

Hinckley indicted in shooting

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr., the troubled son of a wealthy Denver oilman, was indicted by a federal grand jury today on charges of shooting President Reagan, White House press secretary James Brady and two law enforcement officers in a March 30 assassination attempt.

The 11 men and 10 women on the grand jury filed into a courtroom and formally returned the indictment before U.S. magistrate Jean F. Dwyer, Assistant U.S. attorney Rogemede the only mention of Hinckley's name when he asked the magistrate to consolidate several case docket numbers involving Hinckley.

The entire proceeding took about one minute. Copies of the indictment were not immediately available.

Hinckley, 26, whose father heads the Vanderbilt Energy Corp. in Denver, wrote in an unmailed letter to actress Jody Foster that he wanted to "get Reagan" to prove his love for her. The letter was discovered by investigators after Hinckley's arrest.

Since the shootings, Hinckley has been confined in a single cell in the brig at the Marine base at Quantico, Va., south of Washington, except for two weeks of court-ordered psychiatric tests at the federal correctional institution at Butner, N.C. He was returned to Quantico from Butner last Tuesday.

The next legal step will be Hinckley's arraignment before a federal judge, where he will enter a plea of guilty or innocent.

If Hinckley pleads innocent, the court must decide whether he is competent to stand trial — a question that psychiatrists have been trying to answer. A report by court-appointed medical experts already has been submitted to Chief Judge William B. Bryant of U.S. District Court, but was placed under seal by the judge.

Hinckley's lawyers may raise the defense of innocent by reason of insanity in an attempt to have the former drifter committed to a mental institution.

Earlier, it was learned that government prosecutors had rejected a plea bargain offer made by Hinckley's lawyers. Under the bargain, Hinckley would have pleaded guilty to some charge in the attack in return for a government recommendation that he be sentenced under special provisions of the federal juvenile law covering persons up to age 26.

That arrangement could have permitted his release much sooner than normal. Hinckley was 25 at the time of his arrest.

If convicted of the charges against him, Hinckley could be sentenced to life imprisonment.

When Hinckley was arrested, prosecutors charged him with attempting to assassinate the president and with assault on a federal officer, Secret Service agent Timothy J. McCarthy.

At that time, no charges were filed in the shootings of White House press secretary James S. Brady and Washington policeman Thomas Delahanty, but those charges were included in the indictment handed down today.

Reagan and McCarthy have recovered from their wounds in the assassination attempt. Brady remains in George Washington University Hospital for treatment of brain damage for which he has undergone four operations. Brady was listed in good condition after the last one, which took place Thursday. Delahanty still suffers numbness in one arm, and remains on sick leave from the District of Columbia police department.

Brady, 40, was shot in the head. Delahanty, 45, suffered a neck wound. Reagan, 70, has resumed his full presidential duties, and McCarthy, 32, is back on the Secret Service's presidential protection detail. Both suffered chest wounds.

Swedish storm embassy held by Iranians

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Riot police stormed the Iranian Embassy today to end its occupation by 30 Iranian students who were holding the ambassador and his wife hostage to protest "fascist executions" in Iran, authorities said.

"No one was hurt," said police spokesman Lennart Lindgren. "The students gave up without a struggle but they had caused considerable damage to embassy facilities."

He said "some 30 students" were arrested after the police — helmeted, armed and accompanied by police dogs — took back control of the embassy. The charges were not immediately disclosed.

Police said the students stormed the embassy and residence at Lidingsö, an island suburb of Stockholm, about 9 a.m. — 2 a.m. EDT — taking Ambassador Abdol Rahim Gavahi and his wife hostage. Police were guarding the embassy but made no immediate move to expel the students.

The students' spokesman said the group represented Peykar and Fedayeen, two Iranian Marxist-Leninist groups opposed to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Moslem fundamentalist regime.

"We are 30 unarmed students," the spokesman said. "The ambassador and his wife are in another room. We told them not to leave and they did not protest."

A spokeswoman for the students later called the AP to read a communique which included four demands: Freedom for all political prisoners in Iran, an immediate halt to executions, a Swedish government protest against the Iranian regime, and a dispatch of an international judicial delegation to Iran to investigate prison conditions and alleged torture of prisoners.

The students said they planned to hold a news conference later today to "tell about conditions in Iran," but they gave no indication of other plans.

A recent occupation of the Iranian

Embassy in Oslo, Norway by Iranian leftist students from Sweden ended peacefully after the students held a news conference.

That group called on Norway to support their struggle against the Tehran regime, and surrendered to police who sent them back to Sweden. No legal action was taken against them.

The student spokesman at the Stockholm embassy said they were not the same people who occupied the embassy in Oslo.

Iran announced Sunday that it had arrested 480 "counterrevolutionaries" in raids on guerrilla hideouts and executed 23 more opponents of the Islamic government.

Tehran Radio said more than half of those arrested in recent days were members of the Mujahedeen Khalq, the leftist organization supporting Bani-Sadr, who is in exile in Paris along with Mujahedeen Khalq leader Massoud Rajavi.

Mujahedeen Khalq has been waging a campaign of assassinations and bombings to undermine the clergy-led government in Iran. Government firing squads have executed more than 400 leftists in the past two months.

School starts today -- for TEACHERS!!

School begins today for Pampa teachers with an in-service workshop, which began this morning at M. K. Brown Auditorium, and will continue through the week.

Monday's agenda began with a coffee from 8:15 to 8:45 a.m., hosted by the Pampa Association of Education. An assembly from 8:45 to 10:30 was presided over by Bob G. Phillips, Superintendent.

At 10:45 a.m., Don Berry, UniServ Rep. of the Texas State Teachers Association, was to address the staff on "Coping with Stress and Avoiding Burn Out."

A luncheon for new teachers and administrators was to be conducted in the Heritage Room, hosted by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. The faculty then were to attend respective school meetings conducted by the principals of each school.

Tuesday's agenda will begin at 8:30 a.m. in M. K. Brown Auditorium, with an Assertive Discipline Workshop, conducted by Bill Potts, Pampa High School mathematics teacher, assisted by Bill Haynes, Pampa High School Librarian - Audio Visual Services.

Wednesday will begin with enrollment of students at 8:30 a.m. Elementary schools and Pampa Middle School will have buses running at their regular pick-up time, with students to return home at 10:30 a.m.

High school faculty members will have a discussion group, a follow-up on the Discipline Workshop and review the new Pampa High School Handbook.

At 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, the high school faculty will meet in the library.

A luncheon will follow in the Flame Room of the Energas Building, honoring new teachers. This luncheon is hosted by the Pampa Association of Educators.

Thursday's agenda begins at 8:30 a.m. with a Student Motivation - Self-Concept seminar, conducted by consultant John Picco. This workshop is for all elementary and secondary staff members who are not required to attend a Reading Workshop, conducted at the same time by consultant Ann Zimmerman. The Reading Workshop is for reading teachers, aides, and volunteers (grades 1-3). Title I teachers and aides, special education reading teachers and aides.

Carson grand jury hears Borger case

The Carson County Grand Jury today holds the fate of Borger law enforcement officers in their hands as the jurors consider evidence of the early shooting of the 6666 Ranch foreman reportedly mistaken as an armed fugitive being pursued by city police and Hutchinson County officers.

Further evidence of the early morning events leading to the shooting will be considered by a Hutchinson County grand jury on Aug. 28.

Jim Grandstaff, 31, was killed when he stepped from his pickup truck while trying to aid police officers, who were on the ranch located 10 miles east of Borger, searching for an Oklahoma fugitive.

A spokesman for the Carson County Clerk's office today said the 100th District Court Grand Jury went into session at 9:30 a.m. and were still hearing evidence in the shooting at press time today.

The Carson County grand jury will be hearing testimony from various law enforcement officers and witnesses concerning the details surrounding the Grandstaff's death.

Borger police chief Arthur Waight had said earlier that six police officers were involved in the incident.

The shooting is being investigated by Texas Rangers.

Aug. 20, dissatisfied with local law enforcement efforts in investigating the death of Grandstaff, 60 Sanford and Borger residents met sign a petition, calling for an investigation of the shooting by Attorney General Mark White.

Mary Hardesty, a spokesman for the Attorney General's office said the request from the citizens group was "very unusual." She said it was the "policy" of the attorney general to investigate incidents only when asked by the local prosecuting attorney.

Also injured in the gun battle on Aug. 11, was Lonnie Cox, 26, of Flippin, Ark. Cox, suffering from a gunshot wound to the right shoulder, was arrested near where Grandstaff was shot, on charges of aggravated assault with a firearm against a peace officer and deadly assault with a firearm against a peace officer.

Cox reportedly was the subject being pursued by police in connection with a grand larceny warrant out of Sayre, Okla.

Cox was in Hutchinson County Jail at Stinnett in lieu of a $25,000 bond today.

Pampa grand jury hears arsenic poisoning case

The arsenic poisoning of eight Cabot Carbon Black employees is one of 16 cases being considered today by the 31st District Grand Jury.

A spokesman for the District Clerk's office here said the grand jury remained in session at 10 minutes until noon today.

Earlier, the District Attorney Harold Comer said the Cabot arsenic poisoning would be one of the 16 cases to be reviewed by the grand jurors today.

No charges have been filed in connection with the July 9 incident in which eight carbon black employees became ill after drinking coffee from a coffee pot at the plant during the midnight shift.

None of the employees required hospitalization.

An analysis of the coffee served that night proved arsenic was contained in the liquid.

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan and Cabot security head Frank Leonard of Boston jointly investigated the case.

Several employees of the Cabot company underwent lie detector tests during the investigation.

The law enforcement officials said no names or other information concerning the case would be released until the grand jury completed its daylong session.

Drilling rig accident kills worker from McLean

FOLLETT - A drilling rig accident, five miles south of Follett, took the life of a 21 year-old McLean man Saturday evening.

Timmy Lee Johnston died instantly of extensive head injuries, when he was struck by heavy back-up tongs while working on Rig No. 38 for Sharp Drilling Company, according to Walker Freeman, Lipscomb County Deputy Sheriff.

A O. Haferkamp, Lipscomb County Justice of the Peace and acting coroner, was called to the scene. Haferkamp said the tongs, which hang from a cable, apparently were accidentally set in motion and then struck Johnston.

The accident occurred about 8 p.m. An ambulance was called to the scene from Follett.

Johnston had been employed by Sharp Drilling Company for about five days.

A spokesman for Sharp in Elk City, Okla. refused to comment.

Johnston was born in McLean, Feb. 13, 1960. He attended McLean public schools, graduating in 1978. He was affiliated with the Methodist Church.

Services will be tomorrow at 3 p.m., in the First United Methodist Church with the Rev. Buel Wells, pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Hillcrest Cemetery by Lamb Funeral Home.

City commission to choose vehicle impounding agent

Pampa city commissioners will open bids for an impounding agent for the abandoned vehicles ordinance now in effect during the regular commission meeting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in city hall.

As authorized in the abandoned vehicle ordinance, approved by commissioners on June 9, the city will accept bids from local businesses to serve as the impounding agent for abandoned autos found in violation of the city law.

Commissioners also will consider authorizing the submittal of applications by the Pampa Police Department for six grants from the state. Police have applied for grants for a school liaison officer, a crime scene recorder, portable radios, mobile radios, a juvenile officer and an intelligence unit.

A public hearing on the proposed expenditure of the 1981-82 Revenue Sharing Funds will be conducted during Tuesday's meeting. At the hearing, Pampanos will be able to voice opinions on the use of the federal money towards civic improvements.

First reading of an ordinance annexing and zoning a portion of the Tumbleweed Addition to the city will be heard by commissioners.

City fathers will consider setting Sept. 8 as the date for a public hearing on several zoning changes.

In final action, commissioners will consider approval of current due bills.

Dogfight pilot says he fired in self-defense

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — One of the two U.S. Navy pilots who shot down two Libyan warplanes last week said today he fired in self-defense but knew at the time it would "cause a ruckus."

"I saw we had been fired upon (and) they might do it again. The only acceptable course of action was to fire myself," Cmdr. Henry Kleemann, in charge of the two jets on patrol over the Mediterranean, told a news conference.

"It passed through my mind that it was going to cause a ruckus. I had no choice," Kleemann told reporters aboard the USS Nimitz, the home aircraft carrier for the American F-14 jet fighters. The Nimitz docked in the Bay of Naples early today.

The second pilot on the mission, Lt. Lawrence M. Muczynski, said he also saw the Libyan plane fire its missile and turned to chase it as a defensive action.

"The air crews correctly acted in self-defense," 8th Fleet commander Vice Adm. William Rowden said. "They did not require or ask for any specific authorization from Admiral (James) Service or anyone else." Adm. James E. Service was commander of the task force on maneuvers.

In the day and a half before Wednesday's dogfight, American planes on maneuvers encountered Libyan planes 39 times without incident, Rowden said. He said a Libyan submarine also was spotted in the area during the war games.

SCHOOL FACULTY members began their school today with in-service workshops at M. K. Brown Auditorium. Fire report

Aug. 22
 11 p.m. - Pampa firefighters were called to R & R Fertilizer Inc., 508 W. Wilks, on a report of an ammonia leak. Firefighters discovered the source of the leak was a filler hose valve to an anhydrous ammonia tank that had cracked open. A cloud of ammonia was around the leak area, but a spokesman for the fire department said that because of weather conditions and the isolated location, the cloud was not a threat.

Aug. 23
 4:45 a.m. - A house fire was reported at a wood frame residence at 837 E. Craven. Firefighters said the house received extensive fire damage to the kitchen, and heat and smoke damage to the rest of the house, which was unoccupied at the time of the fire. The two-bedroom house is owned by Delbert Johnson and rented by Robert Baggett.

Aug. 24
 9 a.m. - Pampa firefighters were called to 1138 S. Dwight to retrieve a large bullsnake from the living room of the Charles E. Hammons residence. The snake was estimated to be between four and five feet long. No injuries to the snake, firefighters, or residents were reported. The snake was deposited in a more suitable living area, firefighters said.

Minor accidents

Aug. 22
 2:35 p.m. - A 1977 Chevrolet, driven by Linda Armstrong, 21, of 864 S. Banks, came into collision with a 1974 Chrysler, driven by Albert Rivers, 25, of Amarillo in the 1100 block of North Hobart. A 1979 Ford pickup truck, driven by Randall Jeinkski, 23, of 111 S. Nelson, also was involved in the accident. Armstrong was cited for following too closely. Armstrong reported possible injuries but did not receive medical attention at the scene of the accident.

5:29 p.m. - A 1960 GMC pickup truck, driven by Danny Lee Martin, 21, of Pampa, came into collision with a properly parked 1974 Dodge at 600 Cuyler. Martin was cited for failing to maintain a single lane of traffic.

Time says Nixon protected Fitzsimmons

NEW YORK (AP) - Frank Fitzsimmons, the late Teamsters president, told IRS agents that former President Richard Nixon had ordered him protected from government investigators, Time magazine says.

Fitzsimmons worked for the Internal Revenue Service as a government informer against Jimmy Hoffa, his predecessor. Time said in its current issue.

The magazine says Fitzsimmons, William Presser, then boss of the Ohio Teamsters, and his son, Jackie, met regularly with IRS agents between 1972 and 1974, to inform on Hoffa, St. Louis Teamster leader Harold Gibbons and Las Vegas casino builder Jay Sarno.

The magazine, quoting Internal Revenue Service documents, says the three sought to save themselves from criminal investigations by informing against their enemies. Fitzsimmons, allegedly feared that Hoffa, who later disappeared, would seek to regain power in the union.

Sarno was tried on charges of attempting to bribe an IRS agent, but was acquitted. The informers were not successful in their attempts to get the government to charge Hoffa and Gibbons.

The magazine says Fitzsimmons told IRS agents he asked for a meeting with Nixon in late 1972. "At that session the President allegedly summoned Attorney General Richard Kleindienst and personally ordered him to make sure that government investigations of the Teamsters then in progress did not harm Fitzsimmons or his allies," the magazine said.

Fitzsimmons died in May and the elder Presser died in July. The younger Presser, now an international vice president of the Teamsters, was a senior labor adviser in President Reagan's transition team.

"So, I'm a fink?" Jackie Presser told the magazine. "I can't be responsible for what's in government reports."

Time quoted him as admitting he, his father and Fitzsimmons met with IRS agents once in 1972, but denied meeting with them more than once.

Kleindienst denied that Nixon told him to go easy on Fitzsimmons.

Judge to rule on fumigation for medfly

DALLAS (AP) - U.S. District Judge Patrick Higginbotham has promised to rule this week on Texas' request to have incoming California fruits and produce fumigated to quash the spread of the Mediterranean fruit fly.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown asked the judge either to lift an earlier order barring Texas from restricting California produce shipments or direct the federal government to expand its own California medfly quarantine. Higginbotham said he would announce his decision Tuesday morning.

Until Higginbotham rules on the state's request, Brown has promised to take no action against shipments of California fruit and produce entering the state. Last week, Brown threatened to begin fumigating the fruit and produce to ensure they were free of the medfly.

Brown contended during a court hearing Saturday that the U.S. Department of Agriculture's quarantine of the medfly-infested areas of California is insufficient to control the insect and keep it from spreading to other states.

He told the judge that produce coming from counties surrounding those in which the medfly has been found should be fumigated.

Brown has proposed to spray all suspect shipments from California at the expense of Texas taxpayers - not California growers.

Attorneys for California growers and producers maintained Brown would be in contempt of court if he pursued his fumigation proposals without Higginbotham's approval.

The federal government technically has quarantined all of California, but is imposing restrictions on produce shipments only in those counties where the Medfly has already been found.

Study says private cells would curb violence

WASHINGTON (AP) - At a time when the Reagan administration wants to put more criminals behind bars, a new federally financed study says private cells and smaller prisons would curb rising inmate violence.

The study, done for the Justice Department's National Institute of Justice, found that long-term inmates of overcrowded prisons die, are killed, commit suicide, become ill and create disciplinary problems more frequently than those confined in private cells of at least 50 square feet. The study by the University of Texas at Arlington was released Sunday.

In addition, large prisons produce much more severe physical and psychological ill effects than small institutions, the researchers said.

The study concluded that the ideal prison for avoiding these problems would house about 500 inmates in single rooms or cubicles.

The reports comes in a year in which violence has erupted in state prisons in Florida, Hawaii, Michigan, Nevada, New Jersey and New York and a year after 33 inmates were killed in a New Mexico prison riot.

Twenty-four state prison systems are so overcrowded they have been ruled in violation of constitutional guarantees against cruel and unusual punishment.

But the Supreme Court ruled earlier this year, in a case involving Ohio prisons, that it is not automatically unconstitutional to put two prisoners in a cell designed for one.

Despite sharp federal budget cuts, Attorney General William French Smith's task force on violent crime recommended last week that the federal government provide $2 billion in aid to help build state prisons over the next four years.

Illinois Gov. James Thompson, the panel's co-chairman, identified this recommendation as "the lynchpin" of the group's proposals, most of which were aimed at putting more violent criminals behind bars.

The panel recommended that the new prisons house no more than 750 inmates rather than the thousands often locked in old-style, three-tiered penitentiaries.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., has proposed spending $6.5 billion over seven years on prisons and other criminal justice facilities.

Social Security cuts pay to prisoners

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Social Security Administration says it has cut off disability payments to 1,900 prisoners in the past year and is trying to halt checks for 1,000 other felons. And there may be more the agency can't find.

Social Security began an exhaustive search of prison records and its files 10 months ago in accordance with a new law barring disability payments to felons in prison.

Among several convicted murderers who had been certified disabled because of mental illness related to their crimes was David Berkowitz, New York's confessed "Son of Sam" killer.

Rhoda Greenberg, director of Social Security's office of disability programs, estimated that in addition to the 2,900 cases suspended or in the process, there may be 300 more prisoners still getting checks whom the agency has not found.

"We had trouble finding them for a number of reasons," she said in a telephone interview from her office outside Baltimore. "Prisons do not keep neat little lists according to Social Security numbers in formats that match up against Social Security records by pushing a button."

"Prisons keep records in any way they see fit," she said, adding that 30 percent of prisons do not even list inmates' Social Security number.

Complicating the task is the fact that "most checks do not go to the individual in prison... They either go to (banks by) direct deposit or they would continue to go to an address that the individual maintained prior to prison," she said.

The disability ban pushed through Congress by Rep. G. William Whitehurst, R-Va., affected not only felons who became disabled in the course of their crime but also those whose disability predated their offense.

Ms. Greenberg said a lifelong worker disabled on the job and subsequently sent to jail would face suspension of his benefits.

But that prisoner's spouse and children could keep getting family benefits, and the prisoner's payments would resume once he was freed.

Some Social Security officials last year were hesitant about whether the ban was constitutional. Ms. Greenberg said it has not been challenged in court yet.

A handful of prisoners have asked for exemptions under a provision of the law that allows the agency to keep paying disability benefits if the prisoner is participating in a court-approved vocational rehabilitation program.

"Up to this time, we have not found any of those cases to meet (that) requirement," she said. Two are pending.

Bell wants to charge for local phone calls

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texans should be billed for local telephone calls the same way they pay for other goods and services — according to how much they use, says a Southwestern Bell official.

Paul Roth, vice president for revenues in Texas, was the company's leadoff witness today as a Public Utility Commission hearing examiner began sorting out the telephone giant's record $469.8 million rate hike request.

The PUC staff has recommended a $248.1 million increase. The Texas Municipal League, representing cities served by Bell, recommended a $172 million increase.

Most of Southwestern Bell's proposed increase would come from hikes in monthly bills for basic services. Residential bills would go up by $5.45, and business service would go up by as much as $14.40. Roth said "measured service" is the best alternative to higher monthly bills.

"Most all other products and services (certainly all utilities) are so priced. It seems only fair and reasonable to price telephone service on the same basis," Roth said in prefilled testimony.

Measured service would mean local calls would be billed like long-distance calls — according to time of day, duration of call and distance of call. Southwestern Bell wants to offer it as an alternative to flat-rate service.

"We don't know of a more equitable way to price service than on usage, particularly in this time of rapid price escalation," said Roth.

Increased local rates are inevitable, Roth said, because of competition in other areas. "Local exchange service is producing revenues significantly below cost," he said.

That was fine when the company made good profits on long-distance service. However, increasing competition in the long-distance field has forced Bell to keep those charges down.

"We have competition, or the immediate potential for competition, in virtually every phase of our business, except local service," Roth said.

"Under these circumstances, it seems to me that the time is near when service must stand on its own feet. Substantial local rate increases are necessary," he said.

Roth was the first of many witnesses scheduled to testify during the hearing, which could last for six weeks.

For the first time ever, two PUC examiners are working on a single case. Carolyn Shellman opened the hearing today. She will make a recommendation on how much Bell should get. Examiner Bob Gillespie will take over when "rate design" — who should pay the higher rates — is discussed.

For Hughes' fortune

Distant relatives challenge cousins, law

HOUSTON (AP) — Howard Hughes' death touched off a clamor for his fortune by hundreds of distant relatives who now must overturn a Texas law and discredit a dead cousin to inherit half the late billionaire's estate.

At stake is half of the estate valued at between $180 million and $2 billion that a Texas probate law says belongs to the adopted children and grandchildren of Hughes' late uncle.

However, attorneys for about 500 second, third and fourth cousins on Hughes' father's side will try to convince a six-person jury that Hughes' late cousin Elspeth Hughes Lapp was the child of an illicit love affair and not entitled to share in the estate.

Lawyers prepared to begin quizzing 25 prospective jurors today about their opinions on sterility, adultery and legitimacy.

The trial is the final hearing to determine who shares in the estate. Sixteen surviving cousins on Hughes' mothers' side, or their heirs, already secured half the fortune after Probate Judge Pat Gregory ruled Hughes left no will and no immediate survivors when he died in 1976.

Distant relatives must convince jurors to rule that Elspeth was illegitimate despite a Texas law that holds any child conceived before or during a marriage is presumed to be legitimate.

If the panel upholds the law, all 500 claims would be automatically wiped out. If jurors disagree, the lengthy and complicated proceeding would recess and a second nationwide search for other possible relatives would begin.

Although the question of legitimacy does not directly involve the two adopted children — one who has died since the estate battle began — their claims also hinge on the jury's decision.

Most of the distant relatives contend Elspeth was not the biological daughter of Rupert Hughes, a New York playwright and author. Instead, they argue, she was the issue of an illicit love affair between her mother and one of nine lovers named in a bitter custody fight for the child.

The distant relatives say Rupert Hughes could not have been the father because he had the mumps as a teen-ager and was sterile. However, their attorneys admit, those claims are backed by family legend rather than medical evidence.

Attorneys for Elspeth's daughters had sought to exclude all non-scientific evidence from the trial.

Gregory agreed to rule on the relevancy of any non-scientific evidence before it is presented to the panel.

To further complicate the 5-year-old litigation, a few of the distant relatives have a totally different story to explain why Elspeth cannot be the link to the Hughes bloodline.

They say that Elspeth drowned in a swimming pool as a small child and contended that the mother of Rupert Hughes — three granddaughters — was the daughter of his third wife by a former marriage.

Judge's financial dealing under scrutiny by FBI

DALLAS (AP) — The FBI is investigating an allegation that a Fort Worth district judge solicited a $10,000 bribe from an employee of Rex Cauble, a Denton rancher recently indicted on drug racketeering charges, a Dallas newspaper reported Sunday.

That allegation is only one part of the FBI's investigation of the financial relationship between Judge Byron Matthews and Cauble, the Dallas Morning News said in a copyright story.

Matthews, recently empowered to authorize wiretaps in state drug cases, denied the allegation in an interview with The Dallas Morning News. But he acknowledged that the FBI and a Beaumont-based federal grand jury have questioned him about the alleged bribe.

A federal grand jury in Tyler indicted Cauble Aug. 7 on 10 counts of conspiracy and racketeering. The indictment alleges Cauble financed six shipments of marijuana totaling 247,000 pounds from Colombia to several ports along the Texas and Georgia coastlines. The shipments allegedly occurred between January 1977 and November 1978.

If Cauble is convicted, The News said, as many as 13 of his business — including two in which Matthews was a participant — could be seized under federal racketeering laws.

Matthews acknowledged to The News that he has received more than $700,000 in loans and loan guarantees from Cauble. The judge told The News he repaid some of the loans, but only by using other loans from Cauble and never with funds of his own.

Matthews said he did not know he was a target in a federal investigation.

"As a matter of fact, I asked them (federal investigators) and they said, 'Absolutely not,'" he said.

Matthews also said he was unaware of a grand jury subpoena that requests all of Matthews' banking records at Fort Worth's Ridglea Bank.

Matthews said other financial records of his have already been subpoenaed — along with Cauble's — from the Western State Bank of Denton. Cauble owns the Denton bank.

Matthews, 69, was named Aug. 1 by Judge John F. Onion of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals as one of nine judges designated under a new state law to review wiretap requests in Texas drug cases.

Matthews has been a state district court judge since 1962. He has announced plans to retire on Oct. 31.

Man arrested in abduction of his young sister-in-law

DALLAS (AP) — Police have arrested the brother-in-law of a 12-year-old girl who said she was held captive in an attic for seven weeks and raped daily at gunpoint while her efforts to summon help went unheeded.

Charles Grayson, 21, was arrested at his father's home Sunday night and held without bail, said police Sgt. William Huffman. Police were still seeking a second suspect early today.

Huffman said aggravated rape charges were being prepared and that Grayson, who contends he has been framed by the girl's family, would be arraigned in municipal court this morning.

Police found the girl in the attic of Grayson's house Saturday, 20 pounds lighter and still wearing the same green and white nightgown she wore when she disappeared June 26.

"She's still kind of weak, but she's doing a little better," the girl's mother said Sunday. "She can't sleep, though. She just jumps when anybody comes into the house. It'll be a long time before she stops being so jittery."

The girl told police in a signed affidavit that she had been raped daily at gunpoint, had eaten only a bologna sandwich since Tuesday and that she had been allowed to leave the attic prison just once to use the bathroom.

Grayson's 18-year-old wife Gloria told police her husband also had kept her locked inside the house that has burglar bars on the doors and windows for most of the time since she was released from a hospital Tuesday.

Mrs. Grayson was being treated for a troubled pregnancy at Parkland Memorial Hospital during most of her sister's captivity. She gave birth to a premature daughter last week and returned home on Tuesday.

She told the Dallas Times Herald she had known since Thursday that someone was in the attic because, "I heard her beating (on the ceiling) real loud."

But she said her husband told her "it was just a cat."

The girl told police she was abducted at gunpoint from her father's back porch on June 26.

Police said the mother reported the girl missing on June 29.

The mother said the girl called her on June 29 and said she was going to babysit for a woman in Terrell, 30 miles east of Dallas. But she said the girl told her later the suspect "held a gun to her head and made her say she was baby-sitting."

Youth sent to psychiatric hospital

DALLAS (AP) — A 14-year-old boy who killed his parents with seven blasts from a shotgun was in a Dallas psychiatric hospital today where he was committed by a juvenile court judge.

Family Court Judge Craig Penfold Saturday ordered David Keeler committed to Timberlawn Psychiatric Center until his 18th birthday.

The youth had pleaded guilty last Thursday in the July 12 shotgun slayings of his parents, former Arco Oil & Gas Co. president William Keeler and his wife, Anita.

Keeler told psychiatrists he had started thinking about killing his parents about two years ago.

The youth told a psychiatrist he fired seven shots at his mother and father in the bedroom of their fashionable Dallas home "because his parents kept getting up."

Penfold agreed to commit Keeler after both prosecutors and defense lawyers agreed to the move. The judge could have sentenced the youth to the Texas Youth Council, a juvenile detention center. That sentence, too, would have been only until his 18th birthday at the most.

Under Texas law Keeler was too young to stand trial as an adult. Juvenile jurisdiction would end at his 18th birthday.

Penfold also ordered the youth to write a letter to the court every 90 days to tell the judge of his progress and said Keeler's case would be reviewed every four months by hospital officials.

Doug Mulder, a Dallas lawyer who represented Keeler, said he was pleased with the commitment order.

"I have every confidence in this course of treatment. He needs it so desperately at this point," Mulder, a former prosecutor, said.

Dealva Miller, an assistant district attorney who handled the prosecution, said she was also pleased with the judge's decision.

"We will be able to watch every move he makes. If he were at TYC, he could get out in as soon as 12 months. This way, he will be out there for the next three and one-half years," she said.

During the 30-minute sentencing hearing Saturday, Judge Penfold twice asked Keeler why he killed his parents. The youth did not respond to the first question and replied "I don't know" when the judge repeated the question.

Keeler had told psychiatrists he shot his parents because they had complained about a number of things, including his school performance and the length of his hair.

Four psychiatrists testified that the boy was emotionally disturbed and could commit further acts of violence without proper treatment.

Officers claim they were told to make illegal arrests

DALLAS (AP) — A $220,000 damage suit has been filed against the exclusive suburb of Highland Park by a former city policeman who alleges he was fired because he objected to policies that resulted in unconstitutional arrests, searches and seizures.

Michael McDowell and several other former Highland Park officers told the Dallas Times Herald they were asked to detain and jail people without cause, conduct improper searches and harass people just because they were members of a racial or ethnic minority.

"They have the best crime prevention in the world in Highland Park," McDowell told The Dallas Times Herald. "They throw people in jail before they have a chance to commit a crime."

McDowell, 25, was fired in August of 1980 after he contended he was accused falsely of dealing and using drugs and of making a fraudulent workers compensation claim for a June 8, 1980 injury while on duty. He is now a private investigator specializing in corporate and industrial crime.

McDowell, and another officer now working for another department told the newspaper that officers frequently are asked to detain people for no apparent reason — especially minority visitors.

"We do stop a lot of people," said Highland Park Public Safety Director Henry

Gardner, 52, who has been with the department for 30 years. "Our patrolmen don't spend their time sitting in parking lots."

Gardner acknowledged that people who are black or Hispanic, unless they are gardeners or servants, are more likely to be stopped and questioned as they drive in the predominantly white town than are visiting whites.

Drifting toward a draft?

News that the Selective Service system, with the apparent approval of the Reagan administration, is seeking the active prosecution of a handful of young men who have allegedly failed to register for the draft is ominous indeed. When you consider this piece of news in light of the fact that July has come and gone without a pay raise for the military — a pay raise that was virtually a promise almost up to July 1 — you have to wonder. Is there a concerted campaign to undermine the concept of a volunteer military and bring back the draft? If such a sub rosa operation is under way, is it being done with the tacit approval of the Reagan administration, or in defiance of administration policy?

It cannot be doubted that certain members of Congress — most notably the irrepresible Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia — yearn and ache for a return to conscripted military forces, for whatever deepseated reasons motivate such yearnings. Some senior military officials also make little effort to conceal their desire to bring back the draft. These officials have their allies in the media. Drew Middleton of the New York Times recently wrote an article that was an unabashed call for conscription. His statements on the quality of recruits under the voluntary system were uncomplicated by statistics, for the good reason that Defense Department statistics directly refute the notion of the deteriorating quality of recruits.

As a candidate, Reagan declared his opposition to a peacetime draft and to draft registration in peacetime. As president, his actions have not been so forthright. He has the power to eliminate registration by executive order, a power he could have exercised his first day in office. He failed to exercise that power then, and has continued to fail to do so. Thus a promise he could have redeemed at any time in the last six months remains unfulfilled. The decision to attempt prosecution of 134 young men who have allegedly failed to register can be taken as evidence that Reagan has no intention of eliminating registration.

The major fact that critics of the volunteer military seem to want to ignore is that military pay has decreased by 20 percent due to the ravages of inflation, since 1973. Military pay also appears lower because so much of it is indirect — consisting of medical benefits for families and PX and commissary privileges — that it is almost a miracle that any young, single men sign up at all. Despite these problems, recruitment is still remarkably healthy.

It seems obvious that the most important solution to whatever manpower problems exist in the military involves reforming the pay structure so as to attract the best possible quality of recruits. It is difficult to avoid a certain suspicion at the continuing reluctance to address this issue while trial balloons about a draft or some form of compulsory national service are being launched. Is there a quiet conspiracy afoot to sabotage the voluntary military, to assure that it fails, in order to justify a return to conscription?

We believe that President Reagan was sincere in his campaign opposition to conscription, and that he would genuinely prefer to end registration. We understand that spending and tax cut legislation have dominated his attention for the first months of his administration, perhaps rightfully so.

However, there is a great danger that, like any president, Reagan could become entrapped by bureaucratic and congressional forces that were in motion long before he assumed office. If Reagan doesn't act soon to end draft registration, we can hardly escape the conclusion that he intends to abandon his opposition to a peacetime draft by default. Insofar as there are genuine manpower problems facing the military services (and we believe many of the stated concerns are genuine), we see no evidence that any of them would be alleviated by conscription, and a good deal of evidence that conscription would make most of them a good deal worse.

It is time for President Reagan to act boldly, to eliminate draft registration and initiate a thorough going reform of the military pay structure designed to make the voluntary military work instead of designing it to fail. If he doesn't exercise leadership soon, Reagan may become a victim of bureaucratic drift by default. Much more tragically, an entire generation of young men could become victims of the unhealthy zeal for conscription that infects much of Washington.

Plea bargaining try by Hinkley lawyers

Lawyers for John W. Hinckley Jr., the 25-year-old man charged with attempting to assassinate President Reagan, apparently weren't born yesterday.

Aware that the usual defenses stand little chance in a murder try witnessed by millions of TV viewers, Hinckley's attorneys attempted to twist the nation's justice system with a new wrinkle — plea bargaining that would result in Hinckley's being sentenced as a juvenile! If it had been successful, the ruse would have put the Denver area man back on the streets in as little as six years.

According to an Associated Press story, Hinckley's attorneys (the firm of Washington criminal lawyer Edward Bennett Williams) offered a guilty plea "to some charge or charges in the case" in return for sentencing under the Federal Youth Corrections Act. This act allows judges to forget that the defendant is older than 21, and permits judges either to grant probation or impose the type of sentence that puts thugs in hospitals for up to six years until "rehabilitation" is achieved.

If the stunt had worked, the apparently forever young Hinckley could have begun prowling gun shops again at the tender age of 32. Fortunately, one problem stood in the way. Hinckley has just turned 26, passing the last day he could be brought under the Youth Corrections Act.

It is, of course, inconceivable that the Justice Department needs to plea bargain in the Hinckley case, and totally implausible that it would consider such a socially suicidal approach to justice, but the mere fact that the legal system has such loopholes tells us much about why the courts are unable to cope with criminals.

The attempt to assassinate President Reagan March 30 captured the attention of the world. Otherwise, this legal maneuver to get Hinckley back into society might have stood a chance of success. But it makes one wonder how many times in less-publicized cases the same maneuver works. Since the avenue of escape is there, it seems likely that many have used it to cheat their way back to freedom.

The nation's judicial system, which seems to give every judgement call to the criminal, and which tirelessly wrings its hands over the defendant's rights, could just about have sealed its death warrant if the Hinckley ploy had worked. This one could never be hidden away.

By ROBERT LEFEVRE

I Hear a great many people talking about their "rights." Some argue that all children have a right to an education. There is a plea to the effect that everyone has a right to medical care. We even hear about the rights of unborn children, voting, eating, housing, avoiding loneliness and making love.

As the concept of "rights" is bandied about it appears to me that a fundamental contradiction emerges. Take, as an example of this, the assertion that a person has a "right" to a job. If that is true, then it would follow that the worker would have a right to whatever he earned as a result of his labors. And if that is true, then the working person would be in a position to spend, save or invest his earnings as he saw fit.

But here we have the claim that every child has a right to an education. Education costs money. If the child has a right to an education, does a working person have a right to refrain from paying for it? If not, then the working person "rightfully" becomes a slave to a child and is expending his labor, not for his own benefit but for the support of another. Does the child's "right" to an education supersede my "right" as an adult, to do as I please with my earnings? My own child may have a "right" to my earnings. But does your child have a right to what I can provide?

This obvious contradiction reappears constantly.

Reality may have its paradoxes, but it does not contradict itself. Nature does not deny what it is. If there are such things as "natural rights" or "human rights," then it must follow that no "natural" contradiction can possibly exist.

What we are looking at is a conspicuous error in the use of an idea. The contradiction is provided, not by reality, or nature, but by government. Thus, we have a concept of "political" rights and a concept of "natural" rights.

What is a political right? As government has invaded this area in an effort to legislate its own kind of Paradise, it has made one claim after another backing each claim with legal formalities and the threat of what will happen to you if you disagree. But every "legal" right is nothing more than a political privilege, bestowed upon some by force and made possible at the expense of others whether or not they approve.

To argue that a person has a "right" to a job is to argue that society owes each person a livelihood. This would mean that no employer has a right to fire, layoff or discharge a worker. If everyone has a "right" to work, then every employer must hire everyone who asks. No one would have a right to turn down a person who has a right to what he asks for.

This is nonsense. When the government compels it, then employers become enslaved to workers. It means that businesses of all kinds exist, not to provide goods and services to customers, but to provide jobs. Never mind what the enterprise produces. The important thing is to keep people working regardless of what is produced.

This is, indeed, the characteristic of all legal "rights." What the government identifies as a right and enforces is nothing more than a political privilege, in which some are injured to the benefit of others.

If this is true, is there such a thing as a "natural" or "human" right? The moment I raise that question scores of voices will be heard contending that the idea of "natural or human rights" is mystical, religious, theocratic and unscientific.

It is my contention that there are natural rights; that they are readily apparent and have nothing to do with mystics, metaphysics or theology. Let me see if I can spell out what I believe to be the reality we are looking at.

Every human being, by his own nature, has the ability to act as he pleases. Surely this is neither mystical nor religious; it is an observable fact. I am not opposing anyone's faith or belief. I am stating that this ability exists regardless. What I am saying is that despite race, creed, color, nationality or condition in life, each human being can take the initiative in respect to his own energies to do as he will.

It is also an observable fact that each human being has the ability to act in two different and opposite ways. What I mean is that each person has the ability to take into consideration that co-equal status of his fellows and act in such a way that he does not impose upon them. His ability makes either type of action possible. The choice is his.

In order effectively to show the difference between actions that may impose actions that do not, we have devised two words, "rights" and "privileges." Thus, we say that when a person acts with due regard for the natures and abilities of others of his own kind, and does not impose, that he has a natural right to take such actions. However, when he chooses to disregard the natures and abilities of others we say that he has presumed a "privilege."

Clearly, there are such things as privileges taken and privileges granted. This means that if I wish something that you have I have two ways to proceed. I can make arrangements with you so that you lend, give or sell me the item I wish; or I can disregard your "right" to what is yours, and take it without your consent. If I take what you have without your consent, I have presumed to a privilege you did not grant. That is one that I have taken. However, if I first bargained with you and obtained your consent, then you granted the privilege.

A granted privilege is an exchange in which there is no imposed cost. A privilege that is taken imposes a cost upon a person who does not consent to that cost.

Whenever a person takes a privilege over another, he is acting as though he had a "right" to act, which right he does not have and the cost of his action is imposed. After he has been granted a privilege, then his action does not impose a cost.

Now we come back to the idea of natural rights. I will argue that every human being has a right to act in such a way that no privilege is presumed and thus no cost is imposed on anyone.

You will note that none of this has anything to do with government. Natural rights relate to the nature of man. Each human being has the natural ability to act as he will and he has the natural right to act in such a way that he imposes no cost on anyone. If a person finds that a cost might accrue to another, then he may rightfully seek a privilege. He asks permission. But he doesn't even have to ask permission, when he takes the initiative over himself and what is his, and acts in such a way that he imposes on no one. Such actions are the only natural rights that exist.

It seems to me that the existence of natural rights is a self-evident truth and when viewed in this light, is readily understandable.

Briefly noted

By DON GRAFF
The subject is romance but the dateline, for a big change these days, is not London.

It's Peking and the story involves the concern of authorities there that a sexual revolution may be undermining the political one the nation is supposed to be devoting its full energies to building.

A wire dispatch reports that the Peking Daily, official publication of the capital's municipal authorities, recently felt called upon to reprimand the younger generation for a "nonchalant attitude" toward affairs of the heart that violates Marxist-Leninist doctrine on the subject. The editorialist was disturbed by a trend among engaged couples to open the "sluice gates of passion" before marriage.

Worse, he revealed, "Some even use love as the pretext to dally with the opposite sex."

And Kipling said the twain would never meet.

RISK IS HIS BUSINESS
Whatever became of Col. Charles Beckwith?

For those of you who may first want to know who Col. Charles Beckwith is, he was the leader of the unsuccessful operation in April 1980 to rescue the American hostages in Iran. Remember?

The colonel has been out of the news since then and this fall he's going to be out of uniform. He is retiring, and he says, trading his green beret for a businessman's pinstripe.

Beckwith plans to establish a firm to advise corporations on anti-terrorist tactics. Specialists, recruited initially from among the colonel's former associates in the military, will be available to teach executives how to protect themselves from attack and to devise sabotage-prevention measures for corporate facilities.

Considering the brisk business in terrorism that has developed in recent years, there should be an immediate demand for his services. Especially if he makes it perfectly clear in advance that some formerly very important people in Washington who were also involved in the Iranian operation are not on his board of directors.

AND NO QUESTIONS ASKED?
One of the more fascinating news briefs of recent weeks — at least for certain specialists among us — comes out of the Washington bureaucracy.

The National Institute of Drug Abuse, which has been dealing exclusively with university botanists for a number of years, is now calling for competitive bids to supply a product it needs for research projects.

The institute is offering a three-year contract to "grow, harvest, store, ship and analyze" some 2,000 pounds of cannabis annually.

Marijuana, that is. One essential criterion must be met in the awarding of the contract: Experience.

The bidding ought to be intense. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Homeland for the PLO?

Egypt's President Sadat has asked the United States to open negotiations with the PLO.

Sadat says a separate Palestine nation must be created if there is to be peace in the Mideast.

Israel remains vigorously opposed to peace talks with the PLO and - or to the idea of a Palestinian homeland.

Israel's Prime Minister Begin considers the PLO "a renegade gang of terrorists."

What is this PLO that threatens to set the world on fire?

In 1965 the outfit then known as the Palestine Liberation Movement, headed by Yasser Arafat, claimed fewer than 100 members.

Sixteen years later, Arafat runs the best-armed and wealthiest group of insurgents in the world, using terror to command world attention.

Today the Palestine Liberation Organization embraces eight guerilla groups and an assortment of highly vocal independent activists.

The PLO enjoys de-facto diplomatic recognition from much of the world — including western European nations — as the legitimate representative of 4.4 million Arabs whose ancestors once inhabited the land on which Israel now stands.

Arafat, therefore, denies Israel's right to exist, is pledged to destroy Israel.

Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times talked to Palestinians in Israel, on the West Bank and Gaza — in Jordan and elsewhere — and reports that "close up they look more like small-town merchants than the masterminds of international outrages."

The 300 PLO delegates who recently convened their "parliament in exile" in Damascus McManus describes as "uniformly middle-aged, middle-class and middle-weight."

Before Israel, Palestinians were an unorganized population of peasants, led ineffectually by feuding clan chieftains.

Inevitably one gets the impression that these several factions of highly volatile Arabs would fly apart — were it not for a common hatred of Israel that binds them.

And with Arab oil money financing the movement, it's not about to go away.

When the U.N. first offered to divide Israel between Israelis and Arabs, the Arabs refused — confident they could crush Israel. They underestimated the survivors of Hitler's death camps.

Up to now each side has underestimated the other.

The voice of Egypt's Sadat is the only one listened to with respect by both sides.

He's asking us now to listen; hopeful we can help.

An American diplomat in the area, says of the PLO, "You can't make peace with them — but you can't make peace without them."

State's payday to be different

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Payday won't be the same for a lot of state employees beginning Sept. 1.

Instead of waiting in long lines before a bank teller or a drive-in window to deposit pay checks, their wages will be electronically deposited in their accounts by the state comptroller.

And if the employee wants to be sure the money is there, he can call a special number at his bank for confirmation.

Anyone unfortunate to be caught in downtown Austin on a monthly state payday will remember it. Cars are lined up, two abreast, for several blocks, waiting to go into the drive-in entrances of every bank in town. It's not unusual for some motorists to run out of gas while waiting.

Inside the banks there are long lines before each teller.

Electronic deposits for state employees were approved by the 1981 Legislature. If employees agree and sign a limited power of attorney, the comptroller can use computerized tape to make direct deposit of paychecks and travel expense reimbursements. The tape also can be used to deposit benefit checks for retired state employees and public school teachers.

Currently, each month the comptroller writes about 170,000 payroll checks and sends retirement checks to 72,000 retired teachers and 17,000 retired state employees.

John Keel, who made a special study of direct deposits for the comptroller, says a survey shows that about 20 percent of state employees will take advantage of the system initially — and participation is expected to grow to 40 percent in six months.

"The most significant benefit will be related to the gaining in employee productivity associated with time savings," Keel said.

"Assuming that 30,000 state employees participate, as much as 360,000 hours of lost time could be saved each year with an associated reduction in cost to the state of $3 million a year."

The reduction in writing warrants or state checks would save about $18,000 a year in paper and printing time.

Actually, the direct deposit system is only a small part of the system first proposed by the comptroller. Under the original plan, the electronic system would allow direct payments to bank accounts for commercial vendors, construction contractors, cities, counties and school districts.

However, protests from the 17 big banks that handle state warrants caused changes in the proposal. The banks claimed the electronic system would take away a considerable amount of interest money they were making in handling state funds, particularly during weekends.

Whether the direct deposit system is ever expanded beyond state employee paychecks depends on future legislators, and the way Texas bankers react to the new system.

Still another new system for paying state employees will go into effect Sept. 1, or soon afterwards.

A bill carried by Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, would allow employees of the state's four largest agencies who make $12,000 or less a year to say if they want to be paid monthly or every two weeks.

"A lot of the reason for the big turnover we have in lower-paid employees now is that they cannot wait a whole month to get paid," Mrs. Delco said. "As a result, they will leave the state and go to a job that pays the same amount of money, but gives them a paycheck every two weeks or weekly. They like that better."

Craftsman etches tableaux of nature and history on weapons

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — Sam Shortes simply got tired of watching his research get tossed in the technological trash heap, another victim of scientific progress.

So the former Texas Instruments researcher has melded his scientific wizardry with a 700-year-old art form — etching gold-inlaid tableaux of nature and history on the metal surfaces of knives and firearms.

"Technology basically is a disposable item," Shortes says, "but I expect my works to be in museums."

John Wayne liked a set of etched knives done by Shortes' Aurum (Latin for gold). Etchings so much, he shelled out $2,000, Shortes says.

Now Aurum is designing limited-edition commemorative single-action guns — possibly depicting scenes from the late actor's movies — as requested by Wayne's son, Patrick.

"People were always giving John Wayne things," Shortes says. "Then when they'd be having a beer with a buddy, they'd say, 'John Wayne owns an oil painting I did.' Well, it makes me feel good to think John Wayne would pay $2,000 for work of mine."

The average customer doesn't walk into the Aurum offices in this Dallas suburb and purchase a single etched piece, which can run anywhere from $1,000 to $3,000.

Shortes instead deals with firearm manufacturers such as Colt, Remington and Winchester — though he currently is busy planning his foray into the retail world of etched belt buckles and etched office art.

Colt Industries is the major stockholder, purchasing 61 percent of Aurum's stock when it was just a fledgling company, but Shortes still oversees all aspects of the unique business he expects to reap $2 million this year.

Aurum is Shortes' baby — lock, stock (39 percent of it) and barrel.

His 40 to 50 employees have done "work with the fidelity of a postage stamp" for a gamut of organizations — 2,000 engraved knives for the National Rifle Association, 1,800 firearms for the Michigan State Police, now 2,000 engraved shotguns for the Los Angeles Police Officers Association.

Shortes says most of his clients hail from the overlapping Sun and Bible Belts, which form a sort of Gun Belt that stretches into Southern California and Michigan.

His customers maintain a common tenet, though. They never fire Aurum's crafted weapons, for that would diminish their value.

Shortes picks up a calculator designed by the company he used to invent for and comments that not one facet of his research is used to make the palm-sized mathematical gizmo work these days.

The updated technique of his artful etchings, however, stretches back eras to a tenth-century acid etching process.

A large piece of artwork is reduced to grace the small surface of a knife or firearm. A positive film of the art then is taped to the metal, bathed in material called photo-resist.

When exposed to light, photo-resist clings to the metal and protects it from the acid, the same principle kids use when coating an Easter egg with wax to color certain portions.

His craftsmen can turn out volumes more than the only four or five metalsmiths employed by Colt, but Shortes insists, "We're not running a doughnut machine here."

Coeducation not their cup of tea

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Six years after allowing boys past their school's ivy-covered walls, trustees of one of New England's oldest girls' boarding schools have decided coeducation is not their cup of tea.

"Attitudes have changed since the big rush towards coeducation in the 1970s," says Robert Bussey, headmaster of Miss Hall's prep school. "It seems incongruous in these times of modernism, but there has been quite a swing back towards the single-sex schools."

"We decided it was time for Miss Hall's to resume its historical role in the education of females."

Nancy Hinsdale started the boarding school, the first for girls in Massachusetts, in 1806. After her departure, a subsequent owner of the property closed it. The school was revived in 1898 by her great-niece Myra Hall. It became Miss Hall's School.

Down to 126 students when trustees decided to go coed in 1975, Miss Hall's now has an enrollment of 200 from 21 states and 17 countries. The school, where tuition is $7,450 a year for boarders, will not actually become all-girls until 1984, or until the last of the dozen boys currently enrolled leave, Bussey said.

There were never more than 30 boys at Miss Hall's — which teaches grades 9 through 12 — and they were strictly day students, not allowed to board.

According to Ralph West of the New England Association of Independent Schools, Miss Hall's is the first formerly all-girls preparatory school to turn away from coeducation in a region that contains more private schools than any other in the country.

"I don't think the future of single-sex schools is in doubt any longer," West said. "The all-girls schools that decided to stick it out are very glad they did. They are flourishing."

Of the 203 prep schools that belong to the association, 34 remain all-girls and 29 all-boys, West said.

Dentures repossessed from unwilling patient

BETHEL, Okla. (AP) — Dentist Curtis Brookover claims it was a simple case of repossession.

But Lee Ann Stoval counters that the Idabel, Okla., dentist went too far when he came to her home in this southeastern Oklahoma town, pried open her jaws, stuck his hand in her mouth, and repossessed the dentures for which she had refused to pay.

Mrs. Stoval and her family filed a $530,000 lawsuit late Friday, claiming damages in last week's incident in which the woman says she was thrown to the ground in front of her house by an angry, yelling Brookover.

District Attorney Don Shaw said no decision had been made on whether assault charges would be filed against Brookover. Mrs. Stoval said her neighbors, one carrying a shotgun, came running to see what was happening when the dentist struggled with her in the yard.

Eventually, she said, Brookover pulled the $600 set of Swiss porcelain teeth from her mouth.

"He jerked me down and held my face while he grabbed my teeth," the woman said from the Idabel hospital room where she is under observation for possible injuries suffered in the incident.

Serve peachy dessert to guests

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Of course old-fashioned American cobblers, pandowies, grunts and slumps made with fresh peaches are great desserts.

And during the summer every family deserves some treats that feature these. But there are new sorts of fresh peach desserts making the rounds that often fit better into today's lifestyle than older recipes. The new combinations are quick-to-assemble and light in flavor and texture. Here are four of these we have tried with resounding success.

AMARETTO SAUCE
Two 3-ounce packages cream cheese, soft
1/2 cup plain yogurt
1/4 cup amaretto liqueur
3 tablespoons sugar
3 medium to large or 6 small to medium fresh peaches (about 1 pound)
1 tablespoon orange juice
Fresh mint leaves for garnish, if desired

In a medium bowl beat together the cream cheese, yogurt, amaretto liqueur and 2 tablespoons of the sugar until blended; makes 1 1/2 cups amaretto sauce. Cover and chill — overnight if you like.

Shortly before serving, peel and pit the peaches. Slice fairly thin. Toss with the remaining 1 tablespoon sugar and the orange juice. Refrigerate.

At serving time, divide peaches among 4 individual dessert dishes. Spoon the amaretto sauce over the fruit or pass the sauce, garnished with the mint leaves, separately.
Makes 4 generous servings.

FRESH PEACHES make a delightful company dessert when served with an amaretto sauce. The sauce is made with cream cheese, yogurt, amaretto liqueur, orange juice, sugar and a garnish of fresh mint leaves. American cooks have shown an increased interest in liqueurs in recent years, and more recipes using liqueurs are popping up as a result of this interest.

No more 'typical' grandparents

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — There's no such thing as a typical grandparent, says a social work specialist at Syracuse University, who notes that — unlike a century ago — many grandparents lead active lives of their own. Darrell Slover, associate professor of social work, says the closeness among different generations that marked many families in past years was dictated by economic necessity. Today, families are more financially secure and have a greater number of options. So, he says, the role of grandparent has become quite diverse. "Each grandparent and each grandchild does it in his or her own way," he says. "For some, it's a fairly active and quite-satisfying role. For others, it's a fairly distant role, an inactive role. Each grandparent finds his or her own way of dealing with it." Slover says people are becoming grandparents at a younger age than in the past. Many have their first grandchild in their mid-40s.

Transsexual changes sex through surgery

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I recently read an article in the Los Angeles Times about "Kris," an accomplished young San Francisco woman lawyer. She is a transsexual who, prior to her sex-change operation, was a male who graduated from Berkeley and served in the Peace Corps in Ethiopia.

Kris (formerly Ken) said that although she'd been born male, since the age of 5 she "knew" he should have been female. Ken turned to psychiatry and finally had a sex-change operation and began living a new life as a woman. Now she says, "I'm sorry I had the surgery."

Abby, I am also a transsexual, having lived as a woman for 16 years after having lived for 37 years as a man—and a miserable one at that. I could not have gone on living had I not had the sex-change operation. I thank God every day for those doctors who make this change possible. For every transsexual you read about who is "sorry," there are thousands who owe their lives to the operation that made them free to be themselves. Many marry and adopt children. But you don't hear about them, because they want to forget their past. They change their names (legally) and refuse to be interviewed. I'm not blaming them. They just want to be left alone.

Today there are many transsexuals who desperately want a sex-change operation, but when they read about only those who regret having had the surgery, they become discouraged. I am only one happy, successful, "born-again" transsexual, but I speak for thousands. Sign me...

ELIZABETH

DEAR ELIZABETH: I know. Through this column I have heard from a surprising number.

...

DEAR MISS VAN BUREN: Your answer to NEEDS TO DANCE which appeared recently may have confused some readers who contacted local IRS offices for clarification.

In the answer you indicated that the cost of an evening of dancing could be counted as a medical expense for tax purposes because dancing was good therapy. While there is little doubt that dancing may be a therapeutic pastime, as well as good exercise, unfortunately the expense generally does not qualify as a medical expense deduction under the federal income tax law, even when recommended by a doctor.

A. WILSON FADELY,
PUBLIC AFFAIRS DIVISION,
INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE

DEAR MR. FADELY: I can't believe there were readers who actually took me seriously. I was making a small joke. But then I should have known that when it comes to the IRS, some folks are completely humorless.

DEAR ABBY: You told SMOKED OUT that nothing could be done about co-workers whose constant smoking in the office caused her eyes to become red and irritated. Abby, something can now be done! The law requires employers to provide a safe and healthful working environment, and it prohibits people from engaging in any activity that causes physical injury to others.

In a recent case, a judge ordered all smoking banned in the office of a sensitive non-smoker, and a federal agency has just held that many employers must make a reasonable accommodation to the needs of sensitive non-smokers.

Readers who want more information on non-smokers' rights may write to: Action on Smoking and Health (ASH), 2013 H Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

JOHN F. BANZHAF III,
CHIEF COUNSEL,
WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR JOHN: Thanks for setting me straight. You will be cursed by smokers who smoke while they work, but blessed by their non-smoking victims. However, simply knowing one's rights is useless until one demands to have his rights respected.

...

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby: 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Nutrition. Just what is it? A simple definition of this complex subject is: the process of eating and using food. Fortunately for us, we don't need a thorough knowledge of food and body chemistry in order to apply the principles of good nutrition. Rather, we simply need to learn what foods to eat for energy and nourishment, and learn how to select foods that will fulfill those requirements and develop good eating patterns that will provide pleasurable and healthful meals.

Unfortunately, our eating habits are often all too careless—beginning with where we get our foods, what types we get, how they are cooked and how we eat our meals. In the past few decades, eating patterns have changed dramatically, along with our life styles.

Loading up on handfuls of vitamins, or eating large quantities of certain "magic" foods will not set you and your family on a magical road to good health and vitality. Instead, a variety of foods, carefully prepared and attractively presented, helps create lifelong good eating habits that will help ensure good health. Remember, there is a wide world of food combinations to choose from.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

August 25, 1981

Progress toward what you hope to achieve is likely to be slow, but steady, this coming year. Time is your ally if you are patient and tenacious.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not make any investments or major cash outlays today if you feel you lack proper information. Gather all your facts first and act with deliberation. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In situations where you count on your luck to get you through, you could be let down today. However, when you rely on your intelligence and initiative the results will be successful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't make judgments on friends today based on hearsay, especially if the source has proven to be faulty before. It could be again.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your prospects for success today are good, provided you don't take things for granted. Be hopeful, but also take necessary, practical measures.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll be more productive today working with associates as realistic as you are rather than with persons whose expectations are too outlandish.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Sometimes your first ideas are right on target, but this is not apt to be the case today. Think everything through carefully. Second thoughts may be required.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Much can be accomplished today provided you allocate your time properly. Avoid persons in the a.m. who waste their time as well as yours.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Conditions are reversed today. Persons on whom you can usually count may prove to be the least dependable, while those who have been the most unreliable come through.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) To get to the things you enjoy doing you may perform your other tasks halfheartedly today, thereby causing yourself greater problems at a later date.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Keep your expectations within reasonable limits today or you could be severely disappointed. Don't look for a harvest where you haven't sown seed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Unfortunately, you are apt to be the one who has to do for others today, instead of them doing for you. Above all, don't bank on their lavish promises.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your hunches pertaining to business or financial matters are quite keen today, but your insights regarding other matters could be far off-base.

Defense looks sharp, offense lacks consistency in Harvester scrimmage

It was just like the coaching staff figured after viewing the film of the Pampa High intrasquad scrimmage Saturday.

The defense was a jump or two ahead of the offense.

"The defense played steady throughout the scrimmage," head coach Larry Gilbert said. "We just need to work on a few little details. The offense lacked consistency and was not coming off the ball good late in the scrimmage. That proves we're a little behind in conditioning, but we'll be taking care of that this week."

Gilbert did have praise for offensive linemen Wade Baker, Mark Royce and Bryan Bowen.

"They were coming off the line and looking for somebody to hit, which is what we're looking for," he added.

Junior quarterbacks Randy Skaggs and Dennis Dougherty were executing well and sophomore fullback Randy Stout stood out in both running and blocking, according to Gilbert.

"Randy is going to be a fine ballplayer before he leaves Pampa High School," Gilbert said. "He looked real good."

Split end L. J. Brown and tight end Richie James were impressive.

"Brown caught a couple of passes and he knows what to do with it after he catches it," Gilbert said. James had two receptions, one for a touchdown.

"He's shown a lot of improvement since spring," Gilbert said.

In fact, Gilbert said several players have improved as much as 90 percent since spring practice.

"That's pretty good when you take into account it was only the second day in pads," he pointed out.

Senior wide receiver John Kadango sparked Pampa's offense.

"John was outstanding, technique-wise," Gilbert said. "He graded out real well in the film."

Other linebackers, Ricky Beard and Jeff Poole, had a good scrimmage, Gilbert said.

The defensive secondary, headed by Dougherty, had good marks from the coaching staff.

"Dennis had some good hits," Gilbert added. Gilbert also had good things to say about the junior varsity.

"They're executing real well for this early in the year," Gilbert said. "Robert Knight (sophomore quarterback) is a long way along in fundamentals and is looking as good as our varsity quarterbacks. I was also impressed with the running of Bobby Evans and Tracy Jennings."

During Monday's workout, coaches will concentrate on throwing out the "bugs" in both the offense and defense.

"We'll be working on a lot of little things," Gilbert said. "The offensive line isn't getting downfield soon enough, so we'll be emphasizing that. We'll do a lot of repetition and try to get the offense to be more consistent."

"Later on this week, we'll put in a little more offense and continue to be repetitive on defense. We're as far ahead as we've ever been when it comes to defensive schemes and techniques."

This Friday, Pampa travels to Lubbock Estacado for a 4 p.m. scrimmage.

FIRST DOWN CATCH. Doug Cosbie (84) tight end for the Dallas Cowboys, catches the Pittsburgh Steelers is David Little (48) a 13-yard pass from Danny White in the second quarter at Texas Stadium.

Rangers drop close one to Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — Lynn Jones may have the answer to why Rick Peters slapped a ninth-inning single to score Steve Kemp from second and give the Detroit Tigers their ninth straight win, 5-4 over the Texas Rangers.

"We're a relaxed and confident team," Jones said after Sunday's game.

"There's no situation we can't overcome. As long as our relievers hold people down, we're going to be in striking distance."

Tiger Manager Sparky Anderson chose Peters, who was 1-24 at the plate, over Richie Hebner and Rick Leach, who each had game-winning homers last week when he was looking for a left-handed pinch hitter for Al Cowens.

"Peters has a good eye and (Texas pitcher Jim) Kern is a hard thrower," Anderson explained. "There was a chance for a walk as well as a hit and with Peters' speed I wasn't worried about a double play."

Kern, 1-2, who issued an intentional walk to Lou Whitaker, threw three balls to Peters before Texas Manager Don Zimmer replaced him with Steve Comer. Peters took a strike before hitting a sharp grounder that caromed into right field off first baseman Bill Stein's glove.

"I just wanted to make contact with the ball and hoped things would fall into place," Peters said. "I hit it hard and with good enough top spin to get a wild pop."

Detroit went into the ninth trailing 4-3 against Texas starter Jon Matlack. Leadoff batter Lynn Jones smashed the veteran left-hander's 2-2 serve into the left-field seats to tie the game.

Kemp greeted Kern with a pinch single and took second on a sacrifice to set the stage for Peters' blow.

Texas broke a 3-3 tie in the top of the ninth against Tiger reliever Dave Tobik. Mickey Rivers led off with a single and took second on a sacrifice. Dave Rozema, who evened his record at 4-4, relieved Tobik and got Al Oliver on a fly ball. Rivers moved to third and Buddy Bell followed with a sacrifice fly to right that scored Rivers.

The Tigers jumped out to a 2-0 lead on a first-inning homer by Kirk Gibson and added a run in the fourth when Jones led off with a walk, reached third on John Wockenfuss' single and scored when Tom Brookens bounced into a double play.

Texas ended Tiger starter Milt Wilcox's scoreless inning string at 212-3 with a pair of runs in the fifth. A walk to Mario Mendoza, an error by second baseman Whitaker and Oliver's single produced the first run. The second came home on Bell's force out.

The Rangers tied the game in the sixth when Wilcox hit Billy Sample with a pitch. Jim Sundberg singled and Rivers lofted a sacrifice fly.

Detroit, which lead the American League East Division with a 10-3 record, hosts the Kansas City Royals in a three-game series beginning tonight. Dan Schatzeder, 5-5, will face Royals' rookie Mike Jones, 1-1.

Cowboys rally past Steelers

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Danny White waited until the fourth quarter Saturday night to answer the question: what's wrong with the 1981 Dallas Cowboys. The correct answer is: not much.

The Cowboys and White had spiced together back-to-back miserable performances in losing National Football League preseason games to the Green Bay Packers and Los Angeles Rams.

Against the Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday night, the Cowboys trailed 14-10 — thanks mainly to White's fumble between his legs which linebacker Robin Cole recovered for a touchdown.

White got that one back and then some with touchdown passes of 62 yards to Ron Springs and 18 yards to Butch Johnson for a 24-14 victory.

"We finally got it cranked up and played," said White.

"It seems we've had trouble throughout the preseason coming out of the locker room ready to play football."

"We didn't play well early tonight, but kept working and kept hustling. I think you saw some of the older veterans really out there playing tonight."

White said the quality of the opponent helped make a difference.

"It was the Pittsburgh Steelers and preseason or not we were keyed up for this game ... we played it more like a regular season game," he said.

It wasn't a good night for Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw, who was making his 1981 debut.

Bradshaw was sacked six times, threw an interception, and completed only 4 of 16 passes for 70 yards in the Steelers' loss to the Dallas Cowboys, giving both teams 1-2 records in the NFL preseason.

"I felt rusty out there," said Bradshaw, who has been sidelined with a stiff neck. "I didn't get lucky early and couldn't get anything going. I was kind of grasping at things."

"It just wasn't much fun for me. It will take awhile to settle down."

Bradshaw blamed his problems on a lack of timing.

"Physically I feel fine, but eight months is a long time to be off," he said.

"Even though I've been around awhile, I still need playing time to get ready," Bradshaw said. "I just wasn't recognizing things fast enough."

NEVER TOO OLD. George Bowman carries his parachute through a wheat field at Waynesville, Ohio, Sunday after completing his second jump since giving up the skydiving sport 30 years ago. He quit jumping in 1951 when an insurance agent threatened to drop his mortgage insurance if he continued skydiving. The Spring Lake, Ky., resident now vows to be jumping 10 years from now when he will be 80 years old. (AP Laserphoto)

No answer to calls in part of Scott County

WALDRON, Ark. (AP) — Your fingers can't do the walking in southern Scott County. The 250 people who live in the mountainous region surrounded by the Ouachita National Forest can't get telephones.

"I can't believe it. I never realized something like this would exist," said Earl P. Stubblefield, 61, who moved to the county two years ago from Shawnee, Okla.

"We have friends all over the country and a lot come through this area trying to find us," he said. "They can't... We're not listed in any directory book."

The problem is that no phone company wants to serve 180-square-mile area, though the 100 families who live there have tried. Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., Continental Telephone Co. of Arkansas and Allied Telephone Co. all say it would cost too much.

To the dismay of the people of Nella, Black Fork and Cross Creek, the state utility regulating commission decided in May that the commission can't force a company to provide service.

So, the residents keep lists of necessary calls to make next time they're near a pay phone. Most have telephone credit cards for long distance pay phone calls.

"We have to drive out to a place," said Brewer Bell in a telephone interview after he drove 18 miles to the nearest pay phone.

Folks in the area keep in touch with CB radios. Three residents have mobile phones that reach Fort Smith through a relay station.

Since there are no phones, there are no fights for the party line. But there are delays when there's an emergency.

When his 10-year-old son broke his collarbone 25 miles from home, "they were trying to chase us down for about five hours," said Jerry Dannel.

A deputy sheriff has been down the dirt roads twice this year for emergencies and once to notify somebody about jury duty.

Fiber analysis gains attention in murder cases

By NANCY KENNEY Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The slender threads that tied Theodore Bundy to the sex slaying of a 12-year-old girl and may link Wayne Williams to the killing of a young black man are almost too tiny to be seen by a juror's naked eye.

But to microanalysts such as Larry Peterson and Lynn Henson, fibers are momentous finds — clues that may betray a criminal when all else fails.

Their craft is not new. Fibers removed from car fenders and corpses' scalps have been used for years to help identify culprits in hit-and-run, robbery and murder cases.

But recent sensational cases have brought new fame to fiber analysis and raised new questions about its validity. Can jurors evaluate similarities they cannot see? How conclusive can fiber matchups be?

Peterson, a Georgia Crime Lab technician, has analyzed fibers in the murders of 28 young blacks in Atlanta. As the death toll rose, he carefully mounted fibers from victims' hair and clothing on slides and peered at them through a microscope.

Ms. Henson, a Florida Department of Law Enforcement microanalyst, assembled the fibers which helped convict Bundy of murder in the 1978 slaying of Kimberly Leach near Lake City, Fla.

Both scientists say their craft is often misunderstood and assumed to be a new, unproven discipline.

"Fibers have been used in court for ages," Ms. Henson said in an interview. "Most people don't understand that, and some investigators like go after things like fingerprints.

"When you don't have fingerprints, you've got to fall back on something. That's where we come in."

Described in detail in Sherlock Holmes novels of the late 1800s, the analysis of fibers at crime scenes dates to the middle of the 19th century. But the discipline had no real recognition until the 1950s, when manmade threads were produced in mass quantities.

Unlike cotton or woolen strands, each of the thousands of synthetic fibers has characteristics which can be measured precisely.

Scientists can look at a synthetic fiber with six kinds of microscopes. They can bombard it with neutrons and X-rays. They can tell whether it's permanent press and how its molecules are shaped.

They can measure its density, weight, melting point and solubility and tell exactly where it was made.

Ultimately, however, the microanalyst can testify only that a fiber could, might, may have come from a particular piece of material.

Williams is charged with murder in the strangulation of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and the asphyxiation of Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of the 28 dead youths.

"Identical is not a word I use," Peterson said in court. Other sources could have produced the purple fiber, the green fiber and the three dog hairs.

Jurors in a criminal case nonetheless "can more or less form an opinion based on common sense," Ms. Henson said. In the Leach case, Ms. Henson produced 98 fiber matchups which she said formed a "probable link" between Bundy and the murdered girl.

When the child's body was found in a hogan, Ms. Henson spent seven hours gathering fibers. Supplied with other fibers obtained through investigation, she catalogued the matchups.

Fibers resembling threads from Bundy's clothing were found in the hogan. So were fibers from a carpet in a van he drove. Fibers similar to those in Miss Leach's clothing and Bundy's clothing were found in the van.

"The transfers went in four directions," Ms. Henson said, adding that her findings were backed up by eyewitnesses, a shoe track, blood specimens, semen samples and receipts indicating Bundy had driven the van.

It's not known whether prosecutors in the Atlanta case have a great deal of physical evidence to back up the fiber findings in the Payne and Cater cases, as they did in the Leach-Bundy case.

Ms. Henson believes fiber evidence is superior to eyewitness testimony.

"Two people will see the same person on a street and give two widely different descriptions, but fiber analysts will always agree on whether a fiber does or does not match," she said. "They may argue about how significant it is, but the physical evidence isn't going to change."

One thing jurors must weigh is whether a fiber could have come from another source in the area where the crime was committed. "If the fiber is something you see all over the Northeast, but rarely in Florida, that would mean something to the jury," she said.

The green carpet which figures in the Williams case was made at a tiny textile plant in South Carolina, which decreases chances the fiber could have been found "on just about any person," said one investigator.

Officials' job similarities between the Cater and Payne cases will help. Both men were asphyxiated. Both were found in the Chattanooga River. Both were at least partially unclothed, and fiber evidence in the cases is "similar," investigators say.

Jurors may see representations of the fibers.

Georgia Crime Lab Director Larry Howard says electron micrographs — enlarged pictures of the fibers as they appear under a microscope — are being prepared should they be needed at the trial, scheduled to begin Oct. 5.

CHAMPAGNE ICE

PHILADELPHIA (AP)

"Champagne ice" was invented in 1965 by Lewis Bassett. It uses real champagne, eight full bottles in a 50-gallon batch. Champagne ice is an ice similar to sherbet, but contains no dairy products.

"The recipe has sugar, water and champagne," Bassett, now 75, said. "You'll find it on very fancy menus in better restaurants."

News in brief

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Louisiana has become the first state to approve the American Bankers Insurance Co.'s plan to sell anti-mugging insurance.

The company filed its "violent crime victims insurance" proposal in all 50 states, but Louisiana apparently became the first to approve it, said Vice President B.C. Young.

Policies go into effect next Sunday.

Policyholders victimized by a robber or rapist get up to $1,000 compensation for property loss, $2,000 for hospitalization and $2,000 for rehabilitation. If you're laid up, you get 85 percent of the income lost — with a limit of $50 a week for 13 weeks.

The annual premium was set in Louisiana at $37 for an individual, $55 for a couple and $73 for a family policy — except in New Orleans. Those rates are $79 individual, $139 couple and $200 family.

DALLAS (AP) — A state district judge is being questioned about allegations that he solicited a bribe from a wealthy rancher facing drug charges, a newspaper says.

The FBI is investigating the financial relationship between Judge Byron Matthews of Fort Worth and rancher Rex Cauble, recently indicted on marijuana smuggling charges, the Dallas Morning News said Sunday in a copyright story.

Matthews denied the allegation in an interview but acknowledged he had been questioned about it by the FBI and by a federal grand jury. Matthews acknowledged receiving more than $700,000 in loans and loan guarantees from Cauble, the newspaper said.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A car that crashed into a natural gas pipeline touched off a blast that shot flames 100 feet into the air, but the car's driver and passenger were uninjured.

Residents of a neighborhood where the accident occurred were evacuated early Sunday but were allowed to return three hours later.

Patrolman Don Kilgore said a car driven by Steven Bailey, 21, ran off the road and crashed through a chain-link fence, hitting an Arkansas Western Gas Co. pipeline above the ground.
