

Vandals sweep Pampa in glass-breaking spree

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

A Friday night vandalism spree of smashing glass in cars and residences throughout most of north Pampa is speculated to be the largest ever reported in the city and could cost the 130-plus victims at least $13,000 in damages.

Angry Pampans Saturday were establishing a reward fund at the First National Bank here.

Loyd Waters of 2526 Christine, said late Saturday that the fund has been set up at the First National Bank and will be ready for donations Monday morning. The money will be used to provide a reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for the costly vandalism spree.

"I've already got a lot of calls from people who want to contribute to the fund to get something done about this vandalism. People are mad that this kind of thing can happen," Waters said.

Two of Waters' vehicles were damaged, the back windshield of an auto and two windows of a van.

Captain Roy Denman of the Pampa Police Department said officially Saturday 118 vandalism reports had been made by Pampa police officers by 4 p.m. Saturday. Late Saturday, police officials said more Pampans were reporting damage to their autos and homes as they discovered it, and he estimated at least 130 reports had been made.

Denman said the average damage to each complainant was between $50 and $250.

Shift Supervisor Sgt. Michael Hartsock said late Saturday that close to 130 reports of vandalism had been answered by police. Most of the reports were related to windows broken or shot in vehicles, and plate glass doors damaged in residences.

A police officer on the night shift said the vandalism calls began about 2 to 3 a.m. Saturday. He said approximately 26 calls were received during the midnight shift.

Sgt. Hartsock said some of the windows were shot out by possibly a BB or pellet gun. Others were broken by a large blunt object.

Most of the vandalism took place in a large area of Pampa from north of Central Park, including residences on both sides of Hobart and Duncan Streets, police said.

Pellets were shot through plate glass doors in some of the more influential residential sections and are estimated to have caused as much as $500 in damage, officers said.

Hartsock said latent finger prints were lifted from a vehicle which had had the air let out of a tire.

The vandals probably shot or struck the cars and houses while riding inside a vehicle stopped in the street, the police sergeant said.

"Most probably they didn't come in contact with the vehicles, themselves," Hartsock said.

Most of the damaged automobiles were parked on or near the street, he added.

One city patrol unit was damaged in the vandalism spree Friday night, police officials said. The vehicle was parked at the residence of a police officer at the time the vehicle was damaged.

District Attorney Harold Comer, himself a victim of the vandalism, said if damages total more than $10,000 the crime will be considered a first-degree felony, which carries a punishment of from five to 99 years, or life imprisonment.

Comer said his daughter's car, parked in the street in front of the residence, had one door window knocked out by vandals.

Insurance agent Joe Fischer said estimates for replacement of automobile windshields range from $200 to $300 or more, depending if the glass was tinted.

Door glass estimates are running from $40 to $60 for replacement, he added.

Most of the vandalism will be covered by insurance, Fischer said, if the victim carried comprehensive insurance on his vehicle. The victim could be responsible for the $50 to $100 deductible, however, he said.

Vic Raymond of 1912 Charles had two of his family's vehicles damaged by vandals.

Raymond said three windows on two cars, one his daughter's brand new car, a 1981 Chevrolet Citation.

"Hadn't even gotten the license plates on it yet," he added.

"I heard something about 3:05 a.m. I heard people and a car outside. I got up and looked out the window and couldn't see anything," he said.

Raymond said, "What I heard was sounded like someone walking up the street bouncing something like a cane off the street."

He said the police said his vehicles were damaged by a pellet gun. "It all looks the same to me, with glass laying all around."

"I just cannot believe that somebody doesn't know who did it," Raymond said.

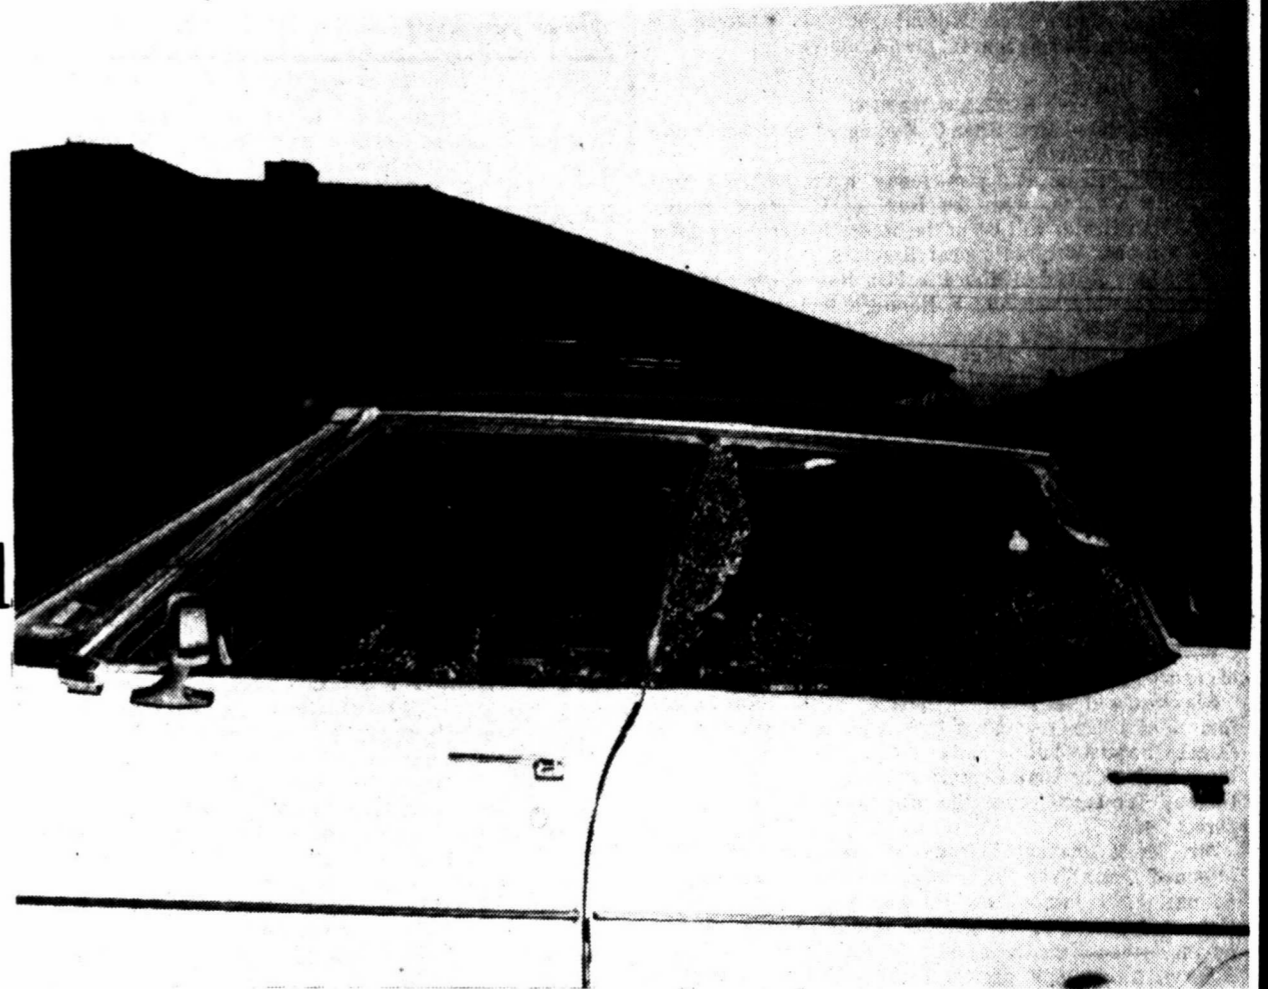

He said he did not know what the damages would be, but he said last week he paid $60 to replace a four inch by 10 inch window in one of his cars.

When told of the fund for reward money, Raymond said, "They've got it from me."

SHATTERED WINDOWS, like those shown here, could be seen throughout North Pampa early Saturday after a large-scale vandalism spree, which will cost the victims at least $13,000. The van above was parked on Williston Street, and the auto below was sitting in front of a residence on Beech Street at dawn Saturday. The average damage to each victim ranged from $50 to $250, police said.

Officers spent the entire day taking an unprecedented 130-plus complaints from the vandals' victims.

Bus hijack ends in surrender of gunman, passengers uninjured

ERICK, Okla. (AP) — A gunman, yelling that he wanted the FBI to arrest him, hijacked a Greyhound bus Saturday with 32 people aboard but surrendered to police two hours later, authorities said.

There were no injuries aboard the bus, which was en route from Los Angeles to New York on Interstate 40, police said.

"Nobody went hysterical until it was all over," said passenger LeAnn Bassford of Springdale, Ark. "There's a kind of scare that's controlled and one where you climb the walls."

Beckham County Sheriff Dean Smith said charges against Larry Darnell Wallace, 25, of St. Louis would remain pending until Monday. He said federal investigators and officials from Texas and Oklahoma would have to decide how charges could be filed.

Police said the man got on the bus at Amarillo and commandeered it two miles out of town, putting a 38-caliber pistol to the head of driver Michael Banfield.

"He kept hollering that he wanted the FBI to arrest him," Smith said. He said federal officials were not informed of the hijacking until after it was over.

The gunman did not make any other demands, and Smith said investigators hadn't determined a reason for the hijacking.

The driver of another bus witnessed the takeover and notified Texas police, who followed the bus.

The gunman ordered the bus stopped twice in Texas to let three people off, including a woman and her infant son.

The hijacking ended five miles inside Oklahoma near Erick when the man told Banfield to stop. Police said he threw his gun in a ditch after stepping out of the bus and surrendered to officers who had followed them in about 10 cars.

Banfield, of Hot Springs, Ark., later said he wanted to continue on his route to Oklahoma City and get to bed. "I sat up too straight for too long," he said. "You don't slouch when somebody's holding a gun on you."

"I kept thinking, 'I hope he misses,'" he added.

He said the man didn't threaten the passengers directly but allegedly told Banfield he would shoot the driver and cause the others to die in the resulting crash.

Smith said police closely followed the bus after it entered Oklahoma, but no attempt was made to stop the vehicle.

Fighting breaks out during Bani-Sadr debate

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Thousands of Iranians battled on Tehran's main streets Saturday after parliament began debate on impeaching missing President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr. Hospital officials reported at least 10 dead and 70 injured, and Iran's Revolutionary Guards declared a 24-hour "full red alert."

Witnesses in Tehran were quoted as saying 3,000 Bani-Sadr backers built barricades, set a motorbike on fire and hurled stones at revolutionary guards loyal to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, and that the guards opened up with submachine guns and light arms.

An estimated 2,000 counter-demonstrators backing the Revolutionary Guards had been chanting "Bani-Sadr Savaki, death to Bani-Sadr," said witnesses reached by telephone by The Associated Press in Beirut. Savaki means a member of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's secret service, Savak.

Officials at four Tehran hospitals contacted by The Associated Press in Beirut reported a total of 10 dead and 70 injured in the clashes so far.

A statement from the Revolutionary Guards broadcast by Tehran radio said a 24-hour alert had been declared. It accused the Mujaheddeen Khalq, or leftist people's guerrillas, of joining "other counter-revolutionary groups" to counter Islam and the Koran in an armed manner.

Observers in Tehran have been expecting anti-government riots if Bani-Sadr's impeachment process got under way because the president and his supporters have no other outlet for protest.

Their newspapers have been closed and they were afraid to go to parliament Saturday to defend Bani-Sadr because of pro-Khomeini demonstrations demanding Bani-Sadr's death, according to the Tehran observers.

No compromise reached with controllers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government and union negotiators searched for a way Saturday to avert a nationwide air traffic controllers strike that threatened to ground thousands of flights and snarl air travel for millions of Americans.

"If there is movement on their side, then I'm optimistic. If not, the strike is inevitable," Robert E. Poli, president of the controllers union, said as he arrived at the informal talks.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said "we obviously don't want a strike," threatened for 7 a.m. Monday.

But he warned if controllers walk off their jobs "we'll come down with the full force of the Justice Department... we'll start the fines immediately."

White House chief of staff James A. Baker III relayed word on the talks to President Reagan at Camp David, Md.

Resumption of even informal discussions Friday and Saturday by Poli and negotiators from the Federal Aviation Administration brought a hint that an agreement might be reached to prevent the strike that is predicted would cost the economy $250 million a day and inconvenience millions of travelers.

But both sides appeared still to be far apart on a wage package. Mediator Kenneth Moffett was said to be shuffling between the two sides, who were in separate rooms. At times, however, representatives from both camps are talking directly, said D.J. Yount, a spokeswoman for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Lewis, who participated in the talks for a little more than an hour and then left, told reporters the administration is standing firm on its $40 million wage package submitted early in the week.

If controllers strike, the FAA says only about 8,500 commercial flights — about half the normal number — would be flown, plus another 1,500 essential military and emergency flights.

Top priority would go to military flights, followed by commercial flights of more than 500 miles and then commercial flights of less than 500 miles. International flights probably would be delayed, cargo flights would be less frequent and general aviation aircraft using instruments would have a difficult time leaving the ground.

Youths drown when sheriff's boat capsizes

MEXIA, Texas (AP) — At least two of three black teenagers who had been arrested during a "Juneteenth" celebration died when one of them jumped from a sheriff's boat, causing it to overturn in a lake near this Central Texas town, officials said Saturday.

Deputy Dave Gillian said the bodies of Carl Baker, 19, and Anthony Freeman, 18, both of Mexia and described by relatives as life-long friends, were found in Lake Mexia Saturday.

The third man, Steve Booker, a Dallas man who had lived in Mexia and was friend of the two victims, remained unaccounted for Saturday, deputies said.

Although law officers continued to drag the lake after the first two bodies had been recovered, officials said Booker may have been able to swim to shore and escape in the nearby woods.

Limestone County Deputy Lee Turrubiate said Saturday that Deputies Kenneth Archie and Kenny Elliot were taking the three men across the lake by boat when the mishap occurred about 11 p.m. Friday.

He said Booker apparently jumped from the boat when it was about 75 yards from shore near a bridge, and the two deputies jumped in after him, capsizing the boat.

He said witnesses at the scene told officers Booker fled into the woods.

Turrubiate also discounted reports that the three men were handcuffed while they were in the boat, as some witnesses had earlier reported.

Deputy Dave Gillian declined to give details of the incident when contacted at the Limestone County Sheriff's office in Groesbeck, the county seat, but he also said the victims were not handcuffed.

Gillian said Sheriff Dennis Walker could not be reached for comment.

He said the three had been arrested about 10:30 p.m. Friday on "unspecified charges" during an annual Juneteenth Celebration at the lake.

The celebration is in honor of Texas blacks receiving word of the Emancipation Proclamation.

Isabell Granberry, Freeman's aunt, said the youths were arrested at the lakeshore celebration after law officers found a small quantity of marijuana on one of them.

She said sheriff's officials thus far have declined to provide the families of the victims with any information on the arrests or the drownings.

Butz sentenced to 30 days in jail on federal tax charge

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Former Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, the wisecracking friend of agribusiness, has two weeks to wind up his affairs before he joins the ranks of former Nixon men who have spent time behind bars.
 Despite his lawyer's pleas, Butz was sentenced Friday to the maximum penalty for tax evasion: a five-year prison term and a $10,000 fine. But U.S. District Judge Jesse Eschbach said Butz will have to serve only 30 days in jail and will be on probation for the rest of the term.
 Butz will be allowed to report voluntarily to the Metropolitan Correctional Center in downtown Chicago. The high-rise facility, which houses maximum- and minimum-security inmates, is equipped with air conditioning, carpeting and a roof-top volleyball court.
 After the brief sentencing hearing, Butz, 71, refused to talk with reporters. Asked for her reaction to the punishment, Butz's wife, Mary, said, "We don't have any statement."
 Butz, now dean emeritus at Purdue University's School of Agriculture in his hometown of West Lafayette, was appointed agriculture secretary by former President Richard M. Nixon in 1971. Five years later, serving under Gerald R. Ford, he was forced to resign after an obscene racial joke he told was made public.

 Attorney General John Mitchell and nine lesser officials of the Nixon administration served time in jail, and Attorney General Richard Kleindienst and former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans were convicted of crimes but not sent to prison. Vice President Spiro Agnew left office after pleading no contest to a charge of income tax evasion.
 As part of a plea bargain, Butz confessed to understating his 1978 taxable income by $148,114 and thus avoiding $74,057 in tax. In his 1978 return, Butz reported income of $97,814 with a tax due of $39,621, when in fact his taxable income was $245,928 and the tax owed was $113,678. Butz said the unreported income came primarily from lecture fees.
 Wearing a dark suit, Butz entered the packed courtroom shortly after noon. While his lawyers conferred, Butz poured three glasses of water and figeted with his briefcase.

 Attorney Cono Namorato urged the judge not to order jail time, saying, "Dr. Butz is almost 72 years old. He is a first offender. He is deeply sorry for what he did."
 The lawyer said Butz had made complete restitution, paying back taxes, penalties and interest. "The extended investigation has cost Dr. Butz, both emotionally and financially," Namorato added.
 When his lawyer was finished, Butz spoke.
 "I'm guilty of the crime charged. It's made a terrible mistake," he said. "There's no justification for what happened. It was an aberration."
 "Dr. Butz has had a distinguished record as a gentleman and a good citizen for over 70 years," said Eschbach. "We have considered his age as well as his health."
 The judge noted that none of the income that was the basis for the charge was derived illegally and acknowledged Butz' contribution to education and various community groups, as well as his government service.

Swimathon slated at Pampa pools

Registration has begun for the Kidney Foundation Swim-A-Thon scheduled June 27 at all three Pampa swimming pools, according to Walter Johnson, chairman of the area campaign.
 The swim-a-thon will be held to benefit the National Kidney Foundation of West Texas which serves the Pampa area residents, he said.
 Swimmers can compete for prizes at the Municipal Swimming Pool, the Pampa Youth and Recreation Center Pool, or at the Pampa Country Club pool.

Each pool will have entry forms and participants are urged to pick up the forms as soon as possible, Johnson said. Participants will receive recognition for their entry and also receive prizes based on the number of pledges.
 Prizes will be awarded in two age categories: 12 years and under, and 13 years and older. All entrants turning in kits will receive a Kidney Foundation frisbee. Those turning in $30 to $59 will receive a visor cap. Entrants bringing in $60 to $99 will receive a carry-all travel bag. A windbreaker is the prize for turning $100 or more.

Winners earning the most money in the swim-a-thon at each pool and in each age category will receive a special Kidney Foundation "Swim Team" medal.
 Johnson said the money raised from the "Swim for Life" swim-a-thon will be used for local and area urinalysis screening programs in the public schools, the organ donor program, public education and patient services.
 Nationally, 54,000 people die each year from some form of kidney disease — more than the total of all automobile accident deaths.

Three Pampans injured in accidents

Three Pampa residents were injured in two separate automobile accidents occurring in the city Friday and Saturday.
 David Fields, 10, of 110 S. Varnon was treated for a minor head injury at 8:40 p.m. Friday, a spokesman for Highland General Hospital said.
 The spokesman said the boy struck his head on a windshield in an automobile accident.
 Saturday, at 4:15 p.m., Laura Jane Roberts, 79, of 1223 Cherokee and Ginger Roberts, 19, of 1613 Hamilton were admitted to Highland General Hospital for observation, a hospital spokesman said.

 The two women were injured in a two-car collision at the intersection of Hobart and Decatur Streets at 3 p.m. Saturday.
 R. Masterson, age and address unavailable, was arrested at the scene of the accident for driving while intoxicated and for running a red light, police said Saturday.
 The elder Roberts suffered a broken clavicle and injuries to her left hand and forearm. The younger woman, four months pregnant, suffered abrasions, the hospital spokesman said.

 An accident was reported to police at 7:58 p.m. Friday at the intersection of Francis and West Streets involving a 1979 Chevrolet, driven by James Audrey Petty, 63, of Borger and a 1979 Ford, driven by a juvenile. Police officials would not release the name of the juvenile.
 Police reports say Petty was cited for failure to yield right of way.

Klansmen convicted in island overthrow

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Ku Klux Klan leader Stephen Donald Black and another Klansman were convicted Saturday of taking part in a scheme to overthrow the island government of Dominica. Jurors acquitted a third defendant.
 The verdict came after more than 12 hours of deliberations over two days in U.S. District Court.
 The seven-woman, five-man panel convicted Black, 27, of Birmingham, Ala., national grand dragon of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and longtime active Klansman Joe Daniel Hawkins, 37, of Jackson, Miss., on two of the seven counts in their indictment. Jurors found Michael S. Norris, 21, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., innocent on all seven counts.

 Black and Hawkins were found guilty of illegally conspiring to overthrow the Caribbean island, and of violating the Neutrality Act by planning an armed expedition against a friendly nation.

 They face a maximum eight years in prison and $13,000 in fines.
 They were acquitted on five other counts of federal weapons violations. More than 30 high-power firearms and a gift-wrapped box of dynamite were seized when federal agents broke up the scheme.

Child dies when rifle discharges

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A 5-year-old Austin girl is dead after a 30-30 rifle she and her 8-year-old sister were playing with accidentally discharged, according to police.
 Mekesha Slaughter was pronounced dead at her home Friday of a single gunshot wound to the head.
 The child's distraught father, Lester Wayne Haywood, had to be restrained by his brother and police and later fainted on the front lawn after he learned of the accident.

 According to police Lt. Robert Wisian, the sisters were left home alone Friday while their parents were at work.
 The shooting was reported shortly before 2 p.m.
 "Their grandmother said the 8-year-old was in the bathroom when she heard the gunshot in the living room... it's a tragic accident," said Wisian. "They were probably playing with the rifle. Whether they knew if was loaded or not we don't know at this point."

 Later, Wisian quoted the dead girl's mother, Doris Haywood, as saying the older girl had been in the living room rather than in the bathroom at the time of the accident.
 Police said a bullet from the rifle struck the child in the forehead, killing her instantly.

Hawaiian rape law amended after youths acquitted in trial

HONOLULU (AP) — Public outrage over the acquittal of four youths charged with raping a Finnish tourist has spawned a revision of Hawaii's rape law, designed to ease a rape victim's ordeal in the courtroom and improve chances for conviction.
 Under pressure from a fearful and angry public, Gov. George Ariyoshi on Friday signed into law a bill drafted during the closing days of the legislative session in April.
 The July 1979 rape that sparked the controversy occurred at a rural beach park about 30 miles from Honolulu. It was one of the most highly publicized cases in a wave of violent crime that recently hit this island paradise and hurt tourism.
 A 24-year-old nursing student from Finland, known publicly only as Anna, was waiting at a bus stop when a group of teen-age boys invited her to smoke marijuana in their tent.

 Once in the tent, she testified, Anna was held for several hours as 10 boys, ranging in age from 14 to 17, assaulted her.
 Five teenagers were convicted of rape in juvenile court and sentenced to terms at a youth correctional facility.
 But in March, a jury found four older teenagers — who were tried as adults — innocent. Charges against another youth were dropped.
 Jurors said they felt the prosecution did not show the victim offered "earnest resistance," an element of proof in the old law.
 The word "earnest" was removed from the law last year. Some lawmakers felt that alone would have

Chapman trial to hinge on sanity

NEW YORK (AP) — While police map out tight courtroom security, prosecutors and defense attorneys for Mark David Chapman say they're ready for a trial that will hinge on whether the 26-year-old former mental patient was sane when he fired four bullets into John Lennon.
 Jury selection is scheduled for Monday, but Chapman's attorney has refused to rule out speculation that his client may plead guilty to charges of slaying the 40-year-old former Beatle.
 "I don't know and I don't want to speculate," Jonathan Marks said of a news report that Chapman, saying he had instructions from God, has decided to change his plea.

 The lawyer said only that he plans to renew his application, denied last week by acting state Supreme Court Justice Dennis Edwards, that Chapman's competency to stand trial be re-evaluated. The prosecution opposes the motion.
 "The only issue is his state of mind," Marks asserted. "I'm not disputing that he killed Mr. Lennon... It was obviously a premeditated act."

 Marks acknowledged that "there are many people who believe insane people aren't capable of premeditation." He said his biggest problem at the trial would be "prejudice toward (Chapman) and against the insanity defense. People do not trust doctors."
 Lennon, who had spent five years out of the public eye to help raise his young son, Sean, was shot down Dec. 8 outside the Dakota, the Manhattan apartment building where he lived with wife Yoko Ono.

Kansas tornado kills 1, injures 33

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — A tornado ripped through a 500-lot mobile home park, a department store and a small shopping center in southwest Lawrence, killing one person and injuring about 33 others.

The tornado Friday evening tore into the Gaslight Village mobile home park, heaping between 15 and 20 mobile homes into piles of mangled debris, said Allen Loyd, public information officer for Lawrence.

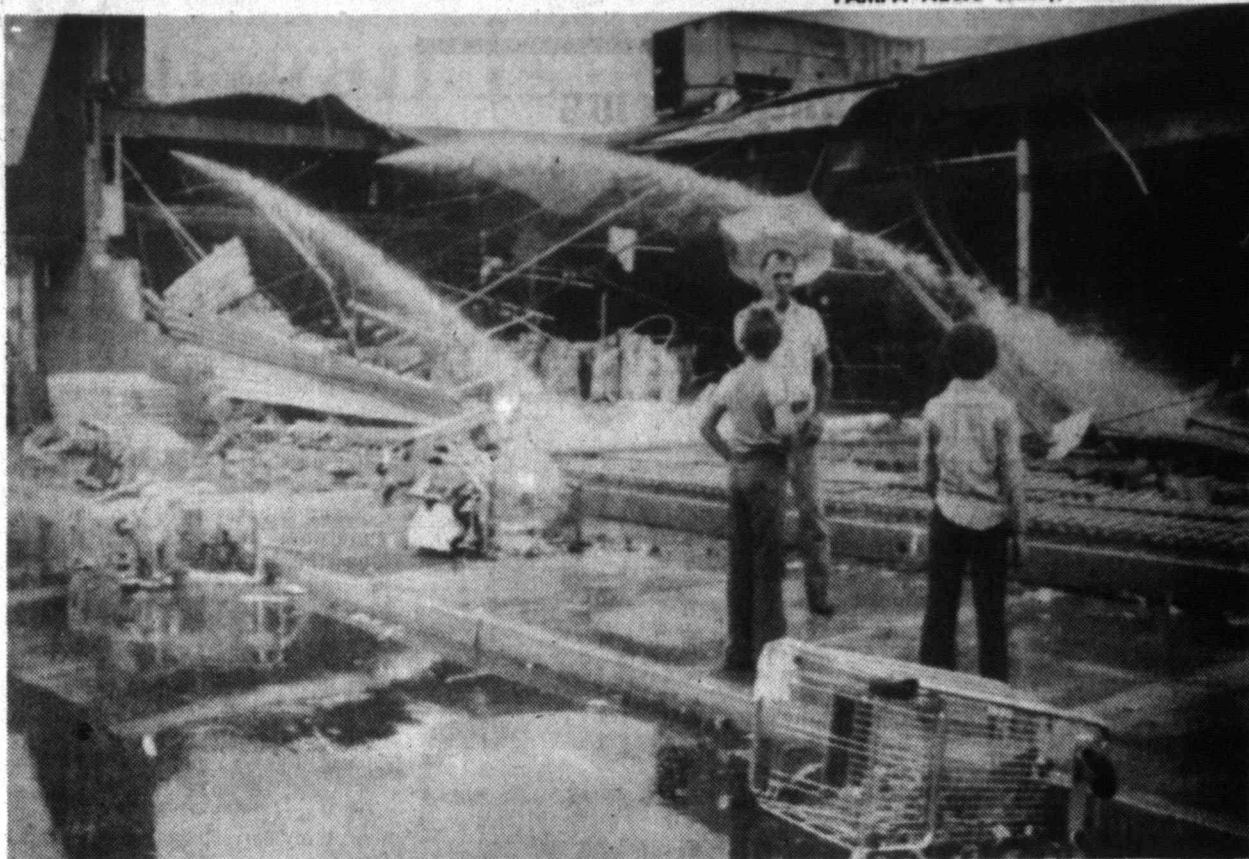

It was not known immediately how many of the homes were occupied when the twister struck. Authorities evacuated the mobile home park late Friday night to determine if any residents still were missing.

Authorities said Stanley Ray Pittman, 30, a University of Kansas graduate student, died after suffering head and neck injuries when part of the roof and a wall caved in at a K Mart store, which was open when the tornado hit. About 33 injured persons were brought to Lawrence Memorial Hospital, said Bob Campbell, director of community relations for the hospital. He said three persons were admitted, but none was in serious condition. The others were treated and released.

The twister also damaged homes in a residential area surrounding a nearby golf course. One of the homes belonged to Steve Hornberger, a Douglas County sheriff's deputy.

"I walked into the far bedroom and I heard the doors start slamming shut," Hornberger said. "The wind picked up, and the house started shaking. I laid down on the floor, and insulation was swirling everywhere. I looked up and I had four walls left."

Suspect implicates self in murders

DALLAS (AP) — A man charged with two counts of capital murder has implicated himself in the brutal slayings of two North Dallas residents last fall, a police investigator says.

Fletcher Thomas Mann Jr., 20, who is being held in Bullitt County, Ky., on unrelated rape and robbery charges, was questioned by a Dallas investigator about the five-hour ordeal at the Timber Ridge Apartments in North Dallas Sept. 11.

Mann was arraigned Friday on charges stemming from the deaths of 22-year-old Barbara Hoppe and 23-year-old Christopher Bates and the wounding of his roommate, 23-year-old Robert Lee Matzig. Mann is being held under $100,000 bond set by Bullitt County District Judge Fredrick Friske for each of the two counts.

Mann "has been questioned by investigator Jim Gholston at the jail in Kentucky and he has implicated himself in the two Dallas murders," Dallas police Capt. Grant Lappin said Friday. Gholston traveled to Kentucky from Dallas late Thursday.

A second suspect in the slayings was identified late Friday by Matzig, who singled out his photograph from five others, Lappin said. The suspect remains at large.

Matzig identified Mann in a picture lineup Wednesday, police said.

Two men barged into the North Dallas apartment shared by Matzig and Bates, who were watching a televised football game with Ms. Hoppe.

The roommates were tied with strips of bedsheets while the gunmen raped and molested Ms. Hoppe for about two hours in a bedroom, police said. The woman then was strangled and stabbed twice in the chest.

The men then were driven around Dallas in Matzig's four-wheel drive vehicle and forced to cash checks, police said. About 1 a.m., they were forced out of the vehicle in a vacant field, where Bates was fatally shot in the back of the head. Matzig began to run and was shot in the neck, but crawled to a nearby Bulk Mailing Center where he attracted the attention of U.S. Postal Service security guards.

The assailants had fled, apparently believing Matzig was dead.

Family searches for missing pilot

MENA, Ark. (AP) — Some members of the Strand family are heading home this weekend after a three-day journey into the wooded mountains of eastern Oklahoma and western Arkansas.

Joyce Strand, her five children and other relatives and friends made the trip from Decorah, Iowa, to search out leads in the disappearance of Paul Strand and a companion.

Strand and Raymond Hougen, both 50 and of Decorah, were on a flight from Paris, Texas, to Decorah when they were last heard from June 6.

David Strand, 22, said Friday in a telephone interview that the family had received some tips in the search for the missing plane and two men, but they had not been too specific.

The younger Strand said the family had followed up on one lead, but came away empty-handed. Strand said a man told them he thought he saw a tail section of a plane, but when the family went to the place mentioned by the man they found nothing.

"You get your hopes up and then they are dropped back down," he said.

Unhappy legislators file suit challenging House redistricting

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The new Texas House redistricting plan has been challenged by unhappy state representatives and others who claim it illegally divides at least 24 counties.

A hearing will be held next Friday on a temporary restraining order that prevents state officials from putting the plan into effect until the court contest is settled.

"I kind of figured it (the redistricting plan) would be tested soon," Speaker Bill Clayton said from his home in Springlake when informed of the filing of the class action suit late Friday.

The suit, filed by three representatives and six individuals, came a day after it was signed into law by Gov. Bill Clements.

Clements vetoed a similar redistricting plan for the Senate on Thursday, sending that issue to a Legislative Redistricting Board to reshuffle district lines according to the 1980 census.

The congressional redistricting issue was not settled by the recent legislative session and will have top priority in the special session called for July 13. Congressional redistricting cannot be passed on to a redistricting board.

Defendants in the class action suit are Clements, Attorney General Mark White and Secretary of State George Strake.

Those filing the suit were Reps. Al Luna, D-Houston; Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio and Bob Valles, D-El Paso, plus Anne Mauzy, wife of Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas; H.G. Wells, Fort Worth; Dwight Christopher, Cherokee County; Seldon Hale, Amarillo; Armando Lopez, Laredo, and Juan Gonzales, Corpus Christi.

George Korbell, director of litigation for the Texas Rural Lega Aid Inc., said the suit seeks a court order declaring the plan unconstitutional and an injunction keeping officials from conducting primary or general elections for House members under the district boundaries created in the plan.

A similar suit after the 1970 census was upheld by the Texas Supreme Court when a redistricting plan set up state representatives' districts that crossed 33 county lines.

Clayton said, however, the state was not under the federal Voting Rights Act in 1970 and federal statutes are involved now.

"I think it's going to be almost impossible not to cut across county lines," Clayton said, adding that the House plan for legislative redistricting is "pretty well substantiated" in terms of population balance.

Luna said there also were "problems along racial lines" but he did not specify what the problems were and said the suit "didn't speak to that."

Open meetings veto draws group protest

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Common Cause executive director Donna Mobley said Friday Gov. Bill Clements' veto of proposed changes in the Open Meetings Act contained distortions "that can only be explained as willful ignorance or intentional deception."

Clements said in his veto message Thursday that he vetoed the bill because it would "allow any person in the entire world" to sue for alleged violations of the 1973 law. He also said the bill would hurt "innocent" third parties who received contracts from governing bodies and provided no money for such bodies to pay costs of litigation.

"His proclamation reflects concern for those who break the Open Meetings law, but no concern for those who would enforce it," Ms. Mobley told a news conference.

Pampa High School Band -- A true source of Pride

You had to be proud of the "Pride" in Hawaii.

It was a hot, sunny day in Honolulu. The band members had walked a half mile to breakfast, returned to their hotel, donned their green woolen uniforms at 7:30 a.m. to prepare for the 4.3-mile march through the streets of Honolulu.

They boarded buses to take them to the parade's starting point, then stood in line till their number (No. 43) was up.

The Louisiana band looked sharp -- it appeared competition would be stiff for the Pride.

But there was no question.

In front of Iolani Palace, the former home of Queen Kapiolani, and across the street from the statue of King Kamehameha, the first sounds of the Pampa band were the "goose-imply" trumpet blasts of "Salute to the Olympians," originating a block away.

The crowds cheered, jumped to their feet, and began craning their heads towards the street to see what was coming.

The Pride of Pampa roared out the tune, marching crisply in straight lines, past the statue and palace, while the crowds applauded and one bystander yelled, "Long live Texas."

Threats or warnings from Kamehameha High School band members that half of the members of the "Pride" would fall out before the parade's end seemed only to make the Texas band more determined to march the whole route.

And they did -- despite heat stroke in one case and any number of other personal traumas as band members sweated beneath their uniforms.

It was a physically grueling march.

While the trip was fun, band members made sacrifices, not required of other Pampa travelers.

The schedule of events was tiring to adults accompanying band members on their trip, but for the youths, it was doubly strenuous. After the day's tours, while other Pampans took to the beaches or the shops, band members dutifully marched to their rooms, picked up their band instruments, and walked two Hawaiian blocks to Kapiolani Park for band practice the two days before the parade.

At the end of band practice, marching around a soccer field, they walked back to their hotels, to prepare for dinner, and another half-mile walk to the restaurant.

No swimming at Waikiki Beach, just across the street, was allowed -- till after the parade. Yes, we know firsthand, to protect the youths from the harsh rays of Hawaiian sun. But no one can deny the youngsters would have rather been swimming.

The strain faded, however, when the final award was announced.

Victory is sweet -- the cheers of 400 Pampans. "We're No. 1," flooded the park at the announcement that the outstanding unit of the parade was "Pampa High School Marching Band."

And, "Yes, Pampa High School is No. 1. They're the only ones who stayed till the end," the announcer said.

Throughout it all, the members of the Pampa High School band did stay till the end. Despite their desires to be swimming, despite their desires to be sleeping, despite their desires just to "goof off" a while, they stuck it out -- through not only the parade, but the long flights and a long bus ride home.

Pampa, you have a lot to be proud of in this band.

Not only are they good at what they do, but they have strength and substance, to stick it out when the going gets rough.

We extend our congratulations to each band member -- knowing the sacrifices they made and wishing them the best in life which is filled not only with its good times but its inequities, its difficulties, and its times when the going gets rough.

Not too different from the recent Hawaiian experience.

Totalitarian formula

The issue is well designed to provoke a sympathetic emotional response. Thousands (perhaps millions, the estimates vary) of babies in the Third World are suffering starvation and malnutrition as a result, so the story goes, of misuse of baby formula products.

Images of greedy multinational corporate villains are invoked for the delectation of the multitudes. The publicity wheels turn, the issues are obscured, and before long we have the World Health Organization developing a code for international marketing of infant formula.

Then the United States votes against the adoption of the code, almost alone in the world, and the rhetoric of heartlessness and lack of compassion sizzles. What is really going on?

It appears that the furor arose from a genuine problem. Baby food formula manufacturers, chiefly the Swiss-based conglomerate Nestle, faced with a declining birth rate in industrialized countries, have marketed their products aggressively in the Third World in recent years. Problems developed.

Dry products were often mixed with impure water.

Some mothers, having started with formula, ran out of money to buy more, and diluted the formula to levels that led to malnutrition.

Many mothers didn't own refrigerators.

Some mothers started with formula, found it unsatisfactory, but then found that their natural breast milk had dried up.

Doctors in the Third World began talking about an "epidemic" of "baby bottle disease."

Some of these problems were due more to illiteracy and ignorance than to any malice on the part of the formula manufacturers. Indeed it's difficult to credit the notion, though some seem to believe it, that these companies deliberately set out to kill or injure thousands of babies.

But it does appear that the aggressive marketing techniques were sometimes deceptive, and sometimes traded on ignorance and a desire to be up to date and "civilized." Apparently some companies dressed salespeople up like nurses, and offered free samples to hospitals in exchange for sales promotion. The unintended tragedies that ensued might, conceivably, reasonably have been prevented by more responsible marketing techniques.

The initial impulse of those concerned about the effects of baby bottle disease was to promote a boycott of Nestle products. This effort had some influence. Nestle and other companies, embarrassed by the bad publicity, agreed to cooperate in drawing up guidelines for advertising and promotion. Certain marketing practices were modified, though apparently not to everyone's satisfaction.

Then came the folks with the hidden agenda. The World Health Organization, eager to extend its own power in all countries, decided to draw up a code so encompassing in scope that former Sen. Sam Ervin, not a man given to hyperbole, was moved to call it "totalitarian."

Remember, now, the original problem involved infant formula. The WHO code doesn't confine itself to such a paltry matter, however. It regulates, among other things, all baby foods, including pureed meats, vegetables, and fruits; all milk products ranging from fresh whole milk to condensed or nonfat dry milk; strained fruit juices; cereals; teething cookies; breads; cheese; vitamins; and numerous prepared foods.

By ROBERT LEFEVRE

Among various arguments from students and from among those who on occasion write to protest something I've written, one particular type of observation has now become predictable. It surfaced again just the other day.

"How can you, an apparently reasonable man, suggest such a wild-eyed, far-out idea that somehow mankind can get along without government? Don't you know that government and politics are deeply inherent in human nature?"

It usually isn't difficult to persuade those who offer this objection that government is evil. Indeed, they sometimes take the initiative in suggesting it. Their conclusion can be summed up with this conversation-stopper: "Government is a necessary evil."

I am far from convinced that belief and support of government is mandated by our genes. I do not believe that anyone can prove or has proved that support of government is inherent. But let that go. We can at least arrive at one point of agreement. Government is evil. Indeed, my correspondent of just a few days ago was the mayor of a small city and he (who surely should know) volunteered the information that "government is a necessary evil." The phrase is common.

Over the years, I have had literally scores of people tell me how evil government is. An endless litany of complaint pours from those who have been wounded and abused in body, mind and purse, by the unthinking, arbitrary insolence and arrogance of officialdom both petty and grand.

Nor is my friend, the mayor, the only politician who concurs. I have had letters from senators, congressmen and various bureaucrats, all of whom admit that government is evil, too large, too obtrusive, etc., etc. They come from all political parties and from all sections of the country. Indeed, were one to seek a single common bond among Americans today it could well be found in the assertion: "Government is evil and injurious."

But I am particularly interested in the phrase "government is a necessary evil." Perhaps I am an idealist but I cannot believe that evil, any evil, is necessary. Oh, it may be common. It may be ingrained. Indeed, it may be taught to us from the cradle to the grave. But necessary?

Let's take a closer look. Let me assume for purposes of making the one point I seek to communicate that dependence on government in one form or another is an inherent trait. I admit it only for argument's sake; I do not believe it. It is certainly true that we have had governments on this planet ever since we developed economies capable of supporting a non-productive elite at the expense of others who toiled productively. Possible this remarkable longevity is developed in our efforts to collectivize mankind into cities, communes and cults. Be that as it may, the existence of government as well as the existence of the evil of government is superbly catalogued.

But let me ask if there are other, apparently inherent traits besides this one. Again, I remind you, I am not seeking to argue genetics. I merely seek evidence from what men do.

The answer is conspicuous. In addition to depending on government, men have an apparent propensity to murder, to lie and to steal. I deny that these traits are inherent. But I cannot deny that they are practiced. Murder, lying and stealing march across every page of human history along with man's turning to government.

Once more we find a common agreement. Murder is evil. So is lying. So is theft. If there is a genetic cause it is even more in evidence in these tendencies. And again, whenever we think of ourselves as becoming victims of the murderer, the liar or the thief, we protest in shouts of disapproval.

If turning to government is an inherent trait, so, too, are murder, lying and theft. But here's the difference. I can find no one who tells me that murder, lying and theft are necessary evils.

Perhaps we can never eliminate murder, lying or theft. And perhaps government will continue to exist, too. But must we give up, shrug and then endorse these things? Human beings are obviously capable of performing evil actions. They are also capable of performing benevolent, kindly and, even noble actions. And most assuredly they are capable of consistency if they care to follow that route.

That is my point. It seems to me that all men of good will who wish the best for members of our species will stand together in abhorrence against all human actions that are abhorrent. And they do, in general, except when it comes to government. Man's attitude regarding government displays ambivalence. He complains bitterly under its commands and incursions but at the same time says: "We've got to have it. We've always had it. We always will have it. It's a necessary evil."

There are clearly two ways to go, if we care to be consistent. We could begin saying: "Murder, lying and stealing are necessary evils. We deplore them but we've got to have them; we've always had them and we always will have them."

Or we could say government and dependency on it are evil and therefore we join with all mankind in expressing our abhorrence of it. And in process abandon the concept of "necessary."

I profoundly doubt that by any technique or combination of techniques, we will ever eliminate murder, lying or theft. Indeed, I would hold that of all these evils, ridding ourselves of government is the only so-called "inherent trait" that we have any chance whatever of dealing with successfully. Perhaps I am unduly pessimistic here. But permit me my gloom.

I would think that you and I would express shock and consternation if we were accosted by anyone who proclaimed: "Murder, lying and theft, while admittedly evil, are necessary." Why aren't we equally shocked when someone says "government is admittedly evil but we must have it?"

To be truthful and speaking only for myself, I am. I find it astonishing and disheartening that persons of supposed good will, who obviously have some brains, and who are in terms of our current milieu viewed as successful, number themselves among those who favor something that is nearly universally recognized as evil.

Government as 'necessary evil'

Nowhere in the annals of history is there a greater struggle of wits than in MAN versus FISH -- except, perhaps, in MAN versus MAN

So you want to be a corporate president?

By D.R. SEGAL

When I just took this job I was new at presiding, and the people I worked with weren't very experienced at handling the breed so we sort of learned together. My first day on the job consisted of drawing my supplies. One of the ladies in the office felt I needed: a) a couple of pens, one of which didn't work, b) a bottle of white gunk which turned out to be something called "Liquid Paper" -- not for internal consumption, c) a box of paper clips, d) a stapler, e) a "Glu-Stic" -- safe for children, f) two (2) tubes labelled "Fluorescent Stabilo Boss" which I got all over my new presidential suit and g) a badge with my picture on it, which I lost the next week and they wouldn't let me in the building on Saturday.

That was more than two years ago and I've just now got around to using the Liquid Paper -- not for internal consumption. It makes a big glob of white over the wrong letter you've typed and looks pretty terrible. It soaks through newspaper something awful. I used the Fluorescent Stabilo Boss, which is greenish-yellow paint you brush on printed passages you want to stand out. I must have put on too much because I couldn't read the print. I think I'll give the Glu-Stic to the poor.

I read the other day that they pay J.R. Fluor $996,711 per year in cash and kind but I don't think he has my fine array of supplies in his desk. I can't see him getting Fluorescent Stabilo Boss on his chairman's suit or looking all the hell over his middle drawer for paper clips that have escaped from the box. He probably has somebody who does that for him. I have had very good cooperation from secretaries, through the years, because they catch on quick that I am a disaster around complicated machines like staplers and ballpoint pens. My secretary in North Carolina knew I couldn't change a typewriter ribbon so she always arranged to have somebody do it for me when I wasn't looking. I used her stapler for a long time because mine ran out and I didn't know how to put more in. I am pretty good with Scotch tape, except when it gets stuck to itself and I can't find the end. Donald P. Kelley, president of Esmark, makes $1,970,338 but I don't know how he is with staplers and typewriter ribbons. He's likely smart enough to change his own ribbon and keep the stapler filled. I am not exactly sure what an Esmark is, but they must make a lot of them to be able to pay their president $1,970,338 a year. Surely he isn't the sort who'd have loose paper clips and thumb tacks rattling around in his desk drawer the way I do. I guess one reason presidents are paid a lot of money is because we have so many things to take care of, like remembering it's okay to chew on the Glu-Stic but don't drink the Liquid Paper. It's a real drag.

Back to Bribery

The White House has proposed a serious relaxation in the 1977 Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, which was intended to prevent American companies from bribing foreign officials.

The administration maintains that the United States is losing too much business to competitors because we can't grease the palms of some of our best customers.

If congress goes along with it, American executives are going to have to do a complete switch, as most of them had given strict orders not to offer bribes for contracts abroad. The truth of the matter is, U.S. company sales reps are out of practice.

A friend of mine from a multinational confessed this to me the other day. "I was pretty good at bribing politicians abroad in my time," he told me. "But I think I've lost my touch."

"It will come back," I assured him. "It's like a foreign language. All you need is a little practice."

"That's why I came over tonight," he said. "I was hoping you would help me brush up."

"Sure," I told him. "Why don't you play yourself and I'll play the brother-in-law of the president of a country where you're trying to get a big order."

"That would be great. Let's pretend that we're having dinner at the brother-in-law's palace."

"You're on."

"Your Excellency, thank you for your wonderful hospitality. I have never had such a sumptuous banquet in my life."

"It is my pleasure, Mr. Doppel. Tell me, what brings you to Enchilada?"

"My company is interested in arranging a contract for the sale of puppy formula. We believe this could make a great health contribution to Enchilada, as it would save your dogs from breast-feeding their young."

"Everyone has been offering us puppy formula. What are your terms?"

"A five-year, low-interest, financed contract in which you would guarantee to buy $10 million of formula at world market prices."

"That's very interesting. My brother-in-law would like that. But what about his wife's foundation for the widows and orphans of Enchilada?"

"We would be happy to make a contribution."

"Good. The money is to be deposited in Switzerland."

"Why Switzerland?"

"That is where the foundation has its headquarters."

"No problem. Then it's a deal?"

"Not yet. I'm sure your country is interested in the welfare of our people. I am the president of Enchilada United Way, and we are in the middle of our fund drive."

"Of course. Our company always gives to the United Way."

"Here is the numbered bank account of the Enchilada United Way in Liechtenstein. Just have your bank wire my cousin's bank in Miami. He is treasurer of the fund."

"Our bank will attend to it. Can we sign a letter of agreement now?"

"I'm not in the position to sign such a letter. That has to be done by my uncle, who is minister of commerce. I will write a note to him, but I warn you he's a tough man to deal with. He only accepts diamonds."

"We'll find diamonds. Anyone else on the list I should know about?"

"If you could find it in your heart to spare a few dollars for Army Chief General Valdez's Veterans Hospital, he would be eternally grateful."

"Of course. Where is the hospital?"

"It hasn't been built yet. But he'll be happy to show you the plans."

"If my company has anything to say about it, he shall have his hospital."

"You've done great," I told Doppel.

"You're going to make a great comeback in the international bribery business."

"Whew," he said, relieved, "for a while I thought I had lost my fast ball."

"Am I to assume, then, that you do not agree with my decision and you are doing a Billy Martin?"

Nancy says, as a father, Reagan is 'soft touch'

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twelve weeks after a man tried to kill her husband, Nancy Reagan rejoices in "just having him here. You're grateful for every day. You can't go through something like that without having it change you."

But Father's Day brings gentle memories, too. Like the long drives when Ronald Wilson Reagan would amuse the kids with stories about his life as a horse, or a poodle. Or when he would employ a dad's special magic to relate the conversations buzzing through the roadside telephone lines.

AS A FATHER, THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES IS ONE SOFT TOUCH, the first lady says. By her account, the younger Reagans have always found him generous with his time and money, and especially quick to spoil them with presents.

Her own philosophy of child-rearing: "Discipline laced with love."

In Mrs. Reagan's view, the president relates easily to his children: "He's always willing to take time to talk with them, to answer their questions, to explain his position. Our children don't always agree with him on everything political, but he'll spend however long they need discussing things. He never puts them off or gives them short shrift."

WHEN THEY WERE SMALL, SHE RECALLED, HE USED TO PLAY A GAME called Submarine. He'd get in the family swimming pool and all the kids would climb on his back, and they'd dive under water together. A former lifeguard, he taught them to dive — from his shoulders.

And he played a game we called 'Beaver,' said Mrs. Reagan. "Whenever someone would see an out-of-state license plate, the person who saw it would yell out, 'Beaver.' Ronnie was very competitive about this. We all were."

In an interview with The Associated Press, Mrs. Reagan revealed her feelings about her own father, Kenneth Robbins. He and her mother separated shortly after her birth, she said. She doesn't think about him on Father's Day because "I never knew him or considered him to be my father."

Much of her own childhood, she said, was spent living with an aunt and uncle because her mother, an actress, traveled frequently. She only visited her father occasionally.

"I was a little hurt that he wasn't around," she said. "I asked my mother questions. She always tried to be fair and not talk about my father to me. His mother, my grandmother, told me more. I never said anything about him when he was alive. It would have hurt him. But I'm sure he felt badly about it all."

SHE TALKED, AS WELL, ABOUT THE PRESIDENT'S HANDLING OF ONE SON who embarrassed the administration with some business dealings and two daughters whose political views often are at odds with their father's.

Mrs. Reagan said that after Michael, 36, wrote a letter to a military base mentioning his father and soliciting business. "Ronnie told Michael he had made a mistake. I told him he had made a mistake. I don't think (Michael) had thought it through. It's taken (the children) awhile to realize that everything they do now is magnified. That takes adjusting to."

MRS. REAGAN WAS ASKED HOW THE PRESIDENT REACTED LAST WEEK WHEN DAUGHTER MAUREEN, 40, took a business trip to Taiwan at the same time Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. was in Peking and when Patti, 28, disagreed publicly with her father by holding a news conference to oppose nuclear energy.

"He's told them that people will try to use them and to be careful of that," Mrs. Reagan said. "It's never entered their minds. For children, it takes a while to realize how much of a spotlight they're in. It's unfair for kids and difficult for them to make their own way."

And slowly, haltingly, Mrs. Reagan described her emotions the day her husband was shot:

"Ronnie was on the stretcher and they were wheeling him to the operating room and we got to the door. I guess I was going right in with him, but someone grasped me gently and said, 'You can't go in.' I kept thinking, 'I have to be strong. I must hold on. I can't let him see me cry.'"

MRS. REAGAN SAID THE MARCH 30 SHOOTING HAS CHANGED THEIR OUTLOOK ON LIFE: "You can't go through an experience like that without changing your priorities. You don't get as upset about things that in the long run aren't that important."

This Father's Day, Mrs. Reagan said, she is grateful "just having him here. You're grateful for every day. You can't go through something like that without having it change you."

"I think it was a miracle that no one was killed. As Cardinal (Terence) Cooke said, 'God was sitting on his shoulder.' Both of us believe God has a plan for each of us. And he must have other plans for (my husband.) That is what Ronnie feels strongly."

She and the president planned to spend Father's Day with their son, Ron, and his wife at Camp David, the presidential retreat in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains.

"Ronnie is a sentimental man with his family," she said. "He's touched if they show their affection and respect for him."

MRS. REAGAN EXPRESSED EXASPERATION WITH THOSE WHO SAY THE REAGANS LIVE AN expensive lifestyle at a time when her husband is asking many Americans to make financial sacrifices.

"It's not expensive," Mrs. Reagan said. "You economize like everyone else. You don't buy as much as before. I don't buy as many clothes. I never bought as many clothes as people said I did. For (British Prime Minister) Margaret Thatcher's state dinner, I wore a dress that is 17 years old."

Mrs. Reagan said she was annoyed, too, over criticism the administration received when oil executives contributed almost $300,000 to her White House redecorating project shortly after the president decontrolled the price of oil.

"It was unfair to the thousands of people who sent in $5, $25 and $2," Mrs. Reagan said. "Nobody gives them credit. I feel badly for them." (White House records released in March show 240 donors contributed to the redecorating project and that the average donation was $3,427.)

"I've been reading a little about the history of the White House," Mrs. Reagan said, "and I gather any time anyone tries to do something there is a certain amount of criticism."

MRS. REAGAN, WHO WILL BE 58 NEXT MONTH, WAS SITTING IN A SMALL GROVE OF MAGNOLIA TREES in a secluded corner of the White House gardens. She wore a soft white dress with black polka dots. Big pots of red and pink geraniums banked the flagstone terrace. A waiter in black tie served iced tea.

Though she is an experienced political wife, Mrs. Reagan responds stiffly to reporters' questions. In public, she is not at ease. But in casual conversation, after the microphones are turned off, she laughs spontaneously and tells amusing stories about the family.

"We'd take these long drives to the ranch on weekends and Ronnie would tell the kids he could hear what was going through the telephone wires and he'd make up these imaginary conversations, and they'd be fascinated," Mrs. Reagan recalled.

Mrs. Reagan said also that during these drives, her husband would entertain the children by making up stories about his previous lives.

"He'd tell them stories by the hour," she said. "Once he was a poodle and he told them all about that life, and once he was a horse."

MRS. REAGAN SAID THAT HER OWN MOTHER'S FREQUENT ABSENCES PROBABLY AFFECTED THE TIME she spent with her own children when they were younger: "I had a carpool and was on the school board. I ran the hotdog stand at the school fair. My own mother worked until she remarried."

Young Nancy was seven when her mother married Loyal Davis, a prominent Illinois neurosurgeon who later adopted Nancy and whom she considers to be her father.

As a child of divorced parents and married to a divorced man, Nancy Reagan said she and Reagan have always tried to include the children in their activities and that she has tried to treat his children as her own.

"You always try to spend as much time with them as you can," she said. "Part of our courtship was spent with them. They knew me pretty well when we were married. You try to be friends with them, treat them as your own children with discipline laced with love."

Real test in spending cuts lies ahead.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Much more than an earlier budget fight, the coming showdown over billions of dollars in spending cuts will demonstrate whether President Reagan has a dependable coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats to pass his program of spending and tax cuts in the House. As Republican Leader Bob Michel of Illinois is fond of saying, the earlier vote was easy — a contest over a budget outline with non-binding numbers that did not directly affect a single program.

And as Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas, the conservative Democrat most closely associated with the administration's economic program, is fond of saying, this time "we're shooting with real bullets."

Sixty-three Democrats and all 190 Republicans teamed up to give Reagan his largely symbolic early victory. Michel and Gramm concede it will be very difficult to hold to anything like that number this time.

At issue is a package of spending cuts that sharply restrain the growth of federal spending over the next three years. Majority Democrats, working through the committees of the House, have produced a package that will cut more than $37 billion.

Washington's teeth are missing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Though describing them as "terrible looking things," the Smithsonian Institution says the theft of one of four sets of George Washington's false teeth is "a very grievous and painful loss for us."

"We are needless to say, deeply distressed and deeply humiliated," the Smithsonian said Friday.

Spokesman Lawrence Taylor said the missing teeth, made in 1795, were kept in a "controlled access" room at the Institution's National Museum of American History. It was not immediately known when the teeth were taken.

"I realize there's going to be some sort of snickering — 'Ha, ha, George Washington's teeth,'" Taylor said. "The worst thing that can happen is to lose an item of great historical importance."

He said the missing teeth are "terrible looking things. They don't look like teeth at all, they're just a series of ivory blocks, all carved to essentially the same size."

Pope's fever causes return to hospital

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II, looking thin and pale, unexpectedly returned to the hospital Saturday and began undergoing tests to determine the cause of a persistent fever that has slowed his recovery from last month's assassination attempt, the Vatican said.

Dr. Emilio Tresalti, chief medical officer at the Gemelli Hospital, told reporters the 61-year-old pope's life was not in danger, but refused to characterize his condition.

He said the fever may come from an infection, but it was not certain. He refused to say how high the fever was.

The pope rode to the hospital in his limousine. He stood up in the back seat, blessed and waved to a group of well-wishers and journalists, and walked into the hospital wearing his white robes.

Doctors began a full body scan on the pope shortly after he entered the hospital around 5 p.m., said Dr. Francesco Crucitti, one of the pope's physicians.

In the "axial-tomography" test, also known as a tac test, doctors move a machine down the body from the neck to the feet. The machine produces electronic color pictures of cross sections of the body that would reveal any irregularities.

"We can't say anything until we make the tests," said Dr. Corrado Manni, another attending physician.

There was no official word on when the next medical bulletin would be issued, but Vatican sources said it would be Sunday.

When the pope left the hospital June 3 after three weeks of treatment for gunshot wounds, there was some speculation that he was released against the wishes of his doctors who feared he would resume his hectic pace too soon. His doctors denied those reports.

"In the last few days the pope has had a persistent fever that has altered the regular post-operative course, making his recovery slower and less satisfactory," the Vatican said in a press release. "This has led his doctors to propose certain diagnostic tests to be carried out in the hospital."

The Vatican chief spokesman, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, said the pope's condition "raises the normal concern for a person who is under medical care to ascertain the cause of a fever."

The pope needs another operation to reverse the intestinal bypass performed during emergency surgery after he was shot. No date has been set for that operation, but Vatican sources had said Monday it would be performed in the first part of July.

Panciroli said the pope would stay in the same suite where he recovered from the attempt on his life and will not be in the intensive care unit.

IRA claims shooting of second policeman

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Two teen-age gunmen wearing motorcycle helmets walked into a pub near the Irish Republic border Saturday and fired nine shots into an off-duty policeman, killing him instantly, police said.

The Irish Republican Army's military wing issued a statement claiming responsibility for the death of the officer, 53-year-old Neal Quinn.

Quinn, a Roman Catholic, was the second policeman reported killed in this British province in four days. A 25-year-old Protestant reservist was shot to death Wednesday night as he drove home from work in the village of Carrickmore.

Police said Quinn, who would have completed 30 years of service Sunday, was killed at Bridge Bar in Newry, a mainly Catholic city in County Down, about five miles from the Irish border. Detectives said two armed men wearing leather jackets and blue crash helmets entered the pub about noon and opened fire at Quinn, who was out of uniform. The assailants were thought to have fled on motorcycles.

Quinn's death brought to 2,122 the number of people killed in 12 years of sectarian violence in Northern Ireland, where Protestants outnumber Roman Catholics by a 2-to-1 ratio.

Militant Catholics led by the IRA are fighting to end British rule in Northern Ireland and reunite it with the independent Irish Republic, where Catholics are in the majority.

Hunger strike ends, Polish protest builds

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Political activists vowed a nationwide protest to carry on the cause of three hunger-strikers who ended their fast Saturday, and the Kremlin accused Poland's Communist Party of being unable to handle the crisis.

The Committee for the Defense of Prisoners of Conscience said it would protest "incessantly" on an "all-Poland scale" until two convicted bombers are released from prison. The Catholic Church here also vowed to work on behalf of getting the prisoners released.

The committee said pickets will march outside provincial courthouses next week and a demonstration will be held in Poznan, where a monument to Poles killed in 1956 food riots was to be unveiled.

Sign-carrying protesters also will demonstrate June 29 at the next meeting of the Council of State, which has the power to reprieve prisoners, and members of Parliament will be asked to give an accounting of why the bombers, two brothers, have not been pardoned, the committee announced.

The new Kremlin salvo was fired from Moscow by Leonid Zamyatin, a member of the Soviet's Communist Party Central Committee, which has expressed increasing alarm over 10 months of unrest in Poland sparked by Solidarity.

Prisoners set free to avoid overcrowding

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The state Department of Corrections has until August to free at least 280 prisoners if it is to avoid a second round of early paroles under a state law designed to ease prison overcrowding.

Corrections officials are rushing to free at least 700 inmates under the Prison Overcrowding Emergency Powers Act. The law, passed last year, advances parole by 90 days for all eligible prisoners whenever the state's prison population exceeds capacity for 30 consecutive days.

The act triggered the early release of some eligible prisoners in May, giving the corrections department 90 days to bring prison population down to 95 percent of capacity. If that goal is not reached by August, the sentences of prisoners eligible for parole must be cut by an additional 90 days.

"We hope to get a minimum of 700 out," said William Kime, deputy director of the department. "If we don't, the act will trigger again in August."

So far, 421 inmates have been paroled because of the shortened sentences. However, the population in the state's 12 prisons and 11 prison camps has only been cut from 13,022 to 12,769 because of newly arriving inmates.

To meet the 95 percent requirement, the population would have to be cut to about 12,200.

"Most (early releases under the law) have come from corrections centers (half-way houses)," Kime said. "It will take a little time to filter down to the institutions."

Kime estimated that a handful of the 421 convicts released early are already back in prison because of new crimes or parole violations.

"Out of every 100 people paroled," he said, "you might have five or six back in prison in six months."

The shortened sentences will relieve overcrowding, but not to the extent hoped, because of prison riots last month, said Tom Patten, administrative assistant in the Department of Corrections. About 300 inmates lost their beds at the State Prison of Southern Michigan in Jackson when modular housing units were destroyed during the second of two riots last month.

Contractors, meanwhile, are rushing to finish a new $25 million maximum security prison in Ypsilanti. Corrections officials hope to see the 400-man prison open by Aug. 1.

Atlanta lawyer argues for order against press

ATLANTA (AP) — A lawyer said Saturday that news coverage linking her client to the slayings of some young blacks is so intense she hopes it will spur a judge to break new legal ground by issuing a court order against the press.

"I think the judge understands what we are arguing," lawyer Mary Welcome said. "Why should he have to endure all this publicity and then have to fight to get a conviction overturned?"

In the suit filed June 12, the man, who has not been charged or officially named, seeks a temporary restraining order banning the news media from using his name, address, pictures of him or of his home or other means of identifying him.

He also asks that the press be barred from publishing information regarding the "quality, quantity, sufficiency or insufficiency" of evidence gathered by authorities investigating the slayings of 28 young blacks since July 1979.

In a hearing Friday, Ms. Welcome cited a battery of cases in which defendants were the targets of sensational pretrial publicity.

She cited the case of Dr. Sam Sheppard, an Ohio doctor convicted in 1954 of killing his pregnant wife after a "carnival-like" trial preceded by tremendous publicity. Sheppard had to wait 12 years to see the jury's decision overturned by the Supreme Court, Ms. Welcome argued. "Why should we have to wait that long?" she asked.

News media lawyers counter Ms. Welcome has no basis to cite such a case because her client, a 23-year-old free-lance cameraman, has not been arrested or charged in connection with any slayings.

They also claim that her client's suit, which seeks a temporary restraining order banning 17 news media organizations from linking the man to the slayings, amounts to a request for a gag order.

Rabies increase

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Health Department said Friday animal rabies cases rose by 72 in May to bring the year's total to 371.

Animal rabies was reported in 49 counties, the department said, with Fort Bend County the leader with six confirmed cases.

Haig raises possibility of aid to Vietnam

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. raised the possibility of aid to Vietnam Saturday if the Vietnamese attend a U.N. conference on Cambodia in New York next month.

He suggested that if Vietnam withdraws its 200,000 troops from Cambodia, one of the aims of the July 13 conference, the United States might support international economic assistance to the Vietnamese government.

Haig also said that while the Reagan administration has cleared the way for selling weapons to China, China may not want any arms.

On another topic, Haig pledged the U.S. "will maintain and strengthen" its military capability in the Pacific region to confront a Soviet military buildup.

In Moscow, the official Soviet news agency Tass said that China "armed to the teeth with U.S.-made weapons will pose a threat to neighboring countries."

It said Haig "trails a cloud of poisonous militarist frenzy" during his current tour of Asia, and accused China and the U.S. of

"teaming up" to support various counter-revolutionary forces fighting "legitimate governments" in Cambodia and Afghanistan.

Haig made his remarks in a speech and a news conference here held in connection with a meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, a regional grouping including Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore, and Thailand.

Vietnam has already said it will not attend the New York conference on Cambodia but the Reagan administration and ASEAN are clearly using a carrot-and-stick approach to try to attract Vietnam to the conference table.

Haig said in his speech that the U.S. will not recognize Vietnam and it will oppose economic assistance to Vietnam as long as its troops are in Cambodia.

"We will continue to question seriously any economic assistance to Vietnam — whatever the source — so long as Vietnam continues to squander its scarce resources for aggressive purposes," he said.

Implicit in his statement was the suggestion that if Vietnam does withdraw from Cambodia, the U.S. might support economic aid for Vietnam by such international institutions as the World Bank or U.N. agencies, funded largely by U.S. dollars.

"Only Vietnam can end its isolation," Haig said, "and attendance at the international conference could signal Hanoi's interest to do so."

Haig said he will attend the conference, which 62 nations reportedly have decided to attend.

Socialists favored in French elections

PARIS (AP) — President Francois Mitterrand, whose victory May 10 gave France its first leftist head of state in 23 years, is likely to consolidate his power Sunday with a Socialist victory in parliamentary elections, according to independent opinion polls.

Nationwide surveys predict the Socialists will win more than half the 491 seats in the National Assembly in runoff elections Sunday, giving Mitterrand the power to institute his radical reform program.

But a coalition of conservatives led by Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac could reverse the trend by attracting votes from some of the 30 percent of the electorate — more than twice the usual number — who abstained from voting in the first round of balloting June 14.

There is no precedent in France for a president and legislature of opposing parties.

If the Socialists capture a majority, Mitterrand is expected to retain his almost entirely Socialist Cabinet headed by Premier Pierre Mauroy, and to push ahead with reforms including political decentralization, increased social benefits and stricter taxation of corporations and wealthy citizens.

Begin pulls ahead in Israeli political polls

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — With Menachem Begin pulling ahead of Shimon Peres in the polls, the Israeli premiership may end up going to the one who scrambles hardest for the support of the splinter parties competing in the June 30 election.

At least six obscure factions stand to gain enough of the 120 seats in parliament to give them muscle in the arduous coalition-building process likely to follow.

Every one will count if the polls are right and Begin's Likud Bloc as well as Peres' Labor Party both win 40-odd seats.

No party has ever won a majority in the Knesset, or parliament, and shaky coalition governments are a fact of Israeli life.

But never has the Israeli electorate been so skittish or the outcome of an election so in doubt as this year.

Political analysts who just six months predicted a thumping victory for Peres are now beginning to paint a scenario in which neither Likud nor Labor will be able to form a coalition that can deal with such complex issues as the Palestinian question and the triple-digit inflation rate.

If no government can be formed in the 42 days officially allotted by the president to the premier-designate, another election will have to be held before the year is out.

Likud is promising to with Egypt and maintain its expand Jewish presence in the West Bank of the Jordan, strengthen the peace treaty polices, laissez-faire economic

Clements more satisfied with legislature

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements was better satisfied with the work of the 67th Legislature than he was with the 1979 session — according to his vetoes.

Clements announced vetoes of 27 bills Thursday, including the state Senate redistricting bill and $24.9 million out of the 1982-83 state spending bill. Another bill vetoed earlier gave him a total of 28.

During and after the 1979 session he vetoed 51 bills, including one that became law anyway because he was overridden by two-thirds of the House and Senate.

"I am disappointed that the Legislature once again has continued to spend all available revenue dollars in sight and did not provide significant tax relief which I had hoped for," Clements told a news conference Thursday.

He added there were still other programs in the general appropriations bill he would reduce if he had the authority.

Under Texas' constitution a governor can veto only separate specific items in the appropriations bill and may not make reductions.

The Republican governor's veto of the senatorial redistricting bill sent it to the Legislative Redistricting Board made up of the lieutenant governor, House speaker, comptroller, land commissioner and attorney general — all Democrats.

Clements said the Senate redistricting plan was a "subterfuge to keep incumbents in office."

Staff work on a new proposal will come at the same time the state's 181 legislators are preparing for the 30-day special session Clements has scheduled for July 13.

Top priority in the special session will go to congressional redistricting, which was not settled by the recent regular session.

Clements also told a Thursday news conference there was a possibility of a second special session later this year when the federal government makes its block grants to Texas, instead of specific grants to local governments and agencies.

Texas vote Nov. 3 on a proposed constitutional change that would create a state finance management committee consisting of the governor, lieutenant governor, House speaker and chairmen of the House and Senate committees on taxes and appropriations. Clements said earlier this committee could handle administration and distribution of federal block grants.

"If the amendment is passed by voters, it hopefully will give us a management tool to avoid calling a special session for this purpose."

Clements said Thursday. "But I'm not sure it will work. We just hope it will."

Clements chopped off $1.72 million appropriated for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in the event the funds are not received from federal sources.

"The state should not adopt a general policy of replacing shortfalls in federal funds with state general revenue. This rider would set such a precedent," he said.

Another veto knocked off $1.26 million for new mobile training programs at the Amarillo, Harlingen, Sweetwater and Waco units of the Texas State Technical Institute.

"The institute should continue to concentrate on its central mission and should not be involved in extension work," he said. "Our 47 community colleges and the (Texas A&M) Engineering Extension Service provide a broad, in-place extension network that would be duplicated by these."

The governor erased $400,000 for the Family Farm and Ranch program because he said the Texas Department of Agriculture could not make any loans until Sept. 1, 1983.

He marked off $5.4 million for state agencies that license professionals because he said the agencies already have a right to exceed their budgets by 30 percent.

Clements vetoed new construction totaling $7.1 million for Texas Mental Health and Mental Retardation units at Abilene, Denton and Vernon, saying they were of "lower priority" than other humanization projects.

Among his vetoes of single bills, Clements said: — A bill to shift payment of court-appointed attorneys in capital cases from local governments to the state was at odds with "historical practice."

— A bill to allow motorists a five-day grace period in getting annual vehicle stickers would result in law officers ignoring enforcement the first five days of each month.

— He thought the Texas Open Meetings Act was working well now and saw no need for major changes as proposed in a bill. "It would absolutely encourage litigation, adding to our overcrowded court dockets and unnecessarily hamstringing governmental bodies all over this state," he said.

— The real problem with a bill against ticket scalping was that it prohibited resale of tickets to professional events within 1,000 yards of the parking lot, while there was no similar prohibition for college athletic events.

— He opposed giving regulation of gasoline production in Texas to the Texas Railroad Commission because "it is an agricultural by-product and properly involves the Alcoholic Beverage Commission and the Agriculture Department."

Youngsters learn to perform stunts

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — When Mark Tovsen passes his sister in their hallway at home, he usually punches her in the stomach.

But it's quite all right with Lynn. She can take any punch her 220-pound brother can throw.

Mark, 16, and Lynn, 14, like to fight; rather, they like to act as if they're fighting.

The teen-agers are members of the Explorer Scouts, Post 399, a group associated with the stunt men at Old Tucson. They learn the fundamentals of staging fights and performing such daring maneuvers as falling off a roof or rolling down a staircase.

Falling off a roof isn't as hard as it seems, Mark admitted hesitantly, almost as if he didn't want to give away his secret. "The trick is to land first on our hands and toes, then elbows and knees, then go into a roll," he said.

"And keep rolling. You learn real fast how to do it," Lynn added.

Unfortunately, sometimes a stunt actor learns the hard way. During an "arm flip" a few months ago, Mark missed his chance to roll and landed on his head.

Bentsen disturbed about drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost twice as much cocaine and four times as much amphetamines were made and used in Texas last year, a disturbed Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says.

And only hours after he called reporters into his office to give them the latest statistics on the rising drug usage, he and other Senate Democrats met behind closed doors last week and passed "without a dissenting vote" an anti-drugs package.

They called the runaway drug problem the nation's No. 1 domestic problem and called on establishment of a new cabinet position strictly to coordinate an intensified battle against drugs.

The proposed legislation includes a mandate that the CIA and other governmental bodies cooperate in passing along drug information and surveillance reports.

Bentsen had reported that cocaine usage in Texas leaped from 490 pounds in 1979 to 800 pounds in 1980 and that methamphetamine, known among drug users as "speed," quadrupled from 200 million dosage units to 800 million units.

"It's a very disturbing report. We're losing the fight against drugs," Bentsen said, relaying the DEA's estimate that the retail value of drugs illegally manufactured and used in Texas increased from about $640 million in 1979 to more than $1 billion in 1980, a jump of 63 percent.

On the brighter side, the illegal manufacture and use of heroin and PCP (angel dust) declined from 1979 to 1980. Bentsen said heroin usage in the state dropped from 406 pounds in 1979 to 140 pounds in 1980 and marijuana use dropped from 1.5 million pounds to 1.25 million pounds.

The manufacture of angel dust dropped from 200,000 units in 1979 to 150,000 last year, and Bentsen attributed part of the loss to President Carter's signing into law in 1978 of legislation by the Texas Democrat that made it harder to obtain piperidine, one of the key ingredients.

"But I won't be completely happy until we completely eliminate this drug, which can literally drive people crazy," Bentsen said.

"In light of these disturbing and disheartening statistics, I will be redoubling my efforts to gain passage of ... legislation needed in the war against drugs. It is obvious that more must be done than has been done to this point," Bentsen said.

Foot-and-mouth disease vaccine developed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists say they have produced a safe, effective vaccine to protect cattle and other livestock from some strains of foot-and-mouth disease, one of the most serious and widespread diseases of animals.

The Agriculture Department called it "a breakthrough in genetic engineering" and said "production of commercial quantities of the vaccine are feasible" as a result.

"We believe this to be the first production through gene splicing of an effective vaccine against any disease in animals or humans," Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said Thursday in a statement announcing the development.

"Animal tests carried out over an eight-week period ending today show that the vaccine works. This breakthrough can mean annual savings of billions of dollars and an increase in the world's supply of meat."

Block added that the vaccine is safe because "only a segment of the virus is used" to produce it and thus cannot produce the disease itself in a vaccinated animal.

Also, the vaccine can be stored for long periods of time without refrigeration, which will be important in many primitive areas where foot-and-mouth prevails.

Block made the announcement in California and copies of his statement also were released here by his office.

The vaccine's development, which involved the cloning of genetic material — referred to as "recombinant DNA technology" — was carried out in a cooperative project between the Agriculture Department's Science and Education Administration and Genentech Inc., a research firm based in San Francisco.

There has been no outbreak of foot-and-mouth in the United States since 1929 and strict import regulations prevent entry of animals and fresh meat from countries where it does exist, officials said.

But it occurs, sometimes with alarming results, throughout much of the world, including most of Europe, Africa and South America.

North America, Australia and New Zealand are among the few major livestock areas free of the disease. It is not considered a hazard to humans.

A major benefit of the new vaccine is that if FMD — as the disease is known — breaks out again, exposed livestock can be vaccinated and saved. Until now, all exposed animals were destroyed.

Department officials said the cooperative research agreement "involved no exchange of money."

In agriculture

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent

We see a lot of range land in poor condition as we travel around over the area. Where a lot of winter annual grasses (such as little barley) have invaded range land, the natural turf has about disappeared. It is difficult to say with certainty whether poor range conditions allowed the winter grasses to invade or whether the winter grasses used up all of the soil moisture in the spring time and left none for the warm season grasses.

The main thing that ranchers need to watch for now is that they stock pastures light enough so that our native range grasses can recover from the extreme harsh growing conditions of last year. We are in desperate need of some summer rains for our good warm season grasses to make good growth.

MARKET AND OUTLOOK INFORMATION A PHONE CALL AWAY

With a quick phone call, any producer in Gray County can get the latest information on a variety of agricultural commodities.

The information is available through "TOMI" (Telephone Outlook and Market Information), a system built around recorded telephone messages that are changed periodically to provide up-to-date information.

The recorded messages are prepared by Extension Service economists, using the latest available information.

The number to dial is 713-845-6437. Market and outlook information is available seven days a week, 24 hours a day.

The schedule of information available through TOMI is announced about two weeks before the beginning of each month and is available from the county Extension office.

So, to keep abreast of the latest happenings in various commodity markets as well as short- and long-range outlooks for these commodities, give TOMI a call.

WINNING THE WAR AGAINST FLEAS

Fleas seem to be making it big in Texas. Over the last five to seven years, fleas seem to have become more and more of a problem, particularly in urban and suburban areas.

Cat fleas which infest dogs or cats and readily attack humans are the most common.

Flea bites are extremely annoying and generally become increasingly sore and irritated over a period of a week or more. Fleas most often bite people about the legs and ankles.

A small red spot with a light colored center appears where the mouthparts of the adult flea enters the skin. Applying cooling preparations such as carbolated vaseline, menthol, camphor, calamine lotion or ice will help relieve itching. Severe allergic reactions or infections should be treated promptly by a physician.

Although fleas can transmit bubonic plague and murine typhus, these diseases are rare.

How do you control these irritating pests? Flea control must include treatment of the pets and thorough treatment of the entire premises — indoors and outdoors. These three areas should be treated simultaneously to break the "flea cycle" and get effective control.

Insecticides containing carbaryl (Sevin), dichlorvos (DDVP), pyrethrin, rotenone, malathion, methoxychlor or propoxur (Baygon or Sendran) are labeled for use on animals. Dusts or powders are generally preferred over sprays for treating pets and should be used at three to four-day intervals when infestations are heavy.

Rub the dust into the animal's fur by hand. Be especially thorough around ears, between legs and around the tail. Try to avoid getting dust in the eyes, mouth and nostrils. Flea collars which contain propoxur appear to be superior to those which only contain dichlorvos. Be sure to read the label before using any of these products and consult a veterinarian if questions arise.

Spray all infested outdoor areas such as the yard, porches, garages and outbuildings with chlorpyrifos (Dursban), diazinon, propoxur or carbaryl. Be sure to treat areas used by pets, and let the spray dry before pets or children are allowed to use treated areas. Repeat the spray at two-week intervals until fleas are controlled.

Inside the home, begin control measures with thorough cleaning. Vacuum all floors and upholstery and dispose of sweepings immediately to prevent flea escape and subsequent reinfestation. Also, launder all pet bedding.

Apply an insecticide spray of chlorpyrifos (such as Rid-a-Bug) to all floor areas, under and around upholstery cushions, and to pet bedding areas. Also spray moldings, baseboards and draperies to a height of one foot about floor level. Try to avoid further vacuuming and cleaning for 10-14 days after treatment.

While this insecticide should give three to four weeks of effective residual indoors, it will not rapidly knock down adult fleas. In conjunction with the residual spray indoors, homeowners might also use a non-residual insecticide applied as a total-release aerosol or fogger. Products containing pyrethrins, resmethrin (SBP-1382) and dichlorvos are available to provide quick relief from indoor fleas. Again, be sure to read and follow all label directions and precautions with these products.

One final place which may require insecticide treatment is the family car, especially if your pet is a frequent rider.

His job: It's to keep schools in shape

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Robert Montgomery's job is to find the worst schools in Texas and threaten them into improving.

"It's the only club we have," said Montgomery, who heads the accreditation section of the Texas Education Agency.

But it's a club the agency hates to swing. Only one district (McFaddin, near Victoria) has had its accreditation yanked. Five other districts never have sought accreditation. All six are tiny schools that don't want any state money beyond what the law says they get whether accredited or not.

"We have never cut state funds off. It's such a severe threat that most schools correct whatever they need to," said Montgomery.

Accreditation is also a club that Montgomery admits he swings selectively, by necessity.

"We can swamp down on a little district pretty well, but we don't have the staff to watch over the large, sprawling urban districts," he said. "There are, I'm sure, some large districts with facilities in some parts of town that aren't up to standards."

For most districts, loss of state money means school's out. In the currently unaccredited districts it means nothing.

"We don't need the state money," said Nelson Geistweid, recent president of the board for the Doss Consolidated School District.

"We're self-supporting. We don't get any state money."

The unaccredited districts are "budget-balanced," rich enough to do without money from Austin and Washington. Doss, with its 17 students, and several other small districts ignore Montgomery.

"There's one that has a phone number listed, but we've yet to have anybody answer it," he said.

The phone does get answered in the Carta Valley

ISD, an unaccredited district. Merry Spear answers it in her home in Del Rio, about 40 miles from the school.

"I was the teacher, chief bottle washer and everything," she said. "This was my last year. Driving 80 miles a day was not worth it."

"They would rather not have the federal or state money," Ms. Spear said of the school board, a seven-member panel that nearly doubles the number of students they supervise.

Ms. Spear taught all four students in Carta Valley — a first-grader, a second-grader, a fourth-grader and a fifth-grader.

There are advantages to ignoring accreditation.

"They can offer whatever they want and pay teachers whatever they want," Montgomery said. "A lot of the students might not even finish school. We have no way of knowing."

There are about 75 budget-balanced districts in the state. Most are glad to be accredited.

Montgomery said most of the budget-balanced districts are on wealthy ranches. The students are children of ranch hands. In some of the ranch districts, the landowners' children go elsewhere for their education.

Some education officials call the ranch districts "tax havens." It's cheaper to run a one-teacher district than to join a neighboring district and pay its higher taxes.

"How good could a school be with four students?" asked Montgomery.

Larger districts also wind up on Montgomery's lists. The Wilmer-Hutchins ISD, near Dallas, was listed as "accredited, warned," the last step before unaccredited.

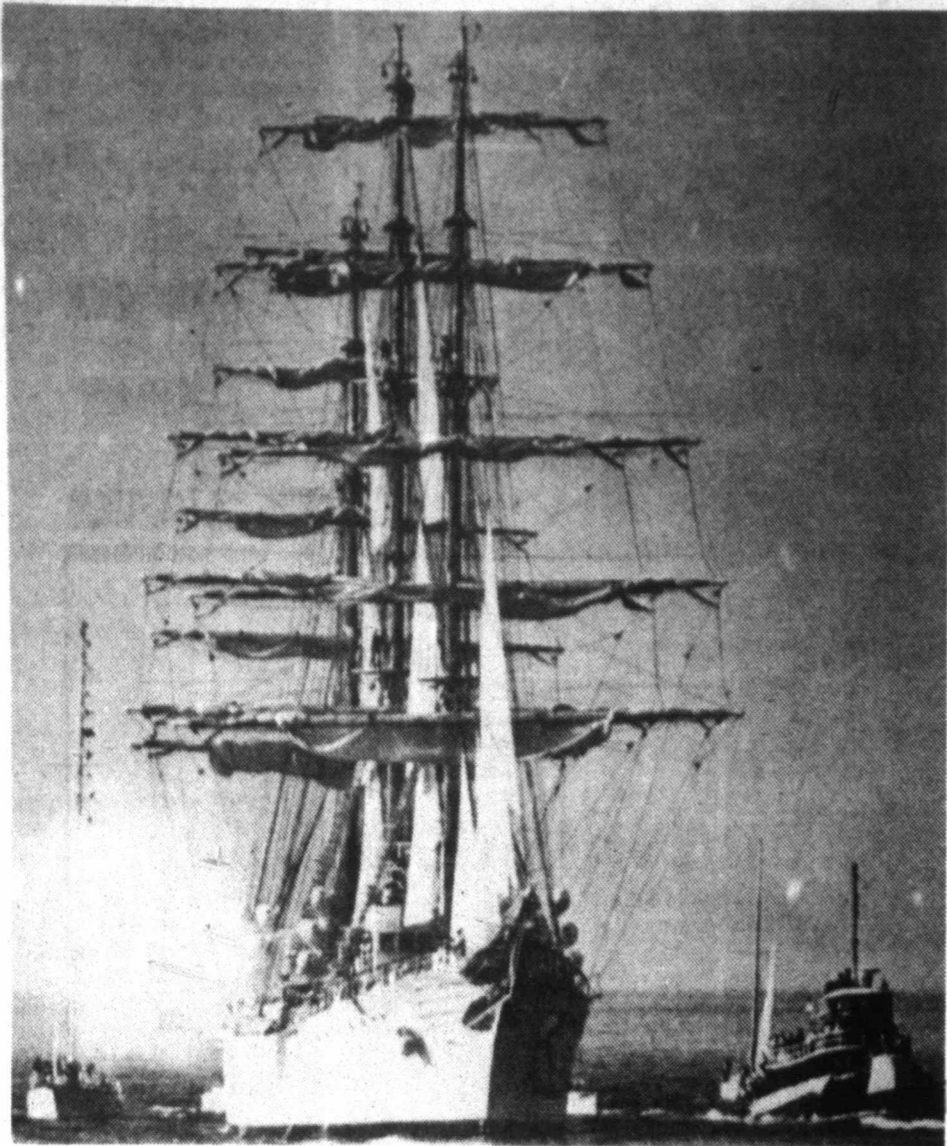

The 4,500-student district has had fiscal problems, but progress has been made and the district will be moved up to "accredited, advised."

The "warned" list includes the 524-student Moody ISD in McLennan County, where the problems are physical.

"The gym smells like a pen," said Montgomery. "The ag shop is made out of tin and is about to fall down."

Moody voters previously turned down bond issues for improvements. However, in April they approved a $1.3 million bond issue.

"It's a delicate thing. We had a three-hour town meeting in Moody with those people," said Montgomery. "When you cut off the state money, you've killed the school district. It's not like shutting down a liquor store somewhere."

They flew the coop

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Well, they flew the coop this morning.

Sometime shortly after dawn the three baby blue jays born in our lilac bush soloed for the first time. The nest is broken down on one side, when Momma Jay pushed them out.

I wonder if there were any white knuckle blue jays among the trio who really didn't want to go. Probably. There was some awful cawing and screeching round about flight time, but that might have been papa bird going through the preflight check list.

Yesterday I imagine, was the originally scheduled lift-off day, but freakish winds and thunderstorms in the recovery area (a missile control used to announce) kept everyone hangar bound. Big Momma squatted down in the nest with her three fuzzy headed fledglings, providing ballast against the skittish gusts, while her macho man perched on the edge of the porch at the ready alert for straining runs against Dummy, the neighbor's cat who really isn't cut out for bird watching. The aptly named feline couldn't outrun a dodo.

These chirpy little fellows really didn't seem big enough to fly. Each had a beak that appeared to be bigger than its wings. The way giraffes and thoroughbred foals develop their spindly legs before the rest of their bodies, blue jays seem to grow from the beak back and downward.

Spring came early around here, but these baby jays arrived late. The expectant parents began building the nest late in March, lifting twigs and leaves out of the snow banks around the garage and sometimes carrying some fair-sized sticks, almost as big as themselves, from the shore of the lake across the road.

Momma bird was definitely the boss of this operation. Her caustic cries of "Do it. Do it" to her jay-pecked mate rang out in the frosty air.

The nest was close enough to my den window for me to follow the whole nesting cycle with the naked eye, although field glasses provided an even more intimate view of a parturient blue jay I don't care what the ornithologists have to say on the subject of concerned parents and caring birds, this was a pretty liberated momma. She didn't spend much time sitting on those eggs. Most days she was off gallivanting Poppa was much more nervous about the whole thing.

He'd flit back and forth on the garage roof, like an expectant father pacing the corridors of a maternity ward, and send up a fearsome screech every time the storm door slammed.

Free care for merchant seamen

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Congress is going to have to repeal a law that provides free health care for merchant seamen or scrap its plan to close all eight U.S. Public Health Service hospitals, a federal judge says.

U.S. District Judge Robert P. Aguilar on Thursday upheld a preliminary injunction he issued June 4 restraining the Department of Health and Human Services from reducing medical care at the hospitals or from cutting contract, or outside, medical services.

On the day the preliminary injunction was issued, Congress approved budget cuts that effectively would close the hospitals by Oct. 31.

Aguilar ruled that under the present statute governing the medical care, Congress would have to specifically repeal the law to close any of the hospitals.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard de St. Phalle agreed Thursday with Aguilar that the reduced federal funding does not repeal the statute mandating free health services for seamen but added that, in effect, Congress has "suspended" the law by withholding sufficient funds to keep the hospitals open.

On Wednesday, Aguilar demanded that de St. Phalle show why the judge should not order a contempt hearing Monday for HHS Secretary Richard S. Schweiker.

Baseball strike gives Zimmer job security

DALLAS (AP) — The longer the baseball strike lasts the better chance Don Zimmer has of being the Texas Ranger manager next year.

They've played a cold brand of hardball at Arlington Stadium under owners Bob Short and Brad Corbett, who went through 11 managers in eight years.

Corbett set the franchise record with five managers in one year in 1977.

Now, the 50-year-old Zimmer, the rotund, crew-cut man the Boston Red Sox fans loved to boo, is getting a one-year make good shot from new owner Eddie Chiles, who is trying to bring some stability to the organization.

With the man who hired Zimmer, Executive Vice President for Baseball Operations Eddie Robinson, looking on anxiously, the Rangers are off to their best start in their nine-year history.

The Rangers were 33-22 when the strike was called, a game and a half behind Oakland in the American League West.

Zimmer made effective use of bench and bullpen. He turned the Rangers into the best hitting and fielding team in the league through what would have been the first one-third of the season.

The Rangers' .284 team batting average was best in the AL and their fielding percentage of .986 tied with Detroit for the top spot. Texas designated hitters were stroking the ball at a .325 pace, best in the league.

Had highly salaried pitching stars Fergie Jenkins and Jon Matlack been effective the Rangers without question would be perched atop their division.

Jenkins had the worst earned run average on the team (5.26) and was 4-5. Matlack had a 4.00 ERA with a 3-5 record.

Zimmer solved the troublesome Ranger fielding problems by going with Mario Mendoza at shortstop and giving first base to Pat Putnam, who had a good hit, gruesome glove reputation.

Mendoza responded by giving a gold glove performance at shortstop while Putnam amazed his critics with steadiness afield.

When injuries struck the Rangers, Zimmer's bench came through. Bill Stein hit .441 while playing third base for Buddy Bell. Mike Wagner hit .345 subbing for Mendoza...and Leon Roberts hit .323 playing leftfield for Billy Sample.

Of course, Robinson must share the spotlight because he was smart enough in the off-season to trade Seattle for Mendoza, Roberts and pitcher Rick Honeycutt (6-1). And he got Wagner from Detroit.

But who would have suffered if Zimmer's moves on the field failed?

In Texas, the manager's head always rolled when things got dicey.

Also, if Robinson had been as smart as Billy Martin and sent the team to camp early a la the Oakland A's things could have been different. The A's pitchers were ready for a torrid start. Oakland anticipated a strike. Texas didn't.

Zimmer has received no assurances he is back next year.

NO MERCY. Mexican star Ricky Romero asks permission from the crowd to waylay Billy Starr in the main event Friday night at the Top O' Texas Bull Barn. The crowd voiced their approval, but the match was later declared a "no contest" when both wrestlers were counted out after they started brawling outside the ring. The professional wrestling card was sponsored by Beta Sigma Phi Chapter of Pampa. (Photo by Richard Van Kluyve)

Local fans enjoy pro wrestlers

Pampans were treated to a night of professional wrestling Friday at the Top Of Texas Bull Barn. They didn't go away disappointed. Neither did the promoter, Jerry Kozak of Amarillo. "We had a real good response from the Pampa fans," Kozak said, following the five-card match which was sanctioned by the National Wrestling Alliance. "They were very enthusiastic and you can't ignore that kind of enthusiasm," added Kozak. "We hope to be coming back sometime in July." Headlining Friday night's action were Mexico's Ricky Romero and North Carolina's Billy Starr in the main event, which was ruled a "no contest." The referee stopped the match at the 11:37 mark when both wrestlers started fighting outside the ring. In the opener, Mark Romero defeated Danny Sanchez with a power slam at 9:45 of the first-fall, 15-minute time limit match. Ted Heath and Tommy Reynosa battled to a draw.

Alex Perez was disqualified in his match with Ric Youngblood when he threw a punch and accidentally hit the referee. Don Fargo defeated Terry Daniels in 9:37 of the semi-finals. The matches were sponsored by Beta Sigma Phi of Pampa. "I want to give a big thanks to those ladies," Kozak said. "They did a fantastic job at the concession stand." Proceeds from the matches go toward community projects sponsored by Beta Sigma Phi.

Burns moves into Open lead

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — George Burns, aided by a ruling that extricated him from waist-high bushes, avoided the varied disasters that struck down golf's greatest players and stretched his lead to three strokes Saturday in the third round of the 81st United States Open. Burns, sharply critical of the sponsoring U.S. Golf Association and the treatment of its Open courses, scrambled over Merion's nerve-wracking 6,528 yards in 2-under-par 68. Burns, who said he's playing in this national championship only "because I need the money," took a 203 total, seven strokes under par, into Sunday's final round of the chase for golf's most prestigious title. David Graham, a globe-trotting Australian who has won on five continents, fought his way to a round of par 70 and was second at 206. Bill Rogers, winner of the Heritage Classic earlier this year and noted among his fellow pros as one of the game's more accurate players, was another shot back at 207 after a 69. Defending champion Jack Nicklaus remained in position to challenge for a record fifth U.S. Open title with a 208 total. He was tied at that figure, five strokes off the pace, with John Schroeder and the clowning little veteran from Puerto Rico, Chi Chi Rodriguez. Nicklaus had a 71 that included a double bogey on the 14th hole. Rodriguez closed with a 67 and Schroeder had a 69. The only others under par were Ben Crenshaw, first-round leader Jim Thorpe, former U.S. Amateur champ John Cook and Tommy Valentine. Crenshaw tied the competitive course record with a 64, the lowest score ever shot in the third round of a U.S. Open. Thorpe matched par 70, Cook had a 71 and Valentine, who said he's only trying to finish in the top 16 and win a trip to the Masters, had a 72. Nicklaus, generally recognized as golf's greatest player, appeared poised to make a run at the lead at one point. He'd birdied two holes in a row, missing a hole in one by a couple of inches, and was within two strokes of the lead when he fell back with the double bogey on the 14th. He drove into the rough, missed the green short and right, had a difficult lie and pitched poorly from there, then three-putted. "I suffered the consequences of trying to make up for a bad shot," he said. "For two days I've had it in shape and let it get away." Nicklaus also took a double bogey in the second round. But others had it worse: Within 10 minutes, Masters champion Tom Watson, Australian Greg Norman and Bill Kratzert, all among the leaders, suffered triple bogeys.

PAMPA FLY-IN. Flyers inspect their equipment before sending their planes into the wild blue yonder during a fly-in Saturday at the PROPS (Pampa Radio Operated Plane Society) field east of the city. The fly-in consists of events like the water balloon drop, pony express race, climb and glide, and spot landing, and continues at 9 a.m. today at the same location. Each contestant controls his plane by operating remote control levers. Prizes will be presented to the top three flyers in each event. There is no admission fee. The fly-in is sponsored by PROPS and is a prelude to a national fly-in to be held here in October. Persons interested in joining PROPS may contact Danny Martin at 669-7373 or Tom Spencer at 665-5990. Gibson's roll past Rotary Gibson's defeated Rotary, 10-5, Friday in an American Little League game at Optimist Park. Chris Porter and Jason Farmer shared mound duties for the winners. Porter also hit a two-run homer. Gibson's finished the regular season with a 4-10 record. Chase Oil downed 100,000 Auto Parts, 12-9, in another AL game Friday night. American League teams were involved in a single-elimination tournament Saturday with the eight winners moving into a double-elimination playoff this week.

SPORTS

Houston's Lewis leaps into finals

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Carl Lewis says it wasn't the best long jump of his life, but it was the longest. Pushed by a 10 mph wind that will keep him — for the moment — out of the record books, the sensational 19-year-old sailed 28 feet, 7 3/4 inches Friday, the second farthest long jump ever recorded.

It was only 6 1/2 inches behind Bob Beamon's long-unapproached world record, set in 7,200-foot-high Mexico City in the 1968 Olympics.

Lewis' leap qualified him for Saturday night's finals of the USA-Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships. It was all the more remarkable because, after fouling on his first jump, he hit near the back of the takeoff board on his second jump, costing him several inches.

"It was one of the better jumps I've had. I feel like I've had better jumps technically," Lewis said. "I didn't really think it was that far because it felt very comfortable."

When he learned the distance, Lewis pranced off the track, arms raised in triumph, and exchanged a quick hug with his father, Bill, a track coach in New Jersey.

Asked what it might take to surpass Beamon's record, Lewis said, "More of the same."

The University of Houston sophomore scored a rare double victory in this year's NCAA championship, winning the 100-meter sprint and the long jump. Last month, he jumped 28-3/4 in Los Angeles, with the wind a fraction over the allowable 4.4 mph.

But his attempt tonight to become the first athlete since

Jesse Owens in 1936 to win both the 100 and the long jump in the national championships will be made difficult by both the competition and the schedule.

In the long jump, Lewis will face Larry Myricks, who won this meet the last two years and who has never lost to Lewis in eight tries. Myricks qualified second Friday with a wind-aided 26-5/8.

The field in the 100 is even more formidable, with defending champion Stanley Floyd, 1979 winner James Sanford, collegiate star Mel Lattany and two-time Pan American Games winner Sijvio Leonard of Cuba among those surviving Friday's first round.

"The guy who wins the race ... I'd say is the leading sprinter (in the world) because everybody's here," said Floyd, who won his heat in an eased-up 10.84 into a 13 mph wind.

Perhaps trying to shake up his opposition, he said a hamstring injury he suffered in April has left him at about 85-percent effectiveness — even though he ran 10.1 in Los Angeles last month.

Also advancing was Herschel Walker, the All-American tailback from Georgia, who edged Lewis in 10.67 in an earlier heat.

The husky 6-2, 220-pounder said afterward that he prefers sprinting to football, and that while this meet's field is one of the strongest ever, "I think I can compete with them."

Lewis, who said he was running just hard enough to qualify for the next round, will have to run the 100 semifinal at about 8:30 p.m. EDT. The long jump final starts at 9:30, and the 100 final at 10:20.

The wind and temperatures slowed most times in the qualifying races.

Three-time champion Steve Scott and NCAA titlist Sydney Maree tuned up for their expected duel in Sunday night's 1,500-meter final by running 1-2 in a preliminary race, with Scott winning in 3:46.44.

The fastest 1,500 time, 3:40.14, belonged to Tom Byers, who is making a comeback seven years after he won the Big Ten mile championship as an Ohio State freshman.

With world record-holder Renaldo Nehemiah out injured, Greg Foster won two 110-meter hurdle heats handily, the second in 13.59, and is the solid favorite in tonight's finals.

Lewis' sister, Carol, qualified for the finals in the women's 100-meter hurdles at 14.03, but her strongest event is the long jump, which begins qualifying today. The hurdles leader was Jackie Washington of UCLA at 13.33.

Cuba's Alberto Juantorena, struggling to regain the form that won Olympic gold medals in the 400 and 800 in 1976, ran third in his 400 heat at 46.55 and qualified for Sunday's finals. He withdrew from the 800.

SWD eliminated from tournament

Skellytown-White Deer dropped a 9-5 decision to Lefors in a Babe Ruth double-elimination tournament Thursday night at Skellytown.

Lefors broke open a 2-2 deadlock after three innings with a five-run explosion in the sixth.

Johnny Furgason hit a solo homer for SWD. Scoring runs for SWD were Furgason, Brent Bridwell, Tracy O'Dell, and Todd O'Dell.

Hugg scored three runs for the winners. SWD was eliminated from further tournament action. Panhandle slipped by Clarendon, 11-10, in the second game. Powell and Russell scored three and two runs respectively for Panhandle.

Skellytown defeated White Deer, 6-4, Thursday to wrap up the little league season with a win.

Joe Brown was the winning pitcher. Skellytown players with runs and rbis (runs listed first) were Frog Furgason, 1-1; Rabbit Rogers, 1-1; Brian Bridwell, 1-1; Shelby, 1-0; Lance Cross, 1-0; Joe Brown, 0-2, and Jason Marlar, 1-0.

Riley signs with Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers have signed UCLA linebacker Avon Riley, who was the team's ninth round pick in the National Football League draft, executive vice president and general manager Ladd Herzog announced Friday.

The 6-foot, 3-inch, 215-pound linebacker becomes the eighth Oiler draft choice to sign, leaving only fourth round choice Nick Eyre and twelfth round pick Bill Capece still unsigned, team officials said.

Last season, Riley led the Bruins in tackles (112) and was selected for the All Pac 10 team and honorable mention All-America by the Associated Press.

He is scheduled to report to the Oilers training camp in San Angelo July 16.

In addition, the Oilers announced Friday the addition of five free agents to the club who are set to report to the training camp in July. The players signed are: David Horning of North Carolina State, Douglas Lantz of Miami of Ohio, Frankie Lindsey of Livingston University, Ernie Rogers of Rice University and Greg Tyler of Texas Tech University.

South wins

HOUSTON (AP) — A sacrifice fly by Mark Anderson of Houston Scarborough in the eighth inning and 13 strikeouts by four South pitchers helped the South All-Stars to a 2-1 victory over the North Saturday in the Texas High School Baseball Coaches Association all-state game.

The South took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when all-state shortstop Craig Smajsirla of Pearland walked, went to second on a groundout by Uvalde's H.T. Langford and scored on a single by Jose Jimenez of Houston Lamar.

The North collected only four hits in the game.

What in the world are fathers good for?

DADDY'S HOME: Dad is good for a quick toss into the air when you run out-to meet him after he gets off work. Here Dennis Davis, of 704 N. Gray, greets his son, Jamie, 5, after a hard day of work.

HOLDING TRUCKS for little hands to repair is one good use for dads. Toys fit nicely on their laps, and the gentle guidance they give helps, too. Brandon Stevens, 3, left, and brother Heath, 6, use screw drivers and wrenches to repair a truck while Dad Bubba looks on and offers advice. The Stevens family lives at 514 N. Sumner.

Dear Abby

Old prayer still applies to aged

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing an article that I cut out of your column in the Portland Oregonian I don't know how many years ago. Twenty, maybe. As you can see, it is yellowed with age and falling apart. I am 81 years old and live alone. My children live close by and are very good to me. How I wish all older people would try to follow what this article says! Please print it again. Thank you.

DAISY S., PORTLAND

DEAR DAISY: With pleasure:

PRAYER FOR THE AGED

"Lord, Thou knowest better than I know myself that I am growing older, and will some day be old. "Keep me from getting talkative, and particularly from the fatal habit of thinking I must say something on every occasion. "Release me from craving to try to straighten out everybody's affairs. "Keep my mind free from the recital of endless details — give me wings to get to the point. "I ask for grace enough to listen to the tales of others' pains. Help me to endure them with patience. "But seal my lips on my own aches and pains — they are increasing and my love of rehearsing them is becoming sweeter as the years go by."

"Teach me the glorious lesson that occasionally it is possible that I may be mistaken. "Keep me reasonably sweet; I do not want to be a saint — some of them are so hard to live with — but a sour old person is one of the crowning works of the devil. "Make me thoughtful, but not moody; helpful, but not bossy. With my vast store of wisdom, it seems a pity not to use it all — but Thou knowest, Lord, that I want a few friends at the end." AUTHOR UNKNOWN

DEAR ABBY: The fact that too-tight jeans may cause male sterility is nothing new. I wrote this little jingle back in 1970: "If your jeans are too tight in the crotch "Your parental potential is bad. "Better let out your seams just a notch "If you hope to be somebody's dad!" BMS

DEAR BMS: Thanks for an appropriate item for Father's Day.

Mending Mature Marriage

Fat bank total isn't everything

By LOUISE PIERCE DEAR LOUISE: We're both 55 (married 28 years) and spend a lot of time getting upset with each other. We both have good jobs and like them. But the work is terribly exacting and gets us nervous and upset. "We don't want to quit work or even change jobs because we're making a lot of money. And isn't a fat bank account the best way to insure a trouble-free old age? S.A." DEAR S.A.: No, it is not. You have your long-time values all mixed up. A couple can have a savings account of a million dollars and be the unhappiest people on earth. Compatible retirement isn't based solely on wealth. Freedom from financial worry is wonderful, of course. But if it is bought at the price of frayed nerves, constant quarreling, uptight dispositions and the urge to cream at each other, it is not worth the possessions it provides for later years. If you and your husband continue to work only for money, without regard for each other's feelings, you will ask separation before you reach the rich retirement you're working so hard to provide. If you love each other — which I assume you believe you do, since you have passed your silver anniversary — you surely want that love to last into your golden wedding and beyond, as long as you both shall live. Any work — or play or other activity — that causes unbearable friction between husband and wife should not be tolerated if an adequate substitute can possibly be found. Surely one or both of you can change to jobs that may offer less money but would allow you to work relaxed and spend your spare time in enjoyable togetherness. Husbands and wives our age (you'll be with us in a few more years) must be friends as well as spouses, if we are to share older-married happiness. I am a professional speaker and writer. I love to entertain audiences. (At least I hope I entertain them!) But I never go out of town for a talk if I have to stay overnight and Otis can't go with me — unless family illness is involved. We are such good friends that we want all our spare time together. We never waste that precious time in quarreling. We work hard but never too hard to relax and enjoy the few hours a day we have together. When he takes business trips, I go along. The minute he mentions that he might go to this or that place for a day or two, I cover my typewriter and pack our suitcase. Of course I realize that my work is different from yours. I take my notes on speeches or writing projects with me, working on them while Otis attends to his business on trips. But if I had a job that kept us apart for days at a time, I'd change jobs. The only time we were ever separated for aching weeks and months and years was during World War II, which he spent in the South Pacific. We've been married 44 years. DEAR LOUISE: My husband is a machine, not a man. He works long hours, even though he's his own boss and doesn't have anybody giving him orders or making him work overtime. When he comes home late, and that's all the time, he brings work with him and spends the rest of the night on it. He gets so little sleep that he's awful grouchy. "He keeps saying not to bother him because he's making the money we need to keep up our nice home. I like living well, but not near as much as I'd love to have more time with him. "You once wrote somebody that they ought to ask their spouses to reserve at least one evening a week for them. Well, I suggested that to him lots of times and he always promised that sometime we'd start doing it. "But he never has. He's always got an excuse for why it can't be today; maybe we'll have an evening together next week or the next. What do I do now? D.D." DEAR D.D.: Keep on asking, always lovingly and without whining or complaining. Tell him you want his presence, his affection, his assurance that he loves you — mountains more than all the money he can ever make by his workaholicism. Eventually he may listen to you. But if he still refuses to change, find something interesting to do when he's away from you, in person or in spirit. Be glad you have a few moments with him each day. Write problems to DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

Beauty digest

At arms length For really firm upper arms, try this special stretching exercise. With feet comfortably apart and knees slightly bent, bend over. Head should be loose and hands formed into fists with thumbs facing out. Keeping arms straight, draw them back behind your body as far as they'll go. Then rotate arms so thumbs point to the ceiling. Return to first position. Do 10 times. Eye wake up To make droopy-lidded, sleepy looking eyes appear wide awake, apply smoke-gray or brown shadow in a wide sweep from the center of the eyelid upwards and outwards the end of the brow. Tiden eyeliner at outer corner as well into a modified wing. Continue a thin line under lower lashes just till eye center. For the prettiest look, use mascara on both upper and lower lashes.

Take care to apply pesticide properly

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent
CONTROL EUONYMUS SCALE

Euonymus scale can severely damage euonymus shrubs in Gray County if they are not controlled.

The scale insects are found primarily on the underside of leaves but may also be on stems and trunks of shrubs.

There are two or three generations of euonymus scale each year. Scale insects spread to new foliage by means of the crawler stage which first appears during May. As crawlers begin to feed, a wax covering is formed over the insect.

Summer oil will control adult euonymus scale, and malathion or diazinon should be added to a summer oil and water mixture to control crawlers. Two or three insecticidal applications may be needed to control the pests. Thorough coverage of the entire shrub is important.

Inspect shrubs 10 to 14 days following each insecticidal application. The waxy covering from the crawlers will remain on plants even after the insects have been killed.

Rub the scales on a leaf or stem to determine if they are still alive. If a yellow liquid can be forced from the scales, they are still alive and another insecticidal application will be needed. If only the brown and white waxy scale coverings are removed when rubbing leaves and stems, the scale insects are dead.

Be sure to follow directions on insecticide labels when treating for euonymus scale. Too much oil in the mixture can cause foliage damage.

PROPER APPLICATION OF PESTICIDES IN THE GARDEN

Vegetable gardeners may wonder why a recommended insecticide sometimes fails to give control. The reasons can often be traced to improper handling, mixing and application methods. A reliable pesticide may give undesirable results if certain precautions are not taken.

First, properly mix the insecticide. The most effective mixing rates are given on the insecticide label. If lesser amounts are used, one can expect fewer insects to be killed. On the other hand, using more than is called for on the label is not likely to improve control and may leave harmful residue on the produce at harvest or cause burning or other injury to the plant. If a wettable powder formulation is used, the mixture should be continuously agitated in the sprayer to prevent settling of insecticide particles. This is important for even distribution on the plant.

The second precaution is to make certain the spray equipment is operating properly. It must be calibrated and the spray nozzle or orifice should be cleared of any foreign matter. Some sprayers with plugged siphons or intake openings, such as the hose-on type, will allow water to pass through without properly mixing and diluting the insecticide. Some sprayers can be calibrated to teaspoon or tablespoon equivalents per gallon of water. Make certain the right calibrations are set prior to application.

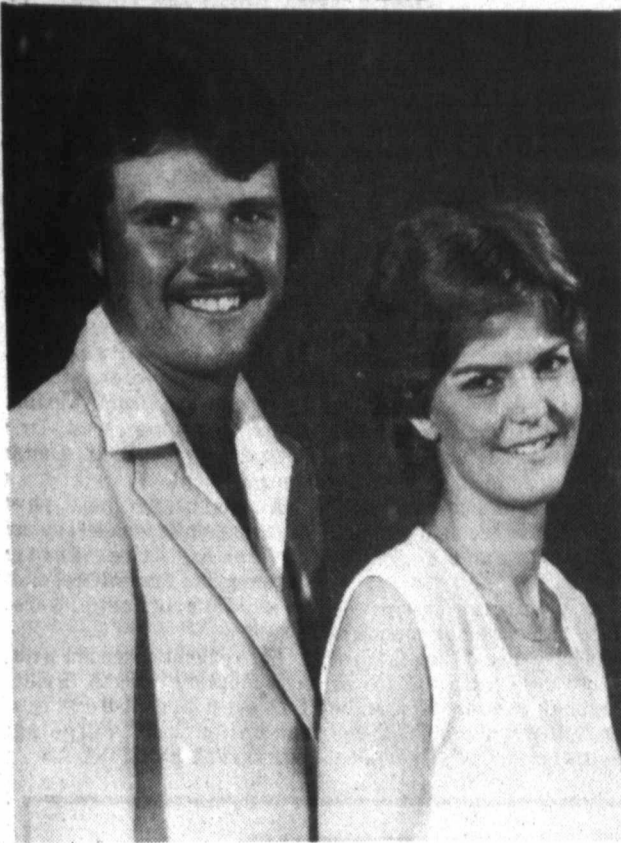

A third precaution is to apply the insecticide to the entire plant. Perhaps the most common mistake is to spray or dust only the top leaves. It is equally important to spray the undersides of leaves since this is a favorite location for sucking insects.

A fourth consideration is to apply the insecticide at the proper time and intervals. Most pests should be controlled when they first appear on the plant or cause detectable plant injury. This is particularly true in cases of spider mites, squash vine borers, corn earworms, tomato pinworms and leaf miners. The treatments should be continued at intervals recommended on the label until the pest is under control or the crop is no longer threatened.

A fifth point is to mix only the amount of spray to be used immediately. Once an insecticide is mixed with water it detoxifies rapidly and should not be stored for future use.

Finally, purchase only the amount of pesticides to be used within a one-year period. The shelf life of most garden pesticides are shortened when improperly stored in freezing temperatures or temperatures near or in excess of 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

Save on water bill

Conservation-conscious homeowners can cut water consumption by 15 to 25 percent by following this checklist of dos and don'ts, according to the Water Quality Association.

DO check every faucet for a leak. A slow drip wastes 15 to 20 gallons a day.

DO put a bit of food coloring in the toilet tank to see if it's leaking into the bowl. Leaky toilets are among the home's worst water wasters.

DON'T use the toilet to flush away tissues, gum wrappers, cigarette butts or other scraps. Every flush uses five to seven gallons.

DON'T shower too long or fill the tub too full. Five minutes of showering and about five inches in the tub is plenty.

DO use softened water to reduce time spent soaping and lathering in bath or shower.

DON'T leave water running while brushing teeth, shaving, washing hands, cleaning vegetables or scraping dishes. Use only what's needed, then turn it off.

DO fill dish and clothes washing machines to full capacity before using.

DON'T let the faucet run for a cold drink. Instead, keep a jug of water cooling in the refrigerator.

DO water lawns and gardens early or late in the day to avoid the midday heat.

DON'T use the hose to clean off driveway and sidewalks. A broom is much better.

DO wash the car using a bucket. Use the hose only to wet the car before soaping and to rinse the car off afterwards.

Peeking at Pampa

Wouldn't we all love to celebrate our 60th wedding anniversaries? One of our prominent Pampa couples did just that. Agnes and Bonnie Rose enjoyed their golden - wedding - plus - ten on Friday, June 12. Their daughter invited special friends in for a get-together. Agnes wore a lovely orchid and the time was spent in happy visiting. On Sunday, the 14th, the Roses were recognized at their church and then had dinner at the Pampa Country Club.

This couple has been dear to the hearts of Pampans for many years. One year friends were surprised and delighted to receive Bonnie and Agnes' Christmas cards with the signature a sketch of two intertwined roses. All of us remember that Agnes' favorite color is orchid. When they built their house, she had one of the rooms done in that shade. And she owned an orchid Cadillac, looking beautiful when she drove the car in her matching dresses. The delicate tint becomes her. And we all wish the Roses a heap more anniversaries. Agnes says she can't expect 60 more — but she'll try for 59!

Enjoyed the front - page article in the Pampa News about Bob Mack's energy - saving devices. Drove by to take a look and was much impressed. Heard Bob's wife, Fauncine, talking about it too. Isn't that Fauncine something? Bubbles with endless energy herself — and has enviable enthusiasm. Friends say she's Personality Plus, and I believe it. Works in so many projects and always does more than her share. She and Bob have a talented and attractive daughter, Debbie, who keeps up with all their activities. She's a lovely dancer too.

Heard that Ralph Esson's birthday, week or so ago, was celebrated at lunch time. Wife, Lillian, was present as were Rod and Mimi Gross and their children. Didn't hear anybody say how old Ralph was. The Essons are enjoying having their daughter, Lynn, home for the summer before her return to college in the fall.

Friends of Kittie and Dr. J.B. Veale were delighted that they were in Pampa for a visit not long ago. Always nice to see them. Suppose they're going to move to Red River, N.M. permanently? If so, they'll be sadly missed. Both have marvelous personalities.

Anybody need a man as M.C. for a banquet? Several people are recommending Derrel Hogsett. Seems he presided at a meeting recently and came up with stories and neatly - turned phrases that kept the audience laughing. Fred Thompson installed the incoming officers at that same meeting. Fred, too, has more than most people's share of glistening wit, always pleases crowds when he talks to them — and he's in demand as a speaker in this area and beyond.

Fred's charming wife, Clotilde, wasn't at the banquet because she was at home with their visiting granddaughter. But Derrel's wife, Jean, was in attendance — and she's as bright a conversationalist as her husband. Somebody said she's English, but I'm not sure of that. Anyway she and Derrel ought to have fun just listening to each other talk.

Speaking of personalities, want to mention lovely Chris Campaigne as a special lady. Never have seen her frowning, looking worried or acting unpleasant to anybody. Guess husband, Bill, treats her well and keeps her happy.

We have many courteous men in town. Among them, from what I hear, are two who deserve special mention. They are Hart Warren, golf pro at the Pampa Country Club, and Mickey, his assistant (don't know his last name but the boys call him the "semi-pro"). Seems they are much appreciated by wives — because they take the trouble to write down every call by wives of late - playing golfers and have the husbands call home when they come by the golf shop. From the ladies, thank you, Hart and Mickey!

Just heard that the S.M. Chittendens have moved away from Pampa. Such a sprightly pair, always brimming with energy and fun. Anybody who missed watching them dance together, missed dancing at its best and happiest.

My vote for the most congenial couple of the week, maybe the month or year: Maxine and Ralph Milliron. Saw them eating out and visiting recently, completely absorbed in each other's conversation. Be nice if more husbands enjoyed their wives' words of wisdom that much.

The Milliron's son is Roy, the golfer, here in Pampa. Don't know where their daughter, "Sissy" lives now, but anybody who lived in Pampa while she was growing up remembers her singing and dancing. She won top applause at the Lions' Club shows, every year she performed.

See you later! PAM

Use microwave oven to cook homemade jams, jellies

By ELAINE HOUSTON
County Extension Agent
One of the joys of summer is an abundant supply of fresh fruit. This summer, capture some of these fresh, sweet flavors for year-round enjoyment by making jams and jellies. A jar of homemade jam makes an appreciated and thoughtful gift any time of the year.

Jams and jellies require cooking to a certain thickness or boiling for a specific amount of time. This is easily accomplished in the microwave, and there is not the danger of sticking and scorching that sometimes occurs on the range top. Fairly large quantities will be worked, so don't expect much savings of time. Also, jams and jellies will boil over almost as readily in the microwave as in a saucepan, so be sure there is "boiling room" of at least 4 cups extra space in the dish.

When making jams, the top surface boils ahead of the rest of the mixture. The mixture should be stirred several times until it boils throughout, even after stirring. When the commercial pectins are used, this step is particularly important since a full boil is required for the pectin to properly set.

Combination directions are not included since the large quantities of liquid are difficult to work with in this oven. Use one of the surface units for making jams and jellies with this oven.

Fruits naturally contain pectin which make jams and jellies set up. For home preparation, we often use additional pectin to assure consistent results. When pectin is not added, the fruit mixture must cook long enough to evaporate the extra fruit juice. Also, there must be a combination of riper fruit, to give a good flavor, and less-ripe fruit to provide the pectin.

When pectin is required, either the powdered or liquid form can be used. Powdered pectin is added to the fruit and boiled so it will dissolve before the sugar is added. Liquid pectin is already dissolved and is added with the sugar.

Cooked jams and jellies with a high concentration of sugar can be stored at room temperature if sealed with a thin layer of melted paraffin or with vacuum-seal lids. Uncooked jams and jellies require freezer storage since the uncooked fruit will mold and ferment at room temperature. If there is space in the freezer for a few extra jars, try some uncooked jam

Dad's Day celebrated worldwide

Although Father's Day was born and bred in the United States, its meaning and significance have spread throughout the world during the early three generations of observance.

Canada has been celebrating Father's Day alongside the U.S. almost since the beginning. And in England, Australia, South Africa and even Hong Kong, Father's Day is a special celebration.

In Japan, a land given to ancestral worship, Father's Day is one of the most important holidays of the year.

In many areas of Western Europe, Father's Day is served as Nativity Day, a particularly important occasion in the Latin areas of the Continent.

Recently, when Kurt Aldheim was named International Father of the Year, he expressed his hope that the holiday could soon be extended to the many developing nations of the world where it is now barely recognized.

Father's Day is now served in more than three score countries on all continents.

this year as the fresh-fruit flavor is unbeatable. The packaged pectins have a variety of directions. The microwave instructions in the Fresh Pineapple-Papaya Freezer Jam recipe are especially good to follow.

Many homemakers wish to know about sterilizing jars in the microwave oven. The only way to insure adequate sterilization is to immerse the jars in water and then allow the water to boil. For a few jars, this may be convenient in the microwave, but for larger quantities it may be easier to sterilize them conventionally on a burner or surface unit.

Jams and marmalades use crushed, finely chopped or pureed fruits. A blender or food processor is handy for this purpose. With the blender, start with the juicier fruit so there will be liquid to easily blend the remaining fruit.

Usually, jam mixtures foam during boiling, and it is necessary to skim off the excess since it will interfere with a good seal. Very little foam may be found on microwaved jams, meaning they can be poured immediately into hot glasses. Fruit pieces will not float as much if the jam has cooled a few minutes before the jars are filled.

We recommend starting preserve making with some of the following recipe ideas. Then, discover how easy it is to adapt your own favorite recipes to microwave preparation. It is only necessary to establish the microwave time required to cook the mixture to the same degree as is stated in a conventional recipe.

Fulcher, Seabourn wed Saturday night

Lou Ann Fulcher and Steven L. Seabourn were wed in an evening ceremony Saturday in Central Baptist Church of Pampa, with the Rev. John Redfern of Amarillo officiating.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Billy J. Fulcher of Pampa. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M.M. Seabourn of Stinnett.

The bride wore a white satin dress with a fitted bodice accented by re-embroidered lace. The full skirt fell to a cathedral train. The dress was first worn by the bride's aunt in 1952.

Although your fortunes should be on the rise in the year ahead, it won't pay you to be impatient. It may be late autumn before an upturn becomes evident to you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today you could find just the right opportunity you've been looking for to change something so that it will be more beneficial to you and your family. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Play it by instinct today in important one-to-one relationships. Your hunches will help guide you to say and do the right things.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is a good day to talk over business matters with contemporaries in a relaxed atmosphere. Each may have ideas that could be fruitful for one another.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your chances for fulfilling your ambitions today are quite good. You'll know what you want. You'll convince others to play supportive roles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Things should work out quite well in the long run today, but events may not unfold exactly as you had them mapped out. Nevertheless, they'll work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Chance happenings will head you toward success today better than any strategy you might try to devise. Sit back. Let the chips fall where they may.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is an excellent day to work on programs or develop systems, but leave the actual mechanics to another time. Planning is your bag today, not performing.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Settle in the background today and wait for others to seek you out. This is one of those times when the less aggressive you are, the more desirable you become.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Activities with family members should prove more enjoyable today than involvements with outsiders. Plan something fun which includes the entire brood.

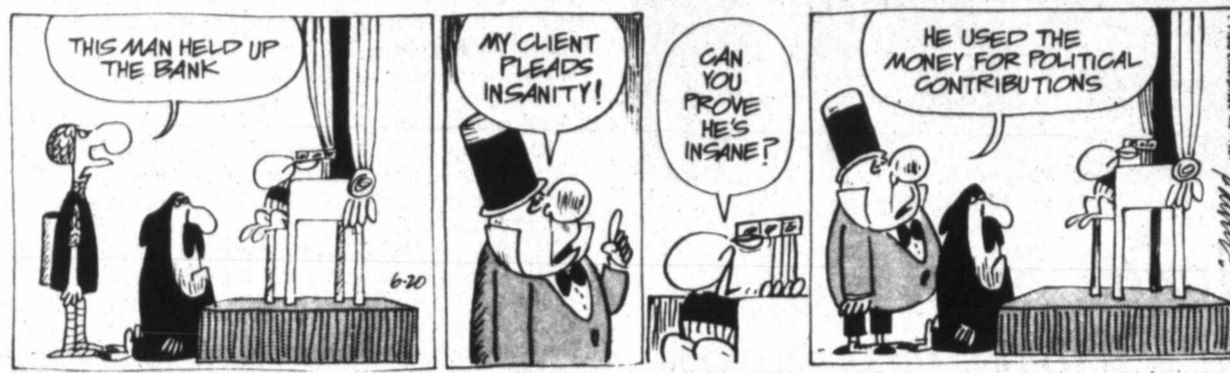

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This may be a day of rest for most, but you'll be happiest today doing something you feel is productive, especially if it helps your career.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You could get some ideas today as to how to turn a fun pastime or hobby into something profitable. Do more than just think about it if you want additional income.

GETTING INTO HIS ROLE. English actor Albert Finney puffs a big cigar as he sits in the back seat of a vintage car on the set of "Annie" late Thursday night. The movie of the Broadway play casts Finney as "Daddy Warbucks," a role that required him to shave his head. (AP Laserphoto)

Sally Struthers has sense of humor

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Sally Struthers, now on Broadway in a new comedy called "Wally's Cafe," once did a CBS show from Leningrad. In Russia, they say, sometimes even innocent table talk is secretly taped.

This may be why, as she sat down for lunch here, she leaned over and murmured into a small vase of flowers: "Hello, I love Russia. They are wonderful 'pipples' and they are wonderful country."

But she has that kind of mind. She is OK. Eight years as Archie Bunker's daughter on the CBS series "All in the Family" hasn't done her lasting harm. Why, she only mentioned the show once during her lunch interview.

And that only was when she was asked if she's found the transition from tube acting to stage emoting difficult. The short, pretty, blond-haired native of Portland, Ore., shakes her head.

"I hate to take away any glory that people might unjustly want to shower and flower on me," she says, "but eight years of 'All in the Family' was doing a Broadway play every week."

"If I can't do this now, in my sleep, I'm in a lot of trouble."

Serious about her craft, the lady isn't the terminally serious kind of actress one often finds in Hollywood, the kind torn between doing Lady

Macbeth or a walk-on in "B.J. and the Bear."

Miss Struthers marches to a different drummer.

She likes to give the unsuspecting of Tinseltown what you'd call a mental hotfoot, specifically as one-third of an all-girl singing group apparently based on Gladys Knight and the Pips.

Only they call themselves Gladys Day and the Dips. Their preferred arias are "Billy Bailey, Won't You Please Come Home" and "Bye, Bye Blackbird." They like to perform in piano bars. They always sing off-key. Deliberately.

Miss Struthers, who actually is a very good singer, is making her Broadway debut in "Wally's Cafe." It's her second stage job.

The first, in 1972, was in a dinner theater 60 miles from Chicago, in a two-character tableau, "A Girl Could Get Lucky." She says it played Broadway in 1956 but withdrew after three nights.

In "Cafe," she shares the bill with two stage veterans, James Coco and Rita Moreno, who play a married couple. This couple runs a roadside eatery in the California desert.

Miss Struthers essays a starchy-eyed young thing who, while hitchhiking to Hollywood, stops at the cafe. During the course of the play, everyone ages 40 years.

In November 1970, while at liberty (actor talk for "I'll take anything, even a talking lemon"), she auditioned for this Norman Lear series about a blue-collar bigot and his family.

Television entertainment coverage seen as news

By JERRY BUCK
ap television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rona Barrett says television coverage of the entertainment industry is finally being recognized as real news and may soon find a place on the network news shows.

"I absolutely believe it will happen," she says. "I think it will be the day one of the networks expands its news to 45 minutes or an hour. The men who run those shows know there is a vast audience out there for that."

The small, blonde, intense woman, sitting behind her huge curved desk at NBC, adds, "I think the possibility of being in prime time is also a tremendous possibility. I have a feeling that NBC will soon make such an announcement. I'm talking about a major entertainment magazine-type show in prime time. That's a very strong possibility."

Miss Barrett, who reports entertainment news on NBC's "Today" and "Tomorrow" shows, says she has had discussions about the shows with NBC's top executives.

"My contract calls for them to do something like that with me," she says. "I would more than likely be the anchor, but I have no qualms about sharing a show with anyone."

Entertainment news, of course, is not new to prime time. ABC's "20-20" regularly reports on personalities and developments, while CBS' "60 Minutes" and "The NBC Magazine" do so less often.

CBS televised "People," a version of the popular celebrity magazine, three years ago as a series. The show lasted only a few months. The most famous of all was "Person to Person," broadcast by CBS until the early 1960s. The presence of Edward R. Murrow as host stilled criticism of the celebrity interviews.

It's been a long, uphill climb for the former Rona Barstein, who transformed her appearance by diet and plastic surgery. But she still suffers the effects of a childhood muscular disorder.

It's taken a long time for her to shake the gossip columnist image of her early career. One television anchorman once introduced her as "Rona Rooter with the garbage."

Miss Barrett says, "A lot of wrong judgments were made about what I was doing. And I think a lot of it has to do with the fact I was a woman. They don't call men gossip columnists. They call them columnists."

Not long after she joined NBC last winter, Tom Snyder balked at sharing anchor duties with her on "Tomorrow." She was off the air for nine weeks while a small army of lawyers and agents negotiated a detente.

She now refuses to discuss the incident, saying, "I don't want to bring up old stories and old wounds. It doesn't ever do anybody any good."

Miss Barrett, 44, spent 14 years at ABC before leaving that network for NBC.

"I left ABC because I wanted to grow," she says.

Tonys point up mediocrity

By David Handler
NEW YORK (NEA) — Producer David Merrick stunned the formally attired invitees at Sunday night's nationally televised Tony Awards ceremony when he got up to accept the Best Musical award for his show, "42nd Street." Merrick said it was impossible to conceive of "42nd Street" minus the contributions of its director-choreographer, the late Gower Champion — just as it was impossible to imagine what the past Broadway season would have been like without the presence of "42nd Street."

Merrick's remark was an ingenuous slap in the face to the Broadway community. It was also the truth.

True, business is hopping on Broadway. Last season 10.8 million people took in shows on the Great White Way, up 1.5 million from the 1979-1980 season. But the failure rate for new shows this season was appalling. Of the total of 76 nominees for Tony Awards, 24 were for shows that folded months ago. It made for some pretty hollow victories.

Case in point: "Woman of the Year," a slickly packaged but mediocre musical that pulled down no less than four Tony Awards. In one of these Tony categories, Best Score, "Woman of the Year" was the only one of the four nominees still on Broadway. "Charlie and Algernon," folded before a cast album could even be made. (Tony voters were sent a little cassette of the score — sung by the composer.) In another category, Best Book, nominees included "The Moony Shapiro Songbook," which folded after one performance.

This is not to say that all of season's Tony Awards were undeserved. "42nd Street" is a big, splashy musical in the grand Broadway tradition. "The Pirates of Penzance," which won three Tony Awards, including Best Revival and Best Actor in a Musical, (Kevin Kline), is a delightful family entertainment. British import "Amadeus," which won five Tonys including Best Play and Best Actor in a Play (Ian McKellen), is a brilliant, stimulating drama. And Lena Horne, who was awarded a special Tony, has captivated critics and audiences alike with her triumphant one-woman show.

But several of the shows for which performers won their Tonys were far from first-rate. Both "Piaf," for which Jane Lapotaire won Best Actress in a Play, and "Fifth of July," for which Swoozie Kurtz won Best Featured Actress in a Play, are off-target works. "Sophisticated Ladies," for which Hinton Battle won Best Featured Actor in a Musical, is simply a series of numbers danced to Duke Ellington's songs — no book at all.

The season did hit some high notes. Richard Burton opened it in a smashing revival of "Camelot." Elizabeth Taylor closed it with her eventful Broadway debut in "The Little Foxes." Big-name pop performers like Linda Ronstadt, Gilda Radner and David Bowie earned their stripes in the legitimate theater this season.

But for many observers the past season is most notable for its noisy, swift and costly disasters. Among the major playwrights to rapidly bite the dust were Arthur Miller ("The American Clock"), Edward Albee ("Lolita") and Neil Simon ("Fools"). The presence of George C. Scott couldn't keep the thriller "Tricks of the Trade" alive for more than three performances. Eye-popping special effects — price-tagged at $800,000 — couldn't bring "Frankenstein" to life.

Revising a hit musical, which was considered by producers to be the best hedge against disaster, wasn't necessarily the answer either. Fresh versions of "Brigadoon," "Can-Can," "The Music Man" and "The Five O'Clock Girl" failed at the box office, along with a "Bring Back Birdie," a sequel to "Bye Bye Birdie."

So now Broadway braces for the summer tourist trade. Vacationers constitute 48 percent of ticket sales to Broadway shows during the summer. To cash in on out-of-towners, the producers of the long-running "The Elephant Man" have cast Mark Hamill in the title role and mounted a big new ad campaign proclaiming, "And now the force continues on Broadway!"

The musical highlight of the summer will be the return of "My Fair Lady" starring Rex Harrison and Catherin Nesbitt, which pulls into town August 10 after a successful year-long national tour. As for the dramatic highlight, it isn't on Broadway at all — it's in Greenwich Village.

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Once again, Sir Edmund Hillary is going to extremes. Hillary, who won world fame and knighthood in 1953 after he and a Sherpa guide became the first men to scale Mount Everest, now has his sights set on a descent of 6,000 feet into one of the world's deepest silver mines.

On July 18, Hillary, 62, and John Roskelley, an accomplished Spokane mountain climber, will descend into the No. 10 shaft at the Sunshine Silver Mine in nearby Kellogg, Idaho. The shaft is a daunting abyss that ends at 3,300 feet below sea level.

The summit of Mt. Everest, the world's tallest mountain, is 29,141 feet in the opposite direction.

Roskelley, who plans to climb Everest's unconquered east face this fall, thought the mine tour would be a pleasant surprise for Hillary, who will appear at a fund-raiser for Roskelley's expedition.

The two will take an elevator part of the way down the mine and walk part of the way.

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — Anita Bryant has told her new neighbors in Selma that she's here to stay.

"I'm not looking back, I'm looking forward," she said at a reception Thursday.

Miss Bryant visited an old friend, Bobbie Ames, here in May 1980, shortly after she began divorce proceedings against Bob Green. She has since left Green and the Anita Bryant Ministries in Florida.

During her earlier visit, Miss Bryant spoke to the three-member graduating class of Dallas Christian School. Now, she gives the school a lot of credit for bringing her to Selma.

She said she strongly believes in the "principle approach" to teaching, in which Bible teachings are applied to every area of study.

"I think if there's anything left that I would give my children, it would be to have them taught by the principle approach," she said. "I'd rather have them taught the truth under a palm tree than falsehood in the finest facility available."

LONDON (AP) — When singer Sammy Davis Jr. arrived in London and came across a group of American students delayed at Heathrow Airport, he did what came naturally: gave an off-the-cuff performance.

"Hey there, are you from home?" Davis asked the students sitting outside the customs office on Friday. He then did a little soft-shoe.

Davis had flown from New York for eight concerts in London, including a charity show to aid Tel Aviv University.

NEW WESTMINSTER, British Columbia (AP) — Terry Fox, a cancer victim whose show of courage has helped raise more than $24 million to aid research in the disease, was back in the hospital Saturday.

ANITA BRYANT

The 22-year-old Fox was in stable but serious condition after being admitted to the hospital Friday. He has been undergoing interferon treatment since February.

More than four years ago, Fox's right leg was amputated in an effort to block his primary bone cancer. Last year, he attempted to run across Canada on his artificial leg to raise money for cancer research, but was forced to halt when it was discovered the cancer had spread to his lungs.

Directors' strike fuels Hollywood unemployment

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The threat of the fourth film-TV strike in less than a year has dried up production funds, fueled a 50-percent unemployment rate in many unions and taken millions of dollars out of the Hollywood economy.

Even if the Directors Guild of America does not walk out on July 1, the effects of what would be a total shutdown of the industry already are being felt from union halls to executive suites.

"The producing community is pretty much at a standstill," said Louis S. Steinberg, executive vice president of the Los Angeles Film Development Committee. He noted that filming at Los Angeles locations — a slow period even in normal years — is down 66 percent from normal.

"If the directors go out it will be traumatic. It will paralyze the industry," he said, adding that 25,000 workers — as high as 50 percent in many behind-the-scenes job categories — already have been laid off because of the threatened directors' walkout and the current strike by the Writers Guild of America.

With directors vowing to strike over residuals for made-for-pay-TV programs — the same issue that caused walkouts last year by actors and musicians and now the writers — cameras have virtually stopped rolling here.

"There are no starts now," Steinberg said Friday in an interview.

Producers said the film and television community lost $40 million a week last year when the actors and musicians strikes delayed or canceled a number of feature films and delayed the fall TV season.

"You could probably triple that (in a directors strike) because the actors strike related only to prime time programming," Steinberg said.

Steinberg said the impact of a strike by the 6,400-member Directors Guild would be far worse than the strikes by actors and musicians because the union includes stage managers and associate directors.

"When the actors went out it only affected prime time (TV) programming, not commercials or industrial films, or talk or variety shows," he said. "If the directors go and they carry with them the stage managers and associate directors it's going to carry with it everything across the board. And that's just not in Hollywood, that's all across the country. There'll be nothing but reruns."

Unemployment lines have lengthened, said a state official who noted that although entertainment workers are not yet making the kind of run on the unemployment offices they did during the actors' strike, the impact of the directors' threat is apparent.

"Normally our claims load does decline rather substantially in the summer," said Ray McFarland, state employment program manager in North Hollywood. "The decline (this summer) was much less than it usually is."

Sex, violence not reasons for public dislike of TV

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite what the Coalition for Better Television says, the public more often dislikes a TV show because it's boring or silly than because it contains too much sex, profanity or violence, according to a survey conducted for NBC.

"There is little dissatisfaction with the treatment of sex in these programs, less dissatisfaction with violence, and even less sentiment for taking these programs off the air because of 'sex, profanity or violence,'" said a report on the survey, which was conducted by the Roper Organization.

Robert Mulholland, president of the NBC Television Network, said Friday that the survey indicates that the coalition and its chairman, the Rev. Donald Wildmon, have been "essentially wrong" in the criticism they have leveled at network TV shows.

The Roper survey also found that religious fundamentalists did not differ strongly from the views of the general public. Even "very high" fundamentalists favored removing only one program — "Dallas" — by as much as 15 percent.

"People of strong fundamentalist persuasion are significantly more concerned about sex and profanity in a number of these programs than non-fundamentalists," the survey said. "Still, even this group watches these shows, and is much more likely to express favorable than unfavorable opinions of them."

Results of the survey were announced before a gathering of television critics and reporters at the Century Plaza Hotel. The critics were here for a preview of the fall television season.

A representative nationwide sample of 2,400 persons over 18 were interviewed by telephone about 17 specific shows.

Nine of the 17 shows had been called immoral by the National Federation of Decency or other conservative religious groups. They were "Dallas," "The Dukes of Hazzard," "Happy Days," "The Love Boat," "MASH," "Saturday Night Live," "Soap," "Three's Company" and "Vegas."

The shows were listed as "favorite or very good" by a large percentage of the respondents. Not more than 3 percent wanted to remove any specific show.

Mulholland was asked about recent remarks by O.B. Butler, chairman of the board of Procter & Gamble Co., the nation's largest television advertiser, that the company would not advertise on shows "many of our potential customers will find distasteful."

Mulholland said the company would not advertise on shows "many of our potential customers will find distasteful."

Father-son developing computer voice system

DENTON, Texas (AP) — A father-son team is challenging the Goliaths of high technology in the race to develop a marketable computer voice recognition system.

The principals of Scott Instruments Corp. aren't fazed, however, by competing with the likes of Xerox, Texas Instruments and Exxon. Chairman and chief executive officer E.V. Scott says its size and approach, combined with his son's 10 years of research, actually gives the company an edge over the corporate giants.

The theory apparently makes sense to many speculators. In the month after the company went public in April, its stock skyrocketed from $2 a share to $8.50.

Scott Instruments' major product, the VET-2, is a terminal that allows the Apple II or Tandy Corp. TRS 80 personal computer systems to understand spoken commands. The VET-2 retails for $895, compared with thousands of dollars for competitors' current products.

The device is an outgrowth of research by Dr. Brian L. Scott, the company's 32-year-old president. Scott, who holds a doctorate in psychology, has invented several aids for the handicapped, including a battery-operated vibrator belt that enables deaf people to "hear" through their skin.

"He started working with abstracting the intelligence from the speech wave and converting it electronically to a tactile vibratory pattern that's very similar to the code the brain gets from the ear," E.V. Scott said of his son. "People who have total deafness learn it very, very rapidly."

As it turns out, this theoretical work also enables him to build the equipment for direct speech entry into the computer. It turns out he can do it faster and easier (than other companies) because in a sense, he's emulating nature.

While the pair had discussed going into business for several years, they had not expected to form the company as soon as 1978.

Brian Scott had come to Denton to establish a speech laboratory at North Texas State University. But he left NTSU and his 63-year-old father came out of 10 years of retirement to run the company at the urging of associate Sam Wyly, now is a director.

Wyly, who recruited E.V. Scott as one of his first executives at University Computing Co., convinced the Scotts that the voice recognition race was on. He and his brother Charles since have pumped hundreds of thousands of dollars into Scott Instruments.

Before working with Wyly, Scott gained valuable management experience at General Electric and spent 16½ years with IBM.

"I knew how to form a company, how to run a high-technology company," he said of his role with Scott Instruments.

The company not only differs from others in the field in terms of approach, based on Brian Scott's general theory of speech perception, but also in its interdisciplinary approach to employment, the elder Scott said.

The company's 15 employees span the fields of business, psychology, physiology, engineering and computer science. As many as 30 more may be hired this year.

The seven employees involved in research and development outnumber speech recognition staffs in most major companies, which have more diverse interests, he said.

"There's a shortage of these people," Scott said. "The area has just taken off too quickly to get the people needed... That's the reason behind a lot of acquisitions."

"The key is selectivity," he added. "Big companies are too structured to be selective. We consider those large companies as a source of talent."

Scott Instruments hires many young people, but not just because they will accept lower salaries.

Scott pointed out that most geniuses developed their most revolutionary concepts when they were very young, such as chess champion Bobby Fischer, a grand master at age 12, and scientist Albert Einstein.

"People who are dealing with a relatively small amount of background information can create very complex concepts," he said.

Scott is counting on his company's "bright young whippersnappers" to figure out how to bypass the current technological limitations sooner than his competitors.

The VET-2 now can recognize a limited number of speakers and a headphone set must be used to help eliminate background noise. The device also has a limited vocabulary — 40 words.

Future technology and applications are limited only to the imagination of the research and development staff, though, and proponents of speech recognition already are lauding voice-entry systems as faster, more natural and more accurate than those that employ keyboards.

SRI International, a research company, has estimated the market for speech recognition systems will be $1 billion within six years.

The Scotts say the technology can be applied to a wide range of personal and consumer uses, as well as the lucrative industrial possibilities.

For example, home security systems using voice recognition eventually could make locks obsolete, and could act as "doormen" for family dogs and cats, since such computers already can be programmed to hear sounds other than human voices.

Brian Scott envisions deaf students using the technology to help them be more consistent in their speech.

Two-way conversations with computers already are possible, although "speech recognition is more complicated," he said.

Listening computers could be used for quality control in speech synthesis chip manufacture, he said, to point out the computer chips that aren't articulating well.

"The chips develop speech impediments," he explained.

There is a difference in Communism

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Reagan goes to Peking, as he likely will next year, it won't be to call communism a doomed aberration. Nor is he apt to remind the Chinese that he considers their system a "bizarre chapter in human history."

Those comments were aimed at Moscow, although the Chinese are communists, too.

On the same day Reagan, in Washington, forecast the inevitable, eventual collapse of the communist system. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., in Peking, announced that the administration is lifting a 31-year ban on weapons sales to the largest of communist nations.

There is a simple reason for what seems an inconsistency, and it is that U.S. foreign policy objectives and interests transcend ideology, even in an administration of fervent anti-communists.

A generation ago, Nikita S. Khrushchev told the West that its days were numbered and that communism would ultimately triumph. "Whether you like it or not, history is on our side," he said. "We will bury you."

Reagan's message to Moscow is about the same. In a May 17 commencement address at Notre Dame, Reagan had described communism as a "bizarre chapter in human history whose last pages are even now being written."

At the news conference Tuesday, Reagan called the situation in Poland, where the Solidarity labor movement has challenged the strictures of old-line government officials, a symptom of disintegration in the Soviet sphere.

"The Soviet Union is faced with the problem of this crack in their once Iron Curtain, and what happens if they let it go," he said.

Moscow's Tass news agency called the Reagan comments slander. "Displaying his complete ignorance of philosophy and misunderstanding the historical process taking place in the world, he even tried to sound like an oracle and predicted the speedy end of communism," Tass said.

School board refuses to change hair length rule

DEER PARK, Texas (AP) — The Deer Park High School Drill Team may have a shortage of spirit when it takes the field this fall.

The school board refused Wednesday to change a drill team rule that hair must be no longer than the top of the neck, and one cheerleader says a dozen girls have said they will quit the team in protest.

Tracy Mitchell, 14, says she will show up for practice, but says "they'll have to kick me out," because she refuses to cut her waist-length blond hair.

"It took me 12 years to grow it and I won't cut it," Tracy said.

Superintendent Leon Wolters recommended against changing the rule, saying the drill team itself voted against a change May 3rd.

But the vote was followed by a petition signed by 62 of the 80 drill team members
