Lewis tells controllers -- It's not enough to say you're sorry

rerouted across the Atlantic, the government reported no major delays or disruptions for European travelers today as Portuguese air controllers refused to handle U.S. flights in sympathy with their striking American colleagues

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, meanwhile, told the American controllers, beginning their third week on strike, that they will have to prove intimidation or harassment to get their jobs back. Just saying they're sorry isn't enough, Lewis declared.

Lewis said that while about 15 percent of trans-Atlantic flights are affected by the two-day boycott that began at 8 p.m. EDT Sunday, he anticipated "no significant impact" on

Reagan reviews ban on Israeli plane shipments

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) -President Reagan is assembling his National Security Council to decide on resuming shipments of American-made warplanes to Israel

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Sunday Reagan "has decided to right that wrong" and may lift the suspension today or Tuesday.

After spending 10 days at his ranch atop the Santa Ynez Mountains. Reagan was kicking off a five-day trip to Los Angeles today with a three-hour National Security Council meeting on the Israeli iets, the MX mobile missile system and the B-1 bomber.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the session was "a review of foreign policy in general, with probably an emphasis on the Middle

Reagan said Thursday he would announce this week his decision on resuming deliveries of F-15 and F-16 jets to Israel

The shipments of four F-16s were held up two months ago pending a determination of whether Israel's use of American-made planes to bomb Irag's nuclear reactor June 7 violated an agreement to use them only for defensive purposes.

The suspension was broadened after Israel's July 17 air raid on Palestinian guerrilla headquarters in Beirut. In all, two F-15s, considered the most advanced fighter plane, and 14 F-16s have been withheld

Begin says the reactor raid was a pre-emptive defensive strike because Iraq could have made nuclear weapons for use against Israel. In Jerusalem on Sunday, Begin said

'these are Israeli planes" and implied that Amery:: no right to dictate how they are used just because they were manufactured in the United States. Speakes, however, said "the Israeli government knows where we stand and what our laws require. Any country we sell arms to we expect to abide by U.S. law concerning these sales. Begin denounced the suspension as absolutely unjustifiable. "A wrong was done to Israel," he said after a Cabinet meeting to plot his strategy for Sept. 8-9 talks with Reagan in Washington. "But now President Reagan has decided to right that

Begin said the United States would need up to seven days of preparations before the aircraft could leave for Israel

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. met privately with Reagan on Sunday and, along with Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and others, was to attend the National Security Council meeting today.

Speakes denied published reports that Haig was using his private meeting with Reagan to lobby for deploying the MX missile in land-based shelters. Haig reportedly differs on that issue with Weinberger, who is said to prefer an airborne system.

But Speakes said Haig was "not coming out to argue the MX

Reagan said last week that final decisions on the MX and the B-1 were unlikely to be made until he returns to Washington next month

Atlanta slaying suspect pleads innocent to two murder charges

ATLANTA (AP) - Wayne B. Williams pleaded innocent today to murder charges in the deaths of two of 28 young blacks, and a Superior Court judge set a tentative trial date of Oct. 5.

The 23-year-old black freelance cameraman was arraigned before a group of 150 spectators who crowded into a heavily guarded room at the Fulton County courthouse.

Williams, who appeared with his lawyer, former City Solicitor Mary Welcome, was asked by Judge Clarence Cooper whether he was ready to enter a plea and replied. "I plead not guilty to both counts.

OPEC nations eye decrease in oil prices

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) - Oil ministers from six major oil-producing states opened two days of talks today that could lead to an unprecedented cut in the prices charged by the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting

The OPEC members are discussing a compromise that would require Saudi Arabia to raise its price $2 a barrel to $34 a barrel, the Beirut, Lebanon-based weekly Arab Report and Memo said Sunday. In return, African producers who charge up to $40 a barrel would agree to drop prices to $36 to $36.50, the report said.

If approved, the the $2 price hike would raise the average OPEC oil price by slightly more than 2 percent and add a half-cent per gallon to the price of oil consumed in the United States.

Oil industry observers have said that if the pricing policy is adopted, it would mark the first time in the cartel's 20 years that members agreed together on an official price reduction.

Injured hawk's leg amputated

Clarendon authorities Saturday brought a young hawk, injured in a trap, to a Pampa wildlife rehabilitator after the bird was found in an automobile impounded by Texas Department of Public Safety officers.

Pat Miller, a licensed scientific wildlife rehabilitator, said today the young hawk had its left foot and leg amputated after they were severely injured by a trap.

'It had turned completely black. There was no circulation in it," she said of the hawk's leg

She said the hawk is doing well after the surgery and will soon be ready to be taken to the Abilene zoo for identification. "He will stay there (at the zoo) the return to the wild where he belongs. "I guess that hurts me more than anything, that he won't be able to go back. That's my job to rehabilitate wild animals so they can go back to the wild But I just won't be able to do it with this

Miller said the state parks and wildlife warden in Clarendon, Gary Hunt, is preparing to file charges against the person who was driving the vehicle for trapping and having the bird in his possession.

San Joaquin growers are coping

Farmers faced with a quarantine of vegetables at tomato-picking time hurried to get their crops to canneries in a section of the San Joaquin Valley invaded by Mediterranean fruit flies.

Robert Weaver, deputy agriculture commissioner of Stanislaus County. said county, state and federal farm officials would meet this morning with growers affected by a 264-square; mile quarantine imposed Friday after medflies were found in a 1-square-mile area of the valley

Meanwhile, aerial pesticide spraving was to continue todaw with the fifth dusting of part of Santa Clara County as well as the first application over a 9-square-mile section of Boulder Creek. a mountainous section of Santa Cruz County

Eight growers took the medfly battle into their own hands Sunday, paying for four planes to dust 900 acres in the center of the quarantine area. The planes sprayed diphos, an insecticide considered more potent than malathion, which was sprayed by the state over 78 square miles Saturday

The quarantine, imposed by county, state and federal officials, means no fresh fruit or vegetables can be taken out of the area unless they are fumigated. But tomatoes now ready for harvest, may be taken to processing plants, where they can be sorted and examined for fly damage Because agriculture officials did not want the tomatoes to remain at the farms after picking, growers were told to get their tomatoes to canneries within 12 hours after they are picked.

Bellpeppers will be ready for harvest within day's, officials said.

The only fumigation chambers in the county handle nuts, Weaver said, and cannot accommodate tomatoes. He said it would be several days at least before proper facilities could be built

Don Lesser, spokesman for California's 14-month battle against the medflies, said Sunday that several of the 56 flies found Saturday in an orchard in Westley, six miles northwest of here, were fertile and "we're assuming the rest are.

Another fly was found Sunday in the orchard, where the first flies in the valley were trapped Wednesday, Lesser said.

The arrival of the fly, which can destroy 200 kinds of fruit and vegetables, stunned growers in the San Joaquin Valley, which - along with the Sacramento Valley to the north — yields the bulk of the state's produce.

Battle on sewage going down the drain?

WASHINGTON (AP) - The multibillion-dollar federal effort to clean up the sewage pouring into the country's rivers and lakes may be going down the drain - the victim of a stalemate between the Reagan adminstration and Congress.

As of now, there is no money in the 1982 budget to continue the nine-year-old program which has funneled $30 billion to help cities.build treatment plants, lay sewer pipe and upgrade crumbling systems.

President Reagan has vowed to keep things that way unless Congress agrees to sharply cut back the scope of the program, the government's most expensive pollution control effort.

Congress so far has balked at enacting the requested changes, which critics say would mean skyrocketing tax and sewer bills at the local level and the abandonment of many projects.

The Environmental Protection Agency estimates $90 billion will be needed to meet remaining obligations

'We now have a program that has bloated into one of the largest public works efforts in peacetime history.' says EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch. "The fede, al government can no longer afford to construct every sewer line in the country.

The Reagan administration proposes slashing the federal government's commitment by 75 percent, from $90 billion down to $23 billion. That would be accomplished by cutting out many types of sewer improvements which now qualify for federal aid.

Sewage plants still would qualify, but the pipes that carry sewage from homes to the main sewers would not. Such pipes can account for 90 percent of the costs of a sewage system in a small

Also cut would be federal aid to finance extra plant capacity to meet projected future growth. Instead, the government would fund only the capacity needed to meet 1980 population needs.

The changes, the EPA maintains, would focus limited federal funds on the worst pollution problems and get the federal government out of the business of subsidizing urban sprawl.

Tritics see it differently

"When the president's men finally put their guns away, the water pollution program wasn't exactly dead, but it sure had a lot of bullet holes in it," said Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., chairman of the House Public Works Committee

He and other critics say Reagan is continuing his war on the federal budget by shifting its biggest environmental commitment, onto the backs of local communities.

But environmental groups, in support of Reagan's changes, say the current program wastes money on unnecessarily complicated sewage plants that do little to clean up

Six charged in casino bombing who lost thousands of dollars at Harveys Resort Hotel-Casino in Nevada has been charged with his two sons and three other people in the extortion bombing that wrecked the resort a year ago.

One side of the casino on the glittering gambling strip in Stateline. Nev., was blown out during a remote-control attempt to disarm the bomb Aug. 27 after the resort owners had agreed to pay the $3 million extortion demand. The payoff was never made because no one showed up at the appointed place

The bomb, which had been wheeled into the building disguised as office equipment, caused no injuries when it blew up, but it caused $12 million in damage, resort officials said.

Sheriff's Department identified those arrested as John Birges, 58, of Clovis, a city adjacent to Fresno; the woman he lived with, Ella Joan William, 47; and Terry Lee Hall, 25, of Fresno. They were held in the Fresno County Jail pending arraignment today before a federal magistrate. The San Francisco Chronicle reported today that FBI agent Joseph Yablonsky said Birges' sons, John, 20, and James, 19, were charged with attempted extortion along with Willis Brown, said to be in his 50s and a resident of the Fresno area. The elder Birges and Hall were booked for investigation of transporting explosives over state lines. Ms. William was booked for investigation of extortion, conspiracy and transporting explosives, Ms. Beecher said.

"I'm tickled to death. This is one heck of an anniversary present," said Eldon Campbell, president of the resort, which reopened May 13.

Campbell described Birges as a heavy player who had lost thousands of dollars. Others said he was a regular at the blackjack table.

The Chronicle reported that someone believed to be close to the Birges family had provided a tip and led agents to the Fresno area. Yablonsky, who had led a team of 50 FBI agents, was quoted by the paper as saying. "This thing came hard all the way.

Birges is a landscape contractor and Hall is a contractor, officials said. The Chronicle reported that the FBI said Ms. William was a probation officer in Frenso County

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Now that threats of a second special session has faded. Texas legislators and would-be office holders can turn their full attention to the 1982 political races.

Several possible candidates promised political announcements as soon as the legislative session ended but most of them are still leery of declaring themselves.

Texas will institute tough new measures to control the Medfly

DALLAS (AP) - Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown says he'll appoint a state Mediterranean fruit fly control coordinator today to direct a new get-tough strategy aimed at keeping the destructive pest out of Brown said the new strategy includes new inspections procedures along the state's western border that could delay for days truckloads of California produce not certified free of the insect.

"New legislation gives us broad authority and funds to protect our industry," Brown said in a telephone interview from his Austin home Sunday night. "Under our new powers we can levy stiff fines against any one bringing fruit into Texas from California."

He said his office notified California authorities that although a court order prevents Texas from ordering the fumigation of California produce traveling through the state, Texas has the power to inspect every truck.

"We are going to get real tough," said Brown. "Under new legislation, we can make them sit on the road until we get around to checking them. It can be very expensive (for shippers) ... but they will have to sit there until we get to State inspectors currently stop an average of 1,200 trucks a day at the state line, and Brown said large amounts of California fruit also have been confiscated from cars.

"We are getting tougher all the time," said Brown. He said one truck driver was arrested and detained temporarily in Amarillo Saturday night when he refused to show certification documents to inspectors.

Brown said produce must be certified that it is from an area completely free of the medfly or "our inspectors are going to cut fruit."

He said inspectors may order truckers to unload some of their cargo so they can cut open produce in the center of the truck to look for medflies.

'We're not going to worry about fruit spoiling," said Brown. "We are going to use good common sense, but we are going to be sure before letting any

Besides the new state coordinator, Brown said he would designate a regional coordinator in each of the state's 12 agricultural districts. He said funding will come from $1.5 million appropriated by the recent special session of the Legislature. He said $1 million has been earmarked as a contingency fund for aerial spraying. Brown said the state also would put out 7,000 new fly traps to supplement the 3,000 already in place, mostly in the Rio Grande Valley.

Brown said most of the new traps would be around produce terminals, airports and the peach growing areas near Fredericksburg and Seguin.

· He said University of Texas experts have been lined up to identify the medfly and cut the time it takes to send specimens to Washington.

Should the medfly be detected in Texas. Brown said authorities are prepared to act almost immediately.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Immigration: a tragic disappointment

The Reagan administration's proposals for dealing with the current flow of "illegal aliens" into the United States is one of its most disappointing efforts to date. It is characterized by lack of imagination, overweening caution and an unfortunate obeisance to conventional wisdom, when the issue demands bold, unconventional thinking.

It is especially ironic that the announcement of Attorney General William French Smith's immigration tinkering came within days of Reagan's declaration that, in light of the passage of the tax cut bill, we were entering some kind of new era of freedom and opportunity in the United States. The soaring new era has fallen to the ground with a thud.

The proposal to penalize employers who hire illegal immigrants is so bad as to require little comment. Business people are already saddled with too much government paperwork without converting them to criminals unless they act as immigration cops. And let's face reality. If this proposal becomes a law, employers are going to examine people with darker complexions, accents or Hispanic names more closely than others probably in violation of civil rights laws. There will be increased reluctance to hire such people even if their "papers" appear to be in order. We're to have "infrequent and largely symbolic" Coast Guard patrols assigned to turning back boatloads from Haiti? The ymbolism of such a program would be malign and inimical to the best aspects of the American tradition. Smith's justification for selecting the figure of 50.000 for an experimental "guest worker" program is amusing and revealing. He said such a program could be managed and studied without great bureaucratic expense. In essence, it's designed for the conveninece of the bureaucracy rather than with any reference to the magnitude of the "problem" or any consideration of justice or equity. The idea of legalizing those now in the United States is a good one, but the approach is askew. The Reagan proposal would set up yet another class of residents to be monitored by the bureaucracy and given certain privileges and certain limitations as to their freedom of action.

We would have hoped that the Reagan administration might have given some thought to the notion that our current immigration problems," like so many current problems, have arisen largely because of the government's insistence on trying to manage them. We have insisted on retaining the archaic and bigoted notion of 'aliens'' who need to be tracked and controlled by some agency of government. The Immigration and Naturalization Service isn't up to the absurd job. Have you ever tried to call the INS office in Los Angeles? In dozens of tries over the last several months at all hours of the business day we've never gotten anything but a busy signal. Is it any wonder that many immigrants who actually want to fulfill the government's requirements soon give up?

The solution to all this is not to tighten up the laws and tinker with the programs. The solution is to decide that if America is the land of the free, we have no business setting quotas for people who want to come here or making them jump through a lot of bureaucratic hoops. There's no need to put immigrants on welfare, and most of them don't want it. What they want, and what the United States used to offer, is the opportunity to use their ability and willingness to work to make a better life for themselves

The condition toward which we should be moving is one in which any individual person who can manage it should be free to move to this country and live and work here without any licensing, hassling or harassment by government. Wave after wave of immigration in the past has enriched and strengthened this country. Most Americans are descended from immigrants. In the recent past we have departed from our traditions of openness and liberty. It is time to set a new course consistent with priciples of individual liberty. It may not be politically feasible to do it all in an instant. But we had hoped for better from the Reagan administration.

Tax cuts and opportunities

Apparently the margin by which the watered - down Reagan tax cut proposal passed the House was a surprise even to White House strategists. On the eve of the showdown all sides were saying that it was too close to call, and one might have expected that if administration strategists were sure they had it in the bag they would have been trying to create a bandwagon effect rather than projecting an image of uncertainty

What the vote demonstrates is that when Ronald Reagan talks plainly to the American people, he has great influence, so long as he seems to be making sense. Many congressmen, have heard from their purported party leaders about party discipline, heard also from their constituents. We don't know at this writing just how much horse - trading went on to secure some of the Boll Weevil votes. Given the president's ability as a communicator, such dealing as apparently occurred to secure the previous vote on the budget may not have been necessary

The vote spotlighted the current disarray within the leadership of the Democratic party, and the difference between the party structures in the United States and some of the European democracies. In many European countries such wholesale defections by members of the "opposition" party would have been virtually unthinkable. Yet party discipline in the United States has never been as strong as in some other systems. The powers of incumbency are mighty, but most members of Congress know that they must face the people in two years. In its current state, the Democratic hierarchy has little to offer in the way of rewards and punishments, compared to the possibility of being voted out of office. A system in which parties are loose coalitions rather than tightly disciplined structures has its weaknesses as well as its strengths, but it does permit greater flexibility and a certain antic element of unpredictability that we find rather charming.

For the long run, the most important aspect of the tax bill may not be the immediate tax cut, but the indexing provision inserted by the Senate. The Reagan administration was at first reluctant about including indexing, which would adjust tax rates in accordance with inflation rates, eliminating "bracket creep" and the backdoor profits that government reaps from inflation. But the Senate demonstrated that it is politically feasible to go farther than the administration wanted to go in providing tax relief. This vote, so obviously influe ced by the voices of constituents, makes us all the more wary of all those public opinion polls that purported to show, with carefully worded questions, that Americans didn't really want a tax cut, seeking only to have the federal budget trimmed a bit. That notion has seemed so unlikely to us that we have long felt that only a politician or sociologist could have held to it without being embarrassed by its absurdity.

By ROBERT LEFEVRE

The life of each of us is heir to many problems. Most of us know it and do whatever we can to avoid or to minimize the difficulties. There is one particular type of problem I would like to consider. It is engendered by our willingness to believe in pleasant fantasies.

Because life is sometimes hard, sometimes cruel and not at all fair in any human sense of fairness, most of us are susceptible to the confidence rackets. We all like to believe that there is some "key" to success; some panacea by means of which our problems can be resolved. There are always a few clever people around, who will take advantage of our credulity and gullibility, to promise us the fulfillment of our dreams.

Let me be specific. Our fantasies generally orbit around two central themes: (1) health and life itself, and (2) riches and a life of plenty. I am not suggesting that good health and life are fantasies, nor that riches and a life of plenty are inconceivable in any practical way. Obviously achievements have been made in all areas to improve health, to extend life, and to raise standards of living. Further, we will probably continue to progress along the same lines and further improvements are predictable Where, then is the fantasy?

The greatest political con

It lies in our belief that these desirable conditions can be enjoyed by all. Further, that they can be enjoyed at once and often without effort.

Thus, from the beginning of the human story there have been con men moving about, offering us magic elixirs, Dr. Quack's snake oil remedy, good health through jogging, tennis, meditation or prayer. We have had con men who not only promised to extend our lives, but assured us we would live forever. And we have had a welter of 'experts" tell us how to get rich without trying, how to get lucky and how to be rich and lucky without trying and achieve all three instantly.

Without getting into the history of it. which would have to begin with witch doctors and the tribal shaman, we have emerged in the 20th century with a virtual monopoly of the confidence rackets in the hands of modern governments

Even among those who progress to a faith in God's intervention on their behalf, few are willing to risk their futures on anything so tenuous. Thus they, too, vote for a retention of the government dole (which in this country is called "Social Security" and 'welfare''), and favor more and more handouts, more and more subsidy and less and less resonsibility for each individual

Meanwhile, the government has passed laws against any and all confidence racketeers outside its own portals (everything government touches it monopolizes) and is now the undisputed emperor of con. If a businessman promises more than his good or service can perform, he runs the risk of fine or imprisonment. If a politician makes promises that are impossible of fulfillment by anyone, he stands a good chance of winning election, fame and fortune. There are laws against misrepresentation and false advertising except where government is involved. It is in government that false witness has risen

With the passing of time, there is one fear and correspondingly one hope, which has become the lodestar of the philosophy practiced in this country. The central theme has it that life is always good; death is always evil. We fear death and we hope for life everlasting, or, at least, life for as long as possible, and a little bit more.

Nearly everyone speaks up in favor of life. With few exceptions death is out of favor. I am not a fool and so I'm not about to suggest that we reverse this polarization. Such a reversal would, of course, be evil. We should not seek death. Nor seek to inflict it on others.

But examine with me, if you will, what the monopolizing of the confidence rackets by government has done in this particular. You've read it in the papers and you've seen it on TV. Our value systems are askew. If there's a twenty - car pile - up on a highway. including an eighteen - wheeler with the loss of property in excess of half a million all told, crews will clear up the wreckage and deplore the circumstances.

But if a car plunges over an embankment and the lone driver killed, there will be a flurry among lawmakers who will try to enact new legislation to prevent cars from skidding. Tire manufacturers who made tires that would deflate, skid or lift off the pavement may be fined. Everyone is horrified. Someone died! We don't want to believe the driver brought it on himself Somebody else is to blame.

We don't think about it this way, but in the twenty - car pile - up, a litle bit of life was lost by every car owner, every finance company, every hauler of goods. Their labors, symbolized by the money they have invested, have been lost. But since there was no direct loss of life, we can sweep the debris under the legal carpet and stop worrying.

By practicing a philosophy that life is always good, death is always bad, we have rejected reality. This value structure converts the human experience into an inescapable tragedy. With this belief, mankind is doomed. His final act is always evil and thus far there is no escape.

Let me offer a thought that may distress many. Life is not always good: death is not always evil. Just as there is a time to work, there is a time to rest There is a time to plant and a time for harvest.

You and I, with our limited knowledge, can never judge the right time for anyone, including ourselves. We certainly cannot judge it for ohers. It is good that each individual lives as long as he can as a free being. What I am saying is that death is an integral part of life. To fear death, in logic, would be to fear life which ends in Functional, independent life is good But the miracle of human experience is not limited to the fact of life, it is also encompassed by how each one of us lives. Even a parasite has life. But is lives at the expense of its host. How the host might live and what it might achieve were it rid of parasites is more important, in my judgment, than survival of the parasitical growth.

I am not opposed to parasites who find a welcome host. There can be symbiotic relationships both temporary and lasting that are ecologically sound and useful. But a philosophy that worhsips life by shutting out the value of death altogether is a false and unrealistic philosophy. And when government organizes human society around that false hope it will stop at nothing to preserve each life, no matter how little it might be valued or how unworthy it might be. This is a monstrous error that can dissipate human liberty and convert us all into parasites feeding on each other. (Robert LeFevre is a libertarian writer

Indexation not what it seems

By OSCAR COOLEY

Social Security benefits are "indexed." When they were raised 11 percent July 1, it was done to correct for the year's rise in the cost of living. It

This was not because the increase was too little but because the same rate of increase, 11 percent, was given to everybody who gets the benefits, whereas the increase in each person's cost of living depends on what he lives on. Every good has its own price, and some prices went up much more, some less, than others. People do not buy the same things or buy them in the same proportions. It follows that to raise everyone's dollar income by the same percentage does not correct for his increased cost of living. Indexation is a

For example, a person who buys a house pays a considerably higher price now than in the past. And he pays a much higher interest rate on his mortgage. These zooming prices for homes count heavily in the Consumers'

Price Index, or CPI, which is the official yardstick with which the government measures cost of living, but the individual who did not buy a home during the last year — and only a in a given year - was not affected by the rise in house prices. So the CPI was not a correct index for him.

Energy did not go up much last year. Gasoline actually fell in price by 11/2 percent in June. If you do not drive a car - as many Social Security recipients do not — that price drop did you no good. But it being part of the CPI, it pulled that index down a little and reduced the benefit increase you might have received July 1.

Indexation represents an attempt to average quantities that cannot be meaningfully averaged, that is, consumer prices. The effect of those price changes all depends on the consumer and his individual tastes and who decide what prices shall be included in the computing of the CPI and how much weight should be given each have gone around and around over this problem. There is a strong opinion among them that prices o mortgage interest should be given less weight than at present. Such a change might make the CPI a truer measure of 'inflation" than it is now, but it still would not be true.

Not only Social Security benefits but military retirement pay, supplemental security income and food stamps also

Government is powerless to protect people from rising prices. The individual buyer can protect himself to the degree that he buys less of goods and services that rise in price most and more of the things that rise least. Every shopper does that every time he shops. He changes his diet, his garb, his vacation plans, maybe his housing in response to changes in prices.

Indexation is blind to this. It assumes that he continues his consumer way of life without change and that he can be protected by simply changing his income.

That is why I say indexation is a deception and a fake. (Incidentally, indexation is a fake word; it is not in my Webster's Unabridged. There is no law against coining words, but why coin one that conveys a misleading THE PAMPA NEWS (USPS 781-540)

Let's call it "The Reagan Renaissance. After fifty years of preoccupation "relief programs" this administration, with bipartisan support, is providing relief for taxpavers. Author Ayn Rand tried a generation ago to tell us that we can't have lights without generators. Relief for taxpayers fuels the generators again.

Examples: Over the next three years Americans' income taxes will be cut 25 percent.

Other tax cuts are designed to encourage us to save or invest that money - thus to generate a tidal wave of economic activity

It has been difficult for workaday Americans fully to appreciate their personal stake in capital gains taxes and taxes on investments. Yet reducing those top taxes from 28 to 20 percent and from 70 to 50 percent respectively will inevitably encourage investment which generates energy, consumer products, jobs. Similarly, allowing faster depreciation allowances to industry will allow replacing old machinery with new - creating jobs.

Money you are encouraged to save is re - loaned for expanding businesses, building houses, creating jobs.

Two - income families have been so mercilessly discriminated against that some couples divorced "for tax purposes. There will be no more marriage

Some workers have decined salary increases which would have pushed them into higher tax backet. Under the new legislation, indexing will take care of that. With government retreating from the charity business, you will be allowed greater tax deductions for charitable contributions. Historically, voluntary charity has been infinitely more effective and less wasteful than government charity.

Similarly, you will be allowed to divert more tax dollars to personal retirement plans.

The inheritance tax will be modified to reduce the likelihood that the surviving spouse will have to sell the family farm to pay the taxes.

Again, after half a century of "relief programs," this administration is providing relief for taxpayers.

Let's call it "The Reagan Renaissance" — and then live up to it.

Newspaper's presses roll today after financial crisis is solved

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Presses rolled at The Bulletin today where workers hoped their $4.9 million in contract concessions would combine with new investment by the owners to give the 134-year-old newspaper a bright future.

The vote by eight unions to make the concessions saved The Bulletin from becoming the third major metropolitan afternoon newspaper in the United States to close this month. The Daily News Tonight in New York announced its last edition would be Aug. 28 and the Washington Star folded Aug. 7.

The Bulletin, once America's largest afternoon daily, had been losing $250,000 a week and management had said Sunday's edition would be the last if the unions turned down its the

Of 1.901 Bulletin employees, 100 union members and 63 non-union workers will be laid off. With other cuts, including layoffs of non-union workers, trimmed vacation pay for some and reduced overtime for others, the newspaper is expected to save $6.3 million annually. The eight unions represent 879 workers.

"We're tremendously excited, we're pleased," said N.S. Hayden, the newspaper's president and publisher, at a news conference in a Chinese restaurant where fortune cookies were. distributed carrying the message. 'Good fortunes for the future of The Bulletin."

In the newsroom, where about 60 reporters and editors waited anxiously for the separate unions to vote on the bail-out, there were cheers and tears when the final tally came in just before Bottles of champagne, beer and soda

Metropolitan Editor Dave Taylor called it "an emotional rollercoaster.

Executive Editor Craig Ammerman' put a match to "a contingency plan" that would have been used if The Bulletin folded, and then got the staff going on a morning edition with a page one headline, "We're Here, And It Feels Great.

The program to reshape the paper calls for circulation and advertising gains. The Bulletin, which topped 700,000 daily copies in the late 1940s, reported 412,268 for the six months before April, according to the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Its owner. The Charter Co., says it is the 14th largest daily in the United States.

New look in world of work

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer The 1980s will change the way America works.

That's the conclusion of a recent report which predicts that flexible work schedules, broader benefit packages and new attitudes toward the corporate chain of command will become common as the decade wears on.

The report was prepared by the Long Range Planning Committee of the United Way of America. United Way chapters raise about half their funds from employees on the job and the charity wanted to find out how changes in the workplace would affect both the collection of contributions and the delivery of services.

Lynne Hall, who was in charge of the project, said the committee's study showed that the workplace "may well become the dominant institution of the church and the school as the most pervasive socializing agent in the United States, simply because more people will be affected by the workplace than by any other institution.

The changes will result from demographics - the growth of the minority population and the continued movement of women into the labor force. From economics - the lingering effects of high inflation and slow growth. And from education - by 1985, an estimated 21 percent of the people in the labor force will be college graduates, up from 13.2 percent in 1970.

The workplace of the future, the report says, will be oriented toward information processing and service fields. The amount of heavy industry is declining. The heavy industry that does remain will be "increasingly automated with increased use of

The report also says work schedules will vary to meet the demands of workers who want more time for family or leisure activities. The trend toward the use of part-time employees, now confined to blue collar and clerical areas, will spread to supervisory and administrative fields: "A key factor promoting this trend," the report says, 'has to do with who's available and demanding part-time work - namely. older skilled workers, professional women choosing to balance careers with household responsibilities...'

Other trends will include the adoption of flex-time plans. Employees will be free to set their own schedules within a given framework. One worker, for example, might prefer an 8-tc-4 schedule five days a week; another might opt for a 9-to-7 job four days a

Panel recommending steps to 'take criminals off the streets'

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal task force is recommends the attorney general seek amendments to the taking criminals off the street and putting them "where they can't injure innocent citizens."

After hearings in seven cities in four months, the eight-member task force was meeting today to take a formal vote on the proposals to Attorney General William French Smith on laws and spending.

The proposals, tentatively approved this month, include new limitations on constitutional rights to make convictions easier to obtain and uphold.

On Sunday, former 'Attorney General Griffin B. Bell and Illinois Gov. James Thompson, the panel's co-chairmen, said their most important recommendation is a plan to ask Congress during a time of spending cuts for $2 billion in federal aid to help states build new prisons. Bell, a Democrat, and Thompson, a Republican, appeared on NBC-TV's "Meet the

DEAR ABBY: Some old lady up in Maine who needed dentures asked her dentist to make her sparkling white teeth — "like the movie stars" — and he refused, saying they wouldn't look "natural." You said the dentist should give the lady what she wanted - not what he thinks she should have. Wrong! You are just as ignorant as the old lady. As a dental assistant, I can tell you that the majority of denture wearers don't know anything about selecting the proper color teeth. Dentists are doctors of dentistry, just as physicians are doctors of medicine. They are paid for their expertise and should use it unconditionally. You wouldn't tell a physician what kind of medicine to prescribe, would you? So why should a patient tell a dentist what color teeth to make?

It may be one measure of the vitality and strength of the American housewares industry that it has a place for entrepreneurs like Mrs. Tuggle. With retail sales in 1980 of $35 billion, according to the National Housewares Manufacturers Association, housewares are big business. But the industry has been receptive to small - timers who believe they have built a better mousetrap and aim to build a business on the feat.

Mrs. Tuggle said she got her product idea while in the kitchen doing some baking. It is a plastic measuring cup in two parts. A removable base permits easier filling, leveling and ejecting of sticky ingredients such as peanut butter, molasses and shortening.

There is always an abundance of ingenious products to look at, to evaluate and perhaps to buy. This summer's market proved that earlier generations had no corner on ingenuity, especially when it came to gadgets.

Consider the following: a scale that "speaks": a corkscrew on a pulley; a picture level that mounts on a picture and tells if is hanging crooked on the wall; a razor that works on friction, and a hair curler that runs on butane fluid. The scale has an electronic voice synthesizer that "speaks" the weight it registers. Conceived originally for sight - , impaired individuals, it attracted attention among retailers who plan to market it to the general public in coming months, according to the company's president. It will retail for about

The corkscrew, which sells for about $15, features a conventional corkscrew head on a pulley. The manufacturer claims the pulley makes it easier to remove the cork than with a regular corkscrew

The picture level is mounted on the back of a picture frame. An indicator arm swings into view if the picture is hanging crooked. Otherwise the indicator stays hidden

Baseball's split-season format to be revised

By TERRY TAYLOR AP Sports Writer

The split-season format, adopted by club owners in hopes of salvaging the rest of the 1981 baseball season, will be revised to prevent the possibility of a team deliberately losing games to gain a playoff berth.

"We're going to change it, at least make an adjustment in it to preclude any possibility of a team losing a game to get ahead." Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said Sunday in an interview with ABC Sports.

"We're not going to have that happen. We'll have an announcement in a day or two." he said.

Kuhn, meanwhile., also said he would not discipline Manager Tony LaRussa of the Chicago White Sox who, along with most of his players, told the Chicago Tribune he would purposely lose a four-game series with the Oakland A's if it meant getting into the playoffs.

LaRussa later said he would favor forfeiting a game rather than being placed in a position of deciding whether to try to lose.

Soon after the 50-day players' strike ended July 31, club owners voted to split the remainder of the 1981 season and named as first-half winners the four teams in first place in their divisions when the strike began June 12.

If a first-half winner repeated, it would play the team in its division with the next-best two-half record. Owners had hoped the split season would create interest for teams which fared poorly in the first half, but would be given a shot at a second-half crown.

Dick Young, sports columnist for the New York Daily News, reported Sunday that a revised plan would call for a change in the way a second-place team is chosen.

The report said a team that finishes second in the second season would be given the wild-card spot, not the team that finishes with the second-best percentage for the two halves combined.

Longhorns must stay healthy to win

By JACK KEEVER

Associated Press Writer AUSTIN, Texas (AP) -After a near-national football championship in 1977. Texas has slipped in the football rankings, and Coach Fred Akers says the Longhorns must stay healthy to rebound.

"I'll guarantee you health is the No. 1 factor," Akers said. "The (Southwest) conference is an exciting one because the talent is distributed so evenly. That tells you that keeping players healthy is as important as anything you can name."

Five running backs and guard Joe Shearin and tackle John Tobolka on the left side of the offensive line were sidelined with injuries for part of last year as Texas fell

In 1979 the loss of starting backs A.J. "Jam" Jones and Rodney Tate late in the season ruined a possible outstanding year as Texas dropped its final two games and finished 9-3.

"It's our year to stay healthy," Akers said in an interview. "I hope it (string of injuries) has run its course. The last two years we were hurt badly, but we're through with that

Whether it is Texas' year to return to the Cotton Bowl as SWC champions depends largely on the play of Rick McIvor at quarterback.

Akers granted Donnie Little's request to switch from starting quarterback to wide receiver in spring training, and he installed McIvor, a 6-foot-4 junior with a strong throwing arm, as the No. 1 quarterback.

"Quarterback is the key for us," Akers said. "We're not proven there. ... It's a big question mark. You have to be honest about it. ... I don't know that I remember a team that won the championship that didn't have an established quarterback. It may have been us in '77.

Jones returns for his senior year with 2,040 yards rushing. and the line is the largest in Akers' five years as head coach at Texas. Akers describes 260-pound tackle Terry Tausch as a "bona fide" All-American, and he rates center Mike Babb -"the strongest football player we've had around here" - as another possible all-star

Defensive leaders include tackle Kenneth Sims, 6-6 and 265, and linebackers Doug Shankle and Bruce Scholtz. Kenneth Sims has got a shot at being the best lineman in college football," said Akers.

Akers has been described in published reports as a man under pressure to win big in 1981, but he said, "I feel the same way I've felt any other season I've coached. A coach who's worth his salt gets involved in pressure only when it comes from within himself. Good coaches don't pay any attention to outside pressures. They put enough on themselves - they want to

"All I can ask is that they (the Longhorns) go out there and do the best they can,' said Akers. I can't ask them to do any more. If our best doesn't get us there, someone

Rangers' Honeycutt blanks Boston

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - A guest appearance by the San Diego Chicken, Don Zimmer's 30th wedding anniversary and a continuous threat of rain could not detract from the pitching performances that highlighted the last meeting of the season between Boston and Texas.

A pair of left-handers, Ranger Rick Honeycutt and Boston rookie Bob Ojeda, hooked up in a sparkling pitchers' duel that was decided by a scratch infield hit, some shaky defense and one solid single.

"Both pitchers should have one," said Boston manager Ralph Houk, after Sunday night's 3-0 loss to Texas in the season finale between the two clubs.

Texas took the series 6 games to 3 'Geez, what a game he pitched,' Texas manager Zimmer said of Honeycutt, 8-1, who scattered six hits and pitched his way out of a serious 7th inning jam to log the first complete game by a Ranger pitcher since the end of the baseball strike.

"I felt I had super command of my sinker, especially when I needed it, Honeycutt said. "And that is the key."

They (Red Sox) have a big, strong lineup, but you'll do OK if you can keep the ball down against them. It was Honeycutt's fourth shutout of the season, and his fifth straight win. But Ojeda was just as strong until the Rangers put together a single, two walks and an infield chopper for the only run Honeycutt would need. That came in the sixth inning Al Oliver singled and stole second, Buddy Bell was walked intentionally and Billy Sample was walked unintentionally. loading the bases.

Bill Stein brought Oliver home with a high infield bouncer.

The Red Sox mounted their most serious threat in the seventh. Jim Rice singled and Tony Perez followed with a weak tapper back to the pitcher's mound. But Honeycutt threw the ball into center field, Perez reached first and Rice hustled to third with none

Honeycutt then got Joe Rudi and Gary Allenson on foul pop-ups and Glenn Hoffman on a tapper back to the fround to save the shutout

Texas added insurance in the eighth on a bizarre series of plays that got Houk ejected:

Buddy Bell singled and Bill Stein walked. Leon Roberts drove Bell home with a double and Jim Sundberg was walked intentionally to load the bases. Mario Mendoza bounced one back to reliever Bill Campbell, who threw to home for the force on Stein. But when catcher Allenson tried to throw Mendoza out at first, the ball hit Mendoza in the back and Roberts more. Ever. When you have the thing operated on twice and they try to strap it down tight, well, it doesn't look good," Dallas coach Tom Landry said after conferring with doctors in the Anaheim Stadium training room.

'I would think the chances are slim for him to play again. I hate to speak for Randy Hughes and the doctors, Landry said, "But I know that after you operate on a shoulder twice that if you have to go in there again, then the chance of having a good shoulder for football is very limited. He'll have a good shoulder for life, but not for

Hughes was trying to tackle rookie fullback Jairo Penaranda when his shoulder was dislocated. He then slowly walked to the sideline and slammed his helmet to the ground

Astros shut out Padres on Niekro's two-hitter

Houston knuckleballer Joe Niekro hasn't forgotten an appearance at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium against the Padres just prior to the beginning of the baseball strike. But it certainly wasn't a memorable performance for the veteran right-hander.

The Padres belted Niekro for eight hits and six runs in 3 1-3 innings en route to a 7-5 victory over the Astros on June 4.

Only starting pitcher Steve Mura and outfielder Ruppert Jones could manage hits off Niekro as the veteran right-hander teamed with Dave Smith to blank San Diego for the second straight day. Since scoring a first-inning run in a 5-1 loss to Houston Friday night, the punchless Padres have gone 26 innings since scoring a run. The Astros, off to a 5-2 start in the second half of the season, notched their 12th shutout of the year and lowered their team earned run average to 2.76 with

"I'd say. 'You're writing Joo long - she still does and this is the way I'd say it," added Ms. Van Buren, whose real identity is 63-year-old Pauline Phillips of Beverly

"My stuff was published and it looked awfully good in print. I guess she felt threatened because she said. 'I'm not sending any more letters; my editors don't want me to,' and she yanked them away. So I thought, I can do

Ms. Van Buren began her own column in the San Francisco Chronicle 85 days after Ms. Landers first appeared in the Chicago Sun-Times. The resulting feud lasted eight years. "I didn't hurt her. I helped her. I didn't set out to compete. I simply took the opportunity," Ms. Van Buren told the Journal Ms. Van Buren also revealed that Ms. Landers has had a face-lift. "She has been hurt more in her life than I," Ms. Van Buren said, referring to her sister's 1975 divorce after 36 years of

- Decontamination of highly radioactive water at the damaged Three Mile Island nuclear plant could begin in about two weeks, a spokesman for the plant's owner says.

TMF water

clean up will

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP)

begin soon

The $10 million water purification process, known as the Submerged Demineralizer System, has been tested on less contaminated water at TMI. John Fidler, a spokesman for Metropolitan Edison, said Sunday

The system uses a ion exchange to remove radioactive chemicals from the water in a process that has been compared to the workings of a water softener. Once the chemicals are removed from the water, they are concentrated in resins, which are easier to handle and dispose of than water. The system was designed for use on more than 600,000 gallons of heavily contaminated water in the basement of the reactor containment building at TMI.

Murder charges are filed in yachting mystery

HONOLULU (AP) - No one ever expected a body.

That's why no murder charges were

But when the waves heaved a battered aluminum trunk to the edge of Palmyra Lagoon in January, the last link in a chain of clues led to two murder indictments.

A couple walking on the beach after anchoring their boat at the remote Pacific atoll spotted the trunk, its lid agape. Inside were bones, the burned and broken skeleton of Muff Graham.

Muff and her husband, Malcolm, a wealthy San Diego yachting couple, had been listed as missing almost seven

Graham had been bid farewell in a "ceremony of aloha" near Diamond Head on Nov. 10, 1974. The sea swallowed the vanda orchids dropped from the decks of a half dozen yachts in memory of Mac and Muff. It seemed then that the sea had also swallowed

Mac and Muff, along with any clues to their disappearance.

All that remained was their vacht. the 38-foot ketch Sea Wind. Shorn of its figurehead and nameplate, painted lavender over its original gleaming blue, it was anchored at Honolulu's Coast Guard station.

The boat had been piloted 1,100 miles from Palmyra to Honolulu by Stephanie Stearns and Buck Walker, who were tried the following year and convicted on federal charges of stealing the yacht.

Miss Stearns served a year in prison and a year on probation, then moved to California. Walker, who had a criminal record to the 1950s, served 42 months in a federal penitentiary before escaping in July 1979.

In February, a month after the bones were found, a federal grand jury in Honolulu indicted Miss Stearns and Walker for killing Eleanor Lavern "Muff" Graham in "an attempt to perpetrate a burglary or robbery.

Miss Stearns, now 34, surrendered in March and pleaded innocent April 2. Her tr'al is to begin here Oct. 20.

Walker was arrested last Wednesday in Yuma, Ariz. and taken into federal custody. Barring any problems in transferring him to Hawaii, officials said they hoped to combine his trial of invitations to dinner where they sipped champagne from crystal goblets

But the Grahams, who sought solitude, were not to be left alone.

Three days before the Grahams arrived. Walker and Miss Stearns who were calling themselves Roy and Stephanie Allen - ran aground on the Palmyra reef. Neither the motor nor the radio in their leaky sailboat,"the Iola, was working.

The crews of two boats moored in the lagoon helped the "Allens" off the reef. They were a "hippie" couple, those sailors later testified. The description stemmed from the Iola's condition as much as Walker's wild appearance -

37 years old, he was missing several front teeth and had long red hair, a' bushy beard and tattoos on his chest and arms

With three dogs to feed and very littlefood, he started felling coconut trees with a chain saw and shooting fish with a gun. The seeds the couple brought in hopes of "living off the land" were eaten by crabs and birds.

In July and August, the "Allens" and the Grahams were the only people continuously moored at Palmyra. Other sailors who dropped anchor -Edwin Pollock of Honolulu, Thomas Wolfe of San Diego and others - later told of bad feelings simmering between

The fear of crime

BY WILLIAM H. WEBSTER

Director Federal Bureau of Investigation

There is afoot throughout this country today a steadily growing and vocal concern of citizens for their personal safety. They long for the days when they could walk the streets of their neighborhoods in peace or attend a town meeting at night. Today many believe that travel to such activities is no longer safe. It is a justified concern.

Not long ago, the FBI released the annual report on crime for 1979 that reflected a 9.1 percent increase in the numbers of violent crime. That is aggravated assault, rape, murder and similar violent activity. And, in the first six months of 1980, violent crime was up another 10 percent over the same period

But there exists more than concern. Many Americans are now gripped in the fear of crime. In many urban areas, that fear is dramatically altering the way of life for individuals. But rural areas are also experiencing crime almost unknown a

All of this was detailed in a recent report called the Figgie Report on Fear of Crime. Some of you may have seen it; if not, I certainly recommend it to you. It was a study on the effect of crime; and the first volume had to do with the fear of crime. It was found that today a majority of citizens in large cities live in fear of crime. The majority of our citizens now have guns in their homes, and many even go out of their way to dress plainly so that they will not draw attention to themselves in the

There are really three choices for a community in this situation — people in fear. Some people move away — to where it's a little safer. Others spend money on their personal protection and on protection for their property. And others band together collectively as a community to do something about it. We are seeing more and more of that around the country today, I am pleased to say.

We are seeing other levels of violence beyond the kinds of crime that I have talked to you about - murder, rape, aggravated assault, crimes of intimidation and extortion.

One that comes to mind: in late summer, 1980, a large bomb was rolled into a hotel casino at Stateline, Nevada, in the Lake Tahoe area. Three million dollars was demanded as the price of information on how to remove the bomb. The notes achnowledged that "the creator" - he acalled himself "the creator" - could not disarm the bomb, but he could tell them how to get it out safely. Any kind of angulation or tipping of the bomb would cause it to go off unless properly managed; and there were about 15 different toggle switches - a very sophisticated instrument.

Several hundred pounds of explosives were detonated using laser devices in a futile attempt on our part to defuse the bomb. We did it with the knowledge and consent of the owner of the hotel, after everyone had been evacuated and there was no risk to life. Had we done it any other way, I am satisfied that the risk would be quite high that anyone handling the bomb would be killed. We are seeing instances in which bombs are paced on board airplanes in baggage containers, or they go off as baggage is being unloaded. Recently, the president of one of our largest airlines was injured when a letterbomb delivered to him exploded.

sion in State explosive, went up three stories and dug a hole 60 feet into the ground when it went off. If we think of the potential for nuclear extortion in a large city, such as the problem all too realistically depicted in the current bestseller, the Fifth Horseman, we realize that we have major problems on our

Organized crime is being recognized today as the serious problem it is. We treat it as one of our top investigative priorities because it's costing the American people billions of dollars every year - according to Forbes magazine, as much as $150 billion in 1979

These are some of the costs that attach themselves to organized crime:

- Graft and corruption help undermine our civic, judicial, and legislative functions.

 Labor racketeering siphons money from union pension and welfare funds and deprives the members of fair representation - Major theft operations drive up the cost of consumer products and increase insurance premiums. - Activities such as cigarette smuggling cost the Treasury millions of dollars a year in lost tax revenues, thus impacting on the ability of the government to provide badly needed government services for the public. The major strategy of oganized crime is to get the "edge." If they enter into a ligitimate business - and this is now a common practice - they don't want to compete on equal By undercutting the legitimate businessman, combined with all the predatory tactics I have mentioned, organized crime can have a monopolizing effect on a particular segment of the economy. And this has been our experience. In all of these ways the quality of life in a community is diminished. Because the leadership of organized crime is well insulated, we are employing an approach that includes long - term investigations and the use of such sensitive techniques as selected informants, undercover operations, and court authorized wiretaps The long - term investigation helps us understand how these organizations work and who controls them. These techniques make it possible to get around the secrecy, loyalty, and fear induced silence that protect organized crime. Our approach is beginning to produce results. In fiscal year 1980, our investigations led to 597 convictions of organized crime members. At the end of that same period, there were 782

organized crime members and associates awaiting adjudication. Many of these convictions and pending cases involved major organized crime figures. On November 14, 1980, the entire ruling hierarchy of the Los Angeles organized crime family was convicted of racketeering and extortion charges. This case was initiated with the assistance of an informant who had close contact with the family leadership. He put these individuals in contact with an FBI undercover operation that operated under a front pornography business. On November 21, the boss of one of New York's organized crime families was convicted of racketeering, racketeering conspiracy to commit bankruptcy fraud.

I have catalogued some of the problems that are having a debilitating effect on our lives. These are challenges that confront the FBI and all 'law enforcement in the days immediately ahead of us. But citizens have responsibilities too. This is a community problem.

As citizens, we should continue to speak out against those who for too long have been doing us out of too much.
