

Mobs protest slaying of Iran's No. 2 man

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Mobs surged through Tehran today protesting an explosion that killed Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, considered Iran's second most powerful man, and 68 other revolutionary leaders, the Iranian government and news agency reported.

Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai and Parliament Speaker Ayatollah Hashemi Rafsanjani, who along with Beheshti formed Iran's temporary ruling triumvirate, were called out of the Islamic Republican Party headquarters only minutes before Sunday night's bombing, an observer told The Associated Press in Beirut.

Crowds in Tehran chanted "Death to America" and Tehran Radio blamed the bombing on "mercenaries connected to the U.S.A."

The new agency Pars accused "counter-revolutionaries," the fundamentalist government's label for the underground leftists who rallied to the defense of fugitive ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

The leftist groups, labeled "hypocrites" by the government, also came under fire from the demonstrators in the streets of Tehran.

"Hypocrites, Your Death Has Come," shouted the demonstrators, many of them members of Beheshti's fanatical Hezbollah organization.

The bombing, the boldest attack yet by anti-government forces, and the reprisal demonstrations appeared to edge the nation closer to a civil war between secular and fundamentalist factions.

It was the second bombing in two days on leaders of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime. Leftists were blamed for a bomb that exploded Saturday in a crowded Tehran mosque and wounded the Islamic Republican Party's chief spokesman, Seyyed Ali Khomeini.

Those killed at the party headquarters included four ministers and six deputy ministers in Rajai's government and 20 members of the Majlis, the Iranian Parliament, Pars said.

A state funeral was scheduled Tuesday for the victims, and a week of mourning was proclaimed.

Hojatoleslam Mohammad Montazeri, the official who on Friday defended the execution of Bani-Sadr's supporters, was also killed.

Beheshti, the 52-year-old president of the Iranian Supreme Court, was regarded as the man most likely to succeed Khomeini as supreme leader of the Iranian revolution, and many considered him the most powerful man in the country.

He headed the IRP, which controls the Majlis and the government, and directed the party's power struggle with Bani-Sadr. He was a member of the three-man interim council that took over the presidency.

Komeini appointed Seyyed Abdolkarim Musavi-Ardabili, a cleric and prosecutor general, as president of the Supreme Court to replace Beheshti, Tehran Radio reported. He also named Rabbani Amlashi as prosecutor general, the radio said.

Pars said Khomeini met with Rajai and Rafsanjani today to begin filling the government posts left vacant by the explosion.

Tehran Radio said the search of the wreckage of the two-story party headquarters on Sarchehmeh Street ended at dawn with 32 bodies recovered. But Pars quoted the Tehran coroner's office as reporting 69 people killed. Pars said at least 30 people were injured.

Supreme Court sets aside death sentences, some left intact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today set aside the death sentences of seven convicted Texas murderers.

The justices told a state appeals court to restudy the sentences in light of their latest decision involving the rights of defendants facing possible capital punishment.

At the same time, however, the nation's highest court left intact the death sentences of six other Texas murderers whose appeals also raised that issue.

On May 18, the Supreme Court ruled in a Texas case that murder defendants must be warned prior to psychiatric testing if the test results are used after conviction to help choose life or death as punishment.

It is possible that new sentencing trials will have to be held for each of the six men.

Today's action set aside the death sentences — but not the murder convictions — of these Texas death row inmates:

—John Wilder, sentenced to die for the Dec. 22, 1975, shooting death of Duane Jaixen, a 19-year-old attendant at a service station along Interstate 30 near Hooks in Bowie County.

—Artie Armour, also convicted in Jaixen's murder.

—Moses Lopez Garcia, convicted for the Sept. 26, 1974, slaying in Houston of David Lewis during a robbery.

—James Charles Simmons Jr., convicted in the Jan. 5, 1979, beating and stabbing death of Truett Ledford, the 70-year-old owner of a Hill County service station.

—Thelette Brandon, who was convicted in 1976 for the stabbing death of Waco police sergeant Roger Barnett.

—James R. Parker.

—Mag Daleno Rodriguez, convicted in the Feb. 8, 1977, shooting death of Maria Guajardo during a grocery store robbery in San Antonio.

The court left intact the death sentences of these death row inmates:

—Billy Joe Woods, convicted in the Oct. 15, 1975, beating and strangulation death of 62-year-old Mable Ehatt in Houston.

—Walter Bell Jr., convicted in the July 19, 1974, murder of Irene Chisum in Port Arthur.

—Charlie Brooks Jr., given the death sentence for the Dec. 14, 1976, kidnapping and murder in Fort Worth of David Gregory.

—Randy Glenn Green, convicted of beating to death Harold Eugene Robinson, the 72-year-old owner of a Baytown tavern on June 29, 1976.

—James Demouchette, found guilty of the Oct. 18, 1976, shooting death of Scott Sorrells during an armed robbery at a Houston pizza restaurant.

—Thomas Barefoot, sentenced to death for the shooting death of Harker Height police officer Carl Levin on Aug. 7, 1978.

Titanic search vessel begins second mission

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — The research vessel Gyré was at sea today on its second mission to sound the ocean bottom for clues to the precise whereabouts of the lost luxury liner Titanic.

The 174-foot ship pulled away from the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution dock at 12:45 Sunday for a nine-day voyage. On board was a 20-man team of scientists and film makers, plus sonar, metal detectors and television cameras with strobe lights.

Weather and sea conditions were good as the ship moved out to the North Atlantic, with a small group of newsmen and photographers recording the scene.

The voyage is the second attempt by the group to find the watery grave of the Titanic and the $300 million worth of diamonds believed still aboard.

The scientists will try to determine if one of 14 sonar scanner photos made last summer depicts the Titanic, which hit an iceberg on her maiden voyage from Europe to the United States and sank April 14, 1912, in 12,000 feet of water, 380 miles southeast of Newfoundland. An estimated 1,500 people were killed.

"Last year we went out with a long range sonar system and covered an area about a dozen miles in radius around that point and found some very likely looking spots," said Dr. Fred Spiess of the University of California's Scripps Institution. "We're going back now and work over those individual patches."

The search will be led by Michael Harris, the head of International Expeditions of Tampa, Fla. He said if the Titanic is found, the plan is to use the 51-foot submarine Aluminaut, owned by Reynolds Aluminum, in next summer's expedition.

"The Aluminaut is equipped with exterior arms that can stretch nine feet," said Harris. "It could reach into open areas of the Titanic and recover some artifacts, possibly even some valuables."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The heat is on for censure — in one form or another — for several Texas Democrats who again rebuffed party leaders to help give President Reagan a crucial victory several days ago on his budget.

Rep. Mickey Leland, a Democrat who represents an inner-city Houston district, declared open warfare Saturday against Reps. Kent Hance of Lubbock, Phil Gramm of College Station and Charlie Stenholm of Stamford.

Gramm, as author and co-sponsor of the bipartisan budget bill favored by the president but despised by liberal Democrats, has drawn the biggest fire.

But Hance and Stenholm are being fired at more and more — Hance because he is co-sponsor of the president's bipartisan cut bill and Stenholm because he is chairman of the conservative coalition that has provided the bulk of the Democratic defections in support of the president.

Charles Manatt, Democratic national chairman, has said he'd like to kick Gramm out of the party, and Rep. Toby Moffett, a liberal Democrat from Connecticut, is planning to circulate a petition to boot Gramm out of his spot

Rodeo entry deadline approaching

Wednesday is the final day for local contestants to enter the 1981 Top O' Texas Rodeo, Rodeo Association President Archie Maness said today.

Maness reminded all cowboys and cowgirls living in Gray County that they may enter the professional rodeo to be conducted here on July 9, provided they pay their entry fees prior to the July 1 deadline. The Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association will not accept late entries, he said.

Entries are now being taken at the rodeo headquarters at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce office in the Hughes Building.

To date, eight local persons have entered the rodeo. Because of this, Maness said he is concerned that the amateur contestants have forgotten the deadline. He urged anyone wishing to participate in the rodeo to pay their entry fees immediately.

An Amateur Jackpot Double Muggin will be conducted this year, rodeo officials said. The entry fee for the three - member teams in this event will be $35, plus a $5 stock charge. The entry fees will be split between the winners at 40, 30, 20 and 10 percent.

The younger cowboys and cowgirls who plan to participate in the Top O' Texas Kid Pony Show July 6-8 are reminded that entries opened at 9 a.m. today. Rodeo officials said prospective entrants should register and pay their entry fees at the rodeo headquarters as soon as possible.

A line - up of the professional entries in the Top O' Texas Rodeo will not be available until early next week, officials said. Entries will not be accepted for the professional riders until July 2, rodeo officials said.

Chinese Communist Party leader resigns

PEKING (AP) — Communist Party Chairman Hua Guofeng, chosen successor of the late Mao Tse-tung, has resigned and the party's Central Committee elected Hu Yaobang to replace him, the official Chinese news agency Xinhua reported today.

Hua was elected a vice chairman, along with Premier Zhao Ziyang, the news agency said. It reported the Central Committee accepted Hua's resignation on a unanimous vote.

Deng Xiaoping, the party vice chairman who is considered China's top leader, was elected chairman of the party's key military commission, Xinhua said.

Hua and Zhao join four other vice chairmen — Deng, Ye Jianying, Li Xiannian and Chen Yun — in making up the party's elite standing committee of the policy-setting Politburo.

Hu, 67, an ally of Deng, had been the party's general secretary but Western diplomatic sources have said he ran the day-to-day affairs of the party since last November.

Hua, closely associated with now discredited "leftist" policies of Mao, had been seen at public party functions only a few times since then and has reportedly undergone ideological rehabilitation at the party school here.

The Central Committee decision rang down the curtain on the era of Mao, who died in 1976 but whose influence lingered with party conservatives.

The replacement of Hua at the party helm had long been expected by Western observers here and amounts to a seal of approval by the party leaders on the modernization and economic and political alignment with the West instituted under Deng's leadership.

Heat is on rebel Texas Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — The heat is on for censure — in one form or another — for several Texas Democrats who again rebuffed party leaders to help give President Reagan a crucial victory several days ago on his budget.

Rep. Mickey Leland, a Democrat who represents an inner-city Houston district, declared open warfare Saturday against Reps. Kent Hance of Lubbock, Phil Gramm of College Station and Charlie Stenholm of Stamford.

Gramm, as author and co-sponsor of the bipartisan budget bill favored by the president but despised by liberal Democrats, has drawn the biggest fire.

But Hance and Stenholm are being fired at more and more — Hance because he is co-sponsor of the president's bipartisan cut bill and Stenholm because he is chairman of the conservative coalition that has provided the bulk of the Democratic defections in support of the president.

Charles Manatt, Democratic national chairman, has said he'd like to kick Gramm out of the party, and Rep. Toby Moffett, a liberal Democrat from Connecticut, is planning to circulate a petition to boot Gramm out of his spot on the Budget Committee.

Leland told the Texas Coalition of Black Democrats in an Amarillo speech that all three should be stripped of their important committee assignments, that future support and funds of the Democratic Party, either nationally or in Texas, should be denied them, and that "real" Democrats should be sought to oppose them in future elections.

Stenholm is chairman of the 47-member Conservative Democratic Forum, which was organized last November to give conservatives more clout. It resulted in conservatives like Hance and Gramm, both only second-term members of Congress, being named to important committee spots — Gramm to the Budget Committee and Hance to Ways and Means.

The coalition delivered 29 votes to the president Thursday and Friday, allowing him to win approval for his budget, despite the GOP being outnumbered by more than 50 seats in the Democratic-controlled House.

"The truth is, these turncoats are not members of our party. They have abandoned us and have already divided the party," Leland said, adding that he will seek "real Democrats" to run for election in 1982 against Hance, Gramm and Stenholm, whom he called "three evil men."

Gramm said he has no plans to switch to the Republican Party, despite the fire he has come under.

He acknowledged that in accomplishing his "finest hour" with the victory on the budget bill, he might very well not be re-named to the Budget Committee in the next term of Congress.

"That may well be," he said. "I was elected, and they could very well un-elect me. Getting on the committee was an opportunity for me to do a job that needed to be done, and obviously I'd like to stay."

In all, nine Texas Democrats voted for the bipartisan budget bill, which won by such a small margin that if four of them had remained with the leadership, the Democrats would have prevailed.

"Although I have no patience with those members of the Texas delegation who vote with Reagan — or especially those like Charlie Stenholm who appear with the president and reap the personal attention and publicity — and would like to see them defeated, Hance and Gramm deserve a forceful immediate response from the Democratic party. They ought to be punished," Leland said.

Rep. Jim Wright of Fort Worth, the House Majority Leader, hasn't been on speaking terms with Gramm for weeks. He feels betrayed after having used his influence to help get Gramm and Hance their committee spots. But he opposes taking their positions away.

"I never have favored punishing anybody," Wright said.

"Discipline? Just what do you suggest I do? There's darn little discipline we can employ any more. I have no rewards to grant or punishment to inflict, and wouldn't want to," he added.

"If I'm not able, by persuasion, to do my job, maybe somebody else should take it over," he said.

Asked if there are some he considers unpersuadable, Wright couldn't suppress a grin. "I've almost come to that conclusion."

Five of the six other Texans who defected were CDF members — Sam Hall of Marshall, Ralph Hall of Rockwall, Jack Hightower of Vernon, Richard White of El Paso and Marvin Leath of Marlin.

The other was Charlie Wilson of Lufkin, who is considered more of a liberal-moderate.

"This vote hurt me a lot (in party influence). I'm sure the Speaker (Tip O'Neill) and Jim are simply outraged at me. It's not the turf I play on. If you'll look at the list of 29 (defections), you'll find I'm the most entrenched of any," Wilson said Thursday's key vote, which was called a stunning victory for Reagan.

Wilson's vote was considered an undecided, and he waited two-thirds of the way through the 15-minute electronic roll call before recording his vote.

"I voted five minutes before the end, and then walked down in the well and took the heat," he said.

Grand jury probes four-state oil fraud ring

DALLAS (AP) — A Louisiana "suicide," a Dallas shooting, a millionaire oilman and a reputed Mafia chief could be linked to a four-state oil fraud ring being investigated by federal officials, a Texas newspaper reports.

A federal grand jury in Tulsa is investigating an alleged oil fraud scheme that could involve up to $600 million in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas. The Dallas Morning News said Sunday in a copyright story.

William O. Johnson, 59, a Lafayette, La., accountant, refused to give information to the grand jury, the newspaper reported. Johnson was found dead of a gunshot wound to the head at his office June 9.

Authorities first reported the death to be a suicide. But no formal ruling was made and the body was exhumed June 19 for an autopsy because of "unanswered questions."

One question, the paper reported, was whether right-handed Johnson shot himself in the left side of the head.

Robert B. Sutton, a millionaire Tulsa oilman, reportedly made threats against witnesses in an oil investigation during a taped telephone conversation with reputed New Orleans Mafia chieftain Carlos Marcello. Sutton uses a Lafayette law firm that referred almost all its accounting jobs to Johnson, the News said.

The Daily Oklahoman has reported that FBI agents intercepted the call between Sutton and Marcello, whose phone was tapped as part of the federal BriLab investigation that led to indictments against several public officials and labor leaders in Texas and Louisiana.

During the call, Sutton "reportedly discussed a plan to break the legs of one witness and to intimidate others involved in an oil fraud investigation," the Oklahoma newspaper said.

In April, the FBI said Sutton's company was one of several involved in a "daisy chain" — transferring crude oil from company to company and changing its certification from "old oil" to higher-priced "new oil."

Joe Hegeman, described as an oil broker or consultant from Florida who had business dealings with Sutton, survived a gunshot wound to the head Jan. 16 in Dallas.

Hegeman was shot in the head Jan. 16 while riding in a car with two men in North Dallas, authorities said. He was robbed of about $200, his watch and coat during the shooting and was dumped into a field, police said.

Although two men are scheduled to stand trial on robbery charges in connection with the shooting, the News quoted sources as saying federal agents are investigating the possibility the shooting could be linked to the oil investigation.

Sutton met Hegeman when Sutton was buying the Xanadu Hotel in Freeport, Grand Bahamas, from Howard Hughes' Summa Corp. several years ago, said Gary Glanz, a private investigator working for Sutton.

"There is no connection between Mr. Sutton and BPM (BPM Ltd., Sutton's Tulsa-based oil marketing firm) with that shooting of Joe Hegeman at all," Glanz said.

Hegeman was associated with the Summa Corp., he said, but was "never a consultant" to BPM, although "he did business with BPM."

Sutton "never met Johnson," but Johnson "was doing records for numerous oilmen. And the reason he was doing those records is because he works for Charley Wooten, who is Mr. Sutton's lawyer," Glanz said.

He said Sutton is under a doctor's care in Los Angeles after suffering a stroke in December.

The Energy Department started proceedings last fall to recover what it said was $195 million in overcharges by AWECO, Inc., a Dallas-area reseller of oil that owns BPM Ltd. and that filed for bankruptcy in March.

Reagan reassures blacks about deep cuts in social programs

LOS ANGELES (AP) - President Reagan, trying to reassure blacks that deep cuts in social programs will not worsen their plight, says his plan will give them economic freedom because it is aimed at "lifting an entire country and not just parts of it."

Reagan planned to tell the NAACP's national convention in Denver today that federal programs of the past have not worked for minorities and the poor and that his tax and budget cuts deserve a chance.

Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the 400,000-member civil rights organization, said in advance that Reagan could expect a polite but cool reception, with convention delegates likely to "disagree without being disagreeable."

The speech, delivered as the president returned to Washington after a five-day stay in California, was Reagan's first since the Democratic-controlled House approved his budget-cutting package including reductions in food stamps, housing subsidies, welfare, school lunches and Social Security.

In portions of a text released Sunday, Reagan said, "I genuinely and deeply believe the economic package we have put forth will move us toward black economic freedom because it is aimed at lifting an entire country and not just parts of it."

He also pledged "a national commitment to battle discrimination" but stopped short of endorsing renewal of the 1965 Voting Rights Act, key parts of which are due to expire in August 1982.

In Los Angeles on Sunday, Reagan was asked if his position on the legislation could be seen as a payoff to Southern congressmen who backed the administration's budget program in the House last week.

"There was never any discussion of a payoff to anyone" with regard to the Voting Rights Act, he said.

Echoing a stand taken by Southern lawmakers whose states fall under provisions of the act, Reagan said, "I have said from the first time that it was ever passed I'd like to see it applied to all the states. I think voting is a sacred right that should be protected everywhere."

In his speech, Reagan vowed: "We will not retreat on the nation's commitment to equal treatment of all citizens."

Asking blacks to give his economic program a chance to work, Reagan said the well-being of blacks and other Americans is directly linked to the health of the economy.

"The failures of the past have been particularly hard on the minority poor," he said, "because their hopes have failed as surely as the federal programs that built those hopes."

Reagan delaying AWACs sale to Saudi Arabia second time

WASHINGTON (AP) - For the second time, the Reagan administration is delaying its proposed sale of advanced radar planes to Saudi Arabia in the face of serious opposition in Congress.

But Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig says the deal will not be dropped, and an Associated Press survey shows that it may yet be salvageable.

Haig said Sunday that the latest delay "will not be substantial, and it will not change the intent of the president to proceed with this sale."

Questioned on the CBS program "Face the Nation," Haig said the administration is "developing the arrangements under which the sale will be made, and we think it's very important that these arrangements be known and understood by those who have reservations."

"We've asked them to be patient," Haig said. "And I think that is a major consideration on timing."

The AP survey taken late last week found 47 senators planning to vote against the sale - four short of a majority - but several of them said they could change their minds if the administration resolves their concerns.

And 10 of 54 senators who asked President Reagan last week to drop the deal said they have not decided definitely to vote against it.

Since rejection by both the House and the Senate is necessary for Congress to veto the deal, the administration can save it by avoiding defeat in the Republican-controlled Senate. A majority of House members went on record against the sale last week.

Reagan announced last March that he intends to sell the Saudis five Airborne Warning and Control System - AWACS - radar planes plus missiles, and long-range fuel tanks for 62 F-15 jetfighters already on order. He delayed sending the package to Congress because of building opposition but intended to submit it formally July 8.

Haig says concern on French appointments a message to allies

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. says continuing U.S. expressions of concern about the appointment of four communists to the new French Cabinet are messages to other U.S. allies in Europe.

"It is important that all our West European partners, faced with the same decision, know that these decisions are not favorably viewed here in Washington," Haig said Sunday on CBS's "Face the Nation."

It is "simply a fact of life that communist regimes, whether they are closely affiliated with Moscow or not, pursue policies which are not consistent with the western family of nations," Haig said.

"We made no excuses or no bones about our concern," he said, adding that the Reagan administration recognizes the decision by French President Francois Mitterrand is a French internal matter.

Haig denied suggestions there was disagreement within the administration on its response to the decision.

However, it appeared the State Department was harsher in its judgment than Vice President George Bush, who paid a courtesy call on Mitterrand in Paris last week.

The State Department said in a statement that the appointment of the communists will affect the "tone and content of our relations" with France. Bush declined Saturday to repeat that phrase after briefing President Reagan on his trip.

Asked about the State Department's assessment, Haig said its statement and all others by the administration had been "cleared and discussed with the president personally."

He added that "there's no difference of opinion in President Reagan's administration on this subject."

Haig, who returned early Friday from a trip to China and other Pacific nations, also:

Bush says French president concerned with U.S. inflation

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) - Vice President George Bush says U.S. ties with France and England remain strong, but that newly-elected socialist President Francois Mitterrand of France is concerned about U.S. inflation rates.

Bush stopped briefly in his home state Saturday, on his way to a California meeting with President Reagan after his meetings with Mitterrand and other leaders in Europe. He attended the dedication of the John E. Gray Institute at Lamar University.

"France and England ... are and will remain close friends and allies," Bush said. "But President Mitterrand especially is concerned with the high interest rates in the United States simply because ... inflation here has an enormous effect on the economies of those two close allies."

In his praise for the creation of the John Gray Institute - a privately-funded think tank to study labor-industry problems - Bush hammered away on the Reagan Administration's philosophy of limiting government.

"There are limits to what the federal government can do in this modern society of ours," he said. "The fact is, government cannot do everything to improve society. We must have greater participation by the private sector."

Bush called the Institute an example of "volunteerism," a concept lost on young people today, he said, because of their belief that government "can take care of all our problems."

"You have a wonderful opportunity to participate in a renaissance," Bush told the crowd of about 1,500, "a renaissance of the American economy and spirit."

Bush joked about his quick stop at the college gymnasium, sandwiched in between his high-level meetings in Europe and a trip to the Philippines after his meeting with President Reagan.

"When one goes from France to Manila, doesn't one always go through Beaumont?" he said.

Securities board wants church to halt construction bond sale

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) - A crowd of parents, whose children attend a school connected to a church under scrutiny for allegedly selling fraudulent bonds, have paid tuition in advance to show support for the church and its leadership.

An official of the Texas Securities Board has called for the agency to ban the Northwest Christian Center of the Assemblies of God from selling construction bonds until the church can prove it is able to pay off $2.7 million in bonds, some of which come due next year.

Leo Polson, director of the enforcement division of securities board, has called a Tuesday hearing in an effort to halt the sale of $300,000 of the bonds.

Polson says the church lacks the money to pay off those bonds, plus $2.7 million in bonds issued since February 1979.

About 300 parents met Sunday afternoon at an emergency meeting at the Northwest Christian Academy.

"We have had scores of people come in and pay tuition for next year," school superintendent Durhl Causey said Sunday. "People come in with the newspaper in hand and pay their tuition. That tells us we are in good condition (financially)," he said.

"Over 300 people have signed a document to be sent to Austin to the Securities Commission," Causey said, referring to the hearing Tuesday.

"It simply states an affirmation of our admiration for the church and for the school," he added.

Causey, who is not a member of the school's parent church, says he feels that the school will open in the fall, regardless. He says much of the money from the sale of the bonds goes toward construction at the school.

Polson issued a statement June 15 ordering the hearing. He said sales of the securities "would not be in compliance with the (Texas) Securities Act, would tend to work a fraud on any purchaser thereof and would not be fair or equitable to any purchaser."

The church and its pastor, Dan Heil, "failed to disclose" that the bond proceeds were combined with the church's operating account and keep "inadequate" records of the use of the bond proceeds, Polson said.

"I have done what God led me to do," Heil said. "I have done nothing whatever to try to rip anybody off. In my heart, I'm totally innocent."

Heil says church finances were "sailing smooth" until Emerson and Bobbie Whaley, who since have filed suit against him and the church, failed to make monthly payments on a mobile home park they purchased from the church. He said the couple could owe as much as $75,000.

But the Whaleys' attorney, John Copeland, said Heil came to his clients' home and convinced them to buy the park, then got them to make other investments, including the bonds.

Polson said an investigation of the church's finances show that no "sinking fund" has been established to help meet any of the bond payments, which will reach $2.2 million by the fall of 1982.

He also said that bond money was used by Heil and his brother-in-law David Washburn - who did part of the construction work - for "other purposes" than construction.

Polson said he will ask that the church, which is exempt from the state securities act except for the anti-fraud statutes, be forced to stop selling bonds.

School project filming Klan becomes evidence in court cases

HOUSTON (AP) — A school project has become more than Rice University student Wayne Derrick ever bargained for, landing him in the midst of one of the hottest Texas news stories of the year.

Derrick thought the Ku Klux Klan would make an "interesting" subject for his senior film project. But he still hasn't finished his documentary on the group and says he wishes he was not spending so much time talking to lawyers instead of filmmakers.

Parties to litigation filed against the KKK have focused considerable attention on the 24 hours of footage Derrick shot during eight months he spent with the Klan, using the film in an attempt to back up their contentions about KKK activities.

"All I want to do is make films," Derrick said. "I don't want to spend all my time going from courtroom to courtroom. I want to be able to talk about films and talk to filmmakers instead of lawyers."

Derrick says the project began last year when he approached Texas Grand Dragon Louis Beam at a Pasadena, Texas bookstore operated by the Klan.

"I told him I wanted to make an objective film about the Klan," Derrick said. "He agreed to it because his feeling is that if we tell the truth, that will be good for him because he believes he is right."

But this year, Derrick is spending much of his time in courtrooms, after the film was subpoenaed in connection with a suit filed against the Klan by Vietnamese fishermen charging harassment and intimidation.

Derrick appeared in U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald's court May 12 to explain portions of the film which were shown to the judge. Vietnamese fishermen sought an injunction to stop Klan activities they considered threatening.

McDonald issued a temporary injunction and a request for a permanent injunction is still pending.

The recently graduated photography major also is expected to testify this summer in a Dallas court case against the Klan, alleging illegal use of federal lands for KKK paramilitary training.

Derrick filmed numerous Klan events, from handing out literature at stoplights in Pasadena to speeches at cross-burnings to the Klan's national leader convention in Birmingham, Ala. He was joined by his roommate, Brad Walker.

On February 1, Derrick says, Beam agreed to take the two students and a Houston television station news crew to a paramilitary training camp near Fort Worth.

Derrick narrated the footage: "Louis arrived and they blindfolded us and drove off for about an hour and a half to someplace just outside Fort Worth."

"For that day, we filmed lectures on different kinds of warfare and went into tactics, strategies and all sorts of training, exercises and types of ambushes, nuclear war survival skills. And this was supposed to be a beginning class."

Derrick and Walker said they were unimpressed by the training, though.

Two arrested on spy charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Polish national and a former engineer at Hughes Aircraft Co. face charges of transmitting secret documents about weapons and radar devices to the Polish intelligence service.

Authorities said they assume the information was passed along to the Soviet Union.

William Bell, 61, a Hughes employee for nearly 30 years, and Marian Zacharski, 29, were arrested Sunday at their separate apartments in a beachfront complex in Playa Del Rey, said Dick Mellitt, assistant special FBI agent in charge of criminal foreign counterintelligence.

The two men were held without bail pending arraignment today in U.S. District Court on charges of gathering and delivering classified material to a foreign government. If convicted, both men could be sentenced to life in prison.

The FBI said both have been under investigation since shortly after Zacharski entered the country in 1977 as a commercial representative for a Polish government-owned machinery manufacturing company in Elk Grove Village, Ill.

The two men, each married with two children, struck up a social acquaintance in 1978, the FBI said.

The Polish American Machinery Co. produces heavy equipment to manufacture machine parts and has a West Coast office in Santa Fe Springs. Zacharski is president of U.S. operations for the concern and until recently was its West Coast manager, the FBI said.

Agents said Bell received $110,000 for his part in the alleged conspiracy, which involved the transfer of several classified documents on defense-related radar systems beginning in 1980 and ending early this year.

"We assume the Poles shared this information with Russia since Poland is a Warsaw Pact member," Mellitt said at a news conference, adding that "Any case that involves classified information is an important case."

"These highly classified documents were exchanged at locations in this country and Europe and pertained to U.S. military weapons and radar systems," said an FBI statement in Washington, D.C.

Mellitt said the Polish government has been notified by the U.S. State Department of Zacharski's arrest.

Foreign spies operating in the United States usually are immune to arrest and trial because of their diplomatic immunity, Mellitt said. But he said Zacharski is not a diplomat and is in this country on a commercial visa.

Bell had been employed by Hughes Aircraft in El Segundo since 1952. Lee Pitt, communications director for Hughes, said Sunday Bell had secret clearance, but not top secret clearance.

He said Bell was a member of the company's Radar Systems Group and also was a project manager. He was dismissed from his job June 23, but Pitt would not say why.

Mellitt said Bell's dismissal was in connection with the FBI investigation and that Hughes Aircraft had cooperated with the probe.

Religious group heaven bound, leader says

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Bill Maupin, who predicted he and other Christian believers would be in heaven by now, doesn't seem concerned that he and his followers still are earthbound.

"Nor is he bothered at the prospect of being called a false prophet over his claim that all people saved by their beliefs would be lifted into heaven Sunday after biblical 'signs' — including a Mideast war and Israel's capture of Lebanon and Damascus, Syria, — occurred, presaging the return of Jesus Christ."

The balding 51-year-old former laborer amended his headline for the "rapture" — when all true believers would ascend into heaven — from midnight Sunday to noon today because of the time difference between Arizona and the Middle East.

"If the things I've said don't come to pass (by noon today), I don't have to admit it, it speaks for itself, but they're going to happen," Maupin said Sunday night.

But he said, "You couldn't say I was a false prophet as everything is laid out." He said although he may be wrong about the date for rapture, "the events that are coming forth are coming."

Maupin, his wife, Elizabeth, at least one of their five children, and many of the 40 to 50 members of the Lighthouse Gospel Tract Foundation he established in his home in 1970 waited enthusiastically all day and night Sunday for the rapture to take place. As day turned into night, the mood remained the same — one of seeming assurance.

If there was doubting or second-guessing among the foundation's members, they did not register it.

Dozens of people milled about, eating snacks, sipping soft drinks, giving interviews, discussing rapture, answering telephone calls, reading Bibles, playing guitars and singing spirituals.

Children walked in and out, some in bathing suits from swimming in a backyard pool surrounded by palm trees and other lush plants adjacent to an overflowing greenhouse.

In another part of Tucson, meanwhile, a night club sponsored a "toga rapture party" spoofing the religious gathering.

But that didn't bother Maupin, who gave up his wrought-iron business last year to devote full-time to his preaching and preparation for going to heaven.

Maupin said he was tired but exhilarated from the worldwide attention he has drawn during the last few days, giving interviews to journalists from such places as New Zealand and Canada.

"Even if it didn't happen a noon (today) it wouldn't faze me in the least," Maupin said, "because, if nothing else came of this, everything that's happened in the last 31 weeks has been nothing but good."

Only money lacking in solar energy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two University of Texas professors claim the diverse technology and most of the engineering knowledge to supply solar energy in Texas already are available.

John Howell, professor of mechanical engineering, and John Bordie, professor of linguistics, noted that a state solar advisory committee had stated solar and wind resources could provide up to 15 percent of the projected energy needs of Texas by the year 2000.

That is the equivalent of 400 million barrels of oil or two trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

"The energy collection systems can be in place almost as soon as the capital to construct them is available since the designs are well known and understood," the professors said.

Capital, building codes and some legal redefinitions are the main barriers remaining, they said.

In Texas, they said, the average amount of solar energy available daily for conversion ranges from a low of four kilowatt hours a square meter in Beaumont to a high of 7.5 kilowatt hours in El Paso.

With a conversion efficiency of 20 percent, the roof surface of a 2,000-square-foot house with good insulation provides at least one half of the energy required for domestic use by the average Beaumont resident, the professors said.

In El Paso only about half that area would be needed to supply a similar amount of energy.

"L'Wind energy has a different distribution," Howell and Bordie said. The supply ranges from a low of two kilowatt hours a square meter from the area swept by the wind generator blades along a line from San Antonio to Lufkin to a high of 4.5 kilowatt hours in the Amarillo area.

Although energy levels are lower for wind energy than they are for solar energy, the availability of wind at night compensates for this factor.

Southern ports boom with oil shipments

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Extremely large increases in petroleum products and growing economic activity in Sunbelt states have increased the importance of Southern ports at the expense of ports in the Northeast, says a South Carolina researcher.

"While New York City remains the overwhelming leader in shipping and receiving valuable cargo, the petroleum and grain ports of Grammergy, La., which were not even on the list in 1965, became the leading port complex in weight in 1979," said Ronald Wilder.

Wilder, professor of economics at the University of South Carolina, reviewed Southern port growth in Texas Business Review, a publication of the University of Texas.

"From 1965 to 1979, Gulf Coast ports increased their share of the total value of trade from 21 percent to 32 percent," Wilder said. "Most of this relative growth of the Gulf Ports was at the expense of the North Atlantic ports, whose share of total foreign trade value decreased from 46 percent to 27 percent during the same period."

In 1979, 13 of the top 20 ports ranked by total weight of imports and exports were Southern. Leading Southern ports include Houston; New Orleans; Norfolk, Va.; Charleston, S.C.; Miami and Savannah, Ga.

Wilder said as the volume of imported petroleum continues to decline that began in 1979, there will be a gradual decline in the importance of Gulf Coast ports.

Wrench inventor still battling Sears, trying to live down fame

RED BANK, Tenn. (AP) — Sometimes in the evenings, Peter Roberts' friends drop by his split-level house in this suburb of Chattanooga to "drink a beer and play some pinball."

Sound like a millionaire's life? Well, he's the inventor who waged a nine-year battle against the country's No. 1 retail giant and won. Sears, Roebuck and Co. paid him $1 million in damages in a dispute over his quick-release ratchet wrench. That was three years ago, and Roberts now is trying both to live down his fame and to battle Sears for more money from his patented socket wrench that can be used with one hand.

"People think you sit in the house and play with $100 bills," he said in a recent interview. "People are ignorant."

"I just want to be me," said Roberts, 36. "I just want a private life. It took me a while to get over the first batch of publicity."

Roberts was an 18-year-old sales clerk at a Sears store in Gardner, Mass., when he invented and produced the wrench in his spare time. He obtained a patent and assigned it to Sears for $10,000.

He then joined the Air Force. While he was stationed in England, he saw a Sears catalog and was astounded at the display the wrench got because the company had led him to believe the tool had only minor sales potential.

But from 1965 to 1975, the Chicago-based retail giant sold more than 19 million of the wrenches for a net profit of more than $4 million.

"I was real young, and when you're young, you may tend to trust people too much," Roberts once said, explaining why he took the Sears offer.

Roberts sued Sears in 1969 seeking to rescind the agreement under which he assigned the patent to the company and asking for damages. In 1978, a federal jury found against Sears and awarded Roberts $1 million in damages.

Roberts also asked that the court force Sears to pay him the profits earned on the tool. U.S. District Judge George Leighton ruled in his favor, ordering Sears to return the patent and the profits to Roberts.

With Sears' profits on the tool totaling more than $44 million, Roberts' payoff, with interest, was estimated at $80 million.

But Sears appealed Leighton's order. Roberts lost the appeal and the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the case last November.

Roberts' lawyer, Louis Davidson of Chicago, now is trying to prove that Sears infringed upon the patent. He declined to estimate how much Roberts could be awarded if he wins this case.

CPSC-marked for the kill?

WASHINGTON (NEA) — One of the most productive and responsible federal regulatory agencies is in danger of becoming an innocent victim of an overzealous campaign to reduce government intrusion into the lives of the country's citizens.

Acting in the name of efficiency and economy, lobbyists representing the manufacturers of potentially hazardous — and lethal — products are waging an intensive campaign to destroy the effectiveness of the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

After a shaky start in the mid-1970s, the CPSC has emerged in recent years as an especially valuable agency, acting judiciously yet firmly to reduce or eliminate the threat of injury and death posed by scores of unsafe products.

One example of the commission performing an invaluable public service occurred last year when the agency learned that at least seven infants had strangled to death when their necks became wedged in a dangerously designed crib headboard.

With an estimated 7,500 identical cribs in use by families throughout the country, the CPSC required the manufacturer to conduct a massive publicity campaign to warn parents of the serious danger to which their babies were exposed.

In another case, the commission took similarly decisive action after receiving reports of 23 explosions — resulting in five deaths and 16 serious injuries — involving hot water heaters whose faulty design allowed liquid propane gas to escape.

In the eight years of its existence, the CPSC has ordered more than 1,000 recalls involving not only cribs and water heaters but also hair dryers, paint strippers, coffee pots, snowmobiles, toys and a host of other items.

The commission estimates that those recalls of more than 170 million potentially defective units may have prevented 1 million or more injuries during the past three years alone.

In addition, the CPSC has promulgated mandatory rules to improve the design of entire product lines — including refuse bins, antennas for citizens band radios, power lawn mowers and gas-fired space heaters whose tendency to produce a carbon monoxide buildup can lead to death by asphyxiation.

Working in cooperation with industry groups, the commission has helped to develop safer uniform design standards for bathtubs and showers, ladders, playpens, infant strollers, extension cords and Christmas tree lights.

Finally, the commission recently has initiated investigations of chronic hazards — products that appear to be harmless but are likely to produce long-term toxic or carcinogenic effects leading to cancer, birth defects, genetic damage, irreversible illness or death.

Approximately 55,000 chemicals currently are used in this country, with 600 new chemicals introduced every year — but only 6,000 have ever been tested for cancer-causing properties.

In its first major step into that field, the CPSC earlier this year proposed a ban on a type of home insulation known as urea-formaldehyde foam, whose formaldehyde gas is believed to be carcinogenic.

Although each of its actions had been preceded by careful investigation, analysis and consideration of the costs and benefits involved, the commission has antagonized manufacturers of various products it has targeted for enforcement.

As a result, the coalition seeking to emasculate — if not eliminate — the commission ranges from individual trade associations and the Formaldehyde Institute to broad-based groups such as the National Association of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Supported by President Reagan, they already have convinced committees of the House and Senate to drastically slash CPSC's budget next year, from $45.1 million originally proposed to $32.9 million — a cut of almost 30 percent.

In addition, critics have proposed a variety of reorganization schemes, ranging from outright abolition of the CPSC to burying the agency inside a hostile Commerce Department.

Decimation or destruction of the commission will only deprive needed protection to consumers who already suffer approximately 28,000 deaths and 33 million injuries annually when dealing with the products under the CPSC's jurisdiction.

Budget resolutions: building on sand

Much less than meets the eye has been achieved in the painful effort to balance the federal budget.

That's the conclusion after Congress gave final approval recently to the $695.5 billion first budget resolution for fiscal year 1982, which starts Oct. 1.

The resolution calls for a $37 billion deficit. President Reagan supports the red-ink budget for 1982 and proposes to balance the budget later in his term.

But, even as the resolution was being passed, congressional staff people were predicting the budget and the deficit would increase by at least $23 billion, because the interest rate on the federal debt would be higher than the rate of 10.5 percent projected in the resolution.

It is instructive to consider the history of President Jimmy Carter's last budget, the one for the current fiscal year, 1981. He had promised to balance the budget by the last year of his term of office, and he did, with mirrors.

Does anyone remember the first budget resolution for 1981, adopted by Congress on June 12 last? It was based on inflation and unemployment estimates that nobody believed were realistic, but it was balanced on paper: the first balanced budget in 12 years.

Things went downhill fast. By the next month, a Carter budget revision showed a $30 billion deficit. By last January, another Carter budget revision upped the deficit to $55 billion.

Reagan proposed in March to keep the budget deficit for the current year at $55 billion, but the budget adopted recently by Congress raises the deficit projected for the year ending Sept. 30 to $58 billion.

Despite all of the much-publicized Reagan cuts in existing social programs, amounting to $36 billion in the 1982 budget resolution, there is no headroom in the new budget, especially in view of the $26 billion increase in military spending and personal income tax cuts of 10 percent proposed in the budget resolution.

Unregulation at FCC

Television advertising gave us the "Uncola." Now the government agency charged with regulating television, according to its new chairman, is planning an era of "unregulation." To mix products in a way that would drive Madison Avenue crazy, what he's offering could be the pause that refreshes.

Mark S. Fowler, new head of the Federal Communications Commission, spoke recently to a convention of cable television operators in Los Angeles. He noted the growth of cable since deregulation, and commented, "I think this experience shows us that the commission's job is not to invent the wheel, but to let it spin." It's a refreshing attitude on the part of a regulator.

The impetus to ease up on regulation of broadcasting is not a new development in the Reagan administration. The pressure has been building as it has become increasingly obvious that communication technology has rendered the regulations devised in the 1930s anachronistic. Nonetheless, it is encouraging to discover that the new FCC head is committed to continuing, perhaps accelerating the reduction of regulation at the federal level. From the tone of his speech he seems to understand the superiority of the marketplace to the government in facilitating orderly progress.

A logical extension of Fowler's attitude should find him not entirely hostile to the idea of abolishing the agency he heads. We're not sure if he's more eager than anyone else to work himself out of a job. But if he runs the FCC in the manner he's outlined, the country will benefit.

Ruling strengthen due process of law

In two rulings, the U.S. Supreme Court has strengthened significantly the Constitution's ban on self-incrimination. Some may believe that the court went too far in protecting the rights of criminal suspects. We see it differently.

The right not to have to bear witness against oneself is firmly grounded in the Anglo-American legal system. The enforcement of that right may occasionally pose problems for police and prosecutors. But, surely, those problems are not so grave that they justify giving law enforcers loosely controlled power to extract self-incriminating testimony.

In the cases before it, the high court rebuked particularly egregious assaults on the right against self-incrimination. Consider the Texas case which involved capital punishment. The court ruled that a murder suspect must be warned before a psychiatric examination that the test results could be used after conviction to help determine whether to impose the death penalty.

In the Texas case, the prosecution relied on a psychiatrist who had interviewed the defendant before trial, ostensibly to determine competency to stand trial. The psychiatrist later testified during the "penalty" portion of the trial that the defendant was likely to be dangerous in the future. On the basis of that testimony, the man was sentenced to death.

The court did not say that the psychiatric interviews were banned. It did say that the defendant should have had the right to remain silent during the pretrial interview and should have been permitted to consult a lawyer before agreeing to submit to the interview. As Chief Justice Warren Burger said: "Just as the Fifth Amendment prevents a criminal defendant from being made the deluded instrument of his own conviction, it protects him as well from being made the deluded instrument of his own execution."

In the other case, which came to court from Arizona, the justices ruled that police must halt the questioning of a criminal suspect once the suspect requests a lawyer. In the case at issue, the suspect made such a statement. Nevertheless, he was subsequently approached by officers and, in the conversation, made incriminating statements. That was wrong, the court said, ruling that the confession was not truly voluntary because the police — not the suspect — had initiated the conversation.

Neither decision, in light of the circumstances, seems a great boon for criminals. The court is not smoothing a path for crime. Rather, it is more clearly marking the road of due process of law.

Thoughts on way to postoffice

By OSCAR COOLEY
David Rout, an Oklahoma farmer whose father gave him a farm, has been forced to pay the U.S. government an estate tax of $40,000. This should put David in a mood to join me in holding that taxation is unjust and, in this enlightened age, should cease to be.

Every age has its cardinal sins. One of those of our ancient forefathers was cannibalism. This has pretty much gone by the board, at least in my bailiwick. In the 16th century, the Spaniards found the Aztecs practicing human sacrifice in a big way. Slavery was condoned in Saudi Arabia up to 20 — and in the U.S. South 120 — years ago.

Financing government by taxation resembles slavery. Both rob the individual of a part of the fruit of his toil. Both do it by force. Some slave owners claimed there was no other way to get their cotton picked. We endure being taxed because there seems to be no other way to finance government. There is deficit financing, of course, but the debt eventually has to be paid, with interest. It is paid finally with cash obtained by taxing. Debt financing is merely deferred taxing.

Government can always borrow. Its credit is better than that of any person or firm because it has the power to tax

To meet its debts, it can always get cash from taxpayers. Could this be the real reason why government grows and grows?

If taxation were discontinued, government would have to finance itself by voluntary payments, as private firms now do. It could do this by two methods: selling services or goods to willing buyers as merchants do, or by soliciting freewill contributions as charities do.

In either case it would have to satisfy the payers, just as customers of firms must be satisfied with the firms' goods before they will buy them and donors to a charity must be satisfied that the organization is worthy of support before they will give.

The government would then be in essentially the same position as these private money-seekers. One might conclude there would be no "government" as we know it. But is this conclusion warranted?

Government would still be the people's official representative. Lacking the power of the purse, it would have to serve the people as the great majority want to be served or they would not finance it. It would probably be smaller than at present and surely would be more efficient.

New look in education?

The American system of education, once the envy of the world, fell apart in the 1960s when our objective became equity rather than excellence.

The objective was legitimate — more and better education for more of us.

But as with most cycles, the overdoers overdid. Reformist zeal fed upon itself until the three R's were neglected, discipline eroded, test scores plummeted — until we were presenting worthless high school diplomas to a generation of unemployables.

Segments of a few communities resisted because the American majority continues to care passionately about the education of its children.

Now what traditionalism survived is coming back into style. Education Secretary Terrel Bell urges "a return to basics to improve the quality of education in the United States."

He says the number one priority of our schools must become discipline — good student behavior — rigid rules of conduct. After that is accomplished our schools must resume teaching mathematics and English and how to write a good sentence.

He says we've become preoccupied with driver training, expressive dance, pep rallies and such.

We must, he says, resume teaching the subjects for which public education was created in the first place. With cuts in the education budget it becomes increasingly urgent that any cutbacks cut back to essentials.

Chester Finn Jr. — author of three books on educational policy — urgently recommends focusing on developing skills, self-restraint, self-discipline; respect for such "old-fashioned" considerations as merit and accomplishment.

It's happening. Even in such a bastion of mandatory equality as Washington, D.C., special schools are being established for the academically vigorous.

Secretary Bell's public utterances are helping everywhere to make educational/traditionalism respectable again.

Even the National Education association — which has made a quasi-religion of "equity" instead of "quality" — is respectfully silent.

Secretary Bell says that public education in our nation does not have to die, but it is going to have to shape up. And on its own, community after community is raising educational standards, dispensing with educational grills.

Teachers are being tested before they are hired. Students are being educated before they are graduated.

Celanese rallies to win City Tournament

A two-run double by Danny Graves pushed Celanese to the top of the fifth when Clayton struck out three consecutive batters after walking Shannon Perry. David Roberts keyed a rally for Celanese in the bottom of the fifth when he led off with a triple. Clayton and Matt Walsh followed with singles and both scored to tie things at 8-8.

Dixie pitcher Terry Stroud was relieved by Brett Mitchell, who walked Sandra Farrah and Mike Lynn. That set the stage for Graves, who lined a double to centerfield scoring Farrah and Lynn.

Clayton, the winning pitcher, yielded seven hits while striking out 14 and walking five.

Stroud, the loser, allowed seven of Celanese's eight hits while striking out seven and walking seven.

Tonight, regular-season league championships will be decided at Optimist Park.

Wil-Mart meets Gate Valve at 6 p.m. for the American League championship and Glo-Valve goes against Dixie at 8 p.m. for the National League title.

Familiar faces seen in Wimbledon quarterfinals

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — If past records could be relied on, three of Monday's women's quarterfinals at Wimbledon looked settled before they were started.

Chris Evert Lloyd, the favorite, took on Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia. They have played 12 times before and Lloyd won every time.

Third-seeded Tracy Austin faced her 11th match against Pam Shriver. Austin has won all 11.

Fourth-seeded Martina Navratilova, Wimbledon singles champion in 1978 and 1979, hoped to continue an 11-0 winning streak against Virginia Ruzici of Romania.

Only the fourth match, between second-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia and Wendy Turnbull of Australia, was less predictable. Mandlikova has a 4-3 head-to-head lead over her rival.

Of the eight players, only Navratilova is a true serve-and-volley player in the tradition of Maria Bueno, Billie Jean King and Evonne Goolagong, great Wimbledon champions of the last two decades.

Lloyd, who last won Wimbledon in 1976, has not dropped a set and has lost only 14 games on her way to the quarterfinals. She had her easiest match of the week Saturday, going past 18-year-old Swiss Claudia Pasquale 6-0, 6-0 in 36 minutes.

Lloyd is working out with her husband, British Davis Cupper John Lloyd, and Dennis Ralston, who reached the Wimbledon men's final in 1966 and was the U.S. Davis Cup captain for five years.

Navratilova, who recently had shoulder trouble and has been struggling to get her service right, was in good shape as she beat American Betsy Nagelsen 6-3, 6-1.

Austin stayed on the baseline to defeat big serving Barbara Potter 6-4, 6-0. Shriver defeated Jo Durie of Britain 6-3, 6-4 and reached the quarterfinals for the first time.

The big three of the men's singles — Bjorn Borg, John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors — all won convincingly. Their quarterfinals are set for Tuesday.

Borg, going for his sixth straight Wimbledon title, edged his old friend Vitas Gerulaitis 7-6, 7-5, 7-6, playing his best shots on the big points.

McEnroe downed Stan Smith 7-5, 3-6, 6-1, 6-2. Connors beat Wojtek Fibak of Poland 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

White Deer wins little league tourney title

PANHANDLE — White Deer edged Skellytown, 15-14, Saturday to win the High Plains little league tournament.

Panhandle led until the fifth when Steve Roach hit a grand-slam homer to spark a nine-run inning.

For the game, Roach knocked in five runs and scored three times.

Other White Deer players with runs and hits (runs listed first) were Tommy Martinez, 3-2; Ladd Lafferty, 1-1; Todd Haynes, 1-4; Craig Davis, 3-1; Terry Harrah, 1-0, and Chuck Smith, 2-1.

B. Clay pitched for Skellytown.

Jessie Rocha and Wes Stamps hit homers for Panhandle.

Golf scramble winners

Finished second at 31 were Ron Hurst, Carl Lawyer, Mackie Scott, and Joan Terrell.

Taking third (31) were Bill Glenn, Jerry Simpson, Stan Schneider, and Marge Gitson.

Pampa Country Club hosts another 9-hole scramble July 10, starting at 6 p.m.

An 18-hole scramble is scheduled for 4:30 p.m. July 19.

Pate wins golf classic

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Jerry Pate won the Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic by two strokes and celebrated the end of his three-year dry spell by leaping into the lake in front of the 18th green.

Pate, who had finished second in eight tournaments since winning his last title, shot a final-round 69 and finished his 274 total, 14 strokes under par on the 7,249-yard Colonial Country Club course with a birdie on the last hole.

Tom Kite and Bruce Lietzke tied for second at 276. Lietzke had a closing 67 and Kite had a 68.

Lowrey competes in state rodeo finals

Jo Linda Lowrey of Pampa didn't qualify for the nationals at the Texas High School State Rodeo finals last week at Sequin, but she didn't come away empty-handed.

Miss Lowrey, a spring Pampa High graduate, was awarded a pair of spurs after finishing second in the second go-round of goat tying.

She finished eighth among the top 10 in the short go-around in goat tying. Overall, there were 375 contestants.

Only the top four in each event go on to the nationals in Montana.

Miss Lowrey qualified for the state finals by placing in three events at the Region 1 Tri-State Rodeo. She took first in goat tying and third in both breakaway roping and barrel racing.

Miss Lowrey's brother, Lee, a Pampa freshman, competed in team roping at Sequin, but failed to place.

FORGOTTEN MAN. Jimmy Connors is virtually ignored by the media and treated like an unwanted stepchild by the august All-England scheduling committee.

Connors: Forgotten man of tennis

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — As Bjorn Borg and John McEnroe glide blissfully on their collision course to the Wimbledon tennis final, they'd better look out for that guy sneaking up alongside them.

It's the notorious alley fighter, Jimmy Connors. Old Jimbo. You must remember Jimbo?

Listen, this kid had an act that made the pitiful court tantrums of Mac the Super Brat look like Shirley Temple on the Good Ship Lollipop. He ate sauteed rattlesnake meat and washed it down with tiger milk. He was the terror of linesmen and umpires.

Sometimes surly and sometimes the ultimate smart aleck, with that wiggle of his hips and the waggle of his finger, full of bluster and bombast, he was the Dead End Kid of tennis.

But make no mistake about it, this wiry (5-foot-10, 151-pound) gutsy, unbroken prong of a guy could play this game. Emitting loud grunts, he literally threw his whole body at the ball, attacking every one as if were some evil force that had to be immediately destroyed.

He never temporized. He never unlocked the gates of mercy. He was the court assassin, a left-handed killer whose deadliest weapon was a two-fisted backhand that had the trajectory of a rifle shot.

To readers, it's undoubtedly odd that such references are used in the past tense. After all, Jimbo is only 28 and just two years removed from being ranked No. 1 in the world for a record five consecutive times.

Jimmy Connors is living and well, we are happy to report, and sitting comfortably on a quarterfinal rung in the current All-England Championships.

But how would anybody know?

Connors in the forgotten man of the 1981 Wimbledon, shrugged off by the legal bookmakers, virtually ignored by the media and treated like an unwanted stepchild by the august All-England scheduling committee.

At the beginning of the tournament, London bookies had Borg and McEnroe 1-2 favorites at odds as low as 6-4 and 6-5. Connors, the No. 3 seed, was listed at 12-1. Odds have changed slightly since.

Twelve to one!" Jimbo exclaimed incredulously when the information was relayed to him. "That's ridiculous!"

It's not as ridiculous as the fact that Connors, although Wimbledon champion in 1974 and twice runnerup to Borg since plus winner of three U.S. titles, has been here more than a week and has yet to see the inside of the Center Court.

He's been forced to play every match on the outside field courts, soft, bumpy, poorly manicured, with noisy fans hanging over the rails.

Players have labeled them the "great equalizers."

Meanwhile, Borg, the fair-haired five-time champion, hasn't played on a field court since 1977, giving him a tremendous advantage.

But Connors hasn't uttered a harsh word. He hasn't shot a single stony stare at a linesman, upbraided an ump or raised a profane finger to the crowd.

This is the new Connors — composed, contrite, polite, with a new set of values — but one still playing the game with the ferocity of old.

TL standings

A throwing error in the 10th inning brought home the winning run as the San Antonio Dodgers slipped past the Amarillo Gold Sox, 8-7, in a Texas League baseball game Sunday night.

In other Texas League action, El Paso beat Midland, 11-7, and Tulsa swept a doubleheader from Jackson, 2-1 and 6-1.

Steve Sax singled to lead off the 10th inning for San Antonio. There was one out when Dale Holman struck out. Catcher Ron Tingley let the ball get away momentarily on the third strike and threw the ball to first base although Holman was out anyway since Sax was on first. The ball got away and rolled into the outfield as Sax scored all the way from first with what turned out to be the winning run.

A two-run homer by Greg Brock highlighted a six-run outburst in the sixth inning for the Dodgers. Leo Hernandez and Ross Jones each had two-run singles in the sixth for San Antonio.

Jeff Pyburn, Aaron Cain, Don Gausephol and Tingley all had triples for Amarillo.

Stan Davis had a three-run homer and John Evans had a solo homer as the El Paso Diablos beat the Midland Cubs, 11-7.

Randy LaVigne had a two-run homer and Jack Upton had a solo homer for Midland.

Larry Montgomery, 5-1, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Norm Churchill, 5-8.

Dave Stockstill singled home Ron Gooch with the winning run in the sixth inning as the Tulsa Drillers edged the Jackson Mets, 2-1.

Diet facts & fallacies

These nutritional tips brought to you by Sherry Conklin, Diet Center, 412 W. Kingsmill, Hughes Bldg.

Diet Center states, and dentists agree, that fresh fruits and vegetables are a necessary part of a complete diet if healthy teeth are to be maintained. They provide a natural sugar (fructose) that does not attack the enamel of the teeth; and as they are chewed, help control plaque build-up. Chewing fruits and vegetables in their natural state is essential to a healthy jaw and proper teeth placement. In the past 20 years, the American public has changed eating patterns from natural foods, which require a great deal of chewing, to processed, prepackaged foods that do not exercise the jaw at all. Diet Center suggests that you keep fresh, raw fruits and vegetables on hand at all times. Clean them thoroughly and keep them in plastic bags in your refrigerator. When a snack is desired, eat an apple or a carrot. As a result, your teeth and your general health will be better.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

June 30, 1981

In projects which you personally launch this coming year, you could run into some unexpected delays. Don't let initial snags discourage you, because your luck improves as time rolls on.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be very careful today that you don't try to take on more than you can competently manage. Having too many irons in the fire could cause each to fall. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could have some extra duties to contend with today. If you manage them poorly, they may cause you further complications. Think your moves through carefully.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may have difficulties today trying to stay within your budget. Look for ways to cut down on spending, not to add to it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your image is a trifle fragile today, so be cognizant of your behavior in front of persons whose respect you wish to keep. Put your best foot forward.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Sometimes your hunches are remarkably accurate, but today they could lead you astray. Rely more upon your logic than your intuition.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Enjoy yourself with friends today, but be careful about becoming involved in business or money situations. Friendship and finance may not mix well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Think for yourself today concerning important decisions. Those who offer you advice may either not understand the situation or fail to have your best interest at heart.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you are performing tasks of a mental nature today it may prove wise to have someone on whom you can depend to double-check your work. You might not spot your own mistakes.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't put too much stock in persons or firms about whom you know little, especially those who make lavish promises. Get everything in writing.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This may not be the right day to discuss major issues you and your mate do not agree upon. There's a chance it would cause complications instead of finding solutions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Coworkers could resent you today if you behave more like a promoter than a producer. Don't try to get others to do your bidding with insincere flattery.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be extremely prudent today in management of your resources. Losses incurred through carelessness could be quite substantial.

Calligraphy expert's work popular, fancy writing style

By LINDA DUFFIELD
Associated Press Writer
HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — As a student, Nissa Rewak always kept meticulously neat notebooks. Since then, she's parlayed her penchant for nicely lettered notes into a successful business as a first-rate practitioner of calligraphy — the art of fancy writing.

"Ever since being a little girl I can remember keeping really neat notebooks and getting A's in penmanship," said the 30-year-old Ms. Rewak. "I suppose I always admired old script things and medieval prints with fancy letters on them."

Then, eight years ago, Ms. Rewak decided to take up calligraphy, with the aid of a kit purchased with gift money.

"The year after I graduated (from college) I got birthday money from my parents and it was the first year of my life I didn't have to spend it on bills," she recalled. She used the money to buy a calligraphy book and a pen set.

Since then, although she never took a calligraphy course, she has perfected the art and now prints menus, letters, doors, prepares wedding invitations and just about anything else that requires the written word.

"I think it is both an art and a craft," said Ms. Rewak of calligraphy. "When it started to get really fancy, I think, was during Celtic times."

Back then, she said, the Celts began with Roman lettering and "added their own styles and flairs to it and made it into something beautiful."

Ms. Rewak agreed with a recent report in a national magazine which noted more and more people are beginning to take an interest in the writing which routinely employs curlicues and flourishes.

She said she is now teaching two calligraphy courses at Hagerstown Junior College here, and both classes have a maximum enrollment of 25, with nine people on a waiting list.

"If you look around in restaurants, you see a lot of people are having hand-printed menus," she said. "People that have business cards want something different done so people can remember them. Posters are taking on a nice flair, people in business are wanting special lettered signs done."

She said, however, becoming an expert calligrapher is more difficult than merely taking pen in hand.

"A lot of people think they can take one course and be calligraphers," Ms. Rewak said. "It's not that easy. It takes a lot of time and a lot of energy to get really, really good at it."

But even those who never become professional calligraphers could benefit from learning the techniques, she believes.

"If you were to take a course, probably not only will your handwriting and printing improve about 1,000 percent, but you would have some basic techniques where you could do some simple calligraphy," she explained. Although she general charges by the hour for calligraphy work, Ms. Rewak says she occasionally barters, exchanging a hand-printed business card or wall hanging for something she needs.

She reports she constantly improving her own techniques.

"What took me two hours do two years ago now takes me maybe 30 minutes," she said. "It is just a lot of practice and a lot of experimentation and experience."

Peaceful puttering

Actress Sandy Duncan explained to Beauty Digest how she handles worries: "I do inconsequential, domestic things around the house. I snip off dead leaves from my plants, straighten the drawers and closets and plan dinner menus for the rest of the week. I find that trivia is great for getting your mind off big issues."

Russian defector teaches ballet in China

By PHIL BROWN
Associated Press Writer
PEKING (AP) — For dancer Mikhail Messerer, a Russian defector temporarily teaching ballet in China, one major difference between Moscow and Peking is that none of the Chinese dancers has a Mercedes car.

"In the Bolshoi, everybody has one," said Messerer, 30, who left the Bolshoi Company in Tokyo in March 1980. His mother, Sulamith, a teacher and former ballerina, was in Tokyo at the same time, teaching, and defected with him to the United States.

Now both are helping prepare the Peking Dance Academy's Ballet Company for China's first performance ever of "La Bayadere," a classical Russian ballet that Messerer says is no longer performed in Russia.

They are working with a young group, mostly recent graduates of the school, with the Messerers speaking no Chinese, and the dancers knowing neither English nor the international ballet terms in French.

In China's chaotic 1966-76 "cultural revolution," Western influences were frowned upon and ballet terminology was changed to Chinese. Messerer explained after a rehearsal at the academy.

But he said there was a Russian tradition to ballet here. As co-choreographer of the current production, "I dance for them and they repeat it. They are very professional and understand very well what I want," he said.

"They are very capable, very musical and very well trained," Messerer added. He said Tang Min, 19, who has been studying ballet for seven years and plays the title role of an Indian temple dancer. "It's going to be great."

In a rehearsal of the last act, she danced with him in a dream sequence. A chorus of 24 girls and four other solo dancers sweated through the strenuous steps in black, green and flesh-colored tights, blue sweatshirts and one orange sweater, but still looked elegant.

Then Messerer won a round of applause from the assembled dancers for a series of mighty leaps with scissor steps in the air. He dances the lead male role in the Peking production.

Messerer and his mother, 72, were back in Tokyo in January for a production of "La Bayadere" when some Chinese asked him if he would be willing to do the same thing in Peking.

"I was very surprised. It was a communist country, and I had just defected from a communist country," he said.

But he agreed, and now is teaching and rehearsing six days a week while living in the Peking Hotel for his two-month visit here.

"I don't associate with them (Chinese dancers) personally. I know in Russia how difficult it is for Russian citizens to contact foreigners. I don't want to make trouble for anybody," he said.

Messerer enrolled in the Bolshoi Ballet School in Moscow at the age of 10. Three years before graduation, he won first prize in the national competition in contemporary choreography. In 1970, he made his debut with the Bolshoi Company in "Sleeping Beauty."

Critics have praised his dancing for technical perfection, expressiveness, purity of classical movements, dramatic

Dear Abby

Happy hour results in tragedy

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last February, our daughter, a beautiful, talented, 16-year-old high school senior, was killed by a driver who admitted that he had been drinking in a bar for five hours. Our daughter and a group of 20 youngsters were walking home from a religious convention when the driver plowed into them, killing three and injuring three others. (The driver got off with $100 fine for a "minor traffic violation.")

We later learned that about 25,000 Americans are killed and over 500,000 more are injured every year in accidents involving drunk drivers.

Legislation is now being sponsored across the nation to toughen laws dealing with drunk drivers. But more important, if people would realize the misery they can cause by driving after they've had a few drinks, possibly some lives could be saved.

Our tragedy inspired me to write the following poem. I hope you will publish it.
CYD (MRS. ALFRED) HASSNER, BINGHAMTON, N.Y.

A CHILD'S PLEA

(To help more fathers reach for their children instead of a bottle.)
"Daddy, it was your night out with the boys;
"You drank for hours while I played with my toys.
"Drove into the night, as bold as can be
"And in one moment, destroyed the lives of three.
"For years you taught me, 'Thou shalt not kill,'
"How can I follow your guidance, your will?
"Why did you drink and drive that night?
"I need a father to show me what's right.
"You silenced forever the lives of three.
"Why, Daddy, did you kill someone like me?"

DEAR READERS: An interesting footnote: When I telephoned the Hassners to express my sympathy for the loss of their daughter, I said, "I do hope she wasn't your only child." Mr. Hassner replied, "No, unfortunately we have two others, a 22-year-old daughter who was recently married, and a 10-year-old son." Then he added, "But we lost a 7-year-old daughter to leukemia 12 years ago, and three years later, our infant son was killed in a car crash. But my wife and I were lucky. We survived the Holocaust in Vienna."

GROWING STRONGER IN ARIZONA

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the idea of an Adulterers Anonymous: It's a terrific idea. I know exactly what she's talking about. I have the same illness. And I believe it's an illness, just like alcoholism.
I'm in Alanon (the organization for friends and families of alcoholics), and this last week I allowed the same "higher power" (God for me) help me from making a phone call that would have led to another affair.
I would give anything to be able to talk to someone who knows and understands my feelings. Yes, if there were an Adulterers Anonymous, I would have made a phone call without question.

LIFESTYLES

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.

Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness or pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Washing hair brushes

For your hair to look its best, clean your brush as often as you shampoo. Start by removing hair and dust with a comb or another brush. Then fill your sink basin with warm, soapy water. Swish the brush around in the water for five minutes — but don't immerse a wooden handle or a rubber cushion. Rinse in clear water, shake and let dry, bristles facing down on a clean towel.

Names in the News

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A Peter's Square crowd estimated at 7,000 heard Pope John Paul II thank the world's Roman Catholics for their prayers and support "in these difficult weeks and months" following the attack on his life.

"How deeply I want to thank all those who, in consideration of my weakness, have offered and continue to offer me support," the 61-year-old pontiff said in a taped message from his Gemelli Hospital bed broadcast Sunday to the pilgrims at the Vatican.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball, 86, was listed in good condition at a hospital after undergoing minor surgery for adjustments on his heart pacemaker, a church spokesman said.

Doctors attempted to make the adjustments on the pacemaker, which was implanted May 16, without surgery but couldn't, said Jerry Cahill, a spokesman for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

BOSTON (AP) — The crowd was large and the music was beautiful, but people didn't know whether to cheer "Pavarotti" or "Giorgio."

The two-hour event

Saturday on Boston's Esplanade attracted an estimated 110,000 people.

Iran says U.S. agents killed prison warden

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran announced today that "U.S. agents" killed the warden of its main prison as more than a million Iranians attended a mass funeral in Tehran of 72 political leaders who died in a bomb blast.

Pars, the official Iranian news agency, said the revolutionary prosecutor's office in Tehran announced Warden Mohammad Kachou of Evin Prison "has been assassinated by U.S. agents." It gave no details.

The forbidding prison on the outskirts of the Iranian capital is the chief place of confinement for opponents of the Islamic fundamentalists controlling the Iranian regime. Firing squads have executed hundreds there since the overthrow of the monarchy in February 1979.

The United States also was condemned at the funeral for the victims of Sunday's bombing at the Islamic Republican headquarters as the chanting crowd extolled the "martyrs" and shouted "America defeated" over and over. Tehran Radio reported.

"What happened was an American crime," one unidentified speaker told the throng as it assembled for the funeral procession through the Iranian capital. "The crimes of America are well known all over the world. America calls itself a civilized nation. Such civilization is a barbaric civilization. It is a civilization to enslave mankind."

Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani told the mourners they must fight on two fronts, one the battlefield with Iraq "and the other an internal one."

"With your determination, you can defeat the enemy and the Fifth Column trying to create disturbances," he declared.

Rafsanjani threatened an intensified crackdown on the opposition, saying, "We have been trying to reason with the counter-revolutionaries. But after this horrible crime, how can anyone expect us to let them do what they like to do."

He said the bodies of those killed in the bombing Sunday night would be taken to their birthplaces for burial.

Thousands of motorcyclists in black T-shirts and welding black banners led the funeral procession. Token forces from the nation's armed services and the Islamic Revolutionary Guards followed the coffins.

As the procession got under way, Kachou's casket was added to the 72 coffins, Pars said.

There was speculation that the foes of the Islamic zealots controlling the government might try to make trouble. The Interior Ministry urged the public to "be careful that no disruption of public order occurs, because that is just what your enemies expect." Mourning demonstrations were reported in cities throughout Iran Monday. Fanatics of the Hezbollah, or Party of God, many with shaved heads, raced through Tehran's streets on motorcycles displaying posters of Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, the Supreme Court chief justice and leader of the Islamic Republican Party, who was one of the bombing victims.

About 7,000 people marched through the center of the capital. Shops were shut and long lines of black-clad mourners waited to donate blood for the injured.

Witnesses said there were about 90 people meeting on the ground floor of the two-story party headquarters Sunday when a bomb detonated and the building's roof collapsed. It was not clear how many people were injured. Tehran Radio raised the death toll to 72 Monday night. Earlier reports had said 69 died.

Besides Beheshti, considered the most powerful member of the regime after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the blast killed four Cabinet ministers, eight deputy ministers, 21 Parliament members and a number of officials of the party.

The two men who served with Beheshti on the presidency council that took over the duties of ousted President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr — Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai and Rafsanjani — narrowly escaped death, sources told The Associated Press. The sources said Rajai and Rafsanjani were called out of the meeting just before the explosion.

Although no group claimed responsibility for the bombing, spokesmen for the Khomeini regime blamed the United States and leftists opposed to clerical domination of the country.

The presidency council vowed a "showdown with the enemies of Islam to the last breath."

Several government leaders accused the Mujahedeen Khalq, a group whose ideology blends Islam with Marxism, and the Marxist-Leninist Fedayeen Khalq.

Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, the country's second-ranking religious leader, charged that the bombing was the work of "the criminal America and its mercenary agents." Montazeri's son, Hojatoleslam Mohammad Montazeri, was killed in the explosion.

The U.S. government refused to comment, and State Department spokesman Dean Fischer told reporters in Washington "I simply do not want to dignify such accusations." He added, however, that "we deplore all acts of violence."

Harvest over, rain is welcome in the Panhandle

Cooler temperatures and well-timed rains moved over the Panhandle Monday as farmers were putting harvesting chores away for another season.

Wheat harvest in almost all parts of Gray County and surrounding areas is 99 percent complete, and the rains were a welcome sight for both farmers and local residents.

Pampa received 67 inches of rain that fell intermittently throughout the day. Flood conditions are forecast for today, and more thundershowers are expected through tonight.

The rains were caused by a cold front which moved in from the north and then combined with southerly winds, according to National Weather Service (NWS) spokesman John Hudson.

The cold front was reportedly over Lubbock at approximately 10 a.m. today, moving slowly to the south. In Amarillo the NWS recorded 27 inches. However, heavier amounts did fall in various areas of the city, according to Hudson.

According to the NWS, Canyon received the largest amount of rainfall with 3.85 inches recorded there. Flood warnings were posted for the Canyon area but were lifted late Monday.

Panhandle received 3.09 inches of rain, and Borger recorded .93 inches. "The rain was very spotty with some areas receiving heavy amounts and some areas receiving just a trace," Hudson said.

Bushland received 2.95 inches and Perryton recorded just a trace, according to the NWS.

"Miami recorded 1.10 inches of rain Monday," according to Lauren Grantham, Miami Feed and Grain Company.

"The rains were spotty and one end of town got a lot and one end of town just got wet. Harvest has just finished in this area and the rains came at the right time," Grantham said.

Wheeler received 1.50 inches of rain in the city, and most of the rain fell throughout the evening hours, according to employees of the Omega Grain Supply in Wheeler.

Wheeler-Evans Elevator Company employees in Groom said, "Approximately one inch of rain in the Lark area and .30 to .40 inches fell east of Groom. Harvest is complete in this area and the rains couldn't have come at a better time."

NAACP attacks Reagan economic policy

DENVER (AP) — After giving President Reagan a polite but cool reception at their annual convention, members of the NAACP have turned their attention to strong attacks on Reagan's economic policies.

During its first day, the 72nd Annual Convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People passed resolutions on Monday condemning the Reagan budget cuts and authorizing NAACP participation in a protest march this fall.

And, after sending Reagan off with smiles and handshakes, the NAACP's two top officers lashed out at the administration's economic programs.

Those programs will wreak "additional hardship, havoc, despair, pain and suffering" on blacks and the poor, said NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks.

In his 20-minute address, Reagan told the NAACP that "government is no longer the strong draft horse of minority progress."

He asserted that government aid programs to minorities have failed and urged the 400,000-member civil rights group to support his tax and budget cuts.

"The program of cuts, Reagan said, 'will move us toward black economic freedom because it is aimed at lifting the entire country and not just parts of it.'"

Reagan also vowed to protect blacks' voting rights and never to stray from "our national commitment to battle discrimination."

Hooks termed Reagan's speech "thoughtful" but said the NAACP has little faith in the president's programs.

"We know for a certainty that his budget initiatives, favoring as they do the rich and well-to-do over the least well-off of us ... while simultaneously taking those same dollars from the poor, afflicted and aged, are bound to worsen our double-digit inflation," Hooks said.

Reagan was introduced to the convention by NAACP board Chairman Margaret Bush Wilson, a St. Louis attorney, who gently chided the president for failing to accept an invitation to address the NAACP during the 1980 campaign.

County to consider fire control measures

Gray County Commissioners will be discussing plans to control fires during the July 4th holiday weekend during their regular session Wednesday in the Gray County Courthouse.

Two local grass fires have been attributed to the unauthorized use of fireworks in the past week.

A bill had been introduced into the Texas Legislature by Representative Foster Whaley that would give county officials the authority to prohibit the use of fireworks in the county. The bill did not pass.

County officials have only the legal process including fines to curb the unauthorized use of fireworks in the county.

In 1980, during the period fireworks were put on sale in the county, June 27, through July 4, the Pampa Fire Department answered 187 calls. The department estimated the cost of equipment and man hours involved in the fire fighting at $554 per hour, according to Fire Chief Paul Johnson.

Commissioners will also be asked to consider a resolution concerning Senate Bill 621 (Tax Reform Act), as proposed by Carl Smith tax assessor and collector - Harris County.

According to the amendment, Section 12, to be eligible to serve on the Gray County Tax Appraisal board of directors, an individual must be an elected official. Section 14 would be amended to read: "A single majority of taxing units or a simple majority voting entitlement can disapprove the budget." Section 17 would be amended to: "A simple majority of voting units may disapprove a board action." Section 35 would be amended to read: "May claim a homestead exemption anytime within one year."

An engineering firm for the Highway 70 improvement project will be designated by the commissioners. Commissioners also are scheduled to make a decision concerning the purchase of computer voting systems.

Renewal of the Blue Cross - Blue Shield hospitalization group insurance for the county will be considered. Commissioners were given a demonstration of the computer voting system at the last meeting.

The District Attorney grant program for 1982 and the progress in the sale of Highland General Hospital are also on the agenda for discussion.

Seal coating planned on area highways

AMARILLO — Seal coating projects on major roads in Gray County are included in a highway rehabilitation and improvement program recently approved by the Texas State Highway and Public Transportation Commission.

Amarillo District Engineer A. L. McKee said the state program provides for the following projects in Gray County:

—Seal coating on Farm to Market (FM) 282 from Texas 152 south 9 miles to U. S. 60 at an estimated cost of $42,000.

—Seal coating on FM 749 from Loop 171 south and west 12.7 miles to Texas 70, $135,000.

—Seal coating on Texas 152 from Texas 70 west one mile to FM 282, $40,000.

—Seal coating on Texas 70 from FM 750 south six miles, $132,000.

—Seal coating on the frontage roads of Interstate Highway 40 from two miles east of Groom, east 9.1 miles to the southbound Texas 70 exit, $169,500.

McKee said the work in this area is part of a statewide effort to modernize roads and highways which are worn out or inadequate for today's traffic.

A State Department of Highways news release said that statewide, the 1982 Rehabilitation, State Highway Safety and Betterment and Farm to

Former Nazi guard gets 2 life sentences

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — Hermine Braunsteiner Ryan, the concentration camp guard who married a GI and lived as a New York housewife, was sentenced to life imprisonment today for her part in the death of more than 100,000 prisoners at the Majdanek death camp during World War II.

Seven other defendants were given prison sentences ranging from three to 12 years at the conclusion of West Germany's longest war crimes trial.

A ninth defendant, former SS Cpl. Heinrich Groffmann, was acquitted because of insufficient evidence.

The prosecutors had recommended the acquittal of Groffmann, but all the sentences were less than they requested. The verdicts set off shouts of protests from some of the scores of spectators in the packed courtroom.

"Nothing learned in five and a half years!" shouted one. Others yelled "Giant Scandal!" "An outrage to the victims!" and "Nazi murderers behind bars!"

There was a similar uproar in 1979 when four other defendants were freed for lack of evidence.

The defendants were guards at the Majdanek concentration camp in German-occupied Poland, one of the largest built by the Nazis to carry out their "final solution to the Jewish question." In addition to Jews, it held Gypsies, Ukrainians, Russians, Poles, homosexuals, retarded persons and other "undesirables."

Estimates of the number who died there range from 250,000 to 1.5 million between the opening of the camp in 1941 and its liberation by Soviet troops in 1944.

The trial began Nov. 26, 1975, and the court heard testimony from more than 300 witnesses in Germany, Israel, Poland, the Soviet Union, Australia, Canada and the United States.

The prosecutors asked for three consecutive life sentences for Mrs. Ryan, 61, who was extradited from the United States for falsifying her citizenship papers. Judge Guenter Bogen handed down two life sentences for her.

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) - A 16-year-old boy who spent nearly half his life with Kenneth Parnell after allegedly being abducted says he's "glad" the ex-convict he called "Dad" was convicted of kidnapping a 6-year-old boy.
And Steven Stayner said he's prepared for Parnell's next trial, in which the 49-year-old drifter is accused of kidnapping Stayner.
"I guess this (trial) sort of got me ready," Stayner said by telephone from his home in Merced after being informed of the Monday verdict by a reporter. But, he said, the trial "hasn't really been worrying me too much."
Stayner hitchhiked and walked with 6-year-old Timmy White to the Ukiah police station 16 days after Timmy was abducted on Feb. 14, 1980. Stayner said he didn't want Timmy to live a life like his.

Parnell faces a possible seven-year sentence on his conviction in Alameda County Superior Court for kidnapping Timmy. The jury rejected Parnell's story that another man was responsible for grabbing Timmy on Valentine's Day 1980.
"We obviously thought the defendant wasn't entirely truthful," said jury foreman John Fagan. The jury deliberated about 2 1/2 hours.
Parnell bowed his head and sighed when the verdict was read. Prosecutor George McClure said he hoped Parnell would get the maximum term when sentenced Aug. 4.

Parnell's lawyer, Scott LeStrange, said he thought Timmy's testimony recounting his 16 days at Parnell's mountain cabin sealed Parnell's fate.
The prosecution said Parnell kidnapped Timmy with the help of Randle Sean Poorman, 16, bribing him with $50, liquor and marijuana. Poorman was convicted in juvenile court.
Parnell made a surprise claim during his trial that a man named Henry Mettler Jr. had kidnapped Timmy.

Polish television show military maneuvers

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Polish television showed war games by Soviet and Polish troops as the Red army expanded its maneuvers to northwest Poland, two weeks before the Polish Communist Party convenes to vote on democratic reforms.
"These are typical exercises, such as one would find under real battle conditions," a Polish soldier in the northwest province of Pomerania told an interviewer in the Monday broadcast. "There is no friction."
The telecast was the first of the Soviet military exercises in Poland since the Polish news agency PAP reported joint training operations by the two armies in southwest Poland last Thursday.
The armies were maneuvering during the final days of nationwide voting, in a process unprecedented for the Soviet bloc, to choose the 2,000 delegates to the party congress who will meet July 14 to elect new leaders, ratify the reforms already put in force by the party and chart the country's future course.
It is unknown how many conservative Communists will be delegates, but PAP has said 80 percent of the delegates have never held party positions and many belong to the independent labor federation Solidarity.
The Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies held similar military maneuvers in Czechoslovakia and then replaced the liberal Communist government in 1968 before a Communist Party congress that was expected to back the reforms.
Soviet leaders have rebuked Polish Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania for continuing to give in to the demands for liberal reforms from the independent labor movement and the party rank and file.
The Soviets have also complained because unrestricted nominations of delegates for the party congress were permitted, and in the secret balloting that followed many party veterans were rejected.

In other developments, Soviet TV carried an interview with a Polish railroad engineer who said the Polish Communist Party must end the political crisis quickly to prove itself a genuine ruling organ.

Probation revocation hearing scheduled here

A hearing on revoking the probation of a Pampa man charged with aggravated assault against a police officer following a high speed chase on June 16 will be conducted in 31st District Court Wednesday morning, District Attorney Harold Comer said today.
Randall Moxley, 24, of 1309 Duncan remained in Gray County Jail early today in lieu of five bonds totaling $5,500, a spokesman for the Gray County Sheriff's Office said.
Moxley is currently on eight years probation after he was convicted of forgery on April 23, Comer said.
District Judge Grainger McIlhenny will hear evidence concerning an incident on June 16 in which Moxley allegedly took a motorcycle belonging to Juanita Gonzales, 1153 Neel without her permission, then fled from police at high speeds through city streets, Comer said.
During the pursuit, a Pampa police officer Gregg Dunham, 27, was struck by the motorcycle causing injury to his elbow, the district attorney said.
The motorcycle was finally forced from the road at McCullough and Huff, police said earlier.
Moxley was arrested at the scene and later charged with driving while intoxicated, Comer said.

Retiring head of world bank warns of US foreign aid cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) - Former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara retires today as president of the World Bank with a warning that slashing foreign aid would endanger not only help for the poorest nations but the United States' own vital interests.
McNamara is completing 13 years at the head of the 139-nation bank. He is working to the end to convince a skeptical Congress and American public that foreign aid is not a budget item to be tossed out in times of austerity, but a crucial investment in the economic, political and strategic well-being of the United States.

In an interview Monday, McNamara said the House created serious problems last week when it approved a 1982 federal budget that would more than halve U.S. payments to the International Development Association. The IDA is a bank affiliate that provides subsidized loans to the world's poorest nations.

"For all practical purposes it leaves IDA totally bankrupt and the outlook would be very bad, indeed," McNamara said.
Since IDA contributions made by 23 other nations are computed on the size of the U.S. share, which is fixed at 27 percent, "it would require a complete renegotiation of the agreement under which the other governments are committed to provide funds," he said.
McNamara resigned as defense secretary in 1968 - at the height of the Vietnam War - to assume the bank presidency. On Monday, he said there would be strategic repercussions if the United States continues reducing its aid to poor nations, a trend that has been going on for two decades.

Voters balloting in Israeli election

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - Prime Minister Menachem Begin and challenger Shimon Peres battled for dominance today in a general election considered so close that neither Begin's Likud Bloc nor Peres' Labor Party was expected to win a majority in the Israeli Parliament.
Five hours after the 4,950 polling booths opened, 30.4 percent of the country's eligible voters had cast their ballots - roughly the same as in the opening hours of the 1977 election. Participation was expected to increase after dusk reduced the sweltering heat blanketing much of Israel.
Begin was among the first to arrive at a polling place near his Tel Aviv residence when the voting began at 7 a.m.
"I bet you don't know who I'm going to vote for," the prime minister said teasingly before stepping into an enclosure to choose a party slip.
"Until early morning nobody will know who will form the government," he said. "Here it is not a choice between two men. It is between 31 parties."
The polls were open until 10 p.m. (4 p.m. EDT) and computer projections of the outcome were expected soon after.

Peres voted near his home in suburban Tel Aviv, telling reporters: "This is a fateful day. I'm keeping my feelings to myself."
With final opinion polls reporting Likud and Labor running neck and neck and well short of a majority, both the major parties urged the 2.4 million voters not to give their ballots to any of the 29 smaller parties on the ballot.
A poll published Monday showed Labor leading Likud 43 seats to 40 in the 120-member Knesset. It was taken last Friday by the polling division of the Dahaf Advertising Agency and was commissioned by the Labor Party. A Dahaf poll 10 days earlier had Likud leading Labor 45 seats to 38.
Another poll taken last Thursday tied the two major parties at 42 seats each, 19 seats short of a majority. But the polls indicated more than 10 percent of the voters were undecided, and their decision could have a decisive effect on the outcome.
A close election would send both parties scrambling to line up support among the smaller factions for a governing coalition. But Israel has never had a single-party government in its 33 years of independence although Labor was the dominant force until Likud defeated it four years ago.

If neither Peres nor Begin could patch together a majority within six weeks, another election would have to be held.
Prolonged negotiations would put in limbo such crucial matters as the Syrian missile crisis in Lebanon and the long-postponed talks with Egypt on Palestinian autonomy.
Likud won 43 seats to Labor's 32 in the last election. Begin then had no problem forming a coalition with the centrist National Religious Party and several smaller centrist and religious blocs.
The key issues in the campaign included the inflation-wracked economy, the future of Jewish settlements in occupied Arab lands, the continuation of the Mideast peace process and Israel's relations with Egypt, the United States and Western Europe.

Commission votes not to shut down sour lake

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Railroad Commission has decided not to halt production at the Sour Lake oil field if Texaco and independent oil field operators can come up with a plan to prevent saltwater spillage from a sinkhole into an environmentally sensitive stream.
Commissioners Jim Nugent and Buddy Temple agreed to give the oil operators 45 days to work on solving the brine problem. But they said water in Clemmons Gulley, a freshwater stream, and nearby Pine Island Bayou would be tested frequently.
The 12-acre sinkhole, first noticed in 1929, is adjacent to the stream. The southern edge of a levee Texaco built to prevent saltwater from overflowing into the stream has deteriorated, the commission says.

Texaco and the Sour Lake Field Operators Group will share the cost of repairing the levee and pumping brine out of the sinkhole, officials said.
In recent testing, the commission found that the water in the stream contained 350 parts chloride per million parts water. By comparison, the drinking water in Houston contains about 50 parts chloride, the commission said.
The commission conducted hearings last year to determine the cause of the brine overflow. But Willis Steed, director of field operations in the Railroad Commission's Oil and Gas Division, said Monday it would be "impossible" to blame any one company.

Besides Texaco, other companies with drilling operations in the field include W.F. Newton, ATCO Producing Company, Energy Reserve Group, and J. Howard Radley.
If the oil operators' efforts don't work, the Railroad Commission could prohibit any additional saltwater disposal or injection at the site, virtually shutting down production at one of the state's oldest oil fields.
Steed said he will recommend a long-range plan later this summer to rid the sinkhole of brine and replace it with "semi-fresh" water.

Sponsor concedes child sex proposal dead

WASHINGTON (AP) - A bill to legalize sex between children in the nation's capital is falling prey to public outrage and the illusion that the city council wants to "license sexual acts by the young people," the measure's sponsor says.
Councilman David A. Clarke, the sponsor, said he would offer an amendment to retain laws forbidding child sex when the District of Columbia City Council considered the measure today.
Clarke conceded that the bill, which contains an overall revision of the district's sexual assault laws, was doomed if the child-sex provision remained intact.
"It is, therefore, necessary and appropriate that an amendment be made which will make clear...that the council not only does not encourage teen-age sex, but, in fact, discourages it," he said.
Clarke proposed legalizing sex between consenting youngsters of approximately the same age. Children 12 and over would have to be within 4 years of age of each other, according to the bill, and those under 12 would have to be within 2 years of one another.
Defending the bill Monday, Clarke said his measure was similar to laws in most states. He said the press had made it appear that the council wanted to "license sexual acts by the young people of the city."
Council Chairman Arrington Dixon, lobbying his colleagues in search of a compromise, said he supported keeping the age of sexual consent at 16. He said such an amendment would "respond to the community and the council's interest."
Although he acknowledged that the current law is seldom enforced, Dixon said such laws are still necessary. "We don't want to send a signal to the people, to the children in particular, that the government is sanctioning this kind of behavior," he said.

Since last week, when a newspaper article described the child-sex provisions in detail, the council has been inundated with angry phone calls, Dixon said.
"I think there's just been continual outrage," he said, adding that an "extreme reversal" by the council was necessary.
Mayor Marion S. Barry Jr. has not made a public statement on the bill, but Clarke said he had worked with the mayor on his amendments and had his support.
The councilman said he held exhaustive public hearings on the sex codes, including statutory rape penalties, before introducing the bill.

Will Rogers Range Riders Rodeo is one of the oldest and largest amateur rodeos in the Tri-State area.

Tennessee lawyer subpoenaed by Houston federal grand jury

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The wife of a man missing since one of the nation's largest cocaine seizures says her attorney, Gordon Ball, appeared before a federal grand jury in Houston on Monday after he was subpoenaed.

Ball, of Newport, Tenn., appeared before the federal panel and returned to Tennessee on Monday. Holly Kageler, his client and wife of Charles Leslie Kageler, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

Kageler, 47, is wanted by federal officials on charges that he jumped a pre-sentencing bond by assuming an alias, moving to Galinburg, and being at the Sevierville-Galinburg Airport the night an airplane carrying 614 pounds of cocaine landed from Colombia.

Ball has represented Mrs. Kageler in one court appearance in Sevierville to try to recover property seized in a police search of her Galinburg home after the cocaine haul.

Ball's grand jury appearance in Houston came as a retired pilot accused of flying the plane full of cocaine was arraigned at Sevier County courthouse.

After Monday's arraignment, Clarence Dennis Newell, 51, was moved to Jefferson County Jail to be separated from Kageler's son, Charles Leslie Kageler Jr., 24, a Lubbock, Texas pilot charged in the case. Newell and the senior Kageler are former pilots with Texas International Airlines.

"He's been subpoenaed," Mrs. Kageler said about Ball. "It's probably something to do with jumping bond."

Ball was accompanied to the grand jury session by attorney Robert Ritchie of Knoxville. Ritchie, who returned from Texas late Monday night, refused to comment. Ball could not be reached for comment Monday night.

Mrs. Kageler's father, Cecil Holliman, 68, of Houston, also was subpoenaed. "They asked him if he had heard from Les and he told them he thought he was dead," Mrs. Kageler said about her father's testimony.

George Kelt, an assistant U.S. attorney in Houston, said he met both Tennessee attorneys Monday. But Kelt, citing laws that prohibit him from discussing cases before a grand jury, declined further comment.

Kelt was one of the federal prosecutors who handled the bond revocation hearing on Kageler shortly after federal and state agents seized the cocaine on March 24 from a Beechcraft Queen Aire 80 twin-engine plane.

The plane landed the previous night, and Tennessee Bureau of Investigation agent Bob Denney told federal officials in Texas that Kageler was at the airstrip when he went there to check out the plane. But Kageler and three other men fled.

After hearing the allegations at the bond revocation hearing in March, U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue issued an arrest warrant for Kageler and raised his $1,000 bond to $1 million. Kageler had been free pending an appeal on a tax evasion conviction last November.

The senior Kageler and Gerald Hemp, 42, a Galinburg neighbor, were negotiating with local officials to lease the Sevierville airport prior to the cocaine haul. Shortly after the seizure, Internal Revenue Service agents accused each man of owing more than $3 million to the federal government for income earned from January to March 30.

In Sevierville on Monday, Newell waived the reading of allegations against him at his arraignment as Circuit Court Judge Kenneth Porter entered an innocent plea for him because his attorney was absent.

Porter gave Houston attorney Harry Noe 14 days to file motions for his client, who is charged with one count of possession of cocaine. No trial date was set.

Porter, who set Newell's bond at $1 million, first refused District Attorney General Al Schmutzer's request to imprison Newell in the Dandridge jail about 40 miles north of here. But after talking with Schmutzer, Porter allowed the move.

Schmutzer's request came after Sevier County Sheriff Carman Townsend said it was impossible to keep Newell separated from Kageler's son.

Gramm accused of going back on word

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Democratic Party chairman Bob Slagle said Monday that U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, D-College Station, went back on his word by authoring a bipartisan budget bill supported by President Reagan.

Gramm has called the budget victory his "finest hour," and five other Texas Democrats voted for the bipartisan bill that slashed numerous social welfare items.

Slagle, however, stopped short of agreeing with national party chairman Charles Manatt that Gramm should be kicked out of the Democratic Party.

He said in a statement that Gramm was the only Texas Democratic congressman who did not support and campaign for the national ticket in 1980 nor cooperate with the state party by appearing at fundraisers and rallies.

Gramm, he said, had been "lionized in the press and media for being a leader of Republican causes."

"I, for one, find this media attention offensive as he (Gramm) is the one who received his post on the Budget Committee of Congress by giving his word to the majority leader, Jim Wright of Texas, that he would vote and act as a Democrat in Congress," Slagle said.

He said Texans place a high value on keeping promises, and a businessman "usually refuses to have further dealings with a fellow who waffles on his word."

"I believe that most Texas Democrats will conclude that Representative Gramm's conduct falls far short of his promise," Slagle said.

Officials say errors behind rate hikes

DALLAS (AP) — Computer errors that led to overpayments and duplicate payments were "key factors" leading to a $45 million loss reported by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Texas and subsequent rate increases, a state official says.

William P. Daves, chairman of the State Board of Insurance, said the board has found many errors in the company's computer system during its investigation into the huge loss reported for 1980.

Blue Cross acting president Eugene Aune said the overpayments and duplications "will not and are not affecting the rates for a particular account," but he also acknowledged he does know exactly how much money was paid out erroneously.

"I'm not going to sit here and tell you we are 100 percent accurate," he said. "Company officials have said rates for some groups will jump as much as 40 to 60 percent, while others will notice an increase as little as 5 percent."

Daves said the payment errors "could cause some of those rates to go up this year. I'm sure our examiners are looking into it. But I think competition is going to keep Blue Cross mindful of its rates."

Consumer complaints filed against Blue Cross to the insurance board increased from 394 in 1979 to 1,179 in 1980. Many of the companies showed unexpected deficits because of increased claim payments and asked for audits on group accounts.

An audit on Justin Industries, a Fort Worth company led by Blue Cross chairman John S. Justin, turned up $160,000 in overpayments and duplicate payments during eight months of 1980, said Justin vice president John Bennett.

"We are getting a lot of that money back," Justin said. "We are getting checks back every day. We set up larger reserves this year to compensate for that."

Justin said sales representatives often would issue a second claims check to a customer because the first claim lay unprocessed for two or three weeks after being completed by the computer.

At one point, safeguards were removed from the system to reduce the backlog and erroneous claims payments were allowed to be processed by the computer, Justin said.

Aune and Justin said claims now are being processed smoothly, with virtually no backlog.

Daves said, however, that the claims-processing system will not be purged of all its incorrect data until October 1. He said rate increases wrongly imposed wouldn't be adjusted downward until 1982.

Kay gets 'furlough' from contempt sentence

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A witness who refused to testify before a grand jury investigating the murder of a federal judge spent only four nights in jail before being granted a "furlough" to be with his ailing father, according to one of his attorneys.

Local attorney Alan Brown, who has helped represent George E. "Pete" Kay, said Monday that Chief U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions allowed Kay to go to Huntsville where his father was reported critically ill.

"I understand it's because his father is sick, near death," Brown said. "He was released like on a furlough. I understand he's reporting to the judge daily and was only released on a furlough because of his father's illness."

Sessions would not comment Monday on his reasons for releasing Kay, a lifelong friend of convicted hired killer Charles V. Harrelson.

Federal officials have said that Harrelson is a prime suspect in the May 1979 assassination of U.S. District Judge John Wood.

Kay, 39, a Huntsville nightclub owner, surrendered to U.S. Marshal Rudy Garza at noon on June 22 and was taken to the Bexar County Jail. He expressed displeasure at being incarcerated in the county jail and said he had hoped to be taken to a federal correctional institute.

Garza confirmed Monday that Kay was released late Friday on orders of Sessions, who found Kay in civil contempt on June 19. Sessions gave Kay a weekend to make arrangements for care of his ill parents before surrendering to begin serving the jail sentence.

Kay, a convicted bookmaker, refused during three appearances to answer grand jury questions, even though he was granted immunity from prosecution last March.

Sessions told Kay at the hearing he could be released from jail immediately at such time as he changed his mind and agreed to answer grand jury questions. Kay said he had told the grand jurors he knew nothing about Wood's killing and offered to take a polygraph test.

Garza said Monday he did not know why Sessions ordered Kay's release and Moore was not available to comment in Houston.

However, Brown said he returned to his office Monday and received a telephone call from Moore informing him of Kay's release.

Children die in juvenile violence

HOUSTON (AP) — Two children have died apparently at the hands of other children in separate incidents here.

Police said Derrick Johnson, 10, was shot to death Monday by another 10-year-old who objected when the victim haddled some kittens. And a two-year-old girl died Sunday, apparently because a 94-pound, four-year-old cousin with a "mean streak" jumped on her stomach.

Police Sgt. Norman White said an autopsy performed Monday revealed that Candy Glover died of a ruptured spleen. He said the girl was injured three or four days ago, although medical attention was not sought until the child's condition worsened Sunday.

The child died on the way to a hospital.

"So far in our investigation, we've found a possibility that a four-year-old child ruptured the spleen by bouncing up and down on the girl's stomach," White said.

White said the four-year-old apparently just had a "mean streak" and admitted jumping on her 32-pound cousin.

Opportunity in China

Secretary of State Haig has had his obligatory trip to mainland China, chatted in the Great Hall of the People and murmured soothing things about strengthening new relationships while honoring old commitments. The relationship between the United States and China has passed the blushing excitement stage and may be settling into a more stable one. The urge for closer ties may lead to a larger role for the emerging Sino-American community of interests in conventional geopolitics. But the very newness of the relationship contains a possibility that a more productive kind of relationship can be evolved.

The relationship between the U.S. and China was born in geopolitical considerations, to be sure. The Chinese came to see the Soviet Union as their chief enemy in the world, breaking up a close relationship which had caused American analysts in the '50s to speak of a monolithic communist juggernaut emanating from the Moscow-Peking axis. As the Chinese came to fear the Soviets, it made good geopolitical sense for them to turn to the U.S., perceived (if not always with pinpoint accuracy) as the chief adversary of Soviets in the world.

It is still difficult to say how much other factors entered into the Chinese decision to open themselves to normalized relations with the United States. Certainly reaction to the excesses of the Maoist cultural revolutions played a part. The death of Mao, and the passing from fashion of his style of rabid anti-American rhetoric created new possibilities for China's rulers. Some reports suggest that the emergence of a relationship with the United States has coincided with a loosening of the authoritarian controls and insistence on collectivist purity that had characterized the Chinese economy under Mao. Part of the impetus for change within China was pragmatic; collectivism is extremely inefficient. But there is evidence that there has been a rather thorough rejection of the more extreme aspects of communist ideology by China's ruling elite. It's difficult for an outside observer to make generalizations about a society as large as China, but to say that China has come close to an official rejection of communism is not insupportable.

The prelude to Haig's visit was the announcement by the State Department that more than a hundred petty trade restrictions governing commerce between the U.S. and China were being dropped. The State Department was saying, in effect, that we no longer consider China a communist country. This is an auspicious development.

In the first blush of renewed relations under Nixon and Kissinger, American businessmen and intellectuals were excited over the prospect of getting access to the world's largest marketplace and of bringing the Chinese into the family of nations. We have learned a few things since then. Mainland China, despite extensive meddling under Mao, was never a global power. Its teeming millions do not represent a get-rich-quick opportunity for hustling American entrepreneurs. China is an important regional power, to be sure. In terms of the modern world it is a struggling, developing nation, though one with a long tradition and a proud heritage that offer great promise for future progress. Conventional foreign policy thinking about China has begun to focus on cautious steps toward supplying U.S. weapons and moving toward various security and mutual assistance pacts. This seems to us profoundly wrongheaded.

A sincere concern for the well-being of the Chinese people would suggest that the best internal policy would be for the government to step out of the way and permit the awesome potential productivity of the people to grow in an environment of increasing economic freedom. The most valuable thing the United States can offer the Chinese is a sophisticated understanding and our own example of how a market system permits the productive capacity of people to create wealth. Indeed, China need look no farther than Taiwan and Hong Kong to see how relative economic freedom can pay off in prosperity. The hitch is that many government officials, especially those in the State Department, seem to have little understanding of or sympathy for the potential liberating power of the market system.

The U.S. has taken the first step in eliminating a few penny-ante restrictions. What it should do next is to announce, with a great deal of fanfare, that it is eliminating every single government-created economic barrier and restriction between the U.S. and China—unilaterally and with no concern about whether China responds in kind. At the same time, it should say that this policy implies nothing in the way of military or strategic alliances—that we'll keep an open mind if emergencies arise. The elimination of restrictions should be understood to mean that the U.S. government doesn't intend to guide or plan U.S.-China trade, but to step out of the way and let it happen as the exigencies of the marketplace may determine.

Our guess is that American businessmen, seeking their own profit, would gradually persuade Chinese officials that both parties could benefit by the elimination of restrictions on the Chinese side, and that an enormously productive relationship would ensue. It is to be expected that the Chinese government would insist on being the sole import-export agent for a while, but that monopoly would gradually be broken.

The productive potential of such an arrangement could be immense. It could, over the years, develop into an example to the world of how two great powers can develop a mutually beneficial, peaceful relationship by getting the respective governments out of the way and permitting the people of the two nations to act and interact on a strictly voluntary basis.

Economic freedom is the key to China's economic development. If it develops even a fraction of its economic potential, China will be able to afford all the defense it needs, without help from the United States. One cannot predict overnight success, but the opportunity is exciting. If we could get our diplomats to set aside their geopolitical and strategic concerns for a few years and facilitate peaceful cooperation, the result might just be a new era.

By OSCAR COOLEY

Are you prepared for the big crash? Richard J. Whalen, adviser to President Reagan, writes in the Washington Post. "A major financial crisis, likely to be marked by spectacular bankruptcies, appears headed our way."

I am not a calamity howler, but the future is uncertain. The stock market, which always looks ahead, in recent weeks has been up. It has also been down. Investors are in a quandary, as just about everyone is.

Men run many risks, some of them quite unnecessary. It is said that fewer than 10 percent fasten their seat belts, although it costs nothing, is very easy to do, and may save their lives.

Of those who lived through the great depression of the 1930s, some fared well. Others lost their shirts. Now, with some like Richard Whalen foreseeing an economic storm, it is only prudent to batten down the hatches. How?

Economic slump is possible

1. People who depend mainly on their own ability to earn wages are safest if they work for an employer of long standing, who has weathered both the sunshine and the storm, for if a depression comes, such employer will be most likely to survive and continue to produce, hire people and pay wages. Work for a firm that has a past, for it is most likely to have a future.

This will probably be a conservative firm and one that turns out products or services for which demand is not likely to shrink greatly even in hard times. This might be a food company, since people will continue to eat, or a maker of clothing. However, one should bear in mind that even demand for food and clothing is not wholly inelastic, since consumers can manage to eat less—and especially less of gourmet foods—and frilly garments, too, can be passed up.

Wage-earners should also remember that every employer has competition, and to meet it he must keep his costs down so that he can sell for the same or less than his competitors. To most employers, wages are a main cost. To enable him to break even and continue to hire them, workers are smart not to press him for wage increases when the economy is declining. On the other hand, when business is on the rise, requests for substantial raises are in order, for then his sales are gaining and the labor performed in his shop is of greater value.

2. People who depend mainly on their saved capital should now look to the quality of their investments. In best position to meet a possible recession are those whose savings are in real wealth—land, buildings, machinery, goods—rather than in money.

Money, it cannot be said too often, is not wealth. It is just a medium by which the various kinds of wealth are exchanged. It is very handy stuff to have, because it will buy anything—food, farms, flags, a trip to France. These things are useful in living, but money has no utility. It is useful only to buy things that have.

Further, money's value in terms of real wealth fluctuates. It can fall greatly, as we all have seen in late years. So it is safe to hold, that is, to store value in, only when the economy is stable. When great instability threatens, one is wise to own tangible, usable goods.

Fortunate is he who now owns a home. He should hang on to it. During boom or bust, it will be a roof over his head. Probably his home has ground behind it for a garden. That, too, will be an asset, for in it he can grow potatoes, carrots, green beans—real wealth. If he is a ruralite, he may be able to keep chickens, even a pig. He has it made.

Another way to save wealth, not mere money, is to buy common stocks, for the firms you buy into own wealth such as land, factories, trucks and ships, and when you own their common stocks you own their wealth.

At this time, one might well concentrate his stock buying in firms that have a lot of real assets, such as natural resources, not in dollars that are owed to them. During a recession, coal in the ground and ships on the high seas are worth more than money in a failing bank. Utilities are attractive investments now. Electricity is a necessity and may become even more so. If and when electric automobiles begin seriously to replace gas burners, electric power companies will enjoy a new burst of demand.

Again—I am not calamity howling. Whalen's dire prediction is just his guess. We may well be on the verge of a buoyant rise. The optimists, too, have a case. But a stitch in time saves nine. And we could be about to tear our pants.

The end of the World?

A lady called me up the other day and said, "I've been reading the newspapers and watching television, and what I want to know is, does the baseball strike mean the end of the world?"

I felt I couldn't lie to her. "For some people it does, but my information is that others will survive it, though nobody knows what shape they'll be in."

"Why," she persisted, "is baseball so important to the United States?"
"Because," I told her, "it's the American pastime. Since we play it, and hardly anyone else does, it makes us different from any other country on the face of the globe. God has blessed our people with the ability to hit and field a little ball over a vast area, guarded by some of the highest-paid men in sports. When American men refuse to play the game, the entire world could read this as a sign of this country's lack of resolution and fortitude."

"Are you saying," she wanted to know, "that a baseball strike could encourage aggression and adventurism by the other side?"

"Everything is done by signals nowadays. How the other side reads our signals could affect their future behavior. The fact that we, at the moment, have no capacity to complete a double play, or even sacrifice a man who is on first base, could be read by our critics as a signal that this country is so involved in domestic strife that it could not deal with any mischief abroad. On the other hand, the situation could be interpreted as one of strength. It shows that we have the ability to defend ourselves despite the fact that there is no one guarding home plate."

I didn't want to frighten the lady, but apparently I had. "Why doesn't the president of the United States step in and settle the strike if our national security is at stake?" she demanded.

"This has been suggested by one of the owners," I told her. "But so far, the president doesn't want to interfere in the negotiations because if he failed at this stage there would be no place for both sides to go. The president of the United States must not squander this power until all hope is lost. That is the reason he did not get involved in the recent coal strike which tied up the Eastern part of the country."

"But isn't a baseball strike much more serious to the nation than a coal strike?" she asked.
"To some people it is—mostly the owners. But there are others in this country who are not baseball fans and couldn't care less."

"They can't be Americans."
"I'm sorry to say they are. Some are football fans. Others prefer to watch basketball, and many would rather play a sport of their own. It is this apathy that made the strike possible in the first place and could slow down a fast and just settlement."

"How can a sport that only requires nine men to each side affect so many people in the nation?"

"Because most American men were raised on baseball. When they became too old to play it, they preferred to watch other, more talented people compete on television during the long hot summer months. When you take away baseball from their screens, you create an entertainment void in this country that can't be measured. There are just so many times any human being can watch a re-run of 'MASH.' If the strike goes on much longer no one knows what could happen in the city streets this July."

The lady said, "The strike is only a week old, and my husband is starting to act strangely already. Is there anything I can tell him that will give him hope?"

"Tell him that Washington is watching the situation very carefully, and the president is being informed of the negotiations on the hour. Congressional leaders are also being briefed, and the White House situation room is in direct contact with the Chicago Cubs."

"If there is no settlement soon, will the president call out the National Guard?"

"Only if Billy Martin starts kicking dirt at the federal negotiators."

So what does your spouse call you?

By D.R. SEGAL

Lawyers are in a terrible fix, being so learned and all, and yet there is absolutely no way of knowing it unless you get a look at their mail addressed John R. Barratry, Esq. The Esq. is about the only way you can tell a lawyer from a plumber or shoe clerk, and that is a laugh because an esquire was the lowest form of distinction in medieval England. They polished the armor and fetched the wench for the real knights. Some stuff, I don't think.

Women who aren't so sure about their husbands like to refer to the poor saps by their job descriptions. She doesn't say, "Joe and I are going to Palm Springs to shoot a snipe or two." She says, "The Doctor and I are going." Unless you know Joe is a doctor you are left wondering. And the problem there is that there are so many kinds of doctors you can't tell if he's one of the prestigious kinds, like, say, a plastic nose-fixer, or a Ph.D. in economics, which will not buy you much in the way of social prestige at all.

Spouses who like to refer to their husbands by job description are the wives of medical doctors, judges, bishops, college professors and above, and sometimes coaches, depending on how the team is doing. I have never heard a woman say, "The grocer and I are going to take a vacation in Yellowstone this summer." Never. Similarly, I have never heard a lady refer to her husband as "the editor" or "the publisher" or "the reporter," and with good reasons, I should say. If you are one of those things, your wife, when asked, will mumble something inaudible and walk quickly over to the bar or feign an attack of asthma and go lie down.

I have often wondered if women who refer to their husbands as "the doctor" et cetera do so in the privacy of the kitchen and boudoir also, or is this done only to impress the local booby? I guess it doesn't much matter, but it always bothered me that maybe the little woman has to keep reminding herself that the turkey is really somebody important after all, dear God.

All idle speculation of course, but think on it, neighbor.

Securing security card

Proposals to make the Social Security card a sort of universal identification card have sparked controversy in recent years. Proponents say the card could be used to determine the legal status of aliens seeking employment. Critics fear the plan would lead to "big brother" government.

But a report by inspectors general in the Department of Health and Human Services suggests that the current lax controls in issuing the identification numbers and in storing blank cards make the Social Security card virtually worthless as a means of positive identification.

Audits in New York and Washington showed that 20 percent of cards issued between January and September 1980 went to aliens unauthorized to work. Blank cards are easily obtained and can be filled in to provide "an unverified passport" to employment, the report said.

The inspectors general recommended that controls be tightened. No further urging should be necessary.

Whether people like it or not, the Social Security number has in practice become the universal identifier of legal status for residents of this country. The security of the numbering system should be protected accordingly.

University dean says Bell's testing of home information system would be unfair

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — If Southwestern Bell Telephone is allowed to test-market a computerized home information system in Austin, competitors never would catch up, a Public Utility Commission hearing examiner has been told.
Bell proposes to test the Electronic Information System for its corporate parent, American Telephone and Telegraph, in 700 homes and businesses here.
Dr. William H. Cunningham, associate dean of the University of Texas' graduate school of business, told PUC examiner Rhonda Ryan at a prehearing conference Monday that the test itself would give AT&T an advantage competitors could never match.
"Competition would not operate. ... It cannot be repaired," Cunningham said.
AT&T already has run EIS trials in New York and Florida.
The Texas Daily Newspaper Association is trying to block the EIS test in Austin. Ms. Ryan has scheduled a full hearing on the case for Aug. 3.

Cunningham said Bell's vast resources in the telecommunications field would give it an unfair advantage over other competitors for the home information service dollar.
"The (Austin) trial itself will destroy competition — not just injure competition, but destroy competition," Cunningham said.
He also noted that Southwestern Bell had built the capability to conduct the test and join the infant home information business at the expense of its telephone customers.
Cunningham recommended that a home information market, other than providing telephone lines for others.
— Require complete disclosure by Bell of all the information it has provided AT&T.
— The marketplace deserves to know what Southwestern Bell has told AT&T," he said.
— Compel Southwestern Bell to make public all the information it has developed from its joint efforts with AT&T.
— Make Bell accountable to its customers for the money it has spent in preparing for the Austin test.

Jim Wurtz, Bell attorney, suggested in cross-examination that AT&T's prospective competitors in the home information business were large and rich, too.
"What newspapers are experimenting in this area?" Wurtz asked.
Cunningham said the Dallas Morning News and Dow-Jones were testing in one area and the Harte-Hanks chain was part of a "consortium with other newspapers" that was exploring the potential of home information service.
Wurtz suggested that newspapers were opposing Bell's EIS test because EIS might cut into their advertising revenues.
AT&T proposes to include in EIS current advertising — including information on prices and sales — that a consumer could call onto his or her computer screen with the push of a button.
Earlier this month, AT&T chairman Charles Brown told a U.S. Senate committee that Bell had no intention of ever trying to originate news or solicit newspaper-type advertising.

Suspected hoaxer faces similar charges

MORGAN CITY, La. (AP) — A man sought as the glib hoaxer who conned innkeepers and authorities with reports of an offshore oil rig disaster was on trial in Morgan City today on similar charges, authorities said.
But the suspect, identified as Barry Allen Richardson, 28, of Monroe, was still at large on charges stemming from his bogus reports of an accident out in the Gulf of Mexico.
According to court records in Ouachita Parish, "Barry Alan Richardson" was arrested May 21 for giving false information given to Ouachita Parish deputies.
Court records in Monroe show that Richardson was freed on $250 bond on the misdemeanor criminal mischievous charge and faces trial this afternoon.

Ouachita Parish deputies refused to release details of the Monroe case in which Richardson is accused of falsifying information.
In the Morgan City hoax, Inspector Duval Arthur of the St. Mary Parish sheriff's office said Richardson was fired from his roustabout's job with Gulf Intercoastal Oilfield Services on Wednesday, June 24.
Richardson stayed at the hotel for five days, and on Sunday he told the hotel management Sunday that 17 offshore oilworkers had been injured — some critically — in a rig accident, and then reserved a block of rooms for a "disaster center."
Then, early Monday, a man identifying himself as a Shell

Oil Co. executive telephoned newspapers and radio stations and reported the "accident."
His reports, similar to those in actual rig disasters, were convincing enough to be published and broadcast.
The hoaxer also put offshore boat and air services on standby, and even asked the Berwick Police Department to lend him radio gear.
"He played it pretty much convincingly," Arthur said. "He was very shrewd about what he did, and he went pretty far with it."
He never used the police radio gear, but he persuaded the Berwick police to suppress reports of the accident, Arthur said.
"He asked the police department not to let it (the alleged disaster) out," Arthur said. "They didn't let the cat out of the bag until they found out we were looking for him. They were pretty red-faced."

The hoaxer skipped out around 9 a.m. Monday without paying his bill, Duval said. Shell Oil later denied any knowledge of the hoaxer.
In St. Mary Parish, Richardson is wanted for criminal mischief and felony charges of fraud in obtaining his motel accommodations.

Policeman's widow fights parole bid of his slayer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — If policeman's widow Vonnie Bewley gets her way, one of the two men convicted of shooting the rookie lawman will stay in prison until Independence Day in 2015.
"I think they should do the sentence they got," said Mrs. Bewley, a Midwest City woman whose first husband, Mark Zelewski, was gunned down early July 27, 1964.
Marvin Barnett, who begins his 17th year behind bars after being convicted in connection with Zelewski's death, has been recommended for parole by the state Pardon and Parole Board.
"Sixteen years on a life sentence isn't enough," said Mrs. Bewley, who wired Gov. George Nigh on Monday to protest the clemency bid.
Oklahoma City's police chief, Tom Heggy, also notified Nigh of his opposition to a parole bid by Barnett. The Fraternal Order of Police also was expected to protest parole for the 41-year-old inmate, a police spokesman said. All four shots that killed the policeman, was convicted after testimony that he shot one bullet into Zelewski's head. Robert Barnett also was convicted.

On July 3, 1964, Marvin Barnett began serving a life sentence that Nigh, in September, commuted to 50 years.
On a 3-1 vote this weekend, the Pardon and Parole Board recommended parole for Barnett, who said he wants to return to Oklahoma City if Nigh approves the clemency recommendation.
"He said he wants to come back to his family in Oklahoma City if he's paroled," Mrs. Bewley said Monday. "I wish that someone would tell him that Mark Zelewski still has a family here, and that he's got a grandchild he never got to see, and that he's got children he never got to see grow up. Mr. Barnett is not being fair when he said he wants to come home."
Zelewski was shot when he stopped a car because police had been tipped that a vehicle matching its description would be used to rob a store.

'A horrible joke,' mayor OK after not being shot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mayor Marion Barry was "as surprised as anybody" to hear the news bulletin that he had been shot. It was a hoax, and a television anchorman admitted to his viewers: "We've been had, folks."
Washington's three network stations interrupted normal programming Monday night to report that Barry, 45, had been seriously wounded in a shooting at his home. A half hour later, they broke in again to say it wasn't true.
Barry heard the bulletin at the home of his legal adviser, Herbert Reed.
"I was as surprised as anybody else," the mayor said later at a news conference in front of his southeast Washington home. "I think it's a horrible way to play a joke."
Barry's first reaction was to call his wife, Effie, and tell her he was OK. But she was at a friend's house, where she heard the same report.
"I couldn't believe it," Mrs. Barry said. "There were just so many stories going. I just said, 'Take me home so that I can see what's happening.'"
What was happening, according to information pieced together from city officials and the television stations, was a hoax.
James Van Messel, executive news producer at NBC-owned WRC-TV, said someone called the network desk there about 9:45 p.m. EDT to say the mayor had been shot and police had two suspects in custody.
The caller, who identified himself as James Taylor, said he was phoning from the mayor's command post and left a return number that later turned out to be a public telephone booth.
When a reporter for the station immediately called the number, Van Messel said, a man answered as the mayor's command post and said Barry was being taken to the hospital at Andrews Air Force Base.
"In our case, a number was stuck under somebody's nose," Van Messel said. "He asked some questions and when we got some answers, the question was whether to go with the story."
WRC went on the air with a news bulletin, moments before stations WJLA and WDVM.
Van Messel said his station's reporters then found another number for the command center and called it. "The cops knew nothing, the hospital knew nothing. All of a sudden things started to fall apart," he said.

Barry reached his original agreement with creditors Feb. 27. That agreement postponed $40 million in debt payments due through June 30.
Barry reported a net loss of $131.4 million in 1980, after a net loss of $44.3 million in 1979. The airline showed a net loss of $24.7 for the first quarter of 1981. Airline officials blamed the recent loss on debt payments.

Creditors give Braniff more time

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff International and its 39 major creditors may have polished off a tentative agreement that would further postpone the airline's debt payment of more than $600 million, a Dallas newspaper has reported.
Though an announcement from Braniff was expected early today, sources told the Dallas Morning News that attorneys for the airline and creditors met behind closed doors Monday night to finish off a new plan.
Braniff had obtained a 140-day deferral of all debt payments in February, an agreement which ends today.
Airline officials had been pleading for a more lenient payback plan for its debts of more than $600 million.
Sources told the News they did not expect a detailed repayment plan this soon, but added that the creditors probably would extend the present relief period until a reorganization of the debt can be agreed on.

"I understand they (the creditors) will be extending the time limit, giving them more time to decide on a reorganization plan," a competing airline executive told the News Monday. "I would be surprised to see any new plan announced in the next day or two."
Braniff reached its original agreement with creditors Feb. 27. That agreement postponed $40 million in debt payments due through June 30.
Barry reported a net loss of $131.4 million in 1980, after a net loss of $44.3 million in 1979. The airline showed a net loss of $24.7 for the first quarter of 1981. Airline officials blamed the recent loss on debt payments.

Diamond Shamrock to sell two operations

DALLAS (AP) — The chairman and chief executive officer of Diamond Shamrock Corp. says the company will sell its plastics and animal nutrition businesses — two of five businesses the company identified last year as being under consideration for sale.
W.H. Bricker said Monday that Diamond Shamrock's plastics and animal nutrition businesses "will be able to meet the demanding financial and strategic goals we have established for the 1980s. Negotiations are under way for the sale of both businesses at this time. When the sales are completed, they will provide additional cash for internal investment in our ongoing operations."
He said the discontinuance will result in an estimated charge against income of about $99 million, or $1.76 a share, for the second quarter, which ends Tuesday.
Total effect for the six-month period will be about $108 million, or $1.91 a share, because first quarter earnings also will be restated to reflect the discontinued operations, he said.
"We expect that earnings from continuing operations in the second quarter will be modestly above comparable earnings for last year's second quarter, which also will be restated," Bricker added.

Barry reported a net loss of $131.4 million in 1980, after a net loss of $44.3 million in 1979. The airline showed a net loss of $24.7 for the first quarter of 1981. Airline officials blamed the recent loss on debt payments.

Court gives death row inmates reprieve

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has given seven Texas death row inmates a reprieve, but the death sentences for six other convicted Texas murderers remain intact.

In setting aside the seven death sentences, the justices told a state appeals court to restudy the seven sentences in light of their latest decision involving the rights of defendants facing possible capital punishment.

On May 18, the Supreme Court ruled in a Texas case that murder defendants must be warned prior to psychiatric testing if the test results are used after conviction to help choose life or death as punishment.

It is possible that new sentencing trials will have to be held for each of the six men. Today's action set aside the death sentences — but not the murder convictions — of these Texas death row inmates:

- John Wilder, sentenced to die for the Dec. 22, 1975, shooting death of Duane Jaixen, a 19-year-old attendant at a service station along Interstate 30 near Hooks in Bowie County.
- Artie Armour, also convicted in Jaixen's murder.
- Moses Lopez Garcia, convicted for the Sept. 26, 1974, slaying in Houston of David Lewis during a robbery.
- James Charles Simmons Jr., convicted in the Jan. 5, 1979, beating and stabbing death of Truett Ledford, the 70-year-old owner of a Hill County service station.
- Thelette Brandon, who was convicted in 1976 for the stabbing death of Waco police sergeant Roger Barnett.

—James R. Parker.

—Mag Daleno Rodriguez, convicted in the Feb. 8, 1977, shooting death of Maria Guajardo during a grocery store robbery in San Antonio.

The court left intact the death sentences of these death row inmates:

- Billy Joe Woods, convicted in the Oct. 15, 1975, beating and strangulation death of 62-year-old Mable Ehatt in Houston.
- Walter Bell Jr., convicted in the July 19, 1974, murder of Irene Chisum in Port Arthur.
- Charlie Brooks Jr., given the death sentence for the Dec. 14, 1976, kidnapping and murder in Fort Worth of David Gregory.
- Randy Glenn Green, convicted of beating to death Harold Eugene Robinson, the 72-year-old owner of a Baytown tavern on June 29, 1976.

Buyer of winning tickets remains a mystery

BRYANTVILLE, Mass. (AP) — Marian and Steve Smolinsky, retirees who live on Social Security, were mystified when their names showed up on a winning Irish sweepstakes ticket worth $153,000.

They had never purchased a ticket and hadn't received one as a gift. Without a ticket stub it wasn't even clear that they could collect.

But sweepstakes organizers in Dublin say that even if the mysterious benefactor who bought the Smolinskys a ticket doesn't step forward, the couple can still claim their prize. All they have to do is prove their identities and they're in the money.

The Smolinskys first heard Saturday that they apparently had won one of the two top prizes in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes Derby. The horse race had been run earlier that day in Dublin and won by the Aga Khan's horse Shergar. Khan is an internationally known religious leader.

Their name and address was on the winning ticket slip held by the sweepstakes organizers, derby officials said in Dublin.

"It's impossible," Mrs. Smolinsky said when told the news. "Someone called from Ireland this morning, and my husband just said they were crazy."

The Smolinskys, inundated with calls, have stopped answering their telephone. They have said repeatedly they would not believe their luck until they got official word from the sweepstakes organizers.

That will be on its way to them shortly along with an official claim form. Joe Macken, public relations officer for the event, told The Associated Press from Dublin.

"In the past, there have been occasions where payments have been made where a winning ticket has been lost or is otherwise unavailable," he said Monday.

"In this case, the trustees would require an authorized statement — probably something sworn before a lawyer — that the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Smolinsky of Bryantville, as named on the counterfoil, before forwarding the money," he said.

Smolinsky, 66, a retired baker, and his 63-year-old wife are the only couple by that name in Bryantville.

Negotiations on waste pact scheduled at Oklahoma City

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The director of the state Department of Pollution Control and Ecology is to represent Arkansas in negotiations with several states on burial sites for low-level radioactive wastes.

Jarrell Southall said Monday he will attend a July meeting in Oklahoma City where other states in the region are gathering to discuss an agreement for setting up the burial sites.

The discussions were prompted by a federal law approved last year that bans states from accepting low-level radioactive wastes from states outside their own region. There are currently three places that now accept such waste. They are Hanford, Wash., Beatty, Nev. and Barnwell, S.C.

If an agreement isn't reached between the states in the region, Southall said, Arkansas will have to develop a site to store the wastes generated in the state.

Low-level wastes are generated primarily by nuclear power plants and hospitals using radioactive materials. The material includes gloves, gowns, paper, containers and residue from water and air purification systems at nuclear plants.

Southall said Arkansas is faced with deciding whether to go it alone and provide a storage site for waste generated here, or join a compact where the wastes from several states would go to a single site in one of the states in the region.

"I don't anticipate, say, over six states joining in the compact and more than two sites being in the compact," Southall said.

Phyllis Garnett, director of the Science Information Liaison Office for the General Assembly, said completion of an agreement is several years off.

Once an agreement is reached, the legislatures in each of the states involved are to consider the proposal. For the proposal to advance, each state must adopt the same legislation, which must then be approved by Congress, Ms. Garnett said.

The states originally involved in the discussions of the regional compact were Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Arkansas and Louisiana. Ms. Garnett said that Iowa and Nebraska later said they wanted to be included in the negotiations. Texas also was involved originally, she said, but the Legislature there has since passed a law that puts that state's participation in doubt.

Ms. Garnett was involved in informal discussions of regional compacts for disposal of low-level radioactive waste through her dealings with the National Council of State Legislatures.

"I tend to be really strongly in favor of the compact for a number of reasons," she said.

Most states don't generate enough of the waste material to make it economically feasible to operate a site within one state, Ms. Garnett said. From a policy standpoint, she said, it would be better not to have 50 burial sites, one in each of the states.

Teen-ager in a coma after dental surgery

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A teen-ager who suffered either a heart attack or respiratory failure while having four wisdom teeth removed at a dentist's office remains in critical condition in a coma at an Arlington hospital, an attorney said.

Darrell Keith, a lawyer who has been retained by the Bhusahn Bajaj family, said Monday he has some "very serious questions ... about the methods and doses of anesthetic administered" to 18-year-old Vikram-Jeet Bajaj.

Bajaj apparently suffered a cardiac arrest or respiratory failure Friday after Dr. Edward Menton, an Arlington oral surgeon, administered an anesthetic intravenously, Keith said.

The youth "is in very critical condition ... with minimal brain activity," Keith said late Monday night. A hospital spokesman confirmed Keith's report about the youth's condition.

Dr. Menton could not be reached for comment late Monday. The Arlington attorney said it was "premature to comment on whether litigation will be brought as a result of the teen-ager's respiratory or cardiac arrest and resulting coma."

Keith said he was hired to investigate the circumstances surrounding the administration of anesthesia and what proceedings took place during that time.

"It is my understanding that the victim's respiratory arrest occurred at a time the oral surgeon may or may not have been in the room and it is unknown whether any other health care providers, such as a nurse, were present in the room when he experienced the respiratory or cardiac arrest," he said.

Keith said Mr. and Mrs. Bajaj had been in Dr. Menton's office about an hour and a half Friday "when they overheard some commotion in the office by the doctor's staff."

"They were told their son had experienced a cardiac arrest and had been transferred to Arlington Memorial (hospital)," he said.

Keith says the dentist has talked to the family, but added that he didn't know what was said.

"Certainly there are very serious questions that have been raised by the family about ... the drug administered and the practice and procedures used to monitor their son while he was at the oral surgeon's office."

Keith said he was not aware that Bajaj had any medical problems that might have increased the probability of complications.

The family moved to the United States from India about 18 years ago and the teen-ager had been to Dr. Menton once before, the lawyer said.

Executives requested to pay for yacht for president's use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservative businessmen who returned the former presidential yacht Sequoia to Washington say they will ask executives of major corporations to donate $25,000 each to pay for the ship and help it for use by President Reagan and his successors.

Reagan, however, has given no indication that he will set foot aboard the 95-foot cruise ship sold by then-President Carter in 1977 as "an unjustified and unnecessary frill."

Michael Doud Gill, a Washington business consultant and a member of the Presidential Yacht Trust, said 30 to 40 executives have accepted invitations to a July cruise on the Potomac River, where they will be asked for contributions.

Gill said the trust is looking for 50 contributors willing to pledge $25,000 a year each for the next five years to cover the yacht's $1.1 million price tag and set up a $4 million trust fund for its maintenance. He would not provide the list of prospective donors.

Gill, a nephew of the late President Eisenhower, conceded that if Reagan does agree to use the ship, "that will help us raise money to pay for her."

Richard W. Arendsee, a wealthy San Diego moving executive, said he bought the yacht this month in Florida and is leasing it to the trust as a patriotic gesture. It arrived in Washington on Sunday.

"It's not a gift to President Reagan," Arendsee said. "It's a gift back to the people."

White House aides said Reagan might not use the yacht — newly refurbished with silk brocade drapes, emerald green wall-to-wall carpeting and silver candelabras — at a time of deep budget cuts in social programs.

"In light of the president's whole program and cutbacks, it didn't seem appropriate," said White House aide John Rogers.

Two fail to reach finish

AFTON, Okla. (AP) — Twenty-three women pilots completed an annual cross country race from Florida to Oklahoma but one was disqualified and two were grounded in Kansas because of stormy weather.

Officials were to compile unofficial results today and announce official returns Wednesday. Official records are determined by a formula of flight time and handicapping based on the type of plane flown.

The race is sponsored by Air Race Classic Ltd., headquartered at Dallas.

Anna Daley of Millville, N.J., and her co-pilot, Roberta Strikim of Petersburg, N.J., were in the first plane to reach the finish line at Afton. They were followed by Phyllis Baer of Mercer Island, Wash., and her co-pilot, Dottie Gann, Harbor, Wash., and Juanita Blumberg of Casselberry, Fla., with co-pilot Bonnie Quenzler of Merritt Island, Fla.

Mary Ann Hamilton of Shawnee Mission, Kan., accompanied by Janet Shirley, Kansas City, Kan., as co-pilot as the last to arrive Monday. They reached the finish about minutes after the deadline and were disqualified.

Grounded at Garden City, Kan., because of thunderstorms were Dot Etheridge, Greenville, Miss., flying solo, and NormaATTERMAN, Beverly Hills, Calif., with Aileen Pickering of the Los Angeles area as co-pilot.

The race began Friday at Jekyll Island, Ga.

World television--from prudish to permissive

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

A kiss on the cheek marks the limit of decency on television in India. Full frontal nudity causes little stir in Yugoslavia and Australia, but one Australian show bans the word "divorce."

Whatever the standards, ranging from prudish in the Soviet Union, Argentina and the Islamic world to permissive in most of Western Europe, few nations have the kind of decency campaign being waged in the United States by the Coalition for Better Television, an Associated Press survey shows.

In Britain, 18 years after Mary Whitehouse founded the National Viewers and Listeners Association to promote "spiritual and moral values" on television, viewers still adore the leering Benny Hill. Frontal nudity is occasionally shown in Britain.

In Japan, television dotes on strippers and titillating documentaries despite protests by the Parent Teachers Association. PTA director Kengo Takeuchi admits: "We haven't been too effective."

Several years ago the group pressured a sponsor to drop a particularly offensive program. Takeuchi said, "but other sponsors jumped right in."

The "11 p.m. Show" on week nights and Saturday night's "Adult Hour" dish up bouncing bare breasts and pseudo-documentaries on sex shops, massage parlors and coffee shops where waitresses wear sheer pantyhose but no panties beneath their miniskirts.

Despairing of influencing sponsors and broadcasters, Takeuchi said the PTA now tries to encourage parents to monitor their children's viewing.

The Coalition for Better Television, a group sponsored in large part by the Moral Majority, has met with representatives of some companies to ask them to stop sponsoring shows the group finds too violent or sexy.

Cal Thomas, vice president of Moral Majority, said Sunday the discussions with advertisers were so successful that the Coalition may drop a plan to boycott sponsors of shows it considers objectionable. A decision was to be announced today.

Even without formal decency campaigns, every nation has its standards. "Dallas" is a convenient gauge.

The exploits of J.R. Ewing are wildly popular in South Africa, but the Rev. P.J. Van Staden of the Nederduitse Hervormde Kerk has condemned the show's "free sex" and "glorifying of thugs."

"Dallas" is top-rated in Denmark, but the Radio Council panned it for "trashy" scripts and characters. In the Persian Gulf, "Dallas" is shown with every kiss deleted.

Between the world's puritans and its libertines, tastes vary widely. Argentina banned the Three Stooges. Brazil a show portraying a man doing housework. For Soviets a bedroom scene is OK as long as the couple is at least engaged and the sheet is tucked tightly under their chins.

Many countries draw the line in children's bedrooms. The barriers come down once the little nippers are presumed to be asleep.

"Sex, profanity, nudity, violence: you name it, it all goes," said Roland Bekking, a spokesman for the Dutch Broadcasting Foundation. "The only problem is the time it is aired."

Australians have seen "Last Tango in Paris," uncut, and "Let's Go Naked," a BBC documentary about a nudist colony, after 8:30 p.m. But the government licensing board banned the word "divorce" on a 6 p.m. soap opera, lest it upset children, and banned the film "Taxi Driver" after President Reagan was shot by a man allegedly influenced by the film.

Yugoslavian viewers see it all — sex, homosexuality, profanity, full nudity. There were only a few protests when a closeup of a penis was shown in "Breakdown," a Yugoslavian film.

France's three government-owned television networks are lenient about sex and nudity, but sometimes excise particularly violent movie scenes.

In permissive Sweden, said Lars Bergman, director of the radio board, there are more complaints about heavy drinking on U.S. shows than about sex or violence.

Austrian TV showed "Last Tango" uncut, but there was a furor last year when the punk rocker, Nina Hagen, demonstrated a masturbatory technique on a late-night talk show.

Israeli TV usually permits the most provocative profanity in news and talk shows, but last week, television director Yitzhak Shimoni vetoed an appearance by "Happy Hooker" Xaviera Hollander on an early evening show.

A variety show hostess, Mehtab Channa, was sacked by Pakistan Television last winter because she dropped her "dopaita," a veil which covers the top and sides of the head.

Moslem Malaysia bans kissing in local productions, but a brief kiss or a bikini-clad woman is tolerated in an imported show.

"Starsky and Hutch" used to be shown, but any scene showing a police officer being killed was snipped out.

In China, kissing, profanity and stylized violence appear on TV, but a series called "Eighteen Years Behind Enemy Lines" was criticized for showing too much flesh — an actress doing a bathing scene in a one-piece swimsuit.

TV STANDARDS. Whatever the standards, from prudish to permissive, few nations have the kind of decency campaign being waged in the United States by the Coalition for Better Television. Actors Patrick Duffy, left, and Larry Hagman mix it up, above, in a scene from "Dallas."

Texans surveyed on feelings about media

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texans believe the news media is fair, but not always accurate, and have mixed emotions on the methods of reporting crime and violence, results of a poll by Texas Monthly magazine indicates.

The poll, released over the weekend, was based on telephone interviews with a random sample of 1,200 adults conducted statewide June 7-11 by Opinion Analysts, Inc., of Austin. At a 95 percent confidence level, the maximum margin of error is 3 percent.

The media received varied reviews on the treatment of crime and violence. One hand, Texans agreed 71 to 22 percent that the media have to spend as much time on crime and violence as they do because crime and violence are a big part of our society.

But there was marginal disagreement, 50 to 40 percent, with the statement that the news media are responsible for many violent crimes because they give too much publicity to criminals.

Texans agreed 70 to 21 percent that the news media play up violent events because they know that violence sells.

Texans disagreed, 53 to 37 percent, with the statement that the media spend too much time reporting unimportant items. Instead, the respondents said by 70 to 19 percent that journalists do a good job covering the things people need to know.

Those surveyed also agreed 55 to 31 percent, however, that political leaders often make hasty decisions because the media blow things out of proportion.

The Texans gave the media high marks for fairness, 62 to 25 percent, but they were divided on the question of credibility.

The media was viewed as "pretty much even-handed" by 44 percent, while 26 percent said they are too liberal and 12 percent, too conservative.

In response to the statement, "You really can't believe a lot of things you see and hear in the news media," 44 percent agreed and 42 percent disagreed.

Overall, the poll shows Texans rate the news media favorably, giving questionable marks only on their methods of reporting crime and violence, and less than good marks for credibility.

Blacks, Mexican-Americans and Texans with incomes of less than $15,000 a year were far more likely than other groups to agree that the media report fairly, do a good job covering important events and help people understand daily problems.

The same groups also were more likely to disagree that the media overemphasize violence or spend too much time on unimportant matters.

Champ melon no bargain

LULING, Texas (AP) — The champion watermelon at the annual Watermelon Thump was no bargain. The 69-pound, 2-ounce melon was auctioned off for $3,300 — or more than $47 a pound.

Luling farmer Preston Briscoe grew the melon, which was bought by J.J. Leasing Co. of Luling.

Why would anyone pay more than $3,000 for a melon?

"After they buy them they donate them to a retirement home or something like that," said Briscoe. "Then they can take it off their taxes."

Wil-Mart, Dixie win little league titles

Wil-Mart and Dixie won Pampa little league titles Monday night at Optimist Park. Wil-Mart pounded Gate Valve, 14-4, to take the American Little League flag while Dixie defeated Glo-Valve, 9-2, to win the National Little League championship.

Phetteplace belted a bases-loaded homerun. Brad Abbott, Troy Owens, Bill Luedecke and winning pitcher Charles Gowin collected two hits apiece for Wil-Mart. Gowin struck out nine, walked three, and allowed seven hits in going the distance. Rodney Harris paced Gate Valve with a perfect 3 of 3 night, including a homerun.

James Ward had two hits for Wil-Mart coaches were Nelson Medley and Russell Abbott. In the National Little League finale, Dixie broke open a tight game with a seven-run outburst on three hits in the fifth inning. Dixie was ahead, 2-1, going into the bottom of the fifth. Winning pitcher was Brett Mitchell, who struck out seven and walked six in pitching a complete game. George Bixler reached base four times for Dixie, scoring twice. Cliff Medley nipped Glo-Valve threats with a pair of outstanding defensive plays for the winners. Wayne Hoskins, who had two singles and a double, led Glo-Valve at the plate. Dixie closed the season with a 17-5 record.

Negotiators still far apart as baseball strike reaches 19 days

By HAL BOCK, Sports Writer. Their Manhattan offices separated by only about a half dozen short city streets, at the striking Major League Players Association and baseball's Player Relations committee remained much further apart than that today. No talks were scheduled in the walkout, which has shut down baseball for 19 days and almost certainly has added the July Fourth holiday weekend, traditionally one of the sport's top gate attractions, to its mounting casualty count. Both sides talked briefly with Federal Mediator Kenneth Moffett on Monday but no progress at resuming negotiations was reported. Donald Fehr, general counsel of the players association, thinks the stalemate over compensation to teams losing free agents is the re-entry point that is destined to continue for a long time. "I believe a significant number of owners have written off the season," said

Fehr. "If that happens, then the strike will still be on next April. If the summer is over, there is a lot less incentive to settle it over the winter. The owners think the players will collapse but they won't. This thing could go on forever." Meanwhile, the players missed an entire paycheck for the first time today. Players are paid on the 15th and 30th of each month. Fehr characterized a revised management proposal on compensation made at last week's bargaining sessions as "so minimal...not something that will lead to an agreement." Management reduced its formula for defining ranking players who would qualify for compensation from 50 and 33 percent to 40 and 25 percent and increased the number of second level players who may be protected in any compensation from 18 to 20 last week. "It's like somebody driving up to your house in an old, broken down car with no engine, no wheels, the windshield shattered and the tail light broken and asking you to buy it," said Fehr. "You say, 'No,' and so, the next day, he comes back with the tail light fixed. Will you buy it then?" Fehr said the next move is up to management. "But as far as the players are concerned, it's been their move for a long time." Elsewhere on the strike front, a federal judge in Philadelphia refused to return to state court a suit filed by the Major League Umpires Association, which seeks to block payments from a $50 million strike insurance policy. The insurance provides the owners with $100,000 for every canceled game after a 153-game deductible. Judge Donald Van Arsdale last Friday dissolved a temporary injunction won by the umpires in state court and then denied a petition to return the case to the state court's jurisdiction on Monday. "It seems to me there is federal jurisdiction," Judge Van Arsdale said. In another Philadelphia courtroom, two fans filed a $10 million civil suit against both sides in the stalemate. William Halloran and Maury Galonoy charged "intentional and reckless disregard for the rights of others," and charged that the players and owners had "injured and damaged innocent bystanders," by denying the fans their right to see baseball games.

Davis motivated by pay-TV?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Art Modell, president of the Cleveland Browns, believes that pay-television will become important as far as the National Football League is concerned, but not for another eight to 10 years. "Pay-TV is exciting, it is dramatic, but it's not for a long time," Modell testified Monday in U.S. District Court at the antitrust trial in which the Oakland Raiders and the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission have sued the NFL over the league's refusal to allow the Raiders to move to the city. One reason that Al Davis, managing general partner of the Raiders, reportedly wants to move his team to Los Angeles is that he believes he would make large profits from pay-TV in the lucrative Southern California market. Modell said that pay-TV profits will be shared by NFL teams, thus disputing a claim by Davis that the teams would get their own pay-TV money. Modell also testified during his first day on the witness stand that the NFL plans to insure economic equality among league members. "We don't want the rich to get richer and the poor to get poorer," Modell said. Modell agreed with earlier defense witnesses who disputed Davis' claim that he struck an oral contract with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle to permit the move of the Raiders. Davis testified earlier in the trial that at a league meeting in Chicago in October of 1978, he agreed to change his position from

"no" to "abstain" to allow Rozelle and the league to change its rules on moving franchises. The rule was changed from unanimous consent of the owners to a three-quarters majority. To change the rule, a unanimous vote was needed. Modell agreed that Davis said he would reserve his rights, but denied Davis said anything about moving his football team. Modell did, however, say at one point under questioning by Raiders' attorney Joseph Alioto: "Mr. Alioto, you can keep me here all summer long. I am not going to change my testimony."

But he then proceeded to recall that Davis said, "I reserve my rights to move." Alioto paused, asked a few more questions and then asked, "Can the testimony be reread?" Upon hearing his earlier answer, Modell said, "I misspoke myself. All he said was, 'I reserve my rights.'" Judge Arthur Pregerson told the jury to disregard allegations by the Raiders that Georgia Frontiere, owner of the Rams, Eugene Klein, owner of the San Diego Chargers and Rozelle had conspired to prevent the Raiders from moving to Los Angeles. The judge dismissed that portion of the suit last Friday.

Ali plans to fight again

CHICAGO (AP) — Former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali, sidelined with a bout of pneumonia, says he will fight several exhibition matches in September. "I'm going to get my weight down and fight exhibitions, probably in September at Madison Square Garden," Ali said Monday in an interview with radio station WLUP-FM. "I'll whip them both in the same night, but if they can put it on me and I don't have it, I will formally retire." Ali, 39, the only boxer ever to gain the heavyweight title on three separate occasions, added, "I want to prove to people that that wasn't me the night of the (champion Larry) Holmes fight. I don't want to go out like that. Ali entered Provident Hospital several days ago with a bout of walking pneumonia and said he expects to be released within two days.

Meets Lloyd next

Shriver surprises Austin in quarterfinals

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Pam Shriver has something to prove to herself: that she can win a string of great matches, and not just one. She played a great match Monday, defeating her 18-year-old rival Tracy Austin 7-5, 6-4 to reach the Wimbledon semifinals. It earned her a crack at top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd, who has beaten her in all seven of their previous meetings. The statistics will not worry seventh-seeded Shriver too much. The 5-foot-11 Lutherville, Md., player, who will turn 19 on Saturday, ended an 11-match losing streak against Austin in front of a packed crowd of 14,000 on Wimbledon's center court and said afterward she was full of confidence for the semifinals. "That must be my greatest win," she said. "I played an almost perfect match. I now know I can play a great match. Now we are going to see if I can string together a sequence of great matches. "Today was good for me. I couldn't ask for anything better before playing Chris." Lloyd, who defeated Shriver, then 16 years old, in the final of the United States Open three years ago, defeated 10th-seeded Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia 6-2, 6-2 in a little over an hour to clinch her place in the semifinals. "It doesn't worry me who I'm playing," said Lloyd, who reached the semis for the 10th straight year. "I like playing Pam because she is a serve-and-volley player. That gives me something to aim at — and she's a pretty big target." Lloyd joked. Lloyd, 26, had very little to worry about Monday. The chunky Jausovec, who had earlier upset fifth-seeded Andrea Jaeger, did not have the consistency to disturb the No. 1 seed. The Yugoslav player mixed up her shots intelligently but made too many forced errors. The other semifinal is a much tougher match, according to the seedings, with second-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia playing Czechoslovakian-born Martina Navratilova, who is seeded No. 4. Mandlikova overwhelmed Wendy Turnbull of Australia 6-0, 6-0 in 40 minutes, while Navratilova ousted Virginia Ruzici of Romania 6-2, 6-3. Turnbull was hampered by a wrist injury, but Mandlikova, the 19-year-old reigning French Open and Australian Open champion who is halfway to the Grand Slam, said: "I know the result looks easy on paper, but I had to work for every point."

SWEEPS INTO SEMI-FINALS. Chris Monday at Wimbledon, Evert-Lloyd, Evert-Lloyd returns a shot from seeded number one in the tournament, Yugoslavia's Mimi Jausovec during their won, 6-2, 6-2, and will play Pam Shriver in ladies singles quarterfinals match the semi-finals. (AP Laserphoto)

Ed Cuervo's solo homer in the 10th inning gave the Jackson Mets a 1-0 Texas League baseball victory over the Tulsa Drillers Monday night. In other Texas League action, El Paso edged Midland, 5-4, and Arkansas beat Shreveport, 5-3. San Antonio's scheduled game at Amarillo was postponed because of rain. Cuervo's homer ended what had been a pitching duel between winning pitcher Terry Leach, 4-1, and Kevin Richards of Tulsa. Jack Lazorko, 2-4, who relieved Richards in the eighth, was the losing pitcher. Stan Davis had a solo homer in the eighth inning as the El Paso Diablos edged the Midland Cubs, 5-4. *Jim Kontz, 2-4, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Randy Clarke, 4-8. *Fred Tisdale's two-run single ignited a four-run rally in the ninth inning and gave the Arkansas Travelers a 5-3 victory over the Shreveport Captains. Arkansas also scored on a passed ball and a sacrifice fly in the ninth inning. The winning pitcher was Rafael Pimentel, 6-2. Jim Dunn, 3-4, was the loser.

The rise and fall of high-rolling Texas cattleman

(Ed's Note: Clayton McKenzie's champagne days may be over. He once was making $1 million a week, but still he knew how to spend more than he made.)

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — Television would love Clayton McKenzie, his rise and his fall.

Even by Texas standards, McKenzie, at 38, is extraordinary, a burly rent-a-cow cattleman with a hankering for big cars and sleek airplanes.

He's a big spender and a big tipper, almost a chain-smoker, a man fond of cowboy boots but not cowboy hats.

He is at once very public, very private and always flamboyant.

He's got a beautiful wife, two handsome sons and a fashionable home tucked away in a secluded nook of the lush green East Texas woodlands south of here.

The house is surrounded by pine trees a high wooden fence to which is attached a red wooden sign. The sign says: "Warning... protected by Dobermans."

People who think they know him say McKenzie has a reputation as a high rolling wheeler-dealer and they insist he did not come by that reputation dishonestly.

A banker calls him an enigma, "a mystery man." A waitress fondly recalls a $20 tip for delivering a single soft drink.

Just a few months ago a reporter asked him about his booming dairy cow business and wondered how many cows he owned.

"I'd rather talk of them in terms of dollars, because I'm more knowledgeable in dollars," he replied expansively.

"Oh, we have a good idea how many cows are out — the computer could give us the exact number within three minutes — but I hope you can appreciate the fact that we don't want to disclose to the whole world just how many."

He said he preferred to answer thusly: "It's easy for us to do $30 million a year in cows, or it's easy to do $2 million a month in cattle."

In fact, he volunteered, his company, Quality Holstein Leasing, once turned $3.2 million in cows in three weeks.

Those were the champagne days, the heady times prior to June 16. That was the day Quality Holstein Leasing and two satellite companies filed for bankruptcy.

Clayton McKenzie was born and raised in nearby Tennessee Colony, which, according to a Texas historical marker, was founded in 1838 by "settlers from the Old South."

They came in wagons searching for fertile, watered farmland. And they found it here in the shadow of the Piney Wood, a breathtakingly beautiful area.

"My great-grandmother was on the first wagon train," McKenzie said before he quit talking to reporters. "My great-grandfather was on the second, that arrived in reponse to letters back home by the first settlers."

"They were both small children. They grew up, fell in love, and got married, and the land they settled has been in the family since."

As fate would have it, that land would one day become the focal point in a bitter family dispute resembling a seamy episode of the TV series "Dallas."

More than a few traces of that bitterness still exist. A woman who knew the McKenzies years ago remembers them as a "strange" family.

"One minute they'd all be fighting and screaming," she said. "The next minute they'd be one happy family."

The woman described Clayton as a fat, spoiled child who was not universally loved by his youthful companions and maybe even less so by members of his family.

Although the youngest of four children, three of them girls, Clayton "ran the roost at home from the time he was old enough to talk," she said.

It is a fact that the McKenzie family started the first Grade A dairy in Anderson County and that Clayton's father was at least moderately successful as a peanut farmer.

Unlike his older sisters, two of whom became schoolteachers, Clayton abandoned college to get a head start in a relentless rush to riches. "I was sitting in chemistry class one day when I decided I should go into business for myself at that," McKenzie told The Houston Chronicle several months ago.

He said he figured he'd make more money that way "than in technician-type job and that's what most jobs are."

He walked out of Henderson County Junior College and never returned, parlaying $5,000, 98 acres, some iron ore and a small herd of Holsteins into an early business venture.

The years brought periods of feast and famine, probably more of the latter, and in 1969, McKenzie's roller-coaster career hit an all-time low.

He and a brother-in-law, Dennis Ray Ingram, were charged in an illegal alien smuggling scheme. A federal jury acquitted the pair after a 1970 trial in Tyler.

Not long afterward, McKenzie recalls, he stumbled upon the unusual "rent-a-dairy-cow" idea.

Quality Holstein Leasing bought the cows and leased them to dairy farmers, serving in effect as both banker and supplier of cows for inflation-plagued dairymen.

McKenzie would one day boast that QHL, as it is called here, had become a factor in dairy farming in the 48 contiguous states with a staff of 30 and a fleet of four airplanes.

A custom-designed computer kept track of herds and clients which McKenzie said grossed millions of dollars annually.

But the decade of the 1970s was a turbulent one for McKenzie, made even more so by the death of his father in 1975 and the subsequent squabbles over the estate.

During a flurry of suits and counter-suits, McKenzie once obtained a restraining order preventing his mother from disposing of family assets.

He also sought to have Ingram, the brother-in-law, jailed on assault charges. He said Ingram struck him with his fists and a club and caused "serious body injury to his head, neck, chest and stomach region."

Clayton demanded some $90,000 in damages, none of which he collected, perhaps because of sworn statements by his mother and sisters.

The mother, Mary Lou McKenzie, now 75, said the incident stemmed from the many arguments over the estate, but that Ingram did not strike her son.

"So you're telling me that the only physical contact was merely the grabbing of shirt?" one of Clayton's attorneys asked.

"That's it," replied the mother. "It didn't even tear the shirt."

The mother contended that Clayton never "turned a tap" to assist the dairy operation, yet he was "trying to take everything that belonged to the estate."

Asked once about the family relationship, Clayton's sister, Sarah Joy said, "It was different."

She said Clayton wanted "all the farm ... all the land out there," and that many "direct and indirect battles" resulted from the purported power play.

As the dispute ebbed and flowed, Clayton busied himself with his cow business and in March, he said he expected to gross a record $30 million this year.

But his empire already was developing cracks. "He had several big deals go bad on him, and his cash flow wouldn't let him recover," said Allen Weed, a Dallas attorney representing McKenzie.

Suddenly, creditors around the country, claiming non-payment of debts, began to file suit against the McKenzie companies.

A court official ordered certain holdings to be sold at public auction and sheriff's deputies reclaimed $13,800 in jewelry from Clayton's wife Sharon.

With other creditors closing in, McKenzie filed the bankruptcy petitions June 16 in an attempt to freeze the debt claims and win time to reorganize his crumbling enterprise.

Work beginning for 1983 legislative session

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas legislators will not be meeting most of the summer, but according to orders left by the recent regular session, preparations will get underway for the 1983 session.

Twenty-nine separate interim studies were authorized. Most of the study groups — particularly in the Senate — will be carried on by standing committees named by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton. Others will be new committees created for a specific purpose.

"It is much easier when you can use a regular standing committee or subcommittee," said a Senate source. "In this way you can keep committee staffs together and on the payroll and don't have to hire a bunch of new people every time the Legislature meets. They keep busy and they do better work."

On the other hand, some study committees will be created from scratch.

One, authorized by Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, will study "the problem of crime in the state." Membership of the committee includes the governor, lieutenant governor, speaker, chairmen of the Senate and House criminal jurisprudence committees and a number of non-legislative members.

"Our real aim is to see what can be done about crime in the state so we can make recommendations to the next Legislature," Laney said. "We want it big enough to take in anything."

Another special committee, proposed by Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, will hold hearings over the state to determine what costs there are to local governments when there are state-owned facilities in their area.

"We need to determine if there is any need of assistance to them because of the additional cost of fire and police service, how much they are losing from taxes because of state-owned land in a city and whether it affects their city planning and zoning ordinances," Doggett said. "There was considerable talk this last session about how much the Texas Department of Corrections costs Huntsville and Walker County."

Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, was author of a resolution creating a special Senate committee to study natural disasters such as hurricanes, floods and tornadoes. It will look into the state's facilities for moving quickly and adequately in emergencies.

The Senate voted to create special committees to study state services available to people suffering from diabetes and those suffering from autism.

Still another Senate resolution, by Sen. John Leedom,

R-Dallas, calls for an investigation of the charges and fees made by state agencies.

A House resolution calls for a special study by the State Board of Education regarding a comprehensive state occupational education program.

Twelve different studies will be undertaken by seven regular Senate committees or subcommittees.

The Senate Committee on Natural Resources was directed to study reports of the declining population of redfish and speckled trout in Texas bays, to look into the cause of grain elevator explosions, and the availability of ground water supplies.

The Senate Public Health Subcommittee plans public hearings on problems of sexually transmitted diseases and health and welfare services provided through block grant funding.

The Senate Committee on State Affairs will study public retirement systems in Texas and the possibility of allowing Texan to mortgage his homestead.

Three different Senate and House committees will study selection of a state artist and a state poet for each of the next two years.

Candidate follows in O'Daniel's footsteps

DALLAS (AP) — Les Chambers, warbling working class tunes for more than 26 years, is singing for more than his supper these days.

The 54-year-old Lancaster resident, who has been entertaining since age 12, officially started his race for Texas governor over the weekend.

Chambers promises a barnstorming campaign in the style of "Pappy" Lee O'Daniel — the flour salesman who, with a hillbilly radio band, sang his way to the governor's office in 1938.

About 30 of Chambers' friends and relatives gathered to drink cold beer, eat barbecue, shoot pool and listen to some Bob Wills music at the American Legion hall where he made his first campaign speech Saturday.

Chambers' campaign platform includes better pay for teachers, better benefits for veterans and a couple hundred dollars for male welfare recipients to be "cut" so they "couldn't have any more babies."

He also suggests penalties for industries that hire illegal aliens.

Chambers says he will push for prison reform, adding that his son is serving a life sentence for forgery.

The candidate said his campaign manager, Verna Dean Stevenson of Nashville, will spend much of her time in "the home of country music" persuading country music stars to come to Texas for fund-raisers.

"I've written some good songs and some bad songs, he said. "I always thought my bad ones were the good ones."

And he stresses that he is serious about the gubernatorial campaign.

Shortly before his announcement, one of his close friends asked Chambers to get her another beer.

He politely refused, explaining, "I don't think the governor of Texas is supposed to be going around getting people beer."

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — H.J. "Doc" Blanchard, a former state senator from Lubbock, is one of many Austin residents seeking pets lost during the recent flooding.

Blanchard said the last time he saw "Big Dog" — a 120-pound German shepherd — the dog had paddled "from the back yard into the living room through some broken French doors. We never saw him after that."

"He's a hell of a swimmer, so I'm sure he survived," said Blanchard, who advertised in the newspaper for the dog's return.

"Send him back," Blanchard said. "Now that I'm out of politics and four of my kids have left for college, I need somebody to talk to."

Washington man wins national fiddlers title

WEISER, Idaho (AP) — A Moultrie, Wash., man scored 5,027 out of 5,400 possible points to take the National Oldtime Fiddlers' Contest Grand Championship for the third consecutive year Saturday night.

Mark O'Conner, 19, tours with an Atlanta rock band called the Dregs. He won the Grand Master competition in Nashville, Tenn., in 1975 at age 13 and again in 1980.

"When I was young I wasn't nervous because I didn't have to feed myself. But now, when I'm working and have to pay my own way, I thought I would be nervous, but I wasn't," O'Conner said of the competition. "I was the most scared about losing because of the length of my hair."

The three-time champion collected $1,200 and a sculptured fiddler for playing "Hell Among the Yearlings," "Skater's Waltz" and "Don't Love Nobody." He won't be able to win the contest next year because three-time consecutive champions are ineligible.

O'Conner said he played a concert in Madison, Wis., a week ago Saturday night. He came to Weiser for last week's fiddlers contest and will join his band for a concert in Chicago Monday night.

He said he has no trouble switching from rock violin to old-time fiddling.

"I grew up with old-time music and it's so engrained in me that I can play it any time," he said.

Dick Barrett, who won national championships in 1971, 1972, 1975 and 1976, took second for the fifth time. Barrett, 62, of Roundup, Mont., has competed at Weiser since 1970 and has never failed to reach the finals. He received $900.

Dale Morris, 36, Decatur, Texas, took third place. Morris, the 1979 Texas state champion, received $600.

Ticket chairwoman Lois Lee said more than 7,000 persons attended this year's performances. Reserved seat tickets for Saturday night's Grand National finals were sold out last February and bleacher seats were gone by early May.

Winners of competitions earlier in the week were: Tricia Brown, 11, Palo Cedro, Calif., junior-junior division; Jay Dean Warner, 12, Greenacres, Wash., junior division; Coy Daily, 66, Salida, Calif., senior division; Jim Hoots, 62, Ashland, Ore., men's division; and Jeannette Beyers, 19, Redding, Calif., ladies' division.

Skydiver arrested after jump

HOUSTON (AP) — A professional skydiver was arrested Sunday after he and three other men parachuted from the 75th floor of the Texas Commerce Bank Building under construction in downtown Houston.

The jump took place at about 8 a.m. Sunday morning, when witnesses said they saw streamers floating down from the top of the building.

"Me and a truck driver were standing there talking and I looked up and said, 'Look — skydivers.' And one of them floated out over the (The Houston) Chronicle building," said Bob Long. "I looked up and there was one standing on the roof and he jumped. Looked up and there was another one, and he jumped. They both floated over the Chronicle building."

Dr. Lamb

Not all exercise has strengthening effect on heart

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.
 DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been working out with weights to improve my health but one of my buddies told me that weight lifting won't help your heart. He said you have to run or jog to do anything to strengthen your heart. Is that true? If so, why won't weight training work your heart? It certainly is a lot of work.
 DEAR READER — It all depends on how you do weight training and also on how you jog or walk. There is some truth in your friend's statement if you take the extremes of the two different forms of exercise. If you lift a heavy weight, rest, then lift again you will work your lifting muscles but you will not work your heart very much.
 But if you lift weights for one group of muscles and immediately go to another group of muscles so that you are working steadily over a period of time, it will affect the heart. The sustained duration of exercise is the point.

 Exercise works your heart because exercise requires your body to use more oxygen. One way more oxygen can be delivered to your working muscles is by increasing the amount of blood your heart pumps a minute. The more blood your heart pumps, the more it works. As it works it opens its own arteries to the heart muscle.
 There is a unique feature to your circulation. The venous blood in your arm returning from your muscles still contains a lot of oxygen. For short durations of exertion, your body simply becomes more efficient in taking out the oxygen that is still in your venous (blue) blood. That means under ideal circumstances that you can do two to three times as much work without increasing the amount of blood your heart must pump. Endurance exercises sustained for longer periods of time use up the extra oxygen and the heart work increases.

 A more complete explanation of how your heart responds to work is included in The Health Letter number 14-10, Exercising Your Heart, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.
 For general health I favor exercises that provide for strength, endurance and flexibility. All three are important aspects of your being fit and healthy.

 DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 46-year-old female. The last two years I have been breathing through my mouth and have started to snore.

During the day or night when I breathe through my nose it feels stuffy. I have always been a nose breather. This is very annoying to me. What causes this and what can be done about it?
 DEAR READER — You probably do have narrowed nasal passages. That can be from swollen nasal membranes from an allergy or a chronic infection. Or you could have a gradual growth of tissues such as cartilage that has narrowed your passages. Or your nasal septum may be deviated enough to be causing an obstruction. See an ear, nose and throat specialist. If you have an allergy with swollen membranes, he may wish to treat it. But if you have a basic anatomical narrowing, he may suggest surgery. This is a submucous resection. The tissue under the lining is removed to open up the passageways.

At Wit's End

There's a lot of controversy these days about at what moment life begins. Equally intriguing to me is at what moment does it end. I've seen some people expire at the age of 22. Their heart continues to beat. The vital signs are intact. They function on a daily basis. But for all purposes they're "gone." There is no curiosity. There is no anger. They have lost the ability to question anything. They are unimpressed. They are not amused. They stand rigid against new ideas and changes.

The wonderful excitement and zest for discovering what each day brings has been put to rest. How do you know when you're gone? You'll know. When you sit through a rerun of a television show you hated in the first place and are too lazy to get up and turn the dial. When you refer to yourself in the past tense. When you wear raggy night clothes to bed and shrug, "Who's gonna see me." When you say to the motel owner, "I'm checking out" and he says, "I'm not surprised."

Well, if my kids are reading, take note. I'm not ready yet to divide the jewelry. I think I've got a few good years left. I want to be like 92-year-old Virgil Conner, who recently earned his doctorate in history at Florida State University. I want to be like 73-year-old Veallon Hixson, who ran her first marathon last year in Phoenix. I want to be like Arthur Godfrey, who once said to me on the air, "When I'm 70, I want to be named in a paternity suit." When I'm 80, I want to be saying things like, "Well, I never heard THAT before." Or "I'll ask mother. She'll remember." Or, "So, let's buy it. We could get a 20-year mortgage on it." But mostly, I want to be like a woman I knew in Ohio, who at the age of 78 bought a home in Florida and planted a baby palm tree in the front yard.

When a stunned nurseryman said, "Madam, these only grow 10 or 15 inches a year!" she said, "So when they get higher than the house, we'll have 'em trimmed."

EPICUREAN DESSERT. Fresh apricots are poached and topped with soft meringue.

Fresh apricots make gourmet dessert dish

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
No doubt about it. Many Americans are cooking differently from the way they once did. One example: nowadays cooks are often interested in the alluring desserts that may be concocted with poached fresh fruit. Once upon a time, they were likely to leave the poaching to French chefs. This new trend doesn't mean, however, that these cooks use only French recipes for their handiworks. For instance, one good cook we know recently invented a delightful new dessert made with fresh apricots. She poached the halved and pitted apricots in frozen pineapple juice concentrate, topped the apricot halves with soft meringue and gave them a brief stay in the oven. When we tried her recipe, some of our tasters loved the dessert as is — on the tart side. Others took to our idea of making it a two-meringue offering. For this we perched some of the poached apricots with their soft meringue filling on very sweet baked crisp meringues — the sort you buy at bakeries or make easily at home. You can even stuff the hard meringues with ice cream before giving them the apricot and soft meringue embellishment. Glory be!

FRESH APRICOTS
6-ounce can frozen concentrated pineapple juice, undiluted
2 tablespoons regular orange juice
8 fresh (about 1 pound) ripe apricots (each about the size of a large egg)
2 large egg whites
¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon almond extract
In a 10-inch skillet (preferably with a heatproof handle), over medium low heat, heat the pineapple juice and the orange juice until the mixture begins to boil. Reduce heat to low.
Halve apricots and pit. Arrange apricots, cut sides down, in the pineapple mixture. Cover skillet and cook gently for a few minutes. Turn apricots and continue to cook gently, uncovered, until they are just tender but still hold their shape — about 2 minutes. (The cooking time will depend on the ripeness of the fruit.)
If the skillet you have used does not have a heatproof handle, carefully spoon the apricot halves, cut side up, into a baking dish (about 10 by 6 by 2 inches) so they are in a single layer. Pour the pineapple mixture from the skillet around the apricots.
In a small deep bowl with an electric beater at high speed, beat the egg whites until foamy. Gradually beat in the sugar until stiff glossy peaks form. Beat in the almond extract. Spoon the meringue into the apricot cavities. Or, spoon the meringue into a pastry bag fitted with a star tube and pipe the meringue into the apricot cavities.
Bake in a preheated 500-degree oven just until the meringue is set and some tips are pale gold — 1 to 2 minutes. Serve warm or chilled.
Makes 4 servings — 2 meringue-top apricots per portion.

Household Hints

Run a piece of waxed paper over your iron to clean it and make it slide more easily.
Parsley chops more easily after it has been washed in hot water and dried with a paper towel.

You can make a good and speedy sauce for meat loaf by cooking onion and green pepper in a little butter or margarine and adding drained, canned tomatoes. Season with salt and pepper and a pinch of ground allspice.

Diet facts & fallacies

These nutritional tips brought to you by

Sherry Conklin
Diet Center
412 W. Kingsmill
Hughes Bldg.

Diet Center states, and dentists agree, that fresh fruits and vegetables are a necessary part of a complete diet if healthy teeth are to be maintained. They provide a natural sugar (fructose) that does not attack the enamel of the teeth; and as they are chewed, help control plaque build-up. Chewing fruits and vegetables in their natural state is essential to a healthy jaw and proper teeth placement. In the past 20 years, the American public has changed eating patterns from natural foods, which require a great deal of chewing, to processed, prepackaged foods that do not exercise the jaw at all. Diet Center suggests that you keep fresh, raw fruits and vegetables on hand at all times. Clean them thoroughly and keep them in plastic bags in your refrigerator. When a snack is desired, eat an apple or a carrot. As a result, your teeth and your general health will be better.

East meets West in ballet

PEKING (AP) — Film and stage star Gwen Verdon and other dancers of the Houston Ballet Company joined dancers from the Peking Institute of Dance in a performance before 2,700 people Monday night, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

The dancers also included Clare Duncan, administrator and principal teacher of the Houston Ballet Academy, Xinhua said.

The Chinese and American dancers performed together in excerpts from Tchaikovsky's "Sleeping Beauty" and in a dance set to Bartok's Piano Concerto No. 3, it said.

It said the Americans also performed several short pieces, including Rachmaninoff's "Spring Water" and his "First Prelude," choreographed by Ben Stevenson, the Houston Ballet's artistic director, who is with the dancers.

The Americans will give five more performances with the Chinese dancers before going on to Shanghai for further performances, Xinhua said.

Monday's audience included Acting Culture Minister Zhou Weizhi, it said.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, lightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.

Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

(1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness or pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Make bread in food processor

- PICNIC FARE
Light Bread Sandwiches
Watermelon Cookies
- LIGHT BREAD
Make in a food processor.
1 package dry yeast
2 teaspoons sugar
1-3rd cup warm water (105 to 115 degrees)
4 cups fork-stirred unbleached all-purpose flour
3 pats (1 tablespoon each) butter, at room temperature

1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 cup cold water

Dissolve the yeast and sugar in the warm water. In a food processor, process together the flour, butter pats (placed apart from one another) and the salt for 20 seconds. Remove cover and add yeast mixture. With machine running, through the feed tube, pour the cold water in a steady stream as fast as the flour mixture absorbs it — about 30 seconds. Continue processing until dough begins to form a ball; continue processing for about 1 more minute to knead. Shape dough into a ball; place in a buttered mixing bowl; turn to butter top. Cover bowl with saran; let rise in a draft-free warm place (80 degrees) until doubled — about 1 hour. Punch down dough; shape into 2 loaves and place each in a buttered 8 1/2 by 4 1/2 by 2 1/2-inch loaf pan. Cover with saran; let rise as before until doubled — 45 to 60 minutes. Bake on the rack below center in a 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 30 to 40 minutes. Turn out on wire racks to cool. Use fresh (the same day bread is baked) for sandwiches. Or use after storage, sliced thin, to make crisp toast. Makes 2 loaves.

Dear Abby

'No love lost' among relatives

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a very frustrating problem. On many occasions my husband (I'll call him Joe) and I find ourselves spending vacations or holidays at the home of a relative. We have a wonderful time except when it comes time for bed, then Joe refuses to make love because he says it's not polite to make love in someone else's home. Abby, we have a separate room and all the privacy we need, but Joe is very stubborn about this.

This frustrates and infuriates me — especially when the vacations last a week or two. Joe and I have a very healthy relationship at home or in a hotel, and these loveless vacations are making me very unhappy. Can you help me?
DEPRIVED IN BUFFALO

DEAR DEPRIVED: Joe's inhibitions are not uncommon. I hope he is sufficiently considerate of your feelings to get professional help to overcome his hangups about boudoir behavior. The alternative is to stay at a hotel where you can both enjoy a carefree vacation, complete with marital relations. It's expensive. But having a frustrated and furious wife could be even more expensive.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in the same boat with the widow from Hibbing, Minn., who loves to dance. We aren't widows by choice, Abby, and if the wives of those men who ask us to dance can't spare their husbands for a dance or two, shame on them! We don't want their husbands, all we want is a little recreation. What are women without husbands supposed to do — bury themselves?

I had open-heart surgery last year and my doctor told me I should walk and dance as much as possible. Sign me...
NEEDS TO DANCE

DEAR NEEDS: I'm with you. If there's an escort service in your area, why not engage a gentleman who loves to dance, and have a dancing evening? You could write it off as a medical expense. Dancing is not only valid therapy, it's exhilarating, wonderful exercise, and it's great for the morale.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from Patricia Conklin led me to wonder if Patricia and her husband Roger Campbell have fully considered the social implications of their scheme of naming children by hyphenating the husband's and wife's names.

Let's consider another generation. Assume Bill Green and Sally Brown were married at the same time as Roger and Patricia. Now, assume also that Bill and Sally use the same naming scheme, and a bundle from heaven arrives which they name Edward Brown-Green. About the year 2006, young Edward pops the question to Jane Conklin-Campbell. A year later, along comes Peter Conklin-Campbell-Brown-Green.

And did you know that Peter has a first cousin, James Conklin-Campbell's and Susan Fitzsimmon-Henderson's girl, Mary Fitzsimmon-Henderson-Conklin-Campbell?

Let's assume that such a custom had been followed since the year Jesus Christ was born. Also assume that children are born, raised and have children of their own every 25 years. Then how long would a name of a young boy or girl be today?

According to my calculator, the number of hyphenated names would be a number consisting of 25 digits. I would hate to have to put that on a Form 1040!

Now, you may call me a nit-picking, bull-headed, addle-brained, dim-witted hyphen-happy nincompoop, but you would be only up to five hyphens. You still have a long way to go. Sign me a mathematical buff from Apalachin, N.Y. My real name is...

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

July 1, 1981

You could be luckier than usual this coming year in financial arrangements you develop with relatives or family members. Pay heed if they bring you promising proposals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Situations which you inaugurate or personally control have good chances for success at this time. Rely more on yourself and less on others. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This is a good day to begin a weeding-out process to rid yourself of ideas or ventures which have proven unsuccessful. You'll be luckier with the new.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Projects or enterprises which have captured your fancy of late. With proper, positive procedures, they should produce a profit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Developments could occur at this time which should awaken new ambitions within you. Don't be afraid to think big or to explore untried areas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Give adequate attention at this time to your plans which have long-range effects. Mapping the right moves now will assure you of a brighter future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be alert today concerning joint ventures. An opportunity may arise in an area which was previously barren. You'll be able to spot it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone who was never totally supportive of you may do a turnaround now and develop into a staunch ally. The arrangement can produce mutual benefits.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Make yourself as valuable as you possibly can to your employer at this time. Some changes are in the offing which could spell advancement or a raise.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) As of today there could be a marked improvement concerning your social life. Also, things look interesting for Pisceans seeking a permanent relationship.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A domestic matter which has caused you considerable frustration should begin to dissipate as of today. The new trend will bring joy instead of sorrow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Give serious attention to any new ideas you get today which could enhance your security or add to your resources. You're on the right track.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A change for the better is now likely where your finances are concerned. You won't necessarily be rolling in dough, but things will be looking up.

We have had calls from people crying because they are losing their roses, shrubs and trees that they have paid good money for. Why? They have sprayed them with a weed killer. All we can do is cry with them. The spray has gone into the soil and will remain there until it is absorbed into the plants, and they will surely die.

Don't use weed killer sprays. They are harmful to you and to your plants and all vegetation, as many have learned the hard way. When the wind blows, they may drift as far as 5 miles.

Our solution for weed control is a good hand digger my husband made from a 12 - inch one - half round file, with a good smooth wood handle and a "V" cut in the end of the file. Used well and often this will completely rid your yard of dandelions and will be good exercise for you as well.

On the 10th and 11th, sow Russell lupines seed in a protected spot in the back of your beds. Keep moist. When plants begin to crowd, thin them out. Mulch the plants in the fall, and be sure to remember where they are growing next spring. They should make a beautiful display in June.

Do not pinch the shoots of chrysanthemums after the middle of the month. Fertilize them and keep them well watered.

Lawns will not need to be mowed as close now as in the early summer. It is better, during very hot weather, to mow at a height of 2 inches, rather than to cut the grass shorter.

Keep faded flowers picked from snapdragons and phlox and other plants. This prevents exhaustion of the plants by seed production and encourages them to keep blooming.

Spring planted evergreens are likely to suffer if they are permitted to get dry, so give them special care and see that they do have plenty of water.

Gather all waste vegetation that is not likely to harbor soil-borne diseases and place on the compost pile to keep it going. It is a most valuable garden asset. We place weeds, leaves, and grass mowings on our flower beds. Waste from the vegetable garden and flower beds make good compost. It is better not to put woody branches or leaves of evergreens on the compost heap.

Now is the time to order your bulbs for fall planting. Be sure and include some lilies.

As you trim your chrysanthemums, just stick the trimmings in the ground in your beds. Keep them watered and they will make new plants and be blooming before fall.

If grapes ripen unevenly, it could be caused by too heavy a crop load on the vine, inadequate sunlight, or in some cases, a potassium deficiency.

When you prune you should leave between 50 and 75 buds on each mature plant. The buds should be spaced out so that all the new growth gets plenty of sunlight. After the grapes have set on, keep the foliage trimmed back, not allowing it to grow so rank.

A soil test will tell you for certain if your soil lacks potassium. To cure the problem, spread one pound of wood ashes around the base of each vine. Grape roots are shallow, so just sprinkle it over the top of the soil and water it in well and mulch.

Dahlias, as they make growth, should be staked and tied. Old nylon hose make good ties.

Roses should be fertilized and old blossoms removed. The shoot bearing stem should be shortened back to a strong leaf bud.

Tomatoes will not set fruit when night temperatures drop below 55 degrees or rise above 90 degrees in the day. Water well. A heavy deep watering is more beneficial than continual light waterings. Feed your tomatoes a phosphate tea made of steamed bone meal. 1 cup to a gallon of water.

We have had success in controlling the cabbage worm with Thuricide. It comes in the liquid and powder form. It is a natural, microbial insecticide. It is harmless to bees and man. It may be used up to the day of harvest.

Another help in controlling squash bugs and other insects is to sprinkle wood ashes on the soil around the plants.

For green manure, cut weeds before they form seeds. Let them dry in the sun for an hour or two and then lightly bury between the rows in the vegetable garden.

The flavor of herbs is highest at the first show of bloom. Pick and dry for storage.

Feed compost or aged manure to peonies, dahlias, glads, lilies and the like.

Shrubs and small trees need a deep root soaking once a month when it is so dry. Three to four hours is not too much.

The 28th and 29th is the time to put down rose cuttings. Take a cutting of a finished bloom about 6 inches. Cut off the bloom and all the leaves from the bottom three inches of the cutting. Scoop out a hole about 4 inches deep and fill with sand. Dip cutting stem into water and then into root tone. Make a hole in the sand with a pencil, place the rose cutting in the hole, pulling the sand and soil around the stem to hold it well. Water well. Turn a glass pint jar over the cutting. This should be done on the north side of a building or fence where it will be in the shade. Do not allow it to dry out all winter. If we do not have any moisture it should be watered at least every two weeks. Do not remove the glass jar until late April. I will tell you how to do it in my April column.

The 24th and 25th prune Espalier, fruit trees and shrubs. Rejuvenate overgrown mockorange by cutting oldest canes to the ground.

On the 10th and 11th plant columbine seed in a bare spot in the back of your flower bed, and cover the seed with vermiculate. This is also a good time to plant parsley seed.

Continue to divide iris. Examine all roots to be sure they are round and not soft. Before replanting the irises, replenish the soil with peat and bonemeal. The rhizomes are set in shallow holes on mounds of soil covering the roots with an inch of soil.

Professor says tax cut good for business

NEW YORK (AP) — The best laid plans, the most scholarly research, the most reasoned explanations sometimes are flawed. The unforeseen the unexpected, and the unexplained occur often enough to prove it.

—Critics have said that Reagan administration plans for personal income tax cut aren't consistent with supply-side economics, but that may not be the case.

First, the background: The supply side is the economy production (business) side, as opposed to the consuming side. Supply siders seek to spur production, hoping that more output will mean less inflation.

To feed the supply side through personal income tax cuts the critics say, is contrary to supply side goals in that it might spur consumer buying and thus add to inflationary pressures.

But Professor William Dunkelberg of Purdue University, consultant to the National Federation of Independent Business, has some perceptive observations about that view in brief, he thinks it's somewhat wet.

About 47 percent of American businesses are unincorporated, the professor points out. And that means the owners of these companies pay taxes as individuals rather than corporations. To them, a personal tax cut is a business tax cut, a cut that quite likely will be reinvested.

His defense of a personal tax cut as being good for business doesn't end there, says Dunkelberg, an economist. More the half of all businesses have fewer than 20 workers, he points out, reminding us that surveys have shown such businesses to be among the most prolific job creators — more productive than those that have blue chip corporations.

And, he adds, they can use a tax deduction, because the tax code has been hurting them more and more, and forcing them to abandon the personal rather than corporate mode of doing business. As corporations, their maximum tax liability is 48 percent of income; as individual business people it can, an increasingly does, run to 70 percent.

—Anyone who has ever dreamed of retirement has heard about the monster fly in the ointment: the threatened inability of companies to come through on their financial promises.

But Jeremy I. Bulow, assistant professor of economics at Stanford's Graduate School of Business, says those corporate pension funds really are fatter than we think they are.

The reason: inflation permits companies to pay today's promises of fixed pensions in tomorrow's cheaper dollars.

—In Manhattan, and in many other areas throughout the country, there has been a strong demand for office space during the past few years. And, as you might expect, rents have soared.

So have the expectations of somelandlords, especially those who projected the current rate of rent increases far into the future. But there are signs now that their sights are focused too high.

Defense program begun to stop military abuse

LACKLAND AFB, Tex. — Fraudulent use and abuse of the military health care system, estimated at $60 million a year, is so widespread that the Department of Defense (DoD) has started a new program to curb abuse — a program that affects everyone entitled to military health care.

This month DoD started enrolling all military retirees, survivors, active duty members and eligible family members who reside in Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System (DEERS).

Every active duty military person, as well as retirees and survivors must enroll in DEERS to receive medical care.

The old method of presenting a military identification card to obtain service at a military health facility is on the way out. In the future, DEERS' nationwide computer linkup will determine who is eligible to be treated, and it will not recognize the standard identification card. For now, however, the ID card will still work since the new DEERS system will not be operational for several months.

DoD's toughest problem is informing military retirees and survivors, especially those who are not presently receiving government checks, but who are eligible for military health care.

"They have to know that if they are going to continue to use military health facilities, such as base or post hospitals, they must enroll in DEERS. And the time for them to enroll is this summer," according to Bob MacNaughton, DEERS spokesman for the three - state area, at Lackland AFB, near San Antonio.

In September, military health facilities in the three - state area will begin checking names with the DEERS computer link. Those who do not show up on the computer tape will not be denied care at first, MacNaughton explained, but they will be informed that they must enroll.

But the method of enrolling differs according to the categories of those eligible for care.

Active duty members of the Army, Air Force, Navy and Marines automatically will be enrolled in DEERS. Although they will not have to enroll, they will have to enroll their spouses and children.

Retired members of the military who are receiving government checks will also be enrolled automatically, since the services have current records indicating their status eligibility. But they must take steps to enroll family members.

All survivors (widows and widowers of active duty or retired service members) must enroll themselves.

In all cases documentation establishing family relationships to sponsors, such as birth certificates and marriage licenses, will be needed. The process will be similar to applying for an ID card, MacNaughton said, but applicants will not receive a new card. An important difference, he noted, is that children under 18, who are not required to have an ID card, must be enrolled in DEERS.

In late June, retirees will be mailed application forms and instructions for enrolling their families.

Arson suspected in Poteau fire

POTEAU, Okla. (AP) — Investigators were questioning several people after a $1.5 million fire, believed to be arson, destroyed six downtown businesses here over the weekend.

Bob Lindstrom of the state Fire Marshal's office declined to say whether any of those questioned were arson suspects. He said investigators knew what materials set off the fire. He would not elaborate.

The fast-moving blaze broke out Saturday shortly after midnight in the back of the Central Bar and quickly spread to the F.L. Holton's Hardware and Furniture Store, Wright's Drug Store, the Victory Theater, Quality Furniture and Upholstery and Tez's Needlecraft, Lindstrom said.

Two other businesses were damaged by smoke. Total damages were estimated at $1.5 to $2 million, the investigator said.

Although the fire was discovered within minutes, firefighters from Poteau and six surrounding communities were not able to bring it under control until 4 a.m.

"We had plenty of trucks, plenty of water and men," Lindstrom said, "but it was a very hot, quick-spreading fire. It could be seen for miles."

Saturday's fire also heightened local suspicion that recent fires at a grocery store and a residence also were arson. Neither is believed related to the weekend fire.

Meanwhile the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation investigated a shopping center burglary that took place on the north side of town while the fire was roaring through the downtown area. They said there was no evidence the two incidents were related.

North of Arctic Circle, oilman's garden grows

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

DEADHORSE, ALASKA (AP) — There are strange things done in the midnight sun, as Robert W. Service allowed, but not much stranger than what's done by Frank Stowman.

Stowman is an electrician up on the North Slope, or "the Patch" as the oil workers call it. He is known for his green thumb in an environment where frigid digits are a more common topic of conversation.

Way above the tree line, 250 miles north of the Arctic Circle, he grows dahlias 8 feet tall with blossoms the size of fielder's gloves and frets about aphids and root maggots while others worry about pressure gauges and halon dumps.

Frank had a farm down in Montana before he came to Prudhoe Bay. Coaxing things to grow is second nature to him, as relaxing as chomping on a king crab is to a sea otter basking on its back.

Five or six years ago, while arctic gales howling in from the Beaufort Sea howled up a wind chill factor of 100 below, he began putting around with the glassed-in atrium that blooms year round now as a green island of serenity and sanity smack in the middle of the Sohio headquarters complex. The company had imported some potted plants and a couple of scraggly trees to brighten up the dining hall, where gourmet meals keep the roustabouts round and not too unruly. No one took much pride in them or realized the potential for gardening in the land of the alternating big eye and long night.

In fact, someone had placed a couple of potted alders near the door to pretty up the entranceway, but they froze their pistils off everytime some roughneck came stomping in off the permafrost.

Down on his hands and knees with a trowel and a sack of "multipurpose garden lawn food 16-16-16," Stowman proudly pointed to his outsized begonias, marigolds and geraniums. Beautiful beyond anything seen in a seed catalogue, thanks to his loving care and the nightless growing days, the atrium has become the most popular place on the Patch to meet friends, write letters, read a book. Artificial lights keep his garden growing when the sun does its six month cop-out.

The 12-hour work shifts at Prudhoe Bay don't leave Frank much time for his hobby. And since the oil workers get every other week off, he has to find an alternate gardener to look after things, while he flies home to Fairbanks to look after his own back yard 400 miles further south. Down there, in an environment provided by Mother Nature and not oil company auditors, he uses the 90 days of almost unceasing sun "to grow cabbages and cauliflower that big." Frank spread his arms to shape geodesic forms that might have sprung from the drawing board of Buckminster Fuller.

On the slope, he and his back-up gardeners have had great success with petuni, fuchsia, flowering plum, New England maples, impatiens, which is considered by some a cure for poison ivy (so far, no poison ivy), even a Norfolk Island pine, far from its home in the South Pacific. All are grown in ordinary tundra soil.

News in brief

OAKLAND PARK, Fla. (AP) - Millionaire Joseph Testa, critically injured when a bomb exploded under his car, died Monday. A North Ridge Hospital spokesman said the 53-year-old former Chigo-area resident died Monday of injuries suffered during the weekend blast. Fort Lauderdale police said Monday they planned to give Oakland Park officers information on a recent unspecified incident involving Testa. Fort Lauderdale Capt. Joseph Gerwens told The Miami Herald the incident "didn't seem like much at the time, but the people involved would be capable of this kind of retaliation." The Chicago Sun-Times reported Testa's property had been the target of several bombs since 1968.

NEW YORK (AP) - A trade publication says that its figures are correct, oil production by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has dropped to its lowest level in a decade.

the highest prices - Algeria, Nigeria and Libya - appear to have had the sharpest declines in oil production, Petroleum Intelligence Weekly reported Monday. While warning that its figures may be off by as much as 500,000 barrels a day, the publication said production by OPEC countries may have dropped to as little as 22 million barrels a day, a drop of 2 million barrels a day over the last several weeks. OPEC oil production was at about 30 million barrels a day early last year.

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) - A U.S. merchant ship captain who was found guilty of three counts of negligence in a collision between two ships off Cape Henry won't be able to command a vessel for a year. Capt. Nicholas Tittonis, 62, of New York City, had his license suspended for two years Monday as a result of the collision of the 820-foot-long Lash Atlantico and the Greek freighter Hellenic Carrier in the fog May 6. Tittonis, master of the Lash Atlantico, may command vessels after one year, but his license will be revoked during that period if he violates any sea rules. No one was injured in the collision, but both ships were damaged.

Three OPEC countries with the highest prices - Algeria, Nigeria and Libya - appear to have had the sharpest declines in oil production, Petroleum Intelligence Weekly reported Monday. While warning that its figures may be off by as much as 500,000 barrels a day, the publication said production by OPEC countries may have dropped to as little as 22 million barrels a day.

Names in the news

GSTAAD, Switzerland (AP) - Roger Moore, star of five James Bond movies, has won official permission to join Elizabeth Taylor, Julie Andrews, David Niven and other stars as a property owner in this Alpine resort. A spokesman of the Swiss justice ministry, Ulrich Krebs, said Monday federal authorities withdrew an appeal against the proposed purchase by the 53-year-old British actor. Moore is purchasing an eight-room villa for a reported $850,000. He said the appeal, filed with the Swiss Supreme Court and based on a law restricting sales of real estate to non-resident foreigners, was moot because Moore obtained residence permit in Switzerland. Krebs said the permit was extended to Moore because he had been a regular visitor to Gstaad during the past 14 years. Also, he said, Moore's children attended school in Switzerland.

LONDON (AP) - Princess Margaret, who stirred up a diplomatic storm on her last trip to the United States, has canceled plans to visit Washington next month. On the advice of her government, Queen Elizabeth's younger sister has bowed out of a scheduled July 14-16 visit intended to raise money for the Royal Opera House at Covent Garden.

In a brief announcement from Kensington Palace, Margaret's official London residence, no reason was given for the change in plans, except that Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government recommended it. The princess caused hard feelings among Irish-Americans during her last visit to the United States in October 1979. In an aside to Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne, the princess was quoted as saying "The Irish, they're pigs." She later denied the statement but was met by pro-Irish demonstrations for the remainder of her trip.
