartment.

Kay, found innocent of an ambush killing in Oklahoma several years ago, said he voluntarily told the grand jury Thursday. "I did not know who killed Judge Wood, that I did not kill him." But he said he pleaded the Fifth Amendment on about 20 more questions before he was hailed before U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions Thursday.

Prosecutor John Emerson apparently was prepared to seek a contempt citation against Kay Thursday when his attorney, James Moore of Houston, made the surprise plea that his client's life had been threatened if he testified.

"There have been serious and real threats on his life should he testify in this case," Moore told Sessions. "He has a 'Hobson's choice' of being killed if he testifies, or sent to jail if he doesn't."

Cockroaches may outlast us

DALLAS (AP) — We're living in the age of insects, an entomologist says, but that doesn't mean you have to let cockroaches eat you out of house, home and postage stamps — even though the universally despised creatures will swallow just about anything.

John Owens, who works for the Dallas office of Texas A&M Agricultural Extension Service, claims the common German cockroach can be controlled.

To prove his point, he's taken a $4,000 grant from some chemical companies and applied that, boric acid and a kind of insect "nerve gas" to a demonstration of roach-killing in an Oak Lawn housing project.

"It takes a lot of organizing," he said, because there's more — much more — to roaches than meets the eye.

"If they have 25 cockroaches that are visible to us, then they have a significant situation," Owens said. "Research shows that a visual count shows only 15 percent of the cockroaches present."

Cockroaches are not simply "disgusting," they are also hazardous to your health, Owens said, since the insect's habits are far from sanitary.

They eat, he said, "the fallout from every human activity: everything. That's flecks of skin, hair, the crumbs we leave behind when we watch Johnny Carson, drops of beer on the kitchen floor, all things that fall from above they'll eat," including the glue on the backs of postage stamps.

They are lazy, spending "three-fourths of a 24-hour period just hanging around," and rot in the cleanest places. In the cracks and crevices, they pick up the bacteria that causes diarrhea, flu and salmonella — food poisoning.

At the same time, roaches are personally fastidious, preening themselves with their mouths and legs.

You can use this vanity against them by dusting their hideouts with boric acid, which they will walk in and then lick off their feet "like a kitty cat." The acid — a stomach poison to man, beast and insect — is one of the most effective weapons in the fight against the roach, Owens says.

Boric acid takes about two weeks to work. For one-day death-dealing, Owens recommends spraying a mixture of Duraban and Vapona, a nerve gas poison.

Old-fashioned cleanliness is also part of his arsenal, but hand-to-roach combat and the one-shot deal isn't.

"If you see one moving across the floor, yeah, you can drown him in Raid, but it won't do much to affect the population," said Owens.

You mustn't expect too much, he says.

"Cockroaches evolved on the earth, oh, 250 million to 300 million years ago," he said. "They're so adaptable that we can't expect to eliminate them."

Roaches were here before people, and Owens says there's a good chance they'll be here after we're gone.

"We're in the age of the insects as far as animal life goes," he said.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Disorder in Northern Ireland

By BUTLER D. SHAFFER

Those who persist in the notion that "order" is something imposed upon society, from above, by the political State, are invited to examine current events in Northern Ireland. Neither all the queen's horses nor all the queen's men seem capable of putting that violence-riddled nation back together again. It is not that millions of people are out bombing, shooting, and assaulting one another: quite the contrary. News reports indicate that the overwhelming majority of the population of that country favor a cessation of the internecine warfare. A relatively small handful of terrorists on each side — perhaps no more than a few thousand out of one and one-half million — have kept the blood flowing, and there is nothing that any governmental agency can do to bring it to an end.

I am unable to support either side in this most uncivil war. Like the centuries-old disputes that have kept Jews and Arabs at one another's throats, each side can put together a compelling argument as to why they are "right" and the other side is "wrong." To bring the nature of such disputes closer to home, the descendants of both nineteenth-century American Indians and Anglo-Saxon pioneers can, in 1981, make convincing arguments that they are each entitled to own those lands originally confiscated by the 7th Cavalry Land Acquisition Agency. These struggles, in other words, tend to go on eternally, and as long as there are activists about to keep the flames alive, conflict will continue.

The lesson to be learned from all this — whether our classroom be the streets of Belfast or Beirut — is that peace and order in any society is always the product of the dispositions of the men and women who comprise that society. It is never the consequence of laws, police officers, prisons, military power, or political leadership. All that the political State can do — and, as I developed in a law review article I wrote seven years ago, what the State invariably does — is foster disorder. If as few as one-tenth of one percent of the population — in the case of the United States, 200,000 people — became intent on engaging in terrorist practices, there would be a total collapse of social order, of society itself.

Society is, indeed, a most fragile set of relationships. Its continuation is dependent not just on the support of most people, but of virtually all of us. "Cracking down" on criminals, doing away with plea-bargaining, building bigger and tougher jails, choosing more punishment-minded judges, enacting more laws — none of this will save society from absolute destruction if even a relatively small number of malcontents and power-seekers are bent on violence and terrorism and other forms of crime as means of accomplishing their purposes. As people in Northern Ireland are discovering, more tanks and soldiers only invite more opposition.

We are living in a time when lunatic visionaries and savage butchers have been able to arm themselves with weapons of destruction unknown to even the most heinous tyrants of half a century ago. Disgruntled men and women, seemingly incapable of expressing themselves in any intelligent way, are able to put together plastic explosives and, apparently, nuclear weapons, with which to hold the world for ransom. The power to annihilate the human race is, in other words, no longer a monopoly enjoyed by the cartel of national governments.

As Jimmy Durante used to say, "everyone wants to get into the act." In Belfast and Beirut, the show is just getting started.

If peace is ever to return to any violence-beleaguered nation — and that includes American cities in which murder, rape, mutilation, robbery, assault, and other crimes abound on the streets — it can only be as a result of men and women discovering peace within themselves. That sense of inner peace cannot be imposed upon any of us, and the attempt to do so will only generate more conflict. It can only be through each of us identifying our own felt sense of conflict and putting an end to it. As long as you or I feel ourselves to be at war with others, we will be adding our destructive energies to the forces that are tearing our world apart.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, June 19, the 170th day of 1981. There are 195 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 19, 1819, the S.S. Savannah became the first steamship to cross the Atlantic Ocean when it arrived in Liverpool, England.

On this date:

In 1773, Dominican friars entered what is now California and established the first settlement.

In 1862, Congress prohibited slavery in U.S. territories.

In 1885, the Statue of Liberty arrived in New York City from France.

And in 1953, Americans Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were executed after being convicted as Soviet atomic spies.

Five years ago: It was disclosed that the Internal Revenue Service was investigating about 50 large companies suspected of having made illegal campaign donations and overseas payoffs.

One year ago: President Carter left for an eight-day European trip aimed at restoring unity to Western Alliance.

Today's birthday: French actor Louis Jordan is 61.

Thought for today: The farther backward you look, the farther forward you are likely to see. — British statesman Winston Churchill. (1874-1965).

British justice swift

Britain's "Yorkshire Ripper," Peter Sutcliffe, eluded police for five years during his killing spree in northern England.

But after his arrest Jan. 5, the British judicial system required less than five months to put the admitted killer of 13 women behind bars — for life, if the judge has his way.

The contrast between British justice and American justice is stark. In the United States, it is likely that prosecution and defense would be wrangling over whether the defendant would be granted bail.

The trial would be delayed because of crowded courtrooms and procedural strategies.

And the 10 to 2 verdict under which Sutcliffe was found guilty by a jury would have forced a new trial in American courts, which don't subscribe to the 10 - 2 or 11 to 1 majorities accepted by the British.

The court scorned, significantly, a "plea bargain" bid by Sutcliffe under which he would have admitted guilt by reason of — in an American interpretation — temporary insanity.

Licensing booby trap

Seven Latin American countries now require that news people be licensed.

And Puerto Rico, rooted in Spain and sharing the cultures of its neighbors, is tempted to join them.

But Puerto Rico is a commonwealth of the United States. The U.S. Constitution and the Puerto Rican Constitution support freedom of the press. A free press does not license its members.

As envisioned by legislators and journalists, a College of Journalists would be created to which all journalists must belong or face fines or imprisonment. The college would accredit journalists and protect their rights, or so goes the provocative line.

Low wages on the island, unfortunately, may make many reporters and broadcasters sympathetic to the socialistic appeal. Probably many believe that licensing would upgrade their profession.

Similar bills have been introduced in Puerto Rico in the past and, happily, have been defeated. Most observers believe the new effort will also fail, but the changing sentiment of some journalists complicates the issue.

They must be reminded over and over that the prestige of a license from a "College of Journalists" has a highly visible booby trap. What such a college can bestow, it can also take away!

Small cars vulnerable

Opting for a compact car has obvious advantages.

First there are tremendous fuel savings. The older Detroit models get about 14 miles a gallon while some of the new compacts can deliver more than 40 miles on the same amount.

Then there's the parking advantage. Little cars can zip right into those spaces that were always a foot too short for standard vehicles.

Now the bad news. The Highway Traffic Safety Administration points out that even though only 38 percent of the cars on the road are compacts, they are involved in 55 percent of the fatal accidents.

Despite the safety problem, more and more motorists are switching to smaller cars. Last year 64 percent of auto sales were compacts or subcompacts. Within five years, compact cars will be in the majority.

In the meantime, it could behoove the small car operator to drive defensively. Keep an eye on the road and that safety belt fastened.

Bangladesh, nonetheless

The slaying of Ziaur (Zia) Rahman president of Bangladesh, during an apparent unsuccessful coup recently, probably bewilders most Americans.

Third World nations are difficult to understand, governments seem to fall overnight and the rules they play by are seldom permanent.

By previous standards in impoverished Bangladesh — a nation immersed in horror since its formation 10 years ago — Zia was virtually a saint. He was elected in 1978 after succeeding a military government that lasted two days, which in turn had overthrown the dictatorship of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman.

Sheikh Rahman's regime, backed by both India and the Soviets, had been marked by the drafting of a constitution in 1972 creating a parliamentary "people's republic," followed by a fast reinterpretation of the constitution to eliminate political opposition and, finally, a resultant dictatorship.

Estimates of the number jailed by Sheikh Rahman for their political convictions vary from 50,000 to 100,000 — half of them women and children.

In 1975 the sheikh was slain, with the reins of government finally falling to Zia, who began to reverse the worst facets of the sheikh's regime. Opposition parties were allowed to regroup albeit on a limited scale, elections were held and the popular Zia was swept into the presidency.

One of Zia's first acts was to ename the so-called "Peoples Republic of Bangladesh" the Islamic Republic of Bangladesh, and while the Soviets seemed to have a firm hold on the sheikh, their influence seemed lessened under the more nationalistic Zia.

Only vague details of Zia's murder have yet reached the outside world. The man behind his death has been identified as Maj. Gen. Manzur Ahmed, an old political foe of Zia. No motives, however, have yet been offered. Whether the Soviets had a hand in the killing will perhaps be forever unknown. For the moment the Bangladesh government in Dacca is in the hands of Vice President Satter. An election is supposed to be held within 180 days, but, as we noted earlier, Third World politics don't necessarily follow constitutional paths.

Whatever the future holds, it doesn't seem to be a matter that should get Moscow and Washington in a dither. Bangladesh is not regarded as critical to anyone's military ambitions. It has a major seaport (Chittagong), and it has recently discovered major natural gas resources, but it is not a nation superpowers will go to war to control.

In fact, the reverse would seem more likely. Chronically poor, Bangladesh teems with humanity (90 million people) in a living space the size of Iowa. Considered the most densely populated region on the earth, the country goes through periodic famines (one million died of hunger in 1974), chronic changes of government, and rampant corruption. All the while, it balances precariously between the political spheres of India (with ties to the Soviets) and Pakistan (with ties to the People's Republic of China.)

American involvement has been largely limited to financial aid. The past 10 years totaling $1.3 billion. At present the Reagan administration is weighing an aid package totaling $95 million trimmed down from former President Carter's proposal of $125 million.

What effect the Zia event will have on the package is unknown at this time. Events the next few weeks will probably be a determining factor.

Sexual harrassment in the news biz

By D.R. SEGAL

I read it in the papers so I know it's so. What it said was that 35 percent of all women in the work force have reported "sexual harassment." I don't know who counted. Sexual harassment, it would seem to me, is a sloppy term which can mean almost anything you want it to. The gamut runs from, "Hey, Elsie, let's you and me go down to the canteen for a cup of java" to "Drop them knickers, kid, or start looking at the Help Wanted ads."

Nobody has ever harassed me sexually, drat, drat, nor have I been privy to the apparent epidemic going on around me. Years ago (and, for all I know, nothing much has changed) there was a reasonable amount of sexual activity over at the old Register plant on Sixth and Sycamore but if the women felt "harassed" they never seemed to complain much. Maybe that was because they were used to it or they kind of enjoyed it. I would like to think it was the latter. There was one inventive fellow on our staff who, after careful research, discovered that the state labor laws required a couch in the ladies' bobby and he became sort of casting - couch editor. Of course laws like that are no longer operative and women have no legal right to lie down any more. I guess that is what is meant by Women's Lib.

Years ago I worked for a Hollywood Studio in the company of a British nymphet who weighed about 15 stone and always felt she was being measured for a romp by a randy old writer who never drew a sober breath between midnight and 11:59 p.m. His name was Clyde and he weighed in at 97 pounds soaking wet. One grunt from the 210 - pound English crumpet and he'd put his cue back in the rack for good. We all felt the crumpet was fantasizing but you know how it is with Hollywood people. Clyde might have had the hots for this overflying tootsie. He was way at the bottom of the bottle by then and we felt he didn't have much string left on his ball of twine, and I, for one, hoped the tryst would come off. I thought it would be a great way to go. But Clyde's liver dissolved before he could consummate his foul scheme, and when I'd left the studio for honest employment the English lady, like Mayer's bologna, had never been touched by the human hand.

In the late 40s the Register had a sweet thing in the bookkeeping department. I left a note on her desk, "Meet me in the press pit tonight and bring a bottle of gin with you." She showed it to her b.f. who was a photographer and he waxed wroth. He had a very big Speed Graphic camera with which to create the skull of a poacher so that was the end of that romance and my only attempt at sexual harassment. Not much to show for a lifetime in the office.

Are American workers working more?

Are American workers working more? Apparently.

After two years of stagnation and decline, per-man-hour productivity in the United States improved an impressive 4.3 percent the first quarter.

Good for us. We can't be sure yet whether the increase derives from sweat or computerization but, either way, good for us!

The semiconductor industry, mushrooming in the 1960s, needed improved ceramic packaging.

Unable to satisfy that need in the United States, American companies went shopping elsewhere; discovered Kyoto Ceramics in Japan. Eagerly, Kyoto established a manufacturing facility in California to supply us. They named it Kyocera.

Each workshop begins with calisthenics and a pep talk to employees, mostly Filipino women. A visitor to the facility notes no chit-chat, no loitering, no coffee-breaks.

When the production line is down, nobody loses his job; machine operators become painters, repairmen, floor-sweepers, whatever.

Fortune Magazine published Kyocera's semi-annual performance report on employees. Ahead of job performance — ahead of job knowhow — the report praises dedication, enthusiasm and cooperation.

Kyocera employs one woman, half-crippled with arthritis, who is admittedly "less than a top performer," but who never stops trying. Company officials say she is worth her pay as "an inspiration to other employees."

Meanwhile back in Detroit...

American car makers are bedeviled by chronic production problems: absenteeism, drugs, goofing-off, mistakes.

Ford is trying to improve the attitudes of workers — with some success. Employees are not eating their lunches in cars anymore.

Plant manager John Lantini is trying to duplicate the Japanese practice of stimulating worker participation in improving production — with some success.

But over at GM, there's reported "quality control" problems with the new X-cars, even with Cadillacs.

While Japanese auto exports last month reached an all-time record high of 558,981 units.

That's up 4.2 percent from the previous month, 11.1 percent up from a year ago.

With the United States in recession — mostly a two-commodity recession — cars and houses — leaner and hungrier American workers are increasing per-man-hour output.

If the recession motivates us and the Japanese come-from-behind example inspires us; it could be we who will be coming from behind next.

It could be. (c) 1981, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Roloff, White exchange barbs

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White and Corpus Christi evangelist Lester Roloff are trading barbs again about a court ruling that allows Roloff to operate his children's homes without a state license.

White said Thursday he has "no ax to grind" with the religious leader, but he plans to appeal the ruling because he "took an oath to uphold the laws of the state of Texas."

"Brother Roloff and I agree on one thing, and that is there should be a strict separation of church and state," White said during a speech to the 86th Annual County and District Clerk's Association of Texas.

In a news conference Wednesday, Roloff accused White of having a "personal ax to grind" in his efforts to close the homes after White had announced plans Tuesday to continue the appeal.

White disagreed, saying, "I have researched the law he refuses to accept licenses under and I cannot find anywhere in that law where it interferes with the right of that individual to practice religion and to have a free expression of religion."

White said if the legislature would like to change the law concerning the licensing of children's homes, "that would be fine with me."

State District Judge Charles Mathews ruled in April that state licensing of the Roloff homes would violate constitutional guarantees of separation of church and state.

Roloff says an appeal would be a waste of time and money.

"I've already spent about half a million dollars fighting the licensing issue, and the state probably has spent more than $1 million," Roloff said during the news conference.

Grimm delays recovery of items aboard sunken liner

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Oilman Jack Grimm has been forced to delay plans to recover millions of dollars in jewels or other major artifacts from the sunken wreckage of the Titanic, the Abilene Reporter-News reported today.

In a copyright story, the newspaper said plans to enter the vessel and recover items from the ship have been postponed because of the unavailability of either of the two submersibles he had planned to use to enter the ship during the 19-day expedition departing July 3 from Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Grimm announced plans last fall to use the Seacopter — a cross between a helicopter and submarine that resembles a mosquito, developed by Coral Gables, Fla., inventor Fred Koehler Jr. — in his search for the ship's treasures.

Koehler, however, issued a challenge in February and said he would try to beat Grimm to the Titanic by using his Seacopter, capable of diving to depths of 20,000 feet and narrow enough to navigate the ship's halls.

"It's not part of our expedition," Grimm said recently. "Mr. Koehler decided he was going to put his own group together."

Since the Titanic is lying in international waters, there is nothing to stop Koehler from salvaging the wreckage if he arrives there first, Grimm said. "Anyone else has that same right... providing they can find it," he said.

Grimm had also planned to use the Aluminaut, the largest deep diving submersible, to reach the Titanic where it rests 12,000 feet below the surface of the North Atlantic Ocean, but its owners will not allow its use before the sunken ship is actually located.

"Mr. (J. Louis) Reynolds, chairman of Reynolds Aluminum, didn't want to reactivate it until we had found the wreck," Grimm told the newspaper.

Fourteen possible resting sites were found during last summer's search of a 15-mile by 20-mile area where the Titanic struck an iceberg off the coast of New Foundland and sank April 15, 1912, while on her maiden voyage from England to New York, Grimm said.

"We're going straight to the search area, to each of the different targets and pull the sonar and magnetometer sleds over each target at close range," Grimm said. "The first one that shows to be the hull of a ship, we'll map it in detail."

The sonar sled was used in last year's search to pick up shapes on the ocean floor via acoustic signals, and the magnetometer will detect the presence of metal, such as that found in the hull of a ship, he said.

Grimm and his 38 crew members will do their searching this summer from aboard Texas A&M University's research vessel the Gyre. Last year the crew, minus Grimm, searched from the 175-foot ship the H.J.W. Fay.

The change was made, Grimm said, because "The Gyre is a research vessel, it was built to do this kind of work. The Fay was just a charter ship that we got at the last minute because it was the only ship available last year."

Halifax will be the site of the expedition launch this year because "we're that (much) closer to the site by leaving from Halifax and that's what's important, to get as much time at sea," Grimm said.

Last summer's trip departed from Port Everglades, Fla., and docked at Commonwealth Pier in Boston.

POSTING REWARDS. Joyce Strand, right, and daughter Danette were among a dozen friends and relatives of Decorah, Iowa, pilot Paul Strand who posted signs in western Arkansas Thursday offering a reward for help in finding Strand and a companion. Strand, Mrs. Strand's husband, was last heard from in a radio communication June 6 from a single-engine plane over Paris, Ark.

(AP Laserphoto)

Family advertises reward

MENA, Ark. (AP) — When the Civil Air Patrol gave up looking for Paul Strand and a companion believed downed in dense woods along the Arkansas-Oklahoma border, Strand's family took over the search.

Joyce Strand, her five children and other relatives and friends have spent the last two days traveling along the border, tacking up posters. The signs offer a $10,000 reward to anyone who can find the missing pair before June 30.

"We can't give up. Not while there's a chance that they are still alive," Mrs. Strand said.

Strand, a lawyer, and Raymond Hougen, a hotel manager, both 50, were on their way home to Decorah, Iowa, from Paris, Texas, on June 6 when radio communications from the single-engine plane stopped. Mrs. Strand believes the plane crashed during a thunderstorm in the mountains of western Arkansas, between Paris and Fort Smith, about 50 miles to the west.

"It was Paul's custom to use the radio a lot," Mrs. Strand said. "Once he left Paris, nobody heard from him again."

Volunteers with the Civil Air Patrol searched a 79,000-square-mile area for 10 days, then concluded that the plane probably crashed somewhere in the dense woods of eastern Oklahoma or western Arkansas. The CAP abandoned the search because all leads were exhausted.

A dozen of the pilot's relatives and friends began driving through the woods Thursday. "We're just trying to stir up the people, and motivate them into some kind of action," said Lloyd Strand, the pilot's father. "We've been well received. Everyone wants to cooperate, and do everything they can to help. But, then what can they do."

The CAP has said it will renew its search if any new leads can be found.

"We all talked it over and thought this was the only thing left for us to do. We don't know what the chances are of them still being alive, but we still have our hopes up," Strand said.

The family brought 2,500 posters bearing the reward offer, as well as a description of the plane and its occupants. They started the task of posting the signs Thursday in western Arkansas. They were to resume the job in eastern Oklahoma today.

"I don't know how long we'll stay down here, there's not a set time limit. We'll just do enough to satisfy us personally, which will be when there's nothing left to do," Strand said.

"We're not planning to search ourselves," Mrs. Strand said. "We just hope we can get people who know what their doing to go out and search."

Polk County Sheriff A.L. Hadaway told the family the ruins of about 20 planes are in the mountains near Mena.

Catastrophe becomes triumph

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Arnold Bernhard, who a half-century ago founded what has become the nation's largest investment advisory service, was in a reflective mood the other day when he spoke about his catastrophes.

In the unadorned, stick-to-the-facts style that characterizes his stock analyses, Bernhard told a business audience that the catastrophes "somehow turned out to be the luckiest events of my business life."

Preposterous pap, you say?

Such statements often are the product of a person's need to dramatize history with moral lessons. But Bernhard has spent his adult life seeking to distill his thinking to the bare facts.

He meant what he said. "And I don't think it would be any different for you if you have faith in your ideas and the will to persevere in their propagation," said the 79-year-old founder of Value Line, which has 100,000 subscribers at $330 a year and manages $1 billion in funds.

It began during the Great Depression, when Bernhard was working as an analyst for Moody's Investors Service. His widowed mother lost her estate (all stocks). He lost his job. "You can have no idea of what it meant to be out of a job in 1931," he said. "My situation was dire."

Earlier, he observed that bonds and not stocks. In the thinking of the time — and it continues now — the value of stocks was the price assigned to them by an "efficient" market.

To Bernhard, that thinking didn't mean much, since it was no guide at all to anticipating when the price of a stock might rise or fall. He simply didn't believe there could be no independent standard of value.

"In my arrogance or naivete, (I) determined to find and disclose a standard of normal value which would so enlighten the investing public that the extremes of 1929 and 1932 could never again be repeated."

Southern battlers focus on regional interests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Southern congressmen, having already shown their ability to control decisions in the House on national economic policy, are now setting their sights on protecting regional economic interests.

"The battle has been forced upon us and I think we will respond," Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, told members and supporters of the fledgling Sunbelt Council on Thursday.

The bipartisan group of more than 100 Southern and Southwestern congressmen, formed just two months ago, renewed their pledge to fight other regions of the country for a fair share of federal dollars.

"We came into being as a defensive mechanism," Wilson said. "Most of us here resisted the formation of this council because we didn't want this type of regional warfare. It was forced upon us by our colleagues in the Northeast."

Earlier this year, 63 Southern Democrats bucked party leaders in the budget debate and proved to be the deciding factor in House approval of 1982 spending targets endorsed by President Reagan.

The new 16-state council, with former Rep. John Buchanan, R-Ala., as executive director, will be concentrating on defeat of efforts to divert from the Sunbelt states federal clean water funds, increased defense spending, benefits of the proposed tax cut, urban mass transit money and low-income assistance.

"In the often strange world of formula politics, an enormous amount of money can be shifted by a change in the floor or ceiling (on program spending) as well as by substituting one (statistical) measure for another," a council statement said.

"Those fortunate enough to fit the statistical loopholes but which do not have problems will reap windfalls, mainly provided by losses from the low-income South," it said.

The council's initial foe in the economic battle, Wilson said, is the Northeast-Midwest Coalition, formed seven years ago by Republican and Democratic congressmen from states in those regions. He said that group has been "extremely

Two men die in molasses pit

FRIONA, Texas (AP) — Two men employed at a Texas Panhandle feedlot were killed by breathing toxic methane fumes after they accidentally toppled into a large pit of molasses, officials said.

Conrado Cruz, 55, and Charles M. Rector, 57, died after falling into the syrup-filled pit at the Friona Feed Yard, east of this tiny West Texas community.

Two unidentified feed lot employees who tried to help the two men were treated and released at Friona Hospital, police said.

Friona Police Chief Bill Denny said Cruz was repairing the molasses pit when he accidentally fell in. Rector, assistant manager at the feed yard, went into the pit to help Cruz but both men were quickly overcome by the fumes.

Coastal hurricane evacuation contingencies study unveiled

LEAGUE CITY, Texas (AP) — A two-year study of hurricane evacuation contingencies does not give local officials much reason to be optimistic if a severe hurricane hits the Texas coast, but local officials hailed the study as "a great planning tool."

The study, funded by Texas A&M University and a federal agency, was handed to officials from Brazoria, Galveston, Harris, Fort Bend and Chambers Counties Thursday.

"The everyday citizen won't get much out of this report, but it can give officials a handle on when to recommend evacuation, or whether to recommend it at all," said Texas A&M researcher Dr. Carlton Ruch.

It could take up to 26 hours to evacuate Galveston Island, the report estimates, but Ruch said the National Hurricane Center normally only can give between 16 and 24 hours warning before a hurricane reaches land.

Phil Lohec, Galveston civil defense director, called the report "a refinement of what people have been guessing and assuming about hurricanes for years."

Townfolk stunned as police force abolished

By MICHAEL B. LAFFERTY
Associated Press Writer

COCHOCTON, Ohio (AP) — Coshocton, a county seat and farm market center, is a little town with big problems on its 19-officer police force: a $1 million damage suit, charges of scandal and beatings, and seven officers fired or resigned.

Even so, townfolk were stunned last week when the City Council took up the matter of its troubled police department and voted not to clean it out but to kick it out, effective Aug. 1.

The reason given for wiping out the department was its ballooning cost and the anticipated expense of training seven new officers.

But some residents suspect other motives, saying that they have been reading about their troubled police department in newspaper headlines for months and noting that officers have recently joined a union that is trying to get the dismissed officers reinstated.

"We had a problem in our city that's been on the front pages of the papers in Cleveland and Columbus. It had to be solved," said John O'Shea, executive vice president for Bank One of Coshocton. "The political process moved faster than it usually does."

Reaction has varied, but much of it is resentful. "They should have asked the citizens," said Nick Landis, who works in a hardware store down the street from City Hall. "Personally, I'd like to see the police department stay."

A petition drive is underway to recall

Mayor Kenneth Grier, and on Thursday the union representing the police — the Ohio Civil Service Employees Association — asked Common Pleas Judge Richard Evans for an injunction to keep the town from disbanding the department. Evans set a hearing on the injunction request for July 17.

The council's vote on June 8 to do away with its police force shifted law enforcement responsibility for the town of 13,400 to the Coshocton County sheriff's department, a plan approved in advance by the sheriff.

Word of the plan leaked out about 30 minutes before the council convened its public meeting — following a secret executive session. A police officer who tried to speak in opposition was ruled out of order by Council President Daniel Moody Sr.

"The purpose of council is to conduct business, not to conduct a forum," Moody said later.

It's this secretive manner that seems to have most disturbed people in Coshocton. Indeed, the mayor says people may be more concerned with the way the action was handled than with losing their policemen. "I don't consider it a radical move to abolish the police department," Grier said from his City Hall office.

But some of Grier's constituents seem to harbor similar attitudes about getting rid of their mayor, even though Ohio law has no provision for the recall of a mayor in a statutory city such as Coshocton.

The recall drive has netted only 60 signatures at its post in front of the county courthouse down Main Street from City Hall.

but organizer Mamie Guinther said she was confident the drive would succeed. "We haven't given up," she said.

Linn McKay, one of the fired officers, was at the petition stand when he was interviewed about the council decision. He charged that the city abolished the police department because it didn't want to deal with the new police union.

Grier denies that charge. He and the council have tried to put a simple, financial face on the issue, saying that the time was ripe to disband the force because of seven current vacancies and the upcoming retirement of the police chief. Grier said training the additional officers would have cost too much.

Still, despite at least two months of study, no one seems to know just how much the citizens will save — or lose — by trading in their police officers for sheriff's deputies.

The police department budget last year was $469,000, double what it was 10 years ago for the same size force. Officials blamed the cost increases on inflation and additional equipment.

Third suspect formally charged

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Three suspects in the attempted hijacking of a tractor-trailer are in El Paso County jail awaiting a preliminary hearing set for June 26. An FBI spokesman says.

Chris Barrera, 30, of Gallup, N.M., was formally charged Thursday with kidnapping and theft of an interstate shipment in the hijacking attempt.

Two other suspects, Roy B. Scrivner, 49, of Window Rock, Ariz., and Loren S. Stalcup, 25, of Gallup, appeared before a federal magistrate on the same charges Wednesday.

U.S. Magistrate Janet Ruesch set Barrera's bond Thursday at $100,000, the same amount that she had set for the other suspects Wednesday.

Barrera appeared before the magistrate a day later than the other two suspects because he was arrested at a

Las Cruces, N.M., motel late Tuesday and had to be brought to El Paso from the other state. Scrivner and Stalcup turned themselves in to the Anthony, Texas, police department Tuesday

Highland Baptist will present musicale

A musicale will be presented by the Children's Choir of the Highland Baptist Church, Sunday, June 21, at 7 p.m.

The choir, under the direction of Mary Fullerton Davey will present Dottie Rambo's "Down by the Creek Bank."

The words of the musicale were written by Gospel Recording Artist Dottie Rambo, and the music was written by Rambo and David Huntsinger.

Pastor Davey identified them as Betsy Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Allen of Dallas. Allen is a junior accounting major from East Texas State University in Commerce and Kathy Grim, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Grim of Irving, a freshman Biology student at the University of Texas.

The two students will be working with the children's program in the mornings, and will lead the youth programs in the evenings.

He was selected in a recent election which also saw two trustees reelected.

Losher is a Ph.D. student at the seminary in Ethics and Society. He graduated from Pampa High School with honors, from the University of Tulsa with honors and went on the earned Master of Divinity from Princeton Theological Seminary.

Losher has served as chairman of the Division of Presbyterian Ministries of Grace Union Presytery and as pastor of Presbyterian churches in Texas. While in Texas he served on the board of Texas IMPACT, an interfaith legislative network.

Garrett-Evangelical Theology Seminary is a United Methodist graduate professional school of theology that prepares men and women for the ministries of the church and leadership roles in the church and theological education.

Roloff says state appeal would waste taxpayers, Lord's funds

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Evangelist Lester Roloff says Attorney General Mark White would be wasting the "taxpayers' and the Lord's money" if he appealed a court decision exempting Roloff's homes for troubled youths from state licensing.

"I just wish he wouldn't do it," Roloff told a news conference Wednesday.

White said Tuesday that he was committed to appealing the ruling by State District Judge Charles Mathews of Austin. Mathews ruled in April that such licensing violates constitutional guarantees of separation of church and state.

Gov. Bill Clements has said White should not appeal the ruling and has congratulated Roloff on the court victory.

"We won the battle fairly — not on the basis of friendship, but on the law," Roloff said. "Mark White even admitted we do good work at our homes. There must be another motive for his actions."

Except to say that White "has a personal ax to grind," Roloff declined to speculate on White's reasons for appealing.

"It's a serious mistake he's making. I have no intention of king a state license or of stopping the fight. I'm geared to go the way to the U.S. Supreme Court on the issue of licensing," he said.

A HAT WOULD BE SO MUCH COOLER!

She must go to the native market for her physical needs. The straw hat would be so much better than the old scarf tied and knotted about her head. Sweet, cool air could come through that straw and that would feel so wonderful in this heat!

Where does she go for her spiritual needs? Is there a church on the island? Does she know that she will be told about a great God there who will help her, guide her, and refresh her?

How fortunate we are in this country that there is a church in every community. Spiritual help, refreshment of soul, fellowship and love awaits all who enter her doors. We invite you to attend Church this week.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Bed, bath items get new look

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

America's bathrooms and bedrooms are going to be better coordinated if the manufacturers and retailers at the National Bath, Bed & Linen Show in New York have anything to do with it.

The industry's new product introductions here recently featured many coordinated groups of bed and bath linens and related accessories. Industry executives said that these offerings reflected a growing sophistication among American consumers of home furnishings.

Judging from the variety of offerings, the winds of change which have affected all areas of home furnishings are blowing up a storm in the domestic field — once among the stodgiest product classifications in home goods.

After all, it was not very long ago that redecorating the bathroom meant buying a new solid-color shower curtain, something consumers did very infrequently, according to Harold Kaplan, president of the Bath, Bed & Linen Association.

"We had customers who wrote to us to complain that their shower curtain had faded after 2 years of wear," wryly noted Kaplan, who is also resident of Jakson & Jakson International.

"Today we know people are buying shower curtains and other bath products more often. As a result of the more attractive goods available, consumers are inspired to change their rooms," added the executive.

To keep up their sales, manufacturers and retailers have come up with a steady stream of new coordinated products, many of which also have the added appeal of a designer's name or which tie in with some already-accepted product or individual, such as Sesame Street or Walt Disney.

Multiproduct groups typically include a mix of items for the bedroom, the bath and dressing room, such as shower curtains, bathmats and towels, sheets and comforters and pillows.

According to one retailer, the new emphasis on full lines of products bearing the same or similar designs is in direct response to consumer wishes.

"Consumers want to enjoy the way they live; they don't want to make a career out of buying, either," said Jack Cjokston, an executive with the Associated Merchandising Corp. department store chain.

His point was backed up by others in the field. They noted that the public has gotten used to the wealth of choice and to pre-coordinated domestics that take the guesswork and worry out of making decorating choices.

By coordinated products, industry designers do not mean merely a slavish copying of a single pattern on all sorts of products. Instead, it's a subtle match in which families of colors and prints can be used in a variety of ways.

"Each item has got to stand on its own, as well as part of a collection," explained Harold Kaplan.

Communications may be responsible for the noticeable rapidity with which new style trends are appearing in the domestics field.

At Saturday Knight Ltd., a shower curtain and towel manufacturer, for example, a shower curtain made out of camouflage cloth was on display. A khaki "garrison belt" attached to the shower curtain had pockets for towels. Consumers who follow fashion will realize that camouflage cloth, as worn by soldiers, has recently made an appearance on ready-to-wear sales floors as a sportswear fad.

A company executive explained that fashion and other outside influences are making themselves felt in the domestics world.

This point was borne out by the variety of events, individuals and brand names outside home furnishings which inspired collections of sheets, towels and bedroom furnishings. The list includes such disparate influences as fashion-designer names, Walt Disney characters, Sesame Street characters, Hallmark greeting cards, Princess Grace of Monaco and Barbara Cartland (the romantic novelist).

"Fantasy is the thing," explained Ray Faragar, owner of Saturday Knight Ltd. "I range into the bathroom and create Lawrence of Arabia or an opera singer. The possibilities are unlimited."

Six Flags now open daily

ARLINGTON — Six Flags Over Texas has begun daily operation following a spring season which saw average daily attendance up more than 16 percent over last year.

The theme park's general manager, Ray Williams, said more than a half million visitors were counted through Memorial Day.

"In 1980 we had an average of 11,260 guests per day," he noted, "and this year the daily average is up to 13,433. This indicates to us that prospects for the summer season are extremely strong."

He added, "When you consider the unusual amount of weekend rain we have had this year, the numbers are even more impressive. We'd say the state's tourism outlook is excellent. Our attendance is traditionally one of the best barometers."

For the summer months, Six Flags Over Texas is adding a nightly fireworks show to its entertainment lineup. The fireworks spectacular will be presented at 9:30 each evening through Labor Day.

Dear Abby

Heart, head make person 'whole'

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This letter is in response to BROKEN-HEARTED PARENTS, who were concerned because their daughter chose to marry an amputee.

Nearly 40 years ago, a young female volunteer in an Army hospital fell in love with a young soldier who had lost both legs to an enemy mortar shell. The young couple married over her parents' objections. He became an industrial psychologist (with two degrees), has held responsible administrative positions, and became the loving, active father of three. He has no legs, but that doesn't make him an invalid. I should know. He's my father.

My parents have been a loving, devoted couple for 35 years. Last month, Mother graduated from the Boston School of Nursing with her B.S.N. She, too, is a strong and wonderful person.

Words cannot adequately express how deeply I love and respect my parents for who they are, and for how they have handled the pain and crises in their life together.

JOANNE SHAW, ELMIRA, N.Y.

DEAR JOANNE: Thank you for a beautiful letter, and thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Barres of Boston for a beautiful daughter. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is in reply to BROKENHEARTED PARENTS, whose daughter was marrying a man who had no legs.

Two years ago my twin sister, after being married to a "whole man" who beat and abused her, married a man with only one arm and no legs. He was confined to a wheelchair.

Naturally we were concerned about how much care this man would need, but it was obvious that she loved him so much she didn't consider it a chore, so we supported the marriage wholeheartedly.

She had three children by her previous marriage whom her new husband accepted without question. A year later they had a baby girl of their own.

Six months later, my sister died unexpectedly. The night of her death, that dear man embraced those children and told them that he would like them to stay together as a family, but if they chose to go back to their real father, he would understand. They chose to stay with him.

How much of a man does it take to accept the challenge of raising three children, none of whom were his, along with a 6-month-old baby?

Since then, he has adopted the three children. Abby, this man gave my sister more happiness in the year and a half they were married than she had known in the previous 35 years of her life.

HER TWIN IN UTAH

DEAR ABBY: I have been very happily married for several years to a wonderful divorced woman with two fine children. I am 25 and she is 40. She is a first-class woman, but my marriage has created a major problem in my life.

My parents, who live in another state, have refused to acknowledge my marriage. They are respected civic and church leaders in their community, but they rejected my wife without even meeting her. My father called me a heathen, and my mother asked me never to mention my wife or stepchildren to any family members in my letters home. So far I have honored my mother's request because I love my parents.

My parents still consider me single. It is becoming increasingly difficult for me to not mention my wife and stepchildren in my letters home. Should I continue this policy, or is there an alternative?

HURTING IN TEXAS

DEAR HURTING: The alternative is to assume a more manly posture and tell your parents that if they refuse to acknowledge your wife and stepchildren, they can forget you. The choice is yours.

Barbecue beef for Dad's Day

June 21 has double significance this year. It's not only Father's Day, but also the first day of summer. And summertime means barbecue fun.

Having a sizzling beef barbecue for Dad is a great way for the family to spend the first day of summer and celebrate Father's Day. To help Dad have a more successful cookout, here are some tips on meat preparation from the Beef Industry Council of the Meat Board:

- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
 - 2 teaspoons salt
 - 1 clove garlic, crushed
 - 1 bay leaf
 - 1/2 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
- Combine onion, catsup, vinegar, brown sugar, salt, garlic, bay leaf and hot sauce in saucepan and cook slowly 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Cool. Pour sauce over steaks in utility dish or plastic bag, turning to coat all sides. Cover dish or tie bag securely and marinate in refrigerator 6 hours or overnight. Pour off and reserve marinade. Place steaks on rack in broiler pan or on grill so surface of steak is 3 to 4 inches from heat.

Broil at moderate temperature 10 minutes. Turn, brushing both sides with marinade and cook to desired doneness, 8 to 15 minutes.

Scotty's Pampa Mall 669-7971

Open 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

DEAR OLD DAD! — Give Him a Cheese Basket!

—Remember that most meats take longer to cook over coals than to cook indoors. Outdoors, a large boneless roast may take from three and one-half to five hours to cook, depending on its size, the heat maintained and the internal temperature desired.

—Cook at low to moderate temperatures to assure tenderness and juiciness. Use a meat thermometer to check doneness of roasts.

Here is a recipe sure to please everyone in the family:

BARBECUED CHUCK STEAKS

- 2 beef blade steaks, cut 1/2 to 3/4 inch thick
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1/2 cup catsup
- 1-3 cup vinegar

Working cheap works for Louis Malle

NEW YORK (NEA) - Here's news for you: even though the movie "Atlantic City" has been greeted with rave reviews and long lines at the box office, its director, Louis Malle, has no intention of following it up with a $30 million blockbuster epic.

"I'm not interested in upgrading my standing in the industry by spending a few more million dollars," says the dapper 49-year-old French transplant. "Besides, I work cheap."

After the complete bust of Michael Cimino's $40-million "Heaven's Gate" — both the original long-playing and re-issued short version — that's the kind of talk that makes movie moguls sit up and pronounce Malle a hot director. He made "Atlantic City," his second English film, for only $5 million. And it's a good movie — funny, sad, touching.

"Atlantic City" is the story of two people chasing the American dream. One is Lou (Burt Lancaster), an aging small-time numbers runner and bodyguard. The other is Sally (Susan Sarandon), a wide-eyed kid who has come to the new Atlantic City to learn to be a blackjack dealer.

"There's nothing symbolic or profound about it," insists Malle. "We wanted to make a comedy about things happening now in Atlantic City. Once it was a flamboyant and glamorous place. Then it became a complete slum. And then they decided to save it by legalizing gambling. It's a fascinating place, an insane place, a caricature. Buildings are going up. Buildings are coming down. Newcomers are pushing out oldtimers. Meanwhile, there is a grim side to it, lots of not very nice aspects to this boom."

Crucial to the success of "Atlantic City" is Burt Lancaster, who turns in one of the best performances of his career. He's sure to be remembered come Oscar time. "Burt reacted immediately when he read the script," says Malle. "At first he felt that he might not be right for the part, that he was too strong with that macho presence and big grin of his. The first week of shooting I, too, wondered whether he would be acceptable as this bodyguard, this failure. As it turns out, it worked."

Malle firmly believes the film owes part of its success to its low budget. "I shot it very fast," he explains. "I like to work fast. You hold on to your intensity and vitality. I hate to wait. You have to wait too much in this business now. Wait for actors to be free, wait for financing. When I first got started in movies you spent six to eight months making one. Now it's more like two years. It's absurd. And detrimental to the project. You lose your interest."

Malle's first American film was in fact made on a large budget. It was called "Pretty Baby." It was a flop.

Malle moved to America five years ago and lives in New York with his wife, actress Candice Bergen. "America is the best place to be if you enjoy watching the evolution of Western civilization," he says. "You're at the center of that in America. I had to adjust to living here. I think in France people are more reasonable about what they expect from life. But I feel I've become a good observer of the American scene."

BURT LANCASTER hangs out with Louis Malle during the shooting of "Atlantic City." "Burt reacted immediately when he read the script," says Malle. "At first he felt that he might not be right for the part, that he was too strong with that macho presence and big grin of his."

The end of a dream sparks a new career

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) For Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner, this isn't exactly what they had in mind, but it is probably the next best thing.

As they grew up, the two beautiful ice dancers dreamed the big dream, the glory dream, the Olympic dream. We all know how that collapsed on the ice at Lake Placid, N.Y., in February 1980, when the injury to Randy's leg forced them to withdraw from the pairs skating competition.

End of dream. Just like that. But they are back now, skating again, thrilling the public again, floating effortlessly across the ice in a graceful swirl. They are part of the Ice Capades company and, while it isn't the Olympics, it is ice skating, it is in front of the public — and it is big money.

They have finished their first season with Ice Capades. That began last September in Duluth, Minn., and ended this May in Anaheim, Calif., close to their home. Tai and Randy now have the summer off before the season begins again next fall.

After their three-year contract is up, they say, they may or may not sign for more. As for their future, they aren't certain.

"I'll probably skate as long as my legs hold out," says Tai. "There are people in our show who have been there nine years."

To a 20-year-old, nine years seems like an eternity. But it goes by as fast as an ice dancer's whirl.

After their skating days are over, whenever that may be, they both think they might like to become commentators. They think they could talk about figure skating on one of the many network sports shows.

Randy might go back to school. He admits that, because of his dedication to skating when he was growing up, "something had to give and that something was my academic work."

A few weeks before tragedy struck, love was in the air as Nola Aldrich (Kim Zimmer) and her former husband, Jason Aldrich (Glen Corbett), remarried on NBC's continuing daytime drama, "The Doctors".

I am happy to report that over the past few months NBC's "The Doctors" has experienced a boost in the ratings. New leadership and tighter storylines surely account for their latest success. Other factors however include the addition of new characters and the rejuvenation of more established characters. Unfortunately, whenever a major make-over takes place someone is bound to get hurt. In the case of the cast of "The Doctors," the character of Jason was killed off recently causing some dire speculation on the part of some arm chair quarterbacks who predict doom for the NBC serial and think the current storylines are suicidal. While Glenn Corbett's portrayal of Jason was magnetic and chock full of macho sex appeal, it is clear that there was a method to the writer's murder madness.

The unpredictable but always colorful Nola as played by Kim Zimmer, on the serial, should never remarry Jason. Some say she should have never had baby Jessica. As one of the show's more dynamic characters, it is obvious that she would have become simply boring as a happy wife and mother. There are so many plot possibilities for Nola, the single swinger, that Jason's death was inevitable. In this case the writers should be commended for taking such a dangerous chance. It is my hunch that the gamble will pay off in even higher numbers through the long hot summer.

My prediction however is based on more than just Nola's storyline alone. In the past, the uniting of Greta and Billy registered big numbers as far as audience share and Gracie Harrison's Greta will certainly work magic this summer with Alec Baldwin's Billy. Furthermore, insiders at NBC assure me that the characters of Steve and Carolee will undergo some dramatic and exciting changes this summer as well. It will be rewarding to see the finely tuned talents of David O'Brien and Jada Rowland given a greater share of the spotlight this year. Surely two of the most recognizable members of "The Doctors" cast, this pair has a special drawing power among soap viewers that few daytime couples can match.

All in all there seems to be a bright future ahead for the Aldrich and Powers clans. If viewers will roll with some of the punches administered during the next few weeks, they can expect to be absolutely knocked out by quality drama and plot twists unequaled anywhere on the daytime tube.

Now a look at what's been happening and what will happen on all the afternoon dramas.

THE GUIDING LIGHT -- Ben tries to talk some sense into Amanda. Nola continues to make things difficult for Trudy. Tim goes on a drunken binge when he fears that Morgan and Kelly are getting closer.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW -- Kathy and Garth argue about Viki but Garth will not listen to Kathy. Martin worries that Mignon will pose a dangerous threat to the safety of the family.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS -- Cash convinces Casey to confide in him more. Nikki is a bit concerned about Cash's preoccupation with Casey. Leslie pleads with Laurie to make things easy for Brooks.

AS THE WORLD TURNS -- James worries about his failing business and tries to put pressure on Brad. Dee feels guilty about John despite Tom's efforts to make her see how foolish she is being.

EDGE OF NIGHT -- Excited about his marriage to Raven, Sky buys the Old Whitney homestead. Raven is very worried about the ends Sky will go to to protect his privacy. Jody and Gavin have a huge argument that ends with a surprising show of affection but it's back to business the next morning.

THIS WEEK: Sky is confronted by an old enemy. Raven worries about her future.

TEXAS -- Alex's brother Grant comes to town. Eliot wants to tell Dennis who his real father is. Joe holds Nita at gun point to search for money and Nita goes into labor. Elena shows up and Joe confronts her. Dennis is released on bail because of a reduced sentence. Courtney plans to leave town.

THIS WEEK: Dennis wonders why Paige knows

Parnell. Elena is in for more problems.

THE DOCTORS -- Nola's bail is raised from $50,000 to $500,000. Katherine tells Kevin in a letter, to meet her at the warehouse. Steve bails Nola out of jail and Kevin meets Katherine in the warehouse. Katherine and Kevin meet in Jason's office and call Mona but she is not home.

THIS WEEK: Kevin terrorizes Nola. Steve and Carolee are about to step into a new and exciting drama.

GENERAL HOSPITAL -- Alan tells Susan he is going to tell Monica the truth. Alex is now Casadine's partner and lover once again, they want to find Laura. Edward thinks they should set into motion a frame-up to flush Luke out of hiding to rescue Laura. Ramsey now agrees with Joe that Heather murdered Diana since there was a witness that saw another nurse near her apartment the night she was murdered. Toby attempts to kill Hutch but cannot do it at the last minute.

THIS WEEK: Joe closes in on Heather. Monica plans to put a tail on Alan.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE -- Everyone is getting ready for the wedding of Sam and Asa. Nicole disappears from the hospital, after making the bed up to look like she is asleep. Rae discovers she is gone. Chuck orders plain clothes guards at the church in case Nicole shows up there. Nicole manages to get a gun and hide in the bushes waiting. Ted continues to drug Vikki.

THIS WEEK: Marcello becomes more sympathetic towards Dorian. Vikki becomes more detached while under the influence of drugs.

RYAN'S HOPE -- Rae is finally charged with first degree murder. Roger speaks with Rae and guesses that Kim actually shot Michael. Kim falls and hits her head on the fireplace. Jack is still determined to find out the secret of who framed him. Joe and Siobhan argue again over her insistence in trying to help Jack. Joe gets Barry into another poker game, but this time Barry loses $40,000.

THIS WEEK: Barry is caught in Joe's trap. Rae continues to protect Kim.

ANOTHER WORLD -- Jamie tries to accept the relationship between Rachel and Nick. Mitch tells Rachel he thinks Jamie's problems stem from Cecile. Rick, with the help of Mitch, is blowing up the photos of the murder scene in hopes of finding clues. Clarice has feelings about Jerry.

THIS WEEK: Larry is concerned about Clarice's feelings. Mac and Alice continue to date.

ALL MY CHILDREN -- Tom is let out of jail. Brooke reveals to Peg and Phoebe that the police believe that Manning was only wounded by Tom. They notice a large amount of barbiturates in his body and they now think he was killed by a mystery woman in the hospital, dressed as a nurse. Erica tells Brandon she will not continue her relationship with him if he goes to Europe with his family.

THIS WEEK: Nina is bitter and disappointed. Devon runs into some roadblocks.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES -- Marlena can't seem to get

Don out of her mind. Liz over reacts to Don's feelings for Marlena. M.ckey worries about Maggie as her pregnancy progresses. Marie fights her feelings for Alex, as Jessica stands in the way of their happiness.

THIS WEEK: Tod comes out the loser again. Liz has a confrontation with Marlena.

Kid shows are on TV too late at night

DEAR DICK: When "Little Lord Fauntleroy" was on CBS, it was wonderful, but on much too late for children to view. Why is it that so many programs are on so late? Why can't they show them from 7 to 8 p.m.? K. THOMPSON, Vancouver, Wash.

Blame that on the F.C.C. They took the 7:30 to 8 p.m. time period away from the networks some years ago, so the only thing that is aired at that hour is programmed by your local stations. None of the big network shows can start before 8 p.m., except on Sunday.

DEAR DICK: I haven't seen Van Johnson in movies or on TV for many years. I hope he is still among us. Or did he pass away? If he is alive, what is he doing? MRS. ROD PARKER, Las Vegas, Nev.

Van Johnson is alive and, like so many movie people, abandoned by Hollywood. Mostly he performs in dinner theaters these days, and is a big drawing card on that circuit.

Spinks arrested again

DETROIT (AP) — The tony-turvy career of former heavyweight boxing champion Leon Spinks, which suffered when Larry Holmes knocked him out a week ago, has been dealt another blow — this time by Detroit police.

Spinks, 27, who had been arrested at least four times in the past three years, was arrested early Thursday for carrying a concealed weapon.

Police said Spinks was behind the wheel of his 1980 Cadillac when officers spotted him in northwest Detroit, a few miles from his home, driving with an expired license plate.

As the former World Boxing Association champion reached into the glove box for the car's registration, police spotted a .357-caliber Magnum handgun, officers said.

"He said he wasn't even aware the gun was in the car," said Sgt. Arthur Williams of the Detroit Police Department's 12th Precinct, where Spinks was arrested.

"He is still shocked by it (the arrest). He said that at this particular time he's trying to get his life back together."

The gun was not registered to Spinks, said Inspector David Patterson, the precinct commander. The car Spinks was driving belongs to a corporation bearing his name, Williams added.

Spinks stood mute when arraigned before Detroit Recorder's Court Judge Donald L. Hobson, who entered a plea of innocent. He was freed on a $1,000 personal bond pending a preliminary examination June 24, a court spokeswoman said. If convicted, Spinks could face a maximum five-year prison term and a $2,500 fine.

Spinks also was arrested for an unpaid parking ticket and ticketed for the expired license plate, said Williams.

Before his arraignment, Spinks refused to talk to reporters.

The arrest came less than a week after he challenged Holmes in Detroit for the World Boxing Council heavyweight title and was stopped in the third round. In 1978, Spinks was ticketed or arrested four times — in St. Louis for driving a car without lights in an incident in which police found a small amount of cocaine and marijuana in the vehicle; in South Carolina for driving without license plates and no driver's license; in Elyria, Ohio, for reckless driving; and in Detroit for making an improper lane change in an accident in which he sideswiped another car.

The following year, he reached an out-of-court settlement with owners of a Portage, Mich., house he had lived in after they claimed he damaged it beyond repair. He paid the owners $16,000 in damages.

OPEN TROUBLE. Ben Crenshaw blasts Thursday morning in Ardmore, Pa. out of a sand trap on the first hole in Crenshaw of Texas finished the first round first-round action at the U.S. Open with an even par 70.

Unknown takes Open lead

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — Jim Thorpe, a golfer with a legendary name but not a legendary record in his profession, led the U.S. Open Golf Championship when the first round was over. It was fitting.

Like so many Opens of the past, the first-day heroics go to the unknown, the undistinguished or the unheralded.

Thorpe's golfing career fits the description nicely — and more.

He's won just over $7,000 this year, he's a black in a mostly white profession, and he's relatively unknown.

But he played the snug little Merion Golf Club Thursday like you might have thought Raymond Floyd would. (Floyd thrashed around in woods, bunkers full of fern and creeks. He shot a 75.)

"I haven't played well this year, so I am pleased," said Thorpe as he came off the 18th green.

With his 4-under par, 34-32-66, he took a 1-stroke lead over J.C. Snead, and a 2-stroke lead over a cluster of five that included a variety of talent and personalities such as:

—Bob Ackerman, an assistant golf pro in his first Open after failing to qualify five previous times.

—David Graham, an Australian who last tasted victory in Phoenix in January but has not played well recently.

—Jack Renner, a frail-looking short-hitter with only one tournament win to his credit since turning pro in 1976.

—Chi Chi Rodriguez, 45, the dapper little Puerto Rican, always with the straw hat, who hasn't seen the inside of a press tent in five years.

—John Cook, rookie pro and former amateur champion.

Three shots back at 1-under par and no strangers to contention were Johnny Miller, Jack Nicklaus, Hubert Green, George Burns, Lon Hinkle, Rex Caldwell, Bill Kratzert and Tommy Valentine.

At even par 70 were 16 golfers, including Tom Watson, Bruce Lietzke, Jerry Pate, Ben Crenshaw and Lanny Wadkins.

Less successful were Gary Player, with a 72, Arnold Palmer, with a 77, including a triple bogey on No. 18, and John Brodie, the former National Football League player who turned in an 80.

Merion has never been successfully assaulted during the three previous Opens held here. The four-day total has never been under par.

Texas League roundup

By The Associated Press
A dropped infield fly allowed the winning run to score in the bottom of the ninth inning Thursday night as the Jackson Mets beat the Arkansas Travelers, 2-1, and clinched the first half title in the Texas League Eastern Division.
The race for the title in the Western Division remained hot with the El Paso Diablos holding a half-game edge over the San Antonio Dodgers.
In other Texas League action, Shreveport edged Tulsa, 6-5, El Paso beat Midland, 6-3, and Amarillo and San Antonio split a doubleheader. Amarillo took the opener, 4-1, and San Antonio won the nightcap, 7-3.
Ed Cuervo tripled in the bottom of the ninth inning for the Jackson Mets and Rick Poe hit an infield fly to Arkansas third baseman Steve Turco, who dropped it as Cuervo came home with the winning run.
John Semprini, 5-3, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Jeff Keener, 0-1.

teams in the boys' and girls' divisions qualified for state by winning first-place honors in the Region 1 Tournament earlier this month in Amarillo. Pampans who would like to help the cause may call the bowling

Pro wrestling returns to Pampa

Professional wrestling returns to Pampa tonight with a five-card lineup, starting at 8:30 p.m. at the Top Of Texas Rodeo Grounds Bull Barn.

The event is sponsored by Beta Phi, Chapter XI Phi Alpha of Pampa. Proceeds will go toward community projects.

The matches will be under the auspices of prominent Amarillo wrestling promoter Jerry Kozak and sanctioned by the National Wrestling Alliance and the State of Texas Athletic Commission.

Tickets go on sale at 5 p.m. today at the Bull Barn entrance. General admission for adults is $3.50. Children under 12 will be admitted for $2.50. Reserved seats at ringside are $4.50.

Tonight's main event pits North Carolina's Billy Starr against Mexican ace Ricky Romero.

Starr arrived in this area several months ago from Florida and has scored some impressive wins. The 226-pounder is one of the top Junior heavyweights, using profound skill and technique against national headliners around the country to register a solid record.

It will not be the first encounter between these two Junior heavyweight champions.

Both are presently in contention for the upcoming World's Junior heavyweight elimination tournament sanctioned by the NWA. Matches are scheduled in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Japan, and other free countries of the world to determine a new champion.

Les Thornton of England was stripped of the championship in late May for failure to defend the title against legal contenders in several areas.

Starr and Romero are both aware of the importance of this win if they hope to continue among the top bracket of 50 wrestlers for the upcoming tournament.

Their match is scheduled for a one-fall, sixty-minute time limit.

World-recognized Don Fargo of Hell's Kitchen, New York will be coming in against youthful good-looking Terry Daniels in the semi-final.

Both wrestlers are known for the use of strong finish holds.

Texas product Alex Perez of Lila Lake soppes Ric Youngblood in the top preliminary.

Perez was a Golden Gloves boxer in this area before switching to wrestling. Youngblood hails from the Zuni reservation in New Mexico.

Ted Heath of Manchester, England faces a tough confrontation in Tommy Reynosa, one of the up and coming hopefuls in the Junior heavyweight division.

Heath is a former Rugby player. Getting the card underway will be 265-pound Danny Sanchez of Chihuahua, Mexico and 230-pound newcomer Mark Romero, 19-year-old son of Ricky Romero.

Props to host fly-in this weekend in Pampa

Participants from five states are entered in a fly-in Saturday and Sunday in Pampa.

The fly-in is sponsored by PROPS (Pampa Radio Operated Plane Society), and will start at 9 a.m. both days two miles east of the Pampa Country Club off Loop 71. Signs will be posted to point the way.

Contests include water balloon drop, pony express race, climb and glide, and spot landing. Merchandise will be awarded to the top three flyers in each event.

The fly-in is free to the public. A concession stand will be in operation for the spectators.

Strike heads into second week

NEW YORK (AP) — The baseball strike, now a record in terms of games lost, headed into its second week today and the owners and players headed back to the bargaining table after a one-day reassessment period.

And if there is a break, the general counsel of the Major League Baseball Players Association says it will have to come from the owners' side.

"We don't have any brand-new ideas that we haven't broached," says Donald Fehr. "But that doesn't mean that we won't react to something they might have."

At this stage, the only glimmer of hope would seem to come from the Player Relations Committee (PRC), which sets the owners' policy. It has met many times in recent weeks and, in fact, had another closed session Thursday.

Committee members would not say if they had new proposals to present to the players' negotiators when talks were to resume at 3 p.m. EDT, today at a midtown New York hotel.

Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett had given negotiators a day off Thursday in hopes that both sides would be able to come up with new proposals to halt the strike which has cost baseball a record 87 canceled games so far. That's one more game than was canceled in the 13-day strike of 1972.

The players went on strike last Friday in a dispute over compensation for players who sign in the baseball's re-entry draft.

Meanwhile, the National Labor Relations Board — because the negotiations have dragged — has decided to give the two sides additional time to talk and has postponed until June 29 its hearing into the players' charge of unfair labor practices.

The hearing had been scheduled to start June 15, then was postponed to June 22. The owners later requested a six-week continuance — and got a week.

"We are anxious to let the parties try and resolve their dispute in collective bargaining," said Alvin Blyer, counsel for the NLRB's New York office, "but at the same time we don't want to disband our procedure. As time goes by, a postponement is less likely. Each request is looked at more carefully."

In a related development, New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner reaffirmed publicly his support for PRC director Ray Grebey. It appeared to quiet rumors that there was a rift developing between a small group of owners and the PRC.

There had been reports that Steinbrenner was pushing for Grebey's release and that he and two other owners — Edward Bennett Williams of the Baltimore Orioles and Eddie Chiles of the Texas Rangers — were prepared to mount a threat to Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's job if he did not act quickly to end the walkout.

In a message from Steinbrenner received Thursday by the commissioner's office, both league presidents and the PRC, the Yankee owner said:

"Please be assured that the Yankees are supportive of the PRC and the negotiating committee and have publicly stated so numerous times. We think it is imperative that our representatives engage in a meaningful negotiating as part of the bargaining process regardless of any factors. We have been advised by the negotiating committee that this is being done."

"We are completely supportive of the commissioner in this approach."

Steinbrenner's telex served to answer some suggestions that the owners were not unified in their cause.

On another labor front, it was revealed that baseball almost had another strike on its hands — by umpires.

Richie Phillips, counsel for the Major League Baseball Umpires Association, said Thursday that umpires considered striking in protest of American League President Lee MacPhail's edict aimed at keeping Terry Cooney from umpiring in a game involving the Oakland A's.

But Phillips said the potential walkout was made unnecessary by the players' strike last Friday. MacPhail had ordered the crew of which Cooney is a member off the Oakland assignment because, he said, he feared for Cooney's safety after the umpire had filed criminal charges against Billy Martin, the Oakland manager.

Astro-Graph

Lady Luck will be looking out for your interests this coming year in enterprises or ventures which you either originate or manage. She'll put you together with the right people, but after that it's up to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your philosophical outlook and zest for life makes you a fun person to be around today, except in anything concerning money. Here your judgment is faulty. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Involvements where emotional bonds are shared are where you are the luckiest today, but let feelings happen naturally — don't try to force togetherness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your judgment is very astute today evaluating major issues, yet for some reason this may be difficult or you to believe. Have faith in yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The chances for a hefty return on your enterprises look exceptionally good today. However, you may have to turn a deaf ear to a libtizer who'd like you to think your efforts are fruitless.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't let anyone take the reins from your hands in handling any social arrangements today. You're the one who knows how to unobtrusively guide the group.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't lose faith if your rewards are slow in coming today. Those things which take time are generally the largest and most long-lasting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This will be a happy day if you get out with friends and acquaintances. They'll know all the right things to do to pull you out of your doldrums.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Team up with Lady Luck, don't work against her, and you'll make this a very fortunate day where either finances or your career is involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You are able to get a quick grasp of situations today. If left to your own devices you can work them out for the good of all.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're willing to go the extra distance today to be helpful to persons you care for. They feel the same way about you, yet you could stop them from doing so.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Friends and acquaintances are on your side today, although they may have a hard time convincing you. Think positive for super results.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Concentrate your efforts today on goals of real significance. Your chances for success are strong if you don't get off on tangents.

Brown and Root exec says foe taped him

HOUSTON (AP) — A nuclear regulatory board has been told that South Texas Nuclear Project opponent Peggy Buchorn secretly taped a senior Brown & Root executive when he discussed the project with her in July 1980.

The tape-recording was revealed when intervenor attorney William S. Jordan III quoted from it Thursday to dispute testimony by senior Brown & Root vice president Steve H. Grote.

A three-member Nuclear Regulatory Commission board is hearing allegations of quality control problems at the $2.7 billion dollar plant under construction near Bay City. The board is conducting hearings to determine whether Houston Lighting & Power Company should receive an operating license for the plant.

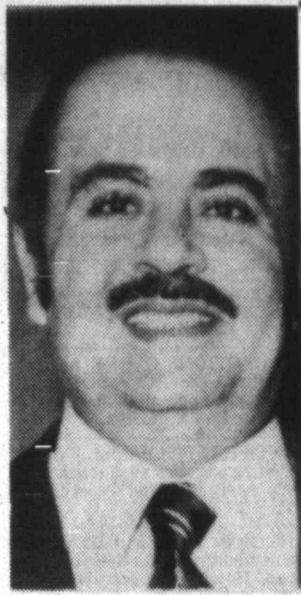

HL&P attorney Jack R. Newman suggested that Buchorn's taping of Grote might be a violation of state or federal law and called for a halt to Jordan's questioning of Grote until the whole tape could be played.

Buchorn, a leader of Citizens for Equitable Utilities, said she checked with an assistant state attorney general and was told the taping was legal. Buchorn also said the tape recorder was in plain sight when she met with Grote.

Newman later agreed that the taping was not illegal. "The tape may be played later if it is introduced into evidence, the board members decided."

The board also heard Grote testify he was upset by a Houston Post story in which he said intervenors Lanny Sinkin and Buchorn "called me a liar."

An earlier story in the Post "didn't include qualifications" he made about voids in the concrete containment walls at the nuclear plant, Grote said.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda says she wants "to make every effort" to organize a Hollywood film boycott of segregated theaters in this white-ruled nation.

"I believe there will be more support for that after the banning of Sammy Adelman," Miss Fonda said in an interview Thursday. Adelman, a 25-year-old white student leader, was banned after trying to help Miss Fonda and husband Tom Hayden enter South Africa.

Virtually all South African theaters other than drive-ins are segregated. Miss Fonda and Hayden told The Associated Press that Adelman's efforts to secure their entry into South Africa were the reason he was banned.

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles' reception in New York seemed less than enthusiastic to some on this side of the Atlantic, but New York Mayor Edward I. Koch says the heir to the British throne is "very personable" and that New Yorkers like him.

The Daily Express called the reception "New York's Sour Hello," and the Times of London said the prince received a "coolish welcome." The prince returned to London Thursday after his 24-hour U.S. visit.

NEW YORK (AP) — All three major television networks are said to be pursuing Tom Brokaw, host of NBC's "Today" show, but Brokaw said through an NBC spokesman that a decision on his future won't be made "for some time."

Brokaw said Thursday that he hasn't decided what he will do when his contract expires late this summer. Neither Brokaw nor Frank Reynolds would comment on a recent published report that Brokaw would join ABC News as "World News Tonight" anchorman, replacing Reynolds.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Saudi Arabian billionaire Adnan Khashoggi is savoring a legal victory today in a court battle with his estranged wife, Soraya, who has lost a bid to sue him in California for $2.5 billion in community property.

"Our client called us from France, and he's real pleased with the decision," said Khashoggi's local attorney, Joseph Ball.

"He thinks it's a complete vindication of his position — that just because he's a Saudi Arabian with business interests in California doesn't mean he can be sued for divorce here," said Ball.

Superior Court Judge John A. Loomis concluded that Soraya Khashoggi moved to Los Angeles only because she wanted to see her husband in California. The state's community property laws are among the most liberal in the nation.

government has not been headed by a Christian Democrat, the largest party. NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Nightly sweeps of Kabul neighborhoods are catching youths as young as 15 in a new conscription drive to replenish the Afghan army, a source in the Afghan capital reported.

The source, who asked not to be identified for fear of reprisals, said desertions and casualties have reduced the strength of the army to 25,000.

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A 27-year-old man has pleaded innocent to charges that he gave false testimony to a grand jury investigating the murder of a black youth who was hanged.

The grand jury earlier this month declined to indict Ralph Eugene Hayes and brothers Jimmy and Johnny Edgar in the killing of 19-year-old Michael Donald of Mobile. It concluded that testimony against the three men was false.

Donald's body was found hanging from a tree March 21. Johnny Ray Kelly of Prichard, who was arrested June 11, pleaded innocent to perjury charges Thursday in connection with his testimony before preliminary and grand jury hearings.

FORT MCCOY, Wis. (AP) — Three Wisconsin National Guardsmen are dead and a captain was in stable condition with two broken thighs and a broken arm today after a helicopter carrying the men crashed, officials said.

The wreckage of the OH-58 observation helicopter was found early Thursday in a woods after a crash the day before during a training flight. The cause of the crash wasn't immediately known.

Authorities said the pilots — Chief Warrant Officers Robert Ertl, 59, of Appleton, and David Impola, 39, of Menominee, Mich. — and 1st Sgt. Allen W. Wilson, 46, of Antigo, were killed. Capt. John R. Leonhard, 33, of Mosinee was hospitalized.

ROME (AP) — Italy's premier-designate is pledging to fight inflation and terrorism and dissolve the secret Masonic lodge whose disclosure forced the last Italian government out of office.

Giovanni Spadolini, head of the small Republican Party, said Thursday he would put together a coalition of Christian Democrats, Socialists, Social Democrats and Liberals. He was expected to delay announcing his Cabinet until after the regional elections this weekend.

Hance says tax cut could be in jeopardy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, who is carrying President Reagan's bipartisan tax-cut bill on the House floor says the measure could be in jeopardy because of the controversy that continues to surround the president's spending recommendations.

Because of concern that House committees failed to carry out the president's spending bill goals, Republicans and conservative Democrats have threatened to come up with a complete substitute on the House floor.

"I'm hoping they can work it out, short of that, because the more controversy we get into on reconciliation, the more that will spill over on the tax cuts. We hope to get through with as little trouble as possible. It's important to get the tax-cut proposal through intact," Hance said.

His comments came at a breakfast meeting Thursday at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which invites a prominent public figure for its weekly sessions.

Some have criticized the proposed 3-year tax-cut bill, calling the president's proposal inflationary, but Hance said it's "better to have the public to have this money and spend it than for the government to have it and spend it. The return will be better."

Hance was one of 38 members of the Conservative Democratic Forum who supported Reagan's proposed spending cuts, and a battle is continuing in the House about how closely the program will be followed.

Among the alternatives offered on the tax-cut plan, is a 2-year bill that would include a higher exemption for royalty owners and independent oilmen from the Windfall Profits Tax.

"That's a bill Hance has introduced in the House, which makes it tempting for him to accept, he said. The legislation would affect his district probably more than any other."

"But if I did that, and voted for a 2-year bill instead, how would I explain to the man who drives a Coca Cola truck in Lubbock that I traded his third year of tax cuts for an exemption on the Windfall Profits Tax?" Hance asked.

"I'll tell you how I do. I don't. I give him his third year and try to take care of the windfall profits matter in some other way as soon as possible."

Several weeks ago, at a town hall meeting in Littlefield, Hance was trying to answer a farmer's question about how he stood on the tax-cut proposals.

"The 38-year-old former professor in business law at Texas Tech said he gave 'my very best answer' to the farmer.

"When I got through, he told me, 'I didn't ask for an essay. What I want to know is, are you for the president or against him?'" Hance said.

Any remainder from the proceeds of a sale shall be held for the owner of the vehicle or entitled lien holder for 90 days, and shall be deposited in a special fund which shall remain available for the payment of auction, towing, preserving, storage, and all other expenses and costs.

SECTION 6: Garagekeepers and Abandoned Motor Vehicles. Any garagekeeper who fails to report the possession of such a vehicle within 10 days after it becomes abandoned within the meaning of this section shall no longer have any claim for storage of the vehicle. The police department, upon receipt of a report from a garagekeeper of the possession of a vehicle deemed abandoned under the provisions of this section shall follow the notification procedures set forth in Section 4 of this Ordinance, except that custody of the vehicle shall remain with the garagekeeper until after the notification requirements have been complied with. A fee of $2 shall accompany the report of the garagekeeper to the police department. All abandoned vehicles left in storage facilities which are not reclaimed after such notice in accordance with procedures set forth in Section 4 of this Ordinance shall be taken into custody by the police department and sold in accordance with the procedure set forth in Section 5 of this Ordinance. The proceeds of a sale under the provisions of this Section shall first be applied to the garagekeeper's charges for servicing, storage and repair; provided, however, that as compensation for the expense incurred by the police department in placing the vehicle in custody and the expense of auction the police department shall retain an amount of two percent of the gross proceeds of the sale of each vehicle auctioned, but in no case shall the amount of two percent of the gross proceeds shall be less than $10, the department shall retain the sum of $10 to defray expenses of custody and auction. Cutbacks not expected to halt repair of Katy rails

GRANDFIELD, Okla. (AP) — A sharp cutback in federal money for railway rehabilitation isn't expected to jeopardize funds being counted on for renovation of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas line between Altus and the Red River, a state rail planner says.

State Transportation Department staff members Max Carter and Bill Bennett met recently with Federal Railroad Administration officials in Washington, D.C.

"Indications are that they are going to approve our application for additional funds in its entirety," Carter said.

It had been anticipated that the FRA would dole out about $80 million to states in fiscal year 1981, but that amount was cut in half as part of President Ronald Reagan's budget belt-tightening, Carter said.

"We have a verbal commitment that the FRA will approve our application if funds don't get cut off completely," he said. "We're in the first row, since essentially we've already started the project."

The state Transportation Department has negotiated an agreement with the Katy for 60 miles of southwest Oklahoma track. The state's $811,000 offer has been accepted by Katy officials, Carter said.

The pending application is for $3.5 million, of which 80 percent would be federally financed and 20 percent would be a match provided by the state, Carter said.

In fall, the FRA approved a $1.24 million allocation for the project, to be matched with $310,269 in state funds. That grant is sufficient to purchase the line, but the state doesn't plan to obtain tracks it can't afford to renovate, officials said.

Since the FRA grants and accompanying matches aren't expected to cover the total expense, shippers probably will be asked to help financially with the project, which probably will show increased costs because of inflation, officials said.
