Tornado Kills Four, Damage Heavy

Section Declared Disaster Area

AMARILLO -P- A skipping, whipsawing tornado chewed up a four-square mile area in Southern Amarillo last night, killing four people. About 83 were injured. It was the first destructive tornado in the 62-year-old history of this Panhandle capital of 102,000 people.

Capt. Polk Ivy of the Texas Highway Patrol, state liaison officer in the disaster area, said local officials predict damage will total "something over one million dollars." The Reconstruction Finance Corporation declared the

Mrs. Ellison said that too many people are inclined to open with forcing two-bid when they have a strong hand. While a forcing two-bid should only be made when you have an absolute game in your own hand, a bid of two no trump shows an exceptionally strong hand, but not necessarily one that has game in itself. Of course, that was all the information West needed to jump to six no trump, in today's hand. There are several lines of play. You might try to set up the spade suit and then squeeze either East or West. This line of play will work because on the fifth spade East will have to discard a club or a diamond. Mrs. Ellison, however, tried for the simple diamond finesse. She cashed the ace of clubs. Went over to the queen of clubs and fails to record the checks she led the jack of diamonds. East writes.

with modern ideas, this house is an interesting example of how classic lines can be retained in a compact small home designed for maximum livability. Bedrooms are arranged for utmost quiet and privacy. Exterior beauty is enhanced by a well-proportioned chimney, red cedar roof, and the use of gray clapboard siding combined with stone. All trim is painted white. Walls and roof are insulated full-thick with mineral wool to insure both summer and winter comfort. Heat is supplied by a warm-air system with aluminum ducts. Selected by William J. Hennessey for a book of "America's Best Small Houses," this Illinois home was erected at a cost of $15,000. An attractive feature is the huge floor-to-ceiling bay window in the livingdining-room. The interior was carefully planned for free traffic circulation without jams. The house is connected to the garage by a dining porch or breezeway, screened in summer and glazed in winter. This creates a pleasing rambling effect and provides additional living space. Also notable is the harmonious design of the garage door. This helps to disguise the garage and unify the two

Look for masonry cracks and crumbling mortar, especially where porches or steps join the foundation. Get under the house and examine the wooden sills carefully for indication of rot and termites. Since a sill that appears sound may be eaten away at its center, push a knife blade into the beams at frequent intervals to test its soundness. If the blade slips in easily, the sill should be replaced.

Examine rafters, beams and underside of sheathing or shin-gles for warp, rot and looseness. Push a small wire up through the shingles to mark inside water stains so leak can be repaired. But I want a telephone a telephone not a cable Lelephones and telephone cables go together. You talk into the telephone—but it's the cable that carries your voice.

If you are waiting for a telephone you may wonder why we don't connect it to a telephone cable already near your home.

The answer usually is: That cable is carrying a full load right now.

It would be handy if we could hang out an "SRO" sign like a theater—"Standing Room Only"—and connect a lot of extra telephones to these full-up cables.

But cables aren't like that. When they're working 100 per cent—when every wire in them is already connected—there just isn't any more room, standing room or anything else.

So . . . to bring service to you and to others waiting, we must place more cables. That gives us extra wires. Then we can connect new telephones.

That's what we're doing, getting more cables in place, and faster than ever before. A million miles of cable wire this year alone. All so that we can get telephones to those waiting just as soon as we can, and to make all service better than before.
