Polish bishops call limiting of speech freedom inadmissible

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's Roman Catholic bishops, in a pastoral letter to be read from church pulpits Sunday, called limiting freedom of speech "inadmissible" and said monopolizing the mass media was "unacceptable."

Meanwhile, Solidarity and Poland's communist government observed an undeclared truce in their war of words, but the Kremlin escalated its attack and indicated Soviet military intervention might be near.

The bishop's statement was made available Saturday night and appeared to endorse the strivings of Solidarity, Poland's giant independent union, for access to the media, a sore point with the government here and the Soviets.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa has vowed to lead the union in a fight to break the communist government's monopoly over the state-run press, radio and TV. He held secret talks Friday with Poland's Roman Catholic primate, Archbishop Jozef Glemp, union sources said.

The bishop's letter told the faithful it was "inadmissible to limit freedom of speech only because the proclaimed views may contain a truth which is uncomfortable for somebody, or in discordance with the conceptions of a given group of people."

It said the monopoly of one ideological group to disseminate its views by the mass media was "unacceptable" and that all "social groups should make use of the mass media which are social property and should serve the whole society."

The letter said mass media should be subject to social control "because there is a chance of abusing such freedom."

The bishops said they based the letter on the teachings of Pope John Paul II, the former Karol Wojtyla, archbishop of Krakow. Solidarity withheld comment Saturday on Moscow's call for an immediate crackdown on the first labor federation free of Communist Party control in Eastern Europe, and postponed until early next week a meeting on the harsh Kremlin warning. At the same time, the state-run media published without comment a Polish news agency article repeating Solidarity comment from around the nation on last week's warning to the union from the Polish Politburo. The ruling Politburo said free union activities were leading toward bloody confrontation and a new "national tragedy."

Solidarity's silence and the publication of its views by the government press both appeared conciliatory, and bolstered the view of Western diplomats and other qualified observers that both sides hoped for peace despite last week's sharp charges and counter-charges.

Officials seeking to cut billions from education

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration will again ask Congress for billion-dollar cuts in grants and loans to college students and programs to help teach the poor and the handicapped, Education Secretary T. H. Bell says.

Bell refused to disclose the size of the new education cuts President Reagan is expected to announce Tuesday as part of an effort to shave another $16 billion from the 1982 federal budget.

But the secretary said they will go deeper than the nearly $2 billion in cuts that Reagan sought last spring. Congress approved only a fraction of those cuts.

The budget cuts "are going to be hard to do, but it's not going to be any easier to do later on," Bell said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Congress balked at Reagan's first request for a 25 percent cut in Title I, the $3 billion remedial education program for the poor, and a 25 percent cut in the $1 billion program to help teach the handicapped. And, lawmakers applied only limited restraints to the Guaranteed Student Loan program.

Bell said education's share of the new cuts would have to come from the remedial education, handicapped aid and student loans and grants because

"those are where the large dollars are."

"The economy supports schools and colleges, and you can't have a sick economy and fiscally healthy school and college budgets," he said. "I think that's what the president is trying to tell us, not just about (schools) but all of it."

The Education Department spent $14.2 billion last year and an estimated $14.9 billion in fiscal 1981. Reagan asked Congress to slash its budget to $13.1 billion for fiscal 1982. Congress has not yet appropriated the funds for 1982, but it set education's spending ceiling at $15.7 billion.

Anniversary of 'close encounter'

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP) — It was 20 years ago that time stood still for Barney and Betty Hill, two hours of terror recalled through hypnosis as a close encounter with alien beings in the White Mountains of New Hampshire.

On Sept. 19, 1961, the postman and his wife said they arrived home from a drive through the mountains puzzled by stains and rips on her dress, scuffs on his shoes, and marks on their car. Their watches had stopped.

Neither could remember what had happened during two hours of the trip. That blank would not be filled in until four years later when the two submitted to hypnosis and their story made headlines.

The Hills told of being captured by creatures resembling short, bald humans, with big eyes, no ears and high foreheads. They said they were taken into a spacecraft, examined with strange instruments and released.

Hill died in 1969 and Mrs. Hill, now 62, who retired as a social worker in 1975, often lectures on UFOs and her "capture." She marked the anniversary Saturday with a talk at Pease Air Force Base.

In an interview last week, she described her experience as "sheer terror."

"I must have had a very strong heart," she said. "I survived it."

For four years, the couple said they could remember being chased by some kind of aircraft and getting home late, but nothing else. Then Hill's health began to fail, and when he did not respond to medication, a doctor suggested hypnosis.

Under hypnosis, Hill mentioned being captured by strange beings. His wife began hypnosis treatments and the story unfolded.

Near Campton, south of Franconia Notch, after being followed by the UFO about 30 miles, their car stalled.

The car was standing in the road and they started coming toward us."

Mrs. Hill said "Barney kept trying to start the car and it wouldn't start, and when they separated and came up in two groups on either side of the car, that was it."

"I was going to try to outrun them, but I had just gotten the door open and was ready to get out and there were five of them standing right there."

On board the craft, she said, "They put a needle-like instrument in my navel, which was unheard of here then, but now doctors do it every day."

Mrs. Hill says the aliens removed her dress, and apparently got something on it, leaving pink stains that have defied analysis. She points to the torn lining of the dress as evidence of a struggle.

1981 United Way goal-$229,300

The Pampa United Way is gearing up for the 1981-82 campaign kick-off. The official campaign is scheduled for Oct. 1 through Nov. 13.

A budget of $229,300 is the goal announced by Rosamond Reeves, secretary, and Joe Gidden, chairman for the United Way. This goal is set at $35,400 higher than last year's goal. Agencies for the United Way are considered on the basis of need and projected expenses.

Over 200 volunteers have been contacted to get the campaign rolling. They are neighbors, friends and businessmen with one goal in mind, making Pampa a better place to live.

The organization budgeted to receive the highest portion of the money shall be the Boy Scouts, set to receive $49,720.

Second is the Salvation Army budgeted for $38,985.

Girl Scouts are scheduled to receive $29,945 and the Red Cross shall get $28,250.

Genesis House is allocated $24,860 and the Senior Citizens Center should receive $20,340.

Meals on Wheels and Pampa Day Care Center are to both receive $10,000 each.

Next is High Plains Epilepsy which has been allocated $4,068 and Pampa Family Service Center should receive $2,000.

Gonzales Warm Springs should get $450. Southwest Diabetic Foundation and the U.S.O. are to equally receive $341.

Reagan risking bigger defense cuts-Brown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is risking larger cuts than it wants in the defense budget by first clamoring for huge increases and then pulling back from them, former Defense Secretary Harold Brown says.

"We've just seen what I fear may be the first slice at the defense budget," Brown said. "It's like Hemingway's 'Old Man and the Sea.' Once a bite has been taken out of the fish, the sharks start to gather."

Breaking a nine-month moratorium on publicly criticizing the Reagan administration, Brown said President Reagan erred in not using his popularity to push for a full MX missile system in the West.

The administration's reported plan to go ahead with production of an updated B-1 bomber canceled by former President Carter also is a mistake, he said.

Brown, who was Carter's defense secretary, said the Republican administration is conducting a "simplistic foreign policy," tending to see all disruptions in the world as "caused solely by Soviet aggression."

But he called Reagan's push for more defense spending and his ability to arouse public opinion on behalf of it "real achievements."

And, he praised the new administration's decision to increase production of cruise missiles and ammunition, its improvement of U.S. relations with Mexico and its efforts to fill the strategic petroleum reserve faster.

Brown said he thinks the Reagan administration may still push through its sale of sophisticated AWACS spy planes to Saudi Arabia despite growing Senate opposition. He said the sale poses no military threat to Israel.

The former defense secretary gave the interview to reporters Friday under an agreement that his comments would not be released until the following evening.

He said Reagan's call a week ago to trim $13 billion from the 1982-84 defense budgets could lead to retreat at a time when support for increased military spending was growing among the American people.

"My greatest concern is that the consensus for stronger defense is being dissipated," Brown said. "Our allies will then have an excuse to cut further their already flat defense spending."

"Arithmetic has triumphed over faith," he said. "The big problem is that the president's income tax cuts were too deep and that is forcing them into this tribulation."

Brown said Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's recommendation to produce an updated B-1 bomber would waste $15 billion to $50 billion.

"It's not the best or even the second best way to penetrate Soviet air defenses," he said, explaining that the cruise missile and an advanced Stealth bomber undetectable to Soviet radar would be more effective. "If you go ahead with B-1, the pressure is strong to continue with it and starve the advanced bomber."

New Square House exhibits are unveiled

PANHANDLE — Citizens of Carson County and neighboring counties crowded into Panhandle Saturday to hear Lieutenant Governor William Hobby, and witness the unveiling of the eight new exhibits, "The Builders of Texas" at the Carson County Square House Museum.

The exhibits were dedicated to eight pioneering families in the Carson County area: Adair, Ritchie, Burnett, Masterson, Paul, Finch-Lord-Nelson, Bivins, Weatherly and Purvines.

Hobby said in his speech Saturday that these families were "less famous but no less responsible for the building of Texas." He said although they are not among the famous names of Texas history, they are "every bit as important."

"Today you are not only celebrating the 16th anniversary of the Square House Museum, you are celebrating the continuing vitality of the arts," Hobby said.

The lieutenant governor pointed out that although the strict federal budget cuts have affected government support of the arts, in 1978 the Texas legislature contributed only two cents per state citizen in support of the arts. In 1981, that amount had jumped to 11 cents per person.

"The state will continue to patronize the arts," Hobby said. He added the state will encourage local entities to increase their support, also.

After the address, Hobby and Peggy Masterson Stinnett unveiled the "Builders of Texas" exhibit. Family members from all eight families were present at the unveiling Saturday.

A branding party was held at the museum earlier Saturday, with local ranchowners branding thick bridge beams donated by Santa Fe Railroad. The brands and their histories will become a display at the museum.

Special guests at the annual Pioneer Day included Congressman Jack Hightower, State Senator Bill Sarpaulis, and West Texas State University head, Max Sherman.

A concert was given by the West Texas State University Orchestra of Canyon.

Bush downplays the Washington protest

HOUSTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush Saturday downplayed the importance of the weekend protest in Washington by 150,000 opposed to President Reagan's economic and social policies.

"It's an indication that the people who fought President Reagan over a year ago can still muster a crowd," Bush said, when asked to rate the significance of the gathering. "There were a lot more than 150,000 that worked against us then. I wouldn't read too much into it."

The Vice President's afternoon press conference came near the end of a week of traveling that took him to Denver and Mexico. He and his wife stopped in Houston for a social gathering Saturday and return to Washington Sunday night.

Bush credited AFL-CIO leader Lane Kirkland with organizing the massive protest.

The Vice President said criticisms of Reagan's economic programs are premature and point out that they will not go into effect until October 1st.

"I think you will find almost uniform support for the President's program in the business world," Bush said. "Where the problem is is in the analysts."

He said he expected the next few months to prove the Administration's predictions accurate.

Bush declined to speculate on how soon interest rates would begin to fall.

"I don't know," he said. "It's just too hard to predict it." But, he said that the rates had risen quickly — "five or six points over three months" — and said they could fall as suddenly.

Bush said a high point of his trip had been participating in Independence Day festivities in Mexico last week. He said he and Mexican President Jose Lopez-Portillo did not discuss problems of immigration and illegal aliens.

Weather

The forecast calls for fair and warm weather for Sunday. Today's high should be near 90 with the overnight low in the 50's.

Protestors regroup for Monday's 'Big One'

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — Protesters at the gates of the Diablo Canyon nuclear plant, their ranks depleted by more than 1,000 arrests, regrouped Saturday for a renewed assault one sheriff said would be "a big one."

Tony Metcalf of the Abalone Alliance said the hundreds of anti-nuclear blockaders withdrew to their tent city on nearby private land "to prepare for a strong presence on Monday."

Across the street, the power plant's main gate was free of protesters for the first time in five days.

The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory

Commission is expected to vote Monday on a request from Pacific Gas & Electric Co. for an interim license to load fuel, start one of the twin reactors and conduct a series of low power tests.

"On Monday, when the decision comes down and we really need to keep the workers from coming in, we will give it our best shot," said Mary Moore of the Abalone Alliance, the umbrella organization for the crowd of demonstrators which grew to about 3,000 last week. Protest leaders maintain that nuclear power is unsafe, particularly at Diablo Canyon, which is near an offshore earthquake fault.

San Luis Obispo County Sheriff George S. Whiting said, "We feel that Monday will be a big one."

The first four days of the siege which began Tuesday produced at least 1,072 arrests. But, with police support, workers moved through the main gate with little or no delay.

By Friday, Undersheriff Arnie Goble was saying of the protest, "It's just absolutely fizzled."

And plant manager Robert Thornberry said, "It's had absolutely zero effect on our preparations for fuel loading."

Labor gathers to protest budget cuts, says administration 'callous'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Organized labor massed more than a quarter of a million people within sight of the White House on Saturday to proclaim their disgust with federal budget cuts and characterize the Reagan administration as "cold-hearted" and "callous."

The AFL-CIO borrowed from the Polish union movement and called its rank-and-file protest "Solidarity Day."

President Reagan, spending the weekend 65 miles away at Camp David, Md., received telephone reports on the demonstration.

"The president recognizes and appreciates the frustration that comes because there are no instant miracles and he also appreciates that the medicine is hardly sweet," said White House spokesman David Gergen, adding that Reagan believes that "the true enemy of working men and women is a sick economy."

Addressing the huge throng, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland referred to Reagan's contention that labor leaders are out of touch with the rank and file and said, "We are out of step with none but the cold-hearted, the callous, the avaricious and the indifferent."

U.S. Park police estimated the crowd at about 260,000. As the demonstrators began to disperse, AFL-CIO officials quoted Sam Jordan, deputy director of the city's Office of Emergency Preparedness, as estimating it at 400,000.

The AFL-CIO abandoned its traditional disdain of mass protest in hopes of impressing President Reagan and his congressional allies with the depth of opposition to his domestic policies.

Though Reagan had defeated labor and its allies in every budget battle in Congress, Kirkland said, "The winter's chill is approaching and the bloom is fading from fall's mandates."

Labor leaders interpreted the size of the crowd — it rivaled the numbers who came to the city in the 1960s — as sign of growing disenchantment with the Reagan administration.

Guerrillas in Iran to be tried and sentenced 'on the spot' by guards

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Leftist guerrillas captured in Iran will be tried and sentenced "on the spot" to save on jail costs, and revolutionary guards who hesitate to carry out the order will be reprimanded, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's new prosecutor declared.

Meanwhile, five Khomeini disciples were declared "competent" to run for president Oct. 2. The front-runner was considered Ali Khamenei, head of the ruling Islamic Republican Party. The other candidates included three Cabinet ministers and a former deputy interior minister.

The announcement on summary trials was made Friday night by Prosecutor Musavi Tabrizi, successor of Hojatoleslam Ali Qodussi who was assassinated two weeks ago.

"I announce that security officers must stand up to these people (Mujahedeen Khalq guerrillas) most decisively," Tabrizi said on Tehran Radio.

"If these people are captured, no delay will be made, for they will not be allowed to go to jail, be fed and rest for several months, thus wasting the treasury's funds," he said.

"They will be tried in the streets. They have taken up Molotov cocktails and stood up against the Islamic Republican system."

City sales tax allocation shows increase

Pampa's city sales tax allocation for August 1980, reports from the State Comptroller's office shows.

Pampa received a $86,669.08 rebate check for the sales tax collected in August. Last year at this time, Pampa was reimbursed $54,556.88.

The sales tax allocations for Pampa so far this year have topped the $1 million mark with a total rebate of $1,116,398.33. In 1980, $902,316.37 was paid to the city.

Canadian's rebate was $10,672.42, upping their sales tax allotments 28.21 percent from the 1980 figures. In August 1980, Canadian received a sales tax rebate check for $5,613.04.

Panhandle showed a small increase of 9.02 percent in the August sales tax allocation. The city received a net payment of $1,568.66 as compared to a $793.81 in August 1980.

McLean's payment for August was $4,675.33 — a 31.99 percent jump since the same period in 1980.

The allocation for Miami was way down from August 1980, with that city receiving only $611.81 for sales tax. In August 1980, Miami was repaid $2,220.72.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock said 750 cities in the state received $40.9 million in city sales tax rebates.

These payments push city's rebates for this year to $480.3 million, up 14.7 percent over yearly payments to date during 1980.

The optional one percent city sales tax is collected by merchants and businesses along with the four percent state sales tax. The city sales tax is returned each month by the Comptroller to the city in which it was collected.

Pampa Police Department seeks applicants

The Pampa Police Department have two patrolman positions to fill since the resignation of two officers during the past month.

Officers Gregg Dunham and Jerry Holland have resigned from their positions on the city police force. Both cited higher paying jobs as their reasons for leaving the department.

Tests for officer applicants will be conducted at 9 a.m. Sept. 25. Capt. Roy Denman said Friday. It will include a two-part written examination, and a physical agility test. If the first three phases are passed, the prospective officer will be given an oral interview.

ARRAIGNED, Robert Earl Jordan, 21, of 825 Campbell center, was arraigned on two counts of aggravated robbery Friday at 5 p.m. Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford, left, set bond at $15,000 for each charge, as police Lt. Glen Carden observed. Jordan was arrested Friday in connection with the robbery at knife point of the Allsup's store at 201 E. Brown and the robbery of William T. Parks, 63, of Reydton, Okla. Police recovered a knife believed to have been the weapon used in the robberies when Jordan was arrested.

Haunting memories of incest are treated in group therapy

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Shadows cross her dreams. Nightmares wake her and she can't return to sleep because of feelings she can't forget, memories she dare not share. She could be anyone, friend or wife or stranger. When she was a young girl, her father or another relative sexually molested her. Incest is something she hasn't gotten over. Not yet, probably not ever. The unlivable part is the silence, the knowing she can't talk about it. But now a Fort Worth psychologist has created a therapy group for the women who must grapple daily with the horror of incest. "If people would just talk about incest more ... it's so taboo and hush-hush, when it comes out, it tends to come out in bizarre ways," said Dr. Susan Van Buskirk. "They think, 'If this is such a vile thing that people can't even talk about it, how vile must I be?'" Sensational magazine articles and lurid movies-of-the-week sketch the abuser as a debauched, stubble-faced alcoholic, a lower-class lecher. Not so, said Ms. Van Buskirk, on staff at North Texas State University at Denton. Often, he's a respectable, church-going man, albeit one who slinks into his daughter's room at night. To even begin to grasp the horror of incest, she said, crawl into a child's mind. The little girl has no concept of sex, but she can sense from Daddy's furtive actions that something is not quite right. But parents are perfect to small children, and if Daddy is perfect, then the fault must lie with the child, she said. "They had no one to go to so the experience devastated their self-esteem. No one told them, 'This didn't happen to you because you're a bad child.'" Children are survivors, Ms. Van Buskirk said, but often that's all they do, as they are thrust into early adulthood. As women, they limit how good they allow themselves to feel and resent compliments. They simply can't trust. "Their entire view of sex is colored by exploitation. The abuse was like constantly being raped. She's not always physically forced, but it's someone who has power over her and, worse, someone she depends on." The guilt, the secretiveness, the dread — the creeping dread of lying in bed wondering if Daddy will visit tonight — all take their toll on a child's native innocence. Then, as an adult, the incest victim is overwhelmed by panic during intercourse because a certain way of being touched reminds her of the abuser, Ms. Van Buskirk said. And while groups exist for children during the course of the incest, not many are tailored for the grown woman. Incest usually starts when the child is 9, but usually is not reported until the child is 13 or 14, said Cam Hart, coordinator of the incest group treatment program at the Texas Department of Human Resources in Dallas. "These kids get into junior high and start talking to their friends and they realize what's going on is not normal. They tell a school counselor, or a teacher, or the friend tells her mother and eventually the authorities hear about it," Ms. Hart said. From January to May 1981, 114 families have entered the group treatment program, which was started in 1977, she said. But incest statistics often are riddled with gaps since so many cases go unreported, and for every family that enters treatment, 10 might pass untreated, Ms. Hart said. Problems that went undetected and unaided in youth often fester in adulthood. Ms. Van Buskirk designed her therapy group to treat those problems. Although the 30 women who have passed through her therapy group share the same backdrop of sexual abuse, they're as unique as any group drawn together by a singular characteristic. They range in age from 19 to 58. One of them can't remember a time when she wasn't sexually abused. The woman who has been sexually abused tends toward being single or divorced, because until she learns to bolster her self-esteem through therapy or self-determination, she tends to latch onto men who dominate and destroy just like daddy, Ms. Van Buskirk said.

Paper says Harrelson offered to clear up the Kerr ambush

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Charles V. Harrelson offered to give information about the ambush of former U.S. Attorney James Kerr to prosecutors as part of a plea bargain in which he would plead guilty to assassinating a federal judge, a newspaper reported Saturday. In a copyright story, the San Antonio Express-News quoted unnamed sources as saying Harrelson's offer came a year ago when his attorney, Bob Tarrant of Houston, tried to arrange a plea bargain with then-U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd. Tarrant told Boyd that Harrelson was not involved in the unsuccessful attempt on Kerr's life in November 1978, but knew details of the attack, the newspaper said. Tarrant could not be reached for comment, but other sources and Don Ervin, Tarrant's associate who also represents Harrelson, said they did not believe Harrelson knew anything about the Kerr attack, the newspaper said. Now a U.S. magistrate, Boyd declines all public comment on the cases. Under the arrangement, the sources said, the convicted hitman would plead guilty to killing U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. and cooperate with the government in making cases against others involved. Kerr often prosecuted drug cases in Wood's court, and the attack on him came six months before the judge was slain. The newspaper said Kerr picked three members of the Bandidos Motorcycle Club from a lineup as his possible assailants. No charges ever were filed, however. The offer by Harrelson, who remains jailed in Harris County on unrelated charges, was accepted by Boyd but rejected by the Justice Department, the Express-News said. In exchange for pleading guilty to killing Wood, the newspaper said, Harrelson wanted a prison sentence of no more than 30 years, a guarantee the state would not charge him with capital murder and immunity from prosecution for the person who bought the rifle he used. Harrelson's wife Jo Ann has been charged with using a false name to buy a rifle in Dallas 12 days before Wood was slain. Firearms experts have said such a rifle would be capable of firing the same caliber bullet that felled Wood in May 1979. It was during the plea-bargain discussion, the newspaper said, that Tarrant told Boyd the rifle used to kill Wood was under water near Dallas. A wooden rifle stock has been found in a creek east of Dallas, and federal agents believe it is part of the Wood murder weapon. The sources said Harrelson also wanted a presidential pardon for Tarrant so the attorney could represent him in federal court. Tarrant was barred from practicing in federal court after being convicted in 1971 of possession of unregistered firearms.

Commission backs Mexia probe

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Emancipation Day Commission voted unanimously Saturday to back efforts for additional investigation of the Juneteenth drownings of three young blacks near Mexia. At the same session, Rep. Al Edwards, D-Houston, author of legislation founding the commission, was named honorary chairman of a fund drive to help finance prosecution of the three officers charged in the deaths. "Our job is to see that justice is done," Edwards said after a long session in which a delegation from Mexia and Limestone County asked backing of the statewide organization. The three youths were arrested last June 19 at the annual celebration of Emancipation Day in Texas at Comanche Crossing beside Lake Mexia, east of Waco, on suspicion of possession of marijuana. The two sheriff's deputies and a probation officer put them in a small boat to go across Lake Mexia. En route, the boat sank throwing the six people in the water. The three officers swam to shore. The trial should be held in Marlin," said David Echols of Mexia, head of a local group called the Comanche Three Committee. "We have an NAACP chapter in Marlin and none in Hill County, where some wanted the trial." Echols said the Comanche Three Committee and the NAACP were asking state help "because we need to get more witnesses that can give evidence against these officers and prove that additional investigation is needed." Irene Young of Dallas, head of the Comanche Three Committee there, said she and others had talked with the U.S. district attorney in San Antonio about the possibility of federal charges.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

The joy of expulsion

Maybe Israel's luck is turning. In a move reminiscent of South Africa's virtual suspension from the morally bankrupt United Nations since 1974, the five-member U.S. General Assembly Committee on Palestine is developing a strategy for suspending Israel from the United Nations.

William Korey, director of policy research for B'nai B'rith International, theorized on the possible suspension recently in the Los Angeles Times. He seemed distressed by the possibility of Israel losing its UN credentials, but from it seems akin to finding out your credit's no good with local loan shark, or you don't need that amputation after all.

The awful truth is that the 152-member UN has become nothing more than a sham and international embarrassment. Its principal function seems to be a continuing attempt to pick the pocket of the United States for purposes contrary to U.S. interests.

If Israel gets the UN's boot, it will join three nations fortunate or brilliant enough to avoid UN membership these past 36 years - Switzerland, San Marino and Liechtenstein. The ouster of Israel might also give the U.S. enough backbone to cut its ties with this haven of misfits.

The last nation totally suspended from UN membership was Taiwan in 1971. The expulsion was not a mortal wound. It won't be in Israel's case, should the 42-member Islamic Conference get its way in this latest effort to pin Israel to the ground.

Israel, the target of more than 100 resolutions of condemnation by the Security Council and General Assembly, should consider itself fortunate. It should consider itself fortunate. It should look at expulsion as a ticket out of the asylum.

Conscription won't solve problems

The more we investigate the reality of the situation, the more we are convinced that most advocates of a return of the draft have no concern about the quality of the military forces. That's not intended to be an overstatement, but a simple statement of what almost any dispassionate observer virtually has to accept on the basis of the facts.

Advocates of conscription don't seem to be very interested in realistic assessments of how the all volunteer force (AVF) is working in the field. Most of them decided that it wouldn't work long ago, and would prefer not to be confused by the facts. The simple fact that military recruiters have met between 95-100 percent of their quotas for the last ten years is met with a theoretical discussion of why those quotas might have been changed from year to year, as they have been. From a fanciful discussion of what might have been the motivations, they leap to the conclusion that the AVF is a failure.

The step from that conclusion to the prescription of military conscription has about it almost the air of a mystical incantation. "Our military is weak - we need a draft," is murmured with the same kind of faith in symbolism and unknown powers that was dispensed some time ago by advocates of transcendental meditation. Belief in the restorative power of conscription is almost like a mantra to some of its true believers.

The latest evidence that what we are dealing with is a form of symbolism rather than hardheaded grappling with reality comes from Bernard Rostker, who recently wrote a piece for the Washington Post. Rostker was formerly director of the Selective Service System, and can hardly be considered an opponent of conscription on philosophical grounds. In his article he says that "it may well turn out that the nation should return to conscription." He just has serious doubts about the draft's ability to solve the perceived problems of the AVF. His doubts are based strictly on pragmatic grounds.

For example, Rostker points out: "If the Army continues to enlist men at the current rate, and the need for military personnel does not substantially increase, the draft might have to provide no more than 10 percent of the Army's new male soldiers. As such, the draft would do little to change the profile of today's military accessions, unless we altered current policies to restrict severely the number of volunteers, decrease pay to make the military less attractive or exclude previously acceptable individuals...."

In other words, criticisms of the AVF that have any serious claim to validity revolve around the idea that the overall quality of individuals in the military is declining. The draft would not solve that problem, and insofar as it tried to solve it, it would be perceived as unfair, even under the best of circumstances, and the most sincere of policies. If we use the draft to get the kind of people we aren't getting through voluntary means, it will be seen as unfairly selective. The politicians who write the laws wouldn't stand for that. The draft, in almost any foreseeable configuration, would not help solve the problem.

Rostker notes another potential problem with conscription: "A fundamental truth of the AVF is that, at least at the beginning of an enlistee's career, he wants to be in the military. This is not necessarily true of a conscript. In an AVF, some enlistees may conceal drug use or homosexuality. Under conscription, a draftee may seek to fabricate such disqualifying factors. The military would have to adjust its standards to prevent the simple use of marijuana from becoming a major loophole."

Rostker also notes that the military now has a liberal "for-the-good-of-the-service" discharge program that gets rid of ineffective personnel with a minimum of friction and embarrassment. If this constructive program were continued under conscription "the draft might quickly turn into a revolving door, with only the unaware and unsophisticated remaining."

Rostker sums up the situation thus: "Up to this point, little attention has focused on the type of draft that might be needed, or to an analysis of its strengths and weaknesses."

With all due respect, until advocates of conscription perform that kind of hardheaded analysis, we have a lot of trouble taking them seriously. We've seen little evidence that conscription would provide any more than the illusion of security. We've seen a great deal of evidence that it would create more problems than it would solve. At present, conscription is a close cousin of the "if there's a real or imagined problem, throw federal money at it and pretend it helps" school. We may be backing away from that approach in domestic affairs. It would be tragic simultaneously to embrace it with regard to military matters.

BY ROBERT WAGMAN
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
(NEA) Politics was much on the minds of the 27 Democratic governors who gathered here recently for the annual meeting of the National Governors' Association. No fewer than 22 of them must retire or run for re-election in 1982. The state of the party and the political climate of the nation are critical issues to these politicians.

The Democratic governors want to play a bigger role in shaping their party than they have been permitted in the recent past. Democratic National Chairman Charles Manatt promised to help them - and their state parties - to do so during his meeting here with the Democratic Governors' Conference. Manatt told them that any 1984 Democratic comeback would have to be passed upon a strong effort by the state parties.

In the face of President Reagan's victories in Congress and his popularity with the voters, however, there is great confusion within the Democratic Party over how to go about opposing the Republicans. This confusion was much in evidence among the Democratic governors.

California's Jerry Brown, the newly elected chairman of the Democratic Governors' Conference, was one of the few in attendance who were willing to come out swinging against the Reagan administration. Brown declared that the president was riding a wave of "temporary euphoria" that would last only until the budget deficits started to mount.

Brown's role at this meeting was interesting in light of his past performances. Brown has usually either skipped the annual gathering altogether or arrived on the last day to have his picture taken and to hold a news conference. Only when he was running for president did he seem to take much interest in what his fellow governors were doing.

But for the past two years Brown has worked very hard on NGA business both at the summer meetings and during the year. He campaigned hard to be elected chairman of the Democratic governors. And he is expected to try to establish a major role for himself as a representative of the governors in the rebuilding of the party.

However, Brown's call for the party to meet Reagan head-on was hardly echoed by his fellow Democratic governors. Most of them seemed to adopt a wait-and-see attitude. For example, Richard Riley of South Carolina said that "the old liberal approach is gone in this era" - but admitted that he did not know what might replace it or how the party might fit into the new scheme of things.

Some possible presidential candidates paid their respects to the Democratic governors. Former Vice President Walter Mondale gave a brief speech at a fund raiser and shook a few hands but - surprisingly, considering that he is probably the front-runner the 1984 nomination - was not particularly well-received. To many observers, Mondale did not seem to have his heart in it.

Ohio Sen. John Glenn, another potential presidential contender, gave a speech urging the governors to "organize, computerize and do whatever is necessary to bring the party back in 1984." Although his talk had more spirit than did Mondale's, Glenn also received only a mild response from the seemingly preoccupied Democratic governors.

The Democrats spent a lot of time talking about redefining the party light of new philosophy. Gov. John Y. Brown of Kentucky, vice chairman of the Democratic governors, said that "the first priority for our party is to redefine what this new philosophy should be."

All in all, the Democratic governors reflected the confusion and spiritlessness that is evident throughout their party. They seemed to be certain only of the need for the party to be rebuilt from the ground up and for them and their state parties to play a leading role in that process.

Are interest rates 'Too High'?

By OSCAR COOLEY

"Esorbitantly high interest rates are replacing inflation as the nation's No. 1 problem," says the president of the National Association of Home Builders. People are having to pay 17 percent interest or more to borrow money to buy or build homes. Business firms are paying similar rates to borrow in order to finance their business. What determines interest rates? Are they really too high?

In the American economy, interest rates are not set by the government. They are determined, as market prices are, by the interaction of demand and supply. In this case demand and supply of loans. As would - be borrowers ask for loans, the rate is pulled upward. As the supply of money the banks have to lend increases, the price or rate drops. It is the result of these two opposing forces, and because these forces are continually changing, the result - like the handkerchief tied to the rope in a tug-of-war - also changes.

In August, the prime rate, or rate that commercial banks charge their best borrowers, rose to 20.5 percent. This was not because the government, or the Federal Reserve, raised the rate. The demand-supply ratio raised it.

Some blame the Federal Reserve, but the Fed does not decree the prime rate of interest. Each bank sets its own rate. The Fed influences the rate by varying the supply of money. It does not control the demand to borrow money; that depends on the borrowers.

During early 1981, the Fed, headed by the hard-nosed Paul Volcker, restricted the supply to check inflation, but the demanders, mainly business firms and the U.S. Treasury, demanded a lot, so the price rose. This was evidence of freedom in the money market. Was this bad?

Free prices are highly useful. They continually equate the quantity of goods demanded with the quantity supplied. When demand increases, it pulls the price up and this spurs producers to get busy and increase the supply. When supply is cut - say by bad weather - the price rises, causing buyers to buy less. Free prices are never too high for the good of the country, nor are they too low. And this is true of free interest rates.

Consider an unfree interest rate. Washington sets a ceiling on the rate that can be paid by banks on savings accounts. Banks are limited to 5 1/2 percent, savings and loan associations to 5 1/2. These ceilings were set years ago. In recent years, other interest rates, such as those on money - market funds and bonds, have risen to far higher levels, causing depositors to withdraw billions of dollars of savings deposits. Result: the banks and s & l's have lost investment funds and the profits they might have legitimately made by investing them.

If the savings deposit rates had been free, the small savers, who hold most of the passbook savings, would have made more interest income, and the s & l's would not have got in a bind, as some have. They would have had more money to lend to people who wanted to build homes. The Home Builders Association would not be crying wolf.

Washington is now trying to make up for the wrong it did the savings institutions. The savings institutions are allowed to offer "All Savers" accounts, in which one may deposit $1,000 or more for at least one year at a competitive interest rate. This gives the s & l's some relief but it is not interest rate freedom.

Central in Reagan's economic program is increased saving to provide industry with needed capital. One way to do this is to free up all interest rates.

The new airlines

As more and more major airlines eliminate cities and towns from their schedules, the slack is being taken up by tiny, struggling commuter lines.

What makes it exciting is that the new airlines are flying everything from World War II DC-3's to little planes that carry no more than six passengers at one time. The planes have none of the frills of a Boeing or a Lockheed jetliner, but there is a sense of adventure about flying one that makes you think you're in a time warp, and part of the early days of flight, before they had stewardesses and in-flight movies.

We have such an airline on Martha's Vineyard which provides service between the Vineyard, Boston and New York. Every trip off and on the island is an experience that none of the major airlines can provide.

My friend Peter Stone took me to the airport for a flight to Boston. Since we both had flown the route before, we discussed it as if he were Spencer Tracy and I was Clark Gable.

"I'll take the flight, and you marry Jane," he said.

"No," I told him. "I'll take the flight and you marry Jane. She really loves you."

"How do you know?" he asked. "Because she begged me not to let you take the flight."

"Why didn't she say something to me?"

"Because she was afraid you'd do something stupid like knock me out, and then take the flight so we could get married."

"Okay, you take the flight and I'll marry Jane. If the marriage doesn't work out, I'll take the next flight and you marry her if I don't make it."

When we got to the airport, I checked in my luggage. The man behind the counter was wearing a sharp blue uniform with four stripes on it.

"You counter people have snappy uniforms," I said.

"What do you mean counter people?" he said. "I'm the pilot." He weighed my baggage and then he asked me how much I weighed.

I lied and said 190. He wrote down 200. "People always lie by 10 pounds," he said. Then he gave me a boarding card. "The heavy people will sit up front - the lighters ones in the back of the plane."

As flight time approached I stood outside with Stone. Suddenly Jane drove up. "I've changed my mind," she said, throwing her arms around me. "I want Peter to take the flight and I want to marry you."

We went back inside but the pilot said it was too late. He had to load the luggage on the plane. He picked up his microphone and said, "Cumulus Airlines Flight 1786 is now boarding for Boston with intermediate stops in Hyannisport, Provincetown and Woods Hole."

"But," I protested, "there are eight of us already, and with two pilots that makes 10. Why do we have to stop?"

"Who said anything about two pilots?" he replied. "We have room for one more passenger in the co-pilot's seat, and we may get lucky and pick up one at an intermediate stop."

"Look," I said to Peter, "you take my place and I'll marry Jane."

"Are you crazy?" Peter said. "If you make it to Boston you can marry anybody you want."

The passengers walked towards the tiny plane and before climbing the two steps, the pilot took our boarding passes. Then he crawled in behind us, closed the door and crawled down to his seat.

"Welcome to Cumulus Airlines," he said. "On behalf of the entire crew we hope you have an enjoyable flight. Government regulations require me to tell you in the unlikely event of any trouble your seat is your flotation jacket, so please don't forget it when going out the emergency exit door, which is the same door you came in."

The pilot got out of the plane, turned both propellers by hand, returned to the plane, and then we were barreling down the runway.

I looked out the tiny window of the plane and saw Peter and Jane waving. This didn't shake me. What shook me was that the pilot took his hands off the throttle and was waving back.

Senate sends commodity price support package to the House

WASHINGTON (AP) — A four-year package of commodity price supports, substantially leaner at an estimated $10.8 billion than farm interests wanted, is on its way to the House with a pledge of support from the Reagan administration.

"We think it's a darn good bill from all aspects," said William Leshner, economics chief at the Agriculture Department. "Our hope would be that they (the House members) would take it."

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., added, "We have a pledge from the administration from top to bottom that the bill's going to be signed."

The Senate battled over the provisions for a full week, trying to provide at least some income protection within the budget constraints imposed by Congress at President Reagan's request.

"The bill certainly is not entirely satisfactory to everyone," Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said late Friday after the 49-32 vote approving the package. "Considering what we had to do and the circumstances under which we had to do it, it's a good bill," Helms said.

But Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., critical of the limited financial support he said the bill offers, claimed that instead of being known as "The Agriculture and Food Act of 1981" it should be called "The Farm Bankruptcy Act."

The government supports farm prices through complex programs of loans, purchases and direct payments in an effort to insure an adequate supply of food and fiber while providing farmers some income security.

To reach the final cost estimate of $10.8 billion over the life of the package, the Senate had to circumvent many of the Agriculture Committee's recommendations, making substantial cuts in the dairy program and reductions in support for other commodities.

The committee bill, drafted in late

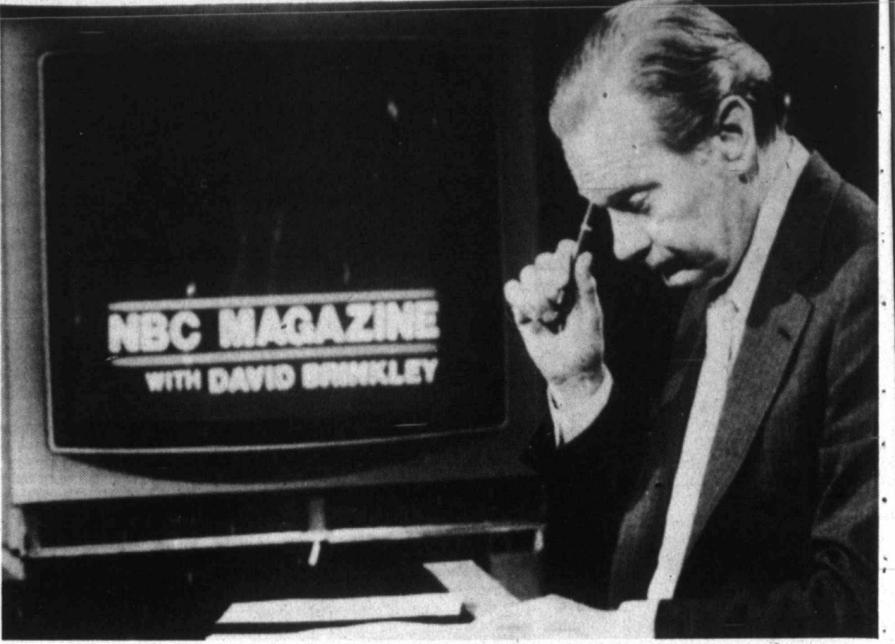

May, had a price tag nearly identical to that proposed by Reagan and was basically supported by the administration. The major farm groups, however, were less than happy even then, contending if provided only the "minimum" amount of support.

But a changing crop outlook and a deteriorating economy since then brought the administration back for yet another round of trimming.

The battle over those cuts put the "loose coalition" of Senate farm interests on the ropes for two days as the various commodity interests scrambled for the limited money available.

It could head off neither $1 billion in dairy support cuts over the next four years nor major structural changes in the complex peanut program.

The coalition, largely responsible in the past for enactment of major farm legislation, re-formed, but just barely, to turn back plans eliminating the tobacco program and proposed sugar price supports.

FINAL NBC BROADCAST FOR BRINKLEY. Poultry growers want chicken imports blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alarmed at what may happen to their $9.1 billion industry, 11 poultry trade associations want the Reagan administration to pressure the Common Market into eliminating chicken export subsidies which they say are cutting into U.S. foreign sales.

The associations filed their petition on Thursday with U.S. Trade Representative Bill Brock, asking relief from "unfair and unjust export subsidies" granted European exporters by the Common Market and the government of France.

As a result, the groups contend, European producers are able to undercut U.S. prices for poultry in foreign markets.

The petition was announced at a news conference which included poultry industry officials and at least two members of Congress whose areas include large poultry interests.

Last year, according to Agriculture Department figures, cash receipts from marketings of poultry and eggs totaled $9.1 billion. That included: broilers, $4.3 billion; turkeys, $1.25 billion, and eggs, $3.25 billion.

Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., said he has asked Brock for prompt action on the poultry industry's complaint. He said it was "a continuation of the old, so-called chicken war" between the United States and the Common Market, 10 European countries which have banded together for trade purposes.

Joe Hatfield, a Georgia poultry producer and chairman of the National Broiler Council, said the petition will "present one of the first major tests of the Reagan administration's export promotion policy, and the administration's resolve to combat unfair export subsidies bestowed by other governments."

Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., said the Common Market's export subsidy "is unfair and in direct violation" of its obligations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and the Subsidies Code of recently concluded multilateral trade negotiations.

Hatfield's National Broiler Council was joined by the Poultry and Egg

Institute of America and nine other associations representing the industry in Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Texas and Virginia.

"Although American exports of poultry meat are growing, U.S. producers still export a relatively small share of their production — less than 5 percent," Hatfield said.

SHORTCOURSE FOR NEW FRUIT GROWERS

Anyone interested in trying his hand at commercial fruit production needs good insight into exactly what is involved. The Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A & M University System, can provide just that.

A special New Fruit Growers Shortcourse is set for Oct. 5 at Rudder Center on the Texas A & M campus. This will be a three-hour session starting at 6 p.m. that outlines the basics of fruit production in Texas.

The shortcourse will deal with planning and developing a complete orchard management program.

Information will be presented on variety selection, planting, weed control, water management, training and pruning plants, insect and disease control, economic investments, cash flow and estate planning.

Many people interested in commercial fruit production are often not familiar with the expense and hard work involved in establishing a new orchard. This shortcourse is designed to answer many questions that potential fruit growers may have and to give them some idea of all the details involved in commercial fruit production.

Following the shortcourse for new fruit growers will be a two-day Texas Fruit Growers conference for those already in the business. The latest information on various phases of fruit production will be presented by growers, researchers and Extension staff.

Registration information on both the New Fruit Growers Shortcourse and the Texas Fruit Growers Conference is available from Tom Handwerker, Extension Horticulturist, Texas A & M University, College Station, Texas 77843, (713) 845-7341. A $20 registration fee covers both programs, proceedings and membership in the Texas Peach and Plum Growers Association.

BAKE SHOW

The Gray County 4-H Bake Show was held Tuesday, September 15. The winner of the County Bake Show will represent Gray County in the District Bake Show Saturday, September 16 in Amarillo. The awards will be held at 2 p.m., presented on the outdoor stage of the Tri-State Fairgrounds' office.

The top three winners were presented gift certificates donated by Lee Heaton, Wheeler-Evans Elevator. First place went to Sarah Miller. Second place, Penny Miller. Third place, Shelly Cochran. Other participants in the Annual Bake Show were Sena Brainard, Brooke Harris, Sherri McDonald, Stacie McDonald, Becky Reed and Menda Thomas.

The workshop, "Computers in Farm and Ranch Management," is designed to give farmers and ranchers basic information about different types of systems available, computer programs that are available and applicable to agriculture, and how to use these programs to improve the decision making process.

The primary use of a computer in assisting an agricultural producer in his management is the processing of the mass of information the producer needs at his fingertips to make his management decisions.

Many producers in West Texas already are using microcomputers in their operations. A special feature of the workshop will be a panel discussion by four such producers: Fred Vanderburg of Pampa, Dean Slaughter of Perryton, Bill Bradley of Estelline and Jack Whitten of Edmonson.

Participants in the workshop will have an opportunity to get some "hands-on" experience by operating several different computer systems now available. Everyone attending should have time to run a computer, using his own farm or ranch data.

The first day of the workshop will feature discussions on microcomputers, their role in agriculture, how to select one, available programs, and the experiences of farmers who have used them. A social hour, dinner and a display of equipment and programs will conclude the day.

The second day will offer participants a choice of any three of four concurrent sessions. These will deal with microcomputer farm accounting systems, livestock management decision aids, crop management decision aids, and financial projections and pricing aids.

Speakers and resource persons include Extension economists and the four producers who are using computers.

Registration forms may be obtained from county Extension offices in Texas or by writing to Marvin Sartin, Texas A & M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center, Route 3, Box 213AA, Lubbock, TX 79401. The registration fee of $50 includes workshop materials, meals and refreshments.

1981 FARM BILL

As Congress gets back into session, attention will again turn to provisions of the 1981 farm bill.

This legislation needs to be completed by Oct. 1, reminds Dr. Ron Knutson, economist in marketing and policy with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A & M University System. Some very interesting yet conflicting forces have developed during the recess, however.

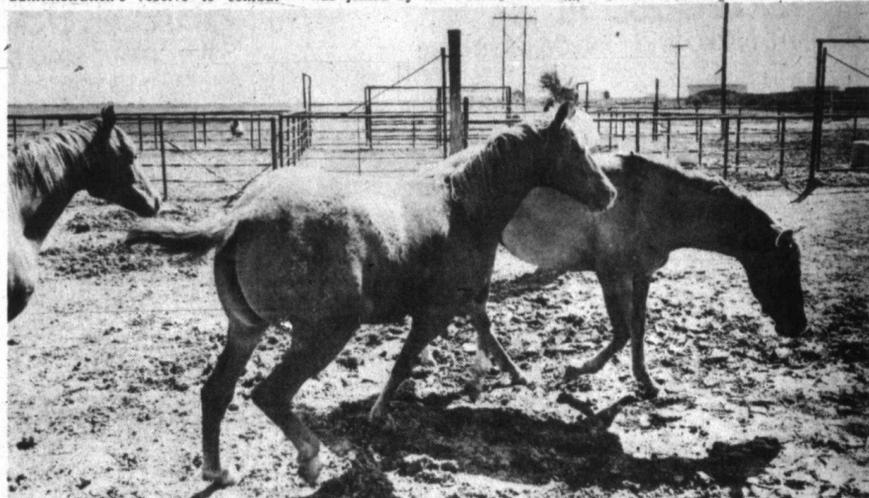

First, bills reported out of the House and Senate Agriculture Committees are not consistent with the Reagan farm bill proposals. Major inconsistencies include target prices and, in the case of the House bill, a milk price support of 75 percent of parity which is considered too high.

While the Administration may be willing to accept the target price concept, it wants to lower wheat target prices from $4.20 per bushel to about $4 and also lower corn and cotton target prices. The Administration believes that with low farm prices, the Reagan farm program spending limits will be exceeded, the economist says.

"Low farm price prospects bring us to the conflict... force. During the Labor Day recess, the USDA announced that 1980 farm income was only $19.9 billion — down 40 percent from 1979. And USDA admits that 1981 income may not be much better," Knutson says.

Many rural congressmen, concerned about their reelection prospects, now are keenly aware of the impact of declining farm income on the financial position of farmers. Lubbock Congressman Kent Hance, for example, has indicated he is going back to Washington to advocate an increase in the cotton loan rate from the proposed 55 cents per pound.

"It's difficult to predict how this conflict will be resolved. The answer likely rests on the extent to which the President is able to restore the momentum of support that he achieved before the recess when his tax package moved through Congress," Knutson explains.

PUNT RETURN. Canadian running back John Albin evades a diving tackle by a Panhandle defender (top photo) before he's brought down by Stephen Byard (44, bottom photo) after a punt return in the first half of the Canadian-Panhandle football clash Friday night. Panhandle went onto a 28-0 romp to lift its record to 2-1. It was Canadian's first loss after two wins. (Staff Photos)

Panthers rout Canadian for homecoming victory

PANHANDLE—Canadian would have probably made a citizens arrest on Panhandle quarterback Tod Mayfield if they could have caught him. That was the problem...catching him. Mayfield stole the show Friday night as he threw for two touchdowns and ran for another in the Panthers' 28-0 homecoming win over Canadian.

Mayfield hit Kevin Brown with touchdown passes of 13 and 32 yards, and included a 29-yard TD run himself. Mayfield rushed for 120 yards on 14 carries.

After a scoreless first quarter, Stacy Rusk scored Panhandle's first TD on a 38-yard scamper. Rusk ended the game with 59 yards on seven rushes.

Panhandle outgained the Wildcats, 18-5, in first downs, and 333-75 in total yards.

Penalties were passed out frequently. The Panthers were penalized 14 times for 102 yards while Canadian was flagged 10 times for 134 yards.

Both clubs are now 2-1 for the season. Canadian hosts Hobart, Okla. Friday night, while Panhandle has an open date this week.

Lefors wins, 56-0

McLEAN—Lefors rolled by McLean's junior varsity, 56-0, Thursday night in prep football action.

Monte Baskett and John Wingert paced Lefors with three touchdowns apiece, while Cody Allison and Tracy Jennings added one score apiece.

Reserves played most of the second half for Lefors, who led 30-0 at halftime.

Lefors defense never allowed McLean JV past the 50-yard stripe.

"The team is shaping up," Lefors coach Jim Allen said. "We had boys who hadn't shown much strength before do good for us."

Lefors, now 2-1, hosts the Canadian ninth graders at 7:30 p.m. Thursday night.

Phillips 28, Groom 2
GROOM—Kevin Jones passed for one touchdown and ran for another to spark Phillips to a 38-2 non-conference football triumph over Groom Friday night.

Jones flipped to Kyle Lynch for a 12-yard touchdown to open the scoring. Danny Rodriguez ran 37 yards for a touchdown. Jones made it 18-0 in the second quarter on a one-yard plunge.

Groom's two points came when the Tigers blocked a punt out of the end zone before halftime.

Joe Estes had scoring runs of one and 12 yards in the third quarter. James Hough passed to Todd Lemon for 45 yards to complete the scoring.

Phillips is 2-1 for the season while Groom stands 0-3.

McLean 13, Silvertown

SILVERTOWN—McLean scored all its points in the first quarter to shut out Silvertown, 13-0, Friday night for the Tigers' first win of the season.

Billy Joe Skipper scored on a 19-yard run and Brock Crockett broke loss on a 73-yard jaunt to complete the scoring.

Silvertown dropped to 0-3 for the season.

Wheeler 28, Booker 18

BOOKER—Wheeler rallied for a pair of fourth-quarter TDs to capture a come-from-behind 28-18 victory over Booker in prep football action Friday night.

Wheeler, 2-0 on the year, dominated the statistics but lost four fumbles to the Kiowas. The Mustangs totaled 367 yards offense—all on the ground—compared to Booker's 259, 150 through the air.

Gary Mills dashed 31 yards to paydirt in the first period to put the Class 1A Kiowas on the board first.

Wheeler jumped on top in the second quarter as Paul Bentley scored on a 12-yard run, and Ricky Bond plunged in from two yards out. Wade Willis booted both PATs to put Wheeler up, 14-7.

Booker took a 15-14 lead into the locker room as Brett Maxfield hit Mills with a 70-yard scoring aerial in the second quarter.

Maxfield kicked a 32-yard field goal in the fourth period to give the Kiowas (0-3) an 18-14 advantage.

But the Mustangs battled back. Bentley put Wheeler up with a 63-yard TD run, and Scott Wright added the final Wheeler TD on a one-yard plunge.

Bentley finished the night with 276 yards rushing on 31 carries, while Bond had 11 yards on 18 tries.

Mills paced the Booker rushing attack with 102 yards on 19 attempts.

Hart Warren, Pampa Country Club golf professional, has been named the winner of a special award to be presented by the North Texas PGA.

Warren, who has been head pro here the past 26 years, was named the Section's Professional of the Year for his contributions to golf. He will be considered for a national award Oct. 27 at The Breakers Hotel in Palm Beach, Fla. during the annual PGA meeting.

Warren has served five terms as treasurer, one as secretary, and two as president of the NTPGA (North Texas Professional Golfers Association). Previously, he served two years as West Texas Chapter vice-president.

Two other club pros, Bob Damron of Oak Cliff C.C. and Eldridge Miles, Bent Tree C.C., will be honored next month along with Warren.

How about a little Harvester football trivia?

In the first game Pampa ever played in 1919, the Harvesters fell to Miami, 20-13. The Harvesters may have seemed like supernatural beings to the Warriors when Pampa won, 100-0, the following year.

Pampa High's district and bi-district basketball champions will garnish its 1981-82 schedule with three New Mexico teams.

The Harvesters host Clovis Nov. 24, then travel to Portales (Dec. 19) and Carlsbad (Dec. 21).

Coach Garland Nichols' crew has been working one hour a day on drills and conditioning since school started. The tempo will pick up Oct. 15 when the Harvesters will be allowed under UIL rules to begin full-fledged practice sessions. Pampa hosts Canyon Nov. 20 in the season opener.

If you played baseball as a kid, you probably lost a flyball or pop in the sun at least once in your career. The ball may have even conked you on the noggin, and the glaring error (pardon the pun) may have cost your team the game.

Well, that embarrassing moment may never happen to your kid because of a new space-age baseball glove that is equipped with a see-through, polarized plastic webbing. The fielder shields his eyes with his glove and tracks the ball by looking through the web.

However, the glove, which was made by the Mizuno Corporation of Japan, still has a few flaws in it. The webbing, for one, was found to be too stiff, making the ball pop out of the glove.

If the glove doesn't pan out, the Mizuno Corporation has plans for other adjustments—like a transparent acrylic catcher's mask and a batting helmet with radio earphones.

Mike Robbins, junior offensive tackle from Richardson Pearce, is Texas A&M's largest football player at 6-7 and 272. He was first among all the offensive linemen in the pre-season mile and a half run with a 9:55 clocking.

NFL roundup

Saints out to set team record

It took the New Orleans Saints 15 games to record their first victory of 1980. It could take them only three games to post No. 2 this year. And that would be a new kind of No. 1.

Never in their history have the Saints been 2-1. But, then, they've never had George Rogers to do the kind of work he did for them last week. On Sunday, he will try and do it against the New York Giants.

Sunday's other National Football League games are San Diego at Kansas City, Miami at Houston, Cleveland at Cincinnati, Detroit at Minnesota, the New York Jets at Pittsburgh, San Francisco at Atlanta, Washington at St. Louis, Tampa Bay at Chicago, Baltimore at Denver, Green Bay at Los Angeles and Seattle at Oakland. Monday night, it's Dallas at New England.

Last Thursday night, Philadelphia beat Buffalo 20-14.

Rogers, the No. 1 pick in the NFL draft last April, rushed for a club-record 162 yards last Sunday as the Saints posted a 23-17 upset victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

"I'm really trying to blend in here," said the Heisman Trophy winner. "I don't like being the center of attention. I never have."

With quarterback Archie Manning hobbled by a hamstring pull, the Saints probably will start Bobby Scott against the Giants.

Scott was intercepted three consecutive times by the Rams. Rookie Marc Wilson will be in reserve.

They will be going against a New York defense which effectively shut down Washington's offense last Sunday. Phil Simms, the Giants' quarterback, had his problems against the Redskins, completing only 8 of 27 passes for 93 yards.

FRONTIER RESOURCES

THE NEW ENERGY FRONTIER: Coal. America's new energy frontier. Black Thunder Coal Mine near Gillette, Wyoming, sits on part of 50 billion tons. Tapping this huge new reserve of raw energy is a job that takes a combination of resources and pioneering spirit. The kind that fuels booms of opportunity. And we're here helping.

Last year, 3 million tons of this coal was used as fuel to make electricity at Southwestern Public Service power plants. Coal is being used more now because other fuels cost too much.

In Wyoming alone, there's enough coal that some areas of Black Thunder won't be mined until the year 2013. That's a lot of electricity. Coal. It's good to know there are some things you can depend on.

Wolverines knock off Notre Dame

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — All-American wide receiver Anthony Carter caught touchdown passes of 71 and 15 yards from Steve Smith and Michigan, knocked from its No. 1 ranking by Wisconsin a week ago, rebounded Saturday to smash top-rated Notre Dame 25-7.

The acrobatic Carter, a 5-foot-11, 161-pound junior from Riviera Beach, Fla., boosted his touchdown total to 25 in only 26 varsity games, while stretching his Michigan career record to 24 scoring receptions. The 71-yard play on third-and-19 early in the second period was the fourth longest pass play in Michigan history.

The setback was the first for Notre Dame in two games under Coach Gerry Faust and only a late touchdown kept it from being the worst licking for the Irish since a 55-24 rout by Southern California in the 1974 regular-season finale.

Faust had won his last 33 games at Moeller High School in Cincinnati before getting the Notre Dame job.

The 11th-ranked Wolverines, 1-1, broke open the contest between two of college football's winningest schools in the third quarter, raising their halftime lead from 7-0 to 19-0 on the second Smith-to-Carter pass and a 1-yard scoring plunge by Lawrence Ricks.

Smith added a 6-yard touchdown run early in the final period, while a swarming Michigan defense kept the Irish bottled up inside their 32-yard line for all but one possession in the first three quarters. Notre Dame averted a shutout on an 8-yard pass from Tim Koegel to Dean Maszta with 7:42 remaining.

SPORTS

USC wins

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Tailback Marcus Allen rushed for 274 yards and two touchdowns Saturday as second-ranked Southern California, wearing down Indiana's defense in the second half, rolled to a 21-0 college football victory.

The Hoosiers stopped three long Trojan drives in the first half as the two teams battled to a scoreless tie at the intermission. The second half, however, belonged to Southern California.

The Trojans, 2-0, started their first scoring drive from their own 15-yard line early in the third quarter. Six plays took Southern Cal to midfield, then a face mask penalty on Indiana nullified a fumble by Allen and gave the Trojans first down at the Hoosiers' 32.

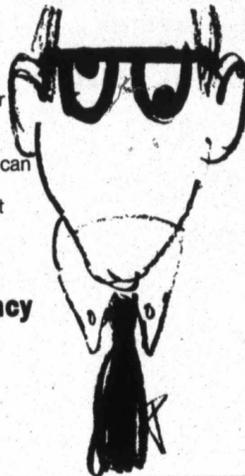

Four straight runs by Allen moved the ball to the 19, and the 200-pound senior then took a pitch-out for the go-ahead touchdown.

It took nine plays on Southern Cal's next possession before backup tailback Fred Crutcher ran in from 11 yards out.

Missouri crushes Rice

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Quarterback Mike Hyde hit 17 of 21 passes for 225 yards and four touchdowns Saturday as Missouri crushed Rice 42-10 in nonconference college football.

Hyde, a junior making only his second start for the Tigers, tied a school record with the four scoring passes and set a school completion mark of 81 percent.

He threw for three touchdowns in the second quarter and hit Bob Meyer on an 11-yard scoring pass early in the third period before going out of the game.

Missouri, 2-0, scored on its first two possessions to seize a 10-0 lead against the winless Owls, 0-2. The only thing the Tigers did poorly all day was kick extra points. Bob Lucchesi missed two and Allan O'Hearn missed one.

Hyde got the Tigers rolling with a 39-yard pass play to Andy Hill on the first play of the game. Bill White completed the 80-yard, nine-play drive with a four-yard run.

After Lucchesi kicked a 42-yard field goal on Missouri's second possession, the Tigers got their passing game going to quickly put the game out of reach.

Hyde threw touchdown passes of three and seven yards to tight end Andy Gibler in the second period, and Mike Richards took a pass near the line of scrimmage and dashed 30 yards to score.

Clemson upsets Georgia

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson's ball control strategy worked to perfection and a fired-up defense intercepted Georgia's Buck Belue five times as the Tigers upset the fourth-ranked Bulldogs 13-3 in college football Saturday.

The loss ended Georgia's 15-game winning streak, the longest in the nation.

Clemson quarterback Homer Jordan tossed an 8-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Perry Tuttle with 7:13 remaining in the second period for the only points the Tigers needed to avenge a 20-16 loss last year to the eventual national champions.

Freshman placekicker Donald Igwebuike kicked two field goals, a 39-yarder just before halftime and a 29-yarder early in the fourth quarter, as Clemson improved its record to 3-0.

Georgia's All-American tailback, Herschel Walker, was limited to 111 yards rushing on 28 carries — well below his season average of 164 yards. Walker also lost two fumbles, including one at the Clemson 17 early in the game.

Major League baseball roundup

By the Associated Press

Mets 8, Cardinals 2
NEW YORK (AP) — Hubie Brooks' two-run homer in the first inning and Dave Kingman's 20th homer of the season in the sixth powered Pete Falcone to his first victory since Aug. 15, as the New York Mets stopped the St. Louis Cardinals 8-2 Saturday.

Mookie Wilson walked to lead off the Mets' first, stole second and went to third on catcher Gene Tenace's throwing error before scoring on a sacrifice fly by Mike Howard. Howard reached first when center fielder Dave Green dropped the ball and Brooks followed with his fourth homer.

The Mets added three more runs in the sixth. A walk to Howard and a single by Brooks chased loser John Martin, 6-4, and Kingman followed with his blast off Mark Littell. It was his first homer in 82 at-bats.

Brooks' clout extended his consecutive-game hitting streak to seven and gave him 25 RBI in his last 38 games since the baseball strike. Brooks also collected his second game-winning hit in two nights.

Falcone, 3-3, picked up his first victory as a starter, going nine innings and giving up six hits.

Blue Jays 6, Angels 4

TORONTO (AP) — Ernie Whitt snapped a 3-3 tie with a two-run double in the fifth inning and John Mayberry and Ted Cox clubbed home runs as the Toronto Blue Jays beat California 6-4 and handed the Angels their fifth straight loss Saturday.

Jim Clancy served up two homers to Brian Downing and Ed Ott in the first two innings but settled down to boost his record to 6-10. He gave up seven hits, two over the final seven innings, and struck out seven while walking one.

The Angels took a 1-0 lead in the first on Downing's leadoff homer, his eighth of the season. Toronto scored twice in the bottom of the first on Mayberry's two-run homer, his 12th.

Ott led off the California second with his second homer of the season and the Angels took a 3-2 lead later in the inning on Downing's RBI single.

Cox tied the game 3-3 with a solo homer in the second — his first of the season. But then Whitt gave the Blue Jays the lead for good with his double in the fifth.

The Blue Jays added a run in the seventh on Mayberry's RBI single before the Angels came back with a run of their own in the ninth on Butch

Astros 8, Giants 1

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Right-hander Vern Ruhle hurled a four-hitter and knocked in two runs Saturday as the Houston Astros walloped the San Francisco Giants 8-1.

Ruhle, pitching his first complete game of the season, walked one and struck out one in boosting his record to 4-4.

After the Giants took a 1-0 lead on Enos Cabell's double and Darrell Evans' single in the first inning, the Astros jumped to a 3-1 edge by scoring three times in the second as Ruhle helped his own cause by knocking in two runs with a two-out double.

Tom Griffin, who pitched only two innings and was removed in the third, took the loss, 8-7. He was long gone as the Astros piled up single runs in the third, fourth, fifth, seventh and eighth.

Alan Ashby had a solo homer for the Astros in the eighth as Houston pounded out 14 hits against four Giant pitchers.

UCLA buries Wisconsin

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Tom Ramsey plunged for one touchdown and fired scoring passes of 27 and 3 yards to tight end Tim Wrightman, leading ninth-ranked UCLA to a 31-13 college football victory over No. 20 Wisconsin Saturday.

Tailback Kevin Nelson rushed for 91 yards for UCLA, 2-0, which took a 14-0 lead with scoring drives covering 66 and 48 yards on the Bruins' first two possessions.

Wisconsin, which upset then top-ranked Michigan 21-14 a week earlier, fell to 1-1.

The Bruins took a 7-0 lead with 4:36 elapsed on Ramsey's 27 yard scoring pass to Wrightman, who didn't have a defender within 10 yards.

Ramsey dived for the Bruins' second touchdown from a yard out with 4:18 left in the first quarter. Ramsey passes of 20 yards to Cormac Carney and 12 yards to Wrightman sparked the drive, which was aided by a face mask penalty against Wisconsin linebacker Jody O'Donnell.

Defensive end Guy Bolioux intercepted a Ramsey pass and returned 18 yards to the UCLA 19 late in the first period. Marvin Neal scored on a 3-yard run two plays later as Wisconsin cut its deficit to 14-7.

Aggies edged, 13-12

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Leo Smith scampered 5 yards for the winning touchdown two plays after a Texas A&M fumble in the fourth quarter to give Boston College a 13-12 upset victory in its season opener Saturday night.

The Aggies were leading 12-7 and had the ball at their own 8 yard line when defensive tackle Joe Ferraro forced a fumble by Johnny Hector that was recovered by linebacker Jim Budness.

The Eagles lost 2 yards on the next play when the snap was fumbled but moved to the 5 on an offside penalty against the Aggies. Smith then bolted through right tackle for the decisive score with 11:30 left in the game. The pass for the conversion failed.

Texas A&M, 1-1, had an excellent opportunity to pull the game out in the final minutes. The Aggies took the ball over at the Boston College 17 after a low snap prevented punter John Cooper from kicking the ball.

Three running plays moved the ball to the 10, but a 27-yard field goal attempt by David Hardy with 1:09 remaining failed when Kyle Stuard couldn't handle Jim DeSilva's high snap.

Pampa Blue wins opener

HEREFORD—Pampa Blue held off Hereford Stanton, 8-6, Thursday in an eighth-grade football opener.

Pampa got on the board first when David Carter went in from one yard out. Mike Killgo scored the two-point conversion to make it 8-0 in the first quarter.

An interception by Bruce Norris set up the TD. Hereford scored with three seconds to go in the fourth quarter on a 35-yard pass, but failed on the conversion attempt.

Pampa Blue meets Pampa Red at 4:30 p.m. Oct. 1 at the middle school field.

Bobcats win

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Southwest Texas State scored 28 points in the final half to defeat Southeastern Louisiana, 35-10, Saturday in a non-conference football contest.

The Bobcats are now 3-0. Southeastern dropped to 2-1.

Whitson wins at Borger

Pampa's David Whitson finished the three-mile course in 16:06 to win the junior varsity division Saturday at the larger cross-country meet.

Others placing for Pampa were Billy Rice, 11th, 17:20 and Jeff Whatley, 24th, 18:36.

"David looked real strong, but we've got a long way to go before we can compete in the bigger meets," Pampa coach Wendell Palmer said.

In the girls' division, Susan Andrews came in second (12:45) in a two-mile race.

"Susan came close to winning, but she didn't have anything left at the finish," Palmer said. "If she can cut 22 seconds off her time, she's going to be right in there every meet."

Pampa is entered in a meet at Plainview on Saturday. The Harvesters will host an invitational Oct. 3.

"It wasn't a bad start for us even though we don't have a full team," Palmer said. "This is the first Billy (Rice) and Jeff (Whatley) have ever ran cross-country."

Senator Bill Sarpalius

Reports

THE FUTURE OF AGRICULTURE

AUSTIN — We begin hearings on two important subjects for the Senate Agriculture Subcommittee in San Antonio on September 28. We will study public funding for agricultural research and loan guarantees for agricultural land.

The importance of these two subjects is obvious. First, agriculture is a science, and like any other science, depends on research and development for its continued growth. Many varieties of crops now grown were unknown a few years ago. Many techniques that farmers now use are of recent vintage. Good examples of these are new techniques for saving water in irrigation.

We will examine the State's role in agricultural research, with an eye to future legislation. Some topics on the agenda are the state agricultural extension service, soil conservation and agricultural experiment stations.

These institutions have served us well in the past, but we will be trying to find ways to improve them for the future.

We will take testimony on a farm loan guarantee program to see how this program could help qualified people acquire money to enter into or expand agricultural programs. Agriculture is a dynamic industry, and therefore needs capital like any other industry.

In this day and age, there can be no doubt that government will be involved in agriculture, just like it is involved in any other industry. The problem is finding the right balance for that involvement, so that we may further, rather than hinder, agricultural interests. That is the basic question for us as we begin our interim study.

We were fortunate to be appointed chairman of the Senate Agriculture Subcommittee in our first term in the Senate. We plan to use that chairmanship to help the valuable Texas agricultural industry. We need your help to do a good job for agriculture. Please write to Senator Bill Sarpalius, P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711.

Bank demands renegotiation of 8 1/2 percent mortgages

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — About 900 homeowners may have to pay up to hundreds of dollars more each month on their houses because western New York's largest savings bank wants to renegotiate their mortgages.

The recall of 8 1/2 percent mortgages — until 1979 the highest interest rate allowed by state law — and their replacement at much higher rates will allow Buffalo Savings Bank to earn an estimated $1 million more a year on the $18 million value of the mortgages, officials said.

The policy was announced Thursday, and the next day the state Banking Department began a review of the action. No developments were announced in the review, but a savings and loan official said the recall appeared legal because Buffalo Savings had included a clause in the 900 mortgages permitting the bank to demand full payment of the loans.

"From a public-relations point of view, what they've done is lousy, but from a business point of view, I'd do it too if I could," said Leroy Townsend, president of the Niagara First Savings and Loan.

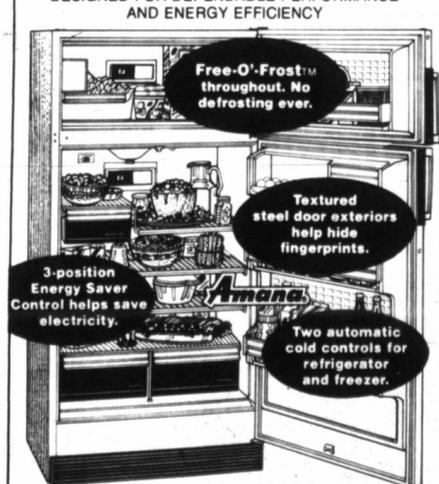

The mortgages were "renegotiable rate mortgages," in which they agreed to renegotiate the terms of their loans or make payments in full upon demand.

The new rate being offered is 14 percent. Under a $30,000 mortgage at 8 1/2 percent, the monthly payment over 30 years is about $230. At 14 percent, the payment is $355 a month. At the going rate for new mortgages, 17 percent, the monthly payment would be $427.80.

A bank official said the decision was made "after much soul-searching" and said the action was taken because "it is not prudent to allow an unprofitable loan to exist when you can call it in."

The 4 - H Rifle Project was established in 1950 and is one of the earliest 4 - H projects in Gray County.

The 4 - H members are taught shooting skills, gun safety sportsmanship and how to handle and care for firearms by two local instructors.

Lee Cox and Johnny Murrell take the 4 - H Rifle Project members to the shooting site from October through May.

"We teach a 22 caliber target shooting course," Cox said.

"This is strictly a competition rifle team made up of two groups the junior group is made up of 4 - Hers from 9 to 14. The senior group is made up of students 14 to 19," Cox said.

"Our group can go to the regional match in the spring if the seniors finish in one of the top two places. Then we go to College Station for the competition," he said.

"The team has placed in one of the top two places for the past three years," he said.

In 1981 the junior and senior team came in first in the Amarillo Regional Competition. The seniors went to College Station and placed 14th in the state in shooting competition for the second year.

4 - H badges that can be earned in the rifle project include the basic badge, the marksmanship badge, the sharpshooter badge and the expert badge. The 4 - Hers are also enrolled in the National Rifle Association.

"We have had 25 to 30 students in the 1980 Rifle Project and that leaves standing room only," Cox said.

A prerequisite course in firearm safety is necessary for all students in the 4 - H Rifle Project.

The firearms used in the rifle project belong to the Gray County Rifle Project and are used during the shootings. They were purchased through various fund raising projects by the 4 - H members and by private donations.

Area native shows fall-winter fur collection in Pampa

By MARILYN POWERS
Lifestyles Editor
"Unique and versatile" are words Pam Mahoney, designer furrier of Dallas, emphasizes in describing her new 1981 autumn - winter collection.

Ms. Mahoney, an Amarillo native, was in Pampa this week to give a private showing of her new fall line at Behrman's.

"I love to do trunk shows in small specialty shops. I like to make friends with the customers. The most important part of the business is the repeat customer," she said.

She is the only woman furrier in the Texas wholesale market and the only independent woman heading a wholesale fur operation in the United States. But her individuality doesn't stop there.

"I was way ahead of my time on a lot of things. Everybody was selling strollers and I had jackets.

Now I sell 90 jackets to 10 strollers. I was probably one of the first to carry large stocks of (size) fours and sixes. I also have a lot of reversibles and designs for the young," she said.

Another aspect of her approach to furs which sets her apart from others is her attitude toward accessories.

"I do a total look, including hat and muff, which no one else does. And this is the biggest year ever for hats and accessories," Ms. Mahoney said.

She is celebrating her company's fourth anniversary, having doubled her business in just three years. This year, she is a nominee for the 1981 Flying Colors Fashion Award, sponsored by Braniff International and the Dallas Apparel Mart. She is the only furrier to have been nominated for this coveted honor in the six-year history of the Flying Colors Award presentations.

"To have been nominated by the retailers for the Flying Colors Award is the highest and most meaningful award to me," she said.

The honor takes on added significance when Ms. Mahoney's "furless" background is considered. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O.B. Dalton of Amarillo, she graduated from Amarillo High School in 1955. She earned an RN degree from Charity Hospital in New Orleans and then went on to become the better and contemporary sportswear and dress buyer for Dunlaps department store in Lubbock.

Her training in the fur world began later, as office manager, statistical analyst and sales consultant with a furrier. She learned to appreciate uniqueness, high quality fashion styling and personal service.

She describes her entry into the domain of the furrier: "I did personal shopping for a lot of affluent women. One of my customers wanted a fur coat. I took her to a wholesaler. I didn't know one fur from another, but I sold her a fur. The manager was so impressed that he tried to hire me for two years. Finally, I went to work for him for five years, and he taught me everything I know. I began my own business because I felt that women were needed in the fur business and that more high fashion furs were needed for women."

She likened the need for selling diamonds: "You have to establish trust with the customer. The only thing any of us have to establish is fine quality."

Searching for that fine quality means spending three or four months each year in New York.

"I realize that not many furriers can spend that much time in New York. In fact, I am known as the redheaded furrier walking down 7th Avenue with a glass of iced tea in my hand. I do not have a buying office. I buy the best furs geared to my customer's needs," she said.

The wide range of colors, styles and types of furs in her collection attests to her desire to meet the needs of her customers. Included in the 1981 autumn - winter collection are many dyed furs in contemporary fashion colors ranging from loden greens to pale mauves and blue frost, with natural furs ranging from the ever popular mink to swakara, lynx and cherry red fox.

Fur designs by Pierre Balmain, Oscar de la Renta, Anne Klein, Chloe, Hanae Mori, Halston and Koos Van de Akker, as well as Pam Mahoney originals, are featured in the new collection, which has price tags ranging from $100 to $600 for accessories and from $2,000 to $20,000 for furs.

Designs are both elegant and casual, with shearing and basket weave patterns making a strong appearance. One of the biggest trends represented in the collection is the reversible coat or jacket. Ms. Mahoney's collection includes such reversibles as a full-length sable that reverses to silk poplin, and a man's muskrat jacket that reverses to poplin.

Many of the newer styles in the Pam Mahoney Collection are reminiscent of the '20s, '30s and '40s, with broader, puffed shoulders extending over shoulder pads. Wide shoulders elongate the look at the top, then fall to a slim but loose silhouette to form a flattering line. Swing or tent coats, which can be worn belted or free, and fur cape stylings from waist length to floor length are other important fashion statements this year.

While this season's designer furs hit every length from the short bomber jacket to full length, Ms. Mahoney predicts that the extreme popularity of the 28-inch jacket will continue.

The newest look at the neck is the fluted collar which softly ruffles toward the face in minks and natural sheared furs. Oriental influences are evident with the emergence of the mandarin collar. Optional push-up sleeves with banding at the wrist appear on many designs as a practical, easy-to-wear alternative to the fuller styles.

The Western trend in fashion reveals itself in the Pam Mahoney Collection with such designs as sleeveless coats and vests with sable tails and yokes.

Unique designs in the Mahoney group are a full-length navy blue swakara with a navy fox collar, natural cherry red fox with white shadow fox in a cross-stitch pattern, one-of-a-kind Tibetan lamb with dyed mink worked into the design, and hand-beaded jackets with fur trim.

"The fur market has tripled in the past 10 years. Where the typical person buying a first fur used to be a woman over 40, it's now an 18-year-old coed, or a male. And that 40-plus woman is today selecting her fourth or fifth fur," Ms. Mahoney said.

"Men are starting to wear furs almost as much as women," she added.

"Today, men and women are seeing fur as a practical investment. Many styles can be worn with everything from blue jeans to a formal evening gown."

THE LUXURIOUS FOX JACKET with extended puffed shoulders in Blue Frost Fox, one of the season's newest colors, from the Pam Mahoney Designer Furrier of Dallas 1981 Autumn - Winter Collection. Topped with a matching blue fox hat, this versatile fur look complements everything from jeans to an elegant evening gown.

THE JASMINE WHITE MINK jacket by Pierre Balmain frames the face for elegant evenings with the new fluted ruffle collar. The button fluted cuff detailing at the sleeve and the versatile matching tie belt, shown here in a bow at the neck, exemplify new fur treatments in the Pam Mahoney Designer Furrier of Dallas 1981 Autumn - Winter Collection. Hair design by Leonard Gresham.

Snails serve as basis for tasty sauces

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

French sailors often subsisted largely on escargots when they cruised the Mediterranean, and Napoleon was said to have issued them as emergency rations for his troops.

The escargot is a land-based cousin of the clam and oyster. Carrying its shell on its back, it moves along at a speed of about 3 inches a minute and feeds on vine leaves and blades of grass.

There are two basic types of snails, the Achatine, which dwells in Asian swampland and the plumper, more tender Helix or European land snail, which is more common in the Western world.

Escargots are packed in tins, available with or without shells in delicacy shops and many supermarkets in the United States.

They are particularly popular in the French province of Burgundy, where chefs prepare them in a variety of ways including as quiche fillings and fondues.

When the spring rains fall in France, escargots are harvested in the early morning. Most packers do not collect snails from regions which have been harvested the two previous years. The escargot should be allowed to grow for three or four years to reach ideal size.

The French usually drink a Burgundy wine with escargots, preferably a light white one.

Snails actually have little taste of their own but serve as a vehicle for highly flavored sauces or fillings such as in this recipe for Escargots Grandmere:

1 can (4 1/2 ounces) escargots with shells, drained
1/4 cup red wine
1 clove garlic, crushed
1/2 teaspoon black pepper.

coarsely ground
1/4 cup sweet butter
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 teaspoon crumbled tarragon
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons chopped chives

Place escargots into shells. Spoon 1/2 teaspoon wine into each shell. In bowl, mix remaining ingredients till well blended. Press 1 teaspoon mixture over each shell to seal in escargot. Place escargots in a baking pan. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven 10 or 15 minutes or till bubbly. Serves 4.

Dear Abby

Maturity, not just age, counts in dating game

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My parents are divorced and my father is dating a 30-year-old woman. He is 45. Meanwhile, my mother, who is 42, is going with a 55-year-old man. I'm 14, so why can't I go with a 22-year-old guy?

How can both my parents say he is too old for me when my dad is 15 years older than his girlfriend, and my mom's boyfriend is 13 years older than she is?

OLD ENOUGH TO COUNT

DEAR OLD ENOUGH: It's not the "age difference" your parents are concerned about. They probably feel that at 14, you're not sufficiently mature to handle a relationship with a 22-year-old man. (Few 14-year-olds are.) Count to 10 and simmer down, dear. Your parents want the best for you.

...

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem talking to people. If I look someone in the eyes while speaking, my face turns red and I get all choked up inside — especially if I'm talking to a man. If I'm paid some sort of compliment, I can feel my face turn red and I have to look the other way. When I'm with a group of people talking, I never say anything because my voice is so soft, no one ever hears me anyway. At work I have heard several comments on how "stuck up" I am because I don't talk to anybody. This makes me angry because there's no way I can defend myself and let people know I'm not stuck up, I'm just shy.

I saw a psychiatrist and couldn't even look her in the eye. She told me she couldn't help me unless we communicated, but I couldn't get the words out even though I knew exactly

Requests keep right on coming for the salad made famous by the Santa Fe Railway restaurateur. This version is given in Louise Henderson's "Just Like Mother Made: Ozark Recipes."

Shred one medium head cabbage and one small onion, cover with 1/2 cup sugar. Bring to boil: 1 teaspoon sugar, 1/2 tablespoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard, 1/2 teaspoon celery seed, 1/2 cup peanut oil, 1/2 cup vinegar; pour over shredded cabbage. Let stand at least 4 hours before serving. Good for 4 to 5 days.

what I wanted to say. I tried group therapy. It cost me $75, and I didn't say two words during the whole session. I have no trouble writing my feelings, but I just can't express them verbally to anyone. It's driving me insane.

I'm 21, blonde hair, blue eyes, 5-foot-9 and 135 pounds, and everyone tells me how great-looking I am, but I am beginning to despise myself because of my hang-up. Abby, please help me.

DESPERATE IN DENVER

DEAR DESPERATE: For openers, please read the book, "Shyness: What It Is and What to Do About It." It's by Philip G. Zimbardo, a Stanford University psychologist. It's one of the most helpful books I've yet to see about shyness, and is written in language that everyone is able to understand. If that doesn't help, write again. I have other ideas.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are having an argument, and we can't find anyone who can settle it, so please ask one of your consultants. He says there is just as much nutritional value in the vitamins you buy in a store as in the vitamins you get in food.

I say he is wrong — there is no way you can imitate nature, that the vitamins you get in food are far superior to the synthetic vitamins manufactured in some laboratory. If I'm wrong I'll eat this newspaper. Thank you.

FRAN IN FAYETTEVILLE, ARK.

DEAR FRAN: Start nibbling. The United States Public Health Service's Food and Drug Administration spokesperson says, "Synthetic vitamins, manufactured in a laboratory, are identical to the natural vitamins found in foods. The body cannot tell the difference, and derives the same amount of benefit from either source."

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but I need advice desperately. I'm 26 and the mother of three little girls, all under 6. Last summer I caught my husband (I will call him "Rex") sexually molesting our 4-year-old. I was shocked and sick to my stomach. I had no idea this was going on under my own roof! I took her to the hospital, and that's how the law became involved.

I filed for divorce immediately and made Rex move out. He rented a room just around the corner and now he's making my life miserable. He says, "All dads do this. I just got caught."

Rex wanted half-custody of the girls, but the judge ruled that he could see them only in my presence. Now Rex is giving me a hard time, harassing me and making all kinds of threats. I am scared. The courts ordered him to be examined by a psychiatrist, but what good does that do if he's still on the loose in my neighborhood, hanging around my little girls? I want my children to have a daddy, but I can't trust him. What should I do?

NOWHERE TO TURN

DEAR NOWHERE: See a lawyer and tell him what you've told me. Since Rex has been forbidden by law to see the girls alone, if he violates the law, call the police at once. You don't say whether Rex is being treated for his illness (and it is an illness), but in any case, it might relieve your mind to talk with the doctor (or doctors) who examined him. In the meantime, don't let the girls out of your sight.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (35 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Peeking at Pampa

Overheard people talking about the beautiful wedding of Kelly Bruner and Kirk Fisher. Seems it was a family event, a lovely occasion for all. One guest said, "Sentiment was all over the place."

The bride wore a necklace of pearls that had been an anniversary gift from her father to her mother. For the wedding, her mother, Billie (Mrs. Robert) Bruner, was in apricot chiffon, looking young and pretty enough to have been a bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. D.W. Fisher, the bridegroom's folks, were clad just right too.

Mrs. Keith Fisher sang and her husband, brother of the groom, was best man. The bride's uncle, Dean Spoonmore, gave her away. Three sets of grandparents attended, among them the V.A. Fishers of Oklahoma City and Mr. and Mrs. T.J. Owens of Pampa.

The reception was a special feature of the happy occasion. Fellowship Hall of First Methodist Church was a veritable Garden of Eden, decorated with pampas grass in large brass containers.

The grandmothers made the four lovely cloths for the four serving tables. Refreshments, in addition to the traditional bride's and groom's cakes, consisted of a delectable assortment of fruit and cheese. Guests said the combination was delicious.

Kelly's uncle, the Rev. Hugh Daniel of Quanah, performed the ceremony. In the late 1940s Rev. Daniel's father was pastor of the Lefors Methodist Church. Hugh and his brother helped build the church there, putting out manual labor on the job. The brother is now pastor in Spearman. Whenever Rev. Hugh comes to Pampa, he always drives through Lefors because he's still sentimental about that church.

De Lea Vicars' 90th birthday was celebrated royally on Sept. 9, when he was a dinner guest of friends and relatives at the Pampa Club. Heard that everybody commented on how spry, how alert, how remarkable he is. He's one of our early-day Pampans, and he probably knows more about our town's beginnings than anybody else. During our special celebration of Pampa's centennial, he supplied much of the historical data used in the pamphlets and the stage play, Happy Birthday and many more. De Lea!

Understand Coleene and Gene Hamilton are moving back to Pampa from Houston. They lived here some years ago and will be heartily welcomed by old friends. Since they have always been good church workers, we're sure their Baptist friends will be glad to have them home again. The Hamiltons have three children. Coleene is a dental hygienist and Gene is with Celanese.

Frankie and Bill Derr were the honorees at an anniversary party recently. It was their 25th and their children invited them to have dinner. Then they surprised Frankie and Bill by taking them to the Flame Room, where friends and relatives were gathered for a lovely reception. The room was attractively decorated and the cake was beautiful.

Heard that Polly and Bill Chafin have just returned from a trip to the Holy Land. Hope Bill is preparing talks about the trip. If you haven't heard his excellent speeches, you've missed a real treat.

Saw Icie Jones the other night, lovely in deep pink, her hairdo as perfect as always. Remember her lovely country home when I see her — the place where she used to ride her Tennessee walking horse. Seems to me she had swans, too. Icie's my idea of a real lady.

Read that Clarendon College, Pampa Center, has been conducting fall enrollment. Aren't we lucky to be able to take college courses right here at home? Understand that Pat Marcum and Kay Crouch are on the faculty, as well as many other Pampans.

One Pampans who attended the recent Miss America Scholarship Pageant in Atlantic City was Rick Leveritt. He was there cheering on Sheri Ryman, the current Miss Texas, who was a runner-up in the national pageant. Seems Rick and Sheri met while Sheri was in Pampa for the recent Miss Top O' Texas Scholarship Pageant, and Sheri invited him to come to the Miss America contest.

People enjoyed Marguerite Grady's charm and enviable figure. Wylene Curtis' contagious smile. Boydine Bossay's ability to sing and dance and play the piano and help husband, Jimmy, run a business and innumerable activities. Betty Casey's winning smile, her lovely clothes and her softly-sweet voice. Jan Johnson of Pampa, named most valuable player at Lubbock's Christian College Volleyball Tournament.

More next week. PAM.

New Scout troop forms

A new Girl Scout troop, Sixth Grade Junior Troop 49, is now being organized.

Any sixth grade girl who is interested in Scouting is welcome to attend the next meeting so that she may be included in all upcoming activities of the troop.

Meetings will be held from 3:30 to 5 p.m. every Tuesday in Room 12 of Pampa Middle School.

On Saturday, Oct. 3, the troop will travel to Wellington to participate in a "Junior Olympic" day planned by the Wellington Scouts. Girls must join the troop now to be eligible to attend.

Other activities planned for the year include calendar and cookie sales, service projects, badge work and camping. To help the leaders and to receive the most benefit from Scouting, each girl is encouraged to take an active part in all activities and to attend meetings regularly.

New Scouts are asked to bring their parents to their first meeting to talk with leaders and to fill out registration forms. National dues of $3, along with troop dues, are payable at this time. Parents are also asked to volunteer to help with the troop in any way that they can. Transportation and telephoning are always needed, according to troop leaders.

The Texas Arts and Crafts Educational Foundation, part of the extensive Kerrville organization, provides additional educational exhibits and programs.

The Fair has become a Memorial Day weekend tradition over the past 10 years for thousands of Texans and out of state visitors.

Deadline for receipt of entry is Nov. 16, 1981. An application form which includes exhibitor information is available from the Foundation office in Kerrville. Write TACF, P.O. Box 1527, Kerrville, Texas 78028 - 1527 or call 512-896-5711.

First snowfall predicted

The Texas Panhandle will be on the receiving end of 13.2 inches of snow this winter, as compared to last season's 9.9-inch total reported by the National Weather Service in Amarillo. The first flakes are scheduled to arrive on Nov. 7, 1981, and the last ones won't descend until April 8, 1982.

Those are among the computerized predictions being made in the second annual Jacobsen "Snow Almanac," a 28-page, heavily-illustrated compendium of snow statistics, weather forecasts and winter folklore created and published by the manufacturer of lawn and snow equipment, as based on 40 years of research and compilation by the National Climatic Center in Asheville, N.C.

According to the 1981 "Snow Almanac," Caribou, Me., will get the nation's first snow of the winter on Oct. 4, 1981, while Philadelphia will receive the country's final dusting on April 19, 1982. Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., is forecast to have the largest total snowfall of the 1981-82 winter with 127.5 inches.

In addition to snowfall date and forecasts for 120 cities across the United States, the "Snow Almanac" contains useful tips on emergency snow procedures as well as miscellany on the history, geography and politics of snow, from its role in precipitating the Boston Massacre to the first Winter Olympics.

The "Snow Almanac" is published by Jacobsen Consumer Products. Copies of the Almanac are available free to consumers from local Jacobsen dealers or may be obtained by writing to Snow Almanac, Jacobsen Consumer Products, P.O. Box 7047, Charlotte, N.C. 28217.

Other predictions included in the Almanac are:
Largest total inch accumulations
 (1) Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. - 127.5

(2) Flagstaff, Ariz. - 117.8
 (3) Caribou, Me. - 109.9
 (4) Rochester, N.Y. - 106.5
 (5) Syracuse, N.Y. - 100.9

Earliest snowfall of the season
 (1) Caribou, Me. - Oct. 4
 (2) Houghton Lake, Mich. - Oct. 5
 (3) Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

Mending Mature Marriage

Spouses shouldn't 'retire' from mates

By LOUISE PIERCE

"DEAR LOUISE: Did you read the Associated Press article from Philadelphia, a while back, about a Temple University sociologist saying that maybe someday the wedding vows will read 'until retirement do us part'? If you did, what did you think of it?"

BH: Yes, I read it and I was appalled by its content. For the rest of you who didn't read it or have forgotten it, the writer, unnamed, discussed the opinions of Dr. Holger Stub, a specialist in the study of aging. He said:

"Like the policeman, mailman, secretary or soldier who returns home from one career and takes up another, increased longevity allows men and women virtually to bargain for two marriages, one for the young family years and another for the post-parental years."

This writer says that his studies have found that two categories of divorcees have increased in recent years in the U.S. They involve couples who have young children and older couples who have been married for 20 years.

He adds, "Longevity has added as much as a quarter of a century of close living to many marriages. This alone exposes marriage to a phenomenal increase in disruptive influences and culminates in high divorce and separation rates."

Sociologist Stub admits, "This sounds amoral and cynical to romantics or the religiously oriented."

It certainly does! I believe most of you readers, like me, want to abide by the Bible teachings and by your own consciences.

When we married our now-mature spouses, we vowed, "till death do us part." I intend to cling to that promise as long as I live.

Stub's reasoning states, "The high level of insight, good fortune and adaptable personality required to have a 50-year marriage are, as yet, not too plentiful among applicants for marriage licenses, so divorce and remarriage may continue to increase."

Apparently this author has not taken time to conduct his studies in our happy marriage oriented part of the country. Of course there are divorces here, far too many of them. But there are also many happily married couples who have already spent 50 years together and look forward to half as many more.

The belief that retired people need new careers is valid and should be considered, adopted in most cases. But it certainly should not follow, and does not, that the new career requires a new wife or husband.

Sociologist Stub is famous and I am not, but famous people can be wrong. I believe he is, in this case.

With the divorce rate high among young- and middle-aged marriage partners, Grandma and Grandpa sometimes provide the only stability and family feeling that youngsters have. It should not be taken from them.

But the most important reason for holding to your first mate when you take up second careers is that it is your best possibility for a contented, or at least calm, old age.

Nobody's perfect, as we often say. But we know the imperfections of the mates we now live with. We'd risk

SLEEPING BEAUTY

No wonder the sleeping princess in that fairy tale was a beauty... she didn't have the dull complexion that comes from lack of sleep. According to the experts, insufficient sleep slows down blood circulation, allowing fatty acids to clog pores and cause blemishes.

James Garner in 'Maverick'

By JERRY BUCK
 ap television writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — James Garner grasps the bootstraps and with an effort tugs the big black boots onto his feet. Smiling, he says, "That's the Maverick boots."
 Garner will wear the boots as well as the itinerant gambler's all-black duds in the NBC series "Bret Maverick," a reprise of the Western spoof 24 years after it first appeared on ABC.
 He lifts his feet and says, "They sure are heavy. I wonder if they could hollow out the heels." That's a suggestion you might expect from Bret Maverick, who would be calculating how the secret cache might come in handy during a scam.
 The idea of returning "Maverick" first occurred to Garner when things went sour on the original series. It stayed in the back of his mind for the next 20 years as his career flourished, first in the movies, then again in television on "The Rockford Files."

 "We were going into the third year in 1959 and I could see that the scripts were getting bad," Garner says. "Roy Huggins, who had created the show, had left at the end of the second year."
 "I went to Bill Orr, who was then the head of Warner Bros. Television, and told him he should stop the show right then, while it was at its peak. The audience hadn't caught on yet that the scripts were bad, but it wouldn't take them long. I said bring it back in three or four years and do it again."
 Garner got out the the show after the third season in a contract dispute with Warners. The show lingered on another year with co-star Jack Kelly, who played brother Bart Maverick, and with the addition of Roger Moore, who played cousin Beau Maverick.

 "So I had the idea then to stop it, come back later and do it again," says Garner. "When I was looking for another series to do in the early 1970s I thought of 'Maverick.' I knew in the back of my mind that it probably would work. There weren't any Westerns. And I had it in my mind to do when I signed with NBC to do another series after 'Rockford.'"
 It's believed only the second time that a television series has been revived with the original star. The first came when NBC returned "Dragnet" in 1967 after an absence of seven years. Jack Webb played Sgt. Joe Friday for another three years. ("The Life of Riley" had two incarnations in the early days to TV, but in the second run William Bepko replaced Jackie Gleason.)

 "Maverick" also had another life. Charles Frank starred in eight episodes of "Young Maverick" on CBS in 1979-80.

TOGETHER AGAIN. Paul Simon, right, and Art Garfunkel get together at New York's Paladium Theater Thursday to rehearse for a free concert in central Park Saturday. The duo were a major force in shaping urban folk music into folk and soft rock during the 1960's, with Garfunkel's special vocal quality complementing the lyrical poetry of songs Simon wrote. A new season on Broadway

By JAY SHARBUTT
 AP Drama Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — It's rumored that each new Broadway season is like a second marriage — the triumph of hope over experience. Next month, Broadway's 1981-82 season begins in earnest and so does the hoping.
 The most talked-about effort is the Royal Shakespeare Company's marathon stage version of Charles Dickens' "Nicholas Nickleby." It opens a 14-week run on Oct. 4, with 42 actors playing 135 roles. It may not be for the restless or the cost-conscious.
 You get intermissions and a meal break...but the show runs 8½ hours.
 And the price is $100 for any, repeat, any seat in the house. The fee doesn't include dinner, parking, the babysitter, the babysitter's friends, major sick taxes or even court costs. It's a night full of promise. But so is much of the new season. Among other things, there's a new Stephen Sondheim musical, and one directed by Michael Bennett of "Chorus Line" fame.

Their respective shows are "Merrily We Roll Along," an updated version of the 1934 George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart play, and "Dream Girls," about some back-up singers who become stars on their own.
 Sondheim's "Merrily" rolls in on Nov. 1. It marks his first collaboration with Harold Prince since "Sweeney Todd" in 1979. "Dream Girls," an original and Bennett's first Broadway play since his ill-fated "Ballroom" in 1978, opens Dec. 6. And older female stars also are due in, continuing the custom of last season — one that while short on creativity and long on flops, at least offered Elizabeth Taylor, Lena Horne and Lauren Bacall.
 This season's lead-off lady is Claudette Colbert, opening Oct. 1 in "A Talent for Murder," a comedy-thriller. Then, on Oct. 15, Joanne Woodward, a rare visitor, helps revive Shaw's "Candida."
 Come Nov. 16, Katharine Hepburn, an actress for all seasons, returns to Broadway as a retired concert pianist in "The West Side Waltz" by Ernest Thompson, author of "On Golden Pond."

 Last but not least: Anne Bancroft, who first clicked on Broadway in 1958 in a two-character comedy, "Two For The Seesaw." She'll be back Dec. 17 in another two-character outing, "Duet For One," as a concert violinist stricken by multiple sclerosis.
 Two plays by Shakespeare also are on tap for 1981-82. "Macbeth" will follow "Candida" at the Circle in the Square. Then, in March at another house, "Othello" will open, with James Earl Jones as Othello and Christopher Plummer as Iago.
 No arrival time is set, but two musicals about Charlie Chaplin also may turn up this season. One, "Chaplin," is based on the childhood and the first five years of the Little Tramp's career. The other, "Charlie Chaplin," covers his entire life. It stars Anthony Newley, who's writing the book and music with Stanley Ralph Ross.

All of the above correct for killing a joke

LOS ANGELES (AP) — This week's rock trivia question concerns a new British band called Killing Joke. They play: a. punk rock; b. alternative heavy metal (whatever that is); c. disco; d. all of the above; e. none of the above.
 Surprise. All the answers are correct, depending on who you talk to, and here's why:
 a. The punk crowd relates to the band's defiant emotional stance, most personified by the fist-clenching lead singer and keyboardist, Jaz.
 b. Dancers moving to the chanted lyrics and tribal rhythms hammered out by drummer Paul have put a single, "Follow the Leader," onto Billboard's disco charts. In fact, a 1980 Killing Joke tune, "Psyche," became the first independently released British record to get on the disco chart for 15 weeks. (Yes, Virginia, there are still disco charts, but getting on one is no longer the insult to artistic integrity it once was. And if the word "disco" leaves a bad taste in your mouth, try "dance rock" on for size.)
 c. The label "alternative heavy metal" in a promoter's radio ad was basically an attempt to widen the band's audience. "We don't have anything to do with the pomp of heavy metal," states Youth, the bass player. But then again, guitarist

Geordie suggests, "people who like heavy metal tend to like us because of the aggression of it."
 d. See a, b, and c.
 e. Actually, the band members themselves — like most musicians — would just as soon do without restrictive labels of any kind. "Basically, we don't give a damn about images," says manager Brian Taylor.
 In England, where an avid music press wields considerably more power than its American equivalent, the media has been a problem.
 "The press just took an instant dislike," Geordie — band members don't use last names — says. "The press always expect some sort of manifesto. You're supposed to direct people and show 'em the light."
 During their brief tour in this country, however, the band appeared to have avoided pigeonholing — mainly because not much was known about them one way or another.

Sun drilling has shown increase

DALLAS — Sun Gas drilled 50 wells during the first half of 1981, nearly a 30 percent increase over the 39 wells drilled for the same time period last year. The activity included 10 to 12 onshore rigs and two to three off - shore rigs drilling almost continually during the first six months of 1981.

Sun Gas, a major operating unit of Sun Company in Delaware, is one of the nation's leading suppliers of natural gas and natural gas liquids, producing and marketing about two percent of the gas energy consumed in the United States.

Bless you-for 265 days

PERSHORE, England (AP) — Schoolgirl Donna Griffiths caught a chill last January and began to sneeze. And sneeze. And sneeze.

She was still sneezing today to set a new world record she could do without.

"I wish someone could tell me how to stop," the 12-year-old said Friday at her home near Worcester in western England on her 255th day of sneezing.

Today Donna was 62 days ahead of Birmingham schoolgirl Tricia Reay, who caught a cold in Oct. 1979 and sneezed for 194 days, according to the Guinness Book of Records.

Tricia stopped sneezing after treatment at an allergy clinic in the French Pyrenees, paid for by friends and relatives. Donna's parents say they cannot afford to go there.

"Donna is welcome to the record. I shall be sending her a get well card," said Tricia.

Donna sneezes at best twice a minute, at worst every five seconds. Doctors have failed to cure her and so has a holiday in the Welsh mountains. Donna says she has learned to live with her ailment and she even swims for her school.

"It gets me down but I somehow manage," Donna said.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Veteran broadcaster David Brinkley has said "thank you, and good night" to NBC, recalling how he and viewers have "grown up together" over nearly four decades.

But he's expected to stay in the broadcast news business — a source at ABC News said Friday that Brinkley is expected to announce Monday his new association with that network.

Brinkley resigned from NBC after 38 years with the network because he was no longer doing what he wanted — covering the news.

DENVER (AP) — Denver police and Secret Service agents may have spared Vice President George Bush the embarrassment of having to fend off an aggressive rabbit shortly after Bush's arrival here.

The vice president had just debarked from Air Force Two at Stapleton International Airport on Friday when the rabbit sprang from the grass about 75 feet from the vice president.

Denver police and a Secret Service agent quickly intervened, shooting away the animal with outstretched arms.

When Jimmy Carter was president, a rabbit reportedly attacked Carter's boat during a fishing trip. The president was able to discourage the rabbit's advances only after swinging at the rabbit with an oar, according to reports of the incident.

NEW YORK (AP) — If you see Prince Charles with his eyes closed and his face solemn at some regal rite, he may not be meditating on the glories of Britain. He may be sleeping.

In an interview with Good Housekeeping magazine, the heir to the British throne says one of his most difficult duties is trying not to yawn.

"I fall asleep very easily," he is quoted as saying in the current issue. "Standing up, sometimes."

ATLANTA (AP) — An FBI informant planted inside the Southern Christian Leadership Conference during the 1960s failed to stop the organization or prove it was run by communists, its president says.

Joseph Lowery said Friday the FBI had a "racist, arrogant notion" that communists were involved with the SCLC during the height of the civil rights struggle.

The revelations were made this week in a book, "The FBI and Martin Luther King Jr.," written by David Garrow, a political scientist at the University of North Carolina.

The book, based on FBI files from the 1960s, says an SCLC bookkeeper provided regular information to FBI agents for six years and was paid up to $10,000 per year.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Having succeeded at the box office as Tarzan's Jane, Bo Derek has been signed to appear as Adam's Eve.

Universal Pictures has announced that the "10"-rated beauty will star in and produce "Adam and Eve," with husband John Derek as director and Zev Braun as executive producer.

No script has been written yet, but it will take a light view of events in the Garden of Eden, the studio indicated.

BOYNTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A Florida Highway Patrol trooper who accidentally shot himself in the leg while fending off a police attack dog still says dogs "are a necessity" for the police force.

"I don't see anything wrong with them," said trooper Steven Britt, 24, who was hospitalized in satisfactory condition in Lake Worth with a bullet wound in his right calf and several dog bites.

Smoky, a Boynton Beach police dog, was shot and killed by Britt during the struggle Friday. Officials said the dog apparently mistook the trooper for a lawbreaker. Britt had cornered a speeding driver and was leaving his cruiser when the dog attacked him, police said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorneys for President Reagan's campaign committee may try to block the release of any more campaign audit reports by the Federal Election Commission.

The Reagan campaign is seeking an injunction against release of a preliminary audit report alleging that the campaign misspent $1.5 million and violated federal election laws.

A hearing on that case was set for Oct. 21 after a brief session Friday before U.S. District Court Judge Joyce Green.

Herbert L. Fenster, an attorney for the Reagan campaign, said that audit reports, released routinely in

Snakebite treatment can be worse than bite

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Snakebite — though few die of it — can cripple and disfigure, and now a Texas Tech physician says hospital treatment might be worse than the bite if it includes surgery.

But doctors at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston say surgery has caused the number of amputations resulting from snakebite to drop to almost zero.

The conflicting views appeared in the September issue of Texas Medicine, the journal of the Texas Medical Association.

The articles said about 7,000 persons are bitten by poisonous snakes in the United States every year but less than 1 percent die.

"Surgery as the primary mode of management for the treatment of snakebite may be more harmful than helpful and may indeed be worse than the bite," says Dr. Edgar O. Ledbetter, chairman of the Department of Pediatrics at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center in Lubbock.

Ledbetter urged aggressive use of antivenin instead of the common practice of cutting away tissue into which venom has spread.

Drs. Ted Huang, S.J. Blackwell and S.R. Lewis of the Galveston medical school's Department of Surgery, said records of 269 snakebite cases treated in the school's hospitals between 1952 and 1979 prove the value of surgical treatment.

They said 63 patients were treated between 1952 and 1970, when surgery became the primary method of treatment. The other 206 patients were treated after 1970.

"None of the ... patients who received primary care at our hospitals (after 1970) required antivenin," the Galveston doctors said.

Between 1952 and 1970, amputation of fingers was required in 31.9 percent of the cases involving the hand, and 10 percent of the cases involving bites to the foot resulted in amputations, they said.

"With a more aggressive attitude in removing tissues contaminated with venom, as we have adopted since 1970, the incidence of infection around the site of envenomation has been nil. The incidence of deformity has decreased to 0.49 percent," the UT Medical Branch surgeons said.

Ledbetter urged "medical management" rather than surgery, saying that in other states with large numbers of snakebites, physicians are getting "outstanding results" with intravenous injection of antivenin.

"The effectiveness of various snakebite antivenins has been well proven throughout the world where envenomations of a much more serious nature than commonly seen in the United States occur regularly. It is therefore surprising that a reluctance to rely on antivenin persists among many U.S. physicians," he said.

Risks of the surgical approach include infection, blood loss, accidents involving anesthetics, disfigurement and the subsequent need for reconstructive surgery later, Ledbetter asserted.

"Despite the proven effectiveness of medical management for most cases, surgical procedures will likely remain popular as long as emergency rooms are supervised by surgically oriented personnel and as long as other physicians remain reluctant to manage these victims medically," he said.

Huang, Blackwell and Lewis said in their article that they moved away from the use of antivenin and other "medical" therapies because of "our increasing concern over the morbidities (such as tissue death) encountered in patients who had received only medical treatment."

First aid for snakebite also has been a subject of considerable debate over the years, with various approaches — such as the use of ice — passing into and out of vogue.

Ledbetter said that since most snakebite victims reach a hospital within 30 minutes, "first aid measures are of relatively minor importance."

Texas could complete Interstate highway system within five years

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — With a rare word of praise for the federal government, state highway officials predict that Texas could finish building its interstate highways within about five years.

Surprisingly, in these inflationary times, contractors' bids for highway work have dropped in recent months.

State officials attribute the lower bids to several factors, including favorable weather, stable fuel and asphalt costs and competition from states where highway funds have dried up.

"Competition is a very definite thing," said construction engineer T.E. Ziller of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. "An increasing number of out-of-state contractors are bidding, and local people are aware of that."

This development comes at a good time because Texans are buying less gasoline, which means less money in gas taxes, a major source of revenue for highway construction.

Gas purchases dropped by 500 million gallons from 1979 to 1980, according to State Comptroller Bob Bullock, even though vehicle registrations rose by 1.9 million during that same period.

Federal Highway Administrator Ray Barnhart, a former Texas highway commissioner, also has said Texas could lose $40 million in federal highway funds because of its failure to enact truck weight laws. In addition, the Reagan administration has proposed phasing out over $75 million a year in federal money for secondary highways and city streets.

The Reagan administration believes that if a state wants a good secondary or inner city road program, it should pay for it out of its own pocket," said the highway department's program director, Richard Vander Straten.

Barnhart has suggested that states raise their gasoline tax 2 cents a gallon to make up the loss of federal money.

In Texas, which has had a 5-cent-a-gallon gas tax since 1955, a 2-cent increase would raise some $200 million a year.

The interstate program began in 1956, and Vander Straten said, "I think Congress wants the entire system completed as soon as possible, and really they've provided a fair funding mechanism to help the states accomplish this."

Only three states — Delaware, Nebraska and North Dakota — have completed their interstate systems — but Texas is close even though it has 3,215 miles to build, the most of any state.

The federal government provides 90 percent of the money for interstate construction. States pay remaining construction costs and maintain the highways after they are built.

As of June 30, Texas had completed approximately 3,143 miles of interstate highways, which is 97.7 percent of its total interstate mileage.

Interstate construction sped up in recent years as a result of a 1978 federal law which, in effect, allows states to borrow on future federal allocations.

"The law authorizes the secretary of transportation to allow those states that have the matching money and plans ready to go to not only obligate this year's apportionment, but next year's and the next year's. It's an advance on what's coming to you eventually," Vander Straten said in an interview.

A 1979 state law that guarantees the highway department enough money to keep up with inflation further strengthens Texas' position. The law funnels general tax money to highways, based on an index that measures changes in the cost of construction, maintenance and general overhead.

Gaps in Texas' interstate system include:

— Interstate 20 between the Parker County line and the Fort Worth city limits and from Dallas to Terrell. "We hope to let a contract for part of that this fiscal year," said R.S. Williamson Jr., engineer of design operations for the highway department.
