Citizens group asks AG investigation of shooting

BY SHEILA ECCLES
Staff Writer

SANFORD — A petition calling for an Attorney General's investigation into the shooting death of 6666 Ranch foreman James Grandstaff, 31, by Borger police officers who apparently mistook him for a fleeing fugitive, is being circulated for signatures today in the Borger area.

And Joe Gatlin, the oldest stepson of Grandstaff, said a blank check from part-owner of the 6666 ranch Miss Ann Phillips has been sent to Houston attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes to accept the case on the family's behalf. Gatlin said the check was accepted.

However, a spokesman for Haynes said today Haynes has made no decision on accepting the case or not.

Spokesman Mary Hardesty of the Attorney General's office said today it was very unusual for the office to receive a request for investigation from someone other than the prosecuting attorney in the case.

"We could go in and investigate the case due to Article 20.03 of the Code of Criminal Procedure that states the Attorney General, Criminal District Attorney or County Attorney is entitled to go before the grand jury and inform them of all offenses liable to indictment," Hardesty said.

"It has been the policy of this office to go in on the request of the local prosecuting attorney. It is our policy not to intervene unless asked by the local prosecuting attorney. This is a different case from anything we have seen. We would consider the petition, but it would be unusual or at least unlikely for the Attorney General's Office to come on our own without the request of the local prosecutor. If the grand jury asked us to come in, the grand jury is a part of the criminal justice system, so we could apply Code 20.03," Hardesty said.

About 60 concerned citizens from Hutchinson and Carson Counties voted unanimously Wednesday night in the Sanford Community Center to have the signed petition presented to Ray Hudson, brother-in-law of James Grandstaff, on Aug. 26, who will then present the petition to the Attorney General in Austin.

The petition originally was stated to call for an investigation into the "murder" of Grandstaff. But after some discussion, the group of citizens voted unanimously to strike the word "murder" from the petition and insert the words "shooting death" in its place.

Rumor surrounds the Aug. 11 early morning shooting of the well-liked and well-known Grandstaff. Borger law enforcement officials have turned the case over to Texas State Ranger Jim Gillespie.

who has headed "Citizens for Grandstaff," said, "We are not here to conduct the investigation ourselves, but we feel that the facts in the case of the shooting have been hidden from us. It has been handled as a cover-up. Even the media has not been able to report any facts. The law enforcement and county officials are just not saying anything."

of the Borger Police Department on the night of the shooting," Tracy Wilson of Borger said.

"We need the law, but we may need to improve our officers on the police and sheriff's department. They are underpaid to go out and put their life on the line for us. If we want better officers, we should form a committee to take care of it," Wilson continued.

"We should take steps to stop this from happening again in the future," Wilson said.

Jack Stroud, Borger citizen, said, "It is causing me some concern that a Texas Ranger from Dumas is conducting the investigation. He is probably on a first-name basis with the Borger Police officers involved in the shooting. In a larger city when something like this happens, the officers involved are usually put on suspension until the evidence is in."

Some citizens at the meeting felt the facts need to be investigated before the case goes to the grand jury or it could be "swept under the carpet."

It was also suggested that the Citizens For Grandstaff take no action until after the decision of the two grand juries who will be hearing the case.

"I would like the grand juries to know that when they meet and give an indictment or not, there are 40 or more concerned citizens looking over their shoulder," Ron Boyd said.

"There are so many prejudices in the case already, that I feel if it does come to trial, the trial will not be held in Hutchinson or Carson Counties — it will be moved on a change of venue," Tracy Wilson said.

Joe Shaver, longtime friend of the Grandstaff family, asked to have the records of the police officers at the scene of the shooting investigated.

"I lost a friend in the shooting, and I wonder if there was a professional (certified) police officer at the scene that night. It seems to me that none of the Borger police officer have gone to the police academy in a long time," Shaver said.

The eldest teenage step-son of James Grandstaff was present at the Sanford meeting. He hung back and listened to the proceedings — never saying a word, until it was over.

"I could say a lot about what happened, but it just wouldn't be right — not now," the boy said.

Family asks Racehorse Haynes to take the case

Gillespie said Tuesday that he can release no information about the case before it goes to the grand juries.

The case will be presented to the Carson County grand jury Aug. 24 and to the Hutchinson County grand jury Aug. 26.

In Wednesday night's meeting, Sanford businessman Jerry Forrest,

Forrest asked the group if anyone could say they were a witness to the shooting Tuesday, Aug. 11. No hands were raised.

"All we know about the incident right now is rumor," Forrest said.

"We don't know any facts in the case other than the fact that Grandstaff was shot. We should investigate the actions

Reagan was awake but went to bed unaware of dogfight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan was awake when the White House first learned of the dogfight between American and Libyan fighter planes but went to bed without being told.

By the time he was informed six hours later, word had gone out to the vice president and administration officials from Maine to California and at least one key member of Congress as well as the nation through the news media and world leaders through U.S. embassies.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said top Reagan aides decided not to disturb him because "there was no need for any presidential decisions."

Under sharp questioning from reporters, Speakes would not say who was in charge during the six hours.

The Pentagon said two American F-14s involved in a routine naval exercise shot down two Libyan fighters that had fired upon them 60 miles off the coast of Libya at 1:20 a.m. EDT Wednesday.

That was 10:20 p.m. PDT Tuesday in Los Angeles, where Speakes said Reagan was entertaining his son Michael and other guests in his $750-a-day suite at the Century Plaza Hotel.

"His family and his grandchild were still up there with him, so he was not asleep at 10:20 p.m.," Speakes said, adding later that he would refuse to ask Reagan what time he went to bed.

Reagan was called at 4:24 a.m. PDT Wednesday by presidential counselor Edwin Meese III, Speakes said.

By then, he said, many key officials of the National Security Council had been monitoring the situation through the night, along with Meese and national security adviser Richard V. Allen, who had been notified about 11 p.m. EDT.

Meese said it was his decision not to disturb the president earlier.

"There was no unusual incident that really went beyond the decision-making authority there at the exercise," Meese said. "If there had been the necessity of action by the president, obviously he would have been contacted immediately."

The only two decisions needed — whether to return fire on the Libyan planes and whether to continue the military exercise — already had been handled by the fleet commander, Speakes said.

Asked whether Reagan should have been given the opportunity to overrule the fleet commander, Speakes said, "That wasn't necessary."

He said the fleet commander followed "standard rules of engagements" previously approved by the administration for such situations.

When Reagan was awakened, Speakes said, he "indicated he regretted there was an attack on the aircraft that made necessary the action. The president's reaction when he was told was that it was handled in a proper manner."

DEFENSE SECRETARY Caspar Weinberger, in an emotional statement to about 6,000 members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, says the Navy's shooting down of two Libyan planes was justified to protect the freedom of the seas. "We had no alternative," Weinberger said Wednesday before the VFW's 82nd national convention. Delegates gave him a standing ovation. (AP Laserphoto)

Jordan joins Arab states in wave of criticism against U.S.

By The Associated Press

Syria, joining other Arab states in condemning the United States for downing two Libyan warplanes, today said the incident was "American aggression against Libya and Syria alike."

It declared Syria was "ready to carry out its national obligations toward sister Libya." The obligations were not spelled out, however.

Syria's state radio, monitored in Beirut, said the vice premier and foreign minister, Abdul Halim Khaddam, made the Syrian position clear in a telephone talk with Libya's second in command, Maj. Abdel Salam Jalloud.

Damascus Radio also criticized "those Arabs who still advocate attempts to neutralize the United States in the Mideast conflict. America is the No. 1 enemy of the Arabs and should be treated as such."

The jets were downed 60 miles off the Libyan coast Wednesday during 6th Fleet maneuvers. The Pentagon said one of the Libyan planes opened fire, and the Navy jets shot them down. Libya claims a 200-mile territorial zone, but the United States recognizes only a three-mile limit.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said today that no U.S. naval maneuvers were planned in the near future near Libya, and "we don't expect more trouble." He spoke to reporters in London where he arrived for four days of talks with British Defense Secretary John Nott.

America's 14 NATO allies thanked the Reagan administration for briefing them swiftly on the incident during a meeting Wednesday in Brussels and made little other comment. But Italy's Foreign Ministry hinted that Libya provoked the incident and assailed the Libyans' "expansionist aims."

The Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, one of the smaller guerrilla organizations, called for an "immediate oil and economic embargo against the United States." But none of the oil-producing nations including Libya gave any indication that they were considering a boycott.

Oil industry sources said since there is a sizable surplus of oil on the world market, the United States would have no difficulty replacing the 475,000 barrels a day Libya ships to the United States.

Some oil industry officials expressed fears that Libya might nationalize the holdings of American companies operating there. They include Occidental Petroleum, Exxon, Mobil, Conoco, Marathon Oil and Amerada Hess. But the companies reported their Libyan operations were still normal Wednesday.

There was also no report of any retaliation against the 2,000 American citizens living in Libya. Most of them are oil company employees and their families, and they have kept their distance from the Libyan population since the U.S. Embassy in Tripoli was sacked, burned and closed in December 1979.

In Beirut, Lebanon, the U.S. Embassy asked the Lebanese government for extra protection as newspapers and radio stations voiced fears today that pro-Libyan groups would mount bombing and rocketing attacks on American targets in Lebanon.

Another radical faction within Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, the Libyan-backed Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, accused the United States of air piracy and "deliberate provocations designed to set the stage for an attack on Libya."

Iran's Foreign Ministry called the downing of the Libyan planes an "expansion of American crimes and aggression throughout the world" and urged Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy not to "shy away from a confrontation" with America.

Housing program eyed

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

Local city and county officials are taking a look at an embryonic federal organization, the Panhandle Regional Housing Finance Corporation, as a possible solution to the strapped housing situation here.

City Manager Mack Wofford and Chamber of Commerce manager Floyd Sackett attended an organizational planning session for the federal funding program in Amarillo Wednesday.

Pampa commissioners last week approved a resolution allowing the city to become a member of the financing program. Gray County commissioners passed a similar resolution later in the week. The county officials also approved Marion John of Pampa as the official Gray County representative to the financing program. John was unable to attend the meeting Wednesday.

Wofford said at the meeting Wednesday, representatives of Kidder, Peabody and Company of Amarillo explained the purpose of the corporation to representatives of 22 Panhandle counties to be included in the project.

Wofford said the persons assembled at the informal meeting agreed to do the following:

—Form a main body composed of representatives from each of the 22 counties. If this body proved to be too large a group, an executive committee could be elected later.

—An organizational meeting would be conducted on Aug. 26 at 10:30 a.m. in the Potter County Commission Room in the Potter County Court House.

Sackett said the finance corporation could "definitely" be of assistance to the housing problems in Pampa.

"It will speed up building and help us get the housing we desperately need," Sackett commented. "We have a critical housing shortage here."

The organization will sell non-taxable bonds at a lower interest rate to financial institutions, so that the lenders will be able to loan money to developers at a lower interest rate. Sackett said several developers have expressed wishes to building apartment complexes in Pampa, but were unable to do so because of the high interest rates.

The plan is to work for multi-family programs only, officials said.

Pilots, controllers divided on sky safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unions representing the pilots who fly commercial planes and the controllers who guide them from the ground are divided over the issue of whether it is safe to fly with 12,000 controllers off the job.

The Air Line Pilots Association, with 33,000 members, said Wednesday that the skies are safe despite the Aug. 3 walkout by members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization.

But PATCO president Robert E. Poli quickly labeled ALPA's assessment a sham.

"The pilots do not want to say it's unsafe because then people would say 'Why are you flying?' and they'd have to stop working, too," Poli said as the two unions exchanged charges. He accused the pilot union of trying to destroy PATCO.

Pilot union president John J. O'Donnell reminded reporters Wednesday of past antagonisms between pilots and controllers and accused Poli of "holding our (airline) companies hostage" to solve his union's problems with the government. He said as many as 2,000 pilots might be laid off because of reduced operations caused by the strike.

O'Donnell also gave a boost to the Reagan administration's argument that the airways are safe despite the firing of 12,000 striking controllers and contrary claims by Poli.

"I can say without equivocation the ATC (air traffic control) system in this country is safe. If it were not safe, we would be the first to speak out."

O'Donnell said at a news conference.

Taking aim at Poli's union, O'Donnell, a former pilot and carrier captain, added, "I do not accept those who have characterized it as unsafe for their own, trying to achieve their own objective."

O'Donnell said he has received thousands of calls from pilots praising the way the system has been operating since the strike.

"The attitude of the controllers operating the system today is one of cooperation with the pilots."

Airlines pilot aborts landing in near miss

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — An American Airlines official says a pilot used good judgment when he chose to abort a landing rather than touch down on a Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport runway as a second plane was taking off.

"Our guy was coming in for a landing and for some reason the aircraft on the runway delayed his takeoff roll," said spokesman Al Becker Wednesday of the incident, which involved an American Airlines 727 that was landing at DFW Tuesday.

"The pilot felt he could have done it either way," Becker said. "He could have touched down just as the other airplane was lifting off the runway, but it was his judgment that he did not want to do that."

Becker said the pilot decided to pull up and pass the aircraft on the ground, then banked his plane and was cleared by the tower for a landing on another runway about 10 minutes later. The flight was arriving from Cleveland.

Becker said the maneuver was "a totally safe, totally routine" action that occurs from time to time and was "total pilot judgment."

The second plane involved in the incident was not identified.

The Federal Aviation Administration in Fort Worth said it had no record of the incident, but a spokesman for local striking air traffic controllers said they monitored it.

Pampans jailed on drug charges

Three Pampans were arrested by city police late Wednesday on warrants charging them with the possession of illegal drugs.

The arrests followed an investigation by police which began on Aug. 19, when detective Ken Neal received information of suspected drug dealings at the residence at 1306 E. Browning.

At 11:40 p.m., police officers activated a search warrant at the East Browning address, confiscating marijuana seeds, and number of other controlled substances.

Taken into custody were James

Eugene Denison, 31, and Rebecca Sue Denison, 26, both of 1306 E. Browning. A third man, Marvin Ray King, 24, of 1306 E. Browning, was also arrested by police.

The Denison couple were each charged with possession of dihydrocodeine - a first-degree felony, police said. King was charged with possession of marijuana.

Bond for the three Pampans was set at $5,000 each by Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford, Chief of Police J. J. Ryzman said.

NAVY FIGHTER JET? The only thing that resembled a Navy fighter jet in the Pampa area Wednesday was on the side of this roan mare. The unusual marking was not inherited by her colt. Both animals belong to Louis

U.S. Description Of Dogfight

HOW IT HAPPENED. This graphic details events in the brief confrontation Wednesday between two U.S. Navy F-14 jets and two Soviet-built Libyan SU-22s about 60 miles from the Libyan coast in the Mediterranean Sea, according to U.S. Defense Department sources interviewed by The New York Times. Two Navy jets, involved in routine exercises in international airspace, were shot at by the Libyan planes, and retaliated by shooting down the SU-22s, the Defense Department indicated. Libya claims its airspace extends 200 miles into the sea. (AP Laserphoto)

Brady undergoes fourth operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House press secretary James S. Brady underwent a fourth major operation today in hopes of sealing a leak in his brain cavity that has slowed his recovery from the head wound suffered in the assassination attempt on President Reagan.
In a procedure described by a medical spokesman as major but not particularly delicate, surgeons said they would attempt to seal the leak, which has allowed the spinal fluid to enter Brady's sinuses.
The surgery began about 8 a.m. EDT, said George Washington University Hospital spokesman Rich Ellis.
Brady was described by friends as in good spirits on the eve of the operation, and he was permitted to leave the hospital for a dinner with friends two nights before the surgery.

Dr. Dennis O'Leary, clinical dean at the hospital where Brady has been treated since the shooting, said the persistent leakage of fluid presents a risk of infection.
The operation, performed by Dr. Arthur Koberne, the neurosurgeon credited with saving Brady's life in the dramatic hours after the March 30 shooting, and Dr. Norman L. Barr Jr., a nose and throat specialist on the hospital faculty, was expected to take several hours.
Brady's physicians have been concerned for some time about incomplete healing of the normally airtight seal around the brain. Less than a month after the shooting, the wounded press secretary underwent surgery to repair a membrane leak which triggered a potentially dangerous buildup of air pressure on his brain.

A few weeks later, Brady was confined to a reclining position in bed for 10 days after doctors thought a few drops of spinal fluid had leaked from his nose. Although they hoped that leak would heal itself, Brady experienced another discharge of fluid on Aug. 3 after he suffered a major epilepsy-like seizure that apparently created a sharp increase in pressure inside the skull.

Some overseas Social Security beneficiaries cheating the system

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of Social Security's 330,000 beneficiaries living overseas are cheating the system through fake marriages, adoptions and other ruses to fatten their monthly checks, the agency's head says.
Social Security Commissioner John A. Svahn said he's looking for ways to ferret out the fraud in the overseas payments, which go to people in 60 countries and total $1 billion a year. Svahn said he is weighing legislative options, including the possibility of asking Congress to bar payments to any new dependent once a worker leaves this country.
Svahn said in an interview Wednesday that the problem of overseas payments "is not a new one."
"In certain areas of the world we have real problems," he said.
He said Mexico, Italy and the Philippines, where large numbers of Social Security retirees reside, are a source of many problems.
In addition, he said it is hard to find out when a retiree dies in some countries.

Rep. G. William Whitehurst, R-Va., has obtained an unpublished draft of a General Accounting Office report that estimates nearly 70 percent of those getting benefits abroad are non-U.S. citizens.
Whitehurst, who last year successfully authored a bill to cut off Social Security disability payments to prisoners, is preparing legislative proposals of his own.
He said the GAO report indicated that while dependents and survivors account for only 40 percent of the total 36 million beneficiaries, they are far more numerous among those getting payments overseas.
He said dependents and survivors account for 73 percent of those drawing benefits in Mexico, 71 percent in the Philippines, 51 percent in Greece, 47 percent in Italy and 45 percent in Canada.
Social Security figures from December 1979, when 312,000 people abroad were getting checks, show that Mexico had 54,000 beneficiaries, Canada 47,000, Italy 42,000 and the Philippines 35,000.

Peter Loomis, a Whitehurst aide, said GAO auditors found instances of marriages where the elderly retiree gained a wife and family who were drawing benefits long after his death. He said that in one instance, a retiree in Mexico whose earnings in the United States totaled only $1,531 died at age 81 in 1968 and left a young widow and retarded son who to date have received $22,700 from Social Security.
Whitehurst fears that large numbers of illegal aliens now working in this country may exacerbate the problem in years ahead.
It is not known how many people who worked in this country illegally are getting benefits.
Svahn said that the money flowing abroad "isn't that big in the total Social Security program," which is paying $140 billion in benefits this year.
"It's a very small, small piece. But it's the kind of a piece that people look at and it causes the system to lose credibility," he said.

French question 22 anti-Khomeini Iranians

PARIS (AP) — French authorities questioned 22 anti-Khomeini Iranians today to determine if they violated an 18th century piracy law by bringing a hijacked gunboat into French territorial waters, government sources said.
The commandos, who seized the French-built, 160-foot Tabarzin off southern Spain last week, were brought to the French capital from Hyeres, a town near the Mediterranean port of Toulon, where the boat was anchored. They turned the boat over to the French earlier Wednesday.
Government officials declined to comment on the interrogations. But the sources said authorities apparently were trying to determine if an 1825 piracy law applied to the commandos. The law defines pirates as those who navigate a boat without proper legal documents.
Four members of the gunboat's original 31 crew members have said they do not want to return to Iran, the government sources said.
"The possibility of whether, under the law, asylum can be accorded the members of the monarchist commando is being studied," French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson said.
"The security of the commandos will be guaranteed and they will be under the laws of our country," said a spokesman from President Francois Mitterrand's office.
"Finally, when all the necessary controls have been executed, the gunboat will be returned to Iranian authorities."
Two Iranian navy officers arrived in Toulon Wednesday to prepare to take the Tabarzin to Iran, government sources said. The boat's captain and another officer were also aboard.
Iranian Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani hinted in a speech broadcast by Tehran Radio today and monitored in Beirut, Lebanon, that French ships and planes might be hijacked in the Persian Gulf unless France extradites the commandos.

"If your planes and ships are from now on pirated in the Persian Gulf and we declared support for such thefts, how can you object?" Rafsanjani said.
He said the commandos were "thieves wanted in their own country for prosecution."

Polish printers returning to work

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The nation's printers went back to work today, ending their two-day strike demanding increased access to the media for the independent labor federation Solidarity, a union spokesman said.
"The action of press-less days is over," said a communique issued today by the striking workers at Warsaw's major printing plant.
Solidarity leader Lech Walesa visited the plant early today to encourage workers to return to work in the spirit of unity, a spokesman said.

"Most of us would like to carry on with the stoppage, but union unity comes first," said a spokesman at the plant, where workers began preparing Friday's editions of the nation's official Communist Party paper.
But for the second day, newspapers didn't make the streets in Warsaw, where Poland's major dailies are printed and published.
Editors of Zycie Warszawy, Warsaw's most popular newspaper, decided not to prepare an edition today after a blockade by the printers prevented distribution of 5,000 copies run off Wednesday despite the strike. Instead the editors went to work on the paper to be published Friday, after the strike ended.

Members of the Warsaw daily's staff said the editors offered to print a communique on the strike if the printers would go back to work. But the negotiations broke off Wednesday when Solidarity strike leader Seweryn Jaworski from the Warsaw chapter demanded that the paper put out a special strike edition without items from the official news agency PAP.

Storm moving over Outer Banks

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — A growing Tropical Storm Dennis pushed across the vacation resorts of North Carolina's Outer Banks with high winds and stinging rain today after claiming two lives in a sweep along the East Coast.
The National Weather Service said the storm was on a northeasterly track that would take it out over the Atlantic where conditions were favorable for it to build into a full-fledged hurricane later today.
At 9 a.m., forecasters located the storm's board center near latitude 35.5 north, longitude 75.5 east, about 25 miles north of Cape Hatteras. Top winds were clocked at 55 mph, mainly in squalls.
Air Force reconnaissance reports indicated the storm was strengthening.

Gale warnings were up from Cape Lookout north to Chincoteague Inlet, including the Outer Banks, and on Chesapeake Bay from Windmill Point southward.
The weather service said the storm hit land about 4 a.m. near Salter Path on the Bogue Banks and moved into Pamlico Sound southwest of Cape Hatteras.
Storm-wise residents of Wilmington and the Outer Banks took the storm in stride, but many tourists fled.
Some tidal flooding and beach erosion was reported on the Outer Banks. Tides about 3 1/2 feet above normal and surf from 8 feet to 13 feet were expected.
The National Weather Service said the storm no longer posed a danger to South Carolina by Wednesday night.

E.G. Jones, 60, and Evelyn Bement, 65, both of North Charleston, S.C., were killed in what authorities called a storm-related accident in the town where they lived. Police said water on a street apparently caused another car to go out of control and collide head-on with the car driven by Jones. Ms. Bement, who was a passenger in Jones' car, apparently died of a heart attack after the crash.
Tides along the coast ranged about a foot above normal. Offshore seas ran 4 to 6 feet, causing a rough surf along the beaches.
The storm dumped up to 13 inches of rain on South Florida. Boats and four-wheel-drive vehicles were used Tuesday to evacuate flooded neighborhoods southwest of Miami.

Man charged after school wing evacuated

HOUSTON (AP) — A 40-year-old man was charged with felony criminal mischief Wednesday after a shooting incident which led to evacuation of a section of a nearby school.
Leroy Allen Marsh was held Thursday in lieu of $40,000 bond. He was charged after at least 25 shots were fired from inside his apartment from a 16-gauge shotgun, a 45-caliber pistol and a 22-caliber rifle.
Police said about 500 H.M. Landrum Junior High School students were moved out of a wing of the building which bordered the apartment complex where the two-hour incident occurred.

Gail Chapman, executive secretary of the Spring Branch Independent School District, said about 1,000 students were attending the second day of school. About 500 of them were moved from the east wing into the cafeteria as a precaution, she said.
Marsh surrendered to police at 11:50 a.m. after talking with police hostage negotiators. Lt. Jim Gunn of the Special Weapons and Tactics team said.

Also arrested was Patricia Ann Wold, 28, who police said was arguing with Marsh before the shooting began in the apartment they shared.
Gunn said Ms. Wold tried to rush past police into the apartment. She was put in the back seat of a patrol car while negotiations continued and kicked out a window in her attempt to get out, he said.
Ms. Wold was charged with misdemeanor criminal mischief. Her bond was set at $400.

Hereford jubilee underway this weekend

The 1981 Hereford Town and Country Jubilee will get underway Thursday at 9 a.m. with the start of the Deaf Smith County Fair held at the Hereford Community Center.
In addition to the two-day County Fair, Friday's activities will include the Texas Women's Western Art Show to be held through Sunday at the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame. The hours for the Art Show will be 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday and Saturday and at noon to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

Special tours of the Deaf Smith County Museum and the Texas Historical sight - E.B. Black Home, will also be available to those interested.
Friday evening at 7 p.m. the Town and Country Jubilee All Girl Rodeo will kick-off at the Hereford Riders Arena. The rodeo performances will be held Friday and Saturday with rodeo dances to follow each night. The final performances will be Sunday afternoon at 1:30 p.m.
The big day of the Jubilee will be

Saturday with the start of the Town and Country Jubilee Parade at 11 a.m., followed by the city wide barbeque at Damron Park. In addition, the park will be turned into a "Fun Fiesta" all day with over 40 booths that will feature fun, food, and entertainment throughout the afternoon.
The entire weekend will provide something for everyone.
For more information contact the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce.

Misdemeanor charge not enough in youths' deaths, leader says

GROESBECK, Texas (AP) — A black leader contends misdemeanor charges will amount to no more than a slap on the hand for three law enforcement officers accused of criminally negligent homicide in the drownings of three black teen-agers in their custody.

The officers were suspended from duty Wednesday after State District Judge P. K. Reiter set bond at $1,000 on each count — or $3,000 for each officer — and ordered them to return to the courtroom Friday for arraignment.

Limestone County sheriff's deputy Kenny Elliott, reserve deputy Kenneth Archie and county probation officer David Drummond were indicted on the misdemeanor charge Tuesday.

The offense carries a maximum penalty of one year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

Evelyn Baker, mother of one of the victims, said that she was disappointed that the officers were indicted on a misdemeanor charge.

"I believe it was more severe than that, and there should be more than a fine," she said.

Richard Dockery, regional director of the NAACP in Dallas, contended the officers' trials "would result in what amounts to a slap on the hand for three families in the loss of these three men."

He said the NAACP still plans to press federal officials "for civil rights findings and imposing the penalties called for under the law."

The Justice Department said June 22 it was investigating the drownings at the request of the NAACP.

The officers were indicted in the June 19 deaths of Carl Baker, 19, and Anthony Freeman, 18, both of Mexia, and Steve Booker, 19, of Dallas.

The teen-agers, who had been arrested for alleged possession of marijuana, were being ferried across Lake Mexia to a command post when the 14-foot boat capsized about 80 feet from shore. Testimony at a court of inquiry indicated the boat was designed to carry 500 to 600 pounds and had no life jackets or running lights.

The grand jury accused the three law officers of violating the Texas Water Safety Act.

The three youths were participating in an annual celebration of Juneteenth, a Texas holiday marking the day Texas slaves learned of the Emancipation Proclamation.

Elliott and Drummond, both white, and Archie, who is black, swam to safety when the boat flipped over just before midnight.

Drummond said he was not surprised by the indictment, adding: "The grand jury had an awful lot of pressure on them." The other two officers had no comment.

Sheriff Dennis Walker said he suspended Elliott and Archie, both 23, without pay pending the outcome of their trials. And chief probation officer Charles Wilson said Drummond, 32, "is not performing any responsibilities or duties for the probation office at this time."

But Wilson added the suspension "is temporary as far as I'm concerned."

Wilson said Drummond's suspension wouldn't hamper operations at his office, but Walker said the loss of the deputies would be a strain on his department.

"When your staff is that small and you lose two persons, it cripples the entire organization," he said. "The rest of us will have to take up the slack."

Oswald's widow wants grave opened to stop speculation

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The widow of Lee Harvey Oswald says she wants to exhume her husband's body because she "strongly believes the grave has been tampered with" and she is tired of "stupid speculation and theories."

The slender, 39-year-old former wife of the alleged killer of President John F. Kennedy filed suit in state district court Wednesday, asking that her husband's grave at Rose Hill Burial Park be opened and the body examined.

"My life is unbearable because every time a new theory came along, I suffered," she said. "I hope this (suit) will be for everybody's benefit."

Mrs. Porter's attorney, Jerry Pittman, said the suit was filed because of confidential conversations between members of the Warren Commission obtained in the past year showed some of the members felt Oswald's body had been moved and was either cremated or hidden.

The Warren Commission investigated the Nov. 22, 1963, shooting death of Kennedy and the slaying of Oswald by Dallas night club owner Jack Ruby two days later.

The Dallas attorney declined to reveal more information about the alleged conversations, saying the material would come out in the trial.

The case was assigned to State District Judge James Wright, who last September refused to grant British author Michael Eddowes' request to unearth the body.

Eddowes claims that a Soviet agent, not Oswald, is buried in the grave and that the agent took Oswald's place when the ex-Marine defected to the Soviet Union in 1959, where he met Mrs. Porter.

Attorneys for Eddowes appealed Wright's ruling. The appeal is scheduled to be heard in Fort Worth Sept. 10.

The suit Wednesday was filed against Lee Harvey Oswald's older brother Robert, a Wichita Falls businessman who last year opposed Eddowes' efforts to open the grave.

Robert Oswald declined comment on the suit, but his attorney, Craig Fowler of Dallas, called the move a "publicity stunt" and said the suit was based on "speculation, conjecture and hearsay."

Mrs. Porter testified in behalf of Eddowes, but said Wednesday she does not believe his theory and she received no money from him for testifying.

The suit filed on behalf of Mrs. Porter claims "probative evidence exists that the body allegedly buried in the grave marked Lee Harvey Oswald had been illegally moved and secretly hidden," without Mrs. Porter's approval.

The suit also alleges there is evidence the body in the grave is "an individual other than Lee Harvey Oswald."

Medfly dispute may be solved out of court

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas and the U.S. Department of Agriculture are trying to settle their dispute over control of the Mediterranean fruit without a court fight, says Attorney General Mark White's press secretary.

"The lines of communication are open. The USDA has indicated to us they want to see if the matter can be resolved without further litigation. We are in touch with both people in Washington with the USDA and with Commissioner Brown," said Mary Hardesty.

White sued the USDA Tuesday on behalf of Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown, seeking a federal court order compelling the USDA to quarantine all of California to contain the Medfly.

Mrs. Hardesty said White conferred by telephone Wednesday with two assistant secretaries of agriculture, John Ford and Bill McMillan.

"He feels something good might happen. ... He is optimistic they are going to resolve it," Mrs. Hardesty said of the attorney general.

Martin says he will talk to grand jury

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — State Rep. Mike Martin broke his silence late Wednesday, telling a Longview newspaper he will appear before a Travis County grand jury investigating an incident in which he was shot in the elbow by an unknown assailant.

In a copyright story today, The Longview News-Journal quoted Martin as saying he told Travis County Assistant District Attorney H. Allen Hill Wednesday he would appear before the grand jury with the stipulation that the date not be made public. Martin said Hill agreed to his request, the newspaper reported.

Martin said he had agreed to take a polygraph (lie detector) test if the grand jury requested one, if Martin is allowed to establish the ground rules for such a test.

The News-Journal said Gregg County Sheriff Bobby Weaver served as go-between in arranging for the telephone interview with Martin, who remains in seclusion.

While Martin was being interviewed, the newspaper reported, Weaver said he received anonymous information about a possible suspect in the July 31 shooting of Martin outside a recreational vehicle Martin used during the special session of the Texas Legislature.

Weaver declined to give the newspaper specific details about what the anonymous information he received, saying only, "We have received information on the local level that has possible connections to the shooting and we are investigating."

The sheriff said he expected to be able to determine by late today if the information is "solid."

Weaver acknowledged that the shooting took place outside his jurisdiction, but said there have been threatening telephone calls made to Martin, his family and friends at Longview. Weaver said he intends to fully investigate any offense in Gregg County.

Martin asked that his remarks in the two-and-one-half hour interview with two News-Journal editors be kept off the record except those pertaining to his grand jury appearance.

The state legislator said he has "a whole lot to tell," but will wait for the proper time before discussing the incident publicly, the newspaper reported.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Whither the Democrats?

The resounding rejection of old-line Democratic Party leadership implied in the House tax cut vote should be cause for reflection on the part of thoughtful Democrats and liberals. It may be that dogged defense of the remnants of the New Deal and Great Society, and kneejerk endorsement of whatever expansion of government care, be plausibly claimed to help the poor and the working man, is a political course that has little future.

Thoughtful liberals are already noticing the corner into which the Democratic leadership has permitted itself to be squeezed. In defending almost every government program, Democrats often find themselves on the side of the rich and the privileged, because so many government programs were either created by or have evolved into mechanisms that serve special interests. Michael Kinsley, writing in the July 25 edition of the liberal magazine "The New Republic" pinpoints some of the absurdities to which the current posture has led.

"When one has only limited influence, one saves it for important things like, um, agricultural price supports. The administration proposed saving the government a billion dollars, and consumers even more, simply by not raising price guarantees for dairy farmers. The House courageously rejected this callous idea. House Democrats also got an implied promise from Reagan to cooperate in an expanded sugar price support program. High sugar prices are something every decent society should guarantee its citizens, don't you think?"

Kinsley goes on in a similar vein. "In these difficult times, Medicare patients must expect to pay a larger contribution for their health care, but David Stockman went too far in proposing higher user fees for government services to private airplane and yacht owners. Reagan quietly ditched this shocking proposal, with the Democrats blessing."

It seems to us that Democrats, in the midst of their disarray, have an opportunity to assume a new role in American politics, a role not entirely inconsistent with the party's Jeffersonian origins. To be a liberal once meant to be skeptical of government and suspicious of the ambitions of the State. Democrats generally maintain such skepticism in regard to civil liberties and government efforts to control personal activities and personal expressions. Yet they endorse innumerable government intrusions in the economic sphere, on the grounds that they are somehow helping the disadvantaged.

In endorsing such intrusions, most Democrats show a commendable compassion and a genuine desire to help those who need help. Yet it should have become obvious by now that federal programs almost always make work for bureaucrats while doing little to provide genuine help to the poor and the disadvantaged. In clinging to these old concepts, the Democrats are in great danger of reducing their effective constituency to the most self-centered and shortsighted elements among government workers — those more concerned with personal security, empire-building and fat paychecks than with the opportunity for service that once drew people into government.

Most Democrats have long prided themselves on their intellectual independence and their courage in pursuing their ideas to logical conclusions. How sad it would be if this once-proud party were reduced to the status of lackeys of those who feed, directly or indirectly, at the government trough.

Fortunately, such a course is not inevitable. Democrats have an opportunity to resume a useful role as gadflies of government and thinkers of unorthodox thoughts. In many ways they are more favorably positioned than Republicans or conservatives to dismantle those aspects of government action that have proven themselves either ineffective or submissive to special interests. Such a role, in these times, demands the attitude of a renegade, of a promoter to social change, of a bold innovator. It may yet be true that Democrats generally still have these qualities in more abundance than do Republicans.

There are precedents even within the party. Many of the younger Democratic congressmen, even excluding the highly publicized "Boll Weevils" from the South, have shown an open-minded and critical attitude about big government. Democrats and consumerists have been in the forefront of certain moves toward regulatory reform. Former President Carter rode into the White House on a vague wave of "anti-Washington" and anti-bureaucratic sentiment, and lost popularity as he came to be perceived as just another politician. California's Governor Brown was at the height of his personal popularity when he was making his most unorthodox statements about trimming the role of government and reducing our expectations of endless government largesse.

It may not be realistic, or even desirable, for Democrats to embrace a libertarian credo in toto. But in casting about for a new direction and a new constituency, Democrats could do worse than to develop a healthy skepticism about the ability of the State to solve mankind's problems, and to approach current programs with a muckraking attitude and a disdain for special interests that has characterized some of the better moments of the party's long history.

Internment, compensation and injustice

The problem with a proposal for government to try to make amends for its past mistakes is that it can only do so by taking something from somebody else. It has no money of its own, only what it takes by force from taxpayers. Thus even an effort to redress a previous grievance creates a new injustice.

The internment of Japanese-Americans during World War II was a shameful episode in our history, though one that can be understood in consideration of the kind of irrational hysteria that tends to predominate during a war. Alas, there are those who are still willing to rationalize the episode, or who point to worse actions perpetrated by the Japanese government as if they somehow mitigated the wrong perpetrated by the U.S. government.

One can understand, then, the impulse to do something to try, in whatever inadequate way, to compensate the people who were wronged almost 40 years ago. The federal commission investigating the internment has talked rather vaguely about a payment of $25,000 to those who were wrongfully interned, though there is little doubt that no amount of money, especially at this late date, can genuinely compensate the victims of this government action.

The problem is that the government doesn't have any money of its own. In order to pay compensation to Japanese-Americans interned in 1942, it has to take it from the taxpayers at large. That's going to create new resentments, perhaps opening up festering sores of racial hostility that we had hoped were healed long ago.

These kinds of problems always arise when you think of justice and reparation in collective terms rather than in terms of individual people. Perhaps the just thing to do would be to seek reparations from the people who dreamed up and carried out the policy of internment, as individuals rather than as public officials. Yet at this distance in time, one could doubt the feasibility or even the justice of such a policy. Most of those who carried out the policy are now dead, and, Biblical injunctions aside, I should perhaps be left to the Lord to visit the sons of the fathers on the sons and daughters.

Strikes, legitimate and illegitimate

By ROBERT WESSON
The right to strike is fundamental in our economic system, and organized labor naturally sympathizes with the public employees who assert it. They also are workers making demands of an employer through a union. But the conditions are fundamentally different.

Workers in private industry are participants in a profit-making enterprise, and unions serve to protect or increase their share in the product of their work.

Without unions, individual workers are at a disadvantage against the owner-managers, and it is likely that they will not receive a fair share of the value produced through their labors. For this reason, unions are exempted from anti-trust laws and are given many anti-privileges, including the right to strike. This right of jointly withholding labor brings into balance, more or less, the bargaining power of the many workers, with their limited resources, and the few, economically stronger capitalists. This is not a perfect way to fix wages, but it seems about as satisfactory as any in practice.

The situation of public employees is very different. It is not the purpose of their employer to make a profit, in which the workers would share, but to provide a service to the community. The funds to pay the public employees do not come from the product of their labor but from the contributions of taxpayers. Raising wages does not divert money from the owners but from the community. Those who bargain with the public servants have no pecuniary interest in holding down wages, only a political interest in the proper use of the general reserves. When public servants strike, they exert pressure not by reducing incomes of high officials of the government but by inflicting injury on the public.

By pressing claims through a strike, the public workers are infringing on the prerogative of the legislature to allocate public monies. The appropriate procedure for them, as for others who want to get more from the state for any purpose, is to lobby the legislature or exert pressure on citizens in the democratic way. This the public employees or bureaucrats do continually, of course, with great success. The bureaucratic lobby is perhaps the most potent of all, and the legislators never pass any measure seriously injurious to the bureaucracy. Pay of public servants, including fringe benefits, is ordinarily quite up to that of persons in comparable private jobs; in addition, the public servants are practically irremovable. It is widely believed that a majority of civil servants are overpaid and underworked. If, then, a group of them can strike and use their strategic position to extract additional rewards, they enjoy an unfair advantage.

It is consequently appropriate that government employees are forbidden by law to strike and have to pledge not to do so. Otherwise, they would enjoy an unjustifiable privilege of promoting their interests at the expense of the community. To legalize strikes of public servants would make it all the more difficult, moreover, to control the bureaucracy, which is nearly uncontrollable at best, and to balance the budget, which is always under pressure. It would lead to a distortion of management, the spending of public funds not according to public needs but according to the ability of professional groups in effect to blackmail the public. It would make inflation the more difficult to check.

Organized labor consequently should not be misled by phrases about union solidarity to support a cause that is not theirs. Whatever public employees can gain by striking is at the expense of workers as of the general public, and the legitimate right to strike should be kept separate from the illegitimate claim of public servants to promote their self-interest at the public expense.

Hard times for the states

By JULIAN BOND
"The voters have to see some blood."
"We anticipate difficult times ahead."

"I think we're all in some trouble." These prophets of doom aren't defeated Democrats still smarting from their latest licking at the hands of the new Republican majority in the U.S. House of Representatives.

They are, instead, state legislators, Republicans and Democrats alike, who believe that President Reagan and the Congress have placed them — in the words of one — "between a rock and a hard place."

Six months ago, many state lawmakers happily anticipated the shift in power from Washington to the state capitals. The new president's "new federalism" promised to reduce taxes and return government to the people by placing power closer to home.

The men and women who sit under the domes of the 50 state capitols had looked forward to playing a major role in the distribution of federal funds within their states. They relished the notion of directing spending for health, education and welfare without federal regulation.

Today the anticipation has soured. The legislators who gathered recently in Atlanta for the National Conference of State Legislatures are beginning to wonder what will happen when they propose raising taxes to replace the money that Congress and the president have taken away.

Under the Reagan-Stockman theory, federal tax cuts to individuals and corporations will stimulate economic growth and produce an increase in state and federal tax collections. But many state officials fear that this will not happen fast enough to prevent a fiscal crisis.

No fewer than 27 of the 50 states have a 1981 reserve of less than 3 percent reductions in many federal aid programs that have been mandated by Congress.

"Our surplus is $22 million," a New Jersey legislator said, "and we face $1 billion in federal aid reductions in the next three years. We have not made provisions for that."

"There's no way the economy is going to reverse itself in time," said a Florida state representative.

"I couldn't sleep nights if I had my job in one of the 40 states with less than a 10 percent surplus," remarked a state senator from relatively well-to-do Kansas.

These legislators — and others — also fear that the voters' cost consciousness will be redirected toward Albany and Sacramento and the other state capitols after Washington has been squeezed dry.

Many state and local lawmakers are understandably worried at the prospect of being caught between those demanding cuts in state spending to match those just passed at the federal level and those expecting state governments to continue highly valued education, health and social service programs.

A Republican state senator from Ohio must have spoken for many of the legislators when he said: "The voters have to see some blood — state workers being laid off, parks and schools and hospitals closed — and even then it will be tough."

The state lawmakers are hoping that the blood won't be theirs. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Who put intelligence in the CIA?

By D.R. SEGAL
All I know about the CIA is what I read in the paper and in spy novels, but it seems to me it is in deplorable shape. The country's chief spook has had to trot up the Hill and tell a Senate committee about an agribusness deal in which he was involved. There are those who say it gave off a barnyard odor and it wasn't even close to the barn.

Similarly, the man appointed to head the "clandestine affairs" division of the CIA was found to have been the principal in a business deal that drew the acrimonious comment of several federal judges before whom his case was tried. He resigned.

Now, one might interject the thought that a fellow accused of diddling his business associates is superbly qualified to head the "dirty tricks" department of a spy agency. After all, when you hire a fellow to start revolutions, skip arsenic in the soup and spread the plague in Cuba, you don't recruit at the Benedictine monastery. Very likely there is some benefit to this fiasco. It must be confusing the Russians to watch this dance of the left-footed chorus line, screwing up worse and worse as it goes along. They might even suspect it is a charade staged for their benefit. Who knows?

My only contact with "Intelligence" came during the war (that one we held from 1942-45) when a little Italian butterball from New York showed up in my office one day and said he was Intelligence, a condition I never would have suspected. He was hot on the trail of pornography ring (things like that used to bother people), and he thought he had traced the source of the stuff to our photo lab. I was astonished, knowing photographers as I do. But the thing was, the fellow he was after, although he didn't know it, was the commanding general of the base who used to borrow my key to the lab to run off some pictures his son took. It was our own little secret.

The Intelligence guy was no big problem except we were afraid he'd mix the developer with the hypo or get his thumb prints on the lenses and he did smell strongly of garlic, which some of our more fastidious photographers objected to.

I finally went to see the general and told him about this little spook and he did wax wroth. And there is nothing wrothier than a waxed general.

The little lieutenant lasted until sundown, as I recall, and then he was whisked away to someplace like the leper colony or Marfa, Texas. I think that is the choice we usually gave the condemned. His performance did not give me much confidence in Intelligence. He's probably something very important in the CIA right now. He'll fit right in. (D.R. ## We never sleep afternoon from 2 to 4. How do we take care of that?"

"Send a team over to cut his lawn as soon as he starts typing."

"We can't cut his lawn everyday."

"We can cut all the lawns around him. That should take a month."

"What does he do after he types?" someone asked.

"He takes a nap."

"We could have all the airplanes that land and take off at the airport buzz his house first," someone suggested.

"All right. We'll have low-level flights from 4 to 6, no more than 500 feet off the ground at irregular intervals. Now this is most important. Our source says when Buchwald in on the island, the hour that means the most to him is from 6 to 7 when he can sit on the porch with a cold glass of beer and look out to sea. How do we ruin that moment?"

"Cut his lawn again?"

"That's not very imaginative, Edgerton."

"I've got it. We send the garbage truck around at 6 o'clock at night."

"Won't we have to pay overtime to the truck drivers?"

"What's money if we can ruin the guy's holiday?"

"What time does he go to sleep?"

"Usually around 11."

"I belong to a motorcycle club. We could come over and rev up our engines in front of his house for three hours."

"Excellent. You've all done your homework. Are there any questions?"

"I have one. Why are we going to all this trouble to drive a guy on vacation up the wall?"

The leader said, "Because he's there." (c) 1981, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Youth eager to return to school now that judge has removed box

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Raul Espino Jr. says he's eager to start second grade now that a federal judge has ordered the school district to air-condition his room and dismantle his Plexiglass cubicle.

"I really like the decision," the 7-year-old said Wednesday. U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela agreed with Raul's parents that a 5-foot by 5-foot box cooled with a portable air conditioning unit was "inappropriate" for the boy's needs.

Raul, a straight-A student, suffered paralysis and damage to his nervous system in an auto accident. He cannot control his body temperature and must stay in environments preferably between 72 and 76 degrees.

The Brownsville Independent School District built the enclosure last fall after deciding to transfer Raul from Moody School for the Handicapped to a regular campus. None of the district's regular elementary classrooms are air-conditioned.

The boy's parents, Ana and Raul Espino Sr., argued the cubicle separated their son unduly from his classmates and violated federal law requiring handicapped children be placed in the "least restrictive" environment.

School Superintendent Raul Besteiro testified that "Pandora's box" would open if Raul's classroom were air-conditioned. He said parents of other children and teachers would complain of the preferential treatment.

They lost appeals of the case before the local school board and the Texas State Board of Education. Vela conducted a hearing Aug. 3 in the case.

"It seem self evident that the decision to provide air-conditioning for Raul in a plexiglass cubicle, and therefore at times segregate him from his non-handicapped classmates, is prima facie a violation of the mainstreaming provisions of the Education for All Handicapped Children Act (of 1975)," Vela wrote.

The judge gave the school district 30 days to provide an air-conditioned room for Raul.

"With the possible exception of a child whose immunological system requires that he or she be kept within a sterile atmosphere, education within a cubicle will hardly ever be appropriate," Vela said in granting the Espino's a preliminary injunction against the school district.

Besteiro's office said he was out-of-town for a week and unavailable for comment.

Tony Martinez, lawyer for the school district, said he did not know if the ruling would be appealed to the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

He said it would be up to school board members, who meet Monday, to decide whether to appeal the ruling or abide by it.

"I'm not sure all our questions were answered in this ruling," Martinez said. "Other than air-conditioning the classroom, there might be other far-reaching effects."

During the early fall and late spring, Raul's teacher testified he spent between 75 and 100 percent of his time in the cubicle. When temperatures dropped in late fall and winter, he could rejoin his classmates.

Vela noted testimony that air-conditioning the classroom would cost $5,700.

Judge rules that California is party in Texas case

HOUSTON (AP) — In a surprise move a Texas probate judge drew the state of California into a courtroom fight here over the fortune of billionaire Howard Hughes. But California attorneys have refused to recognize his jurisdiction.

Probate Judge Pat Gregory ruled Wednesday that California, locked in a battle for the right to tax the estate valued at between $180 million and $2 billion, voluntarily became a participant in the Texas case and now must abide by his decisions.

Rick Harrison, a lawyer for the Texas attorney general's office, expressed confidence the ruling would speed final resolution of all Hughes' estate proceedings.

However, Steve Mayer, a San Francisco lawyer representing California, said that state would not be bound by the ruling and the matter ultimately will be decided by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Gregory based his ruling on the appearance in his court last month of an attorney representing California.

"The state of California's appearance here has made them a party for all purposes to the Hughes' estate proceedings here. Absent overturning of that order... they are bound to all decisions of this court," Gregory said.

The lawyer appeared in court to ask Gregory to release several pictures, taken after Hughes' around-the-world flight, that were submitted at the 1978 trial that declared the eccentric reclusive a Texas resident.

The judge agreed to the temporary release of the pictures for use in a related California case. But the request prompted attorney George Parnham, who represents about 500 distant Hughes' relatives, to ask Gregory to declare California a participant in the Texas case.

"I think the ruling is in error. California never appeared in Texas state courts and still believes that this lawsuit should and will be determined by the U.S. Supreme Court," said Mayer. "Someone went down to get some documents for use in a deposition, but that doesn't make them a party to the lawsuit."

Gregory would not comment on how the ruling would affect the struggle between Texas and California over which state could claim Hughes as a resident and tax his fortune.

Mayer predicted the ruling would have no impact.

Her headaches signal earthquakes

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP) — When Charlotte King gets a headache, don't run for aspirin; run for cover.

The aches and pains of the Salem, Ore., housewife show a "tantalizing coincidence" with seismic and volcanic activity along the West Coast, a federal researcher says.

The mother of three says an earthquake at Washington's Mount St. Helens, about 100 miles north of her home, is preceded by pain in the center of her forehead.

Northern California seismic activity, on the other hand, "is a series of four tones that cut off sharply. Southern California is a vibration of tones that fade out slowly. A vibrational effect means the quake will be in the water," she said.

"There's been a lot of activity," Mrs. King said Wednesday, her 35th birthday. "It's picking up considerably to what I would call an active area of Southern California around El Centro and south toward Mexico."

Mrs. King and her headaches have drawn the attention of Chris Dodge of the Science Policy Research Division of the Library of Congress. He said in a preliminary study there is a "tantalizing coincidence" between seismic and volcanic activity along the West Coast and the reports of Mrs. King's symptoms.

A research program called "Project Migraine" has been set up to gather data and conduct laboratory tests on that information, Dodge said. Scientists say they don't know what the connection might be between her pain and the geological activity.

He and Mrs. King have been invited to talk today with officials at the California State Earthquake Prediction Council in Sacramento.

"I talked to them Saturday about the Imperial Valley and said it wouldn't be too long," she said. "While on the phone with them there was a minor event near El Centro. These are kind of pre-shocks that are happening."

Mrs. King said she doesn't want to alarm people but merely tells earthquake-monitoring agencies and the news media about her headache pains and sounds for whatever good it might do.

She'd also like to get rid of the pain.

Mrs. King said she has been in almost constant pain since July 9, when she accurately predicted an earthquake on Mount St. Helens.

Her health has grown steadily worse as she copes with pains, headaches, earaches, dizziness and stress, but she added her ability to interpret the symptoms is making her forecasts more accurate.

She had to quit her job as a switchboard operator at the YMCA last year because of the pain. Doctors and medications have been no help.

Richard Tell, an Environmental Protection Agency official in Las Vegas, Nev., has urged the EPA to investigate what he termed "strange phenomena" involving abnormal hearing sensations.

He cited 11 people living in Oregon, Washington, California, Montana, Illinois and Pennsylvania who experienced the sensations.

Researcher says Bell rates should be less than 'low-risk' firm wants

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. is a "low-risk" operation, and regulators should give it less profit than it wants, a Public Utility Commission researcher says.

Gail Odell of the economic research division turned in her findings this week, and they became part of a staff recommendation that new Bell rates should be far less than the company requested.

Bell wants increases totaling $469.8 million a year, with 87 percent of that amount coming from higher rates for basic residential telephone service.

The PUC staff said Bell needs additional revenue of $249.28 million a year. Staff members are expected to issue recommendations Monday on how Bell should obtain the extra money.

The commission begins its annual hearing on Bell rates Monday, with testimony expected to last several weeks.

If Bell gets its wish, it will cost $5.45 a month more to have a one-party telephone.

Ms. Odell recommended that the PUC issue rates giving Bell a 14.14 percent return on its equity, or an 11.91 percent rate of return on the original cost of its Texas investment.

Bell requested a 17.1 percent return on equity, or 12.72 percent on its investment. It said it is earning only 8.49 percent on investment now, even though the PUC had authorized 10.82 percent in previous rate orders.

Ms. Odell said in her report that Bell and its parent corporation, American Telephone and Telegraph, were characterized by "low risk and high liquidity."

She said on one investment Service's risk scale of 1 to 5, Bell and AT&T rate a 1.

While the telephone industry is entering a new era of competition and technology, "AT&T has enormous financial and technological resources with which to manage change," Ms. Odell said.

The major part of the Bell system's business will remain safe from competition, she said, and "the continued natural monopoly status of local service affords considerable protection."

Southwestern Bell is even less risky than AT&T as a whole, she said, because Texas is less sensitive to business cycles than the rest of the nation and has greater "economic vitality."

Ms. Odell said AT&T's ability to finance future construction and equipment purchases without going to capital markets will be enhanced by new Federal Communication Commission depreciation rules. AT&T's internal cash flow generation is expected to increase from 64 percent in 1980 to 85 percent or 95 percent in 1985, she said.

Harrelson ends hunger strike

HOUSTON (AP) — Asking for a hamburger, onion rings, fries, a malt and "lots of catsup," convicted hit man Charles Harrelson ended a month-long hunger strike in the Harris County jail, his attorney said.

Don Ervin said his client had fasted since July 17 to protest "harassment" of his family by investigators probing the 1979 sniper slaying of U.S. District Judge John Wood Jr. Harrelson is a suspect in Wood's death.

Harrelson took his advice and ended the hunger strike Monday night, Ervin said.

Sheriff's Major R. W. Duncan said Harrelson had lost no weight since August 10, leading jail officials to believe other inmates had slipped Harrelson food.

Ervin said Harrelson was in poor condition and looked like "somebody just about to die."

CINDY AND DAVID BARTON

Father, teenage daughter becoming acquainted here

The young girl at his side was obviously his daughter, she had the same brown, almost black eyes, the same mannerisms and the same easy laugh, she was the 16-year-old daughter he had never seen until Aug. 10.

Cindy Ann Barton, 16, is the daughter of David D. Barton, 329 N. Nelson. She arrived in Pampa on Aug. 10 to live with a father she had never known.

The story started after a divorce between David Barton and a wife who moved to California. David had no idea there was to be a daughter, until he was asked to pay support in 1964.

A daughter was born and lived in California with her mother and grandparents.

"They told me to never try to see her and to never come to California. I took them at their word," David Barton said.

Cindy, a red haired, slim girl, sat next to the man who she called "my dad."

"I asked about my father several times but the answers were such that I knew not to ask anymore."

"But I was curious and then something came to my mind. As a little girl I remembered a man coming to the house named Cookie, he was my uncle, my father's brother, but I didn't know at the time. Uncle Cookie would visit and take my pictures and send them to my father in Pampa," she said.

Cookie Barton was stationed in San Diego in the U.S. Navy and was the only link to the little girl.

"As I got older I remembered the man was from Pampa, Texas. I started to ask some questions of my family. This time they answered and I learned that my father might be living in Pampa," Cindy said.

"I knew the next step was to try to reach him, but I didn't think that he would even want to talk to me, but I made the decision to contact my father," she said.

"It only took one call, and I found the telephone number of David Barton in Pampa on July 31," she said.

"When the phone rang, a girl answered, she was my half-sister. I told her who I was and waited for her to hang up, but she was so excited to hear from me, that I knew it would be okay," she said.

"I asked to have my father call me — if he wanted too," she said.

The Barton family was aware that there was a daughter in California, but they were still surprised at the call.

"You can just imagine how it was for me," David Barton said.

"I just came home like I always do and my family as standing in the living room waiting to tell me the good news," he said.

"I called her right away," he said.

They talked and immediately wanted to meet, but according to David Barton, "There was just something wrong, there were more questions that I needed to ask her."

Cindy had moved from the home of her mother and her grandparents and was living in Sacramento, Calif., with a cousin.

"I called her back in 15 minutes and told her that she was welcome here in Pampa with me. I sent her a ticket and waited for her to arrive," David Barton said.

Both father and daughter are born under the sign of Capricorn, "Maybe that is partly why we are so alike," he said.

"Whatever the reason, we have put together a very close relationship since Aug. 10."

"Gaining a 16-year-old daughter has not been all roses. I have a family that includes two daughters, and having Cindy here caused some jealousies. But we have gone through all that and things have settled down at home. She is my daughter and part of my family."

Author's protege flees murder charges

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Henry Abbott was the toast of the town's literary set just a month ago, an untrained writer who'd parlayed a hellish lifetime behind bars into an acclaimed new book and a promising new life.

Today Abbott is on the run, possibly in Mexico, trying to dodge a murder charge, trying to hide the letters J. A. C. K that are tattooed on the four fingers of his left hand.

His writing since mid-July seems to have been limited to two letters mailed to his sister in Salt Lake City, naming her recipient of royalties from "In the Belly of the Beast," a vivid collection of letters Abbott wrote to author Norman Mailer about prison life.

Police say that on July 18, six weeks after he was moved from a Utah prison to a Manhattan halfway house, Abbott argued with a waiter. They stepped out to the sidewalk, where the waiter was knifed and killed.

Since then, Mailer, the man who discovered Abbott, helped him get his letters published, wrote a letter to his parole board and gave him a job in New York has refused to discuss the case.

Mailer is "still unwilling to talk about it. I think that unwillingness will be permanent," Scott Meredith, literary agent for Mailer and Abbott, said Monday.

"He's just heartsick. He's so distressed about how this turned out," Meredith said of the Pulitzer Prize-winning writer, who is spending August in Maine.

Mailer has been alternately criticized for ignoring or glamorizing Abbott's record of violence, which began with reform school at age 14 and culminated with a conviction in 1966 for killing a fellow inmate. Abbott is now 37.

The press is mad at Norman because he won't talk about this," said an associate who asked not to be identified. "And they have a right to be. He shouldn't have crawled into a cocoon like this, especially since he's usually so open."

The detective supervising the manhunt said Abbott would be caught eventually. He has spent all but 10 months of his life since age 14 in custody, and "he is fundamentally incapable of coping in free society," said Detective William Majeski.

"He's a survivor," Majeski conceded. "But that was in prison. In New York he had trouble from the start."

Majeski said that although Abbott never showed signs of paranoia or violence to Mailer or Meredith, he was unable to deal with routine matters.

Meredith said he was shocked by the knifing.

"Even when we had small business disagreements he was mild, pleasant and gentle. There was never the slightest indication of a tendency toward violence," he said. "I would have walked down any street with Jack, and I can't say that for all my clients."

When Abbott was in prison, Meredith, Mailer and Random House editor Eroll McDonald wrote letters to his parole board, praising his writing. But others say that was not why he was granted parole, effective Aug. 25, and moved to a halfway house in the interim.

Lawyers with the Prisoners' Rights Project at the federal prison in Marion, Ill. say Abbott made a deal:

in return for criticizing prisoners' lawyers at Marion and recanting a story about being tortured by guards there, he would be sent back to Utah state prison, where he could seek parole on state charges.

The prison lawyers imply — and federal officials deny — Abbott was released early because he charged the lawyers with encouraging an inmate work strike.

"You'll have to draw your own conclusions, but until he talked to them, he was not getting out," said Jacqueline Abel, a staff lawyer who had represented Abbott.

Capt. Thomas Bona, director of the maximum security unit at the Utah prison, told a reporter he opposed Abbott's release. "Abbott was a dangerous individual who should be given a re-hearing (for parole) in two years," Bona said of his feelings at the time. "His attitude, his demeanor indicated psychosis."

"In the Belly of the Beast" has gone into its third printing and should earn its author at least $250,000 when foreign sales are included, Meredith said.

Meredith said it was too early to determine the crime's effect on sales.

"People have said this is great publicity, but we're very nervous about that. It could be people will walk away from the book," he said.

Crackdown backfires on mayor

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Even the best-laid plans of mayors and men sometimes result in red faces.

El Paso Mayor Jonathan Rogers decided three weeks ago to get tough with companies that had delinquent city taxes. He began releasing lists of people owing delinquent taxes to the local media in hope of embarrassing them into paying up.

Wednesday, Rogers disclosed that he had found himself on the list.

The mayor said he owns 16 percent in Co-op Disposal Inc., a garbage collection company shown on the list to owe $4,553.45 in taxes for the past three years.

Black legislator seeks more Mexia charges

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A black legislator says further indictments should be sought against three Limestone County lawmen in the drowning of three young black men.

Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, said at a news conference Wednesday he intends to ask both the U.S. Justice Department and Attorney General Mark White to push for civil rights indictments.

The three law enforcement officers were indicted Tuesday on misdemeanor charges of negligent homicide.

A Texas civil rights law provides up to life imprisonment for causing the death of prisoners by intentionally injuring them or depriving them of their rights.

White's press secretary, Mary Hardesty, said Assistant Attorney General Gerald Carruth already had brought the civil rights issue to the attention of Limestone County Attorney Patrick Simmons and the grand jury. Carruth helped Simmons present his case to the grand jurors

"That (the civil rights angle) is what we helped Simmons with in his presentation to the grand jury. ... We have done all we can under the law in this case. I don't know what more we can do," Mrs. Hardesty said.

The grand jury at Groesbeck indicted Deputy Sheriff Kenny Elliot, reserve deputy Kenneth Archie and probation officer David Drummond in the June 19 drownings at Lake Mexia.

Carl Baker, 19, and Anthony Freeman, 18, both of Mexia, and Steve Booker, 19, of Dallas, drowned when the small boat in which the officers were transporting them capsized. They had been arrested on suspicion of possessing drugs.

All three victims were black, while two of the law enforcement officers are white.

Wilson said he believed racism was involved in the arrests "but after that, they (the lawmen) were just guilty of a bad case of being dumb."

He said if the victims had been white, stiffer indictments would have been returned. The indictments issued Tuesday carry a maximum sentence of a year in jail.

"Limestone County is not the seat of progressivism in this state. ... They are probably living in the 1940s as far as attitudes toward racial matters are concerned," Wilson said.

He said he intended to talk to White early next week and also travel to Washington, D.C., to confer with the Justice Department.

"It is my hope that the Justice Department will be able to shed some light on their investigation and also act promptly in bringing charges of the violation of civil rights on behalf of the drowned victims against the law enforcement officers," Wilson said.

He said he was concerned with the victims' families and felt "the judicial process has dampened their faith in due process."

Forecasters not convinced economy will improve soon

NEW YORK (AP) — New government tax and spending plans, accompanied by more buoyant business and consumer expectations, haven't convinced some forecasters that economic matters will quickly improve.

Albert Sindlinger sees current economic events, particularly those involving the Federal Reserve, as the prelude to a banking crisis.

Sindlinger, founder of Sindlinger & Company, a consumer research and microeconomic forecasting firm, foresees federal funds rising to a weekly average of 25 percent, and briefly to 30 percent, and finally to 40 percent, by Thanksgiving. The dollar will fall, gold will rise, he says.

Federal funds, which are excess reserves of commercial banks that are lent daily to other commercial banks, now carry an interest rate of about 20 percent.

"It is true that interest rates will come down by year-end," says Sindlinger, but only "after great damage to many sectors of the economy has been accomplished first on the way up."

International Moneyline, a widely circulated, influential newsletter edited and published by Julian M. Snyder, also sees problems ahead.

"The economy will inevitably crack under the pressure of high real interest rates and there will be a panic in some financial quarters. This will cause the Fed to return to the money printing presses just when inflation seems defeated," says Snyder.

The full inflationary impact won't be felt for a couple of years, according to Snyder.

"Ironically," he continues, "the tipoff for the next giant inflationary explosion will not be a further rise in interest rates but a sharp rate decline coupled with a recessionary environment."

In turn, he says, "this will permit the liquidity build up necessary for the 'new wave' of inflation which will carry the Consumer Price Index to between 20 and 30 percent."

All this won't be all bad, or so it appears from the latest issue of Moneyline. It will "take some months to come about," he says without being any more specific. Meanwhile, it seems, you can expect:

A new bull market in gold, a new bull market in commodities, a limited but important bond market rally and then a further decline, a stock market boom, sudden dollar weakness around the summer of 1982.

Aside from their particular insights, both writers demonstrate a frame of mind that may take years to dispel, if indeed it is ever dispelled.

It is the fear of an economic apocalypse, arising in part from a belief that economic factors are misunderstood, and from misgivings about the economic policies that are being pursued.

And, of course, from recent economic experiences, in which the most clever forecasters in government, business and academe fell on their collective face.

That kind of situation leaves plenty of room for the independent thinkers, for the mavericks, for the sellers of contrary notions, no matter what their points of view.

Southeast crop conditions improved by storm

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rain from tropical storm Dennis has suddenly improved crop and pasture conditions in much of the Southeast, the government says.

However, large areas of Texas and the Mississippi Delta region remained dry and "crops were showing signs of moisture stress by mid-month," the Joint Agricultural Weather Facility said Tuesday in a report covering the week of Aug. 10-16.

"Dry weather in the spring wheat growing areas (in the Dakotas and other Northern states) enabled farmers to make rapid progress in harvesting their crop," it said.

Corn nationally was reported in fair to mostly good condition, although there were some poor stands in the Southeast which suffered weeks of dryness before the rain was dumped by tropical storm Dennis.

Farmers in many areas were delayed in planting corn last spring by excessive rain. According to the report, about 52 percent of the acreage in the major states is in or past the dough stage of development, compared with 63 percent a year ago.

"Progress in Indiana and Ohio continues to lag behind normal due to late planting," the report said. "Over three-fourths of the corn in the South was mature and harvesting operations were becoming more widespread."

Soybeans were in fair to mostly good condition throughout the nation, and rain helped the crop in the Southeast, it said.

The cotton crop was reported in fair to good shape, with the boll set about 92 percent complete in the major states, compared with 94 percent a year ago.

In a related report about the U.S. feed grain situation, the department said current prospects point to an output of feed grains — mainly corn but also including sorghum, oats and barley — of 236 million metric tons.

That would be up 19 percent from 1980 production but still 1 percent shy of the 1979 record.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds, 39.4 bushels of corn. Total "disappearance" of feed grains is expected to be around 228 million tons, up from an estimated 218 million in 1980-81, the report said.

Larger domestic use and exports will account for the increase.

"The use of corn for feed will likely be 106.7 million tons, only slightly larger than this year because of the downward adjustment in hog production. Little improvement in livestock-corn margins (of profit), and increased sorghum, barley and wheat supplies," it said.

Corn exports are expected to gain about 2.5 million metric tons in 1981-82 to an estimated 62.2 million, the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate action on a new farm bill probably will be put off until late September, delaying final action until a month later, according to the National Grange.

That would be later than usual, but not unprecedented.

The 1977 farm bill was enacted in late September, and the 1973 measure became law on Aug. 10. But in 1970, the farm package wasn't approved until Nov. 30.

On another matter, the Grange said the Agriculture Department's estimate last week of a 1981 corn harvest this fall of 7.73 billion bushels, up 16 percent from last year, and the larger crops of wheat, other grain and soybeans indicate there will be plenty to sell to the Soviet Union.

But Edward Andersen, head of the farm organization, said he could not agree with some who say a new long-term agreement with the Soviets is unnecessary.

The current agreement, negotiated in 1975 and put into effect on Oct. 1, 1976, was to have expired this Sept. 30. A year's extension was approved to give the two countries more time to work out another long-term pact.

Under the agreement, the Soviets are committed to buy a minimum of six million metric tons of wheat and corn each year, with an option to buy an additional two million. If more than 8 million is wanted, the two countries must consult.

Some farm officials, Andersen said, advocate letting the Soviet Union buy what it wants, just like any other foreign customer and question whether an agreement is needed at all.

"People have short memories," he said. "They seem to have already forgotten the havoc large Russian purchases caused in the market during the mid-1970s, before we had an agreement."

It was the market disruptions and pressure on the Ford administration that led to an embargo on sales to the Soviet Union in the summer of 1975, which then culminated in the long-term sales agreement, Andersen said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another bumper cranberry harvest is on the way, the Agriculture Department says.

Lakebed is 'sky ear'

PLAINS OF SAN AUGUSTIN, N.M. (AP) — This ancient lakebed, wrapped in an aura of silence and enveloped by rugged mountains, is on the forefront of man's probe into unexplored regions of space.

In its heart is the world's largest radio telescope, so sensitive it could detect CB radio signals from a 1-att rig on the planet Pluto.

Quasars, pulsars, extragalactic radio jets, interstellar gas, supernovae, black holes — all are within range of scientists who operate the huge telescope in the southern New Mexico desert.

The complex is aptly dubbed Very Large Array. Its lab is the cosmos.

"The most distant objects we look at are at the edges of the observable universe," says Dr. Dick Sramek, one of 15 staff astronomers at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory's VLA.

The one-of-a-kind facility, an eerie space-age erector set, has 27 white dish-shaped antennas, each 82 feet in diameter, 92 feet high and 210 tons in weight. The massive dishes sit high and dry on miles of the parched Plains of San Augustin amid rolling tumbleweeds.

The site is skirted by four ranges, protecting it from much of the electronic interference caused by television, radios and aircraft.

The lakebed is at an average elevation of 7,000 feet — flat, high altitude and low water vapor in the air to minimize the adverse effects of atmosphere on radio waves. The low latitude permits observation of about 75 percent of the sky.

The dishes are along three arms of railroad track in the shape of a Y. Two of the arms are 13 miles long the third measures 11.8 miles.

THE Earth rotates the Y like a tucntable, creating images that have the same detail as if using a radio telescope 21 miles in diameter.

"It gives us a quite well-defined circular beam," Sramek says.

The key to the installation is acute sensitivity and high resolution, Sramek says. The VLA uses a very fine beam to probe a distant object emitting radio waves. Sramek says. "The finer that beam is, the greater detail we will see in the source."

Detail is important, especially when looking at objects billions of light years away. A special 36-wheel transporter moves each antenna to one of 72 observation stations along the three arms. The antennas are reconfigured about once every three months.

"It's kind of like a zoom lens," Sramek says. "The further you move the dishes out, the higher the resolution. If you bring them in, you lose some detail, but you have a large field of view."

The antennas receive signals and filter them for computers that correlate the readings and feed out radio maps of the skies.

Veteran actor takes unusual acting 'lessons'

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Veteran actor David Spielberg enrolled in unusual acting "lessons" recently for his role as a television news director in the CBS series "Jessica Novak" debuting this fall.

Spielberg, a native of Mercedes in the Rio Grande Valley, has spent days watching how news directors at stations in Los Angeles, New York and his native South Texas run their operations.

"I've become almost a news freak," the 38-year-old performer said. "But I know I couldn't stand to do it for a living."

"Jessica Novak" is a one-hour show on Thursday nights, will star Helen Shaver in the lead role of a beginning television reporter. Spielberg plays her hard-nosed boss, Max Kenyon.

Spielberg has appeared on dozens of television shows, including "Lou Grant," "One Day at a Time," and "Trapper John, M.D."

He also starred in the short-running "American Girls," several seasons ago.

During a visit to KGBT-TV, the CBS affiliate here,

Spielberg talked about the homework he did for the new show.

"It was just fascinating," he said of watching a news department put together a newscast from morning to airtime. "It was almost like putting on a play every night. The closer you get to airtime, it was just like a play. You could feel the tension."

Spielberg was at a New York station when an important story broke about vandals almost causing Newark, N.J., to lose its water supply.

"By the time I left, I was exhausted and I had only been watching," he said.

Spielberg returned to Texas recently to visit his father, a Rumanian immigrant who moved to Weslaco and married a Mexican-American school teacher.

"I was born in Mercedes because that's where the hospital was," he said. Spielberg attended parochial schools and graduated in 1957 from Weslaco High School.

During his two years in the Navy, he decided on acting as a career.

"I was stationed at Norfolk,

Va., and took the ferry across the Chesapeake Bay one day to get to New York. I got seasick on the ferry," he said. "I went into this theater to get out of the cold and that cinched it. It was my first Broadway play."

The play was "Compulsion" starring Roddy McDowell.

Spielberg enrolled at the University of Texas after his discharge as a drama major with a minor in business.

"I thought I'd hedge my bets," he said.

However, after spending two summers at acting school in New York, he quit college and moved to the Big Apple.

Growing up in a town of less than 10,000 gave him a naive optimism about breaking into the acting business, he said.

"I guess coming from a very small town and not knowing what the odds were was good for me," he said.

A series of odd jobs, from waiter to cabbie to elevator operator, kept food on his table.

Spielberg's first feature film was "Man-in-the-Moon - Marigolds," directed by Paul Newman. He was nominated for an Emmy for his role as the prosecutor in "The Lindbergh Kidnapping Case," co-starring Anthony Hopkins.

But his first love is the stage.

"I think the purest acting is on the stage. In film you can sort of hide behind the camera but everything is out there on the stage," he said.

Spielberg says he hopes to have creative input into material for "Jessica Novak," filmed at Twentieth Century Fox studios. The set was modeled after one at KNXT-TV in Los Angeles.

Only one episode of the first 13 was written by Aug. 1, due to the writers guild strike. In the pilot, Jessica gets personally involved in a "childnapping" case.

"I don't see how you could succeed (in news) if you tend to get really involved in all your stories," Spielberg said. "All the atrocities, like that guy slashing delinquent's throats in New York, are too much."

He would like to see an episode dealing with the problems of Vietnam veterans exposed to the defoliant Agent Orange.

"I was one of the lucky ones that fell between Korea and the Vietnam War," he said. "I was not called to put my body on the line."

Some similarities will exist between "Jessica Novak" and "Lou Grant" in that both are one-hour, dramatic series dealing with real issues.

Spielberg once portrayed a newspaper ad salesman in an appearance on "Lou Grant."

"He was a guy who sexually harrassed his secretary. I got an incredible amount of mail on that," he said. "A lot of women thanked me for the fact I didn't soft peddle the part."

Everything is special for the president

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cooking for the president of the United States is no small matter for Raimund Hofmeister. First there is the special menu, then the personal shopping and finally the equivalent of the presidential food tasters.

And sometimes it all goes for naught.

Take, for example, the stuffed quail dinner for 1,500 at a California Republican fund-raising dinner in April, at which President Reagan was to be the star attraction.

The 32-year-old Hofmeister, chief chef at Los Angeles' Century Plaza Hotel, spent six days preparing the dinner, but Reagan was unable to attend after being wounded in assassination attempt March 30.

"All these quails you had to bone and take the bones out, and fill them and sew them out," Hofmeister said in an interview in the kitchen of the hotel where Reagan has been staying this week. "We went all out to really impress him and then he didn't show up. But we impressed all his friends."

Reagan, who makes a practice of staying in the large, two-bedroom, $750-a-night presidential suite when he is in Los Angeles, returned in June and Hofmeister set out to prepare another feast for 1,500. This time the entree was steak.

"We tried to cook special for him," Hofmeister said. "We put it on a special plate and made it extra nice for him, went to a lot of trouble to make sure he gets the right center cuts. Everything first-class."

Then came the White House aides and the special plate for Reagan was rejected "because it was intentionally made for the president while his aides were not there," Hofmeister said.

"So they came and among the 1,500 lunches we prepared, they picked out 10 for the head table where the president was seated," the chef recalled. "They picked out two steaks from this tray and two steaks from that tray ..."

This week, at a lunch for Reagan and his National Security Council, Hofmeister finally succeeded in his personal quest to make a special meal for Reagan.

A Reagan aide had requested chicken salad, but Hofmeister doesn't like chicken salad. So he poached chicken breasts, chilled them, sliced them and placed kiwi fruit inside with mushroom and sesame. There also were tomatoes but Hofmeister discovered neither the president nor his wife, Nancy, likes tomatoes so he made two plates without them.

Word soon spread among restaurant patrons that Reagan was dining in an adjoining room. They wanted to know what the president was eating and whether they could have it, too. They got it. And now the "president's salad" is likely to go on the menu, according to Pat Lasley, a hotel spokesman.

Dear Abby

Virgins can be pregnant, too

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read your new booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," and I think it's probably the best $2 investment a teen-ager can make. Although I'm no longer a teen-ager, I think it's wonderful the way you explain the facts of life to young people.

I was especially glad that you told girls it was possible to get pregnant without going all the way. I had never seen it in print, but I know it's true because it happened to me. (My mother didn't believe me at the time, and even after the doctor who delivered my baby told her that I was still a virgin, she refused to believe it.)

I will never forget going to a birthday party when I was 16. A bunch of us kids had drunk a lot of beer, and on the way home, a 17-year-old boy I hardly knew drove me home. He stopped at a secluded area for a little innocent making out. One thing led to another, and before I knew it, I was in a situation I couldn't handle. When he couldn't talk me into going all the way, he tried to force me, but I fought and clawed and kicked. He didn't succeed, but he came close.

The following month I thought I had some kind of infection because I missed my period. After three months, I went to a doctor, and when my tests came back from the lab I thought there had been a mix-up. I knew I couldn't be pregnant because I was still a virgin.

Well, the doctor said it's possible to become pregnant without actual penetration if the male releases the sperm close enough to the female's vaginal opening for the sperm to "swim up" and meet the ovum. Then the egg is fertilized and pregnancy occurs.

When I told the boy I was expecting his baby, he laughed, his mother laughed, and his whole family thought I was trying to pin something on him that was not his doing. (I never did convince him that the baby was his.)

Today, that "baby" is the prettiest 17-year-old girl you could ever want to see. She never had a father to enjoy her, but she has a mother who loves her very much.

So, Abby, please keep telling teen-agers that they don't have to go all the way to get pregnant. I know.

I WAS A PREGNANT VIRGIN

DEAR ABBY: H. IN BLUFFTON, OHIO, was irritated by people who had a habit of touching or patting him while conversing.

For a number of years, therapists have been actively promoting touching through what they have termed "sensitivity training." They maintain that a friendly hand placed on another's arm or shoulder has great therapeutic value and promotes a closeness not possible to attain by mere words.

Although I am not naturally inclined toward such "familiarity," I have been trying to develop a natural ease in applying that technique. But according to you, touching may be resented rather than appreciated. Please explain.

PUZZLED IN SAYRE, PA.

DEAR PUZZLED: H. IN BLUFFTON complained about people who not only patted and touched, but grabbed him as well — a far cry from a "friendly hand placed on another's arm or shoulder."

Agreed, touching does promote a closeness not possible by mere words, but if one prefers distance rather than closeness, it is his right to be left alone.

DEAR ABBY: My husband deserted me in Oklahoma 20 years ago. He went to Detroit and married another woman without even divorcing me. Twelve years later I was granted a divorce on the grounds of desertion.

Well, Abby, in my religion I believe that we are still married in the eyes of God until death do us part, and I will not be free to marry again until he dies.

I don't even know whether he is living or dead, and I wonder if there is a way I can find out when he dies. We are both 43 years old.

MARRIED FOR LIFE

DEAR MARRIED: Get in touch with his nearest kin or a close relative. Even a close friend will do. Ask to be notified in the event of your ex-husband's death. And it wouldn't hurt to keep checking back with them at least once a year in case they forget.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (35 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Don't pass up this Dutch treat

From the land of wooden shoes, tulips and windmills comes a cooking style that will add refreshing new appeal to family menus. Although the Netherlands is small in size, it is a productive country, and its foods are noted for their freshness. The Dutch fashion their cuisine around the meat, butter and milk from the cattle that graze in their meadows and the flavorful fruits and vegetables that grow throughout the countryside.

One pleasing characteristic of this cookery is the custom of combining meat, vegetables and fruits all in one dish. Once you try Braised Dutch Beef Cubes, you'll know why it's such a popular idea. Prunes, leeks or green onions and warm, aromatic spices are unexpected ingredients that add appeal to this braised beef specialty.

Chunks of beef for stew are browned, seasoned with cinnamon and cardamon, then gently braised in a flavorful bouillon. Pieces of leek or green onions and celery are added, and finally, prunes join the beef in fine Dutch tradition. The cooking liquid, laced with spices and hearty beef flavor, is thickened for a marvelous gravy to serve over the tender beef and its platter partners.

This delightful entree points up the versatility of beef for stew. Not only is it the basis for a variety of soups and stews, it can be the star in many unusual family economy dishes. This practical cut of beef offers an added bonus at preparation time. Although cut from less tender sections of beef, the meat will come to the table fork tender every time when cooked slowly by a moist heat cookery method.

BRAISED DUTCH BEEF CUBES
2 pounds beef for stew
2 tablespoons cooking fat
2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon ground cardamon
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 beef bouillon cube, crushed
1 cup boiling water

1/2 pound leeks or 1/4 pound green onions, cut in 1-inch pieces
2 cups, 2-inch sticks celery
1 cup pitted prunes
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 cup water

Brown meat in fat in Dutch oven or large frying pan. Pour off drippings. Sprinkle salt, cardamon, cinnamon

Help child's language skills develop

Early language development is one of the most important factors in encouraging a child's reading success.

Children develop language skills through talking and listening, and Pat Koppman of the International Reading Association Board of Directors offers these tips for parents in helping their youngsters develop good language usage:

- Talk to your child frequently.
- Give objects a name, and teach the child different names for the same object.
- Describe the things that you do and the things that happen around you.
- Speak slowly and distinctly.
- Use full sentences, rather than phrases or single words. Don't use baby talk with a youngster who is no longer a baby.
- Limit television viewing, and discuss those programs that you and your child watch together.
- Read to your child.
- Gripe your child the chance to talk with you, and encourage the youngster to ask questions.
- Correct your child's speech errors by saying it the right way. Never criticize or make fun of the child's mistake.
- Praise your child when he or she says things correctly.

and pepper over meat. Dissolve bouillon cube in boiling water; add to meat. Cover tightly and cook slowly 1 1/2 hours. Add leeks or green onions and celery and continue cooking, covered, 20 minutes. Stir in prunes and continue cooking, covered, 10 minutes. Remove meat, vegetables and prunes to warm platter. For gravy, add water to cooking liquid (if necessary) to make 1 cup; blend flour with 1/2 cup water; gradually stir into cooking liquid and cook, stirring until thickened; cook 2 minutes. Makes 6 to 8 servings. Hearty appetites will especially appreciate noodles with the braised beef and its gravy. Or, if you would prefer a lighter approach, pan another vegetable dish such as cooked broccoli. Since the Dutch are very fond of desserts, particularly cookies, the meal can be brought to a conclusion quite appropriately with almond cookies and ice cream.

Diet doesn't affect arthritis

By GAYNOR MADDOX

A recent national meeting of arthritis experts in Boston had no new answers to the two questions always asked about arthritis and food:

What foods might ease the pain of arthritis? What foods might cause arthritis? Unfortunately, the answer to both questions seems to be that arthritis is in no way affected by food. Food can neither cause nor cure this painful disease.

However, scientists are still pursuing the subject. Perhaps in the next few years they will achieve some breakthrough, said Dr. Frederic C. McDuffie, senior vice president for medical affairs of the Arthritis Foundation.

Furthermore, most doctors believe that careful attention should be paid to the nutritional status of any person with rheumatoid arthritis.

Research has found that people with rheumatoid arthritis often tend to be undernourished and to develop deficiencies of metals, vitamins, amino acids and other nutrients.

Correction of these deficiencies frequently results in an improved sense of well-being and better overall health, although it does not have any fundamental effect on the disease itself.

Why do arthritis victims have these nutrition problems?

Julie Himel, nurse clinician at the Medical College of Wisconsin in Milwaukee, noted that arthritis victims often complain that painful joints of the hand, wrist, jaw, elbow and shoulder cause difficulty in cutting foods, opening containers and chewing. Fatigue and difficulty in preparing food also play a part.

Prevalent patterns of missed meals and snacking were observed in arthritis victims. About one-quarter of those studied reported that their eating habits started to change after their disease was diagnosed.

Arthritis patients reported trying a wide variety of so-called diet treatments, ranging from vegetarian approaches and vitamin supplements to the elimination of sugars and preservatives, said Robin May, director of special services for the Arthritis Foundation's New York chapter. The results suggest that the diets themselves were not the reason for changes in the arthritic condition.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

All you fathers out there... and you all know who you are... please rise to your feet and say goodbye to an old friend... barefoot - in - the - fields - weddings.

Boy, those were the days, weren't they, Dad? A little knoll under a tree somewhere, a minister from the Hey Man What's Happening center, a flute player in a $12 pair of jeans and $5,000 worth of amplifiers.

The bride and groom arrived in a van painted with serpents on the side and after a toast of organic juices, they crushed their Styrofoam cups on the rock and took off to Big Sur.

It's been fun and it's been cheap, but it's all over.

More fullness is evident in the Camelot - inspired dresses which are deliciously full floats, moving with the wearer. In golden lace, ruffled at neck and wrist and with a scalloped hemline.

percent of brides queried in a survey said they want a formal wedding with all the trimmings.

Sir, maybe you'd better sit down.

They're not talking just a long, white dress and an urn of seasonal flowers on either side of the altar. They're talking symbolism and romance. Have you any idea how much symbolism and romance cost these days?

One page is devoted to having symbolic candles to light the entire church. (A birthday candle that measures an inch and a half and burns three seconds costs 59 cents!)

Diamonds are coming back, combined with a stone from a family heirloom or fashioned into a special design of their own choosing and your own paying.

Transportation to the church will be romantic with perhaps a horse and carriage ride to and from the ceremony. If a horse and carriage can't be found, a limousine is suggested.

Big bands for receptions are returning, and my goodness, what kind of a father would not tape the wedding so he could enjoy it at his leisure again and again and again?

Tradition will demand the bride carry flowers that are symbolic... and out of season, like violets in December and sprigs of poinsettia in August.

Oh, and look for the return of another tradition... the one where the father of the bride is taking his future son-in-law aside and saying, "I'll give you $10,000 and a van with serpents painted on the side if you'll run away and get married on a surfboard at Big Sur."

Beneath it — pouffy pantaloon in cream raw silk snugged just below the knees. At right, fashion comes full circle for holiday '81 with the widest, most flaring skirts destined to twirl out at night. Radaelli's circle of cotton velvet is worn with his ruffle - sleeved silk organza blouse, designed to be seductively worn off the shoulder. The two parts are tied together with a silk charmeuse and gold braid sash, also by the designer.

Holiday fashion collection introduced

NEW YORK — A little fantasy and a lot of fashion add up to an exciting look for the holiday season from John Radaelli. Comprising a collection of separates that add, subtract or multiply into diversified outfits for varied occasions, the clothes reflect the designer's belief in styling that is out-of-the-ordinary but never outre.

A feeling for fullness is found throughout the collection with twirly circle skirts at the just - below - midcalf length the designer loves and pouffy pants at every length, from below - the - knee to just - above - the - ankle. The skirts appear in rich cotton velvet, in opulent moire, in textured Thai silk.

The pants, from knee - snugged knickers to full ballooning - ankle - length "zouaves" to bloused "samurai" pantaloons, can be found in the same fabrics as well as in silk charmeuse and striped silk, sometimes glitter - struck with streakings of metallic threads. And for the ultimate in glamour there are "zouaves" in glittering gold lame.

Companion pieces to be worn on top offer a full play of the designer's light touch and love of that little bit of fantasy, from the barely there camisole of glittery lame to blouses frothed with ruffles — from shoulder to wrist, about the neck or in a triple cascade down the front of the bodice. In sheer silk organza, in gilded lace, in gold - shot chiffon, in silk charmeuse richly colored purple or ruby, among others, the blouses provide the perfect partner to the full skirts and pants, and can be equally effective with the occasional strict suit also offered by the designer. More fullness is evident in the Camelot - inspired dresses which are deliciously full floats, moving with the wearer. In golden lace, ruffled at neck and wrist and with a scalloped hemline.

Woman tired by iron deficiency

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 28-year-old woman, 5-foot-7 and weigh 125 pounds. In general I am in pretty good health except for iron problems. Every time I see the doctor and have a blood check, I am low on iron and anemic. He tells me to take more iron but I do take a vitamin pill that contains iron every day.

I do get tired and wonder if it is the anemia that causes that. I thought one vitamin pill with iron along with what you get in your diet should be enough iron. Why do I need so much iron to keep from getting anemic?

DEAR READER — An iron deficiency anemia is only one part of the total picture of lack of iron. You need iron for some of the vital enzyme systems that enable your food to be broken down to release energy. The use of oxygen to break down food inside the cells depends upon iron. It is in a substance biochemists call cytochrome and cytochrome oxidase. Iron is a unique element that can change its electrical characteristics as indicated by calling its compounds ferrous or ferric. This is essential to its interaction with oxygen to release energy for your cells.

Iron deficiencies were known long before doctors could examine the blood for anemias. Liver and other foods rich in iron are listed in The Health Letter number 4-4, Iron and Anemia, that I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Most women can get all the iron they need by adding a vitamin pill supplemented with iron to their daily routine during the child-bearing years. But the increased need in women is totally dependent upon menstruation. The amount of blood women lose varies greatly, from a small amount to a large amount. The more menstrual flow a woman has the more iron replacement she will need.

Blood loss is the main reason people become deficient in iron. Anyone who has unexplained iron deficiency anemia should be studied for possible unrecognized loss of blood as from an ulcer or from the intestines. Regular loss of reasonable amounts of blood from bleeding hemorrhoids can also be a contributing factor.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am in the state prison. There is a theory here that it is impossible for some of us to get paroled unless we take Antabuse for alcohol. Some people say that Antabuse is harmful. Is it? I have heart trouble, liver problems, ulcers, allergies and asthma. Would it be harmful to me?

DEAR READER — It could be. By itself Antabuse (disulfiram) is not harmful to most people. There is a list of things that can happen, just as there is for almost every medicine that anyone takes. You can even have an allergic reaction to tomatoes.

When a person has taken Antabuse and then takes even a very small amount of alcohol, it can produce a profound reaction, including shock, nausea, vomiting. Severe reactions can be quite dangerous. Of course, the point is that anyone who takes Antabuse should never, never take any alcohol in any form. They may not be able to avoid this entirely since it may be in sauces, or absorbed from aftershave lotions or from an alcoholic back rub.

Incidentally, similar reactions to alcohol can occur from the use of Plagyl used to treat trichomonis vaginal infections.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

August 21, 1981

In the year following your birthday you may work hard finalizing several projects which have been important to you. You'll find the completion of your tasks both rewarding and exciting.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The manner in which you conduct yourself today is subtle, yet leaves no doubts in the minds of your peers that you are not to be taken lightly. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Once you set your mind to something today you'll be very aggressive about seeing your plans occur as you envisioned them. Good for you!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Some of the old fight is back in you today. You should be able to do well in any situation that is competitive, whether it be in sports, romance or commerce.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're an excellent team participant today, not only because you pull your own weight but because you also know how to rev up your teammates to carry their maximum loads.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Much of your energies today will be devoted to working on something that appears to be in another's interest, but in your mind you'll feel it's equally rewarding for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Being tactful doesn't dilute your strength today, it actually increases it. The softer you talk, the more clout you gain.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Working on projects around the house and watching each one as it is completed improve your surroundings, gives you much enjoyment today.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Everyone needs diversions in life. Today is your day to set aside your more serious commitments and let your hair down a bit. It'll do you good.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) When it comes to your family and their needs, there isn't anything you wouldn't do for them. Today, you'll take the opportunity to physically demonstrate this.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Although you are extremely patient, you won't wait around for others to do things for you today. You'll take direct action to accomplish your purposes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) An indirect approach works extremely effectively for you today when it comes to securing your material needs. You know being pushy isn't always an answer.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Fun times are ahead for your pals today, mostly because of the effort you extend to make it so. They'll know you're the architect of their happiness.

THAT'S THE TROUBLE WITH VACATION SPOTS

THIS HAMBURGER IS TERRIBLE!

WHAT DO YOU EXPECT FOR A LOUSY $23.50?

She dances in the shadows

NEW YORK (AP) — Bemelman's Bar at the Carlyle Hotel was almost empty when Lorna Luft walked in. But Judy Garland's younger daughter filled it with herself the moment she threw back her head in a Bette Davis laugh.

Hah! The wallpaper laughed back. She glanced at its sketches of little French school girls and became quieter. In a whisper, almost: "Ah, they bring back memories."

Lorna Luft's eyes caressed the wallpaper. She turned full circle in her chair. "My mother had that. We were living in Paris. What was that book, now?"

She's pensive for a moment. "Babar" is suggested. "No, no. It's 'Madeline'!" Miss Luft proclaimed triumphantly. "Those were the books Mama made us read. Oh, it brings back such memories."

A waiter arrives with a potent "soup" — a bullshot. That's beef broth, lemon and a tad of vodka. He lingers long enough to tell Miss Luft he remembers her staying at the hotel with her mother when she was a little girl.

Her mother gave the waiter an autograph, he says. He doesn't ask Miss Luft for hers.

That goes with the terrain of being Judy's daughter and Liza's sister. Lorna dances in shadows. But the lighting is good: for a kid who was raised by a "living legend," later to see her older half-sister, Liza Minnelli, zoom to super-stardom, she's doing OK.

"I never thought about being tossed into a shadow," she said. "I knew exactly what was going to happen to me. I know what helped me survive was always having a sense of humor. Don't ever take yourself seriously."

Miss Luft recently finished six months on the road starring in the musical "They're Playing Our Song." Critics from Fort Lauderdale, Fla. to Cincinnati and points in between gave her rave reviews. After a 10-day vacation in Hawaii, she's off to Europe to promote her new record single, "Long Time."

Still, Lorna Luft's energy level pales before the electric frenzy that was Judy Garland, and it is not as intense as Liza Minnelli's. But then she says she never wanted to be a superstar and is not consumed by career.

"I work real hard, but when I'm home, it's like a vacation for me," she said. "I don't go around and worry about my pictures being here or there or being seen at every opening."

She sips her "soup." The bullshot makes her cheeks flush to the color of the red pantaloons she wears after a particularly grueling morning auditioning for theatrical producer Joseph Papp.

"Hard work is a challenge," she says. "Doing a show, learning a song or making a record is a challenge. I always say I can do it better. I'm never satisfied."

"I'm always a nervous mess before I go out on stage," she said. "We did 205 performances and I was a mess every night. Right now I'm running on spit and chewing gum."

Miss Luft, whose father, Sid, produced the Garland film, "A Star Is Born," was 11 when she decided show biz was for her.

"When I told Mama that's what I wanted to do, she said, 'You'd better study because you ain't getting it on my name.'"

She studied hard and she went on-stage for the first time the summer before Judy Garland's legendary Palace Theater concert. She was 13. "I was terrified," Miss Luft said.

"It was the first time Mama ever let go of my hand. She stood in the wings for the first eight bars of the song — "Don't Sleep in the Subway" — and then left.

"The teaching I mostly got was from watching her," she said. "It taught me a lot. I watched the master."

She appeared with her mother at the Palace and later at a Madison Square Garden concert. In 1972, Miss Luft was awarded the Rising Star of the Year Award for her leading role in Neil Simon's "Promises, Promises."

Her eyes wandered back to the "Madeline" drawings on the wall. She smiled sweetly. Paris. It was one of many cities in which she lived with "Mama," Liza and brother Joey Luft. They also lived in Scarsdale, N.Y. for half a minute, London for a second, New York for an hour and Los Angeles for a day.

OVERSHADOWED BY MOTHER AND SISTER. Raised by a "living legend," Lorna Luft later saw her older half-sister, Liza Minnelli zoom to super stardom. But Judy Garland's younger daughter, shown recently at the piano of New York's Hotel Carlyle, says what helped her survive was a sense of humor. "Don't ever take yourself seriously," she says. (AP Laserphoto)

Officials say plan unacceptable

DALLAS (AP) — Federal officials have termed Texas' plan to control lead air emissions "unacceptable," and an epidemiologist has labeled contaminated soil in two Dallas neighborhoods as "clearly dangerous" to children.

The Texas Air Control Board has been notified four times in the past two years that the state's plan is inadequate, Environmental Protection Agency officials said this week.

Officials of the Texas board could not be reached for comment.

If Texas is to run its own monitoring program, its plan must be approved before Nov. 5, 1982. Otherwise, the federal government will take over that responsibility.

The EPA spokesmen, who were not identified, told the Dallas Morning News that Texas officials refuse to require companies to increase pollution controls on the basis of mathematical projections for lead emissions. State officials instead monitor the emissions for as long as a year before requiring additional equipment, the officials said.

Meanwhile, the director of field studies for the Cincinnati office of the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health says some children may be risking brain damage by playing in soil in three Dallas neighborhoods near lead smelters.

Medich tosses 5-hitter as Rangers whip Milwaukee

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — There's no way Doc Medich should have been able to shut down the hard-hitting Milwaukee Brewers on just five hits and one run, according to Milwaukee manager Buck Rogers.

In fact, Rogers' little black book shows the Brewers over the past two and one-half seasons, have hit Medich for a 313 average.

"But he really cranked one up against us tonight," Rogers said Wednesday, after Medich and the Texas Rangers beat Milwaukee 4-1.

Medich went 8 2-3 innings, boosted his record to 6-3, walked none, struck out three and faced only three batters over the minimum until he ran out of gas with two out in the ninth.

"Somewhere around the middle of the game, I found I was able to move the ball around exactly the way I wanted to," said Medich. "That's the first time since the strike I've had that kind of control. When you're pitching in rhythm like that, you don't get as tired."

"He throws four pitches over the plate any time he wants to," chimed in Ranger pitching coach Jackie Brown. "He keeps the ball down. He throws in inside and he's smart. That's all you need to win."

Buddy Bell, who had led the American League in runs batted in before the June 12 players strike, had been in a mild slump since play resumed, but got two RBIs — including the game-winner — against Milwaukee.

"I have felt good the whole time since the strike," Bell said. "I just wasn't driving in the runs, so I decided I had better kick myself in the butt a time or two. I have to drive in runs for us to win."

Billy Samples' solo home run and a sacrifice fly by Leon Roberts accounted for the other Texas scores. Three of the runs came off Brewers starter Jon Slaton, 4-5.

Milwaukee scored when Ben Oglivie doubled home Paul Molitor in the ninth before Ranger reliever Jim Kern got his third save by striking out Gorman Thomas to end the game.

After taking today off, the Rangers begin a nine-game road trip while the Brewers will return to Milwaukee for the first time since the strike ended.

In the 12 road games the Brewers have played since play resumed, they have won seven and Rogers said the Wednesday loss meant the difference between a good road swing and a great one.

"The 7-5 record means we had a successful road trip," Rogers said as the team packed for its trip home. "An 8-4 trip would have been very successful."

Soccer signup is set for Saturday

Registration in the recently-organized Pampa Soccer Association will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at the Pampa Mall.

Registration tables will be placed in front of T Shirts Plus for youngsters (kindergarten through 19 years old) to sign up at. Association spokeswoman Janice Miller said.

"Both boys and girls are invited to sign up," Mrs. Miller said. "Persons who would like to coach or officiate may sign up at the same time also."

Mrs. Miller said the Association was formed by a group of parents. She said 285 youngsters had registered earlier. Interested persons may call 669-7274 for more information.

Harvesters don pads Friday

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor

One cycle of pre-season football preparations is about to end and another is about to begin as the Pampa Harvesters move closer to their Sept. 4 opening date with Hereford.

The Harvesters finish four days of conditioning drills today before breaking out in full gear Friday.

"The players have been improving every day, but you just can't tell too much without the pads on," Gilbert added. "It's been enjoyable for the coaching staff. We're young, but we're a disciplined group."

Gilbert said squad members appear to be rallying around the young quarterbacking trio of Randy Skaggs, Dennis Dougherty, and Randy Owens.

"That's been real encouraging," Gilbert added. "Not one of the quarterbacks has come to the front yet, but they're all working hard."

One of them will step into the spot vacated by senior signal-caller Derek Bigham, who has transferred to Portales, New Mexico. Bigham was a parttime starter last season.

Only one serious mishap has occurred during the early drills. Sophomore linebacker Randy Poole collided with another player and will miss at least one day of practice.

"That gave us a scare," Gilbert added. "He's going to be a starter for us."

An intrasquad scrimmage has been scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Saturday night at Harvester Stadium. It will also be parents night and all the players will be introduced.

"We're going to film the game and start the grading for our depth chart," Gilbert added.

Team captains will also be elected for the entire season.

"This is something that hasn't been done for the past two years," Gilbert added. "We need some leaders. The captains will be voted on by the team members."

The Harvesters were 4-6 a year ago in Gilbert's first season as head coach.

HARVESTER HERD. Those hated wind sprints are just a small part of a football player's ordeal during pre-season drills. The Harvesters warm up for Wednesday's workout with a race across the practice field. An intrasquad scrimmage is planned for 7:30 p.m. Saturday night at Harvester Stadium. It will also be parents night and all the players will be introduced. Pampa opens the season Sept. 4 at home against Hereford. (Photo by Richard Van Kluyve)

Moore's arrival awakens Tech fans

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Initially at least, Jerry Moore's arrival on the Texas Tech campus this year sounds more like a love story than a football saga.

"If the marriage between Jerry Moore and Texas Tech was not made in heaven," it must have been on the outskirts.

And this:

"A solid Texas background, a fixture in a successful program, an intimate knowledge of West Texas, a desire to make Lubbock his home and an expressed dream of reaching the Cotton Bowl have combined to catch the public's fancy."

The Cotton Bowl may be wishful thinking at this point, but there is nothing fanciful about Moore's reception in Red Raiderland.

"The guy can't get much more popular than he is right now with a suddenly awakened and title-hungry following," observed one Southwest Conference scribe.

And how does Moore, late of North Texas State, feel about all this?

"I just feel fortunate," he grinned.

"Hey, I'm 41 years old and I feel comfortable in Lubbock. I can put on my jeans, get in my pickup and go anywhere I want to. Or I can put on a 3-piece suit and go down to one of the banks."

"Either place, either way, I feel comfortable."

Moore arrived at Tech after two years (11-11) at North Texas and assistant coaching stints first at Southern Methodist and later at Nebraska.

During six years with the Cornhuskers, he attended six different bowl games, the Orange, Liberty, Astro-Bluebonnet, Fiesta, Sugar and Cotton.

"We've got the same kind of support at Tech that we had at Nebraska," Moore told some golfing companions recently at Dallas' exclusive Preston Trail.

"We may not always be sold out but we'll be close to it. We got people excited about our program and they want to see something happen."

Two people who make things happen at Tech are quarterback Ron Reeves and defensive tackle Gabriel Rivera.

"Rocket" Ron, as he's called, has compiled a school record 4,213 offensive yards during his three previous seasons, including 3,312 passing.

He's pitched 24 touchdown tosses.

Reeves approved mightily of Moore's decision to abandon the veer formation of Rex Dockery, opting instead for the more exciting I formation.

"I feel more comfortable in the I," said Reeves. "I was an average veer quarterback because of my lack of speed... In the I, there is more of a running load on the running backs so that probably suits my style better."

Reeves forecast a banner year, explaining:

"Our wide receivers are more experienced, our offensive line is more experienced and I'm more experienced."

At 6-3 and 280, Rivera, or "Senor Sack" as he's fondly known, is being touted early on for national honors, and it is around his hulk that the defense is built.

"I've been around coaching for 20 years," said Raider defensive coach Dean Slayton, "and he's the best I've ever been associated with."

Besides Reeves and Rivera, Moore considers his inheritance notable also for punter Maury Buford, who may be one of the best in the country.

He has averaged 42.7 yards for 215 punts in three years.

"I like what Maury Buford does with the football," Moore said. "Maybe folks in Lubbock are used to it but I'm not. I've never been around a punter like him."

Regarding the overall picture, Moore said:

"I think we can be a good football team. We can't, and I stress can't, afford a lot of

JINAN SADAT

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — With a name like Resin the Bow, I found the horse irresistible...

Foundation Chairman Campbell MacLean said Wednesday he has not been told whether Mrs. Sadat will attend the annual fund-raising dinner...

The foundation presents an award each year to a world personality who has made a major contribution to medical research...

The first award was given to Dr. Jonas Salk in 1976. Others have gone to Dr. Christiana Barnard, Britain's Prince Philip, Rosalynn Carter and entertainer Danny Thomas...

NEW YORK (AP) — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, who served a prison sentence after being kidnapped by a terrorist group...

The publisher said Wednesday Miss Hearst was working on "Every Secret Thing" in collaboration with author Alvin Moscow...

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — Jihan Sadat, wife of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, has been chosen for an award from the St. Boniface General Hospital Research Foundation...

Houston (AP) — A flaw in a major concrete structural beam caused Tuesday's collapse of a section of the top floor of a parking garage...

"We don't feel it's an engineering defect at this time," said M.S. "Dude" Parmley, a deputy building official. He said an 8-inch-thick supporting lip gave way...

Twenty cars were damaged when a 27-foot by 60-foot section of the top floor of the three-story building collapsed into the second floor...

The garage served an office building and bank owned by the Friendswood Development Co., a subsidiary of Exxon Corp.

Woman convicted of plotting husband's death
HOUSTON (AP) — A state district court jury took less than an hour Wednesday to find Linda Long guilty of plotting the murder of her sixth husband...

Mrs. Long, 31, was convicted in the Feb. 16 death of David Eugene Dixon after a week of testimony before visiting State District Judge Van Stovall.

Keith Pharaoh Johnson, 24, testified he shot Dixon, then choked him and finally beat him with an ax Johnson already has pleaded guilty to murder in the killing.

Johnson said Mrs. Long wanted Dixon dead because he refused to give her a divorce. Mrs. Long lured Dixon to her house to be killed, Johnson testified. He said Mrs. Long then used sex to manipulate him into killing Dixon.

But Mrs. Long testified she unwittingly led Dixon into Johnson's trap when she invited him to her house to discuss a divorce. She denied involvement in the slaying.

"I don't think even grade-F soap operas come up with that kind of stuff," said prosecutor Tommy Royce. He said he was especially astounded at Mrs. Long's testimony that she heard no commotion while the killing was going on.

Third jury deadlocks in guard's trial

HOUSTON (AP) — A security guard charged with rape was granted his third mistrial when a state district court jury, like its two predecessors, deadlocked Wednesday in deciding his guilt or innocence.

Allen D. Sipsy's attorney promised to resist attempts to try his client a fourth time.

Wednesday's trial ended after more than five hours of deliberations when the jury told visiting State District Judge Joe Ned Dean of Groveton that it was hopelessly deadlocked.

Defense attorney William J. Rice Jr. said three deadlocked juries indicated there was not sufficient evidence to convict Sipsy and said he will file a motion in the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals to stop a fourth trial.

Sipsy, 34, is accused of posing as a police officer, going to the apartment of a 21-year-old woman and saying he had an arrest warrant for her.

The woman told police her assailant took her to a car, drove to another apartment, threatened her with a pistol and raped her.

Sipsy was arrested two days later. He maintained that the woman consented to have sex with him and that he had known her before the incident.

The lady is a hard-boiled private eye

EDITOR'S NOTE — The lady is a gunshoe, more and more. The Hollywood image of hard-boiled, trench-coated private eyes is giving way to more feminine wear — and wife. Here's a look at what it's like to be a lady private detective.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — She dressed like a millionaire's wife at an Oriental rug collection to check on a lawyer's income.

She donned a purple jump suit to tail a possibly errant wife around Manhattan.

She once forlornly over $15 to a cleaning lady to trade clothes with her. The cleaning lady lurking in the staircase wore the business suit; Roberta in the dingy grays walked into the executive's inner sanctum — feather duster in one hand, the subpoena he had been ducking in the other.

Roberta Cabot, private eye. She's one of the few women in a business that can be occasionally noble, sometimes sleazy, invariably demanding, once in a while dangerous, and, much too often, boring. Bulldozing is what they call the boring part.

The night Ms. Cabot wore the purple jump suit was a bulldozing night. The night before it was canceled at the 11th hour because the client learned that his wife, known in the trade as the "subject," would not be meeting the "male paramour."

The next evening she and her partner, a man in his 30s, sit in a car outside an office building. From 4 p.m., they sit. Twice the cops ask them to move. Ms. Cabot says she's a private detective and flashes a laminated card with her picture on it. The cops let them stay.

At 7 p.m. the subject emerges. She goes the wrong way down a one-way street. The partners split up. That's why they work in teams.

Subject meets a girl friend for dinner. Nothing further that's more exciting. At 10:30 Ms. Cabot's boss asks her to drop it for tonight.

Nothing gained. Just boring.

But it's a job this 34-year-old divorced mother of two loves.

Her boss, Irwin Blye, a private detective so colorful he is the subject of an inside book about the business, thinks she's terrific.

"She's never failed to deliver a subpoena," says Blye. "I wish I had more like her."

Not that he was too crazy about hiring her in the first place.

"I pestered him for six months to give me a job," says Ms. Cabot, an attractive brunette.

Although there are no exact figures, industry sources estimate that only about 5 percent of the nation's private detectives are women.

Jay J. Armes, the Texas private detective famed for finding the stolen son of Marlon Brando, says more and more women are coming into the business. Five years ago, he employed 11. Now he has 36.

"I've always had female operatives," says Armes. "They have access to areas that men don't — beauty parlors, lounges, shops. But it's a tough job. Your time is

Whether to lease or buy

NEW YORK (AP) — Should you lease rather than buy?

To arrive at an answer you must study deeply because, as one bank notes in offering advice on the subject, "Leasing as an alternative to the outright purchase of a car has advantages and disadvantages."

Buying a house is worse. The near-demise of the conventional, long-term fixed-rate mortgage and the development of alternative mortgage packages has opened a Pandora's box. The confusion can be maddening.

Among the financing possibilities now available, for example, are the conventional mortgage, the seller mortgage, the rollover, graduated, variable, contract sale. It doesn't end there. Variations are possible.

In order to meet the down payment, some buyers accept a short-term second mortgage from the seller, and this by itself can have seemingly infinite variations.

How does a couple confronted with all this manage to work out the countless possibilities? They cannot. The future no longer is fixed; it may vary in unfathomable ways. It involves many more risks.

not your own. You sell your soul to the company store."

Sanford E. Beck, vice president of another agency, Royal-Schutt International, expects to see a lot more women coming into the field.

"First of all, it's easier to get women into a place unnoticed. They just fade in. And secondly, and I don't want to sound sexist here, women are just nosier."

"I'll send a man out on a buy of stolen merchandise and he'll come back with a one-page report. I'll send a woman out and she'll come back with 12 pages."

Aurora Bruni, another operative, jokes that she's caressed a lot of male partners in her five-year work — not because of passion, but because a quick clinch, hug or kiss allays suspicions when the team spends hours in a parked car staking out a place.

Pat Manion works in security at Xerox. This fall, she'll give a paper at a convention in New Orleans on women in security. She has a theory why there are so few of them.

"I hate to say this, because I'm Irish myself, but the private detective field is pretty much dominated by retired Irish cops and they just don't see women doing this kind of work," she says.

The women who do it, though, feel that being a woman sometimes helps.

Connie Newsom, a 43-year-old private eye with the Garrison Agency, allows that she can slip past doormen in private apartment buildings or loiter around offices without causing suspicion.

"I'm only 5 feet tall. Nobody sees me as a threat," she says.

Mrs. Newsom is a trained economist, is close to her Ph.D., and has taught at Tulane University and Louisiana State. She considers her academic background valuable in her detective work.

Some firms don't handle matrimonial cases. Fidelity Detective Agency, Miss Bruni's employer, does. She's been virtually leading a double life in recent months, pursuing evidence in a paternity suit.

The client, well-known, confessed to a brief affair with a young woman who now claimed she was pregnant and wanted a lot of money. He wasn't sure he was the father, nor was he convinced she was pregnant. Although he was divorced, he didn't want the case all over front pages for the sake of his children.

Miss Bruni and a partner flew to Las Vegas and rented a condominium. Movie stars were neighbors. So was the possibly pregnant Miss X.

Miss Bruni hung around the pool, got to know and befriended Miss X. "She confided in me and told me she was pregnant," Miss Bruni's partner stayed out of sight, armed with a camera to take pictures of other boy friends. There weren't any.

Miss X got suspicious when Miss Bruni's "boy friend" never showed at the pool. "I told her he was a bookie and on the phone all the time," Miss Bruni says. That turned out to be useful when Miss X and Miss Bruni got back to New York. She now told Miss X her boyfriend-bookie wouldn't let her give out her address or phone number, and that she's living off him.

"That's something she would understand," says Miss Bruni, who has not grown fond of this woman despite innumerable lunches and visits to doctors' offices, all of which wind up on Miss Bruni's expense account. Miss X doesn't reach for a check very nimbly.

The case may wind up in court, though Miss Bruni hopes it won't. The flexible Miss X originally asked $50,000 but bethought herself of a famous palimony lawyer and the claim rose to a quarter of a million.

"Does Miss Bruni have qualms about pretending to be Miss X's friend?"

"If it were a different kind of woman, I might, but not this one," she says. Staying emotionally aloof from a case is desirable, the women detectives agree, but often difficult.

Miss Bruni recalls the first time she had pangs of guilt. She had to deliver a subpoena to a woman on Long Island, the start of divorce proceedings. The husband hadn't had the courage to tell his wife.

"He came to the door when I rang the bell and he said, 'Annie, I think it's one of your friends'..."

"Then his wife came to the door and she was fat and just let herself go and he was dumping her. As I walked away I could hear him saying, 'Well, you knew it was coming.' I felt terrible."

Mrs. Newsom, the economist-turned-detective, says she often finds it difficult to avoid emotion.

"I feel a very strong bonding with the women," she concedes.

But there's one aspect of her work where no question of guilt feelings arise — tracking down heirs in cases where there's no will. That she enjoys.

"I like nothing better than finding a pot of gold for some unsuspecting soul," she says, sounding not at all like a hard-boiled private eye.
