Khadafy calls assassination plot 'big lies,' demands to see proof

NEW YORK (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafy denied sending assassins to kill President Reagan, but the State Department claimed it has "strong evidence" the Libyan leader is plotting the murder of Reagan and other U.S. officials.

Branding the Reagan administration's charges "big lies," Khadafy challenged the United States to show proof of such a plot.

"If they have evidence, we are ready to see this evidence," he said in a television interview broadcast live by satellite to the United States from his office in Tripoli.

"We are sure we haven't sent any people to kill Reagan or any other people in the world, and we want to see these big lies," Khadafy said on the ABC News program "This Week with David Brinkley."

"We want investigation, to see the truth, and let the American people and the Libyan people and the Congress of America to know the truth, who is liar: Reagan or Libya," he said. "I am challenging them. I am challenging them to make this investigation."

"It is the behavior of America... to assassinate me, to poison my food, and they tried many things to do this," he added but gave no details.

The Washington Post reported today that authoritative sources which it did not identify confirmed that a detailed, but puzzling, report was received by U.S. intelligence about a 10-man assassination team.

The report lists the names and aliases of all team members. All but two or three of the team members were said to be Libyans. According to the Post, the report says some of the men were trained in Eastern Europe.

The Post said the vagueness of references to sources for some of the information is causing problems in evaluating the information and raising doubts about its accuracy. Nevertheless, the report is being taken seriously by U.S. officials.

The State Department, in a statement released after the interview, said, "We have strong evidence that Khadafy has been planning the murder of American officials both here and overseas." The statement did not elaborate, but said:

"We certainly hope that Khadafy's denial means that he will abandon the use of terrorism and assassination as a part of his foreign policy. When he has stopped, we will know it."

Before the interview, ABC News reported that U.S. intelligence has identified the members of a five-man assassination squad made up of three Libyans, an Iranian and an East German. It said the FBI was tracking the team, and it was reportedly armed with automatic weapons and under Khadafy's direct control.

Newsweek magazine said Saturday that a Lebanese terrorist who defected told U.S. intelligence he was present at a meeting in Libya six or eight weeks ago at which Khadafy ordered Reagan and other top U.S. officials killed. The Secret Service has tightened protection recently of Reagan, Vice President George Bush, Cabinet officials and around Capitol Hill.

Wearing a red shirt buttoned to the neck and an embroidered blue cape, Khadafy spoke in heavily-accented English that was sometimes difficult to understand. He was helped by an off-camera aide who occasionally suggested a word or corrected something Khadafy said.

Reagan, he said, is "silly and he is not qualified to lead America as a superpower."

"He is dying like a child," he continued, and his aide broke in to correct him: "He is behaving."

"How you are silly people!" he said. "You are superpower, how you are afraid? Oh, it is silly this administration, and this president. America must get rid of this administration, and fell it down, as they did with Nixon, and elect another respectful president to get respect for America."

"That man was lying to us," said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., acting chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, who was interviewed on the same program.

But Moynihan said Khadafy's demand for an investigation to prove or disprove the charge of a Libyan assassination plot is "a fair request. I think something like this should be done."

He also proposed that America should immediately stop its purchases of Libyan oil and should make clear that there would be "the most severe consequences" for Khadafy and Libya if an assassination is attempted.

"They should know it's going to be exceeding unpleasant. We're not going to allow a murderer to be head of state and go about murdering other people," he said.

Thousands stranded in New England storm

By EDWARD MILLER
Associated Press Writer

A snowstorm called the worst in three seasons killed eight people and stranded thousands in New England, while Oregon gurgled under another dose of heavy rain and six people died because of fog that cloaked Southern California.

The surprise snowstorm dumped up to 2 feet of snow, hitting Massachusetts and Rhode Island the hardest. Gusting winds piled the snow into drifts, and motorists abandoned their cars on snowbound highways. Airports and schools were closed, and on the vacation island of Nantucket, 200 holiday revelers were stranded and as many as 30 whales beached themselves.

The storm that carried the snow was thought to be heading to sea, but it first swept inland and dumped 1 1/2 feet of snow on Boston, the most in one day in 50 years, and 15 inches in Providence, R.I.

"We brought our children to Boston to see the snow, but this is ridiculous," said George Porter of Miramar, Fla., who was stranded at Boston's Logan Airport with his wife, Beverly, and their two children, Glen, 13, and Tracy, 8.

Power lines in Rhode Island were knocked down, and 50,000 residents lost electricity. The Rhode Island Transit Authority suspended all bus service. Commonwealth Electric Co. reported blackouts for 35,000 customers in Duxbury, south of Boston, and another 5,000 in Marshfield.

"We're grateful it's Sunday because we don't have commuters going to work," said James Carlin, the Massachusetts secretary of transportation, as 2,500 snow plows cleared the highways.

The Weather Service measured 10 1/2 inches of snow at weather-locked Logan Airport, the heaviest 24-hour snowfall in December since 1926. Blowing snow was hampering efforts to clear runways.

Rocco DeLuca, a spokesman for the Rhode Island Highway Department, said it was the worst storm since a blizzard in 1978.

The estimated 2,000 tourists who went to Nantucket for a Christmas celebration had to spend Saturday night on the island whether they planned to or not because the storm forced cancellation of ferry runs and plane flights. About 200 people sought emergency shelter in hospitals, hotels and homes.

The airport reopened Sunday afternoon, but ferries weren't running. "Whatever comes along, comes along," said Paul Bowker, 53, of Brewster, Mass., a member of the Cape Cod Adventurers Club and one of 42 people staying at the Nantucket Cottage Hospital.

"We're all adventurers now." Two people were killed in weather-related traffic accidents in east-central Connecticut, one motorist was killed in a crash in New Hampshire and an 88-year-old man died in Vermont of a heart attack while brushing away snow from his house, authorities said.

There was more than a foot of snow in New Hampshire and Vermont, but there the crunch of snow brought memories of the rustle of dollars.

Lynn, Mass. police officer Donald Hodge, 56, died of an apparent heart attack while shoveling snow at his home Sunday. Also in Massachusetts, a 13-year-old boy in Dracut was killed sledding when a tree branch fell and hit him, and in Norwood, a motorist was killed when his car collided with a snowplow.

One death was reported in Rhode Island, that of a 78-year-old man who apparently suffered a heart attack while wiping snow from his car.

"I'd almost rather have 2 feet of snow on Boston Common than 2 feet of snow up here, only because of the excitement it creates," said Richard Owen of New Hampshire's Loon Mountain slopes.

The National Weather Service said the storm wasn't a blizzard because the winds didn't sustain speeds of 35 mph or more. The weather service said the winds were occasionally stronger than 35 mph, but only in gusts.

In Southern California, one of the six people who died because of the fog was a motorcyclist who perished on a San Diego freeway, where driver after driver ignored the low visibility, flying into a pile of wreckage that eventually totaled 31 cars, troopers said.

"Our officers had been through that area five minutes before the accident and said they were driving 25 mph and these guys were going by them 55 and 60 mph. It wasn't even safe to chase them," said trooper Jim Anderson. Visibility was estimated at 70 feet.

The Southern California fog is a thick swirling blanket that sneaks in at night, blots visibility into the morning, then ebbs later in the day, beginning its cycle again when the sun goes down.

Forecasters said the fog showed little sign of lifting today.

Americans, Japanese return to site of attack

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (AP) — With private thoughts of war and of peace, they come — American and Japanese alike — to remember the day President Franklin D. Roosevelt said would "live in infamy."

Forty years have passed since Japanese bombers pierced the early Sunday morning clouds over Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, to drop the deadly load that blasted America's Pacific fleet and ignited a generation's patriotism.

The billowing black clouds, the thud of armor-piercing bombs and the rattling percussion of anti-aircraft fire live only in the memories of those who survived the attack, which brought the United States into World War II.

But the day of history is not forgotten. A graceful white memorial straddles the submerged hull of the USS Arizona, with the names of 1,177 dead crewmen, most still buried within the ship, engraved on its marble wall.

It stands where the Arizona's mangled turrets once jutted from oil-slicked waters and the USS Oklahoma wallowed on its side, its air pockets a living hell for men who survived up to 17 days.

The memorial — near the shore of Ford Island in the middle of the harbor — honors the 2,341 American servicemen who lost their lives in the attack. Navy records list 68 civilian casualties as well.

The only other ship still on the harbor bottom, the battleship Utah, lies just off the opposite side of the island. It is commemorated with a shoreside plaque and flagpole.

Navy boats shuttle nearly 2,500 visitors a day from the National Park Service's new visitor center to the memorial, mostly Americans and Japanese sharing in the remembrance of World War II as they shared in its sacrifice.

"I could never have imagined it 40 years ago," said one recent visitor, Makato Bando, a Japanese Zero pilot who participated in the attack.

"I myself did not expect to return (from that mission)," he said. "I left my parachute behind. All of the pilots left their parachutes behind."

Bando's attack group followed the first Zeros to strike Pearl Harbor. "Because the first group already had gone, when we came over...ships were burning, hangars were burning... Most of the planes were already damaged," he said through an interpreter.

How did he feel about the mission? "When you are in the military, you have to follow your orders whether you like it or not," he said. "Our mission was to attack Pearl Harbor."

Bando was 24 then. Now robust and animated at 64, he recently retired from an insurance company and is filming his memoirs for a Japanese television station.

"That guy was doing his job like I was doing mine," said another recent survivor, speaking not specifically of Bando, but of his Japanese enemy in general.

Horst "Fred" Garbuschewski was at the memorial on a Tuesday afternoon, proudly wearing the hat and shirt of the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association, and telling his story to those who cared to ask.

Garbuschewski was 21 years old on Dec. 7, 1941. He was tuning up his clarinet for the Sunday call to colors aboard the USS California when he spotted the Japanese Zeros.

One pilot came so close, he said, he could have hit him with a baseball. A piece of shrapnel hit the back of his neck, but was deflected by a gas mask canister.

"Disaster! That's what I thought," he said. "I could see the Arizona burning." Hit in the forward magazine by a Japanese bomb, the Arizona sank in 38 feet of water, its crew dead where they lay. Fuel still seeps from its submerged tanks, its eerie sheen dispersed by the waves.

For some of Garbuschewski's listeners, the Arizona Memorial differs little from monuments to battle at Gettysburg or Saratoga.

But others remember a radio announcer breaking into the Dodgers-Giants football game to flash news of the Japanese attack.

Where were you Dec. 7, 1941?

Residents recall day of attack

Some local residents shared their memories of the first shock after hearing that Pearl Harbor had been bombed by the Japanese.

Pampa resident Ferne Bowman was living in Columbia, Mo., serving on the faculty of the University of Missouri.

"I remembered the day so well. There was an orchestra playing on one of the battleships at Pearl Harbor. It was being radioed to the States. My friend had been listening to the performance when it was interrupted by the bombing," Miss Bowman said.

"I was standing at my ironing board when she came in, but I hadn't been listening," she said.

"There was an immediate meeting called for everyone connected with the Agricultural Department. Although I was in the Home Economics Department, I was included because there was so much concerning food to be done," she said.

"I remember someone saying, 'We are at war.' We were told that people would be needing food, and we must be able to aid them," she said.

"We were formed into committees, and all the men in animal genetics and wheat productions were put to work. They were trying to see what foods could be transported and still be usable. We in the home economics department aided in that portion. We worked with dried eggs and frozen foods, vegetables and poultry products," she said.

Pampa resident Mrs. Gladys Harvey was in Amarillo for the day when the news about Pearl Harbor came.

"I've almost forgotten why I was in Amarillo, but we were going to church when we found out. My goodness! After we heard about the bombing, everyone was so disturbed. We didn't actually know what it would mean to our lives," she said.

Mrs. Charlie Thut also remembered where she was when the news came.

"We were playing golf here in Pampa, and after nine holes, someone went into the club. We heard the news then. Everybody was shocked. It was so unexpected. No one even managed to think beyond the next few days. I can barely remember," she said.

"As far as what it meant, you cannot even imagine what it means. The next thing I remember is that America declared war. That was just as scary. There were people who went down the next day and volunteered to serve in the American forces," she said.

Faye Dean Miller said, "I remember

Ranger Pete Yoshihara replied that the Navy tried, but explosive, poisonous gases forced it to abandon the effort. Two divers were killed.

Privately, some visitors ask the rangers why Japanese tourists are allowed to come back, and what they must be thinking.

"I guess they all have their own inner feelings," said park technician Fred Kukonu, unofficial historian of the memorial. "The Japanese people I've met here over the years are very remorseful."

The older ones remember what happened that morning. It's just like us going to Hiroshima or Nagasaki. How would you feel?"

"Many people think of it as a military park," said Superintendent Gary Cummins. "But we'd like to see this park as a monument to peace more so than war."

"I remember the end of the war, distinctly," she said.

"We were in school and the President, President Roosevelt, came on the radio and gave his speech and we listened. You must remember that we couldn't see the events on television. At night, they had blackouts," she said.

"Later years, after I married, my husband was in the service and I was able to see the place in California, Palos Verdes, where many of the Japanese people had lived before the war. They had left their perfect gardens and were sent to the camps," she said.

"I also remember the end of the war, distinctly," she said.

Twelve warrants left in drug bust

Warrants are waiting to be served on about 12 more suspects in connection with the city-wide drug raid here last Friday, in which 11 persons were arrested, according to Pampa Chief of Police J. J. Ryzman.

Ryzman said the department hopes to serve the rest of the warrants today. He said that some of those wanted are out of state and some are out of county but the department is taking measures to pick them up.

Eight of the 11 persons arrested had been released on bond Saturday.

Donald Earl Gryder, 22, 838 E. Frederick, charged with unlawful delivery of marijuana, was released Saturday on $7,500 bond.

Bobby Joe Owens, 24, Box 581, White Deer, charged with unlawful delivery of marijuana, was released Monday on $10,000 bond.

Susan Lanette Savage, 18, 425 Davis, remained in custody today on one count of unlawful delivery of heroin and one count of unlawful delivery of marijuana. Bond has been set at $20,000.

The primary officers involved were Sgt. Lynn Brown and Detective Danny Lance who along with other Pampa Police Department officers spent long hours in surveillance and collecting information from street sources.

Chief Ryzman asked for anyone who might have any information which would help his department on the drug crackdown efforts to contact Sgt. Lynn Brown at the Pampa Police Department, 669-7407.

Fire causes $10,000 damage

A fire at Irish Pipe Coating Company, 1405 E. Frederic, was reported Friday evening, causing an estimated $10,000 worth of damage to wiring and instruments in the building.

Harry Bursoy, spokesman at Irish Pipe Coating Company, said the fire was attributed to oil on the fume burner, which ignited itself.

Bursoy said that the fire was not very serious, and all equipment will be operating Tuesday morning as usual.

ON THE WAY. Sailors on one of the six Japanese aircraft carriers cheer as one of the 350 warplanes which attacked Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941, takes off 200 miles north of Hawaii. This view of the launch of the infamous attack was taken by a Japanese photographer and later captured by American forces. (Official Navy photograph)

Japanese pilot recalls the attack

EDITOR'S NOTE - On Dec. 7, 1941, Japan struck Pearl Harbor with the mightiest seaborne air force in history and plunged into war with the United States. Here is Pearl Harbor recalled, from the Japanese viewpoint, by one of the attackers, and by others who were at home.

BY RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) - Easing the throttle back, Lt. Yoshio Shiga gunned his Mitsubishi Zero fighter down the deck of the Imperial Navy aircraft carrier "Kaga." The little plane faltered to within a few feet of the rolling Pacific swells, bit into the stiff wind and climbed.

It was dawn, Dec. 7, 1941. In Japan, 3,200 miles west, it was shortly after midnight. The nation slept.

Shiga, 26, was helping lead the first wave of fighters toward Hawaii, 200 miles to the south. Strung out behind, as the sun rose out of the ocean, was the first wave of an aerial attack force of more than 350 warplanes on a mission that would be called infamous.

Maintaining radio silence, they homed in on music from a Honolulu radio station. Within two hours - just before 8 a.m. Hawaii time - they saw Pearl Harbor, where the U.S. Pacific Fleet roared languidly at anchor on a quiet Sunday morning.

Within minutes, Shiga was banking low, alert for U.S. fighters at Hickham

Field and gazing in amazement at the scene unfolding below.

Mitsubishi Type 97 torpedo bombers low, racing in single file toward the big ships moored along Ford Island's Battleship Row.

"It was like watching dragonflies laying eggs on the water," says Shiga. "The scene was very beautiful and peaceful... The green mountains in the background, the blue sea, the ships rocking gently on the water, painted white... Everything seemed to be happening in slow motion..."

Then, he said, high-level bombers attacked the hangers at nearby Hickham and "all hit their targets. There was so much smoke that it looked like a giant fireworks display. I kept wondering when the Americans would counterattack."

Within an hour after the first wave of bombers struck, the U.S. fleet lay in ruins - 18 ships sunk or damaged, including four of the eight battleships lost. More than 200 aircraft had been destroyed or damaged, 2,409 Americans killed, thousands more wounded.

The Japanese lost 29 aircraft and five midjet submarines, with 45 fliers and nine sailors aboard. But they failed to hit the most important targets - aircraft carriers, none of which were in port, and oil storage tanks.

That morning, Shiga says, "changed my life" and is forever burned into his memory.

"I think about it all the time. The weather was perfect. It was as if nobody expected war," said Shiga, who today, at 67, runs a small family business making riot gear for Japanese police.

Of the 609 fliers who took part in the Pearl Harbor attack, he is one of about 20 known to be still alive.

Shiga was a Navy flight lieutenant, already an ace in China, when secret training for "Operation Z" began in the fall of 1941 in Japan's Inland Sea.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Shiga said he realized he was involved in an event that would change history when he first saw the armada - eight destroyers, two battleships with 14-inch guns, three cruisers and six carriers with 360 planes; 81 fighters, 135 dive bombers, 104 high-altitude bombers and 40 torpedo bombers.

"After weeks of training, we knew we were in for something special," he recalled. The pilots were told their destination 10 days after the strike force left Hitokappu Bay, the final rendezvous point in the Kurile Islands off northern Japan, on Nov. 22.

"It came as no surprise - we had known for some time that Pearl Harbor was a possibility," said Shiga. "We were confident we could beat the U.S. Navy. We had trained so hard, in case they attacked Japan, that we thought we were invincible."

But it admits some of the heavily traveled frontiers - particularly the 142-mile border with Switzerland, a traditional money haven - cannot be guarded completely.

New tax laws have panicked many wealthy French. To fund a shorter work week, more government jobs to ease unemployment and other social programs, Mitterrand has slapped the affluent with a wealth tax, raised inheritance and business taxes and put higher taxes on yachts and other luxuries.

It is illegal to take more than $1,100 worth of francs out of the country, but most of the currency violation cases have far exceeded that amount.

With an eye on upper-crust smugglers, the government has increased customs controls at borders crossed by 251 million people last year.

Rich French exporting their money illegally

PARIS (AP) - Frightened by Socialist President Francois Mitterrand's soak-the-rich policy and his nationalization program, wealthy Frenchmen are smuggling staggering amounts of money abroad.

Sources in French financial circles say "black money" operations began to escalate late last year when nervous, foresighted investors anticipated the defeat of conservative President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and began transferring their assets to tax havens in Switzerland, Luxembourg, Liechtenstein and the Bahamas.

The customs agents' union estimates as much as $5.7 billion may have been sent out of the country illegally since Mitterrand won the presidency May 10.

The customs department reported it seized $3 million at frontier posts in August and September and said this may have been only the tip of the iceberg.

Puerto Ricans hijack three Venezuelan planes

BARRANQUILLA, Colombia (AP) - Heavily armed Puerto Rican nationalists hijacked three Venezuelan commercial airliners today with about 310 people aboard and forced the pilots to fly from Caracas to this Atlantic port city, said Ramon Pacheco, administrator of the airport.

A spokesman from the airport control tower said two of the planes landed at 7 a.m. EST with about 230 passengers aboard. The third plane, which arrived at 7:50 a.m., had about 80 aboard, the spokesman said.

Pacheco said one of the planes made a stop in Aruba and let 18 people - women and children - off the plane.

He said the men, armed with machine guns and hand grenades, were demanding fuel to fly to another country, but the administrator did not know where.

Two of the planes belong to Aeropostal airline and the third is an Avesna plane. Both are Venezuelan airlines.

The spokesman said the hijackers claim to belong to the nationalist group Ramon E. Betances of Puerto Rico.

The group, virtually unknown in Puerto Rico, is named for a Puerto Rican educator and politician.

Soviets said using winter fuel to keep Poles from moving out of line

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Soviet Union apparently is using an implied threat to withhold fuel supplies from Poland as a weapon to keep the Poles from moving too far out of line, according to U.S. intelligence sources.

Soviet officials have agreed to supply specified amounts of fuel to Poland for only a three-month period rather than the one-year normally covered by such deals between the two countries, the sources said.

The result is to leave a chilly economic sword dangling over the Poles during a winter in which the Kremlin is concerned about liberalizing tendencies in Poland, the sources said.

Assistant Defense Secretary Richard N. Perle alluded to the development in recent testimony to Congress in which he spoke of "the manipulation of energy supplies to Poland as the temperature drops... and Polish industry must plan its winter production."

He said the Soviets "are bringing political pressure to bear on Poland through a combination of political, economic, and military means."

Although Perle did not elaborate, the intelligence sources, who asked not to be identified, said he was referring to the Soviet gambit on future fuel shipments to the Poles.

Government employee publishing private version of consumer booklet on automobiles

WASHINGTON (AP) - When the Reagan administration decided it didn't want Jack Gillis to update "The Car Book" for 1982, he decided to go it on his own and is publishing a private version.

Gillis compiled the information for the 1981 edition and it turned out to be one of the most popular federal publications ever. More than 1.6 million free copies of the slick, four-color booklet were distributed.

If the private version does as well as $4.95 a copy, Gillis probably won't miss his government job much.

He turned in his notice Friday after telling his bosses what he was up to. His resignation, however, has not been accepted.

A source at the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said that is "because there may be some legal implications" over what Gillis has done. "A lot of people are stunned and mystified," added the source, who asked not to be identified.

Gillis was holding a news conference with his publisher today to remove some of the mystery.

Among those to appear with him were Joan Claybrook, head of the highway safety agency under the Carter administration, Esther Peterson, Carter's special assistant for consumer affairs, and Clarence Ditlow, head of the Center for Auto Safety.

Crippled children get special North Pole call

DALLAS (AP) — For most people, Santa Claus is just a pleasant memory from childhood days. But for 300 children hospitalized in the Dallas area, Santa Claus is very real. His name is Bob Allen. He gives of his time, talent and money to see that hospital walls are not barriers to Santa's touch. Allen, his wife and several friends paid a visit Sunday to the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children in Dallas, to set up a ham radio so about 20 youngsters could talk to Santa at the North Pole. Helen Allen and the rest were inside the hospital, operating the radio. Out in the hospital parking lot, sitting in a Winnebago, the children's questions and requests were fielded and answered by Allen, himself an amateur radio operator and pretty good Santa impersonator. Allen got the idea several years ago, when he let his own children use his ham radio to "talk to Santa." Making the idea available to children's hospitals and handicapped outpatients was a logical step for him. Then in 1979, after listening to several orders for Santa, Allen said he asked whether the requests were likely to be filled. He said the nurses told him, "No, many of these kids have no one, no money." So he kicked in $100 of his own. He talked to friends about the idea. They became interested. The fund grew. Last year, he and his friends brought Christmas to about 320 children, drawing on a fund that exceeds $6,000, he said. Compromises had to be made on only four gift requests — the rest, he hit right on the button. This year, at Scottish Rite, the hams introduced Santa to Curtis Lerette, 3, of Hillsboro, recuperating from an operation to replace deformed cartilage in his knee. When Curtis was told he could talk to Santa, he could hardly control his excitement. "I want a present! I want a choo-choo train!" Curtis informed Santa loudly, then tried to update Santa on his condition. "I got a cast on

Texas not insulated from national economy as thought

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texans have been told for years by their governors and others that the state is an economic island that can withstand bad times better than most other states. That belief is beginning to get a little shaky. A recent report from Comptroller Bob Bullock's office notes how Texas has not been able to escape the inflationary spiral. "In fact," said the report, "consumer prices in both Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston, the state's largest metropolitan areas and the only areas of Texas for which the federal government reports price changes, have been rising faster than the national average the last few years." "We've been under the impression that we're insulated from the national economy," said Ken Clapp, a member of the Texas Employment Commission, in a recent interview. "And I'm not saying we're going to hell in a handbasket. But the change to more manufacturing means that the time lag between troubles in the Northeast and here is a lot shorter." Clapp, former top aide to former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, explained that Texas' economy was once resistant to national recession cycles because of its reliance on energy and agriculture. However, the state's economy is becoming much more vulnerable as the number of manufacturing jobs increase. The comptroller's report, based on consumer price index figures from the U.S. Department of Labor, shows that between 1967 and 1980, consumer prices in Dallas-Fort Worth climbed a total of 155.6 percent, an average of 7.5 cent annually. In Houston, prices rose 165.4 percent, an average annual increase of 7.8 percent. Both of these increases were higher than the national average, which showed a 146.8 percent increase during the 13-year period, a 7.2 percent average annual rate. The consumer price index is based on the change in prices of a "market basket" of about 400 items — including food, housing, transportation, medical care and entertainment expenses. Monthly readings on these price changes are made in about 85 locations over the nation. While the federal government does not check price changes for other areas of Texas, researchers at Baylor University in Waco have developed indexes for the Austin and Waco metropolitan areas, the comptroller's report said. "Consumer prices in these areas are not rising quite as rapidly as they are in Houston and Dallas. However, they are rising more quickly than the national average," the report said. Although prices have been increasing faster in Texas, living costs still compare favorably with other states. Other federal statistics, not based on the consumer price index, show that living costs in Dallas were the lowest and Houston's the third lowest among 25 major urban areas, the comptroller's report said. In 1980, it took $20,766 for an average family of four to maintain an "intermediate" standard of living in Dallas. In Houston, it was $21,572. Both figures are below the national average of $23,134.

Evacuees return home

WEST ORANGE, Texas (AP) — Officials were still investigating the cause of a 16-car train derailment that forced the evacuation of hundreds of residents after a punctured tanker car began to leak highly flammable butyl alcohol. Most of the residents of a 12-square block area of the Southwest Texas city had returned home by 10 p.m. Sunday evening, about nine hours after two locomotives and 16 cars of a 100-car Southern Pacific train derailed, authorities said. About half the evacuees were allowed to return to their homes five hours later, said Police Chief Toney Taylor. He declined to estimate precisely how many people were evacuated. No injuries were reported. Officials were in the process of mopping up the last of the spill late Sunday night. The 30,000-gallon tank contained an estimated 29,000 gallons of butyl alcohol and officials were pumping 15,000 gallons out of the tank and recovering 14,000 gallons from roadside ditches, said David Fisher, superintendent of the Lafayette Division of Southern Pacific. Workers built sand dikes in the ditches to contain the flammable liquid and prevent it from reaching Adams Bayou, which leads to the Sabine River. Fisher said officials believed a mechanical malfunction involving the cars may have contributed to the crash. "We think something was dragging just before the derailment," Fisher said. Officials first feared that two derailed cars marked as containing chlorine gas were leaking, but later determined the tanks were empty. Most of the derailed cars overturned, as did seven empty cars that were hit by the derailed Southern Pacific train. Fisher said the derailment caused an estimated $30,000 damage to the tracks and $500,000 damage to the train. Firefighters from five fire departments were at the scene in city of 5,000 people near the Louisiana border. Foam brought from Port Neches was spread on the alcohol to keep it cool, said West Orange Fire Chief Terry Clark.

Theft ring hit up to 50 gasoline stations

DALLAS (AP) — A gasoline theft ring may have stolen gas from as many as 50 stations in the Dallas and Houston areas, authorities say. The ring was discovered when an Ellis County Sheriff's Department deputy chased a gasoline truck, an 18-wheel tanker truck and a motor home from a truck stop. Wilmer police joined in the chase and authorities say the driver was fatally shot as he tried to ram a police car. The Texas Department of Public Safety has taken over the investigation of the theft ring because the thieves operated in more than one Texas city, said a DPS officer who asked not to be identified. Investigators say all of the vehicles being chased had been stolen. The motor home was hauling a van that was rigged with a communications system that let the driver speak with someone operating a mechanical pump in the rear of the vehicle, the DPS officer said. The van had a 1,000-gallon tank and could drive over underground gasoline storage tanks at service stations, cut off the locks, drop a hose through a trap door and pump out the gasoline, he said.

Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals...call for in depth consultation in Layman's terms.

'Big time' to jail for con man

DALLAS (AP) — A 26-year-old writer whose mother calls him "the best con artist in the state" says his three-week masquerade as a high-living Austin lawyer was so convincing he forgot how to sign his real name. Police say Vernon Stodghill used a credit card stolen from a friend to charge more than $5,000 at Dallas' fanciest establishments during the three weeks. "I just figured no one was going to like me unless I had money or was famous," Stodghill said, explaining his ruse. The comments came during an interview in the Dallas County Jail before he was transferred to city jail in Austin, where he faces felony charges — theft of services, credit card abuse and two counts of forgery. If convicted, he could be sentenced to up to 40 years in prison. He has not been charged in Dallas. "I am a Fort Worth boy, and I wanted to make the big time in Dallas," Stodghill said. "So I created a person — a Harvard attorney, tall, handsome, with a beautiful wife. As soon as I got off the plane in Dallas, that's who I became." Stodghill checked into a Dallas hotel Nov. 3. After a night of heavy drinking, he awoke coughing and vomiting blood. He spent nine days at St. Paul Hospital. "It was the greatest time of my life," he said. "Everyone at the hospital kept asking me for legal advice, about divorces, wills, car accidents, everything. It was pure heaven."

Long-ruling party candidate wins election

CIUDAD ACUNA, Mexico (AP) — Officials of Mexico's long-ruling party said they found it surprising that the Mexican Communist Party pulled a strong second in municipal elections in this border town. Though the Institutional Revolutionary Party's candidate, Jesus Maria Ramon Valdez, won the municipal presidency, the well-financed Communist party candidate, Evaristo Perez Arreola, took 20 percent of the vote, the San Angelo Standard-Times reported Sunday. "That's a surprise," Valdez told the newspaper. "I did not expect them to get so much." Unofficial counts showed a turnout of 10,000 voters Sunday, with 70 percent of the votes going to Valdez. The third party in the race, National Action Party, had about 10 percent of the unofficial count Sunday night. "In the history of Acuna, this is the biggest voter turnout," Valdez said. However, Communist party officials said the voter turnout was low. Jose Aranda Reynel, PCM's secretary general, told the Standard-Times a victory for his party was not possible unless more of Acuna's 28,000 registered voters went to the polls. "The people say they want change but they cannot achieve it until they vote," he said. "Nevertheless, we will continue the fight — in a democratic manner." Valdez said the victory will give his party "the chance to strengthen the PRI with new people, with young people, with people who never before had the opportunity to participate with their community." Valdez, who had promised a "new look" to municipal government, said his first act will be to have an open-air inaugural instead of the traditional private ceremony.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Faith in America's economic integrity

President Reagan's clear purpose in scheduling the recent White House press conference was to communicate his administration's undiminished intention to stay the economic course.

He simply reminded the world that, in the face of unexpected difficulties, he is holding firm: he will press for further reductions in federal spending and oppose any immediate increase in taxes.

"This government must stiffen its spine and not throw in the towel on our fight to get federal spending under control," he said in a keynote sentence obviously addressed to Congress. And he threatened to veto any "budget busting bill."

At the same time, Reagan indicated he has fine-tuned his pending economic proposals. Instead of a $13 billion package of new spending cuts and $3 billion in higher taxes as he proposed on Sept. 24, the president now proposes an additional budget trim of $10 - $2 billion from defense and $8 billion in across-the-board cuts.

To the rising outcry that Reaganomics are responsible for the recession, high interest rates, rising unemployment, and a ballooning deficit, the president pointed out that his economic program had been in effect only 40 days and could hardly be expected to right the wrongs of 40 years of unbridled federal spending.

Although he refrained from saying so, Reagan could have once more challenged his critics to suggest a better and less-painful alternative. And he could have reminded Congress, which seems as eager as always to raise taxes instead of cutting the budget, that there are still plenty of ways to effect big savings without lacerating the poor—such as eliminating expensive provisions in the farm bill that exceed administration targets by $500 million.

Actually, the outward signs of Reaganomic difficulties being trumpeted about these days are misleading. Obscured in the swirling rhetoric is a dramatic reduction in the growth rate of federal spending from 14.5 percent years to 9 percent. Clearly this is no mean achievement for an administration in office less than one year.

An equally encouraging result from getting some control over federal spending is the receding inflation rate. Even though the inflation rate rose in the third quarter, some prominent economists believe the underlying inflation rate—after adjustments for seasonal fluctuations—has declined to around 8 percent from 12 percent in the first quarter of 1980.

And, finally, the prime interest rate has declined from 20.5 percent in September of this year to 17 percent. Leading bankers predict that it will reach 16 percent by year's end.

And, finally, the prime interest rate has declined from 20.5 percent in September of this year to 17 percent. Leading bankers predict it will reach 16 percent by year's end.

By reaffirming his steadfast purpose to heal the nation's economy and by pledging a predictability in federal fiscal policies that has been lacking for decades, Reagan effectively insured that favorable trends in government spending, inflation and interest rates will continue.

Faith in America's economic integrity plays a large, if unmeasured, part in dampening feverish expectations of inflation and resulting high interest rates. As we get our economic house in order and restore that faith there will be a national economic upturn as surely as day follows night.

By GREGORY N. JONSSON
Officials of the Japanese Foreign Ministry have announced Japan's intent to present 14 new trade demands to the U.S. government. This new trade package is a preemptive move by Japan to counteract an anticipated request by Washington that Japan ease control on imports to cut its trade surplus with the U.S. The Japanese government will ask the U.S. for a response to its 14-point proposal at a scheduled bilateral trade meeting, Dec. 7-9, in Tokyo.

It appears that Japan is going on the offensive in its trade war with the United States. Japanese officials have accused Washington of indiscriminately applying U.S. antidumping regulations whose purpose it is to penalize foreign producers that sell goods in the U.S. at a price below their own domestic markets.

As a trading partner, Japan is becoming truculent as well as two-faced. At the very same time the Japanese attack our import policies and invade our markets. Japan has erected a high trade wall against the U.S. aluminum industry. In order to protect their own ailing aluminum industry, Japan has established, through its Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI), a tariff on only the 85 percent of American aluminum imports sold on the low-cost spot-market. Thus, in the one major manufacturing industry in which the U.S. has successfully penetrated the Japanese market, it is being squeezed out by a calculated government decision to prop up one of the few ailing industries in Japan.

According to the Japan Aluminum Federation, the price of an aluminum ingot imported from the U.S. is about $1595 per ton at current exchange rates compared with $2,075 per ton when produced by Japanese companies. American imports account for 60 percent of all spot-market imports of aluminum to Japan.

Officials from Japan's aluminum industry confess that without relief from U.S. aluminum exporters, some Japanese companies may go bankrupt. To them, it seems, free trade is not a reciprocal arrangement. It is held up as a moral imperative whenever the U.S. steel and automotive industries cry foul. Free trade is virtually non-existent in a world of government-subsidized, guided or directed industry. Free trade is a worthy goal, but it must not become a shibboleth.

It is difficult to formulate a position on trade issues in view of the complex nature of international trade in our time. Painful economic contractions have occurred in the U.S. because of onslaughts of low-priced foreign products. To some degree, our current hardships can be attributed to U.S. economic policies, as well as labor costs, that have made genuine competition more difficult and less profitable. On the other hand, the U.S. suffers from foreign cartels, state-controlled business enterprises, and unfair competition in the form of dumping of goods in order to achieve market share.

U.S. trade policies should be based on recognition of current trade realities. These policies should deny to foreign producers unfair advantages which they enjoy through cartelization or state subsidization or guidance. The Japanese, with whom we have the most severe trade problems, should not be permitted to use free trade principles as an economic subterfuge. This also applies to the European Economic Community which has abundant state intervention in trade.

Genuinely free trade would be a blessing, but the realities of modern trade are often nasty, brutish and unfair. They require a pragmatic response.

The Pearl Harbor lesson

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN
Pearl Harbor Day 1981 — 40 years after the "day of infamy" — is a good day to remember what happened and to assess anew the special character of Japan.

That long ago Sunday was the worst day in the history of the United States. America came closest to defeat that day than at any time since it won its independence. But for the absence of the aircraft carriers from Pearl Harbor, the U.S. Pacific fleet would have been utterly destroyed. With the fleet shattered, Hawaii would have been ripe for invasion. The Japanese would have carried the war to the West Coast. It might have been a decade or more before the United States defeated Imperial Japan.

Young Americans have little or no understanding of how grim that might have been. The Pacific War is a short, improbable section in a history book. The faraway islands of the Pacific are now tourist spots, not hellholes where thousands of Marines died.

It's not a good idea for nations to rub old wounds, but, at least, they should understand how grievous were the wounds.

While television is still full of programs about German war crimes in World War II, the Japanese infamy goes virtually unmentioned. Yet America entered the war because of a sneak attack by Japan. The declaration of war against Germany was only a byproduct of Japan's early morning raid on Pearl Harbor.

Today, Americans are concerned about a sneak nuclear attack from the Soviet Union. They should recall that the country experienced a staggering attack once before. Americans encountered the duplicity of the Japanese in 1941, and they should not forget it.

Today, Japan is a peaceful nation. Americans can be thankful that Japanese don't have a new, militaristic regime eager to carve out another empire in the Pacific basin. While we prod them to do more in their own defense, we must be careful not to steer them in the direction of their past.

We need to study that past, especially during the pre-war and war years, to understand the Japanese. Gifted, energetic, brave, unified and superbly self-disciplined, they are a formidable people. An earlier generation of Americans learned that from Pearl Harbor to Okinawa.

Though the General Togos and Admiral Yamamotos have vanished into history, the militant spirit of the Japanese, who dislike foreigners, hasn't disappeared. In our time, the Japanese are marching on economic fronts. They have created an economic empire since 1945 that dwarfs the military empire they created in their string of victories in 1941. Moreover, they have not completed their conquests. They look to domination of the economies of the United States and Western Europe. If they succeed, Japan will be the Number 1 economic power in the world by the end of this century — an extraordinary feat for a country with less than half our population.

We can't let that happen, any more than we could let the Japanese extend their sway across the Pacific in World War II. We can't let them use our natural resources to gain economic supremacy. It would be a humiliation for the American people — almost as great a humiliation as military defeat a generation ago — for our people to become hewers of wood and drawers of water for Japan.

We must mobilize our economic strength today, to deal with the Japanese economic challenge, precisely as we mobilized our military strength 40 years ago.

The black problem

By PAUL HARVEY
Face it, white Americans are inclined smugly to refer to "the black problem" as though it were separate from their own.

Statistically, more black criminals... More black jobless... More black illegitimacy... Whites find it easier to tolerate the danger, the difficulty and the taxes these statistics reveal by "segregating" themselves from responsibility for them.

But on their way to Chicago are thousands of black people who recognize their problem for what it is: spiritual.

The countdown is under way for a massive national conference of black evangelical Christians — the largest ever of its kind — in Chicago in late December.

The premise: That black Americans have sought salvation by legislation and it didn't work. That the deepest needs of black America are spiritual, so the solution must be spiritual.

Crawford Lorritys of Atlanta, chairman of the conference planning committee, says, "Black America's future hinges on three things:

"The effectiveness of the black church in leading a spiritual awakening.

"The responsiveness of the unchurched to hear and heed the gospel message.

"And the long-term commitment of America's black Christians to be missionaries in their own country."

Seminars during the Chicago conference will include specifics on how to communicate the gospel.

Workshops will prescribe applications — in counseling, in education and in the black family.

Most of the sicknesses of society — black and white — are self-inflicted relating to drink, drugs, promiscuity and stress.

The Christian's quiet heart offers practical immunizations against all of them.

Two generations of black Americans have let Big Government re-establish slavery. Plantation politics promised handouts in exchange for subservience.

Public housing and urban renewal destroyed more dwelling units than they constructed because — as Scripture taught — the only renewal that works for any of us begins inside-out.

The black evangelicals who will converge in Chicago in December will address themselves to moral regeneration.

History could record a bitter irony if blacks and non-blacks pass each other going in opposite directions.

Today in history

Today is Monday, Dec. 7, the 31st day of 1981. There are 24 days remaining in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Dec. 7, 1941, Japan bombed Pearl Harbor, sending the United States into World War II.

On this date: In 1917, the United States declared war on Austria-Hungary.

In 1953, David Ben-Gurion resigned as premier of Israel.

In 1974, Archbishop Makarios returned to Cyprus after five months in exile, saying he would pardon those who had plotted his overthrow.

And in 1979, militants occupying the U.S. embassy in Tehran reaffirmed their demand that the ousted Shah be returned to Iran as a condition for the American hostages' release.

Ten years ago: An unmanned Soviet space capsule was sending radio and television signals back from the planet Mars.

Five years ago: The U.N. Security Council approved Kurt Waldheim for a second five-year term as Secretary-General.

One year ago: The White House charged the Soviet Union had completed preparations for possible intervention in Poland, where labor unrest threatened the Communist regime's birthdays.

Today's birthdays: Actor Eli Wallach is 66 years old. Actress Ellen Burstyn is 49. And baseball star Johnny Bench is 34.

Thought For Today: I must fight if I would win. Anything worth fighting is worth fighting for. — Viscount Nelson, British naval commander (1758-1805).

Arms reductions must be balanced

President Reagan's call for sweeping reductions in nuclear and conventional arms in Europe and renewed talks with Moscow early next year on strategic missile cutbacks was clearly designed to counter the Russian peace offensive and to ease nuclear jitters in Europe and elsewhere. It was necessary for the president to thus establish his commitment to controls on the nuclear arms race and to match Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's battle for public opinion in Europe over the course of NATO strategy.

Pointing to the continuing buildup of Russian intermediate range SS-20, SS-5, and SS-4 missiles aimed at European targets, Reagan said that the plan to deploy Pershing and cruise missiles in Western Europe remains a necessary deterrent, but that the United States is prepared to cancel their deployment if the Russians dismantle their intermediate range arsenal.

The fact that Brezhnev has previously rejected any such symmetry as ignoring other Atlantic Alliance nuclear weapons that can reach Russian targets suggests that Reagan's proposal was directed more to West European capitals and particularly Bonn.

Yet, even viewed as counter propaganda and as a reminder to the West Europeans that their real danger lies in Russian missiles already in place rather than NATO missiles not yet deployed, Reagan's challenge to the Russians will require some response beyond outright rejection. In the talks in Geneva on European nuclear disarmament, the United States now enters with a talking basis from which it must be hoped some positive negotiating proposals will emerge.

Those talks will deal with an intricate balance of arms reductions, involving a disparate array of conventional and nuclear weapons beyond the Russian SS-20 and the American Pershing and cruise missiles the president cited in his speech before the national Press Club in Washington.

For both sides, reductions that maintain genuine parity must entail painstakingly difficult balances of all kinds of forces.

Dear Abby

Tattletale deserved to be told off

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When I first read the letter from "Concerned Mom," whose husband grounded their 12-year-old son for reporting the neighbors to the police without consulting his parents, I agreed with your answer: "The boy's motives may not have been all that commendable." (The police confiscated two dying marijuana plants in the neighbors' garden.)

In a later column you ran some letters objecting to your answer.

Those letters contained one common element — the illegality of marijuana, which is not in dispute. The issue was: Should the kid have called the police without consulting his parents? (Note that this was not a violent crime, or one that had to be reported now to ensure that the criminals did not escape.)

I think for the boy to have informed the police without consulting his parents was sneaky, disrespectful and plain rotten! Two of the letters praised the boy for informing on his neighbors — one even stated that he should have done so secretly. That technique is used in Soviet Russia. The children are decorated for informing on their neighbors, and parents too! The Nazis did the same thing in Germany. What a dangerous tradition to establish.

I think your answer was right on, Abby. Don't back down!

CONCERNED COLLEGE STUDENT

DEAR CONCERNED: Since giving equal time to my detractors, I've heard from an impressive number of supporters. Thanks to you and all the others who wrote. In my heart I knew I was right.

there's no chance of my having any more babies. Last week I noticed Jim was walking funny, and he acted like he was in pain. At first he said nothing was wrong, then he admitted that he had had a vasectomy on his lunch hour! Abby, since I've had a hysterectomy, why should my husband need a vasectomy?

DISILLUSIONED

DEAR DIS: Maybe he doesn't trust your hysterectomy.

DEAR ABBY: Because of a recent suggestion in your column, I have made some changes in my choice of Christmas gifts.

I had planned to give all of my grandchildren sweaters with their names on them in great big letters.

You pointed out that a child molester could approach a child and, noting the "Linda," "Jimmy" or "Suzie" on the sweater, pretend to be a friend of the family and address the child by name. The child, of course, would then believe the stranger could be trusted.

Abby, a million thanks for discouraging children's clothing bearing the child's name. For identification purposes, the name of the child can be sewn on the inside of the garment.

CARLY SIMON

Carly seeks still more changes

By JAMES SIMON
Associated Press Writer

Last year she released the hardest rocking album of her career. This year it's a collection of heart-felt torch songs, many written 20 years or so before rock 'n' roll was born.

Carly Simon promises there are even more changes ahead.

"I wanted to go off in a totally different direction. I don't even want to go along the beaten path again. I want to expand, push myself, try things I haven't tried and not just be stuck in the small category of rock singer. If I think I can do it, I might as well try, because even if I fail it's just a failure. It's not the end of the world."

The words pour out at a break-neck pace. At age 36, Carly Simon seems to have turned a corner in her life.

Her marriage to James Taylor is at a standstill; they've been separated for more than a year. She's settled in their New York apartment with their FILE

"This is the music I knew from my childhood, my first musical language," she said in a telephone interview. "It's a tribute to the music my parents taught me. The old standards were always being played in my house, so I guess my affinity for them is natural."

"I worked with (producer) Mike Mainieri last year on 'Come Upstairs,' which was very consciously a rock 'n' roll album. In between takes he and I and pianist Warren Bernhardt would jam on all these old songs. They were amazed that I knew all the words, and I would start to think of making an album of them."

Aided by a crack crew of backup musicians, including

Phil Woods on saxophone and Lee Ritenour on guitar, she does a superb job of communicating the wistful, heart-rending emotion of the torch genre.

The songs, tales of passionate love and the sadness of lost love, are perfect to "listen to at 1 a.m., drinking wine," she says with a laugh.

Will long-time fans of the singer-songwriter — now with blonde streaks in her long black hair — share her enthusiasm for the change of direction?

The album jumped to No. 55 on the Billboard charts after four weeks, a healthy performance, and has received generally favorable reviews. But many rock stations that were delighted with her upbeat tunes such as "Come Upstairs" and "Take Me As I Am" last year have shunned the new release.

Asked about airplay and sales, she says she hopes the release of a single, the 1950s standard "Hurt," will spark interest.

"One funny thing is that the people who like this album have been more enthusiastic about it than any other I've ever done," she says. "It may not have reached that wide an audience yet, but the audience it has reached seems very enthusiastic — kind of coming out of the closet in admitting they really like music from this period."

"It's an older audience," she says, "but my kids and their friends like a lot of the songs."

Dr. Lamb

Check your risk factors

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you tell me what I can do to find out about my risk factors? I read your column and you said they were a good guide as to what you should do about exercise.

Will exercise help you lower your risk factors? Which do you think is the most important, an exercise stress test with an EKG or finding out what your risk factors are before you begin an exercise program? I am planning on becoming a serious jogger.

I am 47 years old, male, 5 feet 11 and weigh 165 pounds. My blood pressure has always been normal and I do not smoke. I am a little heavy since I do have a little fat around the middle.

DEAR READER — The three most important risk factors are cigarette smoking, blood pressure and cholesterol level. You should see your doctor and let him have your cholesterol levels checked. You might also want your HDL (high density lipoprotein — sometimes called good cholesterol) measured also. And he will want to check your blood pressure.

In general, the lower your cholesterol and your blood pressure, the less likely you are to have significant fatty-cholesterol deposits in your arteries that predispose to heart attacks and strokes. Also, the less you smoke the better off you are but you will still have an increased risk even with light smoking.

How these three factors are used to evaluate your risk of heart disease is explained in The Health Letter number 13-2, How To Measure Your Risk of Heart Disease, which I am sending you.

Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio

City Station, New York, NY 10019.

I think the risk factors are far more important in determining what you should do about exercise than an EKG stress test. Many such tests are normal despite serious changes in the arteries. There are studies that show a good correlation between the risk factors and the amount of disease you have.

You should limit your exercise to walking and combine that with a weight control program until your risk factors are in a favorable range. If they are high you should be careful about over-exercising until they are down. How you train is as important as how you are tested.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 66-year-old male with a very irregular heartbeat. My doctor has me on Lanoxin which I have taken for about two years. He says I will have to take Lanoxin the rest of my life. He doesn't give me any refills so I have to see him every two months. Is this a come-on or not? Also do the pills have anything to do with my impotence? I have no desire for sex anymore and couldn't perform if I wanted to.

DEAR READER — Evidently you have a serious medical problem and your doctor simply wants to insure that he gets to see you every two months. You should be glad he is taking such good care of you. Lanoxin is one of the digitalis preparations. Anyone taking digitalis should never stop it without their doctor's concurrence or they may develop immediate heart problems.

I suspect your impotence is related to your health status — your heart, rather than the medicine itself. You know when people don't feel good they often do not have the same interest in sex or the same ability.

Apricot Chops

Full of flavor but not overly spicy.

- 6 center-cut loin pork chops, about 1-inch thick (3 1/2 to 4 pounds)
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 2 cans (each 17 ounces) unpeeled apricot halves in heavy syrup, drained
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1/2 cup finely chopped onion
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 1/2 teaspoons curry powder
- 1/4 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 cup clear fat-free chicken broth
- 1 cup milk

Trim almost all fat from around chops. In a large skillet in the hot oil brown chops well; arrange chops in a single layer in a 13 1/2 by 8 1/2 by 1 1/2-inch baking dish. Top chops with apricots, tucking some around sides. Pour fat from skillet; add butter and onion; over low heat stir to get up brown particles; stir in salt, pepper, curry powder, flour, broth and milk. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and boiling. Pour over chops and apricots. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until tender — about 1 hour. Skim any excess fat from surface. Serve at once. Makes 6 servings.

EASY ELEGANT HORS D'OEUVRES

Paula Magann, a working mother and wife of restaurateur Richard Magann of Oklahoma City, changed my mind about how hard it was to serve hot hors d'oeuvres with these tasty morsels before an informal supper one evening.

Mushroom caps (3 to 5 per person depending on how heavy a meal you are planning and whether or not there are other hors d'oeuvres.)

Cream cheese

Sausage

Hot sauce

Arrange the mushroom caps on a baking sheet and put one drop of hot sauce in each one. Place 1/2 to 1 teaspoon of cream cheese in each one and top with an equal amount of sausage. Place under the broiler till sausage is cooked. Serve immediately.

FRENCH FRIED MUSHROOMS

1 pound fresh mushrooms

1 cup Bisquit

1 tablespoon Nature's Seasoning (You can season from scratch with salt, pepper, celery, onion, garlic and parsley but this is so easy!)

water to make thin batter (if it's thick you'll have globs of breading rather than a crispy crust)

Wash and dry mushrooms and trim ends of stems. Dip in batter and fry in hot oil till golden brown. Turn once to brown both sides.

This makes an excellent fry coating for thin slices of acorn or other squash, fresh whole green beans, tiny whole okra or most any small or sliced vegetable that you enjoy just barely done.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

This coming year things should work out in ways that will enable you to get more of the material things for which you have been longing. Keep your shopping list within reasonable limits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you are working for someone else today, put forth an honest effort to earn what you are being paid. If the boss sees you goofing off, it could affect your job. Predictions of what's in store for you in each season following your birth date and where your luck and opportunities lie are in your new Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Normally you know how to get pretty good mileage from the money you spend, but today could be an exception. You'll pay more for something than you should.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In order to be a good leader today you will have to be firm and forthright. Flattery or appeasement won't earn you the respect of underlings.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're innately kind and compassionate, and someone with ulterior motives who recognizes these qualities in you might try to take advantage today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Someone whom you met recently may want to borrow something from you today. It would be wise to get to know this person better before lending anything.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Much can be accomplished today to advance your self-interests provided you're not intimidated by challenge or hard work. Get rolling early.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be charming and friendly toward members of the opposite sex today, but be careful not to become too attentive toward someone who is already spoken for.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be loving and caring toward your special someone today, but by the same token try not to smother him or her by being too possessive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Important agreements, especially those affecting your career, should be spelled out on paper today, rather than being done orally or by a handshake.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Normally you're very industrious, but today you could ignore your tasks unless they are special chores you truly enjoy doing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't ask people who are fond of you to do things today that could cause them considerable inconvenience. They'll resent being used.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'd better tie a string around your finger. There's a possibility you might forget something vital you promised to do for your mate.

Dorsett breaks 1,500 yards in single-season rushing against Colts

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Tony Dorsett was glad he broke the 1,500-yard single-season rushing mark for the first time, but he's more concerned about Dallas' game next week against the Philadelphia Eagles.

"It took me five years to do it. I set that goal as a rookie," Dorsett said Sunday after gaining 175 yards to compile a season rushing total of 1,506 yards during the Cowboys' 37-13 victory over Baltimore.

"It's just a matter of being used and exerting your energies. I'm glad I've been able to go 1,500," Dorsett said after he set a personal record of 30 carries in a game.

Dorsett wrestled the National Football League's top rushing spot from New Orleans' George Rogers, who has 1,497 yards, and admitted he'd like to stay in that place for good.

"I'd like to win the (rushing) title," Dorsett said. "It's definitely on my mind, but it's not my main concern. It would be gravy, icing on the cake as far as the season goes."

The Cowboys, 11-3, are two games ahead of Philadelphia in the National Conference's Eastern Division following the Eagles' 15-13 loss to Washington.

"That's a great spot to be in without a doubt, to be two games up in any division, in any sport at this part of the season," Dorsett said. But Dorsett acknowledged that the Eagles, 9-5, will be a tough opponent.

"They are going to regroup, you're going to see two very emotionally high football teams at that game."

The Cowboys took a 27-6 halftime lead against the Colts, 1-13, on two touchdown runs by Ron Springs and a 42-yard field goal by Rafael Septien, who later hit two more from 35 and 31 yards.

Baltimore's Curtis Dickey, who also ran 20 yards for a touchdown in the third quarter, scored on a 67-yard run after Spring's second TD in the first period. But Dallas came back to score another TD following a tricky pass play early in the second quarter.

Back-up quarterback Glenn Carano, making his first start in five seasons, threw a lateral to Drew Pearson, who hit Tony Hill for a 59-yard pass that put the ball on the Colt 9. Carano, who played quarterback for the injured Danny White, then tossed a third-down pass to Springs in the end zone to increase the Cowboys' lead to 24-6.

"We had to regain the momentum right away," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "If we could get the touchdown, it would take the wind out of their sails."

Landry praised Dickey, who rushed 130 yards on 15 carries. "I knew he had great explosive power, if you gave him a hole... you're not going to catch him. We gave him daylight twice today and he took advantage of it."

James Jones also scored for Dallas on a 59-yard run in the fourth quarter after Septien's third field goal.

The Colts, who have lost 13 in a row since winning the season opener against New England, were led by back-up quarterback David Humm, who started in place of the injured Bert Jones.

Steelers, Raiders clash tonight for chance at the Super Bowl

OAKLAND (AP) — The surging Pittsburgh Steelers hope to increase their playoff chances while the Oakland Raiders try to avoid elimination when the last two Super Bowl champions clash at the Oakland Coliseum tonight.

Pittsburgh is riding a three-game winning streak with an 8-5 record going into the nationally televised National Football League game. A victory would move the Steelers to within a game of front-running Cincinnati in the American Conference Central Division, with the Bengals scheduled to play at Pittsburgh next Sunday.

"It's just one of those seasons. We've struggled some defensively, we've struggled some offensively. We seem to have it a little under control now," said Steelers Coach Chuck Noll in explaining Pittsburgh's sudden surge.

With Terry Bradshaw passing for one touchdown and running for another, and with Franco Harris rushing for 114 yards and a TD, the Steelers looked like their old, NFL-dominating selves last week in a 24-0 rout of Los Angeles. In their last three games, the Steelers have averaged 30 points, and their opponents have committed 17 turnovers.

The Raiders, meanwhile, have blown hot and cold in compiling a 6-7 record. They trail three teams in the AFC West but mathematically could still earn a wild card playoff berth.

Injuries have plagued Oakland, veterans such as guard Gene Upshaw have been benched, and second-year pro Marc Wilson has taken over for Jim Plunkett, who last January led the team to victory in the Super Bowl.

Rather than thinking Super Bowl again, the Raiders now are concentrating on avoiding their first losing season since 1964.

Oakland is coming off an impressive 32-31 victory over Seattle in which Wilson fired three touchdown passes in the second half as the Raiders erased a 24-3 deficit.

If the Raiders have an advantage against the Steelers, it is their record in Monday night games — 17-1-1. Last year they defeated the Steelers 45-34 in the highest-scoring Monday night game ever.

That was a pivotal contest for both teams. It marked the emergence of Plunkett as a comeback star, and spelled the beginning of the end for the Steelers' chances to defend their 1980 Super Bowl crown.

Pittsburgh wide receiver Lynn Swann, hospitalized briefly with a bruised lung suffered against the Rams, is expected to play.

Cowboys lead division by two games

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Tom Landry was succinct, as usual.

"With a two-game lead, we only have to win one of our last two games. That's a plus," the Dallas Cowboys coach said.

The Cowboys took a two-game lead over Philadelphia in the National Football Conference's Eastern Division Sunday with a 37-13 drubbing of Baltimore while the Eagles were losing 15-13 to the Washington Redskins. Dallas is 11-3; Philadelphia is 9-5.

The only team with a chance to clinch its division Sunday was Cincinnati, but the Bengals lost, 21-3, to San Francisco, cutting their lead in the American Conference Central Division to 1½ games over Pittsburgh, which plays at Oakland tonight.

Cincinnati is 10-4; Pittsburgh is 8-5.

Cincinnati plays Pittsburgh next Sunday in a possible showdown for that division lead, and Bengals Coach Forrest Gregg said: "There's a lot on the line. If that's not enough motivation, there's nothing I can do."

The 49ers already had clinched the NFC West with an 11-3 record, but there was a new leader in the NFC's Black-and-Blue Central Division after Sunday's play. Tampa Bay defeated Atlanta 24-23 while Detroit and Minnesota were losing, and the Buccaneers took a one-game lead in the division with an 8-6 record. The Lions, Vikings and Green Bay Packers were tied for second at 7-7.

Green Bay defeated Detroit 31-17, and the Chicago Bears downed the Vikings 10-9.

The AFC Eastern and Western divisions also were in upheaval. The Miami Dolphins defeated New England 24-14, and the New York Jets lost in Seattle, 27-23, to snap a tie in the AFC East. The Dolphins, 9-4-1, led the 8-5-1 Jets by one game.

The Buffalo Bills defeated San Diego 28-27 to slip into second in the division, a half game back of Miami at 9-5.

A three-way deadlock was broken in the AFC West when Denver got by Kansas City 16-13. Denver, 9-5, took a one-game lead over the Chiefs and the Chargers, both at 8-6.

In the remaining National Football League contests, the New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals kept alive slim hopes of earning wild card playoff berths with their 7-7 records. The Giants defeated Los Angeles 10-7, and St. Louis walloped New Orleans 30-3.

Redskins 15, Eagles 13
Trailing 13-9, Monte Coleman intercepted a Ron Jaworski pass and returned it 52 yards for a Redskins' touchdown with 6:29 to play, and the Eagles' third straight loss was sealed when they botched a field goal attempt with less than a minute left.

Barefooted kicker Tony Franklin was lined up for a 25-yard attempt — a chip shot for him — with 54 seconds left, but holder John Sciarra bobbled the snap, depriving Franklin of his chance to tie it up.

"John is the most surehanded football player we have," Coach Dick Vermeil said. "but he dropped the ball. Maybe we are just snakebit." Maybe we are just snakebit.

After playing Dallas, the Eagles finish at home against St. Louis.

49ers 21, Bengals 3
Joe Montana threw two touchdown passes and ran for another, and the San Francisco capitalized on six Cincinnati turnovers to hold the Bengals to three points.

Cincinnati outrushed and outpassed the 49ers but lost the ball three times on fumbles. In addition, Bengals quarterback Ken Anderson was intercepted twice before he left the game with a sprained toe in the third quarter, and the 49ers intercepted his backup, Jack Thompson, once.

"They had been playing as the best team in the league," 49ers Coach Bill Walsh said of the Bengals. "but they don't quite meet up to their standards this week. I still think they are one of the great teams in the league."

Bucs 24, Falcons 2
Tampa Bay quarterback Doug Williams threw a 71-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Kevin House with 5:39 to play, and Atlanta's Mick Luckhurst missed a 45-yard field goal try with

The TD strike was Williams' second of the day and came four minutes after William Andrews ran 2 yards to give Atlanta a 23-17 lead. The loss left Atlanta at 7-7, four games behind San Francisco in the NFC West.

The Bucs went into the game in a three-way for the NFC Central lead with Detroit and Minnesota, all one game ahead of Green Bay.

Packers 31, Lions 17
Lynn Dickey passed for 279 yards and a pair of touchdowns as the Packers snapped Detroit's three-game winning streak. Dickey's longer scoring strike went for 15 yards to James Lofton and gave Green Bay a 21-10 lead in the third quarter. Lofton caught four passes for 90 yards.

Diet facts & fallacies

These nutritional tips brought to you by DIET CENTER
Sherry Conklin
412 W. Kingsmill
Hughes Bldg.

You've been invited to a Christmas or New Year's party, and the hostess has asked you to bring some hors d'oeuvres. Instead of the usual calorie-laden appetizers, try these nutritionally refreshing ideas. Prepare some "fruit kabobs." Arrange chunked fruits such as apples, oranges, pineapples and strawberries. Alternate on skewers. These kabobs are attractive, delicious and low in calories. Or try a vegetable plate with celery fans, carrot curls, radish roses and cauliflowerettes. Place a bowl of low-calorie dip in the center of this colorful arrangement. Serve whole-grain crackers with slices of hard cheese for a crunchy treat. Everyone will not only enjoy these refreshing alternatives, but your efforts will also be appreciated by anyone trying to keep those extra "holiday pounds" from creeping on. Your Diet Center Counselor can furnish you with many other nutritious, low-calorie holiday ideas.

Nation's big job push appears to have failed

NEW YORK (AP) — The following unemployment problem, which could become the worst since the Great Depression of the 1930s, follows three decades of national commitment to more jobs and greater job security.

That commitment was a legacy of the disastrous times just before World War II, when joblessness peaked at nearly 25 percent of the civilian labor force. The nation proclaimed it should never happen again.

Jobs were made by a government that grew huge, by a resurgent private sector, by efforts of dedicated unions. It was a massive push to make more work, and to improve wages, benefits, and working conditions.

It seemed to be the answer, for a time anyway. From 1947 through 1969 the jobless rate never exceeded 6.8 percent (in 1958); in 13 years it remained below 5. But since then it has been below 5 in only 1970 and 1973.

In the deep recession of 1975 the jobless rate for the year rose to 8.5 percent before dropping steadily to a low of 5.8 percent in 1979. Last year it reached 8.4, with more than 9 million Americans officially counted as being without jobs.

Moreover, the rate is likely to continue rising; private sector and government forecasters alike say monthly rates as high as 9 percent are probable next year. Three straight monthly declines in new orders at factories, the latest one (October) especially sharp, foretell more weakness in jobs and underscore the general economic deterioration.

Another factor, not quantified as easily as the unemployment rate, also tints the picture darker. Pressured by recession-inflation, businesses everywhere are re-evaluating their white collar needs, seeking to pare off layers of office help. And it has become common in labor-management talks this year for management to seek a return of wage and other benefits labor had won in earlier negotiations.

Santa and the ICE KING

by Lucrece Beale

SYNOPSIS: The Eskimos of young Ononik's village are worried because for some mysterious reason the Ice King of the North has prevented the summer from arriving on schedule. To placate the Ice King, the villagers plan a festival in his honor.

CHAPTER TWO THE FESTIVAL

"The Ice King of the North is very angry," said Miski, the wise man of the Eskimo village. "He sends frigid winds and storms of snow even though it is August and the ice on the sea should long since have melted."

"The Ice King of the North is angry," said the Wise Man.

"Hooray!" cried Ononik, the Eskimo boy. "I love festivals! Dancing! And singing! And eating! Oh, that will be good!" But Ononik's mother said, "How can we have a festival? Hunting has been so poor there is scarcely any food left in the village. In my house we are down to our last seal flipper."

of wooden hoops covered with the thin inner tissues of seals. When all was ready the villagers returned to the igloo places and stamped on the floor and moved their arms up and down in curious patterns meant to placate the Ice King.

of Miski, the wise man. They all sat on the floor of the snow house and Miski stood in the middle and sang a song to the Ice King.

After that the food was served. Ononik took half his share outside to his dog Keotuk who crouched at the door.

He asked the Ice King to get over his anger and bring the Eskimos good weather so they could have good hunting again. Then Miski sat down and the men began to beat on their drums with sticks made of ivory walrus tusks.

"Don't worry," said Ononik soothingly to his dog. "This has been a festival such as I have never seen. It is bound to have pleased the Ice King and tomorrow good weather will come and we will have good hunting again."

Boom! Boom! Boom! Then the Eskimos sang. First they sang in a soft chant keeping time to the drum beat. Presently their voices rose and their singing became louder than the wind roaring around the igloo. Ononik, anxious to please the Ice King, sang

"Listen to me, Keotuk," he murmured. "I have a plan!" Keotuk wagged his tail and licked his master's chin as if to say, "I'll do anything you say!"

So the Eskimos returned to their igloos. The women melted snow and put their last hunks of meat in the water to stew. The men made flat drums out of walrus tusks. The studentiser were on an excursion of the Kemmerer High School Ski Club. Salt Lake County deputies said the bus was going down Little Cottonwood Canyon on its way back from the Alta ski resort.

Two students killed in ski bus accident

MURRAY, Utah (AP) — The driver of a ski-club bus that went out of control and wrecked, killing two students and seriously injuring two others, says she had to pump the brakes to stop earlier in the day but thought nothing of it at the time.

"When I stopped, going out of town this morning at the railroad tracks, I had to pump hard and it lurched a little," said Julie Ann Nishi, 25, of Kemmerer, Wyo.

The school bus was traveling down a steep mountain road near Murray Sunday when the brakes went out, and Mrs. Nishi tried desperately to slow it by downshifting and running its side against a canyon wall.

But the bus flipped rockeeted off the side of the 38 students inside.
