Stiff budget cuts likely after key Reagan win

Democratic-controlled House, swayed by President Reagan's long-distance lobbying blitz, is all but certain to approve his stringent budget cuts and smooth their chances of final congressional passage.

The bruising floor fight that left losing Democrats grumbling set up the . win-or-lose showdown Reagan wanted on a single package of more than $5 billion in revisions to a $37.8 billion spending-cut bill supported by Democratic leaders.

It was to come today in a series of House votes likely to amount to little more than rubber-stamp ratification of the Reagan program. For Reagan, that would be two victories in less than 24 hours.

He reaped expected Senate approval of a $39.6 billion budget-cutting package to his liking just before midnight Thursday. The vote there, in a chamber ruled by Republicans, was 80-15 and came after Senate leaders worked out a bipartisan agreement to head off a threatened filibuster by Democrats.

Differences between the House and Senate versions still will have to be ironed out in a conference committee - perhaps an easier task if both bills bear the basic Reagan cuts.

"I've never seen anything like this in my life to be perfectly truthful." House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

Just hours earlier. O'Neill acknowledged that "as of yesterday we had the vote won" and he could the Republicans.

'These are the times that try men's souls and make no mistake about it.' the Massachusetts Democrat said after the first and most critical of several parliamentary votes which went Reagan's way Thursday.

The vote was 217-210. Reagan, who conceded later that "24 hours ago our defeat seemed almost certain, won the support of 11 Democrats whom he personally wooed.

The parliamentary victory crushed the Democrats' strategy of splitting Reagan's cuts into six parts in an effort to strip away the politically protective cover provided by voting on the president's program as a whole.

Reagan called that plan "sabotage." and both sides agreed it would have made passage far more difficult since members would have been put squarely on record regarding funds for such programs as food stamps, welfare, Social Security and school

Thursday's victory was Reagan's second over House Democrats, but this one was bigger to the president than the initial budget ceilings that passed last month with the help of 63 House Democrats.

Reagan said he was "extremely pleased and gratified" and added: "I have never felt better in these last five

In a speech Thursday to members of the California Taxpayers Association in Los Angeles, Reagan said Republicans "joined by 31 courageous members of the Democratic Party have joined together to defeat the gag rule that would have seriously damaged our plan."

He said he wanted to emphasize just how important this vote really is. It means that in a crunch of heavy pressure from all sides, the Congress of the United States seems ready and eager to join in the fight to curb runaway spending. It means ... there are enough members who have the wisdom and the courage to cast their vote in favor of America's overall economic interest, not just our special

The vote on the rule was the biggest challenge yet to Reagan by Democrats, who outnumber Republicans 242-to-190 in the House.

Reagan had argued the $37.8 billion package of cuts supported by House Democrats would fall billions short of the changes needed to put federal spending on track toward a balanced budget in 1984.

Originally, Reagan had said the House must add $5.2 billion in revisions for 1982 and almost $20 billion over three years. But Thursday, Rep. Delbert L. Latta of Ohio, the ranking Republican on the House Budget Committee, said figures from Reagan's Office of Management and Budget showed that about $5.9 billion worth of revisions would be needed for 1982, and a total of about $22.5 billion over three years.

Clements says redistricting plan will change

Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements say he is certain the special · legislative session will change what he calls an unacceptable congressional redistricting plan despite "noise" from Texas' congressional delegation.

Controllers' contract may not fly

WASHINGTON (AP) - The tentative settlement that averted a strike by the nation's air traffic controllers may never get off the ground, some controllers say.

If the proposed contract fails to win ratification, the government and the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization would have to resume negotiating, and the threat of a walkout that could ground half the country's commercial air traffic might loom again.

The PATCO executive board was reported meeting today at an undisclosed location. At the top of the agenda was the question of whether to endorse the tentative agreement.

Man wanted in Perryton assault arrested here

A routine check on a Perryton man arrested here Thursday revealed the man was wanted by Perryton authorities on aggravated assault charges, Pampa police said today.

John Jankowski, 25, of Perryton was arrested by Pampa police Thursday for disorderly conduct charges stemming from an incident at the Pampa Mall Tuesday, said Police Chief J. J. Ryzman. Jankowski was returned to Perryton late Thursday.

Ochiltree County Sheriff Joe Hataway said today that Jankowski was in the county jail in lieu of $20,000

The sheriff said Jankowski has been formerly charged with aggravated assault. He added that his office is investigating aggravated robbery charges against the man.

Hataway said the warrant was issued after Phillip Allen Green, a hitchhiker from the Houston area, reported he was robbed at knifepoint by a man who had picked him up.

Green told sheriff's officers that the man held a knife to his throat and stole $60 and a backpack from him. Green received a minor cut to his throat in the incident, Hataway said.

"No one likes to have to wait for the insurance company to pay off whether it is paid to the hospital or to the patient.

Girl's diary used in murder probe

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Juvenile officers are looking through a diary for clues to the killing of a 10-year-old girl, whose body was found wrapped in a quilt under her mother's house.

The girl's body, clothed in a nightgown and panties and bound in a blood - spotted towel, was found

Wednesday in a crawl space beneath the house after her mother noticed an odor, officers said.

The child was strangled, a preliminary autopsy showed.

Police are now seeking the boarder of the house, described as blond and muscular, and another man. The girl's diary contains comments about her dislike for some of her mother's friends, including the boarder, Mrs. Dobbins' younger daughter said.

Cox said that at least two of the entries indicated the child was unhappy with her mother's friend, who left the house June 16. "Hip hip hooray, (name of former boyfriend) leaves today," the child wrote on June 16. Another entry, Cox said, reflected the child's displeasure at her mother's invitation to another friend to stay overnight But police say they have no suspects

Three committed to hospitals as, part of tight Reagan security

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) -Tough, extensive security measures during President Reagan's first trip to Texas since his election resulted in two women and a man being taken into custody after they allegedly made threats against the president.

One unidentified 49-year-old woman, who allegedly made a threat against Reagan to hotel security guards, was taken into custody about 5:30 a.m. Wednesday nearly six hours before Reagan was scheduled to address the U.S. Jaycees convention.

Bexar County Mental Health official Robert Pugh said the actions of the woman "indicated she could possibly pose a threat to the president.

She was involuntarily committed to San Antonio State Hospital at the request of the Secret Service after Night Magistrate Tony Jimenez rejected state charges against her

All three people committed were examined by a psychiatrist after a judge signed their commitment orders, he said.

Pathologist requests morgue after performing autopsies in zoo pens

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A private pathologist says the lack of county medical facilities has forced him to store bodies and perform autopsies at the local zoo's alligator pen, and is urging county officials to build a morgue Dr. B.B. Trotter of Clinical Pathology Associates said in a letter to Taylor County officials that "the zoo has recently refused the transfer of these bodies to their location for autopsy, and urged officials to considered appropriation money for a morgue and a medical examiner.

Trotter said Wednesday he has performed two autopsies at the zoo in the past three years, and calls that a step up from one occasion when he had to perform an autopsy on the garage floor of a funeral home.

He said Hendrick Medical Center, a private hospital, has allowed its facilities to be used in the past for autopsies, but that several "incidents" involving corpses have dampened hospital officials' enthusiasm for providing the service.

Taylor County Sheriff John Middleton said in one instance, two bodies in an advanced stage of deterioration were kept outside Hendrick while officials were deciding what do with them.

Middleton said the rotting corpses fell into a street drain and gave off a rancid odor that permeated the area.

There are no public hospitals in Taylor County where autopsies could be performed, and the county employs no full-time medical examiners.

"It is becoming apparent that our city and county are in dire need of a morgue." Trotter wrote county officials in urging them to spend $100,000 for a morgue and full-time medical examinger

"All too often foul-smelling bodies are brought to the morgue at Hendrick Medical Center without prior permission. The time has come to construct a morgue on city or county property in which these and other types of bodies might be held," he wrote.

Zoo director Jack Joy says he favors any action that would keep the corpses away from the zoo.

No bodies have been kept at the zoo since Joy became director in November, but he recently refused to accept the decomposing body of a Fort Worth man who was found slain last month near Abilene.

"It's totally inappropriate," Joy said. This is a public park and they want to bring rotting bodies in here.

"There are children in this park every day, and I've got to think of the (zoo) keepers' well-being," Joy said.

Those bodies may have some infectious disease, and their smell...it would come wafting over that wall (that separates outdoor alligator and bird habitats from their indoor shelters).

Joy said autopsies were performed in the alligator enclosure because it has a

A case in point was their loss Thursday on a parliamentary tactic aimed at dividing Reagan's budget cuts in hopes of conquering them.

The result of that last tactic was almost a two-hour delay in the start of debate on the parliamentary

The first of his escapades to reach the public eve was his financing of a 1970 expedition up Mount Ararat in Turkey to look for the remains of Noah's Ark. The trip did not locate the ark but did result in a movie, "The Search for Noah's Ark," that enjoyed a limited run in theaters and drive-ins as well as a couple of showings on network

Next he entered the 1975 World Championship of Poker at Las Vegas. Nev. Much was made of his ouster from the tournament, as he went bust dropped $10,000 - in one hand of Hold

What nobody mentions is that I had won nearly $10,000 the day before,' Grimm said, insisting he just about broke even, except for picking up a nickname he despises to this day.

Please don't call me 'Cadillac Jack," he begged a reporter who had spent the day with him in Abilene. After the poker stint, Grimm announced in 1975 he was financing a search for the legendary Loch Ness monster, the prehistoric reptile supposed to be living in a lake in Scotland. Grimm had bought some special film for the Noah's Ark expedition and, since he had some left over, decided to use it in the hunt for

"Nessie," too The next year he paid his own money to send a pair of local photographers to western Canada to look for Big Foot, the large, hairy, man-like creature said to have been terrorizing some of the natives in that region. And his big year was last year, which contained two major announcements. First, he was going to be spending money to search for the sunken ocean liner Titanic which went to the bottom of the North Atlantic after ramming an iceberg in 1912. Second, he was commissioning noted sculptor Robert Berks to carve a 40-foot high, 200-foot long panoramic bas-relief into the side of a mesa he owns outside Abilene. The work would be a pictorial history of the Old West as told from the point of view of the buffalo This will last longer than the pyramids," Berks said of the work during a groundbreaking ceremony earlier this year. "I bet you came here thinking all this stuff I do is just half-baked, didn't you." Grimm said as he held up a model of the Titanic. "Like I work on whims - just wake up some morning and say, 'Hey, let's go look for the Titanic.' Well, I put a lot of thought and research and time into these things. "I look on them as business ventures. Each one is a business venture designed to be successful — to make money. They're not off-the-cuff larks." The search for Noah's Ark, for example, resulted in a movie - "The Search for Noah's Ark," which was not a box-office smash but "made money," Grimm said.

His Titanic search, cut short last winter by foul weather off the coast of Newfoundland, is scheduled to begin again when the research ship Gyre, with Grimm on board, leaves Boston,

And if he finds the hulk, a book and a movie are waiting in the wings for near-immediate release.

"Maybe I differ from a lot of other people by doing these projects when someone else would just dream about them but ... would be embarrassed about saying, "I'm gonna go climb Mount Everest,' or something," he said. "But once you start one of them. people say, 'Oh, boy, that's a great idea, I wish somebody would go do that.

Grimm said many of his associates in "conservative" enterprises, such as oil and gas exploration, also have interests in his more exotic projects, such as the Titanic expedition. And they, he said, do not consider him eccentric, strange or whimsical.

"There are others involved in these things, geologists and engineers, friends and associates of mine. Do you think that they would have the same whims that I do? No, they wouldn't. I think they enjoy participating in these things because there's a chance they'll get their money back, maybe make a profit. And maybe it is on the order of looking for a gold mine, but they're business ventures.

But why such out-of-the-way projects? Why not investments in the silver market, like Dallas billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt, a longtime friend? Or a baseball team, like fellow oilman Eddie Chiles?

Basically, his answer is that he considers the potential reward worth the risk, just like oil drilling but a lot

"If I do find the Titanic - and I will if we found Big Foot, or the Loch Ness monster, nobody would think we're silly. When you confirm the existence of something, you've got the support of everybody. And until you do confirm it, or make these discoveries, people share with me the excitement of looking for them. It's a great search.

"I get to go do these things, take part in these adventures, but I always try to share them with the public, with the average man, because he would love to go do them, too. He dreams about them, but he hasn't had the opportunity."

Wording change caused state Demos to defect

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Democratic leadership might have been successful in forcing a separate vote on various spending cuts requested by President Reagan if they had preserved the bill's original wording, says the chairman of the conservative coalition that provided the swing

"I think it was a tactical error. I don't think there's any doubt that it cost them the decision," said Rep. Charles Stenholm of Stamford.

The decision of the Rules Committee to rewrite the Gramm-Latta II amendments, I thought, was a costly decision.

Hoping to embarrass Republicans and conservative Democrats who had supported the president on the original spending bill, the House Democratic leadership tried to force a record vote on individual segments of Reagan's economic package

But instead of forcing a vote against Social Security benefits, for example, as contained in the original bill, the Democratic leadership changed the wording.

substantiate that (negligence charge.)"

"I think it was a mistake," House Majority Leader Jim Wright agreed later. "I understood it was going to be simply broken up into packages and offered for separate votes. As it was, it allowed a kind of side issue to develop as to whether the majority was trying to be fair and give the minority have a fair shot on their issue.'

Texans accounted for almost a third of the 29 Democrats who rebuffed their leadership again and gave the president another major victory on his economic recovery program.

The Texas delegation voted 14-10 - including nine Democrats and all five of the state's Republicans - against an effort by the Democratic leadership to force a series of potentially embarrassing "yes or no" vote on segments of the administration proposal.

The final vote, which set the stage for the Reagan proposal to be considered in one package, was 217-210. On the initial budget vote several weeks ago, the president won 63 Democratic votes. including 38 from the Conservative Democratic Forum and 25 others.

Thursday, that dropped to 24 CDF members and four others, but Texas' total of defections remained intact. There was little gloating among the Texas Democrats however.

"It's not a pleasant time for any of us," said Stenholm, whose 47-member conservative coalition provided 24 of the 29 Democratic votes in support of Reagan's position. "It's difficult to go against the leadership of your party."

Rep. Charles Wilson of Lufkin, not a member of the CDF, again supported the president's program. He said he and Rep. Jack Hightower of Vernon, both former members of the Texas Legislature, agreed "that this was the toughest vote either of us had had to make since we voted to confirm Bob Bullock for the state insurance board in 1972."

For Wright, it was the second straight time he had seen mass Texas defections. He said he was "more than mildly disappointed."

As to the effect it will have on his hopes to eventually succeed Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill, Wright said: "I'm not sure how much it hurts, but obviously it doesn't help. But, that isn't important anyway.

The FBI and NAACP are conducting separate investigations.

R.L. Dockery, regional director of the NAACP at its Dallas headquarters, said, "I certainly agree with that (Baraka's statement that there is evidence for negligent homicide charges). I will actively urge that the grand jury hear the suggestion as soon as possible.

Veteran says states should help Agent Orange victims

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — States must take the lead in helping Vietnam War veterans who blame their medical problems on Agent Orange because Congress is ducking the issue, says a leader of the veterans' movement. David Christian, a U.S. Department of Labor official in Pennsylvania and executive director of the United Vietnam Veterans Organization, praised Texas' new Agent Orange law. "I charge federal legislators with losing the war and today with losing the social war by taking a halfhearted approach. The states are telling them how to get their act together,' Christian told a news conference Thursday.

Agent Orange, a defoliant used in the war, is suspected of causing cancer and genetic damage, including birth defects in children born to veterans.

Texas' law is aimed at collecting case-by-case data in the State Health Department about illnesses and genetic problems blamed on Agent Orange. It also authorizes the attorney general to help veterans get their military and medical Christian, a former Green Beret captain, praised Texas' new law for providing a way to get information.

"It is extremely, extremely important because this raw data is going to be ... the mechanism that moves the federal government," he said. If the S.O.B.s want us to bring in our data, we will parade the 10.000 to 20.000 boys from Texas, the 10,000 to 20,000 boys from Pennsylvania and the 10,000 to 20,000 boys from California." Christian said.

Christian wants Congress to establish a legal presumption that if a Vietnam veteran displays certain symptoms, he is entitled to federal help.

With Christian were Dan Jordan of Austin, president of the Brotherhood of Vietnam Veterans, and state Rep. John Cordisco of Pennsylvania, sponsor of an Agent Orange bill. Cordisco said he and others are trying to form a coalition of lawmakers from many states who will push for Agent Orange bills and lobby Congress on behalf of veterans. Cordisco said Rep. Larry Shaw, D-Big Spring, sponsor of the Texas bill. had helped find witnesses to testify on behalf of the

For instance, NCPAC claimed that Sens. John Melcher, D - Mont., and Dennis de Concini, D - Ariz., supported abortion. It then listed Melcher and Sen. Quentin Burdick, D - N.D., as having favored "the giving away of the Panama Canal."

In fact, Melcher and de Concini have been outspoken opponents of abortion, and Melcher and Burdick voted against the Panama Canal treaties

The letter also listed Sen. Henry Jackson, D - Wash., as an opponent of increased defense spending. That would come as a surprise to anyone familiar with Jackson's record as one of the Senate's foremost hawks.

For instance, one Southern Democrat reported that in a single day he had been called by the president, the vice president, the secretary of the treasury and the director of the Office of Management and Budget. He also received invitations to a state dinner and to the presidential box at the Kennedy Center. His wife was asked to join the first lady as co - host of a charity affair.

But insiders say that the minds of several waivering Democrats were changed not by pep talks or White House dinners but by promises that no one in the administration would campaign for their opponents in 1982. That is the kind of promise that a legislator under pressure can understand and upon which he can base an important vote.

State Department officials are worried about the prospect of a mass exodus from the high ranks of the

Study challenges today's educators

Most of the chatter about the 1980 census so far has dealt with the political implications of the shift of population from the Northeast to the Sun Belt and the West. But the Census Bureau not only tells us where people are living but something about how they live, and there is sobering news about changes in the condition of the American family

The number of one - parent families in our population has increased tenfold during the last decade. Ten years ago, one out of 10 families had only a single parent as a result of divorce, death or births outside of marriage. Today the figure is one out of five. Fully one half of black families are maintained by a single parent. The number of children living with mothers who never married now exceeds the number of children who have lost a parent through death.

The census can provide these statistics, but we must look elsewhere for signs of the impact on our society. It is not difficult to find a link between the breakdown of the traditional family and rising welfare costs or the incidence of juvenile crime. But there are also more subtle effects, and a recent study by the Charles F. Kettering Foundation and the National Association of Elementary School Principals sheds some light on one of them.

The study covered 18,000 students 26 elementary and high schools in 14 states, a cross - section ranging from inner cities to small towns and rural areas. The conclusion is inescapable that one - parent children on the whole do not do as well in school.

Thirty percent of children from two - parent families were ranked as high achievers, compared to 17 percent of those from one - parent families. Looking at it the other way, 40 percent of one - parent children ranked as low achievers, while only 24 percent of two - parent children were in that category.

Further, children from one parent families were absent more often than those from two - parent families and were more likely to be late to school, truant or in disciplinary trouble.

These findings are a challenge to educators, whose approach to teaching may be based on false assumptions about the degree of support and encouragement children are receiving at home. With instability in the family, the Kettering study pointed out, school may be "the most important part of the child's life that stays relatively constant.

Psychologists will argue that the one - parent family should not be viewed with blanket disapproval that failing marriages held together "for the sake of the children" can do more harm than good. They make the point that where parents are concerned, quality is more important than quantity, and there is no reason why a conscientious single parent cannot maintain a stable and supportive family life.

All true, but there is no denying that the sexual revolution, more liberal attitudes toward divorce, and other changes in moral and social attitudes affecting the family can handicap a child in school and on into adult life. While the Kettering study was conducted at the behest of educators who must deal with learning and disciplinary problems connected with the one - parent family, its message is for parents together or separated - and for our most Americans, then I doubt you shed too many tears over OPEC's inability to reach agreement on a production and pricing strategy at its recent conference in Geneva.

For over a decade. Americans have watched in anger and frustration as laughing OPEC oil ministers have emerged from meeting after meeting to make the now familiar announcement - a new price increase or production cutback. Since 1973, the price of a barrel of OPEC oil has skyrocketed from about $3 to anywhere from about $30 to $40 today.

But this meeting was different. This time grim - faced ministers emerged to announce that they were freezing the price of their oil for the rest of the year — and perhaps more significantly, that they had failed to agree on how to manipulate oil prices and supplies in the future. Why? According to one oil minister, "the lesson ntributing to this trend, but one reason undoubtedly is the bad light cast on the entire labor movement by cases of corruption involving local and national leaders of some unions. From Douglas Fraser, president of the United Auto Workers, comes some advice that all unions can heed. He says they should pay as much attention to ethics in their own organizations as they do to contract negotiations with employers.

Fraser has good reason to bring up the matter right now. The executive board of the Teamsters union has voted to nominate Roy L. Williams to a five - year term as president when the Teamsters hold their annual convention in Las Vegas. Mr. Williams recently was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to bribe a U.S. Senator.

Members of the Teamsters board may feel it would be unfair to deny Williams the presidency because of the indictment. After all, he says he is innocent and he is yet to have his day in court. Nevertheless, this does not prevent

Mr. Williams from doing his union and the rest of the labor movement a favor. He could urge the convention to hold his election in abevance until he has a chance to prove his innocence. This would spare the Teamsters the embarrassment of electing a president who is under the cloud of criminal charges.

Fraser's concern for ethics in unionism was voiced as he prepared to bring the UAW back into the AFL -CIO, a significant step toward restoring unity to organized labor. The return of the Teamsters to the fold would help even more, but it was the issue of corruption that led to their expulsion from the AFL - CIO 24 years ago. The prospect for healing that old breach would improve if the Teamsters convention in Las Vegas sent a signal that times have changed.

The open dissension which was evident at the recent OPEC conference, and the subsequent freeze on OPEC oil prices, are encouraging developments. But Americans would do well to recall that about four years ago, some analysts were ready to declare then that oil prices had reached their peak and that the breakup of OPEC was imminent. After all, they supposed, we could always depend on our friend, the Shah of Iran, couldn't we?

We all know the sorry end to that fairy tale. The Shah is gone and oil prices have doubled - again.

The road to energy independence will be long and covered with potholes. If we conclude now that our battle with OPEC has already been won and, accordingly, relax our conservation and production efforts, then before we know it, we will all be standing around talking about what went wrong - in a line at the local

Three die in shooting

PORT LAVACA, Texas (AP) - A 43-year-old man was in critical condition with gunshot and stab wounds following a shooting at a tavern that left two bar employees and a customer dead, a Calhoun County Sheriff's department spokesman said.

Deputies said Lennie York, 55, of Magnolia Beach, the tavern manager; Lark Saylor, 21, of Port Lavaca, a customer; and Marjorie Sheffield Matocha, 19, of the Port Alto area, a waitress, were killed.

In critical condition in Port Lavaca Hospital after surgery was Willard Baugh whose wife and son discovered the bodies about 6:30 a.m. when they went looking for her husband.

Deputies said robbery apparently was not the motive for the triple slaying because money was found in the tavern cash register. Pathologist Robert Obert is conducting autopsies. No weapons were found at the scene.

Hippies take over city council meeting

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) - In a scene reminiscent of the 1960s, a band of long-haired hippies chanting peace slogans and passing out flowers briefly took over a city council meeting Thursday.

About a dozen young people, holding hands and chanting "Peace Now, Freedom Now," unexpectedly marched into the meeting hall and handed each stunned council member a purple flower. The motley group then entertained the council with a rousing chorus of the rock hit "Aquarius."

Before the "flower children" made their hasty departure, a young woman, saying she was acting on orders from her guru, tried to plant a kiss on Mayor Gus Manuel. She missed and instead smacked Mayor Pro Temp Rudy Teichman, who said he didn't mind. Council members later were told the intruders were cast in the Strand Street Theater's production of the popular rock musical "Hair," which opens here Friday.

xecution of doctor in Iran hits home in America.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - When the United States erupted with joy and relief over the release of its 52 hostages from Iran, one family in Alabama felt instead a tightening vise

Instead of ending, the ordeal of waiting grew worse for the family of Habib Kayfan, a family with loved ones still in Iran. Now the nightmare the American hostages escaped - trials on trumped-up charges and firing squad executions - has

'We got the call about '10 at night," Kayfan said. "They said he was killed, our time, about 4 in the afternoon the day

The executioners' victim was Dr. Firoz Nai'mi, a medical doctor who for years had run a small clinic in Hamadan and taught at a university. He was married. He was 45. And he was a member of the Bahai religious faith.

His sister here in Montgomery. Mahfarid Nai'mi Kayfan, says he was executed for being a Bahai leader, one of seven such men shot in Hamadan on June 14.

The Kayfans say Nai'mi is one of scores of Bahais executed in what they view as a spreading program of terrorism against the estimated 500,000 Bahais in Iran and the systematic seizure and destruction of Bahai holy centers.

The Bahai National Assembly, in an appeal sent Thursday to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, says many Bahais have been routed from their jobs, had savings confiscated, had homes looted or burned, seen cemeteries desecrated, been denied basic rights, been imprisoned without recourse to a lawyer and executed - all because of their religion.

It is, said Kayfan, "a little holocaust."

The Kayfans were granted political asylum in America in 1980 when Kayfan, a 42-year-old Iranian air force colonel training at the Air War College at Maxwell Air Force Base here, was "retired" and ordered back home.

They ignored the order and stayed. They bought a small grocery store with a short-order grill and three tables in a rundown neighborhood on the outskirts of the city. It provides

The Kayfans have two daughters and two sons. The youngest is in third grade. The oldest is doing a pre-med course at the local branch of Auburn University.

But their faith is their life. As Mrs. Kayfan talks about her slain brother, she speaks calmly of a martyr. She pulls out telegrams they've received from friends. They say much the same thing: "Congratulations on martyrdom of our beloved

They remember the last time they saw Nai'mi. He and his wife. Akhtar, visited here at Christmas 1979. They remember the concern all felt over events unfolding in their homeland, including the taking of the American hostages the month before. But it was a joyous reunion.

"We went to Florida to see Disney World," Mrs. Kayfan said. "It was a good time."

"We knew there would be a change of government," said Kayfan, "but we didn't think they would do anything against Nai'mi and his wife returned to Iran. "There was no reason for them not to go back." Kayfan said.

But within a year, he said, Nai'mi and six other members of the local Bahai spiritual assembly in Hamadan - five of them doctors - had been thrown into solitary confinement.

Kayfan said Nai'mi's clinic and home were confiscated. Nai'mi's wife, who had worked for an airline for 22 years, was "retired" and denied any retirement benefits. She moved in with Nai'mi's mother, now 82.

Eventually relatives were allowed to visit Nai'mi in prison, twice a week for 30 minutes. But soon he was returned to solitary. No visits. No word. The trial had begun.

It was a closed trial and Nai'mi was allowed no lawyer. Kayfan said the seven Bahais were charged with "being surrogates for Zionism or imperialism." In effect, he said, they were "charged" with being Bahais, which is viewed as being a "political enemy" of the Islamic republic.

The non-Moslem Bahai faith, which preaches universal brotherhood, was founded in Iran in 1863. The religion has come under fire from the Iranian government apparently because its funds are routed through the Bahai world center in Israel. Iran has charged many of those executed with being

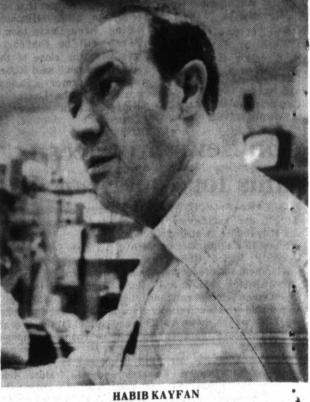

The family here learned about Nai'mi's conviction and execution only "when they (officials) called and told them (family members) to come get the bodies," Kayfan said.

Mrs. Kayfan said her brother's wife is strong. When the Kayfans reacted to news of the executions, Mrs. Nai'mi told them, "Why are you crying? We lost seven sons to the cause of God. I am proud that I had such a husband."

Kayfan said it's hard for him to believe that in the modern world "something would happen from out of 2,000 years ago .... I think it has all gone back to the old ages, the stone ages, people persecuted for their faith.

Sitting at a table in the grocery store, the Kayfans and Pat Alston, a Bahai and a friend of the family, voice apprehension for the Bahais in Iran.

'We are hoping the Iranian government will change this," Ms. Alston said. "The Bahais there are native to the land. They have no other home to go to.'

neowners insurance will increase Sept.

AUSTIN. Texas (AP) - After five years without an increase. Texans' homeowners insurance rates will rise on Sept. 1, and owners of $75,000 houses can expect to pay anywhere from $7 to $47 more for their policies.

The State Board of Insurance ordered homeowners increases averaging 6.1 percent on Thursday, but with a wide variation among the three rating territories.

Rates for other kinds of property insurance also will go up. with renters hit the hardest. When all categories are combined, the increase averages 7.2 percent, meaning $75.5 million a year in additional premiums.

The all-category increase would have been 11.4 percent if the board had not directly recognized insurance companies' investment income for the first time. Because the board plugged investment income into the rating formula, the premium dollar includes only 2.28 cents instead of the customary nickel for profit.

"The record clearly shows that rising costs indicate a need, even with the consideration of investment income, to increase the maximum rate." said Bill Daves, board chairman. Insurers had sought increases averaging 11.3 percent

Daves said 80 percent of the property insurance in Texas is written cheaper than the standard rates set by the board. He expressed worry that companies were competing too hard for premium dollars to invest in today's high-interest money market. Some companies deviate as much as 35 to 40 percent below board-set rates, he said.

Daves said the board planned to take a tougher line toward rate-cutting and would require more information to support company requests for deviations.

The homeowners increase will be 1.6 percent in the Seacoast Territory, 10.2 percent in the large Central Inland Territory and 1.8 percent in the North-Northwest Territory.

Fire insurance rates will rise 5 percent, statewide, but will drop 16.9 percent for homes. Tenant homeowners rates will rise 25 percent in all

Farm and ranch owners rates will increase an average of Extended coverage rates will drop 0.1 percent on the coast but rise 15.8 percent in the Central Inland Territory and 7.8 percent in the North-Northwest.

The Seacoast Territory covers the two tiers of counties along the Gulf of Mexico and includes Houston, Galveston, Corpus Christi, Beaumont, Port Arthur, Orange, Texas City and the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

In the North-Northwest Territory are Lubbock, Amarillo, Wichita Falls, San Angelo, Abilene, Midland and Odessa.

Most of the state is in the Central Inland Territory, which includes Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Austin, Waco, El Paso, Texarkana, Paris and Laredo.

Homeowners premiums on $75,000 brick veneer houses will increase by $7 in Houston; $11 in Corpus Christi; $15 in Abilene, Amarillo, Lubbock, Midland, San Angelo and Wichita Falls; $44 in El Paso and San Antonio; and $47 in Austin. Dallas, Fort Worth and Waco.

On a $50,000 house, the premium will rise $5 in Houston; $8 in Corpus Christi; $11 in Abilene, Amarillo, Midland, San Angelo and Wichita Falls; $31 in El Paso and San Antonio; and $44 in Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth and Waco.

Insurers collect over $1 billion a year in property insurance premiums in Texas, with $646.2 million coming from nomeowners policies.

Health insurance offered falcohol, drug dependent

 AUSTIN — Model legislation to expand group health insurance benefits to include coverage for alcoholism and other drug dependency treatment in free-standing centers was approved by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC) in Detroit.

The legislation is part of a 100-page report produced by a special NAIC task force chaired by the chairman of the Texas State Board of Insurance William P. Daves Jr.

The report contains both model legislation and a model benefit package. While the recommended legislation dictates benefits for alcoholism and other drug dependency equal to benefits for other diseases in the policy, the model benefit package gives more detailed guidelines.

One of the most important aspects of the model benefit package is a provision to include coverage for family counseling and

"The model legislation mandates optional benefits only, leaving the decision to purchase coverage up to the group policy-holder, usually an employer, through negotiations with the insurance company.

We believe this is the prudent alternative because it does not stifle benefit design or drive large group health insurance purchasers toward self insurance.

We feel that recommendations for family care and free-standing centers, which in many cases are less expensive and more effective, is seldom covered," Daves said.

The task force, which had the assistance of a blue-ribbon advisory committee of insurance and treatment specialists from across the nation, provided guidelines in the report to help define licensed free-standing treatment facilities. The 32-member advisory committee is chaired by Austin attorney Will

"Alcoholism and drug addiction are often family diseases affecting the spouse and children of the chemically dependent person, our task force and advisory committee felt it was imperative that any comprehensive benefit package extend counseling and care to the family," Daves said.

The model benefit package benefits be extended to out-patient counseling for patients after primary treatment is "Too often in the past, treatment ended when the patient was released from the hospital. And sadly, it wasn't long before the patient was back again," Daves said.

"We now realize the continued counseling and followup care are vital if this 'revolving door syndrome' is to be stopped," Daves said.

In addition to the model benefit package and legislation the report contains an index of statistical data on the impact of chemical dependency treatment on insurance and health care.

We recognize that there is some concern in the insurance industry about pricing this product, but the NAIC believes that the time honored technique of experience-rating guarantees that any cost containment potential in such treatment programs will ultimately be reflected in future claim experience," Daves said.

The suggested benefit package provides 30 days of inpatient care for alcoholism and other drug dependency and 30 outpatient visits, including outpatient family counseling. Two 365 day benefit periods will be available during the life of the policy.

"We believe the free market operates best when it follows its natural instincts. But, those instincts are not working in this area because of widespread bias and misinformation about chemical dependency," Daves said. 34th Anniversary

Norma Hutchinson and Carla Hutchinson were the co-ordinators of the benefit.

Proceed with caution in redistricting, Bullock says

AUSTIN - The Legislative Redistricting Board should proceed with caution in redrawing new state senate districts, State Comptroller Bob Bullock said recently.

'Our work shouldn't be rushed or we're likely to become as entangled as the Legislature when it tried to reapportion the Senate." Bullock said

The constitutional provision that hands the authority to the five - member board to redistrict when the legislature fails to do so allows the board to wait up to 90 days before meeting to decide on reapportionment.

"I'm sure each of the other members of the board have had their staffs working on the matter, but it's not one that should be taken hastily," he said. "I'm not going to be bushwacked by rushing to a decision although I feel redistricting is an important and urgent

Bullock said waiting until the clock runs nearly out will lessen the prospects that the final maps will be unconstitutional.

'The other members of the board - Mark White, bill Hobby, Billy Clayton and Bob Armstrong — will want adequate time, if they feel like me, to resolve in their minds the constitutional questions and the legal issues," he said

Bullock said a fair redistricting plan won't be produced overnight although he noted that months of groundwork by this office will not make the task impossible.

"I'm concerned that the plan be fair and as squeaky - clean as possible from a legal standpoint," he added

Attorney Ray Goodwin of Paragould said in the motion filed Thursday that the indictment fails to spell out when, where and how Reed allegedly took bribes and kickbacks from five businessmen.

The indictment accuses Reed of lying to a federal grand jury in 1978 when he said he never took bribes or kickbacks while he was in office, from 1965 to 1972.

A previous indictment accusing Reed of perjury said that he took bribes from two businessmen. The federal court dismissed it in September 1980 because the jury could not reach a nonsmokers who would rather fight than switch - from its planes, that is.

But you won't hear a lot of puffing from former Southwest Airlines president Lamar Muse about his Houston flights for nonsmokers. His company, Muse Air Corp., announced Thursday that it will become the first no-smoking airline. Stewardesses will ensure that rule is enforced when the airline's first flights, from Dallas' Love Field to Houston Hobby Airport, begin on July 15.

Muse, who smoked three packs of cigarettes daily in his Southwest job, calls the move a marketing decision designed to attract more travelers to his new company, Muse Air.

"I certainly do not expect the industry to follow me," he said. "If I miscalculate, I will know soon enough. But I don't think that I have.

The flamboyant air executive who pioneered the concept of DALLAS (AP) - A new short-haul airline is looking for low-fare, short-haul flights from close-in airports while at convenience of all passengers. Southwest is gambling that there are more nonsmoking air travelers than smokers and that the majority should rule.

"There are smokers who will sit through church for an hour without smoking, and those who don't go to church will still go to a two-hour movie and not light up," Muse, chairman of the board of his company, said. "Why should they have to smoke on a 50-minute flight to Houston?"

He said his decision came as the Civil Aeronautics Board was debating whether airline passengers should be allowed to smoke on domestic flights.

"We wanted to get out in front of that question," Muse said. The no-smoking approach was first considered last year, he

Since then, Muse Air has been approved for service to 24 southwestern and central U.S. cities. Muse said the airline has made the move in order to guarantee the confort and the

For every passenger who would request a plane's smoking section, he said, five would prefer the no-smoking section.

Company surveys indicate that 10 other travelers would switch to Muse Air because of its no-smoking policy. He says that passengers will appreciate the absence of stale cigarette odor in the two McDonnell-Douglas Super 80 planes being purchased for the Dallas-Houston flights. Ironically, Muse said the question of whether to ask pilots to quit smoking was solved when the company discovered that all 18 cockpit personnel it hired were nonsmokers. "I did not want the flight crew getting up-tight because they didn't have a cigarette," he said.

The number of nonsmokers is increasing, Muse says. And nonsmokers are becoming more aware of the dangers of secondhand smoke, especially in enclosed environments such as airplane cabins.

Dear Abby Boss' wife not secretary's worry

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A secretary recently wrote to say that while her boss was out of town, his wife came into his office and searched his desk. She asked if she should tell her boss about it. You replied: "I wouldn't."

What a fascinating answer! I assume you gave that response because the person who did the searching was the boss's wife. This leads to my questions:

If it were the man's mother, should the secretary have told him? What if it were his 25-year-old daughter? His 17-yearold daughter? Two men who claimed to be CIA agents, but flashed their IDs so fast the secretary couldn't read them? The boss's wife, legally separated?

I'd really like to know your thought process!

JOHN C. IN PASADENA

DEAR JOHN: The secretary asked me if I would have told the boss and I replied, "I wouldn't." My reasoning: I would not want to be responsible for the marital brouhaha that might ensue. Had the boss's privacy been violated by someone other than his wife, I would have had no hesitation about informing my boss. Was my answer correct? Not necessarily. But it was honest.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old girl, engaged to be married. My fiance and I went for our blood tests and mine came back positive for syphilis. Abby, I knew something had to be terribly wrong because the only person I've ever been with in my life is my fiance, so if I have syphilis I would have had to get it from him. But his tests came back negative! Abby, if I have syphilis, how come he doesn't have

DEAR WORRIED: It is possible that you do not have syphilis, but that other factors are causing your tests to show a positive reaction.

See a dermatologist or hematologist for a more thorough blood study. You will be given tests to rule out the false diagnosis of syphilis. Don't panic. Your case is not unusual. #### Bibles needed in Poland

"Instead of thousands of Bibles, we need millions!"

This is the plea of Mrs. Barbara Enholc-Narzynska, executive secretary of the Bible Society in Poland, in a recent communique to the American Bible Society in New York.

"We are facing a huge problem with the severe shortage of paper and an acute shortage of foreign currency to pay for imports," Narzynska said.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

PROGRESS

Progress is on the march. There is a great boom in building. Cures are being found for maladies that have killed mankind for centuries. Industry is doing magnificent things. But what sort of progress is being made in human relations—this term that includes respect for the person and property of others and good will among men.

There is one agency striving for progress in this field. This agency is the church. At the birth of Jesus Christ, the following prophesy and promise was given to mankind by a host of angels: "Glory to God in the Highest Heaven! Peace upon earth among men of goodwill!" Luke 2:14, (Phillips translation). Only when the majority of men on earth are men of goodwill, will we have peace.

Attend church this week and align yourself with the forces of God.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Saying the danger of war Habib's efforts to defuse the between Israel and Syria has receded. U.S. peace envoy Philip Habib flew back to Washington to take a breather from his shuttle diplomacy while Israel elects a new parliament and Arab leaders hold a summit meeting

"I believe all concerned want to see tensions reduced as it it evident that the immediate danger of military action that existed when the 2 crisis arose almost two months ago has receded." Habib said in a statement as he left Beirut Thursday.

Deputy White House spokesman Larry Speakes said in Washington that 'diplomatic efforts will continue will Habib consults with President Reagan." He did not elaborate but said Habib would return to the Middle East in early July.

Israel holds its national elections next Tuesday and the Arab League's annual summit meeting opens July 4.

Small village has one-room school

COPPER HARBOR, Mich. (AP) - In this village, if you leave a tip, the waitress calls after you, "Hey, mister, you forgot your change." It is that sort of village.

It is at the northernmost point of a finger of murmuring pines and hemlock jutting into Lake Superior. About 30 people live here year round, far fewer than reside in the town graveyard. If you look at a map, Copper Harbor is the dot at the tip of Michigan's Upper Peninsula's upper peninsula.

Spring arrives late this far up the global tilt. At the end-of-school picnic the other day, the kids played softballamid lilac blossoms. Lilacs in June.

Miss Howe played shortstop. She had to, and parents and friends and recent graduates played other positions, as ringers, because the kids actually celebrating the end of school barely numbered enough to make a team, let alone a team to Bobbi, Natasha, Johanna, Forest, Aaron, Darren, Jeff, Kristen and Danny constitute the Copper Harbor School student body. Miss Howe is the teacher.

One-room schoolhouses with one teacher once were commonplace in this country but that was before the nation traded remoteness and innocence for pavement.

All three yet survive — one-room schoolhouses, remoteness and waitresses who remind you to collect your change though you might have to go to the end of the road to find them.

The road ends here. Education does not. My pupils take the same standardized tests as all the other pupils in the state," Miss Howe said, with pride. "They do

"I want them to excel. When they go on from here, to high school, the social adjustments will be hard enough for them without having to worry about their studies. I don't want anyone to fall behind. When they do go on to high school they will climb into a bus and ride 35 miles, to Calumet, and 35 miles back, through winter snows that accumulate 200 to 400 inches. That's snow enough to cover the schoolyard flagpole. People here dig tunnels in order to shovel less.

It was Copper Harbor's isolation and severity that lured

Marsha Howe, the schoolmarm, here a year ago. She is a backpacker, a climber, a skier. She is 30. She is a fine shortstop and also, apparently, a fine teacher. After only one yer the members of the school board - who are also the parents of most of her pupils - granted her tenure.

ou can imagine how personal teaching is here 'I don't prepare a year's study program for a grade. I prepare individual study programs for individual pupils.

'Next fall we get a new kindergartner, Amber Meadowcroft, and I will have 10 pupils," she said.

In a nation of interstate highways, resource centers and peer-group relationships, there remains, it would seem, something to be said for one-room schoolhouses, closeness and

Not to mention lilacs in June.

Cosell Syndrome hits world of golf

AP Special Correspondent RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) - Cosell's Syndrome has infected the stately, antiseptic, previously hype-free world of Golf. The prognosis is not good.

The U.S. Open Golf Championship this past weekend qualified as the U.S. Open-Mouthed Championship.

ABC-TV imported no fewer than seven commentators to the historic Merion Club in Ardmore, Pa., where Bobby Jones notched a rung of his Grand Slam, to achieve an all time Grand Slam in inane chatter, aimless anecdotes, infuriating speculation ("If Graham makes this, the Burns lead will have shrunk to one") and numbing statistics.

Jim McKay, a normally inoffensive sports announcer, came down with a bad case of Howard's Lesser Plague, among the symptoms of which is inability to shake off a cliche. Early in the four-day tournament finally won by Australian David Graham. McKay referred to Merion as "an elegant dowager among golf courses." He never would give up the phrase. He worried it and shook it and chewed on it, like a puppy with a wool sock in its mouth. Unfortunately, there was none in his.

But the wordiest offender in a close, crowded field was Dave Marr, a golf pro with a deep cornpone accent and the annoying habit of laughing at just everything in sight. He's the sort of compulsive chuckler you smehow always get seated next to on long plane flights, full of folksy anecdotes and punishing

Every time he teed off at the microphone, Marr dug great divots of the obvious: "Burns has got a long day ahead of him, win or lose." Nicklaus is the type of player "who gives you 100 per cent every time." The back nine, of course, was "the long voyage home." Any short putt was "near and yet so far."

At one point on the mike, Marr actually told himself to "stop talking." but it didn't take.

All the networks doing a golf tournament feel obligated to employ a British commentator with an Eton accent to stress the antiquity and sophistication of the grand old game.

In Peter Alliss, ABC has found a Brit with all the right credentials. He pronounces immediately "ee-mee-jet-lee," exclaims "my word" at the drop of a putt, finds everything "marvelous" that is not "truly wonderful" and can hold forth on "the many permutations" of the game. Talk. Talk. Talk. The torrent of tedium never ceased. It used to be that when Jack Nicklaus hunched over a putt, a cathedral hush descended on the gallery and the requisite Englishman on microhone lowered his voice to a reverential whisper. Now we get Dave Marr with an interminable inconsequential anecdote about what Jack once told his caddy. Or was it the other way around?
