Sadat laid to rest amid world homage, gunfire

Tense moments mark march of presidents

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Surrounded by armed soldiers and security agents who had some anxious moments, three former American presidents marched in the funeral procession Saturday for Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, passing within a few feet of the spot where Sadat was slain Tuesday.

While there were no major incidents, there were moments when former Presidents Gerald R. Ford, Jimmy Carter and Richard M. Nixon were cut off from the main group of marchers by about 50 Egyptian soldiers who suddenly rushed into the route of the procession.

Some of the soldiers, with fingers on the triggers, had their automatic rifles pointed directly at the former presidents, who were about 20 feet away.

Nixon, Ford and Carter stopped short, behind a shield of their own U.S. security guards.

However, the group continued walking when it turned out that the Egyptian soldiers were only forming a security cordon around the main body of the funeral procession, which had already passed.

Included in the group with the three Americans were Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel, former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France and former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

The troops apparently were nervous because a crowd of Egyptians had approached from a side street and moved closer than the guards wanted.

Because of security considerations, officials only allowed invited guests to the funeral. And security was the reason President Reagan did not attend.

Earlier, the motorcade carrying the former presidents and the rest of the U.S. delegation passed within 20 yards of several hundred white-uniformed police who were forcibly moving back a large crowd of stick-waving Egyptians.

It appeared blows were being struck by both sides, but it wasn't known whether anybody was injured. The crowd did not break through police lines.

The group that included Nixon, Ford and Carter marched about 50 yards behind the main body of the funeral procession.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who headed the U.S. delegation, marched near the head of the procession just behind the horse drawn caisson carrying the flag-draped coffin.

Immediately following the hour-long ceremony, the three presidents went directly to Cairo airport for the return flight to Washington, spending less than 24 hours in Egypt.

Haig planned to remain until Sunday for meetings with Hosni Mubarak, Egypt's president-designate, and with leaders of other delegations to the funeral, including Begin and officials of Oman, Somalia and Sudan. He conferred briefly Saturday with British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt buried its fallen leader Anwar Sadat on Saturday to the homage of world leaders, the comforting words of the Moslem holy book and the sorrowful fury of thousands of ordinary Egyptians kept from bidding a final farewell.

Gunfire briefly clattered during the ceremony as police had to drive back a surging crowd trying to reach the burial site.

The assassinated president was laid to rest at Egypt's tomb of the unknown soldier, on the desert outskirts of Cairo, beneath a black monolith memorializing him as a "hero of war and peace."

But his Arab enemies, who saw treachery in Sadat's separate peace with Israel, rejoiced. "The traitor is buried forever!" proclaimed Syrian state radio.

Three former U.S. presidents and dozens of other world statesmen paid final tribute to Sadat and then flew home, leaving behind an Egypt stunned by its loss, anxious over the future and seething with unrest among Moslem fundamentalists, religious extremists blamed for Sadat's assassination.

Security was so tight that the Egyptian public was barred from the funeral ceremony, which took place under the midday sun on the same military parade ground, in suburban Nasr, or Victory City, where the president was fatally wounded in a blaze of gunfire last Tuesday.

After four days of relative restraint, public mourning welled over.

Crowds rushed from boulevard to boulevard in search of a way around the police cordons and to the parade grounds.

"Sadat! Sadat! You will live again!" they shouted. "As long as the peace persists your spirit will remain alive within us."

While the dignitaries were paying respects to the widow, Jihan Sadat, one crowd apparently tried to crash through a police line onto the grounds, and the officers fired into the air to repel them. No injuries were reported.

The three ex-presidents — Richard M. Nixon, Gerald R. Ford and Jimmy Carter — got a first-hand look at the violent grief when their motorcade passed within 20 yards of a stick-waving throng of Egyptians being pushed back by police.

Although the three former chief executives left Cairo immediately after the ceremony, the head of the U.S. delegation, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., stayed behind.

He was to meet with Sadat's handpicked successor, Vice President Hosni Mubarak, and with other delegates to the funeral, including Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

The 62-year-old Sadat, the Nile Valley villager's son who rose to become his nation's supreme leader for 11 years, was borne to his grave in a solemn military procession along the parade ground's October Sixth Avenue, named for Oct. 6, 1973, Egyptian offensive that opened the last Arab-Israeli War. That victory was Sadat's greatest military moment. It proved to be the date of his death as well.

The ceremonies began with a prayer service over the casket in a mosque at the Maadi military hospital, where the body had lain since the assassination. The slain president's son, Gamal, 25, and other male family members took part in the private service.

The casket was then flown nine miles by helicopter to a stadium at the Nasr parade grounds and, draped in the red-white-and-black Egyptian flag, was loaded onto a caisson drawn by six black stallions.

Nine units of blue-bereted presidential guardsmen, paratroopers and other soldiers marched slowly in the lead, many carrying a green thicket of memorial wreaths, as the procession began on schedule at 11:15 a.m. A military band played the national anthem and somber martial music.

The Egyptian and foreign mourners trailed behind. The dark-suited Mubarak and Gamal Sadat, holding hands, were in the first rank. Haig was near the front, and Nixon, Ford, Carter and former U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger were in the mass of mourners behind, rubbing shoulders with Begin and former French President President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

U.S. television viewers watching live coverage of the event saw little of the American and other foreign luminaries, however. Egyptian television, which provided all camera coverage for the American networks, concentrated instead on the Egyptian leadership and Sadat's family.

Mrs. Sadat and her three daughters did not walk in the procession but were seated in the reviewing stand, the place where Sadat was sitting last Tuesday when he was slain.

After walking the half-mile to the reviewing stand in 95-degree heat, the dignitaries trooped into the reviewing stand and paid their condolences to the widow and Mubarak.

From there the non-Egyptian, non-Moslem delegations entered their waiting limousines and rode off, except for the Israeli group. Begin, unwilling to violate the Jewish sabbath by riding in a vehicle, walked to an undisclosed location, just as he had arrived at the parade ground on foot.

Thirteen pallbearers, including Gamal Sadat, carried the casket up a red-carpeted stairway to the gravesite, beneath the soaring pyramid-like monument to the unknown soldier.

Motion filed to change hearing before Texas Railroad Commission

BY DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

The Austin oil and gas attorney for a group of Pampa independent oil producers filed a motion with the Texas Railroad Commission Friday to change the Oct. 27 hearing on a proposal regulating oil well drilling in the West Panhandle Field to a pre-hearing conference.

Austin lawyer Ivan Hafley said Friday he had filed the motion to change the hearing to a pre-hearing conference and then to continue the hearing "indefinitely" until the independents are able to prepare a case to present to the state oil and gas regulatory body.

Phillips Petroleum officials say they have asked the Texas Railroad Commission for a literal definition of "crude petroleum oil, oil well and gas - oil ratio" and have asked the commission to enforce what they say are standing rules in reporting of "natural gas" liquids.

"I have heard the (Railroad) commission is getting quite a bit of communication on this matter," Hafley said. "The people at the commission said they are getting a lot of correspondence on it."

Hafley attributed the "tremendous scope and the enormous economic effect" the ruling can have on this area for the unusual amount of interest by the public.

"It has really caught the attention of the people," he commented.

The Austin attorney said he did not expect a ruling on his motion for several days.

"This is going to be one of the most complex hearings heard by the Railroad Commission in a long time," Hafley predicted. "It's going to be a long-drawn-out process." He added he thinks most of the top oil and gas law firms in Austin will be involved in the case.

Hafley said almost a billion barrels of oil and 57 million mcf (thousand cubic feet) of gas are involved in the case, in addition to 8,000 barrels of liquid.

The liquid separated from natural gas in the wells is going at about $35 per barrel at the well head, he said. Once the state severance tax, the federal windfall profit tax and other taxes are taken from the gross price, landowners and operators are still getting from $20 to $25 per barrel, he added.

"We're talking about enormous sums of money," Hafley said.

A recent news release from Phillips Petroleum says "unnecessary wells being drilled in the Panhandle Gas Field may cause premature depletion of the field."

Arlie Burchfield of Diamond Shamrock Corporation told members of the Panhandle Regional Gas Processors Association Thursday that engineers predict the field's depletion of natural gas at the 2,000 to 3,000 foot level by the year 2005.

Several officials at the meeting Thursday said if natural gas prices continue to escalate as they have, wells will be drilled at deeper levels — 18,000 to 20,000 feet.

Paul W. Tucker, vice president of Phillips Gas and Gas Liquids, said some producers are reporting natural gas liquids production as crude oil production, which permits them to drill more wells in a given area.

"We have asked the Railroad Commission of Texas to require reporting of production in accordance with the literal definitions of such basic terms as 'crude petroleum oil, oil well and gas - oil ratio' that are already in Texas law and in the commission's statewide rules," Tucker said in the news release.

Tucker added the action requested by Phillips would have "no impact" on those who are producing crude oil and reporting it as natural gas liquids.

Commenting on Phillips' request for a definition of the oil and gas terms, Hafley said, "There is no literal definition. I admit their (the Railroad Commission's) definitions are less than exact. It's like asking for a 'literal' interpretation of the Bible."

Hitchhiker killed when struck by truck in fog

McLEAN — A Fort Wayne, Ind. hitchhiker was struck and killed by a semi-tractor trailer rig during heavy fog early Saturday morning about one mile from McLean city limits on Interstate 40, according to Gray County Deputy Sheriff Jimmy Shelton.

The deputy identified the victim as De Von Clem, 49, of Fort Wayne, Ind. Clem was struck and killed by the truck about 3:05 a.m. Saturday, Shelton said.

The deputy reported that the truck driver, George Burger, of Moore, Okla. was very shook up but uninjured.

Burger, a driver for Trans Con, was headed east on I-40 in a dense fog during the early morning hours when a hitchhiker reportedly jumped in front of his truck. There apparently was not enough time to stop, Shelton said.

"We overheard on the CB other truck drivers talking about this guy jumping out in front of them. They were able to miss him," Shelton said.

"It was really a mess. We had a hard time identifying him because he was so mutilated. We had to block traffic in that heavy fog to keep the other trucks from running over what was left of him."

"His wallet was about the only thing that wasn't torn up. We found most of his skull laying right in the middle of the highway," Shelton added.

Lamb Funeral Home in McLean reportedly has sent the body back to his family in Fort Wayne, Ind. for burial.

everywhere. There was a girl sitting down. She had a hole in her leg. Another girl had a metal bar straight through her foot."

Police identified the dead woman as 61-year-old Nora Field, Hazel Cole, an expectant mother who had been talking to Mrs. Field when the explosion went off, said she "took the full force of it."

The Irish Republican Publicity Bureau in Dublin said the attack — which occurred three-quarters of a mile from Buckingham Palace — was aimed at the soldiers because of the "state of war" existing between the British government and the "oppressed Irish people."

It was the Irish Republican Army's first major attack on a British target since the collapse of a seven-month hunger strike at Northern Ireland's Maze prison a week ago, and police said it could be the start of a new IRA campaign of violence in the British capital. The IRA claimed responsibility for car bombings in three Northern Ireland cities Friday, none of which resulted in injuries.

Richard McAuley, spokesman in Belfast for the IRA political wing Sinn Fein, denied any specific link of the explosion to the hunger strike's end. Asked if the bombing signaled a change in IRA tactics, he said, "If you go back through Irish and British history you will see that on almost every occasion, Irish nationalists have brought the fight back to Britain."

Offices close Monday for Columbus Day

Various local offices will be closed due to the Columbus Day Holiday, on Monday.

Among those closing will be the Pampa Public Schools, federal offices, banking institutions and savings and loans and all state offices.

The post office will be closed and no mail will be delivered.

The Gray County Courthouse offices and the City of Pampa offices will remain open on Monday. The Pampa News will publish on regular schedule.

IRA blast kills 23 Irish guardsmen

LONDON (AP) — IRA guerrillas set off a booby-trapped laundry van near an army barracks less than a mile from Buckingham Palace today, and the blast fired nails into a passing bus carrying 23 Irish Guardsmen. Authorities said a woman passer-by was killed and 22 guardsmen and five other people were wounded.

The Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility in phone calls to newspapers in Dublin and Belfast. The Irish Republican Publicity Bureau in Dublin confirmed the IRA was responsible and said the attack was "aimed at a party of British soldiers."

A spokesman for Westminster Hospital said eight Irish Guardsmen were undergoing major surgery. One was on the critical list with a fractured skull and a second was likely to lose an eye, he said.

Police said a woman passer-by was killed and that 22 guards and 17 other people, including two children on the bus, were wounded in the blizzard of nuts, bolts, flying metal and glass that turned Ebury Bridge Road outside Chelsea Army Barracks into a blood-spattered battleground.

A spokesman for Westminster Hospital said eight of the guards were undergoing major surgery and one was on the critical list with a fractured skull and another was likely to lose an eye.

"It was just madness," said witness Debbie Jones. "There was blood

Crowd of 250,000 protests arms race in West Germany

BONN, West Germany (AP) — More than 250,000 people gathered Saturday in the biggest anti-war rally in recent memory and gave thunderous applause to speakers urging Europe to free itself of nuclear weapons and prevent Germany from becoming "a shooting gallery of the superpowers."

The crowd, which came to the West German capital by chartered train, buses and river steamers, included soldiers in uniform, scores of parliamentary deputies and leading figures from the nation's cultural and religious life.

Guests at the rally included Coretta Scott King, widow of slain U.S. civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and singer Harry Belafonte. Mrs. King told the crowd "millions of Americans stand by your side" and the two Americans joined in singing the civil rights hymn "We Shall Overcome" at the close of the nearly 12-hour rally.

Absent from the rally was Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, who on Friday denounced the demonstration as a "declaration of war" against the defense policies of his government, including plans to station U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles here.

A Sept. 13 peace rally in West Berlin, during the visit of U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., ended in clashes between police and demonstrators.

The disorders proved a deep embarrassment to the Schmidt government, and observers said Saturday's rally could likely further strain relations between Bonn and Washington. Speakers told the crowd, massed under gray, rainy skies in a garden of the stately Friedrich Wilhelm University, that Western defense policies were threatening the true interests of Europe.

"The peace movement shows that the old nations of Europe are more than chess figures on the board of the world powers," said Erhard Eppler, a former cabinet minister and member of the presidium of Schmidt's Social Democratic Party. Eppler, whose remarks received a thunderous ovation, likened the courage of the demonstrators to that of the Poles in their struggle against Soviet domination.

"Here in this country, we celebrate the courage of the Poles who do not want to be directed how they should live," he said.

"Is it so bad if we do not want to allow ourselves to be told how we have to die? The Europeanization of Europe takes place not only on the Vistula (a river in Poland) but also on the Rhine."

Although the rally was billed as a protest against the arms race in both East and West, the chief target appeared to be the December 1979 decision by NATO to deploy U.S.-made cruise and Pershing II nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

The decision, supported by Schmidt but opposed by others in his party, was aimed at countering Soviet SS-20 missiles and Backfire bombers.

Many in the peace movement fear that the United States wants to deploy the missiles in Europe in hopes of sparing its own territory from a Soviet nuclear counterattack.

Sadat death pumps new energy into anti-withdrawal movement

SADOT, Occupied Sinai (AP) — The death of President Anwar Sadat of Egypt has pumped new energy into the struggle of Israeli settlers in the Sinai desert to block the final stage of Israel's withdrawal from the territory.

Leaders of the anti-withdrawal movement said after a strategy meeting Friday that they would bring new settlers into the northeastern corner of Sinai and step up their lobbying among government and opposition politicians to block the final withdrawal.

The final third of the Sinai peninsula is to be transferred to Egypt next April in accordance with the Camp David peace treaty.

About 3,000 Israelis live in a town and a dozen settlements built in northeastern Sinai since Israel captured the area in the 1967 Mideast War. The majority are willing to accept financial compensation and move out peacefully. But a hard-core minority has vowed to stay and campaign against the withdrawal.

"We assume that events in Egypt have opened a lot of eyes both in the government and opposition and are causing second thoughts about finishing the withdrawal," the settlers said in their statement.

However, Egyptian President-designate Hosni Mubarak has vowed to carry out Sadat's policies. He met with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin for about 40 minutes Saturday before Sadat's funeral. Begin said upon arrival Friday in Cairo that "the people of Israel, together with the government, received with great satisfaction (the news) that all the commitments taken by President Sadat will be undertaken" by Mubarak's government.

The Sinai settlers, joined by representatives from settlements in the occupied West Bank and the Golan Heights, drank a toast to what they considered a turning-point in their struggle.

The telephone rang constantly in the homes of Yossi Maas and Vito Weizman, leaders of the anti-withdrawal movement in this farm village of 67 families.

Dallas survives Texas-OU rally, but did fans? Police arrest 160

DALLAS (AP) — When the state's largest pep rally finally ended early Saturday, 160 rowdy Texas and Oklahoma fans were in jail and the aluminum can collectors were about to become rich.

The debris-strewn streets of downtown Dallas fell silent shortly after the street-sweeping trucks rolled at 12:10 a.m. with shoulder-high streams of icy water, scattering the several hundred drunken revelers left of the estimated 20,000 who participated in the annual rally.

Police said the arrests mostly were for public intoxication and disorderly conduct, although some were taken into custody for carrying weapons, drug possession and urinating in public.

The number of arrests continued to decline, however, from the record of 800 in 1968. Last year, 177 people were arrested.

The prices of T-shirts and other souvenirs plummeted Saturday as vendors moved their wares to the state fairgrounds, site of the football game that precipitated the Friday night madness.

Doug Wickwire said the price of his orange and red T-shirts — emblazoned with "I survived Texas-OU weekend — but did Dallas?" — would fall from $10 to $2 Saturday.

"Tonight they're special; tomorrow they're not so special," he said.

One large reveler passed out spread-eagled on Commerce Street and had to be carried away by five policemen. "He's a Sooner," one officer said of the man's lack of endurance.

Bobby Johnson, 24, a beer serviceman, stood outside Sol's Turf Bar and watched as a police wrecker towed away a Rolls-Royce with Texas license plates. Officers had taken the two passengers, both middle-aged men wearing suits, into custody for intoxication.

"First time I've ever seen a Rolls towed," Johnson commented.

But the din of car horns tooting "Boomer Sooner" and "The Eyes of Texas" finally died and the 450 police officers who worked overtime to keep the crowd under control went home to nurse their headaches.

But one enterprising soul still was at work — turning trash into cash. The man, who would identify himself only as "Tex," stuffed hundreds of aluminum beer cans into massive trash bags.

"I got two truckloads last year and made me some money," he said.

Police probe execution slayings

HOUSTON (AP) — Police have ruled out robbery and burglary as motives and speculate a professional killer may be responsible for the execution-style slayings of a nuclear energy company executive, his wife and elderly father.

The trio had been dead for at least three days before Houston police detectives found their bodies about 3 p.m. Friday, according to the Harris County medical examiners office.

The victims were identified as Owen R. Gray, 52, his 30-year-old wife Sally, and his father, 77-year-old Roley E. Gray.

Homicide investigators said they found no weapon and have no suspects.

But Detective Richard Holland speculated the slayings may have been a "professional job."

Detective Lt. Bill Edison said they have ruled out robbery and burglary as motives because the home was not ransacked, valuables were not missing and there was no sign of forced entry.

Edison also said the victims apparently were forced to lie face-down on the floor and then were shot.

No autopsies had been scheduled Saturday, police said.

The younger Gray's business associates called police Friday after he failed to contact the office all week, detectives said.

Gray, who was president of the New Jersey-based Nuclear Power Systems, Inc., a diversified energy firm, co-founded the company 12 years ago, said associate Don Wallace.

Detectives said they found the bodies lying side-by-side, face down in the den of the fashionable house. The victims were fully clothed and had been shot in the back several times. Gray and his wife had rented the house for six days in the back several times.

Super Chicken heads for Tennessee

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Super Chicken III sailed over Arkansas and headed for Tennessee on Saturday as two Phoenix, Ariz., pilots tried to complete the first non-stop flight across the United States by helium balloon.

"It looks like a sea of foam," co-pilot Fred Gorrell radioed to the ground shortly after 3 p.m. EDT as he neared Fort Smith, Ark., travelling well above cloud cover, at an altitude of 25,500 feet.

The 10-story balloon was travelling at 60 mph as it raced eastward to Fort Smith from 40 miles away.

"We are excited about the flight," said pilot John Shoecraft, who laid an egg in his two prior attempts, known as Superchicken I and II. "We are very positive about making it this time."

Things were going so well that both men decided to rest for several hours as their balloon headed towards Blytheville, Ark., and Chattanooga, Tenn., spokeswoman Cindy Gattas said from her post at the their flight operations center in this Phoenix suburb.

"It looks real, real good," she said. "We are predicting a landing in the Carolinas, Sunday night."

The balloonists lunched on tea, sweet rolls and fruit on the second day of their flight, which took them from Costa Mesa, Calif., across Arizona, New Mexico, Texas and Oklahoma on the way to Arkansas.

They were 35 miles north-northeast of Oklahoma City, Okla., at 12:42 a.m. MDT, after a relatively easy time crossing the continental divide Friday night.

The balloon lifted off shortly after midnight Friday, trying to duplicate within U.S. airspace what another team accomplished in a 1980 flight from the West Coast to eastern Canada.

The first cross-country attempt by Super Chicken ended in Columbus, Ohio, during thunderstorms on Sept. 22, 1980. The second flight ended on Dec. 5, 1980, after only 30 hours aloft when turbulence forced the balloon down in Liberal, Kan.

Ron Ripps, a Phoenix businessman, flew with Shoecraft on the first two attempts, while Gorrell, a former champion balloonist stayed behind.

The craft's name derives from its egg-shaped gondola. The nine-foot diameter gondola has eight windows and is attached to a 250,000-cubic-foot volume balloon made of polyethylene similar to the material of which ordinary garbage bags are made.

Tape recording leads to murder arrest

HOUSTON (AP) — A tape recording of an anonymous confession made Tuesday has led to the arrest of an 18-year-old man in connection with the slaying of a Houston attorney's wife the same morning.

Jorge Garcia was charged Friday morning in connection with the slaying of Donna Arthur, 38, whose body was found tied to a bed by her 14-year-old son inside the family's elegant north Harris County home.

Garcia allegedly threatened revenge against Mrs. Arthur's husband, attorney Harry C. Arthur, after being fired as an office errand boy in August. He was arrested shortly before dawn at his home, deputies said.

Mrs. Arthur, whose body was found fully clothed, was shot three times with a .38-caliber gun, deputies said.

Sheriff's Lt. Grace Ozmer said the most important evidence was a one-minute tape recording that offered detectives a wide range of clues. The call came in almost 30 minutes before the homicide was reported to the sheriff's department.

Lt. Ozmer said the caller offered details of the crime that only the assailant would know. "We knew right away he wasn't a quack," she said. "The voice in the tape recording had a heavy Spanish accent and appeared to be that of a young man."

Lt. Ozmer, whose detectives spent three days questioning relatives and neighbors.

But the recording did have detectives chasing a false lead for a while. Deputies quoted the caller as saying, "I killed her because she wouldn't divorce her husband." Lt. Ozmer said detectives now know that wasn't the case.

The arrest came after detectives asked Arthur to listen to the tape recording again Thursday afternoon. He had heard it Tuesday night, but was unable to recognize the voice because of considerable static, which later was removed by a special tape recorder.

Deductions, time of purchase hold key to cutting taxes now

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Federal income tax returns for 1981 aren't due for six months, but you can cut the amount you owe or increase the size of your refund by doing some planning right now.

The key to saving lies in deductions, and the value of those deductions is changing due to the tax cut passed by Congress.

You have to look at some numbers to understand what's happening. It seems complicated, but it's worth the effort.

Most provisions of the new law do not affect 1981 taxes, but there is a major exception: Basic tax rates dropped by 5 percent on Oct. 1. When the impact of that cut is spread over the entire year, it means a reduction of 1 1/2 percent in your tax bill for 1981.

Tax rates will be cut by an additional 10 percent on July 1, 1982 and again on July 1, 1983. Overall, tax rates will be reduced by about 23 percent. Someone who is now in the 35 percent bracket, for example, will drop to the 27 percent bracket in 1983, assuming that his or her income does not change.

Each reduction in the tax rates means a reduction in the worth of itemized deductions. If you're in a 35 percent tax bracket, each $100 in deductions cuts $35 from your tax bill. If you're taxed at 27 percent, each $100 in deductions saves you only $27.

Since 1981 tax deductions are more valuable, it makes sense to try to get more of them. Time-discretionary spending so it takes place before Dec. 31, 1981 and you can claim the deduction on the return due next April.

It may be easier than you think to shift spending. Look at the potential deductions. Take charitable contributions, for example. Suppose you plan to give $200 to a particular charity. If you make the donation before Dec. 31, you'll be able to deduct it on your 1981 return. Otherwise, you will have to count it on your 1982 return.

Can you make your January mortgage payment in advance, without penalty? You can deduct the interest portion from 1981 income. Can you schedule medical treatments for the last few months of 1981 instead of the first few of 1982? Do you plan a major purchase, like an automobile? If you buy it before the end of this year, you can deduct the sales tax next April.

The change in the value of deductions also means you should give some extra thought to whether or not you want to itemize.

The standard deduction — officially called the zero bracket amount — is $2,300 for single people and $3,400 for married couples filing a joint return. The new law does not change that amount until 1985 when the zero bracket amount will be automatically adjusted upward to reflect inflation. The law does, however, provide a break for people who don't itemize. Starting next year, you will be able to deduct a portion of charitable contributions even if you do not itemize.

To find out whether to itemize, add up your estimated deductions and see if they total more than the standard amount. You may be able to shift spending so you can itemize for 1981 —

Suit claims lead pollution conspiracy

DALLAS (AP) — Plaintiffs in a class-action suit allege the city of Dallas and officials at three lead smelters allowed toxic lead to build up in the soils of low income, predominantly minority neighborhoods near the plants.

Nine west Dallas residents contend in their federal lawsuit against the city, Dixie Metals Co., RSP Corp., and NL Industries of New York that officials from the city and the companies conspired to create a public health hazard by allowing neighborhoods near the plants to become polluted with lead.

Attorneys for the city and the smelters declined to comment until they have had a chance to review the allegations in the suit.

The suit seeks class action status for blacks and Hispanics who live within five miles of the three smelters and have either blood lead levels exceeding 30 parts per million or soil lead levels at their homes exceeding 300 ppm.

James Barber, the attorney for the plaintiffs, said his clients will show in the suit that "clearly the city has joined in a conspiracy — either directly or indirectly — with the lead plants to cover up or not to enforce the laws simply because we are dealing with people in a minority area."

"Nobody is going to admit they are motivated by race, but you can bet that if this (lead contamination) occurred in north Dallas or northeast Dallas, the situation would have been remedied a long time ago."

Police say theft ring operated in Texas

SALINA, Kan. (AP) — Six Salina men have been charged in connection with a burglary ring that operated in several Midwestern states and has been linked to the theft of about $250,000 worth of antiques, authorities said.

Assistant Police Chief Darrell Wilson said Salina appeared to be the home base for the operation, which has been under investigation by the FBI, the Kansas Bureau of Investigation and local law agencies.

The six men were believed to have been involved in five burglary cases during the last 1 1/2 years in Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Colorado and Texas. Authorities said the stolen items are worth about $250,000.

Two of the men were charged in Saline County District Court Friday. The four others were charged earlier in the week.

Dallas Morning News reported.

It's apparent that the inattention to this problem results from the economic and racial character of the neighborhood," said Barber.

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and City Health Department tests earlier this year of an area within two miles of the plants showed soil levels that are as much as 90 times higher than those medical researchers say could cause adverse health affects, including brain damage in children. The Wall Street or Broadway?

The current imbroglio over whether "Wall Street" supports, understands or undermines the Reagan economic program looks like a phony, manufactured issue. The way it has been handled reflects rather poorly on almost all the parties involved — politicians, investment community "spokesmen" who have been lured into making silly remarks, and most of the media.

The problem, insofar as there is a problem, is that a number of people in the investment community have been expressing skepticism about whether the package of tax rate reductions and slowdowns in the federal budget growth rate will really produce prosperity and a balanced budget by FY 1984. There's some reason for skepticism. Continuing high interest rates make it more expensive to borrow money, making bigger deficits than projected likely. Inflation seems to have abated slightly, but lower inflation also means slower growth in income and lower income tax revenues. Lower oil prices mean less government revenue from "windfall" profit taxes. Government is so deeply involved in so many areas of the economy that slight changes in one area can have unanticipated impacts in other areas of the budget and the economy. The phenomenon is just one of the many reasons that government does such a poor job of "managing" the economy.

The prominent Wall Street "analysts" who trotted out to beat Reagan on the head are on shaky ground themselves. For starters, the administration's economic program didn't get started until Oct. 1. Government policies generally have a delayed impact in the economy, though authorities disagree on just what the delay factor is. But it is certainly premature to declare the administration program a failure before it goes into effect, especially since the most dramatic tax cuts won't even go into effect until next July.

The tools on which various analysts are basing their guesswork (the term is carefully chosen and poignantly accurate) are profoundly flawed. The best forecasting tools available are econometric models, in which thousands of equations representing historical relationships and patterns combined with relatively current statistics are thrown into the computer to come up with something that claims to be a forecast. In the four quarters of 1980, the big three econometric firms were dramatically wrong in forecasting all four quarters.

In the first quarter, the average GNP growth rate forecast of the three most prestigious econometric firms was a negative 4.3 percent. In fact, GNP increased 3.1 percent. For the second quarter they predicted a 2.0 drop; the actual decline was 9.9 percent. By the third quarter they were forecasting 1.1 percent growth, but the reality was more than double at 2.4 percent. In the fourth quarter they were a little closer, predicting GNP growth of 2.7 percent. Actual growth was 4.0 percent.

The fundamental weakness of econometric forecasting lies in its reliance on statistics regarding past performances. An economy, at least a reasonably free one, is not a bunch of statistics and relationships. It is millions of individuals making decisions about their own opinions of their own best interests as they understand them. The key characteristic of a free economy is change, not equilibrium. Concepts like "gross national product" or "demand curve" may be useful in helping us to understand this extraordinarily complex set of processes, but they are really approximations, abstractions, perhaps even analogies. Used with caution, they can help us to understand reality but they aren't reality. If we start thinking they are, our view of reality will be distorted.

A similar sort of simpleminded, posturing misunderstanding afflicts certain politicians who are complaining about high interest rates and murmuring darkly about credit controls or "windfall profits" taxes on "excess" interest profits. People like Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker prattling on about financiers "voting the wrong way" with their money, or Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole complaining that "the financial community has a hearing problem" are straight out of fantasyland, or a home for the mentally defective.

The politicians talk as if they think interest rates are set by some sinister cabal of financiers, who do their dirty work on "Wall Street." But again, "Wall Street" is simply shorthand for the money and stock markets of this country. Even a term like "the market" is an abstract term by which we try to understand and discern patterns arising from the millions of individual decisions made by individual people who decide whether to save, to invest, to buy real estate, to buy food or to go to the races. Again, the abstract term can help us to understand reality, but if we start thinking it is reality, we're in trouble.

The fact that interest rates are still up around 20 percent while inflation has tailed off to about 9 percent puzzles economists. Perhaps it is, as Milton Friedman has suggested, "a bubble compounded out of uncertainty plus Wall Street's myopia and herd instinct." Or perhaps, if the market mechanism is working reasonably well, it is a reflection of the fact that we millions aren't sure if inflation is really going to stay in the single-digit range, and we aren't sure whether the Reagan program will actually work.

If that's the case, it's not especially remarkable. We have lived through ten years of rising inflation and rising inflationary expectations. Reagan's program hasn't been put into effect yet, and all the predictions really are guesswork. If we the people are saying "wait and see," we may not be so dumb after all.

Meanwhile the media, perhaps bored by a lack of news when Congress is out of town and the president is in Santa Barbara, and unconsciously equating huffing and puffing in Washington with news, is acting like a fight promoter. Endowed with practically no understanding of economics, but knowing that confrontations and denunciations make good copy, they've managed, along with posturing politicians and a few financial figures who don't mind putting their ignorance on display, to create the illusion of crisis. Last week's issue of Newsweek, for example, has a nine-page section on "Reagan's Confidence Gap" that leaves the reader, perhaps intentionally, more confused when he finishes it than when he started.

By ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Although elimination or modification of unjustifiable federal regulations has become a popular cause in recent years, one group of harassed citizens remains entangled in unwarranted government restrictions.

The hapless victims are the politicians who must run for federal office, especially the presidency, under a set of laws and regulations that range from absurd and outlandish to inappropriate and irrelevant.

A series of sensible reforms has been proposed, however, by the Citizen's Research Foundation, a highly regarded, non-partisan Los Angeles-based organization that has specialized in campaign-finance issues for more than two decades.

The recommendations come from a meeting that CRF convened late last year of approximately 30 finance officers who worked for virtually all of the presidential contenders in the 1976 and 1980 campaigns.

Those participating included the finance chairmen, finance directors or treasurers of campaigns organized on behalf of winners and losers; liberals and conservatives; Republicans,

Deregulate the politicians

Democrats and independents.

One proposal would increase (to an unspecified figure) the current limits on the amount an individual can give to a single presidential or congressional candidate per election ($1,000) and to all contenders for federal office during any year ($25,000).

Those numbers undoubtedly appear to be quite generous to most people — who donate little or nothing to support the politicians of their choice — but they're actually very modest in the context of contemporary campaigns.

In an era when races for House seats frequently cost $500,000 or more and campaigns for Senate seats in many states require expenditures of at least several million dollars, nobody is about to buy (or even rent) the soul of a politician for a mere $1,000.

Moreover, those limits were established in 1974 and have not been increased during the ensuing seven years to adjust for inflation.

All campaigns for federal office last year cost more than $500 million, divided about equally between the presidential race and contests for House and Senate seats — but political campaigning isn't necessarily becoming exorbitantly expensive.

CRF Director Herbert E. Alexander notes, for example, that this country's annual expenditures for chewing gum — now approaching $1.5 billion — far exceed the amount of money invested in campaigns, undoubtedly the most essential component of the democratic process.

Those participating in the CRF conference suggested maintaining the overall spending limits for presidential candidates during the primary election season but proposed important modifications in the method of establishing that ceiling.

The spending limitations are indexed to account for inflation, but the current method relies upon the Consumer Price Index, which is wholly inappropriate for measuring the specialized costs of political campaigning.

The costs of air fares and aircraft charters, for example, are major components of any presidential campaign budget — but not of the typical household budget measured by the CPI. Other items in that category include television advertising and direct mail costs.

The price of all those items has increased far more rapidly in recent years than has the CPI, but the present system is incapable of reflecting those inflationary pressures. A new index can — and should — be developed.

In addition, those assembled by the CRF proposed abandonment of the current system under which candidate spending ceilings are fixed for each of the state primaries.

Those limitations already are being consistently evaded. During the intense New Hampshire primary campaign, for instance, candidates and their staffs regularly are housed overnight in neighboring Massachusetts or Vermont so the lodging costs can be ascribed to states where there is less pressure on campaign budgets.

Those and other suggestions for reform have been forwarded to the White House, Congress and the Federal Election Commission, where they deserve to receive serious attention. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Today in history

Today is Sunday, Oct. 11, the 28th day of 1981. There are 81 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Oct. 11, 1779, Polish nobleman Casimir Pulaski was killed in the fighting for American independence at battle of Savannah, Ga.

Also on this date:
—In 1933, Latin American countries signed the Rio de Janeiro non-aggression pact.

—In 1979, Cuban President Fidel Castro paid his first visit to New York in 19 years.

Ten years ago: The Japanese government said it would be ready to double its purchases of American military equipment, in order to help reduce the U.S. balance of payments deficit with Japan.

Five years ago: Unconfirmed reports in Peking said Mao Tse-Tung's widow, Chiang Ching, and three other radical members of the Communist Party's ruling Politburo had been arrested on charges of plotting to overthrow the government.

One year ago: The crippled luxury liner Prinsendam rolled over and sank in the Gulf of Alaska, some 80 miles southwest of Sitka. The passengers and crew had been evacuated previously, after the ship caught fire.

Remember participatory democracy?

It was pretty big and promising to be bigger back there in the early '70s with the pressuring of both major parties to varying degrees to open up their proceedings in general and the presidential nominating process in particular. Some changes were made and have stuck, although a number could become unstuck again by the time the major parties complete their studies of the lessons from the 1980 campaign. But much of the steam has gone out of the drive for broader decision-making participation in politics.

It is if anything stronger than ever, however, in another arena.

Corporate operations. Outside interest groups are intensifying efforts to establish a presence in the boardroom. The Conference Board has concluded from a worldwide survey.

The most active are labor unions, cited by 71 percent of the surveyed firms. Other activist groups included business and industry associations, political parties and religious groups demanding "in the name of the larger public good" a say in every major aspect of company operation with the greatest emphasis on hiring policy, plant location, financial and investment policies, expansion and reduction of operations, corporate pay and social welfare practices. None of management's traditional concerns, in short, are any longer regarded as "sacrosanct or proprietary."

The New York - based economic research organization contacted 400 firms for the survey and found that while some continue to react defensively to the offensive by outside interests, many are developing specific strategies for dealing with the situation. These range from arrangements for exchanging views to counter-offensives to win the outsiders' support for the company position.

American firms, the board found, tended to opt for the former approach. Europeans and Japanese, the more likely to make greater efforts to win support, were also more inclined to view conflicts not only in the light of company interests but from the perspectives of the outside groups.

Maybe they think of them as customers.

CHEAPER BUCKS

Regular followers of this space already know that the federal government is changing the color in which its checks are printed. They're going to be partly in orange, to facilitate electronic processing.

Now comes word of another change to accommodate the changing times. The Bureau of the Mint wants to abandon printing of the backs of dollar bills from intaglio engraved plates in favor of the simpler and much cheaper offset process.

Intaglio makes counterfeiting much more difficult, but it has been decided that it's OK to make the change on the singles because they aren't worth the effort. Counterfeiters these days don't bother with anything under a twenty.

Inflation, of course.

The Nixon Library

This may come as a surprise to many people but I believe Duke University did the right thing when it decided to build a Richard Nixon Library on its campus.

The only stipulation I would make is that all the Nixon papers and ALL the tapes be deposited there. Since he is probably the most interesting President we've ever had, I would hate to think that future historians would be deprived of many of the more private aspects of the man, when he served our country so well.

We all know about the Nixon who ended the Vietnam war, opened up relations with the People's Republic of China, brought detente between the United States and the Soviet Union and battled for the First Amendment rights of all American citizens.

But I have a feeling that behind the public image, there was another Nixon that no one knows. Behind that winning smile and demeanor of confidence that all of us loved, could have been a man with doubts and fears.

As I conceive the library, it should be divided into two sections. The Presidential Nixon part of the building would contain all his state papers, his speeches, his discussions with world leaders, the gifts and honors that were bestowed on him from a grateful citizenry, and photos such as the one of him talking to anti-war protesters about football on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial.

This section would capture the spirit of a President who had to deal with the great problems of his country and the world. It would be inspiration for generations of Americans to come, and a tribute to the 37th President of the United States.

The second section of the library would be connected by a Watergate and chiseled over its entrance in marble would be the simple words, "I am Not a Crook."

I believe this section should be designed by the Walt Disney people. When you entered it, you would be greeted with an exact replica of the Oval Office. A wax figure of President Nixon would be seated behind the President's desk wired for sound.

In chairs, and standing around the office, would be wax figures of Haldeman, Colson, Ehrlichman, Dean and John Mitchell constructed so they, too, would be able to speak.

There would be an amphitheater, where people could sit comfortably and listen to all the tapes as the inner circle discussed the private matters that took up as much of President Nixon's time as the public ones.

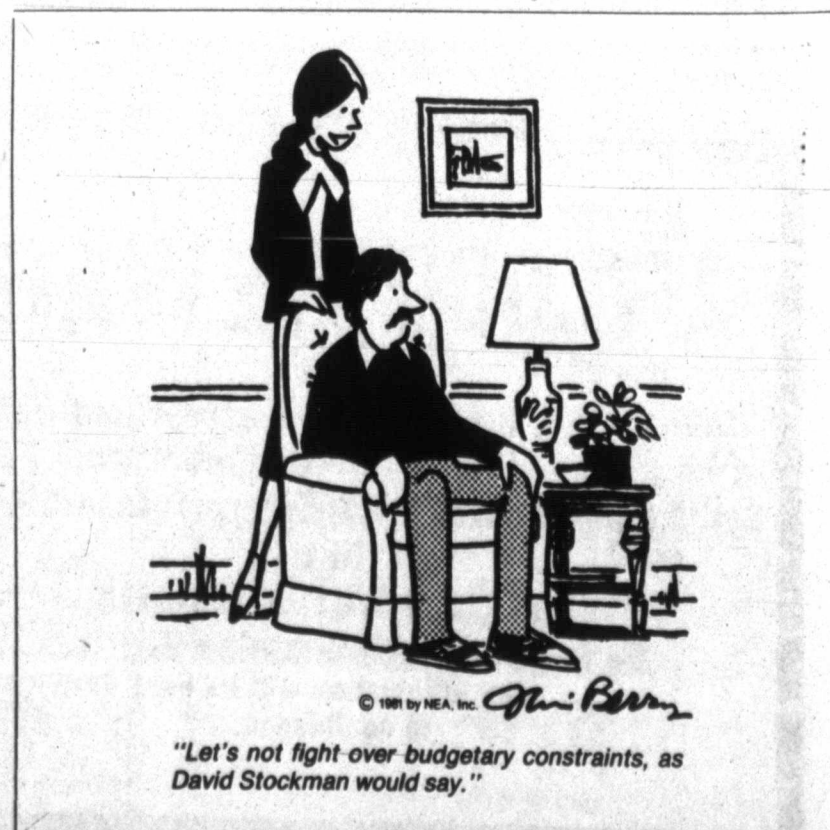

When the tapes indicated only one or two members of the President's staff were in the office, stagehands could remove the others.

To give people an opportunity to buy popcorn and soft drinks, there would be an 18 1/2-minute intermission during the show.

For the first time, a Presidential Library would provide American citizens with the human side of a man who held the highest office in the land. His spirit and those around him would come alive for tourists, who could actually hear their voices discussing the tribulations and heartaches of an administration beleaguered by enemies from every walk of life.

Duke University has an opportunity to do the real Richard Nixon justice, and I hope they don't blow it by just showing him being pelted with tomatoes in Venezuela.

Pampa firefighters explain duties of lower ranks

BY DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

Many people do not know that firefighting duties are divided into three ranks — those of firefighter, driver (or engineer) and captain.

The job of being a fireman — the person who battles the fire with axe, pick and water — is the most commonly known.

Two Pampa Fire Department veterans, Capt. Kenneth Kirby and Driver B. T. Brown, explain the lesser known ranks of a firefighter, the captain and the driver.

Capt. Kenneth Kirby of the Central Fire Station began as a Pampa firefighter 24 years ago, working his way up through the years to the captain's position.

"I'm responsible for the 'A' shift at Central and all fires in my district until I am relieved by the chief or the assistant chief," Kirby says of his job.

The Pampa Fire Department firefighters are split into three 24-hour shifts — A, B and C — per each of the three fire stations — south, central and north.

Capt. Kirby says he supervises five men and two drivers on his shift, in addition to being responsible for their conduct on the job and at the scene of the fire.

Much of a fireman's work between fires is boring and routine — kitchen duty, cleaning the fire station, maintenance on equipment and the fire truck — Kirby says.

"I'd say 50 percent of our time is spent on maintenance and preventative maintenance," he says.

That all changes when the fire phone rings.

"Size up and attack a fire according to my experience," the captain comments, "in not always right, but it's time to make a decision now and not tomorrow."

Kirby explains that there are no two fires alike. "Even two trash fires," he says.

"Experience is the best teacher," he adds.

Firefighters spend much of their 24-hour shifts working on inservice training, supervised by the captain.

Capt. Kirby says the firemen have another type of training when they all sit down with a cup of coffee and talk. They might be called "bull sessions," he says, but Kirby believes the "simulated firefighting" talks actually give less experienced firefighters a chance to learn from the others' experiences and mistakes.

When the firefighters go through a long period without a fire, tension begins to build, Kirby says. It is part of his job to see that when this happens, the men continue to get along until the next call comes and the tension is broken.

"There's no way of knowing when a fire is going to be," he says, adding that since June this year, the department has responded to about 120 incidents. "Last year, though, we had over 100 incidents in a 24-hour period. So, it's really hard to say."

B. T. Brown, an 18-year veteran with the Pampa Fire Department, is a driver at the South Fire Station. He describes his job as "getting the men to the fire as safely and quickly as possible."

Arriving at the scene, the driver jumps from the fire truck and within seconds has from 100 to 200 pounds of water pressure to the nozzle of the water hose held by the firefighters. Almost before they reach the blaze.

Proudly, Brown demonstrates how the motor of the water pump in a booster fire truck will regulate the pressure. He shows where he designed a hook and clamp to hold the water hose on the side of the fire truck, where it can be easily reached by the firefighters.

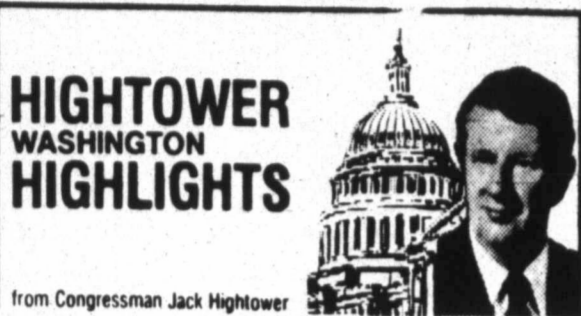

A driver is called an engineer at some fire departments. He is in charge of driving the fire truck to the scene and operating the equipment for the men fighting the blaze.

Brown says he enjoys his work because of the sense of accomplishment it gives him. "I like helping people. I don't see myself as a hero, though."

Brown was not one of those little boys who dreamed of being firemen when he grew up. "I grew up on a ranch, and that's what I wanted to be — a rancher. I don't ever remember wanting to be a fireman," he recalls.

Now that his daughter lives outside the city limits, Brown says some of his dream of owning land is fulfilled. On Sunday afternoons, he and his grandchildren pick up a big stick and go on safari.

"Yes, being a fireman gives me a sense of accomplishment. If you can hear the thanks you get after you help a person, that's what makes it worth it," Brown comments.

HIGHTOWER WASHINGTON HIGHLIGHTS

Fighting The Battle For Farmers

Have you seen the bumper sticker that reads "If You Eat, You're Involved in Agriculture"? For most people, food prices in the grocery store are the earliest indicator of inflation, yet the farmer receives a very small fraction of the packaged retail price paid at the grocery store.

We all want low food prices but, more importantly, we want a dependable food supply. The American farmer leads the world in providing that stable, dependable, low-cost food supply — and he is going broke in the process.

Congress is now considering the 1981 farm bill, the legislation that will guide this nation's agriculture programs for the next several years. One legislative struggle taking place is over how to improve the farm program while staying within the budget just passed by Congress at the request of President Reagan.

Another struggle I have been fighting for years is the one between urban congressmen representing mostly consumers who want only cheap food prices and congressmen like me, representing many farm constituents, who seek fair market price structures for their hard-pressed farmers. Farm-staters like many of us from Texas are still outnumbered in the House but we are continuing our efforts to help urban congressmen understand farm problems. Let me illustrate briefly some of the problems and then what I think should be done.

Recently I have heard one discouraging story after another telling of this year's bumper crop that was better than last year's — but, due to low market prices, the crop will end up costing the farmer more than he could get for it.

Many farmers are deeply in debt and are on the verge of giving up and getting out of the farming business. Success or failure every year is heavily influenced by factors largely out of their control. Government farm programs have been designed to help stabilize market prices and assist farmers through special loans, set-aside programs and subsidies. Farmers Home Administration loan programs have helped a great number of farmers survive. However, we are losing more farmers.

The 1980 grain embargo of sales to the Soviet Union, like other embargoes before it, disrupted farm prices worldwide and hurt our own farmers more than it hurt the Russians. As a matter of fact, they were able to replace a great deal of their U.S. loss with purchases from Argentina and indirect third parties. I have always supported a strong export program and believed that it should not be used as a tool of our foreign policy.

The Senate has already passed its version of the 1981 farm bill, while the House Agriculture Committee has produced another more positive version. The House version is still a very inadequate response to our national agricultural dilemma.

I am concerned about any government program that costs money; but as a farmer advocate, I know we've got to pass a bill that will save our small family farms from extinction and prevent the monopolization of our food production in the hands of just a few large agribusiness corporations.

To save the American farmer and, in reality, to save ourselves, I think we've got to do several things.

First, I am advocating higher loan levels for farmers in this 1981 farm bill. Government commodity loans are not subsidies but an investment we make in a farmer; it's a loan that he pays back with interest once his crop is in and marketed.

Second, I am urging the administration and Agriculture Secretary Block to speed up our efforts to build agricultural markets overseas and bolster our export program as never before. We've just got to be more aggressive. This is a hungry world and there are many potential markets yet untapped.

Third, I am supporting amendments that will make this farm bill only a one or two-year bill instead of a three or four-year bill. There are going to have to be adjustments made every year to help farmers and we need the flexibility of a one or two-year bill to make those critical adjustments. I hope by that time the Administration and Congress will have a better understanding of the problems that are confronting the agricultural community.

All of us live in a world that is not a free market system in an agricultural sense and farmers feel the brunt of it the most. Every other major agricultural exporting nation in the world devotes a great deal of their national effort to protecting their farmers who put the food on their tables. We have got to do a much better job than we are doing. An effective, responsive farm bill in 1981 will cost the government and all of us far less in the long run. If the final version is not an improvement, I must oppose it. An inadequate bill would be worse than none at all.

Despite wife's confession, husband convicted of murder

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A jury has convicted a 33-year-old man of killing his mother-in-law with a hatchet despite his defense that he mistook her for a raccoon and his dramatic testimony that she was the real killer.

How many times I hit her, Diane Loyd, 30, said Friday during her testimony in the murder of her mother, Margaret Wise. But after nearly five hours of deliberation, the jury found Orval Wyatt Loyd guilty of second-degree murder.

The jury recommended a sentence of five years in prison.

Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans asked the jury to convict Loyd, despite Mrs. Loyd's testimony, saying he feared it was part of an elaborate legal tactic to have them believe she was the killer.

An obscure Virginia law prohibits witnesses' testimony from being used against them, and Evans said he feared that if Loyd got off, the statements made by Mrs. Loyd would not be admissible and she would get off, too.

"I envision a scenario where you turn Mr. Loyd loose and they ride off into the sunset," he told the jury.

The defense lawyers did not comment after the trial. Mrs. Loyd had testified that defense lawyer Larry Slipco said her confession could not be used against her, while a court-appointed lawyer advised her not to take the stand because she could be held responsible for her statements.

"I fully believe when I step down from the witness stand I'll be going to the Virginia Beach jail," she told Evans.

Evans said after the trial that he was pleased with the verdict but "disappointed with the sentence. Considering the time the jury was out, it was a compromise verdict."

The judge did not say when he would pass sentence, but judges in Virginia usually accept the jury recommendation if the death penalty is not sought.

The couple from Dallas was visiting here April 10 when Mrs. Wise was found dead in the garage with at least 18 hatchet wounds in her head, according to police. Loyd confessed several hours after the killing, telling police he thought his 270-pound mother-in-law was a raccoon.

"He said he'd take the blame and say that it was an accident and use the raccoon story because we thought it would be believed," Mrs. Loyd told the court.

Mrs. Loyd said she awoke early that day, heard a thud that she thought was a raccoon and sent her husband to investigate. Loyd came back and said he had had a fight with her mother and "hurt her or hit her. I can't remember which," she said.

Texas Congressmen to attack new farm bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas congressmen are prepared to attack the 1981 Farm Bill when it hits the floor of the House this week, but the chances of winning significant improvement appear slight, they say.

At this point, the representatives say they are just hoping to end up with a bad bill instead of a disastrous one. "There's no way we can come out of this with a good bill, but we have a 50-50 chance, I think, of coming out with an improvement over the Senate bill," said Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Marlin. His assessment is shared by other Texans who represent farm areas — Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Vernon; Rep. Charlie Stenholm, D-Stamford; Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock; and Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee. They consider the legislation no more than a warmed-over version of the farm bill that brought misery to Texas farmers the past four years.

"If the farm bill we are considering does not make possible some meaningful changes in the prices farmers are receiving, the legislation is going to be known as the Farm Bankruptcy Act," Hightower said. The Texans' major efforts will be behind amendments Stenholm will offer to provide a set-aside of at least 15 percent in cotton, feed grains and wheat in periods when a large carryover exists from the previous year. Stenholm's amendments would increase the farmer's loan rate if he agreed to set aside a portion of his crop.

"My amendments, by themselves, are not the total solution. But they are a small step in the right direction," said Stenholm, the only farmer among the 24-member Texas delegation.

"We're working now, and have been working, to build support, but our chances are not too good, realistically," Stenholm added. "We have a large number of members in the House who feel it's in the best interests of the country to have a cheap food policy, and another group who feel the answer is a free world market. Their answer is to export more and more food at below the cost of production." Stenholm, a member of the Agriculture Committee, voted against the bill that cleared the panel.

The farm parity ratio dropped to 59 percent in September, second only to the record low of 54 percent parity, recorded in 1933, during the depression, Stenholm noted. "Those were extremely bad times (in the 1930s), and they are extremely bad times now. I must be missing something if I'm supposed to be enthusiastic about four more years, only worse, of something that brought us 59 percent parity," he said.

Another Stenholm amendment, which would make the legislation a one-year bill instead of the usual four years, has the support of Hance, who would combine it with a call for a special White House Conference on agriculture. The White House panel would focus national attention on the critical problems facing agriculture and report within a year on a model farm bill to strengthen the agricultural economy. "We've got to address our long-range problems, or we're going to come up with a food-and-fiber crisis that will make the energy crisis look mild," Hance said.

In the past year, wheat prices have dropped 36 cents, corn 49 cents, cotton 18.6 cents, cattle $5 per hundred weight, and calves $11 per hundred weight. "Forced farm sales are increasing with each month as the markets for grain, cotton and livestock continue to drop.

OCTOBER GARDENING

Harvest sweet potatoes when leaves turn yellow and before soil temperature drops below 55 degrees Fahrenheit. Cure sweet potatoes at 80 to 85 degrees Fahrenheit and 85 to 90 percent relative humidity for five to seven days immediately after harvest, dry air prevents curing and permits shrivelling. Store sweet potatoes at 60 to 65 degrees Fahrenheit and 75 to 80 percent relative humidity to preserve high quality; temperatures below 55 degrees Fahrenheit cause chilling injury which leads to decay.

Harvest mature pumpkins and winter squash; don't let mature fruits lay on soil; place them inside, high and dry away from danger of rodent injury or decay.

Harvest English peas, celery, lettuce and other leafy greens right along; don't wait until all plants are mature; these plants are less tolerant of wind and temperatures below freezing as they approach maturity.

Harvest ornamental corn; pull husks all the way back, tie several ears together by the husks and hang in a dry, airy place to cure.

Harvest gourds and place in warm, dry place to cure skin; do not paint with shellac if you want them to last — simply polish them to a nice sheen.

AG CHEMICALS CONFERENCE

A symposium on disposal of hazardous wastes and discussion of the challenges of computerization will highlight the 29th annual West Texas Agricultural Chemicals Conference Tuesday and Wednesday in Lubbock.

Some 500 agribusiness leaders, chemical dealers and educators from southwestern and midwestern states are expected to attend the two-day meeting at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. It is sponsored by the West Texas Agricultural Chemicals Institute (WTACI).

Registration will begin at 8 a.m. Tuesday and the program begins at 1:15 p.m. Additional details are available in the County Extension office.

SEASONED FIREWOOD BEST FOR HEATING

It's time to start thinking about firewood for those cold winter nights that are sure to come before long.

Although green wood will burn, seasoned and dry wood has more heat value and will not deposit excessive creosote in chimneys and stovepipes.

Any moisture in wood reduces the recoverable heat. The heat must first dry the wood so it will burn. So wood cut in late fall or winter doesn't have time to dry adequately. Thus, we recommend cutting firewood in spring and summer.

Split wood will dry faster than wood not split. Stack wood loosely in piles on a couple of rows of bricks. This keeps wood off the ground and prevents decay while at the same time allowing faster drying.

Stacking firewood in a sunny location and covering it with clear plastic also helps moisture to evaporate, thus speeding up drying and seasoning.

Since water vapor will condense on the plastic, adequate ventilation is necessary. Keep plastic off the ends of firewood to allow air to flow and to keep condensation from wetting the wood.

If trees are cut for firewood in the summer, you may want to leave tops and limbs on for a week or more. Leaves draw moisture from wood and help it to dry more quickly.

CONTINUE TO CHECK WHEAT

We have heard of some damage to wheat stands in Wheeler County caused by wireworms and white grubs. In spots, they have completely killed out the wheat that was planned in early September. It was almost big enough to graze cattle on it. If you suddenly have some dead spots show up, you need to check for the presence of these soil insects. Control will be difficult, and the best solution may be to delay replanting until the soil cools enough to drive the insects lower in the soil.

4 - H BARROW PROJECTS

We will begin selecting 4 - H barrow projects in the next week and will need to have all barrows bought and on feed before Nov. 1.

4 - H members planning to exhibit barrows this year need to remember this and contact the County Extension office soon if you will need help selecting barrows.

TEEN LEADER RETREAT

"Be all you can be... Through 4 - H!" will be the theme of the Fall '81 Teen Leader Retreat conducted at the Texas 4 - H Center Oct. 24 - 25.

This retreat will focus on the development of the individual. The importance of physical fitness, communication skills and a positive mental attitude will be addressed. Activities include workshops, exercise, and a session on the leadership potential. Opportunities to develop through the 4 - H program will be emphasized.

Adults may also attend the retreat. The Fall Meeting of the Volunteer Leaders' Association of Texas will also be conducted on this weekend. 4 - H volunteers are welcomed at VLAT's meetings and for the regular workshop.

Registration forms for this Teen Leader Retreat are available in the County Extension office now and should be returned to the State 4 - H office before Oct. 16.

VOLUNTEERS INSURE 4 - H SUCCESS

Volunteers from all walks of life and all backgrounds contribute their valuable time to the 4 - H and youth program of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, thus insuring its success.

According to the National Center for Voluntary Action, one out of every four adults volunteered for some type of volunteer work. More than one - third of the volunteers served at least once a week.

The Texas 4 - H and youth program reports that more than 22,000 teen and adult volunteers served as 4 - H group leaders last year. Based on the minimum wage, their three hours of volunteered time per week amounted to more than $4 million.

How can volunteers be effectively recruited?

The potential volunteer needs to feel that he or she can do the job. Volunteers should also feel that no one else could accomplish the job as well, so the task should fit in easily with hobbies, talents or interest.

Sharing the personal satisfaction and benefits that come from rewarding volunteer work will insure the volunteer's continued success and confidence in the job.

As one 4 - H volunteer commented, "Volunteer work is like an investment that pays off in lifelong benefits for young people's lives — and for yourself."

Highlights of 1981 farm bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the major provisions of H.R. 3603, the Food and Agriculture Act of 1981, which is scheduled to come up for debate, amendment and final vote of the House this week:

— Dairy: provides price supports for milk for four years beginning Oct. 1, 1981, at a minimum level of 75 percent of parity. Semiannual adjustments to not less than 75 percent of parity would be required. The dairy indemnity program would be extended for four years.

— Wool and Mohair: extends for four years, beginning Oct. 1, 1981, the existing wool and mohair payment program.

— Wheat: provides a price support loan rate of not less than $3.55 per bushel for 1982, adjusted for 1983-1985 by the same percentage as the annual change in target prices. Targets would begin at $4.20 for 1982, and be adjusted annually for 1983-1985 based on changes in farm costs. The use of targets would be discretionary with the Secretary unless carryover exceeded 1.3 billion bushels.

— Feed Grains: provides a corn price support loan rate of not less than $2.65 per bushel for 1982, adjusted for 1983-1985 by the same percentage as annual change in target prices. Targets would begin at $2.90 in 1982, and be adjusted annually for 1983-1985 based on changes in farm costs. The use of targets on corn and sorghum would be discretionary unless corn carryover exceeded 1.3 billion bushels. When corn and sorghum targets are used, the Secretary may cover oats and barley.

— Upland Cotton: for 1982-85 crops, the bill would extend the present program with loan rates based on a percentage of open-market prices. The minimum loan rate would be set at 55 cents per pound; target prices would be based on 120 percent of the loan rate, the Secretary would be authorized to require cuts in cotton planting as a condition of eligibility for support; and normal crop acreage, cross-compliance and offsetting compliance provisions would be eliminated.

— Rice: acreage allotments would be eliminated, making program benefits available to all growers who comply with the program. Minimum loan rates for 1982-85 crops would be set at $8 per hundredweight. Targets would be adjusted annually on the basis of cost of production estimates, but on a per-acre basis. The Secretary could require rice acreage reduction as a condition of program benefits.

— Peanuts: the program would be extended for four years beginning in 1982. Minimum national poundage quotas would be reduced to 1.3 million tons; and support loan rates for quota peanuts in 1982 would be set at the average cost of production, but not less than $600 per ton. In the following three years, the loan rate would be adjusted on the basis of changes in production costs. For "additional" peanuts, the loan rate would be set by the Secretary at a level estimated to avoid CCC losses.

— Soybeans: price support loan rates would be based on 75 percent of a 3-year average of Chicago cash market prices for No. 1 yellow soybeans, but not less than $5.02 per bushel, effective 1982-85. No production adjustment or reserve programs would be permitted. Cross-compliance would not be permitted.

— Other commodities: for the 1982-85 crops of sugar, a support loan program would be mandatory at a loan rate not less than 19.6 cents per pound for 1982, with adjustments in later years based on changes in production costs. For sunflowers, price support loans would be mandatory for 1982-85 crops at not less than $9 per hundredweight.

— Miscellaneous Commodity Provisions: extension for four years of existing payment limits; normal crop acreage provisions for grains, but not for cotton, rice or soybeans; a special haying and grazing program; set-aside authority for grains; and disaster payments limited to areas where crop insurance was unavailable. For wheat and wheat grains: extension of the Secretary's authority to establish a special supplementary set-aside if exports are embargoed; producer owned grain reserve program would be continued; the Secretary may cancel early release penalties and determine the size of the reserve; entry loan rates would be the higher of 110 percent of the loan rate or $3.58 per bushel for wheat or $2.80 for corn.

— Review Board: the bill would create an 8-member board to review cost of production formula.

— Export Provisions: Titles I and II of Food for Peace Program would be extended for four years beginning Oct. 1, 1981. The annual ceiling on Title II would be raised to $1 billion; an embargo protection clause would raise loan rates to 90 percent of parity in certain cases; the Secretary would investigate the potential for using protein byproducts from alcohol plants in export programs; sense of Congress would be expressed that prices of U.S. export sales of grain or soybeans not be below cost of production.

Mysteries of Shroud remain

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — After three years of study, scientists say they learned a few things about the Shroud of Turin, but two basic mysteries remain — how the image of a man was imprinted on the cloth and whether that image was made by the body of Jesus Christ.

The image on the cloth is that of a "scourged, crucified man," said Joan Janney of the 40-member Shroud of Turin Research Project.

But, she said, that image is "an ongoing mystery and until further tests are made, perhaps by this group of scientists or perhaps by some scientist in the future, the problem (of whether it is Christ's burial garment) remains unsolved."

A statement issued by the group Friday at the start of a symposium on the controversial cloth said its research had determined that the shroud image is that of a real human form, of a scourged, crucified man. It is not the product of an artist. The blood stains are composed of hemoglobin.

Ms. Janney, a scientist at the National Science Laboratory in Los Alamos, N.M., said she didn't think it was possible for scientists to decide whether the image is Christ's.

"I don't think the classical scientific method can prove who it was," she said.

But one scientist said not all the team members are convinced the image is human. Eric Jumper, an engineer at the U.S. Air Force Institute of Technology, said that while the theory that the form is that of a man fits the evidence "there have been people who have objected to that on the team."

He said the skeptics "do not have an explanation but are not willing to accept (the human image) as a positive conclusion."

The report of the privately conducted research said the image was, however, produced by "direct contact with the body, which explains certain features."

However, while this type of contact might explain some of the features of the torso, it is totally incapable of explaining the image of the face with the high resolution that has been amply demonstrated by photography," their report said.

The report also said the scientists were unable to create a similar image through experiments.

The team that examined the shroud is presenting the results of its investigation to some 1,000 participants, including scientists and religious pilgrims, at a three-day conference at Connecticut College.

Meanwhile, a federal judge in Detroit lifted a restraining order issued by a Michigan state judge banning publication of a book — co-authored by a non-scientist who was once a spokesman for the research project — that says the 14-by-4-foot sheet of linen was Christ's burial cloth.

Hightower ends term as consumer president

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Agriculture Commissioner candidate Jim Hightower Saturday ended his term as president of the Texas Consumers Association, the organization that helped keep his name before the voters between campaigns.

The sharp-tongued former Texas Observer editor gave the crowd the clever, anti-big business one-liners they have learned to expect from him.

"We have seen in the last two years the greatest flow of power to the powerful and riches to the rich... since the 1920s," he said.

About 50 people listened as Hightower opened the 1,000-member TCA's annual convention on the University of Texas campus.

Hightower, running against Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown in the Democratic primary, said the wave of corporate mergers in recent years has been tough on the consumer. "Too few people have all the money and power," he said.

"We don't have food companies anymore. We have consumer produce conglomerates," he said, bemoaning the trend toward conglomerates in everything from banking to groceries.

TCA, like Hightower, is highly political. Hightower said the goal always has been to attract a politically active membership, rather than seeking to sign up thousands of members who would like to see TCA as a "service" group.

The association has helped Hightower spread his name in the year since his unsuccessful attempt to unseat Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent. Hightower has written a weekly column that TCA has distributed to Texas newspapers. He also has recorded a weekly radio spot.

Several of the columns and radio talks have dealt with agricultural issues.

Hightower said he has to run well in the urban areas to beat Brown. But Hightower also said he has support among farmers, who are tired of buying from and selling to monopolies that dictate prices.

"We are seeing the death of entrepreneurship," he said. Hightower urged the TCA members to "develop our political punch a little bit."

"We're the majority. We're the gougees," he said.

DEFENSIVE SWARM. Pampa High defenders swarm over Lubbock Monterey running back Darron White, stopping him at the line of scrimmage during the Harvesters' 16-7 win Friday night in Harvester Stadium.

It was the second straight win for the Harvesters, who are now 2-4 overall.

Harvesters shock Monterey with fourth-quarter scores

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor
Perseverance pays off. The Pampa Harvesters could write a book about the subject after going four weeks without a win.

That's all in the past now as Pampa scored nine points late in the fourth quarter to capture a 16-7 non-district thriller over Lubbock Monterey Friday night in Harvester Fieldhouse. It was the second straight win for the Harvesters after slipping by Altus, Okla., 13-10, last Friday night in the annual homecoming game.

We came a long way this week as a team. Harvester head coach Larry Gilbert said. "Our conditioning was a big factor and the intensity and character we have as a team really showed up in the fourth quarter."

Monterey, who owned a 19-1-1 series record over Pampa entering the game, drops to 2-4.

Robert McCoy's dramatic 35-yard field goal with 5:35 to go snapped a 7-7 deadlock to give the Harvesters all the edge that was needed.

"We had a lot of key plays, but that had to be the biggest one," Gilbert said. "The guys on the special teams can understand now why we practice until 7 or 7:30 p.m. at night on our kicking. It all came down to that field goal. The protection on that field goal was excellent."

On Pampa's first possession of the fourth quarter, sophomore running back Danny Sebastian took a wide pitchout from quarterback Randy Skaggs and scampered 31 yards to the Lubbock 25. Skaggs' eight-yard toss to Devin Mason set up McCoy's field goal on a fourth and two situation.

Pampa added some insurance on its next possession.

Mason returned the Monterey punt 23 yards to the Plainsmen 41. Five plays later, Landers bulled over from the one to make it 16-7 with 1:07 to go.

Monterey threatened in the closing seconds, driving to the Pampa 21, but John Kadingo picked off quarterback David Hagood's pass to end the threat.

Pampa's defense was magnificent in the clutch, stopping the Plainsmen with a goal line stand and forcing two errant field goal tries.

Monterey led in total yards, 226-165, but found real estate hard to purchase once deep in Harvester territory.

"It was total team effort," Gilbert said. "Monterey had the opportunities, but we denied them the goal line every time. I just can't praise the defense enough."

After going nowhere its first two possessions of the second quarter, Pampa got a break when McCoy recovered Hagood's fumble on the Monterey 16. Five plays later, Landers charged up the middle from 25 yards out for the first score of the game. McCoy's PAT gave the Harvesters a 7-0 lead that stood through the first half.

It was Pampa's defensive stand midway in the third quarter that loomed as a deciding factor as the game wore on.

After a Monterey punt had the Harvesters backed up deep in their own territory, Brian Barbee fell on Kadingo's fumble on the Pampa eight.

Monterey faced a goal to go situation on the Pampa one three plays later, but halfback Van Singleton was stacked up the line by noseguard Harold Landers and cornerback Devin Mason.

On Monterey's very next possession following a Pampa punt, Mark Hastings caught a 19-yard TD aerial from Darron White. Stewart Brann's PAT tied the score with 2:10 to go in the third stanza.

Defensive end Cliff Baker and tackle Joe Ryzman also made some big steps for the Harvesters.

Baker was instrumental in stopping a Monterey drive late in the first quarter, dropping Monterey running backs twice for minus yardage. Ryzman had two quarterback sacks, totaling 17 yards in losses.

"Baker played well and Ryzman was just outstanding," Gilbert said. "People in the stands often don't realize how hard a defensive lineman must work to drop a ballcarrier for a loss. First he's got to beat his blocker and then he's got to catch the back."

Kadingo, a 146-pound senior, paced Pampa's rushing attack with 80 yards on 12 carries. Sebastian had 50 yards on eight steps while Landers added 25 yards on 13 tries.

Rock Rickel led Monterey with 50 yards on only four tries, while White picked up 39 yards on 11 carries.

"The kids just weren't going to be denied the victory," Gilbert said. "That's what it boiled down to. The kids are getting more experience with each game and the offense is gaining more confidence."

We're still having too many missed assignments. We're going to have to improve there if we're going to reach our goal of winning district."

Pampa travels to Caprock this Friday night for the District 3-5A opener.

"I'm concerned about our pass defense because Caprock is going to test it to the hilt. They throw the ball real well."

The Pampa Shockers were blanked by Borger JVs, 28-0, Thursday night.

Phillies nudge Expos to tie series at two games apiece

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pinch-hitter George Vukovich led off the 10th inning with a home run over the right field wall off ace reliever Jeff Reardon, giving the Philadelphia Phillies a 6-5 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday and tying their National League East Division championship series at two games apiece.

It was only the fifth earned run of Reardon in the last 40 innings in which he posted an 0.97 earned run average. Reardon had saved the Montreal victories in the first two games of this series.

Vukovich, who has three-pinch hits in the series, batted for winning reliever Tug McGraw. He hit an 0-2 pitch for his winning shot.

The fifth and decisive game will be played Sunday at 4:05 p.m. EDT, with the first game pitchers — Steve Carlton for Philadelphia and Steve Rogers for the Expos — matched again.

The Phillies grabbed a 2-0 lead in the first inning off Montreal starter Scott Sanderson.

With two out, Bake McBride singled and major league home run leader Mike Schmidt slammed a homer over the left field wall for his first of the series.

The Phillies boosted their lead to 4-0 in the third.

Rose opened with a single and Schmidt walked with one out. Gary Matthews then grounded to shortstop Chris Speier, who flipped to second baseman Jerry Manuel trying to start a routine double play.

But Manuel missed the bag and Schmidt was safe on the error. Rose advancing to third. Montreal Manager Jim Fanning then removed Sanderson in favor of Stan Bahnsen, whose first pitch was grounded into right by Keith Moreland, scoring Rose and Schmidt with two unearned runs.

The Expos reached Phillies' starter Dickie Noles for a run in the fourth when Gary Carter slammed a 1-0 pitch for his second homer of the series.

Montreal knocked out Noles in the fifth.

Center fielder Lonnie Smith broke the wrong way and just missed Speier's leadoff high fly which fell for a double.

Noles then walked Manuel and pinch-hitter Brad Mills, loading the bases.

That was all for Noles and brought on right-hander Warren Brusstar, whose first pitch was lined toward right-center by Warren Cromartie but was speared by second baseman Manny Trillo.

Jerry White then hit a sacrifice fly scoring Speier.

The Expos tied it in the sixth and had the go-ahead run at third when Sparky Lyle struck out Cromartie for the final out.

UNHAPPY HARVESTER. Pampa linebacker Ricky Baird is a little down in the mouth after sustaining a sprained ankle in the second quarter of the non-district game with Lubbock Monterey Friday night. However, head coach Larry Gilbert said the 146-pound junior would probably be able to play in next Friday's District 3-5A opener with Caprock. The Harvesters defeated Monterey, 16-7. (Staff Photo by John Wolfe)

Former Harvester coach receives game ball

Former Pampa High football coach Odus Mitchell made a sentimental journey Friday, returning to the Top O' Texas town where he coached for 13 years. Mitchell was glad he made the trip and so were the Pampa Harvesters. Mitchell, who was honored at a golf tournament, benefit dinner and halftime of the Pampa-Lubbock Monterey Friday night, is now retired and living in Denton after 42 years of coaching. Following Pampa's 16-7 win over Monterey, co-captains John Kadingo and Harold Landers awarded Mitchell the game ball during a reception in the high school cafeteria. "This is the greatest day of my life," Mitchell beamed. "Good things have happened to me all day. "I'm also the richest man in the world with all these friends here," Mitchell said, pointing to a group of PHS alumni who played for him. Harvester head coach Larry Gilbert expressed his thanks to Mitchell, who talked to the team before the game. "He really inspired us to win," Gilbert said. "He's a great person." Mitchell said the Pampa-Monterey game was as good as any game he's seen. "I know what it's like to lose and I know what it's like to win after losing two or three games in a row," Mitchell added. "Coaching is the greatest profession there is and it gets better as you get older."

Mitchell coached the Harvesters from 1927 through 1940. His '30 club went unbeaten during the regular season. The '31 Harvesters were on the way to a perfect season when they were sidetracked by eventual state champion Amarillo High, 2-0. "That game was played in the rain and mud," Mitchell recalls. "Amarillo High had only one high school back then and they always seemed to have a good team." Mitchell coached several future NFL stars, including HIGH BALL. Pampa's Sweet Simmons pounds a shot over the outstretched arms of two Tascosa defenders during District 3-5A volleyball action Saturday at Harvester Fieldhouse. Waiting for a possible return are Pampa's Amy Beyer (20) and Leslie Albus. The Harvesters lost, 6-15, 12-15.

Pampa spikers bow to Tascosa in loop play

Pampa dropped 6-15 and 12-15 decisions to Tascosa in District 3-5A volleyball action Saturday in Harvester Stadium. The Harvesters fall to 15-6 overall and 1-2 in district play. "I was real impressed with the effort we put forth," Pampa High coach Lynn Wolfe said. "We just didn't stand there and take it."

After the lopsided loss in the opener, Pampa bounced back to take a 4-0 lead in the second game. Tascosa battled back and the teams exchanged leads several times. The score was 11-all when the Rebels broke away for the win.

"Sweet Simmons had two real good blocks at the net for us and Paula Fulton, Alicia Brewer, Carla Rogers, and Leslie Albus played real good defense," coach Wolfe said.

Pampa travels to Amarillo High Tuesday night. Matchtime is 6:30 p.m.

Tascosa, which has beaten both AHS and Palo Duro, is favored to win the district title.

Brewers even series

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete Vuckovich, battling tonsillitis and a fever, held New York to one hit for five innings and relievers Jamie Easterly and Rollie Fingers bailed Milwaukee out of late-inning trouble as the Brewers beat the Yankees 2-1 Saturday and evened their American League East Division playoff at two games apiece.

In staying off elimination for the second day in a row after dropping the first two games at home, the Brewers produced just enough offense against Rick Reuschel in the fourth inning. Cecil Cooper drove in a run with a sacrifice fly and Ben Oglivie, hitless in 12 previous playoff at-bats, delivered the decisive tally with a two-out double.

The final game of the best-of-five series is scheduled for Yankee Stadium at 7:10 p.m. EDT Sunday, with Ron Guidry pitching for New York and Moose Haas for Milwaukee. They were the starters in Wednesday's opening game, with the Yankees chasing Haas in the fourth inning and pinning the defeat on him. Guidry, knocked out in the fifth, was not involved in the decision.

Vuckovich, who was unable to pitch Thursday and Friday and had to go to a Milwaukee hospital for antibiotics, walked three and struck out four, while allowing a leadoff single by Reggie Jackson in the second inning.

But the big right-hander, who tied for the AL lead with 14 victories during the regular season, ran into trouble in the sixth when first baseman Cooper botched Jerry Mumphrey's grounder for an error and Dave Winfield ripped a double down the third base line.

That brought on Easterly, a journeyman left-hander, to face Jackson, the Yankees' celebrated Mr. October, with runners at second and third and no one out.

Eighth-grade game ends in deadlock

CANYON—Pampa Blue battled Canyon White to a 6-6 tie Thursday in eighth-grade football action.

Pampa drew first blood in the second quarter when Mike Killgo scored on a 35-yard run.

Canyon knotted the score in the third quarter on a straight dive play.

Killgo and Dean LaRue were the outstanding offensive players while Killgo and Gary Jernigan were the outstanding defensive players for Pampa.

Pampa Red's schedule has been canceled and their players will join the Pampa Blue team for the rest of the season. Not enough players were available to suit up two teams.

Pampa Blue plays Canyon Purple there next Thursday, starting at 4:30 p.m.

Pitt shuts out West Virginia

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Bryan Thomas ran for two touchdowns as fourth-ranked Pitt, forced into a running game because of an injury to passing star Dan Marino, ground out a 17-0 football victory over previously unbeaten West Virginia on Saturday.

Pitt's backup quarterback, seldom-used junior Danny Daniels, failed to complete a pass in six attempts as he subbed for Marino, who was the nation's top-rated passer going into the game. But with Marino on the sidelines because of a strained right shoulder, Daniels effectively ran the Panther offense by handing off extensively to Wayne DiBartola and Thomas.

Thomas scored the game's first touchdown on a 43-yard run with 1:57 left in the first half, and the Panthers, 4-0, held a 7-0 halftime lead. He broke open at the line of scrimmage, raced down the sidelines, slipping three tackles on the way, and accelerated into the end zone as Pitt took just two plays to complete a 55-yard scoring drive.

Longhorns roll over Sooners, 34-14

DALLAS (AP) — No. 3-ranked Texas trailed No. 10-rated Oklahoma by 11 points at intermission and Texas Coach Fred Akers admitted it could have been much worse.

"Our defense (No. 2-ranked in the nation against the rush) did a great job in the first half just keeping them from getting more points," Akers said after the Longhorns exploded for 31 second-half points and a 34-14 victory.

"We told the team at halftime to settle down, hold onto the ball and keep going," Akers added.

Oklahoma's touchdown drives covered only 16 and 34 yards after Texas fumbles. The Longhorn defense twice halted plays deep in their own territory on fourth down.

"We gave them everything they had in the first half and we decided to cut out the charity and go get the victory," said All-American defensive tackle Kenneth Sims.

Sims made one of the fourth-down tackles and recovered an Oklahoma fumble to set up a third-quarter field goal.

Mark Weber, the tackle opposite Sims, also stopped the Sooners on a short yardage fourth-down try.

"We knew at halftime we would win," said Weber. "I thought they were tired. This team just does whatever it takes to win."

Quarterback Rick McIvor, who threw two second-half touchdown passes, said, "Our offensive line was something."

Losing Coach Barry Switzer, who has now lost three in a row to the Longhorns, said, "McIvor made two big plays — the long run and the touchdown pass. We just aren't very good in the secondary."

Study says students shortchanged because teachers fritter away time

WASHINGTON (AP) — Children in American schools are being shortchanged of daily classroom instruction by recesses that run too long, leisurely lunch periods and classes that wind up early, according to a new study.

John I. Goodlad, dean of the U.C.L.A. School of Education and author of the study, found that some elementary schools spend as little as 18½ hours a week on instruction while others spend as much as 27½ hours.

The average for all grade schools was 22½ hours, or 4½ hours a day.

That is simply not enough, Goodlad told the National Commission on Excellence in Education at its inaugural meeting Friday. He recommended that 25 hours of instruction be the standard.

The schools that devote more time to instruction use the day more efficiently and do not have longer hours, Goodlad said.

"They get down to business," he said. "A 15-minute recess lasts 15 minutes, not 30 minutes, and lunch is 30 minutes, not an hour. They don't spend the last half-hour of the day cleaning up, because they've found that it can be done in five or six minutes."

Goodlad and a team of researchers spent eight years gathering data on 38 schools selected to represent a cross-section of public schools in America. They clocked classroom activities and chronicled school life.

Called "A Study of Schooling," the $4 million-plus project was financed by the Kettering Foundation, 10 other private foundations and two federal agencies. The final study will not be released until next fall.

But in a paper previewing his study for the National School Boards Association, Goodlad wrote that children encounter "shortcomings and inequities... during their very first days in kindergarten or the first grade" because of the wide disparities in time spent in the classroom.

This "is in itself one of the most significant factors in their academic achievement," he said. "We have heard a great deal about equality of education opportunity in this country, but one of the most glaring types of inequality seems to have escaped our attention. And it has nothing to do with income or race."

Goodlad said some schools also fritter away the final 10 days of the school year, throwing away two of their 36 weeks.

"If there's one thing we've learned in the last decade, it's that you don't learn anything if you don't spend any time on it," he said. "I'm not asking for a longer school year. I'm asking that we use the time we've got."

Both the school with the 18½-hour week and the one with the 27½-hour week spent roughly the same amount of time each day on reading and writing, 90 minutes, and on math, 54 or 55 minutes, Goodlad said.

But the school that wasted time had only 23 minutes for social studies and 13 minutes for science, while the time-thrifty school offered a full hour of both social studies and science and had time left over for the arts.

Regardless of how they managed their time, elementary schools in general devoted 53 percent of their classroom instruction to reading, writing and math.

Vietnam veteran, who suspected Agent Orange, dies in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — A 31-year-old Vietnam veteran who was convinced Agent Orange caused his cancer died Friday evening, but doctors hesitated in officially attributing the death to the defoliant.

The physicians did say Larry Hall's cancer, his wife's stillborn delivery and his children's learning disabilities were consistent with symptoms suffered by other veterans exposed to the defoliant and by their children.

The chemical was used to strip trees of their leaves and to clear jungle brush in Vietnam war zones.

The father of two, Hall was one of an estimated 10,000 Vietnam veterans nationwide who have been denied service-related disability compensation by the Veterans Administration, which says no cause-and-effect relationship has been found between the defoliant and cancer.

"If it (the cancer) occurred a year after his discharge, it might have been service-connected, but 10 years is a long time," said Jack Coker, VA director in Dallas.

Coker said Hall's request was rejected Wednesday because the VA has not proved or disproved Agent Orange as a cause of cancer, whether he came into contact with it or not.

The Hall's first child was born with a severe speech impediment in 1972 and remains three grades behind in school. Their second child died of a heart condition three weeks after birth in 1973. A year later, Hall's wife Shirley miscarried. In 1974, a third child was born with a learning disability, Mrs. Hall said.

"Because we don't know what it does, it's possible that Agent Orange behaves like other chemical exposure that comes up in the body 10 or 20 years later," said Dr. Lewis Ruben, chief of the pulmonary section at the Dallas VA hospital.

Hall, a combat engineer in Vietnam in 1971 and 1972, said he believed he inhaled Agent Orange as he stood on the deck while the USS Gunston Hall crawled through canals that had been chemically cleared of overhanging brush. He also was based on land in Rachsoi, South Vietnam, in 1969 and 1970.

Although doctors have not determined the origin of Hall's cancer, they said it had spread from his lungs and brain into his abdomen by the time of his death.

In June, he began losing weight and feeling listless. In August, he underwent three weeks of tests at the VA hospital in Dallas.

"First they told us it was pneumonia, then they wanted to do a spinal tap... They wouldn't level with us, so we went to Baylor (University Medical Center)," Mrs. Hall said. Doctors there diagnosed cancer.

"I can't in truth state it's due to Agent Orange," said Dr. Lloyd Kitchens, who administered chemotherapy to Hall at Baylor. "...But it's my impression that they (VA) are not acceding to the claim because a cause and effect can't be proven."

Wall Street calm after Sadat assassination

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market has taken the news of Anwar Sadat's assassination with a degree of calm that surprised many analysts.

On Tuesday, as word spread that the Egyptian president had been killed, gold prices briefly shot upward. Investors concerned about the impact on energy politics scrambled to buy U.S. oil stocks.

But otherwise, individual investors and fund managers — the latter a group often criticized for their alleged tendency to panic in emotional moments — made no dramatic response.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped a modest 3.61 points on the day in relatively light trading. The next day, it began a rally that left the market with its second consecutive weekly gain.

The average closed Friday at 873.00, up 12.27 from a week before and up 48.99 from the 16-month closing low of 824.01 on Sept. 25.

Other readings for the week showed the New York Stock Exchange index up 1.47 at 70.33, and the American Stock Exchange up 6.47 at 314.14.

Big Board volume averaged 48.79 million shares a day, against 49.59 million the week before.

Investors, like everyone else, have had plenty of experience lately coping with the shocks of attacks on prominent world figures.

On March 30, the major exchanges closed about 40 minutes early after President Reagan was shot. The Dow Jones industrial average dropped 2.62 points. In the following session, it rebounded almost 12 points on word that Reagan was recovering.

Less than seven weeks later, on May 13, when Pope John Paul II was wounded at the Vatican, the Dow dropped 3.06.

But few analysts were ready to argue that familiarity with the phenomenon alone could have diminished the emotional impact of the attack on Sadat. "It's a grim day," said one broker as he watched financial news wires hour-by-hour Tuesday.

By Wednesday, analysts said investors seemed to hope for a smooth transition in Egypt, and pleased with their initial impressions of Sadat's prospective successor, Hosni Mubarak, who quickly declared his intention to continue Sadat's policies.

In the eyes of some observers, the behavior of the market stood as evidence that news events, however stunning, often evoke less dramatic responses from investors than casual observers might expect.

When there is a response, brokers said, it often proves fleeting. Nov. 5, for example, the Dow jumped almost 16 points after Reagan's landslide victory. The next day it gave up all of that and more.

Some analysts took the market's behavior Tuesday as a bullish sign. "Apparently the weak holders, the nervous types who might have sold on this news, have already bailed out," one broker theorized.

Girls remain missing after man's arrest

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The mothers of two missing 13-year-olds said Saturday their hopes for reunion with their daughters were crushed after the man charged with kidnapping them was arrested in Alabama.

"I guess I was thinking that he'd just sit down and tell them where they were," Cinda Pallett's mother, Norma, said Saturday. "But it didn't happen that way. It's a little depressing."

Charlotte Kinsey's mother, Pearla Peterson, said her hopes gave way to anger when the girls were not found after the arrest Friday and after law officials suggested they might have run away after all.

The two girls disappeared Sept. 26 after calling to tell their families that a man had offered them work unloading stuffed animals at the state fair.

"We're pretty much at a loss on where the girls are or whether they were with him in Alabama."

The sorting, delivering and increases carry on

POST OFFICE BOXES serve residents who prefer receiving their mail at the post office or those who live in areas not served by rural delivery.

Just as the old saying goes, "Neither rain, nor sleet, nor nearly anything, can deter the mail carriers who day by day deliver the thousands, even millions, of pieces of mail."

They make sure the innumerable pieces of correspondence that keep the wheels of business moving and the lines of communication open between friends and relatives arrive at your door.

The 19 mail carriers in Pampa carried 752,800 pieces of mail during the last four-week accounting period.

The postal carriers are aided in their daily job by mail clerks who work at the post office sorting and receiving the mail. Some of these mail clerks report to work at 4 a.m. and work till 12:30 p.m. The number of clerks on duty does vary, according to Lynn Bivins, superintendent of postal operations.

"When it is a busy season, Christmas in particular, there are more clerks on duty," Bivins said.

The mail designated to carrier routes is measured each day in feet.

"All the sorted mail is placed in a tray, and it takes two or three trays of flat mail, newspapers and magazines and usually two or three trays of letters for each route," Bivins said.

"An example would be a measurement taken recently of 9.9 feet of mail to be delivered. This amount must be sorted and delivered within the eight-hour work day allotment," Bivins said.

"The actual length of the mail routes can vary in length according to the number of possible deliveries. Certain areas in town are very large without many pieces of mail proportionately delivered, so that route may be longer. An average mail route in Pampa is 19.62 miles," Bivins said.

Each mail carrier further sorts his route's mail by house number. The carrier is allocated a mail vehicle which acts as a mobile relay station.

There are three routes within the city of Pampa that are currently foot routes, no mail vehicles are used. The mail is placed in relay boxes along the way for easy pickup and storage.

The relay boxes are those blue boxes placed around town that look like mail boxes, but with the warning, do not place mail in this box.

"The recent no mail delivery on Sunday rule doesn't actually cause any problem for the mail carriers, but it does add some work on Monday for the clerks," Bivins said.

When asked about the new $20 stamp, Bivins said that would have to be answered by the men in Washington.

Representatives of The National Association of Letter Carriers and the American Postal Workers Union are able to negotiate several points of their contract on the local level. Meetings with union representatives Leon Peeler, Robert Bigham and Charlie George will meet with management representatives Don McDowell, Lynn Bivins and Gerald Smith.

"In negotiations, we discuss vacation periods and holiday work schedules, things like that," Bivins said.

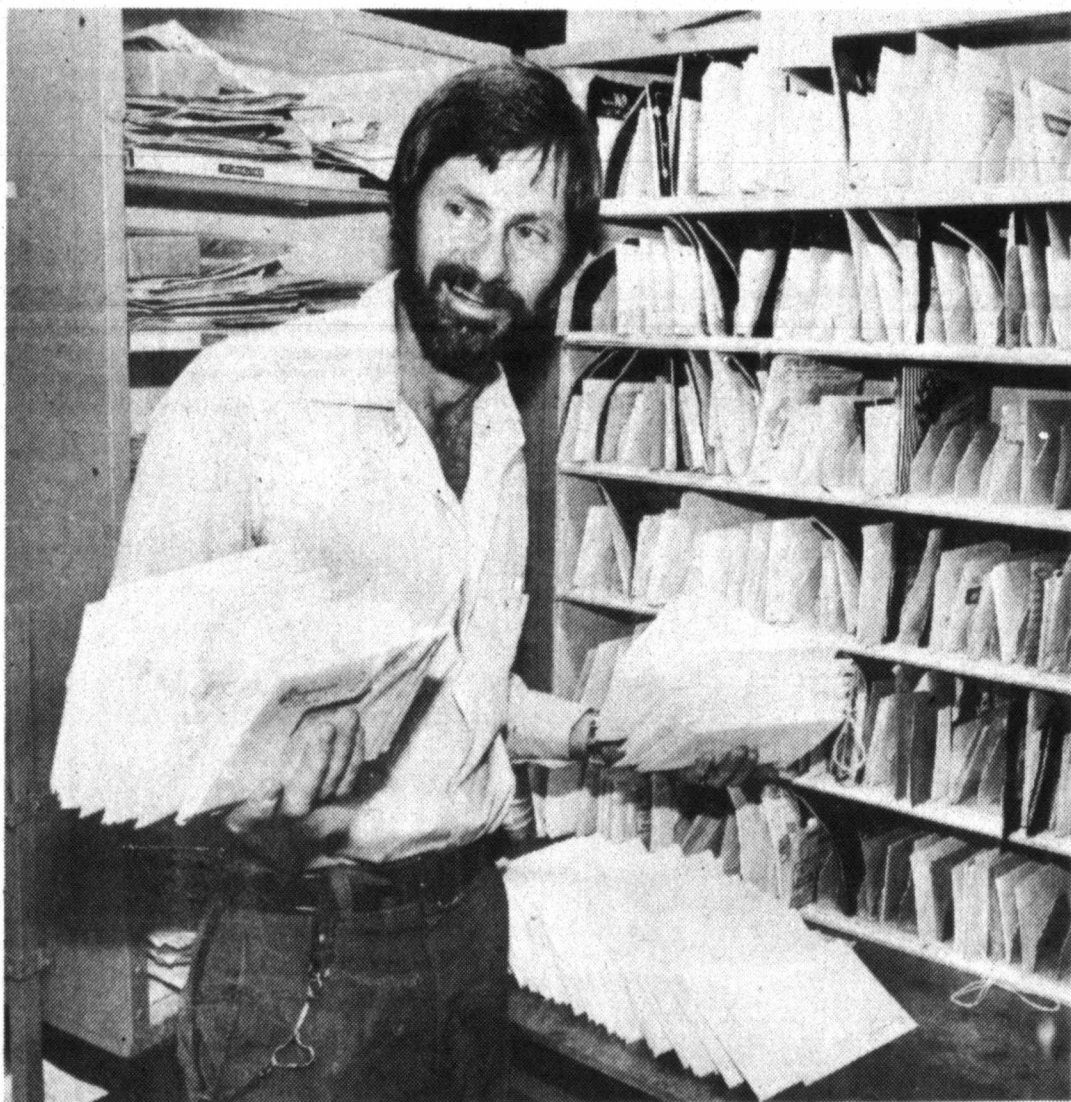

"Currently, there are three employees that have 35 years of service and eight employees that have 25 years of service," Bivins said.

There are the ones that have long seniority at the post office and are glad to stay, but many of the newer employees are more mobile. They move about the country more easily and often leave after a few years," Bivins said.

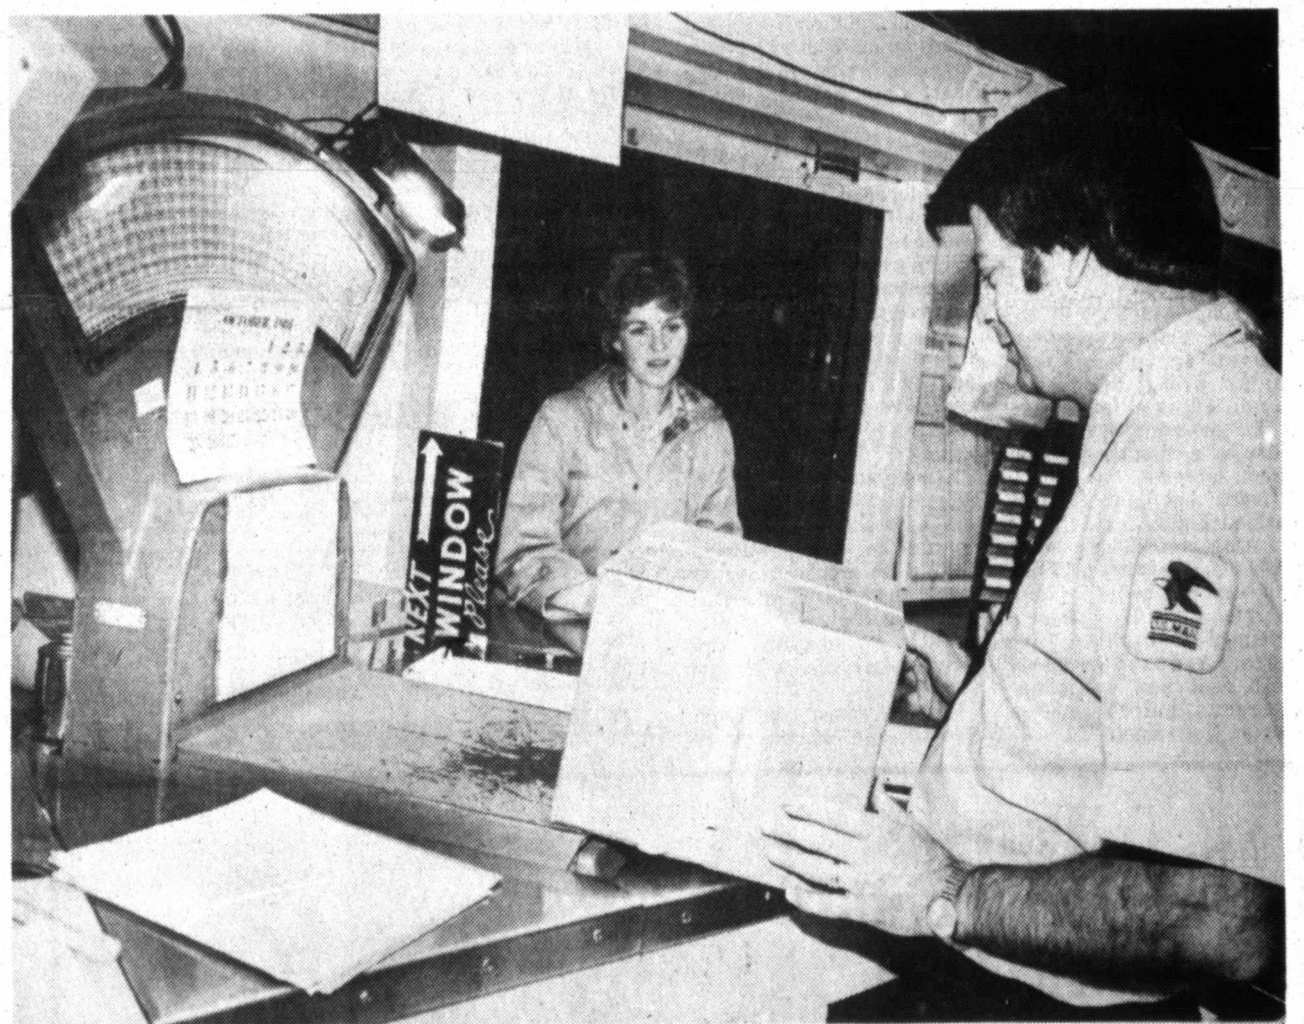

The local post office is currently short handed, and applicants are being interviewed by Interim Postmaster Don McDowell.

"We had three employees retire as of Sept. 18, and the usual leaving for business reasons has left us short right now," Bivins said.

Prospective postal workers must pass a postal exam and are placed on a 90-day probation period before being given a permanent career appointment.

MAIL CARRIER Robert Bigham goes through the daily sorting of his route mail. The amount of daily mail for carriers is measured in feet and can reach nine to ten feet of letters.

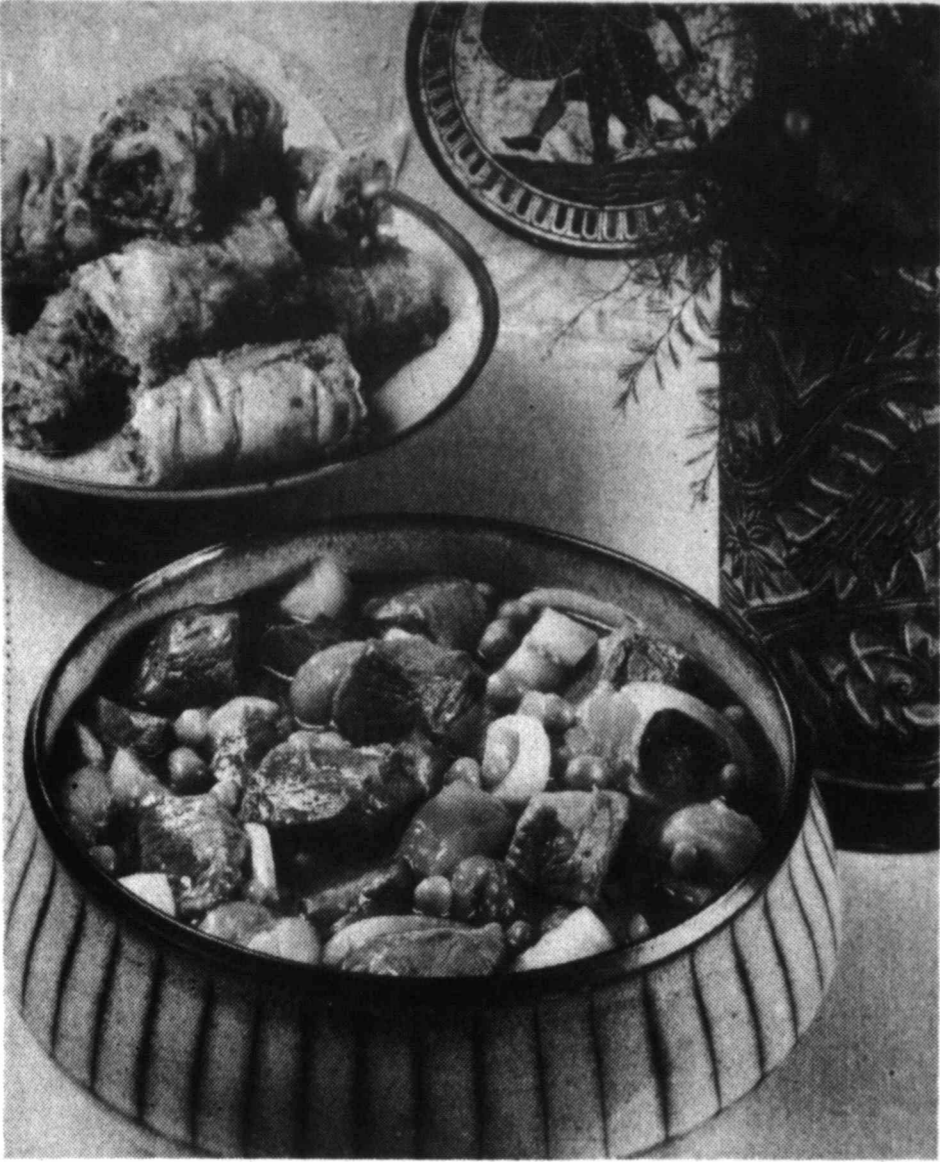

POSTAL RECEIVING WINDOW is manned by postal clerk Ron Hayes. The packages or flat mail is weighed for proper postage amount and can be insured by the customers using the postal window.

DAILY ROUNDS for the postal carriers can reach an average of 19 miles. Carrier Kelly Bland is shown following his daily mail route delivering his share of letters, newspapers and magazines.

EGGPLANT AND OREGANO are two key ingredients that flavor this hearty beef stew with Greek flair.

Stew inspired by Greek cuisine

Making stew — the gentle simmering together of meat, vegetables and seasonings — is an international art. Preparation ease, economy and wholesome goodness make this combination entree as popular in Britain as it is in Brazil, in the Middle East as it is in the Midwest.

It is interesting to note that although stews around the world are similar, the favorite foods of each country are combined in a unique and distinctive way to make an entree that is characteristic of that cuisine. An example of a stew that includes the flavors of Greece is Athenian-Style Beef Stew. Like so many Greek entrees, it is simple yet made with a carefully chosen combination of ingredients, each important to the final flavor blend.

Preparation begins with the cubes of beef being browned, then slowly braised in a tomato-based liquid that's flavored with garlic. Later, oregano, a favorite Greek herb, and onion slices are added and the gentle cooking continues. Eggplant, one of the trio of vegetables that complete the stew, supplies another Greek accent.

Like most stews enjoyed from country to country, this hearty beef and vegetable combo will help to keep the food budget in check. Beef for stew is one of the more economical beef cuts and represents a good return on the meat dollar, because it contains no bone and little waste. Adding to the value of beef for stew is its excellent nutrient content. Beef is an excellent source of high-quality protein, the vitamins thiamin, niacin, riboflavin, B-6 and B-12. Especially important among its mineral contributions are iron and zinc.

ATHENIAN-STYLE BEEF STEW

1 1/2 pounds beef for stew, cut into 1-inch pieces

1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons cooking fat
1 can (16 ounces) tomatoes
Water
1 clove garlic, minced
1 medium onion, sliced
1/2 teaspoon oregano leaves

1 package (10 ounces) frozen peas, blanched
1/2 large eggplant, cut in 1/2-inch slices, pared and quartered (approximately 8 ounces)

Combine flour, salt and pepper; dredge meat, reserving remaining flour. Brown meat in cooking fat in Dutch oven. Pour off drippings. Drain tomato liquid into measure and add enough water to make one cup; add to meat. Stir in garlic, cover tightly and cook slowly 1 1/2 hours. Add onion and oregano, stirring to combine and continue cooking, covered, 15 minutes. Break up tomatoes and combine with reserved flour. Stir tomatoes, peas and eggplant into meat mixture; continue cooking, covered, stirring occasionally. 15 minutes or until meat is tender and eggplant is done. Makes 6 servings.

This Greek-inspired stew will be especially tasty when served with rice and a crisp mixed green salad. A loaf of crusty bread will complete the main course deliciously. For a dessert sure to please, serve a favorite Greek pastry made with phyllo such as Baklava or Pura.

Peeking at Pampa

Just learned that the young people's singing group called "Genesis," who recorded the sound track for the 1981 United Way campaign, includes Tim Jones, Mike Colville, Dean Birkes, Becky Fowler, Karri Coffee, Kerri Richardson, Julia Whitten, Keva Richardson, Penny Miller and Georgina Milum. They have sung for churches, for Kiwanis Clubs and for other area groups. They went on tour this summer.

Most of the Genesis singers are part of other choirs, too. Mike Colville works on sound for the choirs in his church and edits the radio broadcast on Monday for playback the next Sunday. He also plays in a brass ensemble. Pampa's a musical town and young singers are much appreciated.

I gave Betty Arrington's address as Canadian last Sunday. Wrong. She lives in Miami. All, or at least most, of the Locke family, of which Betty is a member, live in Miami or used to.

Heard that Jake Osborne couldn't find a man to drive his tractor. But his wife, Ruth, equal to every occasion and need, did the job for him. A friend said, "There's nothing Ruth can't do." We agree. And she probably looks neat and wears her gorgeous hairdo, on the tractor. Quite a gal.

Understand that Irl and Irene Smith had a great time this last week, attending his 55th high school class reunion. One of Irl's high school teachers was supposed to be present.

We've got a new four-generation family in Pampa. Barbara and George Whitten are now grandparents since their daughter and her husband had their baby. That made Lillian Whitten a great-grandmother. A friend said there's no happier family around.

More and more places seem to be offering soup and salad luncheons. See a lot of people enjoying them. Somebody said it's a nice way to lose weight — if you limit yourself to one bowl of each. But who can do that?

A new couple in town are Susan and Mark Kimsey. Believe they moved here from Perryton. Personable people. And they both sing in a choir.

A delightful buffet dance, called the Western Tea Ball, was enjoyed by a capacity crowd in the Heritage Room last Sunday night. Dress was casual and colorful. An eight-piece band played, mostly country-western, and included everybody's favorite numbers.

Hosts and hostesses, from Pampa and Miami, were Harold and Earline Baston, Walter and Irene Coffee, R.B. and Cookie Cooke, Jerry and Del Davis, Clara Dillman, Glen and Margaret Dowdy, Cecil and Marie Gill, Kenneth and Nona Gray, Malcolm Hinkle, Paulette Reed, Gail and Mary Jackson, Jimmy and Lorene McCormick, Max and Frances Louvier, and Richard and Mable Tunniell.

Guests were entranced by the graceful dancing of Cookie Cooke and her charming husband, "Jiggs," by the enjoyable antics of Malcolm Hinkle, by the nimble feet and smiling face of Clara Dillman — and by the gracious hospitality of all the hosts and hostesses. Understand the ham, turkey and other goodies were delicious.

Like to mention a Pampa achiever now and then. This time he's an especially prominent one, Mayor H. Ray Thompson. He's doing a great job for us and merits praise. Born in Amarillo, he came to Pampa when he was two years old. He was graduated from the University of Texas, served in the U.S. Navy and was in business with his father, the late Rayburn Thompson.

He's now in business for himself and is serving his second term as our mayor. His wife, Johnnie, was graduated from college in Denton and taught science in Pampa Middle School and High School. They have three children, two daughters in Dallas and a son at home. Ray's mother lives in Dallas and is a frequent visitor here. Remember my writing, several months ago, about the Race Day to be held here in October? The time is getting close. It's to be on the 31st, and will be a 10 K (6.2 miles) run. See last Sunday's News for the businesses that have forms and information regarding this race. We'd all better start exercising for this exciting event!

More next time. PAM.

Avoid salty foods for health reasons

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

They say you can judge a town by the people in it. If that's true, Pampa (and Gray County) would have to rate high on the list. Since beginning the second segment of my career Oct. 1, people have definitely been friendly and made my family feel very welcome. Thanks from all of us.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

It seems that anytime during the year, food can be overheard as a topic in almost any conversation. Salt restricted diets have become a concern of many people. For many persons, this may seem to be a major disaster. However, with a few minor changes in food preparation and menu planning, eating can remain an enjoyable activity.

Excess sodium in the diet is believed to contribute to high blood pressure and stroke in some people. If you want to limit sodium intake, limit the use of table salt and salty foods. This means cutting down on:

- (1) Foods prepared in brine, such as pickles, olives and sauerkraut.
- (2) Salty or smoked meat, such as bologna, corned beef, frankfurters, ham, luncheon meats, salt pork, sausage and smoked tongue.
- (3) Salty or smoked fish, such as anchovies, caviar, salted or dried cod, herring, sardines and smoked salmon.

(4) Snack items such as potato chips, pretzels, salted popcorn and salted nuts and crackers.

(5) Bouillon cubes, seasoned salts; soy, Worcestershire and barbecue sauces.

(6) Cheeses, especially processed types.

(7) Canned and instant soups.

(8) Prepared horseradish, catsup mustard.

FALL FESTIVAL OF PRODUCE

Fall is upon us again and with it comes a festive selection of produce. The conscientious consumer will take advantage of the fresh produce that is reasonably priced and of the best quality at the height of its season.

Root vegetables offer great possibilities. Yams and sweet potatoes come from different plants, but when cooked, the flavors are almost impossible to distinguish. In carrots and beets, as well as sweet potatoes, look for roots that are firm and small to medium in size. The larger roots are an indication of poor quality.

These vegetables store best if unwashed until ready for use. Beets are cooked with the peel and 1 to 2 inches of the stem intact to reduce vitamin and color loss.

Cabbage, eggplant and peppers are all at their peak availability and flavor this time of year. But that is where the similarity ends because each has a distinctly different flavor. The bell pepper and eggplant, which are commonly considered vegetables, are actually fruits and should have smooth, unblemished skin. Soft spots are a sign that decay has begun. Characteristically, cabbage is firm and heavy for its size.

DID YOU MAIL THE CARD? Along with items such as small electric kitchen appliances, personal care appliances and shop tools, one usually finds a warranty or guarantee card. For the item in question to be covered by the guarantee, this card must be filled out and returned to the manufacturer. Should the item not perform properly, the company would follow through on its claims as stated in the warranty. However, if you do not mail the card and the item is faulty, you have no claim to service. It is also a good idea to make a copy of the warranty card to keep in your personal files. Remember — protect yourself — mail warranty cards immediately.

Sabin continues fight against polio

By PETER MUELLO
RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Dr. Albert Sabin, the discoverer of oral polio vaccine, is still going strong at 75 in his crusade to stamp out polio, and he cites Brazil as an example for other disease-ridden tropical countries to follow. Sabin recently sat down with The Associated Press here to evaluate the success of his lifelong campaign against the dreaded children's disease — and to talk about his plans for the future. "The problem of eradicating certain diseases remains a challenge," the American scientist admitted. "For example, only in the past five years have we come to know how much more polio there really is, especially in the tropics."

But he added, "It's just a question of finding the right strategy, the right tactics." Sabin's strategy certainly worked in Brazil. In August he led the second annual mass vaccination campaign against polio, which used his revolutionary distribution plan. The program mobilized nearly 400,000 non-professional volunteers and brought the vaccine to 16.4 million children under 5 throughout this continent-sized country. Sabin said he would urge the World Health Organization to bring representatives of other tropical countries where polio is a problem to Brazil, to learn how this country ran its campaign. "If Brazil, with its huge area, can get organized, the other countries can learn," he said. Sabin has special ties to this South American nation. His wife is a Brazilian. And his frequent visits here have made his portly white-bearded figure familiar to everyday citizens, who stop him on the street and thank him for his efforts on behalf of Brazilians. But Sabin's work has taken him all over the world, ever since he started researching polio as a medical school graduate in 1931. During World War II, as a member of a U.S. surgeon general's team, Sabin traveled to war zones in North Africa, the Pacific and the Far East. There he got to know firsthand the problem of polio in the tropics. After the war he went on to Ceylon and India, and later to the Soviet Union and China. "China was the great eye-

Leading a lady DJ's life - no coffee breaks, sick time

NEW YORK (NEA) — Some job: No coffee breaks, no sick days (aside from laryngitis, the only permissible sickness), often bizarre hours and then, suddenly, you may get fired — another grisly aspect of being a disc jockey. "Your job is determined by how many people like you and want to listen, so there's no security," says Maureen Flaherty, 28, a DJ at WCMF in Rochester, N.Y., where 1 million people can hear her weekdays from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. "Of course, there are lots of jobs all the time in the trade papers and if you're qualified, you've got a good shot if you're a woman," she continues, "but you have to be willing to go where the job is."

And most are in small or medium-size "markets" like Rochester where the pay is only, perhaps, $15,000 to $20,000, she says. "I'm here only because my husband is program director of the station," she admits. Otherwise, she might still be in Philadelphia where she learned disc jockeying at the University of Pennsylvania and, in her senior year, went to work for a local FM station that wanted a female rock 'n' roll DJ. Better still, she might be in New York or Los Angeles or some other plum market where the competition is fiercer but the pay much sweeter. In any case, although not even the American Federation of Radio and Television Artists can estimate the number of female DJs working at the country's 9,000 or so stations, womanly tones on the air no longer astound in most places. The women emitting them, however, like their male counterparts, require skills beyond vocal grace: a knowledge of the music they're playing, obviously, but moreover, general knowledge. "You have to have something to say because you're supposed to be the listener's friend and keep him company," says Carol Miller, who for the past 10 years has been WPLJ-FM's voice in New York weeknights from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. And what you're saying must come out clearly and convey the impression that while you're saying it, you're sitting there, feet up, polishing your nails.

Talk about unreality. Says Ms. Flaherty: "The pressure can be intense because everything happens at once in the studio. First, you can't work from a script or pre-plan anything so you're looking over the log of what the previous DJ played so you don't repeat something. Then, while you're thinking about what you're going to play next because the current record is running out, you're also looking for something interesting to say for the next break.

"In the middle of all this, a secretary may come in and say, 'There's a mistake in this commercial.' If you go on the air with that, it can be goodbye, job. So you're working the entire time you're off the air to sound calm and relaxed when you open the mike. "Nevertheless, there are always days when your mouth doesn't work properly and you stumble on your own name," she says. "Frequently, you get into a sentence you can't end or you push the wrong button. In the beginning, I used to be devastated when I made a mistake, but that cripples you. You have to be able to turn around and say, 'Forget it,' and go on."

What's more, adds Ms. Miller, you've got to be able to add. "You're constantly watching the clock so that your records don't run into a commercial or a newscast. Say I have five minutes to go, I'll look through the card catalog for a record that runs, say, three minutes and 25 seconds, and time the following one to end 20 or 30 seconds early so I can lead into the news."

Since the news is new, obviously, and nothing that can be rehearsed, the ability to read well "cold" is essential — as is an aptitude for turning into Barbara Walters on command. "Sometimes you're warned a day or two ahead, but often someone comes in while you're on the air and says, 'Incidentally, you're interviewing Eric Clapton in 10 minutes. He's in town to do a show or plug a new album.'"

Then, there's feedback to contend with. Says Ms. Miller: "You have to be able to take criticism without going out the window. One night, the program director might call to say, 'I didn't like what you just said on the air.' Or, in one of our biweekly meetings when he plays a tape of my voice and reviews my performance, he might say, 'That was bad.' You have to be able to say, 'OK, I'll change that.' You can't get all bent out of shape." You can, however, fortify yourself with other career options in case the essential excitement and fun of the job dissipate entirely.

New drug may extend life for hypertension sufferers

HOUSTON — New drugs being tested at Baylor College of Medicine may extend the lives of people with high blood pressure (hypertension), says a Baylor specialist in blood vessel disease.

The new drugs undergoing clinical testing at Baylor's National Heart and Blood Vessel Research and Demonstration Center offer hope of better blood pressure control with fewer bad side effects than drugs now in use.

"Hypertension affects 50 to 60 million Americans and is the leading preventable cause of death and disease," said James Pool, M.D., assistant professor of medicine at Baylor.

Although there is no known cure for hypertension, a major risk factor in heart disease, stroke and kidney failure, it can be controlled with diet and drugs.

The new drugs are important because some present hypertension drugs aggravate other medical conditions or have side effects ranging from headache and sleepiness to impotence. One group of drugs can cause cold hands and feet, a major discomfort in winter.

Advances that could cause patients to be more willing to take drugs for high blood pressure are coming at a critical time, Pool said, because recent studies show that even mild hypertension can shorten life.

"Before these studies, doctors wondered if borderline cases should be treated. The answer is clear now: They need to be treated," he said.

Until better drugs are available, he advised those who have problems with their medicine to tell their doctor, who can probably change the dose or prescribe a different drug. People with high blood pressure often don't feel sick, Pool said, because they can't "feel" any ill effects, which is why the disorder is sometimes called "the silent killer."

High pressure slowly injures the cells that line blood vessel walls. As the body repairs the injury with new cells, fatty substances such as cholesterol accumulate.

Redecorating rule: Always be flexible

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Once each month Mary Gilliatt performs a minor miracle for readers of an English decorating magazine.

She goes into someone's home and redoes one room, using the family's existing furnishings. The results are published in the magazine as its room of the month.

"I love doing it, not least of all because the people are so grateful," said the English designer and author whose new decorating book recently was released in the United States.

The immediate improvements possible with existing possessions and some new paint, wallpaper and accessories are all the proof needed that most average homes could look better with the application of some imagination and forethought, says the designer.

"A curiously large number of people seem just to accept the limitations of their home when they could make an improvement," she noted in an interview. The secret is to be flexible, to question convention and to have no rigid ideas when it comes to the function of a room.

"One starts by observing the ground rule of design — good use of space," she said.

Only after assessing the space available does it make sense to make decisions about how to manipulate that space, whether cosmetically or structurally or both, added Ms. Gilliatt.

Having given some thought to the roadblocks that stymie those who would like to improve their living quarters, the designer has concluded that confusion and embarrassment are at the root of the problem.

Many practical questions have a single right answer — balancing one's checkbook, street directions or a recipe, for example.

Decorating one's home, however, does not have a single correct solution. There are alternatives, based on one's own taste, the materials available and the space available.

To illustrate these alternatives, she hit upon the idea of showing several plans for the same room in her new work, "The Decorating Book."

"People get terribly confused when they look at beautiful pictures," she has found. "They may say, 'It's nice, but it's nothing like my room,' and then turn the page and move on, unassisted by the lessons that may be contained in the picture."

"So, in this book, I provided duplicate schemes for some typical problem rooms, long, narrow rooms, old-fashioned stairwells, featureless rooms, small bedrooms. The solutions range from cozy to modern. There is no right one. It is a question of a person's taste — what appeals to that individual."

Other problems that beset the individual without training in interior design include an inability to visualize furniture and other items in three dimensions, nervousness at the enormity of the decisions to be made, a feeling of discomfort with an

CHEESE PIE

My sister Phyllis concocted this for her friends who are on sodium-reduced diet. 9-inch store-bought frozen pie shell, thawed

2 large eggs
1/2 cup herb-flavored fine dry bread crumbs
2-ounce container no-salt low-fat cottage cheese
1/2 cup shredded (medium-fine) Jack, cheddar or Swiss cheese
1/2 teaspoon onion powder
2 tablespoons minced fresh or frozen dill weed
Prick piecrust; bake in a preheated 400-degree oven 18 to 20 minutes. Remove from oven and reduce oven heat to 350 degrees. Beat eggs until yolks and whites are combined; add cup of the bread crumbs, the cheese and Jack cheese, onion powder and dill and stir thoroughly. Turn into pie shell. Sprinkle remaining 1/2 cup bread crumbs over top. Bake in 350-degree oven until a thermometer inserted near the center reads out clean — 50 minutes. Stand 5 minutes before cutting. Makes 5 main-dish servings.

inability to talk to sales personnel and ignorance of what is available in home furnishings.

She has addressed each of these problems in her book. A supplement provides examples of how to schedule renovation and furnishing projects and a removable section with three-dimensional graph paper and cutouts of typical furniture and fittings shapes.

A glossary of furniture terms and a brief history of furniture design are intended to make readers more at ease with terminology. A sample book with colored illustrations of typical wall coverings, floor coverings and other materials is designed to acquaint consumers with the type of materials on the market.

Ms. Gilliatt, who divides her time between England and a Connecticut farmhouse, said the samples in this section of her book are all available in the United States.

"The Decorating Book" is published by Pantheon Books, New York.

Mending Mature Marriage

Long life means long marriage

By LOUISE PIERCE

"DEAR LOUISE: You talk like you and Otis expect to live to be 100. Do you? And how happy do you think you'll be if you do? D.N."

DEAR D.N.: We expect to be as happy as we are now — and that's completely content with each other and with the life we hope to continue until then and longer.

I base my hope and my belief on many authorities' opinions. One of these is Dr. Robert N. Butler, director of the National Institute on Aging, writing in the U.S. News and World Report for Aug. 24, 1981.

He says, "Most gerontologists feel the natural or inherent genetic limit for human beings is about 100 years. In this country, life expectancy at birth is 73 if you lump men and women together. We have dramatically increased life expectancy since the turn of the century, when men expected to live to be 47 and women to 48."

"Much of our research is directed at understanding the basic physiology of the aging process. Under way at our institute, for example, is a comprehensive longitudinal study of 1200 people from the late teens to persons in the 90s. We are looking at body functions, emotional well-being, lifestyles. This is one step toward finding ways to extend life to its natural limit. So far, we haven't found any biological reason NOT to live to be 110."

The matter of body functions is one we can all control, at least to some degree. We can have regular physicals, mind our doctors, eat right and exercise. Otis and I do all these things. Emotionally, we are devoted to each other. Our lifestyle is right for us, we believe. We have fun partying, dancing, visiting with friends, entertaining and being entertained. We both work hard at jobs we love.

Yes, we hope to live to be 100 — and if we do, we feel sure we'll be as happy as we are now.

"DEAR LOUISE: Doesn't everybody get a little senile as they get older? My wife, S., don't know when I holler at her to do something like cleaning the cobwebs or dusting the furniture. She had a physical and we found out her hearing is fine. She just don't respond when I holler. Isn't she getting senile? S.W."

DEAR S.W.: Not necessarily. Authorities I have quoted before say that only five percent of the people are in nursing homes — and that, of all people who survive past 65, only one-fifth will ever be in a nursing home. That means that 80 percent of older people will never live in such a place. Dr. Butler says that if we develop new interests, avoid tobacco, use alcohol only in moderation and enjoy informal social contacts, we should enjoy older age free of senility.

As for you, S.W., is it possible that you may be the cause of your wife's ignoring your hollering? Have you shouted at her so long that she has learned to ignore your fits of temper? If so, you would surely get her attention by kindness, by suggesting the cleaning without shouting at her — or by shaming her into the job by doing it yourself.

I try to keep our house clean. But sometimes my work gets in the way of cleaning — and Otis, bless him, does the housework without asking me to. When I see him dusting, I jump up and help. He doesn't have to yell at me. He just points out my lick-and-a-promise housekeeping. It's all I need.

That way, we have no bitter words, no angry faces.

Kindness can achieve more than hollering.

DEAR LOUISE: Say we have to be taken care of, some day — and we may have to because my husband and I are close to 80 and seem to be wearing out. Are nursing homes getting better than they used to be? C.G."

DEAR C.G.: From what I hear, yes indeed, they are. Or at least they are supposed to be. The National Institute on Aging used to have a budget of only $5.9 million. In 1975, their budget was $76 million. I assume it is larger now. They support research programs in 21 medical schools. They plan to develop teaching nursing homes similar to teaching hospitals.

Most states have codes of care, cleanliness and kindness. They usually have regular inspections. If patients have complaints, they can report them to the authorities.

I believe you need not worry if you visit the available homes in your area and select the one that best suits you, if that time ever comes — which we hope it won't.

Barriers hinder Japan's disabled

By DEBORAH SMITH Associated Press Writer TOKYO (AP) — Even for the able - bodied, Japan's twice - daily commuter rush can be frustrating, even dangerous, as passengers crowd trains and subways to three times their capacity. For the handicapped — especially wheelchair users — it can be a nightmare.

During the United Nations' International Year of Disabled Persons, the handicapped have received wide coverage in the Japanese press, and a recent nationwide 24 - hour fund - raising campaign earned 388 million yen ($1.7 million).

But in Japan, the handicapped are rarely seen, hampered from venturing outside their homes by physical and cultural barriers.

Japan's estimated 2 million disabled adults have difficulty finding jobs despite a 1976 law requiring companies with more than 300 employees to hire at least 1.5 percent from the ranks of the disabled. Many companies prefer to pay the 30,000 yen ($130) a month fine for each person below the legal quota.

For those who can find work outside the home, getting there is one of the greatest difficulties.

For example, each day 1.2 million commuters pass through Shinjuku Station, Tokyo's busiest with several subway and rail lines. A steep flight of steps leads to the national railway's Yamanote line, the 21.5 - mile loop which encircles Tokyo proper and links dozens of other lines. There is no ramp or elevator for wheelchair users.

Masayoshi Imanishi, 32, who lost the use of his legs when he was 17, began a survey last February of 16 private and national railway lines in Tokyo. At 100 railway stations investigated so far, he found private lines generally better equipped with ramps for wheelchairs and station attendants willing to lend a helping hand. He plans to write a guide to 300 stations.

He said the disabled prefer to avoid rush hour crowds, but since most companies start work at the same time, handicapped people often must leave for work ahead of the 7-9 a.m. crush.

Mitsunobu Katsuya, 33, a muscular dystrophy victim who has used a wheelchair for 13 years, said, "Actually, I like stairs. Before the steps, I contact many people who see my difficulty in reaching the train and understand the problems we wheelchair users have. Many people help me then."

He is a part - time worker for a public office. "Handicapped people in Japan must go into the society — it's the first problem we must solve. Architectural barriers are the next problem. Few handicapped people make an effort to participate in society."

Shoji Nakanishi, injured in a motorcycle accident 12 years ago, said he uses a taxi which can hold his wheelchair when he attends a sociology course at Tokyo University. It meets weekly but he can afford to pay cab fare only once a month.

He works at home, tutoring children in math and typing documents which his wife picks up and delivers.

Dear Abby

Doctor raises patient's temper

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I had a bad pain in my back, so I picked the name of a chiropractor out of the Yellow Pages and phoned for an appointment.

He spent about half an hour taking X-rays but he didn't even touch my back. He told me to talk to his receptionist about setting up "some appointments." I told him all I wanted was one adjustment to relieve the pain in my back, but he insisted I talk to his receptionist anyway, so I did. She said the doctor couldn't give me just one treatment — I would need a series of 12!

I asked her how much it would cost, and she said $200. I asked her why the doctor couldn't give me only one treatment while I was there, and she said chiropractors don't work that way. I told her I didn't have that kind of money and I asked to see the doctor. She said he was "busy," so I started to leave. She then said, "The X-rays are $55 — cash only; we don't accept checks."

I was furious. I threw $50 on her desk and walked out. What I want to know is this: Where can a person call or write to complain about this kind of ripoff? It's chiropractors like this one who give the profession a bad name.

MAD IN MICHIGAN

DEAR MAD: There is a State Chiropractic Association in every state. Look in your telephone book under "State of Michigan." Write to the association in Lansing and file a complaint. There are unethical practitioners in every profession, and the ethical ones appreciate it when the unethical ones are reported.

DEAR ABBY: After 17 years of marriage, my husband passed away at age 41. He suffered from cancer for 13 months and died at home. I was left with four sons to raise. His co-workers gave a gift of money to my husband's sister, with instructions for her to outfit the children with clothes for school this fall.

I really think it was cruel of them to give my sister-in-law the money and leave me out. I would have enjoyed shopping for my children's school clothes. I can't understand why they wanted to hurt me that way after all I've been through. Now that all the clothes are bought, should I send my own money back to them?

VERY HURT

DEAR HURT: I'm sure your husband's co-workers did not mean to hurt you. Knowing how much you had been through caring for your beloved during his long illness, they thought it would be a kindness to relieve you of the chore of shopping for your children's school clothes. Thank them for their kindness, for a kindness it was. Good luck and God bless.

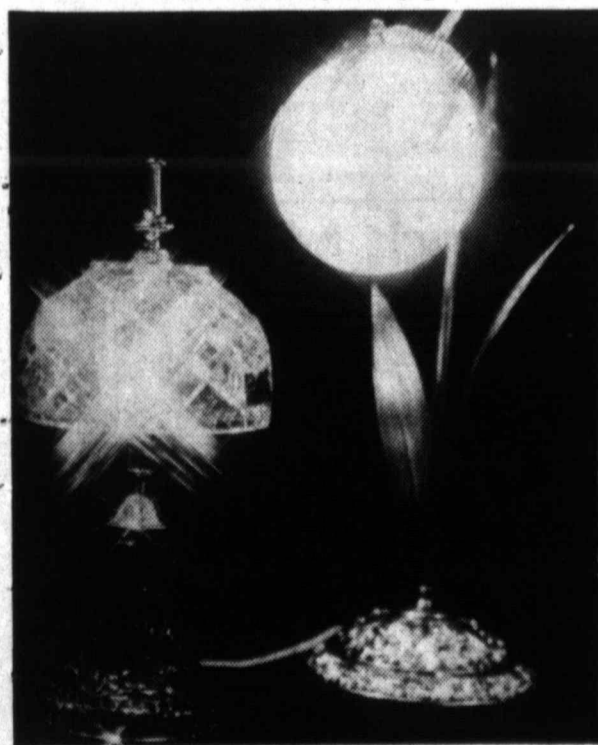

DEAR ABBY: I have a 9-year-old stepdaughter. (I'll call her Tammy.) Her father and I have custody. My problem is that her natural mother (I'll call her Doris) is getting married the third time next month. Doris wants Tammy to be the

Governors conference a placebo, no cure

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The Border Governors Conference was given advance billing as the medicine that would cure the ills of the U.S.-Mexico border. But what border residents of both countries got was more of an expensive placebo than a miracle cure.

The governors of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California and the six Mexican border states mixed their drug, adding a healthy dose of rhetoric, a dash of pomp, a spoonful of media coverage, a shake of the hand and a pat on the back.

But they forgot the active ingredient — concrete decisions on the most sensitive and significant border maladies such as immigration, drug trafficking and crime.

Rick Montoya, regional development director for Texas Gov. Bill Clements, said the cost of the conference would be "substantially less" than the $250,000 the U.S. Department of Commerce provided from leftover funds of the now-defunct Southwest Border Regional Commission.

But each of the American governors paid their and their entourage's expenses, including private airplane travel to El Paso and accommodations. That total, still untallied, will come from state taxes rather than federal money.

What the taxpayers got for their money was a spectacle that would have made movie mogul Louis B. Mayer envious. As the country weeklies used to say, "A good time was had by all."

The conference opened with an Army orchestra playing the theme from "Star Wars." As a deep-voiced emcee introduced each governor, spotlights followed them to their seats behind a long table at the El Paso Civic Center Theater. Behind them a huge, round sign bore full-color seals of both countries and all 10 states.

The governors and more than 600 "guests" watched Clements and Gov. Oscar Ornelas of Chihuahua, the conference co-chairmen, light a "Flame of Friendship" that burned throughout the meeting.

That night, the governors were treated to cocktails, steak dinners, ballet, western dance and symphony music.

Montoya said the American governors brought more than 30 aides to the conference and the Mexicans brought about the same number.

Between events, governors held impromptu news conferences with clusters of reporters, photographers, television cameramen and security agents.

Each of the estimated 200 media representatives was given a handsome vinyl notebook embossed with the seals of both countries and filled with everything needed for the conference, including a pencil. Printing costs for the conference were more than $26,000, Montoya said.

More printing is to be done. The resolutions signed by the governors at the closing ceremony will be printed and distributed to the media and to federal officials on both sides of the border.

The resolutions, the only concrete accomplishments of the conference, were predictable. One set the site and a tentative date for next year's conference. Another praised President Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez-Portillo for trying to strengthen the ties between the countries. A third adopted recommendations made by committees that had worked for a year to find solutions to border problems ranging from pollution to tourism.

Discussion of touchier issues was held in private sessions with only the governors, their aides and federal officials allowed past the security men.

But after hours of talk, the governors emerged from the meeting with one conclusion — that they couldn't reach any conclusions.

There were several reasons why the governors were unable to agree on the issues.

First, there was President Reagan's proposed immigration reform policy, particularly the proposed guest worker program which would allow about 50,000 Mexican nationals to legally hold temporary jobs in the United States.

Clements said before the conference that he hoped the governors would endorse the proposal. The result was that the immigration issue overshadowed everything else considered at the session.

The governors, particularly Clements and Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, clashed over the issue. The governors used nearly all of their private discussion time talking about immigration, giving short shrift to other issues such as drug trafficking, water resources and crime, resulting in no decisions on any of the issues.

Second, there were personality conflicts between the American governors. Clements, a Republican, and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., a Democrat, still are simmering over their conflict on the Mediterranean fruit fly issue. Clements and Babbitt, described by one aide as having "a historical difference of opinion, drew verbal swords on the immigration issue.

Clements' announcement that he supported the Reagan plan in concept and wanted the governors to reach a decision on it forced Babbitt to come up with an alternative proposal, which he wrote during his flight to the conference.

Both governors presented their views during the private meeting, putting New Mexico Gov. Bruce King in the uncomfortable position of peacekeeper.

The personality conflict also cropped up on the guest lists. Clements failed to invite former League of United Latin American Citizens president Ruben Bonilla and Democratic state Rep. Paul Moreno of El Paso to the conference. So Babbitt invited them as his guests, giving him and Clements something else to bicker about.

The final obstacle to decision-making was the inability of the Mexican governors to take stands on issues. Mexican governors are reluctant to make public statements that might find disfavor with federal officials. As Clements told reporters, "They are reluctant to get out in front of the president."

Because of the conflicts between the American governors and the reticence of the Mexican governors, the only decisions made — the committee reports — were worked out by staff members rather than the governors themselves.

The reports had been edited so that nothing in them would be objectionable to the governors, so they were hygienic. Most of them recommended formation of permanent committees to further study and monitor the problems.

Perhaps the "boldest" recommendations called for further negotiations for the United States to buy Mexican oil and for increasing the staffs at U.S. Customs stations to make it easier for Mexicans to legally cross the border.

The recommendations will be sent to federal officials in both countries and, where applicable, will be enacted by the states, the governors said.

Armstrong names campaign treasurer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong has designated Austin businessman Chris Harte as his campaign treasurer in a move toward a possible governor's race.

Harte, 33, is a former Corpus Christi resident who now has investment and business interests. He is the son of Ed Harte, publisher of the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

Armstrong, a Democrat, is expected to announce his political plans after the Nov. 3 election on constitutional amendments, including one extending the veterans' land program.

He already has announced he will not run for re-election as land commissioner.

Armstrong said he wanted to devote his attention to campaigning for the veterans' land amendment before starting any political race of his own.

"I'm getting a lot of encouragement, and some people — believe it or not — want to send money. I don't want all that enthusiasm to get ahead of the legal requirements," Armstrong said Thursday in designating his campaign treasurer.

Campaign contributions may not be received, and expenditures may not be made, until a candidate has filed the name of his or her campaign treasurer with the secretary of state.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

October 12, 1981

This coming year you likely to form several partnerships for collective ventures. Where your association is wise, success is likely. Where your choice is faulty, problems may result.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Select companions today whose interests are in harmony with yours. Persons who don't operate on your wavelength could prove to be especially frustrating. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Usually you're realistic, recognize conditions for what they are and deal with them accordingly, but today you may treat a serious situation far too lightly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Make it a point to steer clear of negative thinkers today. Being with the wrong types could dampen your enthusiasm for something good you have going.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be careful today of a tendency to take your frustrations out on an innocent bystander. If you do you'll cause two problems for yourself, instead of one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't use as a sounding board one who always sees faults in your ideas, instead of their values. He or she may be even more critical today.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're a generous person and this is admirable, but you must be careful today not to go overboard for one who is unappreciative and never reciprocates.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Strive to be cooperative in important one-to-one relationships today. If you take an unyielding position, you'll cause associates to behave likewise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may have more responsibilities than usual today because coworkers might try to shift their burdens to you. Let everyone carry his or her own weight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Avoid social situations today which may attract someone with whom you've had problems. There's a chance the old wound could be reopened.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Major achievements are possible today, but if you have to make your gains at the expense of others you'd better ask yourself if it's worth the price.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Normally you operate self-assuredly, but today you may fail to put your plans or ideas into action due to a lack of faith in yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be prudent in your business and financial dealings today. There's a possibility you could come out on the short end against a shrewd bargainer.

Jaclyn Smith was a last minute choice

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Jaclyn Smith, her bare feet propped on a coffee table, explains that she was virtually a last-minute choice to play Jacqueline Kennedy.

"I think they wanted to go with an unknown," she says. "There was a long search and they tested a lot of people."

"They asked me to do a photo test, in wigs and different clothes. I didn't know if I wanted to test. I hadn't read the script. I'd just gotten back from Spain, so they sent me a script. I loved it. Then I wondered if I could do it."

She did it, and her title role in the ABC movie "Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy" is her most demanding in a career that includes "Charlie's Angels," "The Users" and "Night Kill."

Miss Smith sits on a couch in one of the few finished rooms in her house in Bel-Air, which is under reconstruction. In a poplin shirt worn bloused over her tiny waist, a pair of green pants banded at the cuffs, and with those bare feet, she is the antithesis of the chic First Lady of the early 1960s. She talks in a slow Texas drawl, a diphthong's throw away from the clipped accent she learned for the film.

In wigs and the 83 costumes created for the movie, and with the accent, she bears a close resemblance to Mrs. Kennedy (who is now Jacqueline Onassis, but the movie ends shortly after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy).

Writer-director Steven Gethers calls the three-hour movie a love story. Producer Louis Rudolph calls it an "affectionate portrait." Both say one reason they undertook the film was to correct what they saw as a wrongful image of her as a cold, aloof woman who spends more on clothes than most people make in a lifetime.

Gethers says it's an unauthorized version. "Neither she nor any Kennedy would approve an authorized version," he says. "What we're doing is a very positive portrait of her. She has been a rather maligned individual."

He says every person he talked to during his research spoke of her marvelous sense of humor. She is also a woman of will and determination, as illustrated in the movie by her standing head-to-toe with Joseph Kennedy Sr.

Gethers also concentrates on her romance with the brash young congressman from Massachusetts. On first meeting, he confidently informs her that one day he will be president.

Gethers vouches for the film's accuracy. The annotations substantiating every scene run longer than the script itself.

Barbara Carrera's goal is one of glamour

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — She may not be able to bring back glamour single-handedly, but who's talking about hands, anyhow?

Her name is Barbara Carrera and she is a Nicaraguan-born beauty, a New York-trained model, a Hollywood-experienced actress and a worldwide jet-setter and traipsier. And she feels cheated because she has come along in an era in which glamour and excitement are goodies of the past.

She wants to do something about that: She wants to restore Hollywood glamour and bring back the excitement of the stars.

"Maybe it's time for a new cycle," she says. "Maybe it's time for a new breed of glamorous star to come back. Who wants to pay to see the girl next door?"

"I'd love to be the one to start the comeback of glamour to Hollywood."

She could do it. Years ago Hollywood would have grabbed her and started some stories, laid down a cloak of mystery. And Barbara Carrera would have swept to stardom on that path.

"All I hear," she says, "is the way it used to be here. I feel like I've been cheated. Why must everything be so dull today? There is the clone attitude here — they want everybody to be the same."

There is nothing about her that is the same. You don't hear the band strike up "Send in the Clones" when she walks by.

"I'm not doing anything to show the world that I'm different," she says. "Because I am different! That's my big plus."

Let us investigate the difference. She is beautiful, but so are lots of other women. And yet, even here she is different — her beauty has overtones of mystery, her dark eyes seem to hide a myriad of secrets, her lips have a hint of a smile.

There is a whisper of accent in her speech — just enough to be intriguing.

There are the mysterious rumors about her private life, which once you see her, you can believe.

As for her professional credits, they are few but impressive. Since she turned actress after becoming a top New York model, she has done interesting things. Her best work has been on TV, in "Centennial" and "Masada."

Currently, she is on view in Disney's "Condorman," and she has just shot the remake of the Mickey Spillane story "I, the Jury."

"I'm still very new as an actress," she says. "I still have to earn my dues. But she is different — her beauty has overtones of mystery, her dark eyes seem to hide a myriad of secrets, her lips have a hint of a smile.

STAR AND GRANDSON. Two-time Oscar winner Bette Davis, in the role of a New England school teacher who is being forced into retirement, hands book to Ashley Hyman in scene from "Family Reunion," a four hour drama on NBC Sunday Night at the Movies. The film marks the debut of young Ashley, who in real life is Miss Davis' grandson. (AP Laserphoto)

Gardner McKay: dashing star

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Stories about him usually are of the whatever-happened-to variety. They begin: "Gardner McKay, dashing star of the old 'Adventures in Paradise' series, is a playwright now."

Well, he is. And his funny, touching "Sea Marks," about love, a lonely Irish fisherman and a lonely secretary in Liverpool, recently premiered off-Broadway, in Greenwich Village.

He used to live there, back in the Fifties, paying $25 a month then for an apartment in a condemned building. Fresh out of Cornell, he was a scuffling sculptor.

Then a photo of him alongside his sculpture appeared in Town and Country magazine. It touched off a sequence of events that led to an agent, a studio contract and stardom from 1959 to 1962.

As a South Seas schooner skipper in ABC's "Paradise," his launching included a color portrait on the cover of Life. It showed him as a handsome, manly but sensitive young hero. The headline:

How About Him, Girls? The New Challenger For American Good Looks.

Well, he survived that. And the jokes about his acting ability, or the lack thereof. But after his show folded, he quit acting, preferring to travel, to write and to teach writing.

Three years ago, he resurfaced as the drama critic for the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner, coming from a stint as a playwrighting instructor — he no longer does that — for a UCLA extension class.

Now he is back in New York. 30 one-act plays done, six full-length dramas in the trunk, and "Sea Marks" under way here after eight productions in other cities and a ninth on PBS.

My stays here keep getting longer — I think I'm trying to go East," muses McKay, 49, a bachelor whom the years have treated kindly. Still lean and handsome, time and the Hollywood ramble have given him a wry, amused manner.

Born in New York, he still lives in Los Angeles. But he has kind of a love-hate thing going with the City of Angels.

Is 3-D craze making comeback?

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — It has been almost 30 years since we had our last 3-D attack. Back in the early '50s, thousands of us trooped to the theaters, put on those silly glasses and watched a few totally inept movies — "Bwana Devil" and "House of Wax" were the prime examples.

In the interim, there have been a few vague attempts at making 3-D products, but, largely, the gimmick was forgotten. However — brace yourself! — it appears to be back.

Now showing in many theaters around the country is a western called "Comin' at Ya!" It stars Tony Anthony, Gene Quintano, Victoria Abril and Ricardo Palacios.

"The star of the movie," says Gene Quintano, "is 3-D. We made the picture to introduce the process, that's all."

Quintano was co-writer and co-executive producer of the film, as well as one of the stars. In the film, he plays one of the bad guys and he looks like a mess — unshaven, sloppy, dreadful. He is, however, good-looking, neat, clean. Shows you what 3-D (dirty, disheveled and dreadful?) can do.

Quintano says that he and Anthony, an old friend, have been 3-D nuts since the "Bwana Devil" and "House of Wax" days. They often mused, idly, about what went wrong with the system and why it died out as suddenly as it had developed.

"What went wrong," Quintano says, "is that there were all sorts of problems with those early 3-D systems. To make those movies required two cameras, and that was expensive and time-consuming. To show them, theaters had to have two projectors — also expensive."

"And the projectors had to be in perfect synchronization, and, all too often, they weren't. So it just sort of died out."

The system they developed — they call it "Dimensionscope" — is an attachment to a standard motion picture camera. Thus, there is little restriction to a camera's normal flexibility.

"We can't zoom yet, but we're working on it." They can use slow motion and do. In "Comin' at Ya!" there are slow motion 3-D shots that are intriguing.

Target champion

By MARCIA SMITH
Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS (AP) — Flushed and a little sweaty, Cathy Compton hurries into her air-conditioned office, takes a long pull on a cold can of Diet Dr Pepper and studies her bleeding hand.

Peeling back a small bandage, she scowls at her wound, caused by resting a revolver there for several hours, and apologizes for her glamourless policewoman's uniform. She knows, of course, that she would look prettier out of uniform and with a less severe haircut.

But then, let's not bring up any of those hackneyed ironies about pretty girls who do masculine things. Cathy Compton is pretty, with her strong cheekbones and thick-lashed green eyes, but what's most impressive about her is her steely self-confidence. She has the look of a woman who knows she can hit anything she shoots at.

That's what she's been doing this particular afternoon, shooting at human-shaped targets with a .38 caliber Smith and Wesson custom-made revolver. At 28, Cathy can shoot that revolver better than any policewoman in the country. She recently won the women's division of the National Police Revolver Championships — for the fourth time.

When she's not shooting, Cathy works as a police officer with the Department of Public Safety at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport or spends time at home with husband Jerry, a 17-year veteran of the Dallas Police Department. There are lots of things she likes to do — needlepoint, scuba diving, sky diving — but, she says, they don't call for the teeth-gritting intensity shooting does.

Cathy likes to do things that call for teeth gritting. "I never played basketball or softball or any normal sports," she said. "I was a warped child."

She grew up in Marietta, Ga., left home to study photography at the University of Georgia for a couple of years, then went to work as a bank teller in Cobb County. A policeman came to her window one day, told her there was an opening in the police department and suggested she apply.

"How much does it pay?" she asked him. When he told her 600 something dollars, she stopped counting money and strapped on a gun.

"I was making only 400 something at the bank," she explained.

Cathy never had held a gun or even seen one up close before she entered the police academy in Georgia. "It was natural to me," she said of the first time she held a revolver. "It was no mystery."

In 1975, in her first year as a police officer, Cathy decided to try her skill with a revolver against other policewomen in the national championship. She and three fellow officers — all male — went to Jackson, Miss., for the contest and, Cathy said, "I did terrible. I shot horribly. But I knew I had the potential and if I buckled down, I'd be good some day. That's when I decided to work on it."

The next year, she placed third in the women's division. She didn't compete in 1977. After meeting Jerry Compton at a pistol match in Alabama that year, she married him, moved to Dallas and entered the police academy here. There was no time for the national championships. When she tried again in 1978, she won the first of what would be four national titles. That's a record, she said.

Cathy shares her interest in guns and shooting with her husband Jerry is a gunsmith — he made the gun she uses in competition — and the two go deer and antelope hunting together. They both shoot at the National Rifle Association's high master skill level and in the municipal police category in the competitions.

Cathy says it's a coincidence that her favorite pastime and her job both call for good shooting skills. "In my work, I shoot for survival. In competition, I'm out there to punch tiny holes in paper — that's all. I separate the two completely."

As many paper targets as Cathy has hit, she has yet to shoot at a human being. "If I had to do it, I could. I don't want to shoot anyone, kill anyone, but I wouldn't hesitate if it was a life-or-death situation. I don't doubt that I can and would do it," she said.

It's easy to learn the skills necessary to shoot a gun, Cathy says. You need good vision and a firm grip. That's 40 percent. The other 60 percent is mental, Cathy says.

"You have to have desire. Sacrifices have to be made. No drinking or partying before you shoot. And I do physical training."

The three-day police revolver competition is strenuous: Cathy had to shoot 150 rounds (bullets) at seven, 15, 25 and 50 yards standing without support, kneeling, with her gun in the right hand and then in the left, sitting and lying down. Every phase was timed and called for reloading.

In this year's revolver competition, in Des Moines, Iowa, Cathy competed against 1,000 other police officers. Forty of those officers were women. She placed first, of course, among the women, and 13th in the overall competition.

And yes, someday she would like to be the first woman to place first overall.

"Coal is decreasing the increase. Fuel is the biggest cost factor in your monthly electric bill and that cost would be much higher if Southwestern had not begun a move away from gas as fuel. Even figuring the costs of transportation, regulation and environmental protection, coal is still a less expensive fuel than gas. SPS was a 100% natural gas-fired system as recently as 1976. Now more than 40% of the electricity we generate is coal-fired, and by 1985 more than half will be by coal. In this way, SPS will be able to continue to decrease the increase in your electric bill."

"How a heat pump works. The heat pump does just what the name implies. . . it pumps heat into your home in winter and out in summer. The electric heat pump consumes less energy than any other electric heating and cooling system. There is warmth in the air in winter (even at 0 degrees F), and the heat pump squeezes out every bit of that warmth. Supplemental electric heaters are used in the heat pump for extremely cold temperatures, but in the generally mild temperatures of our service area, the heat pump simply takes advantage of mother nature. This means savings to you while you enjoy the clean comfort of electric heating or air conditioning."

Allan Carleton, Heating & Air Conditioning Specialist, Amarillo

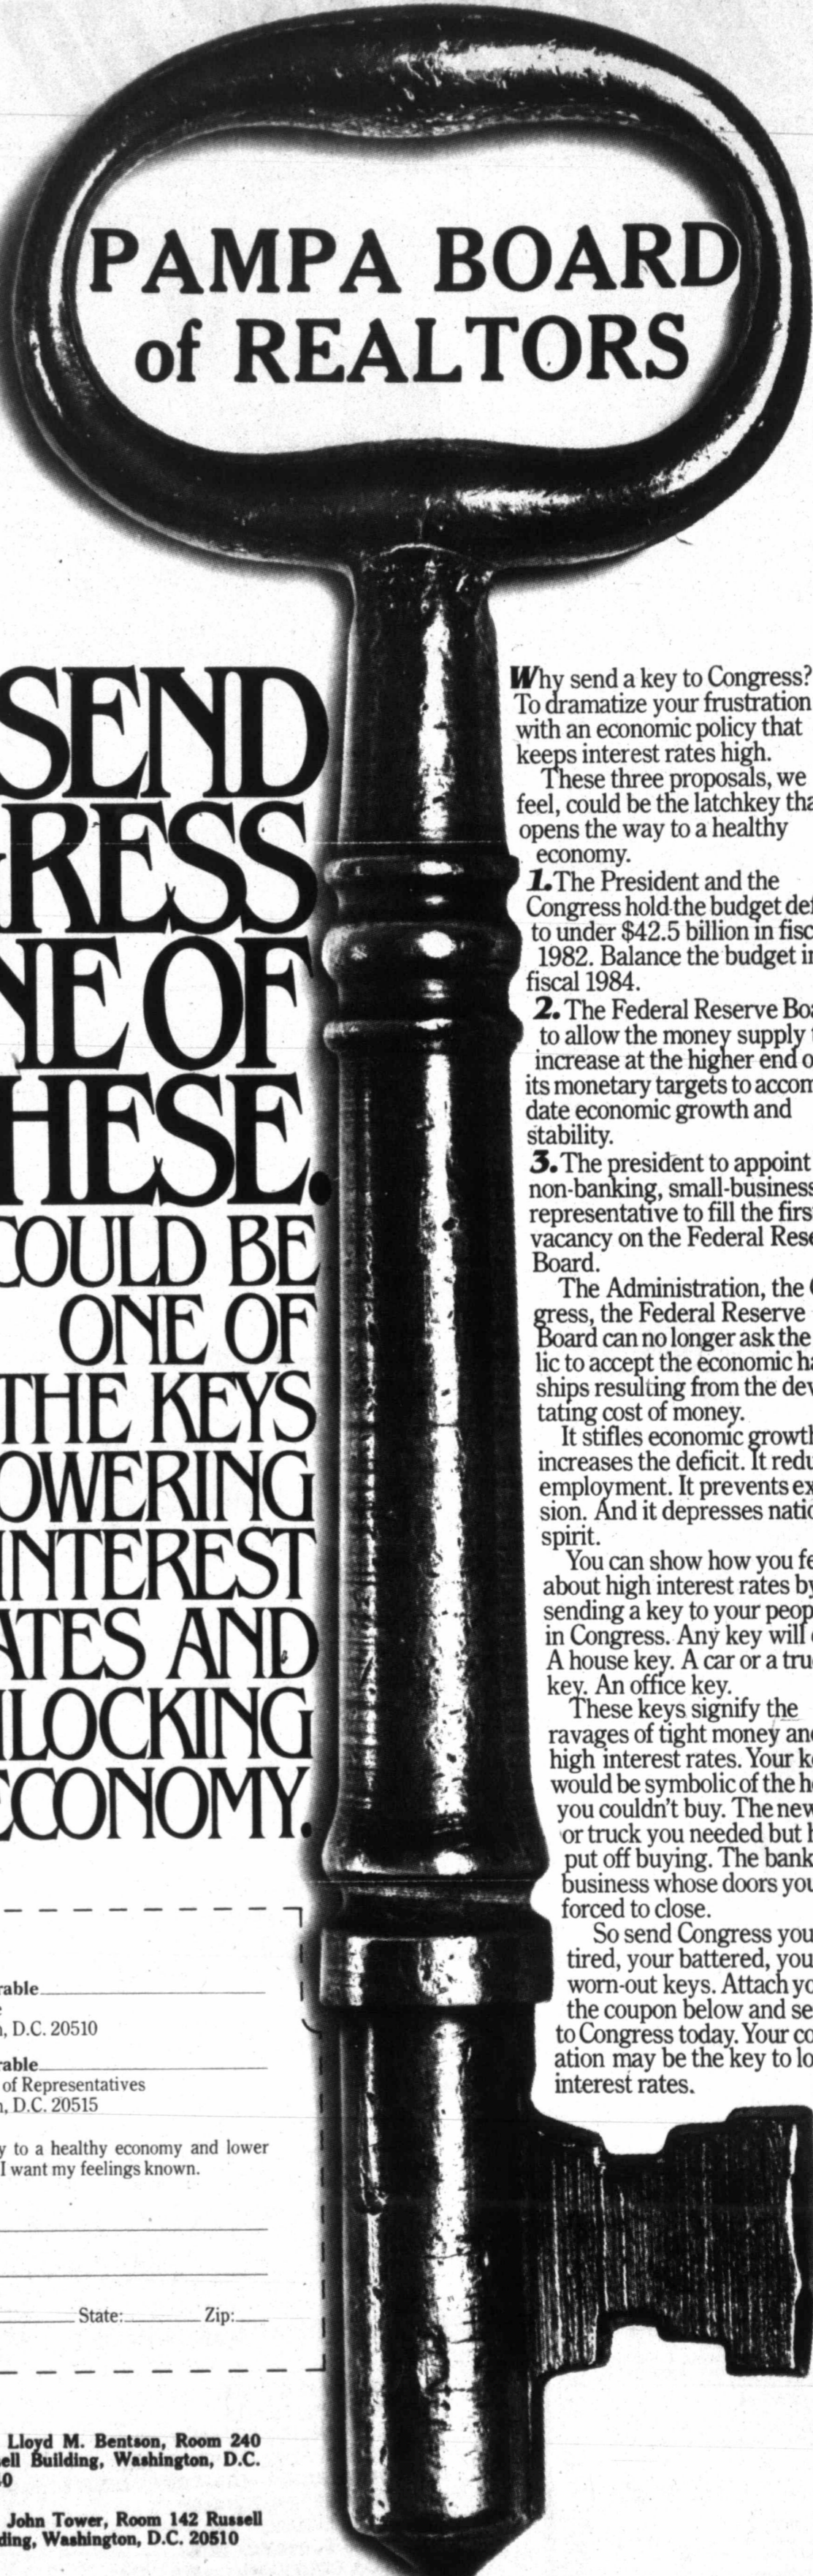

"One kilowatt-hour costs about 6¢. Your electric bill is figured on the number of kilowatt-hours of electricity you use. A kilowatt-hour is 1,000 watts of electric power used for one hour, so if you use a hair dryer for an hour you have used a kilowatt-hour of electricity. (Hair dryers use an average of 1,000 watts.) Today that kilowatt-hour costs about 6¢—less than it cost in 1927! In those days, electricity was used for lighting only. Today electricity does many other tasks for you and saves you time. . . and that's money."

SEND CONGRESS ONE OF THESE. IT COULD BE ONE OF THE KEYS TO LOWERING INTEREST RATES AND UNLOCKING THE ECONOMY.

Why send a key to Congress? To dramatize your frustration with an economic policy that keeps interest rates high.

These three proposals, we feel, could be the latchkey that opens the way to a healthy economy.

1. The President and the Congress hold the budget deficit to under $42.5 billion in fiscal 1982. Balance the budget in fiscal 1984.

2. The Federal Reserve Board to allow the money supply to increase at the higher end of its monetary targets to accommodate economic growth and stability.

3. The president to appoint a non-banking, small-business representative to fill the first vacancy on the Federal Reserve Board.

The Administration, the Congress, the Federal Reserve Board can no longer ask the public to accept the economic hardships resulting from the devastating cost of money.

It stifles economic growth. It increases the deficit. It reduces employment. It prevents expansion. And it depresses national spirit.

You can show how you feel about high interest rates by sending a key to your people in Congress. Any key will do. A house key. A car or a truck key. An office key.

These keys signify the ravages of tight money and high interest rates. Your key would be symbolic of the home you couldn't buy. The new car or truck you needed but had to put off buying. The bankrupt business whose doors you were forced to close.

So send Congress your tired, your battered, your worn-out keys. Attach yours to the coupon below and send it to Congress today. Your cooperation may be the key to lower interest rates.

TAPE YOUR KEY HERE.
