FLASHING LIGHT seems to light the way for the three wise men of Pampa's community nativity scene. The nativity scene will be officially lighted for the Christmas season in ceremonies tonight at 7 p.m. The lighting ceremony will follow the "Parade of Carolers," which will end at the M. K. Brown parking lot. (Staff Photo by John Wolfe)

County commission discusses use of $50,000 airport grant

Gray County Commissioners discussed the allocation of a $50,000 grant from the Texas Aeronautics Administration (TAC) for improvements to Perry Lefors Airport in a public hearing at 10 a.m. today during the regular commission meeting.

Gene Barber of Merriman and Barber Engineering discussed the uses of the TAC grant with the commissioners.

"The grant will cover redesigning of the auto parking at the airport and the overlay maintenance of the single-engine taxiway," Barber said.

"The $50,000 grant is a 75 percent grant and the county will pay 25 percent of the total cost of the project. The county's portion is estimated to be $16,000," he said.

Commissioners reviewed improvements to be made and the machinery needed to maintain the airport taxiways. No action was needed at the discussion.

In other action, the contract for a tractor truck for Precinct 4 was awarded to Kenworth of Amarillo for $51,959. Three bids were received and opened at the meeting.

The contract for cleaning the county courthouse was awarded to Hammond Janitorial for $1,290 per month. The contract will be for one year with a 30-day cancellation clause. Three bids were received for the cleaning services.

Carl Kennedy, a member of the Central Tax Appraisal Board, briefed the commissioners on the latest meeting of the board.

"We met to consider hiring a chief appraiser for the county, but action on the matter was tabled. A proposal was discussed that would include contracting the Pampa City and Independent School District for their appraising services. If the appraisal is done in this way, the person in charge of the City and School taxing entity would automatically become the chief appraiser," Kennedy said.

"In studying this proposal, I can see a savings to the taxpayers. We would not have to contend with finding or building an office or hiring a complete staff for the chief appraiser," he said.

"The industrial rolls would be contracted out as normal," Kennedy said.

"I would like to see the $18,000 state funding for the Central Appraisal District put to use for the additional duties of the appraisal district," he said.

"Just how much the county would be charged for the appraisals of the county property not in the Pampa Independent School District has not been discussed yet, but it should be nominal," he said.

"Actually, the Gray County Tax Assessors currently handles much of the work of the Central Appraisal District," he said.

Representatives of the Green Thumb program met with the court to discuss their efforts and programs in Gray County.

"The Green Thumb was founded in 1965 by the Farmers Union and is funded by the Department of Labor to find employment for rural elderly persons," the representative said.

"We are currently operating in 107 Texas Counties with our headquarters in Waco and Lubbock. The organization is non-profit," the spokesman said.

There are three workers from Gray County currently in the program and there is room for four more, the spokesman said.

Green Thumb representatives were interested in meeting with the commissioners to ask their help in locating elderly persons who may be interested in working. The workers are generally able to work while receiving Social Security benefits as long as they meet the limited income guidelines of the Green Thumb program. Green Thumb often works through the Texas Employment Commission to locate qualified workers.

Reagan ready for 2nd battle of the budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, "fired up and ready to tackle the budget" after a Thanksgiving holiday in California, is preparing to go another round with Congress in the battle over federal spending.

But presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday that administration officials are encouraged by reports from Capitol Hill indicating a compromise is likely before the government runs out of money again in two weeks.

Speakes told reporters returning to Washington aboard Air Force One that White House officials have a "good feeling about the progress we've made on the Hill" since Reagan's veto last week of an emergency spending measure passed by Congress.

Republican congressional leaders "feel they can come up with a consensus piece of legislation (Reagan) can sign," Speakes said.

In a brief stop Monday at a Republican fund-raiser in Cincinnati, Reagan slapped back at his chief political rival, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., who last week accused the president of ignorance on budget matters.

"Speaker O'Neill says that I know less about the budget than any president he's ever known," Reagan told an audience that had paid from $1,000 to $25,000 each to see him. "Well, maybe we're not talking about the same kind of budgets. I presided over eight balanced budgets as governor of California, and he's only seen a balanced budget once in his 27 years in Congress. And I could point out that since I became president, there hasn't been a federal budget for me to look at."

Referring to the emergency spending bill that he rejected last week, Reagan said: "Now there the speaker was right about the things I don't know. I didn't know that it was considered impossible to veto a continuing resolution. So I vetoed one."

"Now, Nancy and I have flown to California for the holidays, and now we have flown back here, and I am still waiting for the sky to fall. And it hasn't. You know, if it goes on like this a fellow might be tempted to try doing some of those other things they say are impossible, like reducing the size of government, eliminating inflation, reducing tax rates and maybe even having a budget before we are finished."

The president charged that his critics "have yet to suggest anything other than a return to their bankrupt policies of higher spending and higher taxes."

Reagan stopped in Cincinnati after a Thanksgiving vacation at his California ranch. After Reagan returned to the White House late Monday, Speakes told reporters that the president was "rested and relaxed" but was "fired up and ready to tackle the budget."

The Ohio stop was the president's first public appearance since reports surfaced last week that a Libyan "hit team" might try to enter the United States and assassinate Reagan or some other top American official.

State and local police were told of the purported threat, and their forces, bolstered by federal officers, were very much in evidence at the Greater Cincinnati Airport as well as along the route to — and at — the Hotel Westin where the presidential party made a one-hour stop.

More than 1,000 of Reagan's local critics formed symbolic soup lines outside the hotel where he was speaking and sipped steaming broth to ward off the chill of near-freezing temperatures and gusty winds. But Reagan, whisked from the airport to the city under extraordinary security, never caught a glimpse of the demonstrators in Fountain Square as his limousine took him straight inside the hotel garage.

Stockman suggests phasing out urban development programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget director David A. Stockman is proposing to phase out the government's chief urban development programs — $4.2 billion allotted to about 2,850 communities in every state across the nation, sources say.

Knowledgeable sources, both in and out of government, said Monday that Stockman hopes to eliminate all new spending for Community Development Block Grants and Urban Development Action Grants, or UDAG, after 1983.

The programs — successors to urban renewal efforts of the past — have been the government's main tool for helping to build or refurbish communities. One of the best-known projects has been the redevelopment of the Baltimore Harbor.

The programs are administered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, whose secretary, Samuel R. Pierce Jr., is said to be angry about the proposed budget cuts. Several sources, who asked not to be identified, said Pierce plans an appeal to President Reagan, who has made no final determination on the next round of spending reductions.

A spokesman for the U.S. Conference of Mayors said a phase-out of the two grant programs would cause "very serious problems for cities already affected by budget cutbacks and fiscal distress."

The contemplated urban cuts are part of a new package of sharp reductions in non-defense programs that Reagan plans to unveil in late January, when he sends Congress his budget plan for 1983.

Other areas targeted by Stockman's Office of Management and Budget for large cuts are the Environmental Protection Agency, job training and employment programs for the poor, subsidized housing for low-income families and a variety of other individual assistance programs.

Community Development money goes to most sizable communities with few strings attached. Cities use the money for such diverse activities as upgrading sewer facilities, building playgrounds or tennis courts, rehabilitating neighborhood shopping strips, refurbishing dilapidated housing, building community centers and financing economic development efforts.

UDAG is specifically targeted to aid distressed cities and towns. Such cities as New York, Detroit and Orlando, Fla. have won UDAG grants for downtown and neighborhood development projects. 350 grants were to be made in 1981.

UDAG money was used in the redevelopment project that burned to the ground last weekend in Lynn, Mass. Community development funds were used to help build sidewalks in the redevelopment area.

The community development and

UDAG programs had been slated to receive up to $4.2 billion in aid during fiscal 1982, which began Oct. 1.

Civil defense sirens startle residents

Wet weather Sunday caused two Civil Defense warning sirens to go off, startling Pampa residents living around Terry Road and around Pampa High School.

Steve Vaughn, civil defense coordinator, said dampness in relay boxes caused the malfunction of the sirens.

Vaughn urged residents not to call the police department when they hear the sirens, which are intended to warn only people who are outdoors, but to tune into a radio or television station for more information.

Vaughn said the Civil Defense warning system is set up to immediately cut into cable television and radio programs to warn residents of impending disaster.

The sirens are tested the first Saturday of each month at noon and are intended to be sounded only in cases of weather alerts, disasters or nuclear attack.

In case of a real disaster, phoning the police station would result in tying up the switchboard which would be urgently needed to coordinate civil defense, Vaughn said.

Blizzard sweeps through Nebraska, South Dakota

By The Associated Press
A blizzard with winds gusting to 50 mph swept from Nebraska to neighboring states today, blocking highways with impassable drifts and bringing snowplows to a halt.

One man was killed when the winds toppled an oil rig in Nebraska, where up to 10 inches of snow fell, and an elderly trapper was missing in Iowa, where 7 inches was on the ground in places.

The National Weather Service said the huge winter storm was producing blizzard conditions in parts of Nebraska and South Dakota with the blowing snow building high drifts and reducing visibility to near zero.

A winter storm warning remained in effect for northeastern South Dakota, northwestern Iowa, the southern half of Minnesota and the northwestern half of Wisconsin.

More than 100 miles of Interstate 90 and parts of state highways in central South Dakota were barricaded as state police searched for people stranded in cars and trucks.

Christmas parade tonight

The "Parade of Carolers" will wind its way down Pampa streets starting at 6 p.m. tonight.

Beginning at the corner of Cuyler and Craven Streets, the parade will proceed north on Cuyler to Francis, turning west on Francis and continuing to Ward. The parade will then move north on Ward to Hobart Street. The parade will continue north on Hobart to Somerville.

The parade will end at M.K. Brown parking lot for the lighting of the Community Christmas Tree and the Nativity Scene.

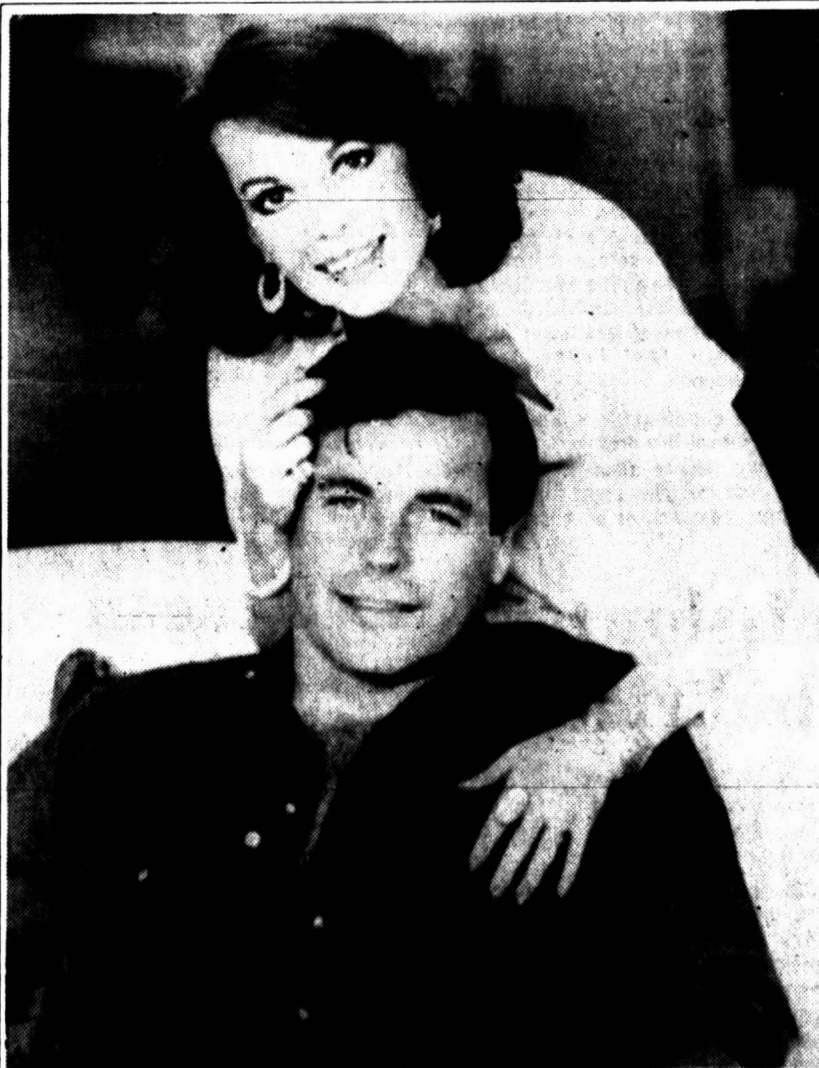

Eleven church choirs will provide the musical background for the lighting of the Nativity. Art Owens will play the trumpet fanfare, at the ceremonies which are expected to begin at 7 p.m.

Fred Brown, assistant pastor of the First United Methodist Church, will give the invocation. Johnny Glover, choir director of the First Baptist Church, will direct parade choirs. Brad Mink will narrate the ceremony.

Float prizes will be presented Wednesday at the Chamber of Commerce office.

Weather

The forecast calls for gusting winds and low temperatures today. The high for today will be in the upper 40s with overnight lows in the 40s. The high for Wednesday will be in the upper 50s.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Topsy and evidently wanting to get away from the yacht where her husband and another actor were arguing, Natalie Wood tried to step into a rubber dinghy but fell into the water and drowned, officials say.

The 43-year-old actress had been drinking champagne and wine, and "this was one of the factors involved in her not being able to respond in case of emergency," County Coroner Thomas Noguchi said Monday after certifying the death as accidental drowning.

There was a scratch on her cheek when her body was found Sunday morning, such as might have come from hitting her head on the yacht or some part of the dinghy, Noguchi said.

Miss Wood's husband, actor Robert Wagner, and actor Christopher Walken had been arguing aboard the yacht, but not over Miss Wood. Assistant Coroner Richard Wilson said Monday at a news conference after an autopsy.

"They were arguing about things in general. There was no physical altercation," Wilson said. He said Walker and Wagner both had been examined, and "there were no marks upon them."

Noguchi said the argument "apparently...was the reason she (Miss Wood) separated herself from the group." Walken, a guest aboard Miss Wood's and Wagner's 60-foot yacht, Splendour, is the co-star of Miss Wood's latest film, "Brainstorm."

The yacht was anchored off Santa Catalina Island when Miss Wood, wearing a blue nightgown, knee-high socks and a red down jacket, disappeared early Sunday at the remote northern end of the island 26 miles from Los Angeles, officials said.

The Wagners, Walken and the captain of the yacht ate dinner on the island — which is 26 miles offshore from Los Angeles — and had returned to the Splendour around midnight Saturday.

Noguchi said Miss Wood's blood-alcohol level was 0.14 percent. In California, 0.10 percent is the legal criterion for drunk-driving.

"I would not consider her drunk," Noguchi said. "She had wine and champagne, perhaps seven or eight glasses of wine."

Miss Wood's body was found just beneath the surface of the water a half-mile away from where she disappeared. The body was about 200 yards from the 13-foot outboard dinghy. The dinghy's ignition was in the "off" position. The Coast Guard said the clothing would have made it hard for her to swim, and Noguchi said the actress might have swallowed water, preventing her from crying out.

Meanwhile, a friend of the family who asked not to be named said Miss Wood's funeral probably would be held Wednesday with only a few family members and friends invited. The location was being kept secret. Wagner remained in seclusion.

"I would say the chances of him discussing the incident are totally zero. He's just totally devastated by this," said Warren Cowan, whose firm, Rogers and Cowan, served as Miss Wood's agent.

U.S. SOVIET SESSION. U.S. chief negotiator Paul H. Nitze, left, and his Soviet counterpart Yuli A. Kvitsinsky smile at each other and shake hands across the conference table Tuesday morning in the United States arms control and disarmament agency, a part of the U.S. mission in Geneva. U.S., Soviet arm negotiators begin talks in news blackout

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. and Soviet arms negotiators, ending their first bargaining session today, stuck to an agreed news blackout on their talks to limit the deployment of nuclear missiles in Europe. The two delegations met for 2 1/2 hours at the offices of the U.S. Arms Control Agency, deputy U.S. delegation chief Maynard Gitman said. "We've finished for this day," he said. "I'm not going to tell you any more." He also declined to comment on the atmosphere of the talks, held where the second U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation treaty, SALT II, was negotiated. That treaty never was ratified by the U.S. Senate, and was withdrawn from the ratification process after the Soviets sent troops into Afghanistan two years ago. Today's meeting was the first by the full delegations from each side. On Monday, delegation chiefs Paul H. Nitze of the United States and Yuli A. Kvitsinsky of the Soviet Union held a 90-minute introductory session. Nitze told reporters their first meeting was "cordial and businesslike." He said the public would probably be told the date and place of meetings "and little else." "We want these talks to succeed," he added. "This arrangement will help us work toward this goal." A U.S. official who asked not to be named said adherence to the blackout might mean the negotiations were going well, while leaks might be a sign that the talks had hit a snag and the leaking side was trying to put the blame on the other. In Washington, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said the United States would negotiate "with care and patience." But he said the Soviets would agree to reduce their deployment of middle-range nuclear missiles trained on Western Europe only if the North Atlantic Treaty Organization went ahead with its preparations to deploy U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles beginning in 1983. "These preparations are the incentive that brought the Soviets to the negotiations and that will encourage them now to take a serious position," Haig said. The United States in the negotiations will be pressing the Soviets to dismantle the estimated 250 multi-warhead SS20 missiles deployed in Western Russia, and the Soviets will be trying to head off NATO's plans to deploy the 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles. President Reagan offered to forego the American deployment if the Soviets agreed to dismantle their SS20s of older SS4s and SS5s in Western Russia. Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev rejected this "zero option" proposal last week but offered to withdraw some of the Soviet missiles in exchange for a moratorium on the NATO deployment during the negotiations. The West rejected that one. The Soviets also want British, French and U.S. delivery systems in Europe and the waters around it included in any reduction formula.

Seychelles president asks return of mercenaries

VICTORIA, Seychelles (AP) — President France Albert Rene today asked South Africa to return the 44 mercenaries who staged an aborted coup in the Seychelles. The mercenaries, who hijacked an Air-India Boeing 707 to Durban after the coup failed Wednesday, are being held in South Africa pending trial on air piracy charges. Rene also accused former President James Mancham of being involved in the plot to overthrow the island nation's leftist government. In a nationwide address broadcast over Radio Seychelles, Rene said the government will believe South Africa's assertion that it had nothing to do with the attack if it returns the mercenaries for trial by an international court appointed by the United Nations. "If the South African government agrees, then we will believe that they had nothing to do with it," Rene said. The mercenaries, posing as a rugby team, arrived in this lush Indian Ocean archipelago 1,000 miles east of Africa aboard a regularly scheduled flight from Swaziland. After a gun was discovered in one of their suitcases, they pulled out weapons they had smuggled through customs and took over Pointe Larue International Airport, taking an estimated 100 hostages. A battle with security forces began on Thursday, the mercenaries allowed the Air-India jet to land, hijacked it and directed the pilot to take them to South Africa. After reaching Durban, they released the passengers and crew and turned themselves over to South Africa authorities. South Africa has denied any knowledge of the attempted coup.

Judge says thousands arrested through illegal warrant procedure

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge says the procedure Dallas County clerks used to issue misdemeanor arrest warrants is unconstitutional and that thousands of people were arrested illegally under that system. The ruling by U.S. District Judge Patrick Higginbotham could require prosecutors to seek new warrants in almost 50,000 cases. Each week the county clerk's office issues about 800 misdemeanor arrest warrants in minor drug possession, theft and other cases. The law requires that the warrants be obtained before an arrest is made if the suspect is not arrested at the scene of the crime. Higginbotham ruled Monday that the county's old procedure for issuing the misdemeanor arrest warrants is unconstitutional, and he said efforts to improve the system by adopting a new procedure in August did not correct the problem. He said the procedures are unconstitutional because they do not require that a neutral magistrate, such as a judge or justice of the peace, find probable cause for the arrests before the warrants are issued. But attorneys for county officials said evidence will be presented next week to show the problem has been corrected. Earl Luna, a lawyer hired by the Dallas County Commissioners Court to represent seven judges named in the suit, said he believes Higginbotham would agree that changes already made meet constitutional requirements. Luna said each application for a misdemeanor warrant in Dallas is now reviewed by a municipal judge or justice of the peace, and that that system is being extended to other municipalities in the county. In his ruling, Higginbotham said county clerks routinely issue warrants based on information from the district attorney's office. "In Dallas County, persons are arrested on misdemeanor (warrants) solely because a district attorney has completed a form affidavit based on police reports and not because a 'neutral magistrate' has determined, independent of the police and the prosecutor, that there is probable cause for its issuance," the judge said in his ruling. The ruling was in a class-action lawsuit filed by Stephen C. Crane, a Dallas lawyer who was arrested and jailed for several hours on a misdemeanor obscenity charge because his name was on incorporation papers his law firm prepared for a movie theater. Crane, 29, said that although the obscenity charge was dismissed, the damage already had been done. His lawsuit is against the police of 17 cities who arrested him, the county and seven judges. His suit seeks $1.5 million. A court hearing is scheduled for next week on Crane's request for monetary damages and on possible changes in the warrant procedure. One of Crane's lawyers, Peter Lesser, said he doubted that "anybody who's been convicted in going to have their conviction thrown out because of this ruling."

Supreme Court considers public education for alien children

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a case that could spell out the rights of millions of illegal aliens, the Supreme Court is considering whether Texas must provide free public education to illegal alien children. The justices today are considering a 1975 Texas law restricting free elementary, junior high and high school education to U.S. citizens and foreigners legally in the country. Lower courts struck down the law, and a related Tyler, Texas, school district policy of charging $1,000 annual tuition for each illegal alien child in public schools. Many of the illegal aliens living in the United States come from Mexico. The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in October 1980 that "all aliens — even those illegally within the territorial boundaries of the United States — are entitled to equal protection of the laws." Richard L. Arnett, an assistant Texas attorney general, contends that illegal aliens only are entitled to proper immigration procedures and "due process to ensure that their lives, liberty and property are not unfairly taken." Arnett suggests that if illegal aliens are entitled to constitutional "equal protection" they could become eligible for food stamps, welfare, Medicare, Medicaid and other federal benefits. Peter D. Roos, a lawyer for the children, maintains that if illegal aliens are not entitled to equal protection, a state could "treat undocumented persons within its jurisdiction arbitrarily and irrationally, free from any need to justify such treatment." Roos, noting that the children generally had no say about coming to the United States, contends that Texas cannot enact a law "that visits the wrongs" of parents on their innocent children in such a drastic manner. The case has attracted considerable attention, particularly because of its potential impact on the 1 million to 6 million illegal aliens the Census Bureau has estimated are in the United States. Justice Lewis F. Powell, considering an emergency matter earlier in the dispute, wrote on Sept. 4, 1980 that the controversy "involves a pressing national problem" because of the growing number of illegal aliens in the United States. Last September, the Justice Department retreated from the Carter administration position by saying the federal government would no longer take a stand on whether the children are entitled to free public education. During the Carter administration, the Justice Department told lower federal courts that the Texas law is unconstitutional. The law cut off state reimbursement to local school districts for the costs of educating illegal alien children and gave districts the right to bar the children from school or charge them tuition.

Christmas basket applications taken

The Salvation Army will be taking Christmas Basket Applications through Dec. 18. Applications will be taken from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Christmas Baskets are given to families and individuals who are unable to provide a Christmas dinner for themselves.

Park service applications available

Application packets for summer employment with the National Park Service are now available from any national park, Park Service regional office or from the Washington office, or by writing or calling Lake Meredith Recreation Area, P.O. Box 1438, Fritch 79065, phone (806) 857-3151. Applications will be accepted until Jan. 15, 1982. Applicants for any Park Service position must be at least 18 years old. The packets contain application forms and a list of available positions. The normal summer employment period in NPS areas is between Memorial Day and Labor Day.

Highway commission takes action to stop bid rigging

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas highway department will take special efforts to stop any rigging of bids on state road projects, says the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission. A special policy order was approved by the three commissioners Monday giving M.G. Goode, state highway engineer-director, power to stop any efforts at "anticompetitive bidding practices." The commission action follows recent indictments by a federal court grand jury against numerous state highway construction firms and executives accused of violating antitrust laws. The indictments said the construction firms circumvented the state's low-bid system by submitting "collusive, non-competitive, and rigged proposals" for state construction work. The policy order directed Goode to develop a program "to monitor all bids for the purpose of detecting anticompetitive bidding practices." Any bidder found guilty of non-competitive practices would be barred from bidding on future contracts. The policy order directed the Goode and the department to work with the state attorney general in taking any appropriate legal action against any suspected bidders.

Reagan meets with labor leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing the twin prospects of additional budget cuts and major union contract negotiations early next year, the Reagan administration is seeking to improve relations with national labor leaders. President Reagan, returning to the White House after a Thanksgiving respite at his Santa Barbara, Calif., ranch, was meeting today with Roy Lee Williams, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, and the 21-member Teamster executive board. Reagan has remained on relatively friendly terms with the 2 million-member Teamsters union, the nation's largest, while relations between the White House and the huge AFL-CIO have been virtually non-existent. Robert A. Bonitati, a presidential labor adviser, said that Reagan "wants to hear" what the Teamsters have on their mind, and that he expected Williams and other union leaders would discuss rising joblessness in the trucking industry. Reagan's efforts to stem inflation could hinge largely on major union contract negotiations next year in the trucking, auto, rubber, electrical and oil industries. Williams has indicated that the Teamsters might moderate their economic demands in negotiations that already have begun with Trucking Management, Inc., the trucking industry's bargaining arm. The two sides were poised to exchange initial contract demands late today. The Teamsters president and four other men were indicted by a federal grand jury last May on charges of conspiring to bribe a U.S. senator. Williams has denied the charges. Reagan's meeting with Teamster leaders was the start of a presidential drive to improve contacts between the administration and big labor. The chief executive will host AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and members of the federation's executive council in an Oval Office meeting scheduled for Wednesday morning. Meanwhile, Vice President George Bush was joining in the administration's new initiative. Bush had a private meeting here Monday afternoon with Kirkland, and the vice president hosted labor leaders at a reception later in the day at his home. The social event saluted the 100th anniversary of the founding of the U.S. free trade union movement in Pittsburgh in 1881. The AFL-CIO refused to invite Reagan to its biennial convention earlier this month in New York.

Judges say Clements must talk on redistricting

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements, who federal judges say played a "central role" in redistricting, will appeal a court order that he answer questions about his part in drawing congressional boundaries.

A three-judge panel hearing the suit against the redistricting plan on Monday handed down a 2-1 decision saying Clements

Indicted trio wanted in 'ski mask' rapes

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A parish grand jury has indicted three men on charges stemming from the rape of a Baton Rouge mother and daughter, and state police say several states want to question them about "Ski-Mask Rapist" attacks.

Col. Grover "Bo" Garrison, state police commander, said authorities in nine states want to question the three about sexual attacks over the past two years.

"We have heard the number of attacks may approach 100 nationwide," Garrison said at a news conference Monday.

Based on the information our task force has developed over the last few weeks, we firmly believe that John B. Simonis committed ski-mask attacks in Jena, Gonzales, Baton Rouge, and Jennings," he added.

Simonis, 30, John Glass Dickinson III, 26, and Frederick A. Boerman Jr., 27, all of Lake Charles, were indicted Monday by an East Baton Rouge Parish grand jury.

The indictments stem from the June 7 rape of a woman and her 14-year-old daughter, and robbery of the woman and her husband at their home, said Assistant District Attorney Alan Helms.

Simonis was charged on seven counts: four counts of aggravated rape of the mother and daughter, armed robbery of the woman and her husband, and burglary of the home.

Dickinson was indicted on six counts: aggravated rape of the mother and daughter, armed robbery of the woman and her husband, aggravated crime against nature involving the daughter, and burglary of the home.

Boerman was indicted on two counts: armed robbery and aggravated burglary.

Helms said although Boerman was not accused of participating in rape, he admitted driving the car used on the night of the offenses.

Simonis is unemployed and "apparently has been living out of his car," said Garrison. "The vehicle has 76,000 miles on it and it's only seven months old."

Dickinson is a pharmacist, and Boerman is a musician. Simonis was being held in Jena on robbery and assault charges under a $300,000 bond. Dickinson is charged with armed robbery in Jennings and was held there in lieu of $500,000 bond.

Boerman is in the East Baton Rouge Parish Jail, but bond hadn't been set, said Garrison.

Garrison said Simonis "may have been involved in numerous attacks in Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Alabama, Florida, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, California and possibly others."

"I said Simonis has been linked to sexual attacks in several Texas cities — including Texarkana, Woodville, Orange, Houston and Beaumont — as well as attacks in St. Petersburg, Fla., a suburb of San Francisco, Calif., and in Lake Charles."

"All of the cases seem to revolve around Simonis," said Garrison. "You might say he formed the core or a nucleus. Sometimes he worked alone and sometimes in concert. His accomplices were not always involved in the sexual assaults, but sometimes they were."

Arson suspected

DALLAS (AP) — Fire investigators said they suspect arson in the raging weekend blaze that destroyed a church listed on the National Register of Historical Places.

Seventy-six Dallas firefighters took nearly two hours Sunday to extinguish the blaze, which gutted the Trinity United Methodist Church.

"We don't know for sure, yet, but it certainly appears to be arson," said Captain Bill Baker, supervisor of the Dallas Fire Department's arson squad. "It probably will be a week or so before we can really get in and look at how it was started, because the place is so devastated."

deposition is "clearly relevant." They gave the governor until Friday to give the deposition.

The panel turned down Clements' contention that "executive privilege" protects him from answering questions.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler and Judge Sam Johnson of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans said Clements must talk.

Justice's order, which drew a dissent from U.S. District Judge Robert Parker of Beaumont, said the governor's testimony would be "clearly relevant" because Clements played a "central role" in redistricting.

Depositions from legislators confirmed "the plaintiff's claim that the governor played a significant and perhaps determinative role in the congressional reapportionment process, with particular respect to the congressional districts which are specifically implicated in this action."

The judges turned down Assistant Attorney General Rick Gray's request that the order be stayed. Gray said he would appeal to the New Orleans federal appeals court, which last week refused Clements' request to block the deposition.

The lawsuit was filed by blacks and Hispanics, claiming the redistricting plan dilutes minority voter strength. The blacks are upset with Dallas County districts, favored by Clements to elect a minority congressman from the county.

Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, testified Monday that blacks are better off under the existing setup, where they are represented by Democrats Martin Frost and Jim Mattox.

"They have a greater chance of electing two friendly congressmen," said Mauzy, who added that Frost's and Mattox' voting records have been good for blacks.

The Mexican-American plaintiffs are unhappy with the South Texas districts.

State Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio, said Hispanic legislators were not allowed full access to the redistricting process.

The two Hispanics on the House redistricting committee — Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, and Bob Valles, D-El Paso — were allowed limited input, mostly being "handed a map with lines already drawn," he added.

Garcia said Clements tried to persuade Hispanic legislators to go along with his plan for Dallas County — which was opposed by most black legislators.

If they supported the Clements' plan, the Hispanics would have been allowed to draw the South Texas districts, according to Garcia.

"We did not agree to the governor's request because we had a commitment to the blacks and the blacks had a commitment to us," Garcia testified.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

Never again

The Commission of Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians, meeting in Washington to determine whether the government should pay some sort of compensation to Japanese-Americans who were interned in relocation camps during World War II, has heard some interesting testimony recently. Some of the officials who participated in the internment program are still willing to defend their actions, much to the dismay of commission members.

It took the government almost 40 years to get around to dealing with the notion that it might bear some culpability. It is ironic, then, to feel a certain admiration for McCloy and Bendetsen, who have refused to go along with the crowd, and still maintain that the action was, in some sense, considering the temper of the time, justified.

Though we might respect these two men, however, it is important to understand that they are wrong, and to reject their reasoning.

One must confess to a certain grudging respect for Karl R. Bendetsen, 74, who as an army colonel in 1942 ran the Wartime Civil Control Administration, and John J. McCloy, 87, who was assistant secretary of war. Both men participated in the decision to relocate about 120,000 Japanese-Americans living on the West Coast to internment (relocation, resettlement, concentration, take your pick) camps in remote inland regions. Both men, during four hours each of testimony and questioning, refused to say that the relocation was a mistake or that Japanese-Americans victimized by the incident are owed an apology.

If we accept what McCloy and Bendetsen say, then we must accept the idea that the government has the right, if enough panic develops, to separate out a group or class of people (on the basis of race or any other classification), and remove them from their homes, force them to sell all they have at a loss, take them to a distant place, permitting them to take only what they can carry, and keep them there for years, without any evidence even of a disloyal thought, let alone of any crime committed.

That is what the government did to the Japanese-Americans in World War II. It cannot be condoned, no matter what the situation. The government doesn't have that right, not even in wartime. If it does, then all our talk about opposing totalitarianism, about being the arsenal of democracy, is a sick joke.

If what was done to the Japanese-Americans in World War II can be defended, then the implication is that government retains the right to do something similar in the future. If it feels that the situation warrants such drastic action, it is essential to resist that implication, to condemn the internment program in the strongest possible terms.

We retain doubts about the idea of reparations. At this late date, the only way the government could make reparations would be to extract money from taxpayers, creating another class of innocent victims. We're not sure if that action would serve justice.

Though it may be too late to find genuine justice from this lamentable episode, it is not too late to understand that the government far overstepped its bounds, and to resolve that similar incidents will not be tolerated in the future.

Dear Sir:

The State Capitol Building in Austin is the most important historic and culturally significant building in Texas. The Capitol dominated Austin's skyline from 1887 until 1965, when a few high rise buildings began to intrude and block important views of the Capitol. Now the explosive growth of Austin as a whole threatens to surround this important symbol of our state and obscure it from public view forever.

The City Council of Austin must take immediate action if the remaining Capitol views are to be protected. Success in this effort will depend largely on public support. Many citizens think that Austin has a responsibility to all Texans to preserve the Capitol's visibility; visitors and residents alike benefit from a continued reminder of the symbolic importance of our State Government.

A letter expressing your opinion on this issue will help determine the place of the Capitol in Austin's skyline for generations. Address your letter to the Austin City Council, and send it in care of Texans to Save the Capitol, 225 Congress Avenue, Suite 404, Austin, Texas 78701. We will copy and distribute your letter to the City Council, keep you updated on Capitol View actions, and put you in touch with others in your area who have expressed interest in the Capitol View Issue.

Thank you for your help in preserving the Capitol for present and future generations.

McGovern, White House square off on welfare

By RICHARD L. LESHER
PRESIDENT
U.S. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

WASHINGTON — Two articles printed side by side in the Fall 1981 issue of Public Welfare, the journal of the American Public Welfare Association, illustrate the sharp contrast in approaches to welfare and taxation between the proponents of Reaganomics and Great Society liberalism.

The articles, appearing under the heading "Whose Responsibility is Social Responsibility" were written by White House aides Robert Carleson and Kevin Hopkins, and former Senator George McGovern. The most intriguing aspect of the exchange centers on whether government should simply aid the most destitute members of our society, or engage in a more comprehensive effort to redistribute income.

Carleson and Hopkins begin by asserting a fundamental principle that is often neglected by economic liberals, that "possession of title to the fruits of one's labor is an essential part of American freedom." Any commitment to shift income from those who earn it to those who don't should be formulated in this context.

The Reagan aides then distinguish between those Americans who are truly in need and lack the basic necessities of life, and the "relatively poor," who earn incomes that are perhaps lower than average, but who, nonetheless, are able to subsist. The first group should always be helped, the administration confirms, but the notion that "those who are relatively poor have a legitimate entitlement to part of the incomes of those who are relatively better off," should be rejected.

This distinction is critical. "Inequality of incomes is something to be corrected only to the extent that the poorest do not have sufficient resources to provide for their needs," write Carleson and Hopkins. "Merely having less income than another person does not in itself entitle the first person to a share of the second person's income."

Not unexpectedly, McGovern makes no such distinction. He complains that "there has been no shift in resources from the rich to the poor" over the past 40 years. He excoriates the administration for cutting programs of the poor in order to "finance tax cuts for those in the highest income tax brackets" — never acknowledging that, for whatever reasons, the latter group happens to earn its income while the former is a nonproductive ward of the government. To McGovern, the income of American workers is, as Carleson and Hopkins describe his philosophy, "a collective endowment of the society, and politicians are charged with preserving a 'fair share' of that endowment for its relatively poor citizens."

On welfare, Carleson and Hopkins explain that in addition to budgetary considerations, tighter eligibility requirements were needed to correct a situation in which "many relatively poor people are taxed on what little income they earn to help provide benefits to other relatively poor people who are little or no worse off."

Relatively minor cutbacks, such as reduced school lunch subsidies for middle income families, represent no retreat from our commitment to the truly needy, but help restore incentives to work by widening the gap between the low income paycheck and the welfare check.

McGovern asserts that the budget cuts amount to "dismantling of America's social program, its sense of social justice." He accuses the administration of believing that "government has no responsibility to take life better for those at the lower end of the economic spectrum."

The authors end their discussions by touching upon a frequent prediction that cutbacks in social welfare could result in riots in the streets by next summer. McGovern views this as a distinct possibility. Carleson and Hopkins dismiss this notion and predict an economic upturn for all income levels.

Besides, they ask, why should potential lawlessness be a rationale for keeping the underserving on the welfare rolls? "If people are receiving welfare who should not be, then they should be removed from the recipient lists. Period. No threat of unrest... should be permitted to cow a government into transferring income from one group of people to another when that transfer is not justified."

Richard L. Leshar is president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Dec. 1, the 335th day of 1981. There are 30 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Dec. 1, 1935, Chiang Kai-shek was elected president of the Kuomintang, China's ruling party.

On this date: In 1934, Joseph Stalin's collaborator, Serge Kirov, was assassinated, leading to a purge of the Russian Communist Party.

In 1958, a parochial school fire in Chicago killed 87 pupils and three Roman Catholic nuns.

In 1966, Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin was welcomed to Paris by President Charles de Gaulle.

And in 1977, Arab leaders opposed to Egypt's peace overtures to Israel convened in Tripoli, Libya, for what was called a summit meeting of resistance.

Ten years ago: The United States suspended licensing of arms shipments to India following reports that Indian troops had crossed the border into Pakistan.

Five years ago: Jose Lopez Portillo was sworn in as Mexico's 60th president.

One year ago: It was reported that Syria had doubled its military buildup, to 50,000 troops, along the border with Jordan, as Mideast tensions flared anew.

Today's birthdays: Actress Mary Martin is 68. Writer-comedian Woody Allen is 46. Comedian Richard Pryor is 41. Singer Bette Midler is 36.

Thought for today: When prosperity comes, do not use all of it. — Confucius, Chinese philosopher (551-479 B.C.)

In the wake of a good story

By D. R. SEGAL

Newspapers have something called a "second-day story," which is your basic journalistic turkey. It is the story you write when there is nothing more to be said. Some second-day stories are written to cover up the fact that you missed the first-day story and you don't want to admit it. What you do find some inconsequential fact, or similar, and put it up front in the story, thereafter repeating the information that the competition had the day before and you didn't.

By ART BUCHWALD

Deep throat rides again

By ART BUCHWALD

Not since "Deep Throat" met with Robert Redford in a garage in Washington has there been such a stir in the nation's capitol as over the recent interview in "Atlantic Monthly," given by David Stockman to writer William Greider.

Stockman catches colds easily in garages, as does Greider, so the men had breakfast together in a comfortable hotel across from the White House. It was at these meetings that Stockman unloaded to Greider what was happening with President Reagan's economic program.

The story of "Reaganomics" definitely has the makings of a great movie. You have the President of the United States, which Ronald Reagan could play himself, and a 35-year-old, driving, idealistic man, who thinks he can cut fraud and waste out of the government, give everyone a tax cut, increase military spending, and balance the budget over a period of three years.

He would be played by Mel Brooks. At the beginning of the movie, Mel is made Budget Director of the United States. In the first scene he takes President Carter's old budget and starts tearing pages out of it and throwing them out the window. "Nobody will be spared," he shouts, as he rips away at every department in the government.

For two months Pennsylvania Avenue, located under Mel's office, looks like it's having a ticker-tape parade.

Finally, Mel has the budget book down to the size of a Redskin football program, and he goes into the Oval Office and tosses it onto the President's desk.

"Here it is," Mel tells the President. "It has something for everybody. A safety net for the poor, a floor for the middle class, and no ceiling for the rich."

The President is delighted. "Mel, you're a genius. This document will allow me to go down in history as the greatest President since Raymond Massey."

Thus: "The masked gunman who held up the Fullerton A & P yesterday has been identified as the brother-in-law of a Tulsa, Okla., public accountant who went berserk in 1933 and drove his Hudson Speedster through the plate glass window of the J.C. Penney store in Hope, Ark. He was given three weeks probation."

Then you go back into what happened yesterday in Fullerton while you were asleep. You might think that the irrelevancy of the reference to the demented accountant in Oklahoma City would trouble the reader, but life consists largely of irrelevancies and non sequiturs and chances are nobody will pay any attention. Besides, some readers might say, "Hey, Ruth, remember when me and you went through Hope, Ark., and had a Big Mac and the buns was stale?" There are fallout benefits to almost anything if you're lucky.

I have written innumerable second-day stories, some of them slightly embroidered, but that was before Ethics were invented and we weren't so fussy about always boring the reader with the facts. The classic second-day story was one written for a large Eastern newspaper (Philadelphia, if I recall correctly) which consisted of a full column of biography and ended with the line: "He died Thursday." What the story did not choose to say was that it took the newspaper two days to find out rigor mortis had set in and the only way to get the story in the paper at all was to back it in, putting the old stuff at the bottom. I will bet that nobody but the family noticed.

Printed news is not nearly as timely as it used to be, of course, and now a great deal of our effort is devoted to "in-depth" writing and printing information that you can't catch in a 15-second television story. Perhaps this will result, ultimately, in a form of written journalism devoted almost entirely to trivialities. Stories that run as long as those in, say, the L.A. Times can contain all the wisdom of the ages and there is no excuse for leaving anything out at all. They read a little like second-day stories but they tell you all you want to know about the subject and then some.

Berry's World

Dear Abby

Some Christmas gifts won't keep on giving

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last year you devoted an entire column to what and what not to give for Christmas gifts. I thought it was one of the most helpful columns you ever wrote. Please run it again.

OVER 80

DEAR OVER 80: That column was so well-received I've updated it. Here it is:

DEAR READERS: Can you believe it's time to prepare for the holidays again? Well, it is, so do yourselves a favor and do your Christmas (or Hanukkah) shopping early.

If you're wondering what to give Aunt Bessie or Grandpa, who don't get out much, let me tell you what not to give them:

No dusting powder, after-shave or cologne. (They probably have several unopened boxes gathering dust on their closet shelves.)

Grandpa doesn't need another necktie, and Aunt Bessie doesn't really want any more brooches, necklaces or bracelets.

With the price of groceries so high, folks who live alone on a fixed income probably would be delighted to receive a basket of goodies. Include small cans of salmon, chicken, ham, tuna, vegetables, fruit, instant coffee, tea bags, crackers, cookies and instant soup mixes.

Older people who live in confined quarters do not need more "things" that are ornamental only. Don't send music boxes, statuettes or other bric-a-brac.

Another thoughtful gift is lined stationery with envelopes and a generous supply of postage stamps. (Enclose some felt-tip pens, too.)

The homebound will appreciate a box of greeting cards for all occasions so that they too can send birthday, anniversary, graduation, get-well and condolence cards to others. (Be a sport! Stamp some envelopes.)

Don't give anyone a gift of clothing unless you're absolutely sure the size is right. That goes for the color and style, too.

If you're tempted to pass along a scarf, purse, wallet or some other useless little doodad you received for Christmas three years ago, please don't. It's a pretty fair bet the recipient will find it just as useless as you did. (Besides, you might get it back the year after next.)

If someone on your gift list is living on a pension, a check for any amount would be much more appreciated than a frivolous little trinket. Or give someone who's counting pennies a year's subscription to a newspaper or magazine you know he or she will enjoy.

Please, don't ever send a gift in a box bearing the name of a store unless you bought it there. Should the recipient want to exchange it, he will be embarrassed, the store clerks will look bewildered, and it won't make you look too good.

If you buy a gift on sale, be sure it's appropriate, since if the recipient tries to take it back he will be told, "Sorry, sale merchandise is not returnable."

exercises once a week. Why just once a week? I'm sure other readers wonder the same thing. Does this apply to sit ups, leg raises etc?

DEAR READER — There have been careful studies on how to exercise to build the size and strength of muscles and how to maintain their size and strength. A proper set of strength exercises three times a week, spaced to provide at least one day of rest between exercise periods will produce the maximum development.

And once you have achieved your goal doing those exercises once a week will maintain your muscles in that state. This applies to all muscles. But it applies only to the use of exercises to enlarge and strengthen muscles. If you are exercising to use calories or develop endurance then you need to follow a different schedule. Too much exercise may even slow the optimal rate of muscle development.

LOVELY LEGS. Twenty-five-year-old Julie Lee of London is framed by the legs of Tracey Rawling, 20, in London's Hyde Park Sunday when the 20 finalists of the Miss Lovely Legs of Great Britain contest displayed their shapely assets. Julie is the bookies' favorite at 4 to 1 to win the final which takes place on Tuesday. The 20 finalists have won through from an original entry of some 5,000, with the winner of the contest taking nearly $2,000 cash prize, a trophy and other prizes including a modelling contract.

Dr. Lamb

Maybe a reaction to stress

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm 61 years old, working and have a mild case of hypoglycemia. I'm under a doctor's care. I would like to double check with you. Why do I have to go every six to eight weeks for a blood test and urine test? Can hypoglycemia be cured? I get no medication or needles, just diet and I have to carry a candy bar or sugar at all times, in case of weakness or dizziness. My blood pressure is mostly on the low side. Please explain this disease and send me a diet.

DEAR READER — Since only about one in 50 people running around with a diagnosis of low blood sugar really have hypoglycemia, I am reluctant to assume that you do.

It is a popular diagnosis with the public and with some doctors. I am afraid it is often used as a wastebasket for ill-defined symptoms that the doctor needs a diagnosis for and the patient demands an explanation for. And usually the patient demands a diagnosis other than anxiety — even when that is the real cause.

For some reason people are much more comfortable in believing those sweaty palms, fast heart beat and faint feelings are all because of low blood sugar rather than a reaction to stress or anxiety.

There are some people who have weakness, dizziness, sweating and may even collapse from a very low blood sugar level. In rare cases this is caused by a tumor producing too much insulin. It can also occur in a diabetic who takes too much insulin. In a small number of people it is caused by a faulty release or overproduction of insulin in response to eating sweets and starches.

These people have true reactive hypoglycemia and you may be one of them. The diagnosis cannot be made without demonstrating the low blood glucose level during an attack or at least demonstrating the same symptoms and low blood glucose during a glucose tolerance test.

This is all very complicated and I am sending you The Health Letter number 18-8, Hypoglycemia: The Low Blood Sugar Problem, to give you more details. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Meanwhile I would suggest that you wear some support hose or pressure bandages around your legs. If you are dizzy from low blood pressure that may help by preventing pooling of blood in your legs. Also avoid sweets and starches. The candy and sugar is only for an emergency.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your column about doing exercises to enlarge the muscles over the chest to increase your bust measurements. You said that once your pectoral muscles are as large as you want you can maintain their size by doing

LIFESTYLES

Don't give anyone a pet unless you're absolutely sure it's wanted and will be properly cared for. And if you want to delight someone who considers his pet a "member of the family," include a tin of cat or dog food for the pet.

Don't give wine or liquor unless you're sure the recipients imbibe. Candy, nuts and fruitcake make wonderful gifts for those who aren't counting calories, but please have compassion for those who are, and lead them not into temptation.

Resist giving toddlers stuffed animals and dolls that are bigger than they are. And parents will thank you for not sending their children horns, drums, sirens or whistles. If you give a child a game or book, be sure it's in the appropriate age range.

Instead of giving someone a gift with permission to "exchange it if it's not what you want," save yourself (and him) much time and effort and give him a gift certificate in the first place.

Holiday time can be very depressing for people who are alone, so if you know someone who might be alone and lonely, give him (or her) the best gift of all — an invitation to spend the holiday with you and your family. Loneliness is the ultimate poverty.

No indictment against hit man may cause case to be dismissed

HOUSTON (AP) — It has been 15 months since convicted hit man Charles V. Harrelson was accused of bond-jumping, his lawyer says, without an indictment being returned.

Defense attorney Don Ervin, who said he may seek to have the bond jumping trial dismissed, said failure to get an indictment is "real unusual."

Monday, a state judge delayed Harrelson's trial when it was discovered that the district attorney's office had failed to present the charge against the convicted hired killer to a grand jury to get an indictment.

The Speedy Trial Act requires that an indictment be filed within 120 days of a charge. Harrelson was arrested in Van Horn, Texas, in September 1980 and charged with failure to appear at a July 7, 1980, hearing in another case.

Federal investigators have named

Harrelson as the prime suspect in the May 29, 1979, slaying of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. in San Antonio.

Assistant District Attorney Ted Wilson said the failure to get an indictment was not necessarily the reason the trial was postponed, but conceded that the failure could cause the case to be dismissed. He said State District Judge Thomas Rount scheduled another trial in front of Harrelson's.

Harrelson was sentenced to 20 years in prison Oct. 22 after being convicted of violating a state law prohibiting previously convicted felons from possessing firearms away from their homes. That was the case on which Harrelson is accused of jumping bond.

"I had not checked the clerk's file prior to this case," Wilson said after Monday's postponement. "I'm the man to blame."

But Wilson noted that the speedy trial law allows for several exceptions, "one of which is trials on other charges."

"This matter has not deprived him of any of his liberty," Wilson said. "He's been in jail without bond since his arrest in Van Horn."

Harrelson was convicted of the 1968 murder-for-hire of a grain dealer near McAllen. He was paroled after serving six years of a 15-year sentence.

On Feb. 1, 1980, he was arrested here and charged with illegal possession of guns. Officers testified they found two .357 Magnum pistols, one .38-caliber revolver, a 12-gauge pump shotgun and a .300 Magnum Weatherby rifle in his car.

Harrelson denied any knowledge of the guns, and testified he never saw the weapons until he was forced out of his car and handcuffed.

Girl suffering from aging disease to meet aged little boys Wednesday

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A tiny 11-year-old girl, wizened by a rare aging disease, wants to ask two boys with the same affliction "if they're happy and if people make fun of them" when she meets them at Disneyland.

"I didn't know that other kids have the same disease I have," said Alicia Gowans of San Jose. "I'm sorry, but I'm happy."

She, Franisie Geringer, 8, and 9-year-old Mickey Hays suffer from progeria, a disease that strikes only one in 8 million children and makes them grow old 10 times faster than normal.

The boys, both bald with gnarled fingers and toes, met each other Sunday night at the Disneyland Hotel near the amusement park. By Monday they were pals, watching cartoons and eating lunch together.

Franisie traveled from his home in Orkney, South Africa, to visit Pinocchio, the fabled wooden puppet whose nose grows if he tells a lie. And when Mickey read about Franisie in an Associated Press story, he pestered his mother to get in touch with him. Donations paid for both boys' weeklong trips. The Sunshine Foundation, a Philadelphia-based charity that grants wishes to terminally ill children, coordinated Franisie's visit.

Alicia, who stands 3 feet tall and wears a wig to cover her bald head, "read an article and said she wanted to go with them" to Disneyland, her 13-year-old sister Elena she, Elena, their mother, Maria, and baby brother Richard will travel to Anaheim on Wednesday. Her father, Ken, a Lockheed worker, sister Diana, 9, and 8-year-old brother Kenneth will stay at home.

"I want to say hi" to Franisie and Mickey, Alicia, a fourth-grader, said on the telephone.

Alicia said she also wants to ask "if they're happy and if people make fun of them."

Elena said Alicia's disease "doesn't bother her. It's just like a small obstacle to her."

"But it does get out of hand when people start bothering her... making fun of her. Like we go places...and lots of people, like kids, will come up to her, they'll see her and they might scream and run away. That bothers her," Elena said.

Alicia is "very independent," her sister said, has lots of friends at school, enjoys playing with dolls and writes to her pen pal in Hong Kong that she likes pretty clothes.

She once won a bean-bag toss in a special Olympics contest, but now "she can't walk very well" because of arthritis, Elena said.

"Sometimes when we go to stores or some place, we carry her. Everybody just pitches in to carry her," Elena said.

"She even has a boyfriend" at school, said Elena, adding, "I guess he's jealous" that she's going to meet Franisie and Mickey at Disneyland.

*Tax-free interest rate of 8.34% is equal to 70% of average investment yield on 52-week U.S. Treasury Bills as of November 25, 1981 auction date. Yield is based on interest paid at maturity. Government regulations require: Tax exemption will be lost if account is closed before one year or used as collateral for a loan. Withdrawing your interest monthly or quarterly will result in lower annual interest than if the interest were left to maturity.

Interest rate based on average annual yield offered by Money Funds over the past 7 days as quoted in the November 27, 1981 Wall Street Journal.

Supreme Court rules in two Texas cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Firemen in Wichita Falls may still run for office and the Texas law providing triple damages in deceptive business practices lawsuits remains in force, after rulings from the Supreme Court.

Both Texas cases were decided Monday, without comment.

In the Wichita Falls case, a city ordinance barred city employees and appointed officials from being candidates in any election. Firefighter Duward W. Stone ran in 1978 for a county commissioner's post in neighboring Archer County.

He won the election and the City of Wichita Falls dismissed him from the fire department. However, in September 1979, a federal judge ordered the city to reinstate him with back pay.

Last June 4, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld that ruling, saying the city ordinance imposed more political activity curbs on its workers than state law allowed.

The high court also refused to set aside a damages award that had been tripled under the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act.

The court's ruling leaves intact a Texas law that lets victims of deceptive business practices recover three times the amount of money damages they suffer.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

Two old friends who have drifted out of your life over the past years will re-enter the scene in the year ahead. The three of you will cement new bonds which will make you inseparable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're a bit of a dreamer today and this is good. What your imagination can envision, you should be able to find practical ways to attain. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in each of the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This could be just a so-so day for you, unless you are materially motivated. Once you spot a prize in the offing, you're a real go-getter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You could run into a situation today similar to one that caused problems in the past. Your experience will guide you to avoid the pitfalls this time.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A situation you've been worrying about will not work out negatively as you anticipated. Stop fretting about something before the results are in.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This is a good day to get together with an old pal you've been neglecting a bit lately. He or she needs reassurances that you still care.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Success in your endeavors is likely today, but be prepared to put forth a concerted effort. Coasting won't fulfill your ambitions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Treat life as a game today, but don't take things so lightly that you'll fail to play to win. Be assertive in a spirit of good sportsmanship.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There are some changes you can make at this time which will be beneficial for your family. They could be a bit painful to implement, yet all will approve eventually.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may be called upon today to make a difficult decision affecting another. No ill will should result if you strive to be fair and impartial.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Rewards for your work today will be in exact proportion to your efforts. If you are looking for a large return, then be prepared to really put out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't be hesitant about stepping in and managing situations today which you see are beyond the capabilities of associates. Your firm hand is needed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There are several duties you failed to attend to lately because they are not on your fun list of things to do. You'd be wise to finish them today.

Ninth grade girls claim cage win

Pampa defeated Perryton in a ninth-grade girls' basketball game last night. Stephanie Smith led Pampa in scoring with 12 points while Carrie Richardson added 10 and Trecia Perkins, six. Leslie Cash pulled down seven rebounds. It was the first win of the season for Pampa after two previous losses to high school junior varsity teams. Pampa hosts Clarendon at 4:30 p.m. tonight in the high school fieldhouse.

Pampa visits Plainview tonight

The last time Pampa went against Plainview was last season's bi-district game. Pampa came from behind to carve out a 53-52 victory after trailing by as many as 15 points. Harvester coach Garland Nichols believes the Plainsmen will be in a vengeful mood when the two teams meet at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Plainview. "It's going to be a challenge for our kids," Nichols said. "Plainview is probably still upset over that loss. They thought they should have won the game." The Harvesters enter the contest with a 2-0 record while Plainview has a 2-2 mark. According to Randy Lightfoot (Plainview sports editor), we'll be playing before a full house so it's going to test the character of our kids.

The Harvesters are led by 6-3 junior Mike Nelson's 32.1 points per contest while 6-4 senior Charles Nelson (17.1 ppg) and 6-4 senior Terry Faggins (13.0) also provide double-figure scoring. Nelson (Charles) leads the team in rebounding with eight per game. "We worked out every day but Thanksgiving during the holiday break," Nichols said. "The team has been at it hard and we're just trying to make everything go for us." Things have been going great for the Harvesters, who own victories over Canyon, 76-46, and Clovis, N.M., 105-63. It has been an up-down season so far for Plainview. The Plainsmen defeated Clovis, 83-75, and Abernathy, 75-52, and lost to Borger, 58-54, and Levelland, 102-78.

"Plainview has primarily the same team we faced last year, including all their scoring people," Nichols said. Gil Wright, a 6-3 junior pivot, is averaging 23.1 points and 13 rebounds per game for Plainview. Jerry Walker, a 6-2 senior, is hitting at a 17.2 ppg clip while 6-1 senior Alton Jackson is averaging 14 points a game. Pampa's Lady Harvesters host Clarendon at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the high school fieldhouse. The Lady Harvesters, 1-4, won their only game against Vega, 45-34, for seventh place in the Clovis Cage Classic. Debi Young, a 6-1 junior, is averaging 15.2 points a game to lead the team in scoring. Keva Richardson, a 5-11 junior, is averaging 10.2 ppg.

Dolphins slip by Eagles, 13-10

MIAMI (AP) — As the star of the hour, Duriel Harris should have been basking in the limelight. Instead, he lay sprawled on the Orange Bowl turf, "embarrassed" before a national television audience. The Miami wide receiver had just plucked a Don Strock pass at the Philadelphia 7-yard-line and pranced into the end zone to draw the Dolphins to within one point of the Eagles with 5:21 left in a National Football League game eventually won by Miami 13-10 Monday night. Uncharacteristically "caught up in the emotion of the moment," the normally calm Harris leaped in the air and spiked the ball. When he touched ground, he twisted his left knee. Shaken, Harris had to be helped from the field as the television cameras zoomed in. "I've seen it happen before, but never thought it would happen to me. My first thought when I went to the ground was 'Man, I sure don't want to be embarrassed like this on national television,'" said a smiling Harris. "The leg feels pretty good right now. I just hope I can line up Sunday and I promise I won't do it again." Uwe von Schamann's conversion kick lifted the Dolphins into a 10-10 tie and three minutes later, his second field goal of the game — a 27-yarder set up by Lyle Blackwood's interception of a Ron Jaworski pass — gave Miami the victory. The triumph boosted the 8-4-1 Dolphins back into a virtual tie in the American Conference East with the New York Jets, who still technically lead the division because of their 1-0-1 record in head-to-head competition with Miami. The Eagles, meanwhile, dropped to 9-4 with their second straight loss and fell one game behind Dallas in the National Conference East. The two teams will meet in Dallas in two weeks. Strock, who replaced starter David Woodley with 12:13 remaining in the game and Miami trailing 10-3, said the touchdown pass to Harris was an audible designed to counter a Philadelphia blitz. Harris said he could hardly hear Strock's commands above the noise from the Orange Bowl crowd of 67,797, but guessed that Strock probably wanted him to slant across the middle. "It was an obvious blitz. All he (Harris) had to do was look at everybody up on the line," said Strock, who made the call on a fourth-and-four play at the 17-yard-line. "He ran the pattern and all I had to do was get the ball to him." Harris, who in the aftermath of a 16-15 loss to the Jets last week criticized Coach Don Shula's play selection, applauded the "gutsy" decision to go for a first down instead of a field goal that would have cut the Philadelphia lead to 10-6. "A lot of times we have settled for three points and come up short," said Harris. "This time we went for six, came up with the big play and went on to win." Jaworski, who completed 12 of 24 passes for 91 yards, directed a 13-play, 80-yard scoring drive that consumed the first 7:26 of the game as Philadelphia took a 7-0 lead on Wilbert Montgomery's 1-yard dive and Tony Franklin's conversion. The Dolphins fumbled away their first scoring opportunity. Woodley engineered a march that reached the Eagle 2 before Andra Franklin, slanting toward the end zone, was met by Philadelphia nose tackle Charlie Johnson. The rookie fullback lost the football and linebacker Jerry Robinson recovered in the end zone. The next time Miami got the ball, Woodley moved the Dolphins to the Philadelphia 25. But the drive stalled and von Schamann came on to boot a 42-yard field goal to cut the Eagle lead to 7-3. Tony Franklin's 42-yard field goal midway through the third quarter boosted Philadelphia's lead to 10-3, but costly penalties and a pair of turnovers in the fourth quarter led to the Eagles demise. "It was the kind of game that could have gone either way at any time," said Philadelphia Coach Dick Vermeil. "The breaks at the

NUMB ARMS, LEGS
Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals...call for in-Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Scientists still studying shuttle's generator failure

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — It will be two or three more weeks before scientists pinpoint the reason a generator aboard the space shuttle Columbia failed and forced an early return of the ship's historic second voyage into space, say astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly.

The astronauts, at their first news conference since the flight, Monday repeated that the mission accomplished "90-95 percent" of the goals despite the fact that the planned five-day flight was cut in half because of the defective generator.

Engle said curtailing the shuttle's second flight should not change plans to keep Columbia in orbit seven days next March when it is launched for a third time.

Astronauts Jack Robert Lousma and Charles Gordon Fullerton, both 45, were named to fly that mission.

Lousma, who was the pilot on the third Skylab mission in 1973 and spent 59 days in orbit, was named commander of the March shuttle flight. Fullerton, who has never flown in space, has been involved in the shuttle program since 1977.

After a fourth flight, NASA officials hope to proclaim the shuttle operational and eventually control a fleet of spaceships carrying people and equipment into space and back economically.

Engle said the generator that failed, one of three aboard the shuttle, had been used on the test shuttle Enterprise and had been reconditioned.

"In all probability, that contributed to the decision to cut our mission short," he said.

Truly said technicians at the Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral, Fla., will remove the broken generator within a few days and "it'll probably be two to three weeks before we know exactly why it failed."

He said he and Engle helped write the rules that forced them to come home early, and he said, "We regretfully agreed it was the right thing to do but we feel the system owes us three days in space."

Engle and Truly said they stayed awake much of their designated sleep time because "there was too much to look at."

"One of the problems with sleeping was anytime you'd wake up in the middle of the night and look out the window, that was it for the next hour because it was such a beautiful view," said Truly. "We were supposed to have been sleeping, but on a two-day flight, we figured we could sleep when we got home."

Like a couple of excited tourists: the astronauts showed reporters color slides — taken when they were supposed to have been asleep — of views from space of Iran, Libya, Afghanistan, Pakistan, Australia and the snow-capped Himalayas. "The thing I noticed was, there weren't any borders," said Truly. "When we flew over that part of the world, you couldn't help but think of all the turmoil over there. But it was really magnificent."

One of the main objectives of the second flight Nov. 12-14 was to test the Canadian-built remote control arm designed to deploy satellites or reach out and pluck them from orbit.
