Sweden to release Soviet sub, likely carrying nuclear arms

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The Soviet submarine that ran aground 10 days ago in a restricted area near a Swedish navy base probably is armed with nuclear weapons and likely was on an illegal mission, Prime Minister Thorbjorn Falldin said today.

But he said Sweden would release the submarine.

"The violation was bad enough but worse is the fact that the submarine most likely carried nuclear warheads according to our investigation," Falldin told a news conference.

"Our investigation revealed Uranium-238 aboard the submarine. There is no other reasonable explanation. This is the most blatant violation in Sweden since World War II.

"Measures have been taken to escort the submarine out to international waters to the Soviet naval forces. This will be carried out as soon as the weather permits."

Falldin quoted Swedish defense research agency officials as saying that the uranium did not pose a threat to the population in the area.

It was not immediately clear how the Swedes detected the U-238, a prime ingredient in nuclear arms. The issue is particularly sensitive in the Nordic countries, which favor a nuclear-free zone in the Baltic, something the Kremlin says it too favors.

The commander in chief of the Swedish armed forces, Gen Lennart Ljung, excluded navigational error as the prime cause of the sub's intrusion in Swedish waters in his report to the government. Navigational error was the cause given by the sub's commander, Lt. Cmdr. Pyotr Gushin.

The report said that it was likely that the submarine deliberately violated Swedish territorial waters to carry out illegal activities.

Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Yakovlev said earlier, after an hour-long meeting with Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten, "The matter is settled. I am fairly satisfied. I don't think this will affect the relations between Sweden and the Soviet Union."

An official of Sweden's navy staff, Evert Dahlen, said frogmen were ordered to check the propellers and hull of the submarine, which were believed to have been slightly damaged when the vessel grounded Oct. 27 near Karlskrona naval base.

The day the submarine ran aground among islands 10 miles south of the Karlskrona naval base, the Swedish navy was testing new secret anti-submarine defenses in the area. The tests involved a "new anti-submarine torpedo and secret materials," Defense Staff spokesman Borje Johansson told The Associated Press.

However, navy spokesman Cmdr. Gunnar Rasmusson said the tests had been underway for several weeks, and he did not believe there was a direct connection between them and the Soviet intruder.

Launch delayed till next week

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A second effort to launch the shuttle Columbia on its return trip to space will probably be made next week, no earlier than Wednesday, a NASA official said today.

Columbia, perched on its pad and drenched by heavy rains after this Wednesday's close-to-ignition scrub, was undergoing intense examination today. Crews drained propellants and the astronauts practiced morning landings nearby.

George Page, the launch director, said Columbia's second countdown will pick up with 35 work hours to go, adding that NASA still is looking at a one-week delay as the minimum postponement for liftoff.

"I can't tell yet if it's earlier in the week or later," he said.

Page and other shuttle officials were to meet later today to assess the problem with a crucial hydraulic system that grounded Columbia just 31 seconds before Wednesday's scheduled takeoff on its unprecedented return trip to space.

Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly, who have waited so long to fly into orbit, were up early and flying in the skies above Kennedy Space Center, rehearsing landings on the KSC runway.

Overnight and into this morning, pad crews drained Columbia of its volatile propellants to give technicians a chance to reenter the orbiter and examine — eventually repair or swap — two clogged filters in a power unit.

NASA said overhaul would take a week, perhaps more. Probably more.

The weather might prohibit a launch in the next few days, anyway. Skies were overcast after Wednesday's scrub and finally opened up into deluge of rain that drenched Columbia and continued today.

Forecasters were keeping a close eye on Hurricane Katrina, now south of Cuba but moving north.

Columbia's technical problem, though it forced its launch postponement, went almost undetected. And, ironically, if it had not been discovered, NASA officials said the craft probably could have been launched on a successful test flight.

While correcting a late fuel tank pressure problem during a hold at

T-minus 31 seconds, launch control monitors detected high pressure in the lubricating oil systems of two of Columbia's three auxiliary power units — devices crucial to the ship's guidance on ascent and landing.

Specialists were not sure what the problem was. With a rainstorm approaching the launch pad and the astronauts tiring after five hours in Columbia's cockpit, they decided to postpone the shot.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced later that either water or hydrazine fuel had leaked into the lubricant, forming a waxy substance that may have clogged filters in the system.

The two problem units performed well on Columbia's first flight in April and their enclosed filters have been untouched since. A third had to be shut down because of trouble on that mission, and was replaced by a backup that caused no difficulty Wednesday.

Officials said the experience will cause them to take a closer look at APU servicing procedures after future flights. The units drive hydraulic systems to swivel the main engines on liftoff and to move the wing surfaces on takeoff and landing.

For now, officials were considering two courses: Remove the filters, flush the system and reserve it, or replace the APUs with backups. Either course would take several days.

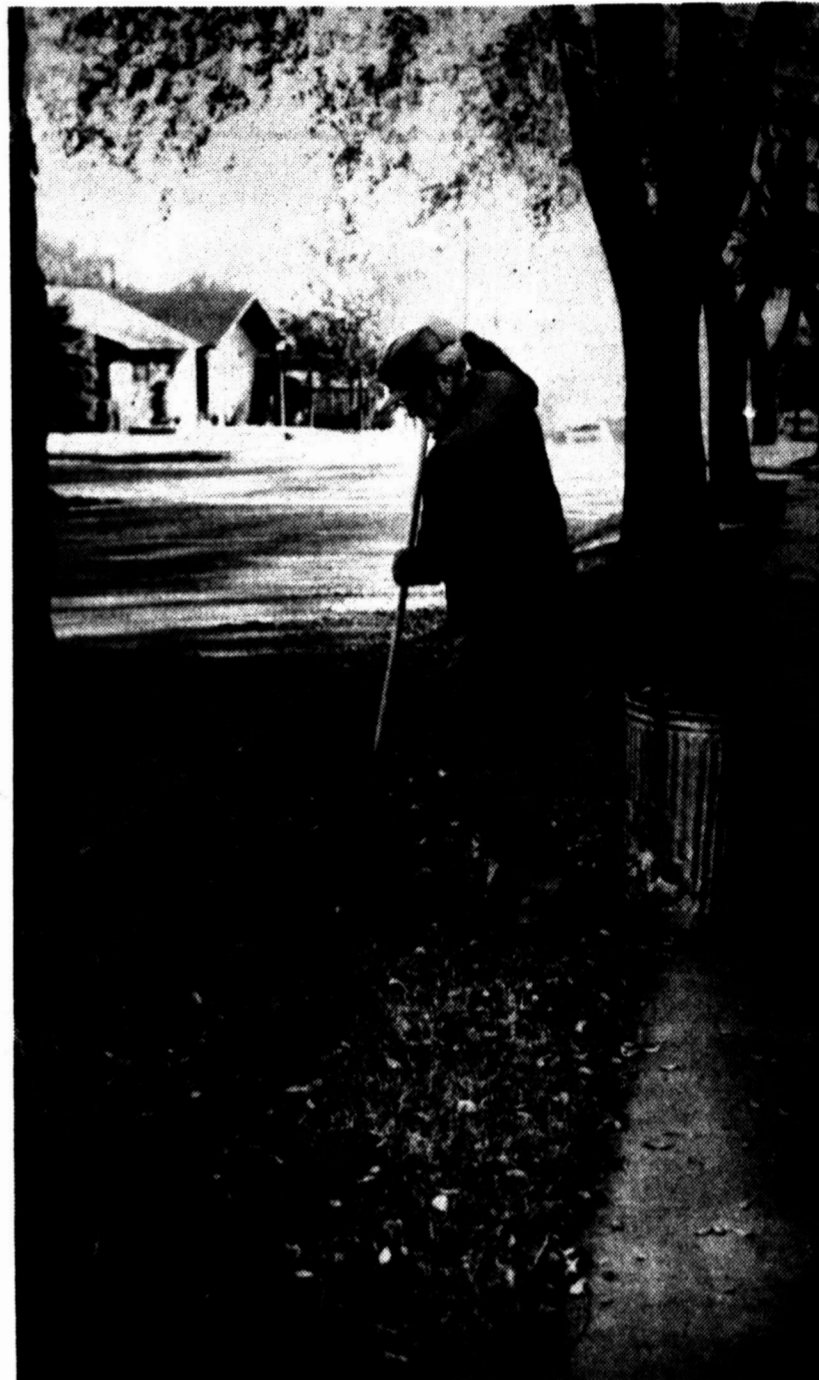

When that job is done, launch teams will have to start the four-day, four-hour countdown all over again, a count that had been perfect until the final minutes on Wednesday.

The count began to unravel nine minutes before the planned 7:30 a.m. EST launch. Instruments spotted dropping pressures in three on-board tanks that supply liquid oxygen to the electricity-producing fuel cells. At 31 seconds before launch, when the ground computer shifts control to Columbia's computers, launch rules calls for each tank to be pressurized to 800 pounds per square inch.

Hussein denies U.S. arms sale

Jordan to buy Soviet weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jordan's King Hussein, ending three days of talks with U.S. officials, says he is encouraged that the door is open to a Middle East peace settlement based on a Saudi Arabian proposal rejected by Israel.

"The United States has not shut the door firmly," Hussein said.

At the same time, the 45-year-old monarch denied reports that Jordan might get $800 million worth of new anti-aircraft missiles from the United States but said the Arab country will buy some Soviet defensive weaponry.

In an interview with reporters Wednesday, Hussein said he will tell a summit of Arab nations that his impressions of Mideast peace prospects "are extremely favorable and encouraging" after talks with President Reagan and other administration officials, as well as Senate and House leaders.

"The United States will hopefully be able to make its contribution" to a settlement based on the Saudi plan, Hussein said. "I feel there is leadership, there is determination to make a contribution."

Reagan and other U.S. officials said last week that while they have sharp reservations about most of the eight-point Saudi plan, they are encouraged by a segment that they interpret as confirming the rights of all states in the region, including Israel, to exist. They said they hope it can become a vehicle for involving the Arab states in a peace process.

Israel strongly condemns the plan, which says any Middle East peace must include total Israeli withdrawal from all territories occupied during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, including Jerusalem.

The plan also includes a call for the recognition of the right of all Palestinians to return to their homeland inside Israel, the removal of Israeli settlements from occupied territories and creation of a Palestinian state in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank of the Jordan River.

Hussein, who was to fly to Los Angeles today after a farewell lunch with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., said he remains highly skeptical of success for current autonomy talks on the future of the occupied territories since they are based on the Camp David formula.

If the talks fail, all sides must seek corrective steps immediately "before an inevitable disaster occurs and overtakes all of us," the king said.

Hussein said arms aid for Jordan was not an issue in his talks here and "I did not come with any shopping list."

Of reports that the Reagan administration is considering selling Jordan the new Hawk anti-aircraft missiles, the king said, "I wish to God that were true."

Youths held responsible in purse theft

Two 13-year-old boys have been referred to juvenile authorities, and a portion of the money reported stolen in an auto burglary was recovered, following investigation of the report by the Pampa Police Department, police said today.

Tuesday afternoon, a purse belonging to Helena Ellis of Pampa was taken from her vehicle while she was picking up her children at the First Baptist Church day care facility. The purse contained items valued at $200, and $1,600 in cash and $30 in old U.S. currency.

Police chief J. J. Ryzman said the purse and contents, and $1,200 of the money has been recovered.

The two boys were detained by city police Wednesday and later referred to juvenile authorities, he said.

Tires slashed on police auto

Four tires on Pampa Police Department cruisers were slashed Wednesday night while officers were responding to a report of a bar room disturbance, police said today.

Damage to the vehicles' tires was estimated at $300, Ryzman said today.

A suspect in the slashing is currently in Gray County Jail, Ryzman said. Formal charges had not been filed at press time today.

Princess Diana expecting a baby next June

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana, the 20-year-old earl's daughter who married Prince Charles, the heir to the British throne, three months ago, is expecting a baby next June, Buckingham Palace announced today.

"The queen was personally informed of the news by the prince and princess some days ago," said a palace spokesman. "The prince and princess of Wales, the queen and the duke of Edinburgh and members of both families are delighted by the news."

The child will be second in line to the throne after Charles, 32.

The palace spokesman said Diana, who made her first state appearance Wednesday at the formal opening of the British Parliament, is "in excellent health."

The spokesman added the princess "hopes to continue to undertake some public engagements but regrets any disappointment which may be caused by any curtailment in her planned program."

Diana and Charles were lunching today with the Lord Mayor of London following a hectic two weeks that took the royal couple to Wales for a three-day official tour and kept them out late every evening this week.

Just 19 when Charles proposed, the former Lady Diana Spencer turned 20 on July 1. Charles will be 33 on Nov. 14.

After hostage seizure, claims being settled

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Two years after the seizure of the American hostages in Tehran, American and Iranian legal experts are quietly preparing to settle billions of dollars in claims resulting from the 14-month crisis.

Arthur Rovine, the U.S. government's agent, said 17 American companies have filed claims since the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal opened for business Oct. 20. He said he expects 600 to 700 by the deadline Jan. 19, with the first hearings in the spring.

As Rovine was meeting Wednesday with reporters at the American Embassy in The Hague, demonstrations were held in Iran to mark the second anniversary of the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Tehran residents said in contrast to the thousands that used to mass in front of the embassy and perform for the TV cameras, only a few hundred turned out in the capital despite a weeklong publicity campaign.

The Algiers agreements that ended the hostage crisis last Jan. 19 provided for a nine-member tribunal — three Americans, three Iranians and three from other countries — to make "final and binding" decisions on financial claims resulting from the takeover. A billion dollars of the Iranian assets the U.S. government froze were deposited in the Dutch Central Bank to pay settlements.

Iranian companies and individuals as well as Americans can file claims, but so far only Americans have done so. They allege expropriation by the Iranian revolutionary regime, breach of contract or failure to pay debts.

The hostages are made ineligible by the Algiers agreements.

"It's one of the largest and most significant arbitration processes in history," said Rovine. "It will help develop the rules of international law and there will certainly be a great deal learned about the whole process of international arbitration."

With Gunnar Lagergren of Sweden chairman, the tribunal is clearing procedural matters before it begins hearing claims. The nine arbitrators and the Iranian and American agents are methodically modifying the 41 articles of the U.N. Commission

Presley's doctor is acquitted
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - Jurors who acquitted Dr. George C. Nichopoulos of charges that he overprescribed dangerous drugs for Elvis Presley and other patients said they were convinced he was a good doctor trying to do his job.
"He was working with some very disturbed people," said juror Burdine Redmond after the verdict was returned Wednesday. "I don't think most doctors had the nerve to do that."
The jury took slightly more than three hours to agree on the verdict Wednesday after a five-week trial.
"We had some problems at first," jury foreman Diane Blair said shortly after the verdict was read by Judge Bernie Weinman.
Nichopoulos was charged with 12 counts of prescribing excessive amounts of stimulants, sedatives and narcotics for himself, Presley, singer Jerry Lee Lewis and eight other patients. Two additional counts accused him of prescribing drugs for Presley and Lewis without trying to treat their addiction.
Last week, Weinman directed a verdict of acquittal on three of the counts, involving Nichopoulos himself and one patient.
The doctor's wife, Edna, crowded into a second-row seat among reporters and family friends, tried to keep her composure as the verdict was announced, but tears trickled down her cheeks. Nichopoulos' daughter, Chrissy, shared a torn tissue with her mother.
Outside the courtroom, defense attorney James F. Neal wore a broad grin. His client, dodging reporters, left the building through a door normally used for bringing prisoners into the adjacent jail.
"He deserved it," Neal said. "He has been harassed for years."
Several other jurors also said they were convinced that the 54-year-old internist was trying to help his patients.

Multibillion-dollar waterway, breeder reactor surviving cuts
WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate, unswept by appeals to trim pet construction projects as deeply as other federal programs, is giving the go-ahead to two multibillion-dollar projects: the Clinch River breeder nuclear reactor and the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway.
By just two-vote margins Wednesday, the Senate acted to keep both projects alive, despite claims by opponents that neither could be justified economically.
Opponents of the $3.2 billion breeder reactor, to be built near Oak Ridge, Tenn., had another chance today to try to scuttle the project but were not optimistic about their chances.
Former President Carter sought unsuccessfully to kill the Clinch River project, arguing that it would produce weapons-grade plutonium and frustrate efforts to reduce the spread of nuclear materials. President Reagan supports the project.
Both the breeder and the waterway - the nation's largest public-works project, a 450-mile-long barge route in Alabama and Mississippi expected to cost between $2 billion and $3 billion - are part of a $12.4 billion appropriations bill for energy and water development headed toward expected Senate approval.
The two projects are championed by Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, whom opponents credited with playing a major role in mustering the 48-46 votes to spare them.
Sens. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., and Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., used parliamentary maneuvering to force a second vote on Clinch River today.
Bumpers sought to kill the project outright. After that failed, Tsongas suggested cutting funds for it in half, to $90 million, in the current fiscal year and requiring private utilities to come up with the rest.
Backers said that, too, would doom the project since utilities would never agree to foot the bill.
"It doesn't look too nifty for the project" if such an approach prevailed, said Dick Morrissey, a spokesman for the Edison Electric Institute, a trade organization representing the nation's power companies.
The resolution adopted by the commission at the end of a three-day meeting in Gdansk also demanded greater access to the media for the independent labor movement, an end to "penal prosecution" of union members and economic and legal reforms.
The union leaders threatened to "use all means available, including a general strike" unless its demands were met by the end of February.

Door appears open for Solidarity
WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Poland's three most powerful leaders appeared to open the door today to participation by the Solidarity labor federation in management of the country's near-bankrupt economy.
Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, Communist Party chief Wojciech Jaruzelski and Archbishop Jozef Glemp at an unprecedented meeting Wednesday discussed the "possibilities of creating a front of national understanding, a permanent platform of dialogue and consultation of political and social forces," the official PAP news agency reported.
The meeting was "considered to be useful" and was a prelude to "further essential consultation," PAP said.
Meanwhile, Solidarity's 107-member national executive body, its Country Commission, demanded that the government create a social and economic council giving the union control of employment, rationing and food distribution.
The proposal was put forward by Reps. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, and Barber Conable, R-N.Y., in an attempt to ensure the system's solvency.
"It's a disgrace the way we have turned tail and run on Social Security," Conable said. "I would include the administration and everyone in the room here who voted against it."
Democratic congressional leaders oppose any measures which would in effect lower Social Security benefits. They maintain that only interfund borrowing and some other stopgap measures are necessary at this time.
"It's pretty significant that Congress is not going to accept any long-term adjustment," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said following the vote.
That left as main issues before the House and Senate conferees whether to reduce the minimum Social Security benefit for people also receiving government pensions or living overseas and how to structure interfund borrowing.
The minimum benefit was approved by Congress at the request of President Reagan, who has since asked that it be restored.
The Senate approved legislation calling for restoration of the minimum benefit for all people presently receiving it. But the measure also would reduce the benefit for people receiving government pensions over $300 a month and would eliminate it for people living overseas.

Democrats block solving social security ills
WASHINGTON (AP) - Democrats are effectively squelching chances of legislating long-term solutions this year to Social Security's financial woes with their rejection of a package of proposed benefit cuts.
Instead, House and Senate conferees meeting today to fashion final Social Security legislation planned to consider a short-term attempt to resuscitate the system by mingling its three trust funds.
Under pressure from top Democratic leaders, the House Ways and Means Committee rejected a proposal to raise the regular retirement age of Social Security beneficiaries and change the way cost-of-living increases are calculated.

Hurricane Katrina sweeps towards Cuba

MIAMI (AP) - Katrina, demonstrating unusual late-season strength, became 1981's seventh Atlantic hurricane today as it swept toward the Cuban coast with 85 mph winds, forecasters said.
The storm, which increased in power as it moved north-northeast across the Caribbean, could reach winds up to 100 mph before hitting Cuba, said National Hurricane Center forecaster John Hope.
At 7 a.m. EST, the storm center was about 400 miles due south of Miami. The eye of the hurricane was centered near latitude 20.1 north, 80.6 west, or about 65 miles northeast of Grand Cayman Island. It was moving east of due north about 7 mph and should maintain its present course over the next 24 hours, Hope said.
Further strengthening was likely in the day, he said, adding that at that course and forward velocity, the storm would hit Cuba tonight.
Winds around the eye of the rapidly forming system increased from 35 mph to 85 mph in just 36 hours. It was moving north-northeast toward Cienfuegos, a southwest Cuban coastal town of 90,000 people.
The hurricane's threat to the United States was difficult to predict, Hope said. "We don't see it as being a threat to the U.S. right now. But it could change directions at any time. But we do think it will clear the Florida coast."
Heavy rains have spread into central Cuba, the forecast said. In 1932, a late-season hurricane struck the island and caused 2,500 casualties, Hope said.
Hope said the storm would likely lose strength over the central Cuban mountains, but could pose more problems if it regroups over the Florida Straits and the Bahamas. He predicted heavy rains and high seas in a 100-mile area around the storm.
Heavy squalls Wednesday from the Atlantic's 11th named tropical system drenched the three Cayman Islands with up to 12 inches of rain, Hope said.
The Atlantic hurricane season normally has nine named systems.

Haig discloses NATO contingency plan for nuclear warning shot if war breaks out

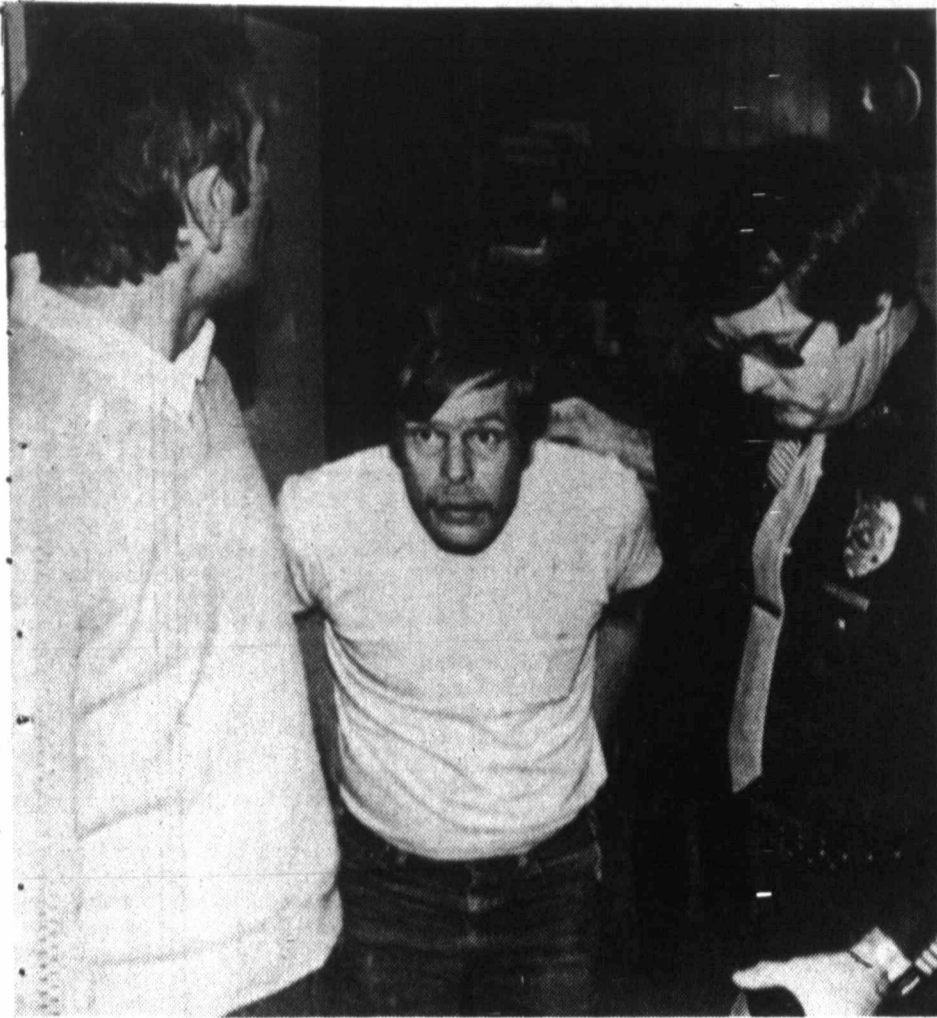

WASHINGTON (AP) - A NATO contingency plan calls for a nuclear warning shot to be fired if a conventional war breaks out in Europe, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. says.
The former NATO commander said Wednesday that such a demonstration would be intended to forestall escalation of the war into a full-scale nuclear exchange. Although he did not elaborate, Haig told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that NATO's goal has always been to "maintain violence at the lowest level."
Haig also testified Wednesday that congressional action on the administration's B-1 bomber and MX missile proposals "will make or break" efforts to negotiate a new nuclear arms reduction treaty with the Soviets. He said treaty talks "can begin as early as next spring."
Discussion of the administration's proposed $180 billion, six-year strategic arms buildup was expected to continue on Capitol Hill today, with Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger appearing before the Senate Armed Services Committee.
Asked about President Reagan's recent statement that a nuclear war could be limited to Europe, Haig said the president was "precisely right."
"For example, there are contingency plans in the NATO doctrine to fire a nuclear weapon for demonstration purposes to demonstrate to the other side that they are exceeding the limits of toleration in the conventional area," he said.
Reports of such a contingency plan circulated during the Ford administration but were never confirmed.
Haig testified that Reagan's decision to resurrect the B-1 bomber and put MX missiles in existing missile silos may worry the Soviets enough to make them willing for the first time to negotiate.

Under pressure from top Democratic leaders, the House Ways and Means Committee rejected a proposal to raise the regular retirement age of Social Security beneficiaries and change the way cost-of-living increases are calculated.
The proposal was put forward by Reps. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, and Barber Conable, R-N.Y., in an attempt to ensure the system's solvency.
"It's a disgrace the way we have turned tail and run on Social Security," Conable said. "I would include the administration and everyone in the room here who voted against it."
Democratic congressional leaders oppose any measures which would in effect lower Social Security benefits. They maintain that only interfund borrowing and some other stopgap measures are necessary at this time.
"It's pretty significant that Congress is not going to accept any long-term adjustment," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said following the vote.
That left as main issues before the House and Senate conferees whether to reduce the minimum Social Security benefit for people also receiving government pensions or living overseas and how to structure interfund borrowing.
The minimum benefit was approved by Congress at the request of President Reagan, who has since asked that it be restored.
The Senate approved legislation calling for restoration of the minimum benefit for all people presently receiving it. But the measure also would reduce the benefit for people receiving government pensions over $300 a month and would eliminate it for people living overseas.

Trudeau's surprise: people vote on rights bill

OTTAWA (AP) - A surprise proposal by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau for a referendum on the bill of rights he wants to incorporate in a new Canadian constitution found no favor with most of the 10 provincial premiers.
Only Quebec Premier Rene Levesque and Ontario's William Davis were ready to support the proposal, and Levesque hedged. The other eight provincial leaders expressed strong opposition to the plan that dominated the third day of the meeting to try to solve the impasse over Trudeau's attempt to bring the constitution home from Britain.
During a lunch break Wednesday, Trudeau told reporters he offered to transfer the constitution from British control to Canada with the proposed charter of rights attached but held in abeyance for two years while negotiations between the federal and provincial governments continued.
If there was no agreement after two years, "we would put the whole question of a charter to the people of Canada," he said.
Most of the premiers conceded that the proposal took them by surprise, but they said doubted it would produce enough of a consensus to bring about an agreement.
"The odds are probably loaded towards a failure of the conference," Levesque predicted.
Davis emphasized that all the proposals still on the table have some similarity and that common ground could still be found. But he added that a referendum is sometimes necessary when a consensus cannot be reached.
Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed vowed to campaign across the country against the federal government if a referendum was held. Like most other opponents, he argued that it would divide Canada by infringing on the rights of the provinces.

VIETNAM VETERAN ARRESTED. Jay Stader, 32, center, is taken into the Delaware County jail in Muncie, Ind., Wednesday by Muncie S.W.A.T. officer Gary Hartley, right, and Sheriff Gary Carmichael after he allegedly took six Muncie Newspapers employees hostage for more than an hour before surrendering. Stader was charged with kidnapping and criminal confinement and was held on $40,000 bond. Stader said he was a Vietnam veteran protesting the plight of Vietnam veterans. police said. Police combing list of Cuban refugees in rape investigation

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Investigators trying to determine if 10 sexual offense cases are related to the rape and murder of a nun are reviewing fingerprints of 47 Cuban refugees in their search for a suspect, police said.

A newly formed team of Amarillo police officers and Potter and Randall County sheriff's deputies began obtaining refugee fingerprints Wednesday.

Authorities are looking for a match to a partial print discovered on a possible murder weapon.

Police said they will question a Cuban refugee who was arraigned Tuesday on charges of burglary with intent to commit rape.

Police Chief Jerry Neal said that 24 of 47 Cubans brought to Amarillo by Catholic Family Services have been arrested for various crimes since their arrival.

Sister Tadea Benz, 76, was found beaten and strangled to death on Halloween at St. Francis Convent in the city's northeast side. Police said she had been raped and stabbed several times.

A 77-year-old woman told investigators that a man attempted to rape her in her home near the downtown area on the same day. She was in satisfactory condition Wednesday at an Amarillo hospital after she emerged from a coma.

The woman, who face was bruised, was discovered conscious but in shock by a friend. Police said her purse and a small amount of money had been taken.

Investigators found a partial palm print on a blunt-edged knife found under the nun's bed. It and black, hair-like strands found in the nun's room and at another rape-murder scene were to be analyzed in the investigation.

Police said the July 9 death of Mrs. Narnie C. Bryson, 76, was similar to the nun's slaying. Mrs. Bryson was found beaten and strangled to death in the bedroom of her Northeast Amarillo home.

Investigators are combing through five other rape and attempted rape cases of women over 70 in this Panhandle city which have occurred since June.

They are being aided by a $22,000 laser device that can discover faint fingerprints.

Rewards totaling $10,000 are being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Sister Tadea's killer.

School milk case final arguments today

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Lawyers prepared final arguments today in the Mission school milk case before turning their clients' fates over to a federal court jury.

Federal prosecutors and defense lawyers finished presenting evidence and calling witnesses Wednesday in the three-week-old trial.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda allotted each side two hours of closing arguments.

DeAnda on Wednesday dismissed all but one of the remaining 35 counts against Assistant Superintendent Robert Wicks. The judge said Eddie Medrano had failed to link Wicks with an alleged scheme to write fake milk delivery tickets.

The government contends phony milk invoices were used between 1975 to 1980 to make it appear the district had purchased enough half-pints of milk from the Golden Jersey Creamery in Edinburg to quality $486,000 worth of meals for federal reimbursement.

According to indictments returned this summer, the half-pints of milk never were delivered. One 12-count indictment was dismissed and DeAnda has thrown out other charges of a 51-count indictment.

Others charged with conspiracy and fraud are Michael Jon McCarthy, food services director; Gerardo Cortez, head cook supervisor and Jane Alice Cook, former school secretary.

Wicks remains charged with one count of misprison, an accusation that he knew of wrongdoing but failed to report it to a federal official.

"I don't condone Mr. Wicks' conduct and I think it's terrible," DeAnda said after dismissing the other counts with the jury outside the courtroom.

"I think everyone ought to be ashamed it went on but even if there were evidence to implicate him, the evidence is so fragile there would be a reasonable doubt as to his guilt on that charge," the judge said of the main conspiracy and supporting fraud charges.

None of the defendants are accused of pocketing the $486,000 in alleged overpayment, which was deposited in school district accounts.

McCarthy was the only defendant who testified. He said a dairy official told him in March or April 1980 that the school district was receiving credit for milk not being delivered.

Five policemen indicted in brutality investigation

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Five former McAllen policemen have been indicted on federal civil rights charges in a continuing police brutality investigation authorities said could result in more indictments.

Federal grand jurors Wednesday accused former police Sgt. Roberto Ramos and former officers Jaime Contreras, Alfredo Saldana, Tom Carter and Isidro Ybanez Jr. of beating, kicking and abusing some prisoners arrested between 1977 and 1979.

Ross Kinnealy, one of three U.S. Justice Department lawyers directing the investigation, said the men would be allowed to surrender and would not be arrested.

U.S. Justice Department officials in Washington who asked not to be identified said the McAllen investigation will continue and other indictments are possible.

But McAllen Mayor Othal Brand said the department had been "cleaned out," and he did not expect any more indictments.

Grand jurors had a visual record of some beatings because McAllen police had videotaped bookings to protect officers against frivolous harassment suits.

Several tapes were broadcast nationally last spring and created a public outcry for a federal investigation.

The tapes have been seen by two federal grand juries, an assistant attorney general in Washington, Texas legislators, and personnel in the Texas attorney general's office.

One televised tape recorded the Oct. 23, 1978, public drunkenness arrest of Pedro Dennett, who was seen being kicked on the ground, thrown against the wall and pounded against the booking desk. His moans and screams were audible on the tape.

Contreras, Carter and Saldana are accused of violating Dennett's civil rights. Ybanez is charged in a May 20, 1979, incident and Ramos is accused of commanding subordinate officers to beat a prisoner on Sept. 25, 1977.

Contreras told The Associated Press Wednesday afternoon that he was unaware of the indictments.

"I'd like to get a hold of my attorney. I can't tell you anything else. I'd rather talk with my lawyer first," said Contreras, who resigned in September of 1980.

Others charged have moved from McAllen or have unlisted phone numbers and could not be located for comment.

Police Chief Lee Spradlin, who came to McAllen Sept. 1, declined to comment.

However, Brand said he was not surprised at the indictments.

"None of these people are left with us. They have been shipped out," he said. "I had rather hoped some of those men would be indicted."

The videotapes were first shown during a March hearing on a civil suit filed against the City of McAllen and individual officers.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda, who viewed the tapes and allowed them to be copied for broadcast, issued an injunction against future police brutality and ordered the department to improve training and review procedures.

DeAnda also allowed McAllen officials use of the tapes for disciplinary hearings. But he angrily ordered them rushed back to Brownsville this summer when he heard a McAllen city commissioner jokingly had offered a bottle of champagne to anyone who would burn the tapes.

Four of the indicted men — Carter Saldana, Contreras and Ybanez — all worked on the C-shift from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m.

Some C-shift officers wore t-shirts calling themselves "The Animals" and developed a reputation for taking action and asking questions later.

One C-shift officer said in an internal police study that he thought "to belong on 'C' Shift an officer would have to be abusive and aggressive."

The alleged victims usually were poor Mexican-Americans. The indicted officers are both Anglo and Hispanic. McAllen's population of 60,000 is approximately 75 percent Hispanic.

After leaving McAllen, Carter became police chief in Bishop but was forced to resign this year after the videotapes were broadcast.

Ybanez was fired in 1979. Ramos, who quit voluntarily last month, was suspended for a week without pay after an alleged incident of misconduct in 1978 and demoted from sergeant to patrolman for more than nine months following a second alleged incident that year.

Allegations of widespread police brutality in McAllen cost the department two police chiefs and kept Brand from receiving Senate confirmation to a state prison board post.

Harrelson weapons trial will begin Monday

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge says FBI agents did not violate the constitutional rights of Jo Ann Starr Harrelson and he denied motions to reopen a pretrial hearing and to suppress evidence in her weapons violation trial.

The rulings Wednesday by U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders cleared the way for jury selection to begin Monday.

Mrs. Harrelson is the wife of Charles V. Harrelson, a man authorities have identified as the prime target of a massive federal investigation into the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

She is accused of using a false name to buy a hunting rifle agents said may be linked to the Wood slaying.

Prosecutors contend Mrs. Harrelson used a fictitious name to purchase a high-powered rifle — capable of firing the same type bullet that killed Wood — just 12 days before the judge was shot outside his San Antonio townhouse on May 29, 1979.

However, Mrs. Harrelson, who was granted immunity for her testimony before a federal grand jury investigating the Wood slaying, contends the evidence against her was obtained in violation of her constitutional rights and should be suppressed.

Sanders, in a four-page order, rejected Mrs. Harrelson's arguments and ruled FBI agents did not violate her constitutional rights.

Sanders also denied her claim that the government's evidence violated her confidential relationships with El Paso attorney Joe Chagra and with her husband.

The motions were filed Oct. 22 by two Dallas defense attorneys. Co-counsel Ed Mason said Sanders' order did not not surprise him.

"As far as I know, the case will proceed to trial Monday morning," Mason said.

Jury selection is expected to begin at 9 a.m., said a law clerk in Sanders' office.

Government prosecutors filed arguments against the motions Oct. 30. Assistant U.S. Attorney Jay Effington said the motions, and a third discovery motion not yet ruled upon, are without merit.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see it blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Covering Commandment.

'The new Mohammed'

Oriana Fallaci, an Italian journalist highly regarded for her interviews with world figures, came away in a dazed condition last year after a six-hour interview with Libyan dictator Muammar Khadafy.

If her impressions are in any way accurate, Khadafy is as close to insane as a mass murderer and perhaps the most unstable and dangerous figure on the current world stage.

Fallaci herself interviewed by an Italian magazine, said these vivid memories of Khadafy remained following her questioning of Khadafy in January, 1980.

Noticing Fallaci taking notes with a green pen, Khadafy, a man known to adore the color green even to the point of using green handkerchiefs, shouted excitedly, "Green, green, green, green, green, green," amidst outbursts of stupid laughter.

Explaining to Fallaci that he was "the new Mohammed, a new messiah," Khadafy repeated, "I am the gospel, I am the gospel, I am the gospel, I am the gospel, I am the gospel" for a full six minutes without catching his breath. Fallaci said Khadafy's personal secretary appeared to be "gripped with terror."

Seeing Khadafy as "abnormal, a cretin, a poor thing whose intelligence does not surpass that of a chicken," Fallaci portrayed the Libyan strongman as "clinically speaking, a fool. Not a mental case with a streak of genius, but a cretin."

Asked whether Khadafy, known as an exporter of terrorism, might himself become an assassin's target, Fallaci said it would be "most difficult, even for a kamikaze." She revealed she interviewed Khadafy in his "barracks filled with his faithful." The barracks was more like a bunker, she added, surrounded by a number of other bunkers "like a game of Chinese boxes." Five times she was searched down to the inside of her shoes before she reached Khadafy's bunker.

Fallaci said that while the world may have been surprised that Khadafy would send two jets after the U.S. fleet in the Mediterranean, she felt the act was typical of an inconsistency she saw in Khadafy wherein "he may wake up feeling slightly less well disposed than usual and ask to marry Reagan's daughter."

Fallaci said the Russians are well aware of Khadafy's peculiarities and realistic enough to recognize Khadafy is not a communist. However, they use him the way the Americans were using Papa Doc in Haiti, despising him and adding angrily, "Look with what kind of a man one has to deal!" She said it is unthinkable the Russians will take Khadafy seriously or trust him enough to put in his hands their strategic interests.

Again, if Fallaci's recollections have merit, can anyone wonder why the Mideast has faced so much turmoil in recent years, and why future prospects are not bright. It also lends credence to tales that perhaps Khadafy's hand can be seen in the recent assassination of Egypt's Sadat.

In Khadafy, Libya seems to have a second Mussolini on its hands, a Mussolini lacking normal intelligence but with ambitions stretching from Morocco eastward to Iran. At the moment, he seems to be the one man capable of setting the world ablaze.

Nuclear power is victim of economic problems

The Policy Statement on nuclear power issued by the Reagan administration early this month is no more than a first step toward clearing the way for greater use of our most promising but controversial energy resource.

The government is promising to simplify the regulatory maze that is now stretching out the lead time for building nuclear power plants to 12 years. This will help, but nuclear power is as much a victim of economics.

High interest rates for construction capital, and rate-setting policies which make it impossible for utilities to charge customers for the cost of building a plant until after it is completed, are cited by the industry as major factors behind the slump in reactor orders.

The Administration also is lifting the ban on reprocessing of spent fuel from nuclear power plants, committing itself to the development of a commercial breeder reactor to produce electricity, and promising to get off dead-center in setting up a disposal site for radioactive waste.

These are important policy steps, since the United States has had an incomplete nuclear "fuel cycle" ever since President Carter placed a ban on commercial reprocessing and slowed down breeder development on grounds that these technologies could contribute to the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

The Reagan administration takes the correct view that the United States can best help control weapons proliferation by remaining active in reprocessing and breeder development rather than surrendering the field to other countries.

Reprocessing will vastly increase the energy available from uranium supplies. The spent fuel assemblies now stored at nuclear power plants contain an energy equivalent equal to four times the oil reserves of the Persian Gulf. Reprocessing will produce fuel that can be re-used in the original plants, plus plutonium to fuel breeder reactors in the future. Reprocessing also will sharply reduce the volume of waste going into the yet-to-be located permanent storage facility.

Economics is a factor here, too. The owners of the reprocessing plant at Barnwell, S.C., the only one large enough to handle fuel from the nation's power plants, say they do not plan to operate it even though the Carter ban has been lifted. They say the investment to put the plant in operation would be too great against the risk that future political developments would affect the financial viability of the plant.

At this point, the uncertain political climate surrounding nuclear power is impeding its further development more than any unresolved technical or safety issues. It has now received a vote of confidence from the Reagan administration, but that confidence needs to be transmitted to Congress, state governments, investors and the public or the nuclear option will continue to be within our grasp beyond our grasp.

MX Deferred: A Strategic Defeat for the U.S.?

By STEPHEN A. CAMBONE

In war, it is possible to distinguish between a tactical and a strategic defeat. The first, being merely a failure to achieve some immediate objective, is never decisive. The second is almost always so. A strategic defeat will force the defeated to alter fundamentally its plans for the war. Options that a nation was once free to exercise will have been foreclosed. And the more that freedom is constrained, the more a nation will be forced to abandon its hopes for victory and to concentrate instead on staving off ultimate defeat.

On Oct. 2 President Reagan presented his proposal for the modernization of the nation's nuclear forces. At that time he announced that he was deferring any decision on a permanent basing mode for the centerpiece of the program, the MX intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM).

Many strategic analysts believe that this deterrent will result in a plan to phase out the entire ICBM force over time in favor of submarine launched ballistic missiles (SLBMs). If it does, then the U.S. will have sustained a strategic defeat of the first order. For it will have abandoned, as a direct result of Soviet nuclear superiority, one of the few weapons that has the potential to restore the nuclear balance.

The Department of Defense now estimates that the Soviets, using only a third to a half of their available ICBM forces, could destroy as many as 95 percent of this nation's ICBM force.

To overcome this vulnerability, the MX was designed to be deployed in a mobile mode. The Carter Administration's plans for its deployment called for 200 missiles to be shuttled among 4,600 shelters. This basing mode would stretch Soviet nuclear assets, the plan presumed, that the Soviets could not hope to "kill" enough shelters, and hence enough missiles, in a surprise attack or first strike to ensure victory.

In the event the Soviets should attempt to expand their forces, the plan supposed, the U.S. could always build more shelters or missiles or both at far cheaper cost than the Soviets could build the means to destroy them.

But the President made it clear that the present level of Soviet nuclear superiority made it doubtful that a mobile MX would solve the vulnerability problem. If only 4,600 shelters were built, he said, all of them "would be just as vulnerable as the existing Minuteman silow." Nor would an expansion of the shelter system be helpful, Mr. Reagan said, "the operative factor here is this, no matter how many shelters we might build, the Soviets can build more missiles — more and just as cheaply."

It was this Presidential account of the nuclear balance that has led many analysts to suppose that the ICBM force will be phased out. Hardly any of them believe that the President's plan to accelerate research on ballistic missile defenses, deep silo basing and an airborne transport and launching system for ICBMs will result in a plan capable of rendering the ICBM force any more secure than mobile basing.

If, as a result of Soviet nuclear superiority, the U.S. is constrained from modernizing its ICBM force, then the Soviets will have won a strategic victory. For the weapon that could most directly threaten their ICBMs — the foundation of their superiority — an American ICBM like the MX, would not exist. Unless the U.S. is capable of destroying those Soviet weapons it will be compelled in all future negotiations and confrontations with the Soviet Union to acquiesce in any Soviet demand accompanied by the threat of war.

It may be objected that the Soviets would never be so foolish as to attempt a surprise attack, or first strike, on the U.S. For even if they did destroy all of our ICBMs, or SLBMs would survive. This may be true. But SLBMs have neither the accuracy nor the destructive power of the MX. Furthermore, they are dependent on such things as satellites for navigation purposes, and these can be easily destroyed. They cannot be counted upon to destroy those Soviet assets that must be destroyed if the Soviet Union is to be prevented from winning a war, the national leadership, command and control facilities, Soviet SLBM bases, reserve ICBM forces, the intermediate range missiles targeted on Europe, industrial plants, and the like. Most of these targets are sufficiently "hardened" to withstand attack from SLBMs.

Thus, unable to respond in kind to a Soviet attack, or striking first if the circumstances demand such an action, the U.S. would be faced with an intolerable choice: it could, as President Carter once suggested, use its SLBM force to destroy every city in the Soviet Union, which would invite a similar attack on the U.S., causing millions of casualties on both sides. Or it could accept defeat.

The President's decision to defer any final decision on a permanent basing mode for a modernized ICBM implies a strategic defeat of these proportions. To avoid such a defeat, it may be that the U.S. will have to deploy the MX even if it cannot be made as secure as the President would wish it to be. But this course of action is not without risk either. For if the U.S. deploys a sufficient number of MX missiles to overcome the present superiority of the Soviet Union, it is not beyond the realm of possibility that the Soviets would attempt to prevent such a deployment by threats of war, or by going to war.

If, however, the nation is unwilling to run this risk, then it will undoubtedly harvest all of the bitter fruits of a strategic defeat.

Is Soviet Attack Likely?

By OSCAR COOLEY

The people who rule the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics have an entirely different global philosophy than Americans have. We believe in freedom; they in power and domination. We want every nation to be independent and to choose its own course. They want every nation to be ruled by Communists. Call them Socialists, in either case they are robots of Marxism. They foresee a single world state, Marxist in nature.

Not just militarily but ideologically, the United States and the USSR are antagonists. The Soviet do not wish us well. They "would do us in if they thought they could with acceptable damage to themselves," said Malcolm Toon, our former ambassador in Moscow, in an address at Hinsdale College.

Does it follow that Soviet Russia will attack the U.S. in the near future? Our Major General Robert Schweitzer recently warned that the Russians are "on the move," are "going to strike." For speaking out of turn, he was promptly demoted.

Brezhnev might reason that they could overwhelm us with a sudden nuclear blitz, but such a holocaust would horrify the rest of the world and alienate any possible friends the Soviets may have. An attack with conventional weapons would not win an immediate victory, and the Soviets know they are not in a position to fight a long war successfully. The U.S. has immensely more resources for such a war than has Russia. Hence, such an attack is unlikely.

We Americans think we have internal troubles — economic recession, inflation, unemployment, stratospheric interest rates — but Soviet Russia, I am guessing, has more. She does not advertise them. Her large imports of grain from Argentina and the United States indicate that all is not well in a nation that traditionally has been a bread-basket of the world. Their poor croplands are said to be due to drought. Perhaps. But this drought, so the story goes, has cut Russia's crops for three years in a row, an unbelievably long drought.

Soviet Russia is suffering from drought not so much of rainfall as of freedom and incentive to produce. Her greatest enemy is Communism itself, which dries up the energy and initiative of any people who embrace it. Why produce, either on farm or in factory, when an implacable government stands ready to seize and possess your product, measuring out to you barely enough to exist on? Why sweat and strain when you know you will not be paid in proportion to your effort?

In capitalist countries, when drought reduces the grain crop the market price rises, causing people to save every bushel, and to store grain for the future. Under Communism, there is no such response. Extra elevators are not built to store the grain. Dryers are not made to enable drying and preserving the grain that needs it. Millions of tons of grain, it is reported, go to waste yearly in the Communist utopia because of lack of facilities.

Poland, also Communist, is in the throes of civil strife due to lack of food and fuel. Yet Poland is rich in farmland and coal mines. The uprising of workers which gave birth to the independent union, Solidarity, can be explained only as a rebellion against Communism and its results. The Poles are less stolid and submissive than the Russians.

Instead of a frontal assault on the capitalist West, the Soviet policy is to subvert, or conquer, one small country — Cuba, Angola, Afghanistan — after another and bribe them to fight Russia's foreign wars for her. It is cheaper — and less risky.

Designing Chocolates

By ART BUCHWALD

As you may have noticed, the dress designers are putting their name on every product from pillowcases to automobiles. So I shouldn't have been surprised to see that Bill Blass, one of America's leading couturiers, was now designing chocolates.

The copy in the ad read, "Bill Blass, renowned for brilliant interpretations of American fashion, has teamed with the true aristocrat of chocolate, Godiva, to create a unique confectionary collection."

How does a fashion designer create a collection of chocolates? Maybe like this:

"Where is the master?"
"Hush, he is in his atelier working on new bonbons for Mother's Day."
"Renee, come in here right away."
"Yes, master."
"I believe I've got it. Look at these sketches. What do you think?"
"It's divine, master."

"I've filled the bust of the chocolate with raisins, brought in the waister with vanilla cream, and put butter crunch on both hips."
"Quelle inspiration! Christian Dior in his greatest days would have never thought of it."
"Now look at this sketch. I call this 'Evening in Vienna.'"
"It's so gorgeous it makes your mouth water."
"Do you know what makes it different from any chocolate you've seen?"
"Tell me, master."
"I've put the nuts on the outside like sequins, so that you can see them before you bite into the bonbon. Most designers hide their nuts inside the chocolate and you don't know they're there. But if you put the nuts, like so, it not only adds luster to the outside, but it says 'I'm yours.'"

"I can't wait to see it in a box."
"Now this is my daytime chocolate that you can eat at lunch or a fancy tea."

"It's so simple and yet so chic."
"I've put a tiny dash of Grand Marnier in it so it will make you feel naughty."
"Oh, master, only you would think of putting as liqueur in a plain chocolate bonbon."

"Now over here in the upper left-hand corner of the box I've designed a caramel. But it's not an ordinary caramel. One layer is brown, one layer is pink and one layer is peppermint."

"The candy critics will go crazy when they see it. Even Yves St. Laurent never put brown, pink and peppermint in the same caramel."
"Wait, there's more. Look at this one."
"A seashell chocolate?"
"That's what it looks like. But when you strip off the chocolate, there is a tiny white saltwater taffy ball inside. Elizabeth Taylor will go nuts over this one."

"Now for my second layer, I have my big surprise. In the very center of the box I'm placing a coffee-cream-filled star with a red cherry on the bias."
"Mon dieu. No wonder they call you the greatest bonbon designer in the world."
"I've saved the best for last."
"A perfect chocolate sparrow's egg?"
"And what do you think is inside?"
"Tell me, master. I can't stand the suspense."
"A jellybean."
"I think I'm going to faint."

"That little giggle of yours is a dead giveaway that you've found MORE cuts to be made in social programs."

Extra tax withholding allowances begin Jan. 1

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many of the 65 million Americans who see too much federal tax withheld from their paychecks next year can expect some relief if they have a working spouse or contribute to an individual retirement plan.

Starting Jan. 1, the Internal Revenue Service will permit extra withholding allowances to reflect two provisions of the tax cuts enacted by Congress in August. Some taxpayers also will be able to reduce their withholding to account for certain moving and employee business expenses, anticipated tax savings from income averaging and various business losses.

To take advantage of the change in withholding, affected taxpayers will have to file a new W-4 form with their employers as early as possible next year. Reducing withholding will not cut a worker's tax liability; it simply will make the money available for the entire year instead of letting the government keep it until a tax refund is issued.

The new withholding rules could significantly increase some workers' take-home pay. A married man earning $500 a week and claiming one withholding allowance each for himself, his wife and their two children now has $74.40 withheld weekly for federal income taxes. If he can increase the number of withholding allowances to seven, he will take home an extra $14.40 a week.

Under the ideal withholding system, a worker would owe no tax at the end of the year and would get no refund. But the system is far from perfect: In 1978, the latest year for which complete statistics are available, 65.5 million couples and individuals had $35.5 billion too much withheld from their checks; 21.5 million owed $25 billion at the end of the year.

Present law generally gives a worker one individual withholding allowance, one for an unemployed spouse and one for each dependent child. One special allowance is available to a single person with one job or a married person with one job and an unemployed spouse.

The amount withheld from each paycheck also can be reduced if the taxpayer expects, when filing a tax return, to claim a credit for child-care

Budget balancing pledge seems abandoned

The Reagan administration appears to have abandoned its pledge to balance the federal budget by 1984 but will press Congress for more spending cuts to deflate a deficit that could reach $90 billion in the current fiscal year.

Administration sources said Wednesday that President Reagan told his economic advisers he opposes major new tax increases even if the alternative is a red-ink budget in the final year of his current term.

The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that the third-quarter trade deficit widened to $7.2 billion despite a 3 percent decline in imports. That left the country with a trade deficit of $18.8 billion through the first nine months of the year, excluding military trade and certain insurance and freight costs for imports.

One reason for the larger trade deficit was a 4.1 percent drop in exports of U.S. goods in the third quarter. That reflected in part the strength of the U.S. dollar on foreign exchange markets. The higher value of the dollar, relative to currencies of foreign countries, makes U.S. exports more expensive.

The dollar's strength has waned in recent days, however, as U.S. interest rates have dropped. On Wednesday the dollar's value weakened on markets at home and abroad with traders citing sharp drops in long-term and short-term interest rates. Lower rates make the dollar less attractive to investors.

The lower rates provided a dose of good news for the U.S. auto industry, which has suffered a long sales slump under the burden of high borrowing costs.

The nation's Big Three automakers reported that sales in October were down 26 percent from the same month last year, although the slide was less severe late in the month.

In other economic developments:

The administration put off indefinitely its efforts to speed up decontrol of natural gas prices. On Tuesday, Energy Secretary James Edwards had predicted the administration would submit its deregulation bill to Congress in the next two weeks.

The American Petroleum Institute reported that the United States imported 4 million barrels a day during the week ended Oct. 30, down from 4.6 million barrels daily a year earlier. It also reported that supplies of gasoline and distillate used mainly for home heating and diesel fuel were lower than in the previous week.

Egypt, which exports only a tiny amount of oil to the United States, raised its price $2 a barrel to $35 to bring its price in line with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries new pricing structure, sources said.

Attorneys to seek Martin trial delay

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorneys for indicted Rep. Mike Martin planned to ask a state judge today to delay the lawmaker's aggravated perjury trial, scheduled for Monday.

District Judge Mace Thurman scheduled a pretrial hearing for today to sort out various motions filed in the case. The defense wants a delay in the trial because lead counsel Frank Maloney is busy in a federal case in Brownsville.

Martin, R-Longview, was indicted in September for allegedly lying to the grand jury that investigated Martin's July 31 shooting. The grand jurors charged that Martin lied to them when he said he did not set up the shotgun attack that left him with a wounded elbow.

Charles Goff, Martin's cousin, said Martin hired him to be the gunman in a plot aimed at winning publicity for Martin.

Defense motions filed by

Maloney include a request to dismiss the indictment because Martin was not properly sworn in when he testified to the grand jury. The motion says an assistant district attorney administered the oath, instead of the grand jury foreman, as required by law.

Another defense motion asks Thurman to suppress portions of Martin's grand jury testimony.

Defendant ... will show that if any offense was committed before the grand jury the defendant was entrapped into committing it by agents of the state of Texas," the motion said.

Maloney also asked Thurman to force the prosecution to turn over the results of any "electronic surveillance, wiretapping, or eavesdropping of any kind" conducted by investigators in the case.

After the indictment, Maloney said he was considering filing a motion to move the trial out of Austin, where the case attracted widespread publicity. As of Wednesday, however, there was no change of venue motion on file in the Travis County District Clerk's office.

Prosecutor Bill Williams said Wednesday he would not be surprised if Maloney did ask to move the trial from here.

Martin, wounded by shotgun fire at an Austin trailer park, initially said he had no idea who fired the shotgun blasts that wounded his elbow.

Army commander apologizes to man falsely accused with desertion

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The Army has apologized to a decorated Vietnam War veteran who was arrested at Laredo and held four days on a false desertion charge in September.

"If I had any apprehension about doing it (apologizing), I don't now. I feel very warm about it," said Col. Alvin O. Hall, commander of Fort Sam Houston who confirmed Wednesday that he personally delivered the written apology.

Hall said he and two other Fort Sam Houston officers went to Laredo on Oct. 23 and hand delivered the letter to Roque Vela, who was arrested for alleged desertion due to what the Army later admitted was a mix-up of records.

Vela, a Laredo businessman, was taken into custody at a party by military police in front of his family and friends — despite his protestations of innocence. He was jailed one night in Laredo.

The Purple Heart winner was brought to San Antonio and then transferred to Fort Sill, Okla., before gaining release when his attorney presented his honorable discharge.

Hall, who has been in the Army 29 years, said Vela's attitude about the military "touched me personally."

incident and reported that Vela was very proud of his military service and was "hurt" by the mistaken arrest.

It's said their numbers once darkened the sun.

Once they were said to be countless. Today it takes special care to ensure waterfowl's survival. It takes your help.

Ducks Unlimited is an organization that provides our continent's waterfowl with the habitat they need to breed and survive. DU works to protect and restore the marshlands of Canada where United States Federal funds do not reach — and where 70% of our waterfowl are hatched.

DU has preserved 2.7 million acres of habitat — more than any other private wildlife organization. But as civilization presses in upon natural waterfowl habitats, DU's work becomes even more important. And so do your dollars.

We're asking you to give to a non-profit organization that has shown how private donations can help. We may not be able to make waterfowl numbers grow to darken the sun again. But we can keep them strong. And will, with your help.

Leap of faith returned reporter to normal life

EDITOR'S NOTE — She was still in college, ambitious and full of life, when a capricious illness struck and threatened to undermine every hope for a normal life. Now she describes her nine-year search for health and the final leap of faith that ended the nightmare.

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — At the age of 27, when I should have been dreaming about marriage, children and Pulitzer prizes, I wrote in my journal of a shadowed, fragmented future. I yearned for "time unfeathered by nagging pain, discomfort, embarrassment, concern. Time without death lurking so obviously in view."

By then I had stopped skiing, camping and traveling. I no longer felt free to wander along beaches or city streets. And, although I didn't notice, my face was swollen from years of heavy medication.

I kept a hectic schedule and skirted the truth on employment applications. Health? Excellent. Why go into details that wouldn't affect my job performance? You can let worry and depression eat at your spirit, and lapse into the life of a semi-invalid. Or you can jump into the mainstream, counting on luck and your will.

For as long as I could, I took the second route. And when that became physically impossible, I made a leap of faith: I decided to have a major and somewhat controversial operation.

My burden was ulcerative colitis — an inflammation of the colon, or large intestine. Cramps doubled me over without warning, and I lived in fear that it would become cancer.

I chose a tradeoff: The colon, the pain and a mountain of drugs for a newfangled internal pouch made out of my own small intestine.

The night before surgery, a curtain sealing off my tiny corner of a four-bed room, I tried to be philosophical.

"I've got the best doctors in the country," I wrote. "They'll cut. They'll paste. They'll sew. They will rearrange and reinvent and redecorate. Then they'll sew it all up and cross their fingers."

I knew that no one had ever died from this operation. And I knew I could no longer live where the future meant only tomorrow.

The pouch, or continent ileostomy, is a difficult procedure that is still being modified as doctors gain more experience with it. Many patients, advised to consider surgery, are not told the choice is available. For a year, I was one of them.

Those 12 anguished months were the ultimate test of a reporter's investigative skills. I consulted quacks and geniuses. I shopped around for miracle cures. I cross-examined people who had pouches.

When I chose for one myself, some doctors praised me. Others shook their heads. "Too soon for surgery," they said. Or "Too risky to have that kind."

An estimated one million Americans suffer from ulcerative colitis. Another one million are afflicted with ileitis or Crohn's disease, a deeper inflammation that affects the small intestine as well.

Their symptoms include bleeding, diarrhea, crippling cramps and occasional incontinence. But the pain, inconvenience and embarrassment are overshadowed by the systemic effects of the diseases: fever, weight loss, anemia, dehydration, low blood pressure, joint and eye inflammation, and an increased cancer rate.

Doctors do not know what causes inflammatory bowel disease. Some lucky patients experience spontaneous remissions. More often, the disease must be fought with endless doses of steroids and other drugs that can wreak long and short-term havoc.

During six years on steroids, my face ballooned; my limbs trembled; I broke into feverish sweats; I had trouble sleeping; and I frequently lost my sense of balance. Had I continued, I would have risked cataracts, glaucoma, bone thinning, slipped vertebrae, ulcers and non-functioning adrenal glands.

Illness and drugs were outside my ken when, in 1972, I arrived in Dublin as a 19-year-old exchange student at Trinity College. Within three months, a doctor delivered a diagnosis: ulcerative colitis.

Those first days were the most frightening. Later, the bleeding and everything else became a routine part of my life. But I didn't know then that I would spend most of my twenties searching for health. After three weeks I went into remission.

But I was in trouble again by the time I returned to college in Ann Arbor. A doctor there tried out her allergy theories by putting me on what one friend labeled "the lukewarm water diet."

But I got worse, so I tried my fortunes at the University Health Service. I didn't believe that I had a disease drugs couldn't cure.

So began a frantic senior year of pill-popping — Lomotil, Atropine, Donnatoil, Librax, Azulfadine. Meanwhile, I edited a feminist newspaper, was elected president of my room and board co-op, organized a media conference, sang in a choir and played in a Renaissance concert. Sick? Who, me?

But colitis caught up with me after graduation in New York City, where I had my first taste of "aggressive medical management." Without warning, on 70 milligrams of a cortisone pill called prednisone, I found myself unable to eat, sleep or keep my balance. I broke vases. I fell in the middle of Manhattan streets. I subsisted on tuna salad and Ry-Krisps. One day my arms and legs started trembling uncontrollably.

I guess I knew that it would have to stop. But I had never confronted what I would do then.

So it struck with the force of an avalanche when, after eight years of colitis, a resident at Hershey Medical Center mentioned surgery.

He meant the standard ileostomy, in which the large intestine is removed and the small intestine is brought to the surface of the lower abdomen, where it empties into a bag — an "appliance" — attached to the skin. Just the thing for a young single woman.

"I'd rather kill myself, I thought. 'How could anyone ever have that operation?' I asked. 'They come to me,' the doctor said gently. 'They've had enough, and they come to me.' 'Never,' I said.

But my reporter's instinct was strong. I called a nurse who had undergone a standard ileostomy. Yes, she said, there is life — and sex — after surgery. But I still could not accept the idea.

I visited a doctor who quietly and profitably dispensed under-the-table drugs. He had reportedly worked wonders for a friend's mother, who had asthma, and her aunt, a cancer patient.

He wanted $100 in cash for injections of an unnamed serum made of ingredients he could not, or would not, specify. I didn't buy.

There was one last unexplored avenue, an experimental drug called Coherin, a natural substance found in pituitary glands.

For six months I faithfully recorded exhilarating ups and devastating downs — but no sustained improvement. What it did was open my eyes to the facts of my life.

Much of the time, I was in pain. While the log read like a hospital chart, the pages of my journal were punctuated with despair: the "impossible dream" of health; the "helpless descent into hell"; the wistful question, "Will I ever get better?" Finally, fortunately, I found "My Daughter, My Son," Inge Trachtenberg's book about her children's struggle with colitis. That's where I learned about the pouch.

Like the standard ileostomy, the Kock pouch involves removal of the colon and rectum. But, because it is continent, it requires only a gauze pad instead of an appliance.

The surgeon uses the last 14 inches of the small intestine to create a reservoir and a nipple valve to keep it closed. The reservoir or pouch is emptied two or three times a day by inserting a plastic tube into a stoma, or hole, a few inches below the waist.

I made an appointment to see Dr. Barry Salky, a Manhattan surgeon.

He spoke about the pouch, mentioning an 8 percent failure rate. Then he added: "When it is perfect, it's terrific. Your life will be 100 percent normal. The only limitation is deep-sea diving."

The operation would be rough and expensive. Physicians were at odds over safety and effectiveness. Frantically, I searched for a consensus. I remembered the resident who first brought up surgery.

The operation is controversial, he told me. It's permanent, it's a big decision. But he would hate to talk about back braces in five years, he said, referring to the long-range effects of prednisone.

Counting a relative who was a doctor, the vote was 3-2 in favor of surgery. I decided on the operation.

I woke up with a 10-inch scar bisecting my abdomen, and a nickel-sized stoma that looks like an overripe strawberry.

Months later, they remain difficult to accept. But if I ever doubt my decision, I have some vivid reminders of how things used to be: a stack of blue, 5-by-7 file cards documenting symptom after symptom, day after day of pain.

I still haven't figured out who won — me or ulcerative colitis. All I know is, it's gone.

Land of standing dead

TOUTLE, Wash. (AP) — They call it the land of the standing dead — the gray and ghostly upper Green River Valley where men like Louie Fanouy make their living falling and bucking the old growth timber.

With six-foot chain saws, ax and wedge they attack the giant Douglas fir that survived the eruption of Mount St. Helens May 18, 1980, but were cooked in place by the super-heated winds that followed.

The mountain isn't visible from where the loggers work. It's about 14 miles away, up and over a line of ridges.

Just as the 100-foot snags left standing have a nickname, so does the timber blown down by the eruption. It's called dead and down, and this time of year the ash that coats everything is very slippery

Michigan study shows that higher drinking age reduces accidents among young drivers

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Higher legal drinking ages in Michigan and Maine have effectively reduced the number of car accidents involving young people in those states, a University of Michigan researcher says.

In the first 12 months after December 1978, when the Michigan drinking age was raised from 18 to 21, the state had a 17 percent decline in non-injury road accidents involving drivers aged 18 to 20, said Alexander Wagenaar of Michigan's Highway Safety Research Institute.

The higher legal drinking ages "are an effective countermeasure" against alcohol-related auto accidents, which he called "the leading cause of death among youth."

Accidents resulting in death or injury in Michigan involving young people fell 28 percent after the drinking age was increased, and single-car crashes by men in the age group affected by the law declined 22 percent, according to the report.

The decline was calculated using the accident rate trends for that age group before the law took effect.

Wagenaar estimated that more than 1,600 Michigan drivers aged 18 to 20 years escaped injury or death in 1979 because of the new law.

Non-injury, alcohol-related crashes in Maine declined nearly 17 percent after the minimum drinking age was raised to 20 from 18 in 1977, the study said.

Although the study for Maine showed no significant changes from earlier trends in the rate of injuries or fatal accidents after the drinking age was raised, researchers said there was a sharp rise in serious crashes by young drivers where alcohol was not involved, and that might indicate the higher drinking age prevented a similar rise in alcohol-related accidents.

The study compared the alcohol-related accident rate in those affected by the increase of the drinking age in Michigan and Maine with similar age groups in New York and Pennsylvania, where the drinking ages remained 18 and 21, respectively.

The figures were adjusted to take into account such variables as the rising cost of fuel and the imposition of the national 55 mph speed limit in 1974. The study also included accident rates for other classes of drivers.

Neither Pennsylvania nor New York had a decline in the number of young people in alcohol-related accidents during the same periods.

Twenty-nine states lowered their legal drinking ages after ratification of the 26th amendment.

Social security action due

WASHINGTON (AP) — Action aimed at propping up the financially ailing Social Security system and a last-ditch effort to scuttle a multibillion-dollar breeder nuclear reactor were among the major issues facing Congress today.

House and Senate conferees working on the Social Security problem planned to consider a short-term proposal to revive the system by permitting borrowing among the program's three main trust funds — retirement, disability and hospital.

Under pressure from top Democratic leaders, the House Ways and Means Committee on Wednesday rejected a proposal to raise the regular retirement age of Social Security beneficiaries from 65 to 66 and change the way cost-of-living increases are calculated.

While conferees worked on Social Security, a second vote was scheduled in the Senate today on the Clinch River breeder nuclear reactor after senators gave the go-ahead Wednesday for it and another multibillion-dollar project.

Meanwhile, Reagan and some of his GOP Senate allies are moving in opposite directions on efforts to balance the budget in 1984 — the president ruling out big tax increases and Republican senators favoring them.

"It's certainly not our decision to add new taxes" to the $22 billion, three-year request Reagan already has made, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Wednesday.

Speakes made his comments as several administration sources reported that the president has told his economic advisers he opposes major new tax increases even if that means the budget can't be balanced by 1984.

But while Reagan was making his feelings known, sources said majority Republicans on the Senate Budget Committee agreed on a three-year plan to balance the budget in 1984 that includes more than $80 billion in new taxes.

In other congressional developments:

— A House-Senate conference committee is recommending a $7.8 billion appropriations bill that exceeds the president's revised budget by some $1.25 billion.

The bill for the Interior Department and related agencies still must be passed by both houses before going to the White House, where it could draw Reagan's first veto.

— Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told Congress Wednesday that its support for MX missiles and B-1 bombers "will make or break" efforts to negotiate a new strategic arms treaty with the Soviets next year.

Haig also disclosed there is a NATO contingency plan to fire a nuclear weapon "for demonstration purposes" should conventional war erupt in Europe.

Normal births are easier for mothers with herpes

CHICAGO (AP) — A new method of detecting genital herpes is making normal childbirth easier for the millions of women who have the disease, which is almost always deadly or disabling if contracted by newborn infants.

Genital herpes — a recurrent, untreatable disease that strikes several hundred thousand Americans every year — can be given to newborns as they pass through the birth canal if the mothers are having a herpes outbreak. The virus that causes the disease resides permanently in nerve cells and erupts periodically, creating blisters on the genitals or other areas of the body.

Half of the babies whose mothers have an outbreak will get the disease. Half of the babies who contract it will die. Two-thirds of those who live will have serious brain and nerve damage.

Many doctors advise delivery by Caesarean section whenever there is any question that a mother is having an outbreak. But Dr. James Harger of the University of Pittsburgh has developed a plan for testing mothers during pregnancy that allows many of them to have normal births.

"When I sit down with patients and tell them the risks, they say they want a Caesarean," Harger said. "After three or four visits they understand that a decision can be made rationally. Caesarean sections can be eliminated in most women at risk for herpes."

Harger's method is to take samples of skin from a mother's cervix and genitals weekly beginning in the 32nd week of pregnancy. Those samples are cultured in the laboratory to see if herpes virus is present.

Any woman who has shown no evidence of herpes for two weeks before birth is allowed to deliver normally.

Fugitive chase becomes a 'personal thing'

WEST TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Lt. Peter Coughlin has worked 26 years for the State Police and says he might retire were it not for a woman he is particularly keen to meet.

Coughlin, 50, has spent two years trying to find Joanne Chesimard, a.k.a. Assata Shakur, New Jersey's most wanted fugitive and a suspected leader of the Black Liberation Army.

"I can retire right now, but I don't want to until we get her," Coughlin said. "It gets to be a personal thing after a couple of years."

Ms. Chesimard was convicted of killing a state trooper in 1973, and she escaped from the Correctional Institution for Women at Clinton two years ago last Monday.

Her escape came about a year after establishment of the state police Fugitive Unit, which Coughlin heads.

People who make Coughlin's quarterly "12 Most Wanted" list are considered the most dangerous of some 800 New Jersey convicted or suspected criminals on the lam.

But of them all, Bronx-born Joanne Deborah Byron Chesimard has proven the most elusive. She remains the one Coughlin said he "would most definitely like to meet."

Until recently, Coughlin said his "best information" was that Ms. Chesimard was somewhere in California. He has maintained for years that she has been waging a small war on police, and evidence is now mounting to support his claim.

Scores of clues have indicated there may be a connection between Ms. Chesimard and the recent $1.6 million robbery of a Brink's truck during which two Nyack, N.Y., police officers and a Brink's guard were slain and three members of the radical Weather Underground were apprehended.

Four suspects in the case are believed to have ties to the B.L.A., including Anthony Laborde and Marilyn Buck, both still at large and both believed by authorities to have aided Ms. Chesimard's escape.

Laborde is a co-suspect with James Dixon York of Linden, N.J., in a New York shootout several months ago during which one policeman was slain and another wounded, Coughlin said.

York, who was captured and charged with the police shootings shortly after he was added to New Jersey's most wanted list, is also suspected of being one of the five who aided Ms. Chesimard's prison escape, Coughlin said.

Coughlin's search for Ms. Chesimard has been made more difficult because while the general public knows little of behind-the-scenes police work, Ms. Chesimard knows a great deal.

While she was in prison, she used the Freedom of Information Act to obtain more than 1,700 pages of FBI documents concerning her case, including details of police investigations.

New car sales still in slump

DETROIT (AP) — Car sales by the Big Three U.S. automakers fell 27.2 percent in October from the corresponding month last year, but the drop was less severe late in the month, the companies said Wednesday.

General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. sold a total of 466,225 cars for the month, down from 640,250 in 1980. In the Oct. 21-31 period, the automakers sold 182,357 cars, down from 227,748 sold in the period last year.

The 19.9 percent sales drop in the late October period compared with drops of 34.7 percent in the Oct. 1-10 period and 27.6 percent in the Oct. 11-20 period.

GM suffered the largest sales decline for the month, 29.4 percent, selling 295,473 cars for the month against 418,575 cars in October 1980. Ford's sales of 113,760 cars were down 25.6 percent from 152,832 in the month a year ago.

Chrysler sold 56,992 cars in October, compared to 68,843 in the 1980 month, a decline of 17.2 percent.

In the late-October selling period, GM's sales of 118,354 cars were down 23.8 percent from the 155,302 cars it sold in the 1980 period; Ford sold 43,799 cars, down 15.1 percent from 51,554, and Chrysler sales of 20,649 cars were 1.1 percent behind last year's 20,892.

For the first 10 months of 1981, Chrysler remains the only one of the Big Three automakers to show improvement, with sales of 636,772 cars up 17.5 percent from last year's 544,150.

Ballots under guard as candidates sweat it out

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — With voting machines impounded and state police guarding the ballots today after the contest went into overtime, there was little rest for the weary candidates in New Jersey's gubernatorial election.

"An election is nerve-wracking enough, but to have this tacked on to the end is doubly so," said Republican candidate Thomas H. Kean, who held a small, unofficial lead over Democrat James J. Florio in Tuesday's election.

Aides said Florio may initiate proceedings today for a recount, which could delay the outcome for several weeks. Since it was unclear which candidate had won, outgoing Democratic Gov. Brendan T. Byrne said each should be treated like a governor-elect and ordered state police protection for both.

The News Election Service's final but unofficial count, released Wednesday, showed Kean having 1,142,174 votes to 1,141,016 for Florio. The tally by the vote-counting service for news organizations had shown the lead passing back and forth early Wednesday.

That gave Kean an unofficial margin of 1,158 votes, the narrowest in a New Jersey gubernatorial election since Democrat George C. Ludlow defeated Republican Frederic A. Potts by 651 votes in 1880, according to state records. But only about 245,000 ballots were cast that year.

Vista of university campus stolen from viewers

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The arrow on the faded campus map on the low wall around the edge of the University of Texas Tower observation deck says, "You are here."

But you probably never will be. The panoramic vista of a growing campus and a changing Austin is a forbidden view, stolen from sightseers by a series of suicide leaps and a disturbed ex-Marine who used the deck as headquarters for his one-man war against the world. Several student groups say it's time to reopen the Tower deck, closed in 1975 by UT regents. The Tower observation deck is a resource of the state of Texas, a resource which can provide enjoyment, visual refreshment and uplift to its people," said student Julie Tindall in a campus newspaper column.

Miss Tindall offered some suggestions for making the Tower deck — 231 feet above the ground — a more secure place. "We have learned the hard way that it is a resource which, like most resources, cannot be left in its natural state; it must be altered if humans are to safely use it," she said. In the early 1970s UT officials looked for ways to make it safe for humans. Robert Mettlen, vice president for administration, said the estimates ranged from $50,000 to $150,000. The ideas included a glass shield, iron bars and other barriers. "I suspect they found the proposals for remodeling were far from satisfactory," Mettlen said of the Regents' decision to close the deck.

Mettlen came to UT a month after Charles Whitman killed 16 people before police killed him in 1966. The building walls on the deck still show evidence of the shots fired at Whitman. It was that incident, coupled with several suicides, that prompted the closing of the popular tourist spot. The remodeling proposals were discounted, and the "Closed" sign went up. "It was a simple answer to a difficult problem, and perhaps it was the right decision for its time," said Miss Tindall.

However, she said the 1982 UT Centennial celebration would be a good time to reopen the deck. She called for student letters to President Peter Flawn in support of the change. "It's not likely," said Mettlen. UT does not need a tourist attraction in the middle of the campus, on top of a busy office building. "The Tower has ceased being our main library. It's a working office building. For us to now make it an obvious and substantial tourist attraction would be to visit upon a central and congested part of the campus a flow of visitors that would be quite disruptive," he said.

Miss Tindall suggested letting tourists in only on weekends and at night. Mettlen said it would be an expensive change, requiring some security measures. "The concern about people taking their life from the Tower is a very real concern. And again, the middle of the campus is not the place to bring hundreds of visitors to gaze at the Capitol or the Hill Country," said Mettlen.

Despite the skyward growth of downtown Austin, the view from the Tower is still awesome. There's a "No Sightseeing" sign near the stairs leading to the deck. Reporters and photographers are accompanied to the deck by a campus policeman.

Rancher gives city slickers opportunity to visit nature at Ah Wilderness Ranch

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer
AH! WILDERNESS, Colo. (AP) — The smoke-belching train chugs to a stop and the city slickers scramble off, holding tight to stiff new cowboy hats and blinking cinders out of their eyes.

The weathered rancher with the white flag waits for his eager charges beside the narrow railroad tracks. As each staggers toward him lugging overweight suitcases, he enfolds the stranger in a bear hug.

Then Ross McCausland throws wide his arms in an embrace of earth and sky and proclaims: "Welcome to Ah! Wilderness."

It is an outsider's introduction to the 80 acres of hospitality McCausland and three other generations of his family have carved out for themselves in El Canyon del Rio de las Animas Perdidas — The Canyon of the River of Lost Souls.

Ah! Wilderness Guest Ranch has no telephone or television. It is five miles from the nearest tiny hamlet and can only be reached on foot, horseback, or via the famous narrow gauge train that plies the twisting Animas River gorge between Durango and Silverton.

McCausland's retreat, open to paying guests from June through September, was created to bring families together and help adults get away from it all.

Many famous film stars have made movies in the rugged San Juan National Forest area that surrounds the McCausland spread, but what the movie-goers didn't see is the actual McCausland homestead, its huge organic garden and fruit trees and the 23 outbuildings laboriously constructed by McCausland men.

McCausland bought his patch of lush meadow for $5,000 in 1947. It only came with a rundown log house and the promise of a dream.

"I was a research engineer in Detroit for 10 years," recalls the tan, lean grandfather. "Once I determined that everybody who was doing the same job I was only lived long enough to retire and die a year later. I thought 'What am I accomplishing?' So I quit and came home."

His father, a pioneer Colorado silver prospector, had recently died so the family took over his zinc and copper mine near Silverton. McCausland and his wife, Ethel, lived in a one-room cabin 12,000 feet up the side of a barren mountain, cooking for 10 miners and caring for baby daughters Joan and Judy. In 1947 the price of lead tumbled from 29 cents to six cents a pound and McCausland started looking for a better way to earn a living.

That May he and Ah! Wilderness — as yet unnamed — found each other. The original ramshackle cabin became the heart of the ranch, its exterior a marvel of rough-hewn logs and its interior paneled in warm knotty pine.

Dr. Lamb

Hair loss after pregnancy

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — About three months ago I gave birth to my second baby. Since then I have been losing a lot of hair. With my first baby I lost some hair but nothing to be alarmed about. In my family only two persons have this problem, one is my father and the other one is a distant aunt. I don't know why my father is bald but my aunt had 12 kids. My mother said that was the cause of it.

My obstetrician advised me to see a dermatologist, but they charge so much that I would like to know if there is something I can do. I have always had healthy hair and I condition my hair twice a week. Also I have quit blow drying. Could it be a lack of vitamins?

DEAR READER — It is always sound advice to see a dermatologist if you are having unexplained hair loss. In your case the most likely cause is your recent pregnancy.

In normal people part of the hair follicles are resting at any one time and others are active producing the hair shaft. At a certain point in each hair follicle's cycle it drops the shaft and rests a while, like a tree dropping its leaves. During pregnancy more follicles are activated, probably because of the increased hormone levels. The hair is thick and abundant. After pregnancy more than the usual number of follicles shed at the same time, causing the marked hair loss and thin hair. This is temporary and as the hair follicles get back on their usual cycle the problem disappears.

I am glad to hear that you are taking good care of your hair. That will help. For other tips on managing hair to avoid hair loss and other problems, I am sending you The Health Letter number 12-6, Hair Care.

Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

I doubt you have a vitamin deficiency but you should be sure to eat a well-balanced diet with an adequate number of calories and an adequate amount of protein. Low calorie diets, particularly crash diets, can cause hair loss. A woman who wants to lose weight after pregnancy may complicate the problem with such a diet.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been told I have a dilated ring in my left side. I have searched the medical books and cannot find what this is. All I can find is a hernia. Can you tell me what this is?

DEAR READER — When a male is developing before birth the testicles are inside the abdomen. Normally, before birth they descend into the scrotum. To do this they pass through a hole in the lower wall of the abdominal muscles. This fairly complex area of muscular arrangement is called the inguinal ring. The opening in the ring is guarded by muscular attachments and muscles to prevent an inguinal hernia. Women have a comparable, but stronger, structure.

If the ring is enlarged or weakened, doctors often refer to it as a dilated ring, or a relaxed ring, meaning it is not as tight around the cord as they might like.

That is not a hernia and does not need to be repaired by surgery. You should have no problem with it. However, if you have any abdominal fat you might be wise to lose it to decrease any pressure inside the abdomen that could further weaken the area.

Wright FASHIONS

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Maybe the heartlands of America still speak 100 percent English, but in the larger cities, it's getting tougher and tougher to move about without an interpreter.

Don't get me wrong, I will buy anything touted by a foreign accent from yogurt to moisturizer that promises to erase my face. Somehow, I seem to feel people from another country know what they're talking about and would not lie to me.

But I'm talking basic communication. I am here to tell you there is not one English-speaking cab driver in the entire state of California. Last week, I climbed into a cab driven by Boris Szorgyoklov who was born in Odessa, Russia.

The word "Hello" was cookie time for Boris. It made me wonder how he had come to an American freeway behind the wheel of a Japanese car.

I could only surmise he arrived in this country and went to a placement bureau where a sociologist gave him a test. At the end, the sociologist said, "You cannot speak a word of English. You have never driven a car in your entire life. You come from a rural community. You are qualified for only one job:

driving a cab in Los Angeles."

The week before, I got an Arab cab driver who could speak only four words: "I am not rich!" As he snapped a $20 bill out of my hand for a ten minute ride, I taught him three more new words: "You're getting there."

Obviously, there is logic as to where non-English-speaking immigrants are hired. Putting them in charge of room service phones in large hotels seems to be a great outlet. Another favorite is answering the buzzer from your hospital room when you are having difficulty in sleeping, sitting up or breathing.

And is there any greater fear than to have a hairdresser with a pair of scissors over your head who does not understand one word of what you are saying? Or how about the surgeon who asks in perfect Spanish, "Is this the patient?" (Suppose we all look alike to them.)

I'll never forget the woman I met once in South America who told me she sent her son to this country to learn how to speak English fluently.

"Where is he?" I asked. "Miami, Florida," she smiled. It figures.

Thanks to you it's working

Dear Abby

Tourists leave L.A. natives restless

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Would you please do all of us Los Angeles folks a favor and tell the people who live in other parts of the country what not to expect when they come out here for a visit?

First, let them know it's a pain-in-the-neck to meet them at the airport. It is under construction now (what airport isn't?), there's no parking, and it would be so much easier if they would jump into a taxi or an airport bus.

Everybody wants to see Disneyland, which is not even in Los Angeles County! It's a 12-hour ordeal to get there, see it all and get back. Then they want to see Beverly Hills, go through the movie studios, and they think they can just pop in to see all the talk shows and game shows without arranging for tickets in advance!

They also want to go to Las Vegas, which is a good six-hour drive. All of this sight-seeing involves tons of traffic, gasoline and time — not to mention money. It's very hard on our nerves as we already have to fight the freeways every day. They seem to forget that they are on vacation, we aren't.

When we Southern Californians visit our relatives back East (or wherever), we are content to sit on the porch and talk or go fishing. Why can't they do the same when they come here?

I, for one, have had it with these glamour-seeking tourists, and from now on I'm going to simply hand them my car keys and a map, and say, "Go to it."

EXHAUSTED ANGELENO

DEAR EXHAUSTED: Nobody visits Southern California to sit on the porch and talk or go fishing — there's too much to do and see out here. That's why people come in the first place.

Sausage festival

On Sunday, Nov. 8, Umbarger celebrates its German Catholic roots with a sausage festival that attracts well over 4,000 people to the small agricultural community.

The menu includes German sausage, sauerkraut, potatoes and gravy, green beans, applesauce, and bread, both whole wheat and white. Everything is homemade with food preparations beginning almost two months before the big day.

The cost for the meal is $5 for adults and $2 for children. The German Sausage Festival has grown so large, according to Reba Raef, a longtime resident, that they no longer go in for radio and television advertising but rely on word of mouth.

She said the festival has become such an important community project that every available pair of hands both Catholic and non-Catholic are used for the event.

An added feature is the country store which sells home-baked goods, dolls, stuffed toys and embroidery. Mrs. Raef said holiday shoppers usually stock up on the baked goods for Christmas.

If it had not been for the suggestion of a German priest almost 30 years ago, Umbarger might still be having chicken dinners instead of their now famous sausage festival.

"A parish priest by the name of Farther Andrew Marthaler suggested that instead of a chicken dinner, we should have something in keeping with our German heritage. It (sausage festival) was a success from the very first year," remembered Mrs. Raef.

The German Festival starts at 11 a.m. and ends at 4 p.m.

DEAR ABBY: I have to chuckle when I hear these young housewives complain about cooking. Abby, they don't even know what cooking is. Everything they put on the table comes out of a can or has already been prepared and frozen, and all they have to do is thaw it out and heat it up.

There are delis and "ready-to-go" carry-out meals that just have to be picked up. And if they're too lazy to go and get it, it can be delivered to their door!

OLD-FASHIONED COOK

DEAR O.F.: Yes — isn't it wonderful!

...

DEAR ABBY: Recently I found out that my 10-year-old daughter is smoking. I also found out that she was caught stealing in a drugstore with another child her age. And now to top it off, I was told by her older sister that she has tried pot!

She's basically a good girl, gets good grades in school and is very well-liked by others. My first impulse was to give her a good old-fashioned spanking.

How would you treat this situation?

CAN'T HANDLE IT

DEAR CAN'T: Punishment won't help; it will only make her more careful so as not to get caught. Your daughter needs loving reinforcement and a closer relationship with you. Work on it. And if she continues her anti-social behavior, consult a child psychologist for his/her recommendations. Kids who break all the rules at an early age are usually crying for attention.

Apricot swoons

1 1/2 cups thick apricot preserves
1 cup ground almonds
1 teas. almond extract
1/4 cup grated semi-sweet chocolate dash salt
1 package (17 1/4 ounces) Pepperidge Farm frozen puff pastry sheets
1 egg, beaten slightly
Chopped almonds

Combine first five ingredients. Thaw pastry sheets 20 minutes then unfold. On a sugar sprinkled board, roll out each sheet to a 12 inch square. Cut off uneven edges and cut each sheet into 16 - 3 inch squares. Place about a teaspoonful of mixture on each square and fold over into fingers or triangles. Seal by pressing edges together with flour-dipped fork tines. Place approximately 1 inch apart on ungreased baking sheet and prick with fork tines. Bake in preheated 400 degree oven until puffed and golden, approximately 8 minutes.
Makes 32 triangles.

Astro-Graph
by bernice bede osol

November 6, 1981
A busy and fun social schedule is something you'll have to look forward to over the coming months. This could be a romantic year for unattached Scorpios.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Although you'll be in a sociable mood today, being around friends who are too aggressive could take the edge off your gaiety. Seek more complacent types. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You should be rather lucky at getting what you want today, but you must be careful not to use tactics that could tarnish your image.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have good ideas today, but you might not have as much faith in them as you should. A strong-willed critic could convince you to change them.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Ventures you personally control should turn out profitably today, but situations in which you're involved with another could prove costly.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Try to be as tolerant with your mate today as you are with intimate friends. You should give your spouse the same consideration you extend to pals.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll be extremely cooperative and helpful with persons who do not make demands of you. However, if you are pushed, you're apt to turn down their request.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Friends who comply with your way of thinking will find you easy to get along with today. Those who challenge your views will discover your argumentative side.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're a good producer today, provided you're allowed to move at your own pace. When you're pushed, the quality of your performance deteriorates.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Avoid playing favorites with close associates today. You could alienate a potentially valuable ally through a thoughtless snub.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be careful in joint ventures requiring an outlay of funds. There is a possibility you may be assessed for more than you should pay.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There's a chance that persons with whom you should deal firmly will get away with a lot, while you may come down too hard on one who deserves extra consideration.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your inclinations are helpful and kind today, but you may tie strings to your good deeds and make those whom you assist feel obligated.

Farmers' net income to decline in 1982

WASHINGTON (AP) — A team of Agriculture Department experts said today that farmers' net income is expected to decline again in 1982 — perhaps by $1 billion to $3 billion — but there are a few bright spots.

For example, they said, farmers' equity in their operations has continued to grow, averaging $379,000 per farm last Jan. 1 against $303,000 on Jan. 1, 1979, a 25 percent increase in two years.

"Serious cash flow problems over the last two years, however, have forced many farmers to borrow heavily against their equity to finance current-year farm operations," they said.

The analysts — George Hoffman, Allen Smith and Gary Lucier of the department's Economic Research Service — made their report in a paper for the annual Agricultural Outlook Conference.

"Many farmers have substantial off-farm income," the report said. "Last year over 60 percent of total farm family income was from off-farm sources."

Despite the gloomy outlook for farm income, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block continues to hang tough on new farm legislation.

At a news conference Tuesday, Block criticized a House-passed farm measure as being too costly, too repressive and too much afield from Reagan administration free-market policies.

The administration prefers the Senate version, which is less costly and has more flexibility. A House-Senate conference committee is scheduled to begin work today to iron out differences.

Meanwhile, a coalition of farm organizations and commodity groups has petitioned congressional farm leaders, Block and President Reagan to support a compromise "at least equal to the provisions" in the House farm bill for grain, milk and wool.

Without substantial changes, the groups said, farmers face "the largest number of bankruptcies... relatively speaking, than at any time since the 1930s."

Block, who was asked to respond to the coalition's assertions, said that he appreciated that "farm prices are not good" and that "many producers are in a bind."

"But the solution to it is certainly not high target prices which could mean a direct payment out of the Treasury," Block said.

Target prices are levels which determine how much subsidy is paid if market prices slump below the targets. Many farm groups want the new legislation to include higher targets.

Block said higher target prices "would do far more damage in the long run" by adding to federal costs and inflation and pushing up interest rates still further.

"The solution is not more money out of the Treasury, and the solution is not government programs that have a great amount of government meddling in farmers' business," he said.

Block said Reagan would meet with congressional farm leaders in hopes of winning their support for the administration's view on the legislation.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Processed grain and other food items are being considered as possibilities for a new long-term agreement with the Soviet Union, says Agriculture Secretary John R. Block.

Block was asked Tuesday at a news conference if the new agreement would include "value-added" products in addition to the raw wheat and corn that is covered by the current agreement.

"Not necessarily, but we're looking at it closely and I think that it is possible that we will," Block replied. The subject is "under consideration" but no decision has been made, he said.

After the Soviet Union made large runs on U.S. granaries in 1975, a five-year agreement was worked out under which the Soviets would buy regular quantities of wheat and corn annually.

The original pact expired on Sept. 30 but was extended for a year until a new agreement can be worked out. Negotiations are expected to begin by next spring, although no time schedule has been announced.

Asked for examples of value-added products that might be included in a new agreement, Block said he "wouldn't want to leave the impression that they would be written into it, definitely."

However, he said flour, high-protein corn gluten feed, soybean meal, meat and other items could be included.

"Perhaps, instead of writing in these specific kinds of value-added products, it would just say 'value-added products' of a certain volume," Block said.

"There are so many variations and possibilities that I wouldn't want to speculate that one or the other would be chosen."

On the other hand, he said, "I would not want to jeopardize a good, sound agreement by pressing the issue of value-added products, because I think there's a good chance we could sell them anyway."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The use of sweeteners made from corn continues to grow and is likely to rise further over the next few years, says the Agriculture Department.

Per capita consumption of the corn sweeteners — which includes glucose, dextrose and HFCS or high fructose corn syrup — is estimated at a record of 44.8 pounds this year, up from 40.6 pounds in 1980.

Analysts at the annual Agricultural Outlook Conference here this week said projections indicate the per capita use of corn sweeteners will increase to 47.4 pounds in 1982, 49.9 pounds in 1983, 52.3 pounds in 1984, and 54.6 pounds in 1985.

Per capita use of refined sugar, by comparison, is expected to average 79.7 pounds this year, down from 83.7 in 1980. Projections show a continued decline through 1985 when the average is expected to be 70.5 pounds per capita.

New anti-busing measure win's Senate sub-committee's approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal courts would be barred from ordering busing for the purpose of desegregating public schools under legislation approved by a Senate subcommittee.

The proposal now is awaiting action by the Senate Judiciary Committee, which is considered likely to approve it during the next two weeks.

It was approved Tuesday by the panel's subcommittee on the Constitution in a 4-1 vote. Sen. Orrin Hatch, the Utah Republican who chairs the subcommittee and wrote the bill, said he hopes it will become the focal point for busing opponents in Congress.

Other legislation is pending that would limit federal judges' authority over issues such as abortion and school prayer.

In other action in Congress Tuesday: — Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee said in a Senate speech that reports of a White House blacklist for senators who voted against the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia are untrue.

Baker, who was instrumental in President Reagan's successful efforts to block the $8.5 billion arms deal, also said no trades or deals were made to win votes. He said his statements were based on discussions he had with Reagan and top administration advisers.

— Costs of complying with the Clean Air Act should continue not to be a factor in establishing primary pollution limits, the Senate Environment Committee agreed in a preliminary vote.

Republican and Democratic members of the panel, which is beginning its work on reauthorization, said the tentative stand, which must be followed by a formal vote on exact language, represents a consensus on the issue.

The action is a setback for segments of industry that want the cost of air pollution control equipment at least considered in setting primary standards and determining margins of safety.

— The Senate directed Amtrak to resume operating the Cardinal passenger train between Washington, D.C., and Chicago. The run was eliminated Sept. 30 in an effort by the national passenger train system to cut costs.

The Senate included the language in its version of the Transportation Department appropriations bill. The House version has no mention of the run, so the issue will have to be resolved by a conference committee.

Column's anniversary marred by threats

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — On this the fourth anniversary of Mulligan's Stew, classical scholars and medievalists are threatening to boil the stew master in his own juices for bobbling the word "matriculation" in a recent column about an Irish castle.

I will have to rise and go now to the lake isle of Innisfree and a round tower of clay and wattles build in a bee-loud glade to hide out, like a hunted Irish monk, until their fury abates, if this column is to survive for another four-year term.

The tempest roared when I said a guide at Cahir Castle informed us the tiny openings atop the crenelated walls were for matriculation, pouring offal and bubbling oil onto the heads of invaders. Outraged readers were quick to point out that the word I heard was "machicolation." First off the mark was city editor Jay Brushart of the Portsmouth, (Ohio) Daily Times, a medieval buff who knows what splendor falls from castle walls when the correct word is used.

From Anchorage, Alaska, Philis Walker calls attention to another boo-boo: "Cook Inlet doesn't freeze solid during winter because of the extremes in tides... You were probably referring to the Nenana Ice Classic, about 300 miles north, where a tripod is set on the ice to record the exact minute (the ice unfreezes) by pulling a line attached to a clock."

Courteously attacking my column attacking attempts to unsex the language of the Bible, Elsie Hamm, Ph.D. in Lawton, Okla., suggests that "for all your obvious lilting Irish love of words, you are really a few bricks short of a full load when it comes to defending sexist language. Why is it always a man who pokes fun? If men were referred to in Scripture, sermons and hymns as 'sisters,' would they be comfortable and uncomplaining?" Despite these brickbats, which may help us attain a full load again, Mulligan's Stew will continue its policy of letting the readers have their say on each birthday of the column. Behind the barbed wire barricades here at Hardscribble House, comforted by the baying of our ferocious, snaggle-toothed hounds, we dare to be tolerant and understanding with our critics.

On occasion, even a few rose petals are tossed over the fence by the mail carrier. "Thanks for your printed words," writes Leonard W. Leeds from Atlanta, Ga. "You range far and wide as you write. Your Alaskan reports were lyrical in an adventurous way."

Keep those letters coming in, although when stamps reach a buck apiece I expect the complaints to taper off.

RETURNING STARTER. Junior Leslie Albus, who was District 3-5A's sophomore of the year in 1980, was one of the top players for the Pampa High volleyball squad this season. Albus, along with Alicia Brewer and Carla Rogers, will play leadership roles for the Harvesters next season. Several players from Pampa's JV district champions will also be counted on. Pampa logged a 17-10 overall record, but won only two of eight games in District 3-5A.

Pampa spikers let big games get away in '81

Pampa High girls' volleyball squad finished the 1981 season with a respectable 17-10 overall record, but faltered in District 3-5A play. Coach Lynn Wolfe will try to correct Pampa's 2-6 district mark with a more aggressive style next season. "We're going to try to improve on our diving and going to the floor," coach Wolfe said. "We want to attack more and take the ball to them rather than playing defense all the time." Three fulltime starters—Leslie Albus, Alicia Brewer and Carla Rogers—return as seniors next season. Albus was the district's sophomore of the year in 1980. This threesome will combine with Pampa's junior varsity team that compiled an 18-2 record and won the district JV title. "We'll have more speed and we should be more competitive," coach Wolfe said. "We're still going to be short, but we're going to have some good jumpers." Keva Richardson and Sweet Simmons, both 5-9, will be the tallest players. "Both of these girls will help us," Wolfe said. "They don't have much experience yet, but both have good blocking ability. They were sophomores this season." Other returnees who saw lots of varsity action were Teresa Glover, Gaye Hurst and Joan Burns. Moving up from the junior varsity are Cynthia Powell, Tina Bunton, Lori Stephens, Tina Greenway, Gwen Simpson, Stacy Brown and Liz Neslage. "Our junior varsity team lost only one game to the Amarillo schools this year, so I feel real good about that," coach Wolfe said. "On paper, it looks like we'll do all right next year." The Harvesters won as many as five matches in a row this season and was runnerup in the West Texas Tournament. "We just didn't win the big ones," coach Wolfe pointed out. "It's the district games you want to win." Amarillo High and Tascosa will play for the district title tonight. Tascosa won the first-half title while AHS won the second half.

Lefors closes football season tonight

Lefors closes out an abbreviated season tonight against Fritch Junior Varsity, starting at 7:30 p.m. on the home field. "Fritch has good overall strength from the looks of them," says Lefors coach Jim Allen. "They've got the tall, rangy type players. Lefors, which is in its first year of football since 1977, has been unbeaten against junior varsity teams. The Pirates' only losses were to the Follett and Miami varsities. Lefors, 5-2, had been injury-free until two weeks ago when blocking back Roy Livingston sustained strained ligaments in his knee during the Pirates' 16-7 win over Stinnett Junior Varsity. "Roy's not going to be able to play tonight and that's really going to affect our offense," Allen said. "He's a fine blocker." Cody Allison will take Livingston's place, Allen added. Monte Baskett is Lefors' leading rusher with 935 yards in seven games. "There were a lot of game where he only played a quarter or a half," Allen added. Baskett, a senior, will be missed next season when Lefors enters District 1-A with Groom, McLean, Miami, Wheeler, Booker, Berger Phillips, Claude and Follett. "It's going to be a tough district," Allen said. "Phillips and Wheeler have been brought down to Class A from AA, so they're used to tough competition." Allen is looking for an opponent Sept.

10 to fill out Lefors 1981 football schedule. Interested persons can contact Allen at Lefors High School, 79065 or by calling 833-2533. NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — Amelia Rorer, a member of the LPGA, can really send the ball flying despite her 4-foot-11 height. "I can hit it with everybody except the really long drivers," Rorer told Golf Digest. The petite golfer employs a caddy who towers over her. He is Jerry Schneider, who is 6-8. Rorer uses woods which have stainless steel heads.

Holmes defends WBA title Friday night against Snipes

PITTSBURGH (AP) — "It's tough making a living on the floor," says Renaldo Snipes of the lesson he learned in his fight against Gerrie Coetzee. So the 25-year-old Snipes got off the floor twice against Coetzee last Aug. 9, won a highly disputed 10-round split decision. Now he will get $150,000 and a chance at the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship when he fights Larry Holmes Friday night at the 17,000-seat Civic Arena. Holmes' 11th title defense, as well as a 10-round heavyweight bout between Michael Dokes and George Chaplin, will be televised live by ABC from 9 p.m. to 11 p.m. EST.

fight Holmes, the challenger — who likes to be called "Mister Snipes" — said he would employ "the moves that got me to 22-0." Holmes, who did not attend the luncheon, joked to reporters in his hotel suite that he hasn't watched tapes of any Snipes fights because "I don't want to get my spirits down. I don't want to say, 'If he fights like this, why am I training so hard?'" "Larry's going to come in in the best shape of his life. They know they're fighting the best of the top 10 contenders," said Snipes who is ranked No. 7 by the WBC. Holmes appears to be in excellent shape and, while his training has as a long-range goal his scheduled fight against top-ranked Gerry Cooney next March, he says he has not forgotten about Snipes. "I'll tell you, Cooney is Snipes and Snipes is Cooney," said Holmes, explaining that a fighter must be ready for any opponent. As for fighting Snipes for $1.1 million, instead of waiting for a $10 million payday against Cooney, he said: "Man, I can't count money I don't have. I got to fight. I got to continue to practice my profession."

"I thought I won that fight," said Snipes of his bout against Coetzee. "I came on strong. I took the last part of the fight." But it seems most people who watched Snipes' nationally televised performance against the South African felt he lost. Asked at a news luncheon Wednesday how he would

BOB HARMON PRO FORECAST
Sunday and Monday, November 8 and 9

DENVER 17 - CLEVELAND 10
This might be DE-fense. DE-fense. DE-fense. Broncos allowed only 112 points through 8 games. Browns, more porous, gave up 172. Denver nipped Cleveland last year, 19-16.

DETROIT 27 - WASHINGTON 21
Redskins have won six straight over lions since 1968, but Detroit, on the road, favored to break string - by six. Washington finishing 3-game home-stand, unusual scheduling.

HOUSTON 20 - OAKLAND 17
Raiders and Saints still tied for poorest point-production in NFL thru eight games, 98 points. Last year's Oakland total 364! Oilers coming off big toughies with Bengals.

KANSAS CITY 28 - CHICAGO 10
Bears broke 4-game losing streak two weeks ago with huge upset over Chargers. Just don't think very surprising Chiefs will let it happen. KC creating crisis in AFC West!

LOS ANGELES 20 - NEW ORLEANS 13
Rams upset by Saints second game of season 23-17. After N.O. whipped Bengals two weeks ago, could just happen again. No doubt that team talent levelling off throughout NFL.

MINNESOTA 24 - TAMPA BAY 23
Viking five-game win streak broken two weeks ago by Cards. Bucs beat Vikes 21-13 in season opener in Tampa Bay. With 7 games left, NFC Central is 3-team scramble for title.

NEW ENGLAND 26 - MIAMI 24
Pats whipped Dolphins 34-0 in first meeting in '80, then lost 16-13. Like most other NFL'ers, Pats hold hot hands one week, then fall flat the next. Miami down two points.

NEW YORK GIANTS 27 - GREEN BAY 17
Giants, Chiefs, Dolphins, and 49ers are 1981 surprise teams. Thru eight games, NY defense third best in NFL. Last fall Pack lost to Giants 27-21. Green Bay, home, down.

NEW YORK JETS 30 - BALTIMORE 20
AFC East match-up. Colts whipped Jets twice last season 35-21, 17-14. Thru first 8 games, these two gave up total of 473 points (maybe score 11 be 60-50). NY by ten.

PHILADELPHIA 30 - ST. LOUIS 17
Cards tough at home. Have won three of four, including upsets of Cowboys and Vikings, so Eagles no shoo-in in this NFC East meeting. Teams split in meetings last fall.

PITTSBURGH 24 - SEATTLE 20
Steelers and Seahawks have met just twice, in '77 and '78, Pitt winning both. Seattle plays five of final seven games at home, but they lost all eight home games in 1980!

SAN DIEGO 21 - CINCINNATI 20
Picking winner in close ones compares to drawing straws. Both have identical power quotients. Recently, Bears dumped S.D., N.O. upset Bengals. S.D. has longer straw!

SAN FRANCISCO 28 - ATLANTA 27
Astounding NFC West-leading 49ers entertain division rival Falcons in return match. Atlanta won earlier at home 34-17 for 4th straight win over S.F. 49ers by big one.

(Monday) DALLAS 23 - BUFFALO 21
Fantastic NFC East - AFC East match-up between two of last year's play-off teams. These two surprisingly met only in '71 and '78, Cowboys winning both. Dallas by two at home.

TCU cage program hit with one-year probation

FIRST WITGM Texas (AP) — Texas Christian University's basketball program has been put on a year's probation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association for alleged violations in the recruiting of a player a Fort Worth newspaper reported today.

The player, Darrell Lovett, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram he was given clothes, spending money and airplane tickets home by an assistant basketball coach at TCU. He also accused the coach of falsifying transcript information so Lovett would appear eligible for enrollment at TCU.

The probation carries no sanctions, meaning the Horned Frogs will be eligible for postseason tournament play and television appearances, the newspaper reported.

Despite repeated telephone calls, head basketball coach Jim Killingsworth, assistant coach Charlie Fenske, athletic director Frank Windegger nor chancellor William E. Tucker could be reached Wednesday night to respond to Lovett's accusations.

However, Tucker scheduled a news conference today. An official in the TCU athletic department, who told the Star-Telegram he did not want his name used, said Lovett's accusations are total fabrications, devised because he developed a grudge after he was dismissed from the team.

Lovett, reached at his mother's home in LaGrange, Ga., said he told the NCAA of his accusations against TCU after he left the team in 1979, then discovered he was ineligible to enroll at Morris Brown College in Atlanta.

Morris Brown officials advised him to contact the NCAA with his allegations, he said.

"TCU got rid of me... they were just afraid the NCAA was going to come down on them, so they thought they'd get rid of me before I said anything," said Lovett, who claims he was enrolled illegally.

"The first thing they (TCU officials) did was... get me some hours. I didn't have

Bird paces Celtics past Chicago, 115-93

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD AP Sports Writer

The Boston Celtics and Chicago Bulls are both big and strong on the front line, but the reason the Celtics are National Basketball Association champions, says Larry Bird, is that they also can run.

"They're big and we're big, but we have team speed,"

Bird said Wednesday night after Boston defeated Chicago 115-93. "The difference between the two teams is our big guys run. Guys like (Robert) Parish, (Kevin) McHale, (Rick) Robey and the rest are willing to pay the price."

Bird also could have included himself in his list of big men who will dash up and down the court. He popped in 26 points, all in the first and third quarters, to pace the Celtics attack.

In other NBA games, Atlanta tripped New Jersey 95-86, Philadelphia stayed unbeaten with a 107-99 victory over Indiana, San Antonio bombed Cleveland 128-102, Kansas City edged San Diego 129-128, Denver clipped Houston 112-100, Los Angeles nipped Seattle 106-103 and undefeated Portland nudged Golden State 109-108.

The Celtics, who eliminated Chicago in four straight games in last year's playoffs, registered their 10th victory in the last 11 games with the Bulls. However, Boston Coach Bill Fitch was not certain his team could continue to dominate Chicago.

"The score tonight is no indication of what will happen the next five games with them this season," Fitch said. "We're going to have to play a lot better to beat them."

Fitch said the Celtics won despite a lot of "silly errors," and he added, "I'm not so greedy that I won't take a victory, but we got away with a lot of mistakes we might not get away with on the road."

Bird's 12 points in the first period paced the Celtics to a 17-3 lead and they were never caught. The Boston bench scored a total of 50 points, including 21 by McHale.

Reggie Theus led Chicago with 26 points.

76ers 107, Pacers 99

Philadelphia won its fourth straight season as Julius

Erving scored 30 points including 14 in the first quarter, against Indiana.

The Pacers never led after the first period, but they trailed only 98-96 late in the game before the 76ers scored seven points in a row to ice the game.

Blazers 109, Warriors 106

Mike Harper scored a slam-dunk basket with 11 seconds left after teammate Calvin Natt stole a pass, giving Portland its fourth consecutive victory this season.

The Blazers trailed Goldeke State by as many as 16 points in the third period before yallying behind guard Jim Paxson, who had 22 points.

Joe Barry Carroll had 30 for the Warriors.

Yankees acquire Griffey

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Griffey is not about to get into any debate on whether he can make New York Yankees fans forget Reggie Jackson.

But, since Griffey has spent much of his major league career as a right fielder for his former employer, the Cincinnati Reds, the questions had to be fielded about his replacing Jackson, who has announced his intention to go through the free agent re-entry draft Nov. 13.

The 31-year-old speedster was acquired by the Yankees Wednesday in exchange for minor-league pitcher Brian Ryder and a player to be named later.

Calling Griffey "a proven quantity, a great player and a gentleman," Lou Saban, president of the Yankees, introduced the new Yankee player at a Yankee Stadium news conference.

Griffey, with a lifetime batting average of .307 and coming off a .311 season, spent eight seasons with the National League Reds.

"I'm here to do the job they hired me to do — play the outfield. I play wherever the manager puts me," said Griffey, who also was eligible to become a free agent this year.

Pressed on whether he could fill Jackson's shoes with the Yankees, the diplomatic Griffey shrugged and said, "In terms of defense, I know I can. But Reggie can do an awful lot of things on offense. I'm a lifetime .300 hitter, though, and I can do some things, too. But, whatever happens, I've played right field, center and left field. I'll do what the manager tells me to do."

Jackson, at his home in Carmel, Calif., said he was "stunned" by the Yankees' acquisition of Griffey.

"Wow, that's unreal," he said. "George asked me to come and see him. I don't know if it'll be a waste of time now. It doesn't look good for the home team here... does it? I don't think it looks good for me."

"The situation is too volatile for me to say anything now. I'll just call George today or tomorrow."

Griffey came up through the Cincinnati farm system and has been in the major leagues since 1974. The left-handed batter has hit more than .300 in five of his seven big league seasons.

He underwent knee surgery late in the 1979 season, but came back to play in 146 games in 1980, batting .294 with career highs of 13 homers and 85 runs batted in.

The three-time NL All-Star scored 65 runs, batted in 34 and stole 12 bases while playing in 101 games during the strike-shortened 1981 season.

Corrales named Philly manager

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies are getting a tough new manager in Pat Corrales, but his style is different from what they've been used to the past two seasons.

Corrales was introduced as the team's new field boss Wednesday after signing a two-year contract following negotiations with club President Bill Giles and General Manager Paul Owens.

Corrales, 40, succeeds Dallas Green, who resigned after the 1981 season to become vice president and general manager of the Chicago Cubs. Green, before he left, recommended Corrales for the job.

Green was a screamer, whose frustrations brought on tirades that could be heard through steel lockerroom doors. When he chewed out a player, it could be heard outside the privacy of his office.

Corrales made it clear that he was tough, but that his style and philosophies were nothing like Green's.

"I can't manage the way Dallas Green managed," Corrales declared. "I've had people, who so-to-speak, didn't give me 100 percent and we worked it out where they did come out and give me 100 percent."

Corrales, who managed the American League's Texas Rangers in 1979 and 1980, told a news conference that the most important thing he learned with the Rangers was patience.

"When you get in a rush you make mistakes," he noted.

He explained his theory of communicating with his players.

"Any time you deal with that many different personalities you cannot treat individuals the same," he said. "You have to kick one guy and he'll take it and he'll perform for you. Another guy you kind of have to pat him on the back and kind of carry him along. They're different personalities and you have to handle them different."

Corrales said he had two main rules, players must be on time and hustle. If they don't, he said, they face fines.

Corrales said he didn't foresee any sweeping changes in the Phillies, who lost to Montreal in the National League mini-playoffs.

Giles, who headed a group which last week purchased the Phillies for $30.175 million, said the team would participate in the free agent draft, but did not intend to offer huge sums of money.

A look at Texas

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — McKinney police. Gov. Bill Clements said Wednesday he "regretfully" accepted the resignation of William B. Schnapp, Houston, as a member of the Texas Board of Mental Health and Mental Retardation. Schnapp said he was resigning because of poor health. Clements said a successor would be named later.

DALLAS (AP) — Authorities seized over $1 million worth of methamphetamines in a raid on a major illegal drug laboratory in farmhouse northeast of Dallas, officials said.

Collin County sheriff's Lt. Terry Box said federal agents participating in the raid called the laboratory "the largest they've ever seen." Box said the lab covered the entire second floor of the remote farmhouse.

Officials arrested one man during the raid Tuesday night and said more arrests were expected, he said.

Box said the laboratory was filled with sophisticated equipment and a large supply of chemicals.

"It was as if you took some rooms in your house and turned them into a pharmacy," he added.

He said the 12 officers participating in the raid loaded a van with 100 boxes of lab equipment for use as evidence.

Box said a tip to police about the location of the laboratory sparked a three-month investigation by the DEA, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the Collin County sheriff's department and WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Henry S. Reuss is suggesting "direct Japanese" assistance, both financial and technical, in developing a high-speed passenger train system in the United States.

Japan now is preparing for test runs of the new train, which can travel more than 300 mph.

Rep. Dante F. Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on international operations, said the panel had been "very anxious" to proceed with the Jonestown probe as part of two days of hearings on the U.S. consular service.

But Fascell said Wednesday he had been asked by Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, R-Wis., chairman of the full Foreign Affairs Committee, to delay the Jonestown-related portion of the hearings because of the pending retrial of former Peoples Temple member Larry Layton in connection with the case and several unresolved civil suits.

Peoples Temple cult leader Jim Jones and 912 of his followers died during a ritual murder-suicide at Jonestown on Nov. 18, 1978. Hours earlier, Rep. Leo J. Ryan, D-Calif., three journalists and a cult defector were shot to death at a nearby airstrip.

A place for men who don't belong

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — Huntington State Hospital's Ward Three is a tiny world apart, a colorless place where some two dozen potentially violent men spend most of their time aimlessly roaming a stark, empty hallway.

The bare walls are a pale, faded blue. The floor is grey terrazzo. The somber colors seem to reflect the mood of the pacing men who live on Ward Three.

Resignation reigns in this place. The purposeless pacing, the puddles of urine, the undertone of suppressed violence are evocative of scenes and smells at an urban zoo — in the section where the big cats are caged.

And like the lions and leopards in the zoo, the men on Ward Three have very little to do but pace.

Ward Three is a locked ward; it's where we keep our patients who are likely to hurt themselves or others," said Margaret Myers, a registered nurse who supervises the building that houses the ward.

It's also where we keep our male court-orders, those men who have been charged with crimes and who are being given psychiatric evaluations prior to standing trial.

Most states have their equivalents to Ward Three, society's answer to the dilemma of dealing with people whom the courts consider dangerous and the doctors consider mentally ill.

Two months ago, when a group of legislators visited the hospital, Mrs. Myers told them a dangerous situation existed on the ward. She said courts were sending too many young, violent men who were threatening the aides and constantly plotting escapes.

Now, she said, the ward is safer, at least for the time being. "We're down to seven or eight court-orders now," she said. "The central office at Charleston intervened and the judges quit sending us court-orders there for a while."

But Mrs. Myers has no illusions that the improvement is permanent. She said the situation fluctuates depending on the ward's population, which includes mentally retarded patients, others with psychiatric problems and the court-orders.

"It's a matter of degrees," said Max Knickerbocker, the hospital superintendent. "You can't operate this type of facility a hundred percent free of assaultive attempts. When you get too many of these types together, they're quite a challenge to manage."

Juanita Smith, who supervises the night shift aides, was more outspoken.

"It's pure hell most of the time, because we don't have the staff," she said. "We really need four men on each shift and most of the time there are no more than three of us, just me and two male aides to look after 40 of these patients."

Vincent Perego, an aide assigned to the ward, nodded in agreement.

"That's right," he said. "Half the time you can't even take your break. We have to feed some of these men, give them showers, break up fights and see that they don't hurt themselves.

"Some of these court-orders are in here for rape, breaking and entering, attempted murder, sexual assault. It sometimes takes a minimum of four aides to hold one of them when they blow up."

Mrs. Myers opened a locked door leading to the ward's "recreation room." It is empty except for a dusty ping pong table with a broken net.

"I'm going to bring some games up here pretty soon," she said. "The problem is that some of the patients tear up the games and others just aren't able to use them."

Mrs. Myers said chronic staff absenteeism is another problem.

Not a happy time for teacher union

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year ago, he could pick up the phone and speak with the president. His legions were the single most powerful force at the last Democratic Party convention.

And in a record 242 school districts, teachers who make up the bulk of his forces went on strike, often in defiance of state law.

But 1981 has been more difficult for Terry Herndon, 42, executive director of the 1.7 million-member National Education Association, the nation's largest teacher union. Herndon plans to resign in 1983, ending a decade of union leadership.

Membership is down 55,000 this fall. Teachers, like other public employees, now seem on the defensive. Witness Boston, where teachers threatening an illegal strike in September blinked first in a faceoff with Superintendent Robert R. Spillane, who said he would fire any teacher who walked off the job.

Now the NEA is battling President Reagan and Education Secretary Terrel Bell, who both want to do away with what Herndon had fought hard for — the 2-year-old Department of Education. Whether or not the department survives, Reagan wants to cut some $2.5 billion in federal education spending.

Following are excerpts from a recent interview:

Q: You have predicted that President Reagan wouldn't succeed in abolishing the Department of Education, at least not before his mandate was retested in the 1982 elections. Do you still think so?

A: I'm more confident today than I was when I made that statement. I think one can only evaluate the future of that department in the context of the reality that the creation of the department was a bipartisan issue. It was not put through exclusively by Democrats.

Q: Let's suppose the department is abolished. Do you think states could pick up the slack and perhaps even do better than Washington?

A: ... Most people on school boards, most of the people in state departments of education, are good, right-thinking people. ... But they lack the resources and they lack the leverage in local politics to set up those programs.

Absent the federal role, absent the stimulating dollar, and I rather expect a reversion and those children will be neglected once again.

Q: The NEA's political activities have grown greatly since it entered national politics in 1976. Can you detail your political plans?

A: I think you will find more teachers working as precinct delegates, at state party conventions, and more at the national conventions, and that will be true at the Republican and Democratic parties.

Q: There have been unusually few teacher strikes so far this year. Why this sudden labor calm?

A: I think the school boards and the school administrations and school teachers all share a commitment to public education. When times are good for public education, we wind up fighting over things — like should salaries be $17,500 or $17,200.

Well, in the context of the future of public education that's not an important question.

Q: Has the hard line by Reagan against striking air traffic controllers had a chilling effect on your union?

A: I don't think so. For me to conclude that I'd need to see some good data that teachers were taking a dive on bad settlements.

Q: The NEA and the AFT are often portrayed as archrivals. But with all the current problems facing education, wouldn't it pay to join forces?

A: The NEA and AFT have always worked together politically and legislatively. Generally speaking, we both want the right to engage in collective bargaining. We both want more federal assistance to public schools. We are both adamantly opposed to government support of private education. There are many times and occasions when we agree.

The matter of our archrivalship: That is real. The NEA's ultimate objective would be the destruction of the AFT. The AFT's objective would be the destruction of the NEA. So when it comes to our jurisdictional contest for membership, that's a very important struggle.

But I think you will see a much higher level of cooperation around the tuition tax credit issue than you have seen for a number of years.

It's important to point out that in the southeastern states like Mississippi, Louisiana, Georgia, Texas, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia, where school boards are prohibited by law from entering into collective bargaining with teachers, we also have by most standards our least effective education programs.

I just don't think anybody can truly attribute the problems of the schools to the strength of teacher unions.

Q: Your union has lost 55,000 members this year. What would you say to someone considering a teaching career?

A: My professional advice to strangers is I have never tried to discourage someone from teaching. But if you're talking about personal friends, children, nephews, I'd have to tell them they'd probably have a more satisfying career doing something else.

Tax decal needed on liquified gas vehicles

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Comptroller Bob Bullock reminded drivers Tuesday that vehicles using liquified gas must display a new fuel tax decal by Jan. 1.

The decals range in cost from $24 a year for a vehicle driven less than 5,000 miles a year and weighing less than 4,000 pounds to $300 for a vehicle weighing over 43,501 pounds and driven more than 10,000 miles a year.

Bullock estimated there are more than 40,000 liquified gas-powered cars and trucks in Texas.

The tax on L.P. gas brings in about $4 million a year.

It's new. It's beige.
