Reagan vetoes spending bill and orders shutdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today vetoed an emergency spending resolution to restore funds to federal agencies and told his Cabinet to "cut down, shut down and eliminate all unnecessary government services."

It was his first veto in 10 months of office. House Democrats conceded they lacked the votes to override the veto and made no attempt to try. Instead, they began meetings on a new, stripped-down measure to get the money flowing again.

Reagan told reporters minutes after signing the veto that the bill posed "a difficult choice" for him. The rejection sends the measure back to Congress.

Reagan went from his talk with reporters to an emergency meeting with his Cabinet, where he declared, "The bulk of the government should shut down immediately," spokesman Larry Speakes said later.

As quickly as possible, people should be sent home. This is not business as usual," Speakes quoted Reagan as saying.

Speakes said 60 percent of the White House's 351 workers would be furloughed without pay by noon. By the end of Tuesday, he said, 400,000 of the government's 2.9 million workers would be off the job.

Emerging from the one-hour Cabinet session, Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said, "Essentially, the president told us we're going to shut the government down, and we're going to go back to our departments and start the shutdown right now. We're going to close our files, turn out the lights and go home."

On Capitol Hill, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. in a sharply worded attack on Reagan, said, "He's unbelievable."

"He's only out there for the theatrics, believe me," O'Neill said.

But Speakes said Reagan, at his Cabinet meeting, rejected that charge. Speakes said Reagan told the session, "This is not theatrics. This is for real."

Reagan told reporters minutes after signing the veto that the bill posed "a difficult choice" for him. The rejection sends the measure back to Congress.

The president went from his session with reporters to an emergency meeting with his Cabinet.

"Essentially, the president told us we're going to shut the government down, and we're going to go back to our departments and start the shutdown right now. We're going to close our files, turn out the lights and go home," Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said as he emerged from the meeting.

In an example to other agencies, the White House began furloughing 150 of its 351 employees without pay.

Reagan told reporters that the choice he faced was, "either to sign a budget-busting appropriations bill that would finance the entire government at levels well above my recommendations, and thus set back our efforts to halt the excessive government spending that has fueled inflation and high interest rates and destroyed investments for new jobs, or to hold the line on spending with a veto, but risk interruption of government activities and services."

"I have chosen the latter," Reagan said.

He acknowledged that "the failure to provide a reasonable resolution means that some citizens may be inconvenienced and that there is a possibility of some temporary hardship," but added, "Nevertheless, a far greater threat to all Americans is the sustained hardship they will suffer by continuing the past budget-busting policies of big spending and big deficits."

Reagan said, "The practice of loading the budget with unnecessary spending and waiting until the 11th hour — on assumption of a presidential veto has gone on much too long." He said that "so-called stopgap resolutions are actually budget-busters that can last an entire year."

After reading his five-minute statement, Reagan, in answer to a reporter's question, said Congress can either extend the continuing resolution that lapsed Friday and work on a real appropriations bill after the Thanksgiving weekend "or they could come in and pass what I said in the first place, that I would split the difference with them, between our request for help and their budget figures."

Asked whether he would take less than that, he said, "I don't think the people should take less than that."

He said the Congress "in the hours ahead has the opportunity to reconsider — and I urgently request that they do so."

Reagan in September had asked Congress to reduce non-discretionary programs, except defense, by 12 percent, a saving of $8.5 billion.

"A few days ago I offered to meet Congress half-way," he said, but the $2 billion the Congress cut Sunday is not enough.

He also told reporters that the federal government has "got to say, 'Let's quit this and do what 50 states manage to do on time every year — and that is have a budget.'"

The latest in the president's budget battles with Congress followed a weekend of nearly non-stop negotiations between House and Senate conferees that ended Sunday night with congressional approval of a compromise spending bill Reagan had vetoed.

With government agencies stripped of their authority to spend money, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the president was set to tell the Cabinet to order non-essential employees to "come to work, cancel meetings, lock the safe, cut out the lights and leave."

The confrontation also forced the president to delay his departure — scheduled Sunday — for a Thanksgiving holiday at his California ranch.

Reagan said Sunday that signing the compromise bill would be more harmful than vetoing it. He added, however, that necessary services such as Social Security benefit payments would continue.

"I think it would have a more harmful effect on the country if the country got the idea that we're going to continue going down the road of lavish deficit spending," he said.

Thanksgiving service

The Pampa Ministerial Alliance will conduct an area-wide Thanksgiving Service at 7 p.m. Tuesday in Central Baptist Church.

The Rev. Gene Allen, pastor of the Lamar Full Gospel Assembly, is the speaker for the special service this year. The public is invited to attend.

pass the House's proposals for the budget. "It seems to be the pattern," he said. "This is the second year now we have had to operate on continuing resolutions. Of nine different appropriation bills, (sent to the Senate in 1980), some were passed but some were never returned (to the House)," Hightower commented.

The House today intends to pass an extension to the continuing resolution that lapsed Friday at midnight, the U.S. Representative said. The resolution, if passed, will continue the current appropriations needed for the operation of the federal government until after the Thanksgiving holidays.

Hightower said the shutdown of many government agencies today will have little effect on the Texas Panhandle.

The large budget cuts will also scarcely be felt here, he said.

"I don't think it will have a dramatic impact on the economy of our district. We're not very dependent on many government programs," Hightower added.

The exception is in agriculture, which is included in the Farm Bill, he said. "We're at an impasse on that, too. I am opposed to that bill, because it is a totally inadequate response to the needs of our people. Too many farmers are going broke almost daily in the Panhandle. As it is, it's (the Farm Bill) not going to help that," Hightower commented.

Early today, congressional negotiators were still unresolved on four major areas: defense spending, social programs and foreign aid and the expiration date of the legislation.

While the negotiators were meeting, President Reagan was preparing for a week-long, Thanksgiving holiday in California.

SCS workers could be furloughed

With the U.S. government in its third day of insolvency, only one local federal agency is waiting for the call that will put them out of business.

"Employees of the local Soil Conservation Service, with two offices in Pampa, could be put on furlough Tuesday, if the issue is not settled today," Doug Cunningham, area conservationist, said.

"We haven't heard anything yet, but everytime the phone rings, we think that may be it," Cunningham said.

"We have several local contracts going right now, mainly the water shed. We have contractors working, and if we are put on furlough, I am not certain what will happen to the project," Cunningham said.

"If we are furloughed, the call will come from the state agency, which will hear directly from the U.S.D.A. (Department of Agriculture)," Cunningham said.

The other local federal agencies, the Post Office and the Social Security offices will not be affected by the federal government insolvency.

Social Security Office Manager Larry Mayo said, "We are considered an essential agency so we will keep working."

"The Social Security checks come from the Social Security trust fund so they are not affected. However, the employees are working for free right now. But we assume that they will pass a resolution, and we will be paid," Mayo said.

"If they don't settle, we won't be paid. In 1979, we worked for 12 days before they paid up," Mayo said.

Assistant Postmaster Larry Bivins said, "We aren't being furloughed because we are paid by the U.S. Postal Service, which gets most of its funding from the postal revenues."

Government lays off non-essential workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government began laying off non-essential workers today and went about closing down some of its operations after President Reagan told cabinet officers "The bulk of the government should shut down immediately."

Among the first to be furloughed after Reagan vetoed a continuing resolution that would have kept the government in appropriations were many employees of the White House.

And the chauffeur for Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis.

Edwin Dale, spokesman for the White House Office of Management and Budget, said Reagan ordered "a very hard line" at the cabinet meeting. He said the furloughs would include a large number of the employees of OMB, which is critically involved in the budget debate.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said if no acceptable spending measure makes it to Reagan's desk by late Tuesday, 400,000 of the 2.9 million federal workers could be told to stay home. He quoted Reagan as saying, "As quickly as possible people should be sent home."

The Federal Communications Commission told its top staff to identify all "essential people" by 3 p.m. and to tell others not to come in beginning Wednesday. The FCC's daily work of processing licenses, releasing public notices or making investigations ground to a halt.

"Essentially, the president told us we are going to shut the government down, and we're going to go back to our departments and start the shutdown."

European nations agree to patrol Sinai

PARIS (AP) — France, Britain, the Netherlands and Italy have agreed to participate in a multi-national peacekeeping force to patrol the Sinai after Israel returns the area to Egypt, the four governments announced today.

In making the announcement, the four governments reaffirmed their support of the so-called "European initiative" for a Mideast peace that calls for the Palestine Liberation Organization to be brought into the Camp David process.

right now," said Lewis as he left an hour-long Cabinet meeting this morning. "We don't relish doing this, but we're going about our business and we're going to do it."

Lewis said Lloyd Fletcher, the chauffeur who drove him back the half mile to his office, was a non-essential employee.

Lewis, whose jurisdiction includes mass transit, was asked how he'll get around. "I may take the bus," he said.

For the government workers who are furloughed it will mean a loss of pay. Dale estimated that a layoff of 400,000 employees would save the government about $45 million to $50 million a day in payroll costs.

"At this stage, even if you lose a week's pay, I think it would hurt most people," said Hal Parris, a spokesman for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration whose 700 employees mostly would be considered non-essential.

The FBI's Roger Young said, "We see this happen every year and we don't take it too seriously, we're not going to stop any investigations."

But elsewhere at the Justice Department, public affairs specialist Tom Stewart did not prepare his usual morning compilation of department-related news for the attorney general and his staff.

Reagan told reporters earlier today that "we are making every effort to avoid unnecessary dislocations and personal hardship."

He said he can give assurance "that Social Security and most other benefit checks will be paid on schedule," the national security will be protected; government activities essential to the protection of life and property, such as the treatment of patients in veterans' hospitals, air traffic control and the functioning of the nation's banks will also continue.

The president urged Congress to act promptly to get an acceptable bill "in order to prevent unnecessary inconvenience and hardship as Thanksgiving approaches."

One of the first government offices to put a cutback into effect was Reagan's own White House, which began furloughing employees without pay. Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said that by day's end 150 of the 351 White House employees would be off their jobs.

The cutback involved nine of the 13 employees in Speakes' own press office. They were told to stay home today.

President Reagan's running battle with Congress over federal spending was close to bringing about the ultimate government cutback.

Speakes said that if no acceptable spending measure makes it to the president's desk by late Tuesday, 400,000 of the 2.9 million federal workers could be told to stay home.

On orders of the White House Office of Management and Budget, however, essential services would not be disrupted.

Among those required to work despite the lack of congressional spending authority would be members of the military services, Internal Revenue Service officials, doctors and nurses, prison guards, Treasury Department officials charged with certain vital financial services, and most of the top officials of government, including the president.

None would be paid, and it was unclear how long they could be required to work without pay.

Meanwhile, workers in government agencies not considered necessary for national security, health or safety were told to come to work today and prepare to close down.

"An awful lot of people will be furloughed," said Ed Dale, spokesman for the White House Office of Management and Budget. "They won't get paid."

Dale said layoffs would begin Tuesday for some workers and increase through the week if the impasse continues.

To the surprise of almost no one, Congress approved a spending bill which makes sure that House members and senators and their staffs will be paid, while the fight over other federal spending continued.

Each agency was to decide how to reduce or close its operations so it was not clear how quickly the impact would be felt. As of Sunday it appeared that some agencies had made few or no preparations.

It was known that:

—As of Tuesday, the doors to the National Gallery of Art were to be closed, and there would be no public entry to the Rodin sculpture exhibit now featured at the museum.

—Social Security checks are funded from a special trust fund and would not be affected. It was not clear if those who process and mail the checks would be at work.

the policies defined in the (European Economic Community) declaration in Venice in 1980" which called for

"guarantees for the security for the state of Israel and justice for the Palestinian people and its right to self-determination."

The Venice declaration, basis for the "European initiative" in the Middle East, calls for the PLO to be "associated" with the peace process.

Hightower blames delay on Senate Republicans

BY DEBORAH BRIDGES

Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Congressman Jack Hightower today said the reluctance of a Republican-controlled Senate to accept the U.S. House of Representatives' proposals is responsible for the delay in implementing a 1982 national budget.

"The difficulty is in the Republican-controlled Senate," Hightower said today. "The House has passed all the appropriations bills for the next budget and sent them to the Senate. But the Senate has not sent them back."

The U.S. government technically became insolvent at 12:01 a.m. Saturday when existing stopgap legislation covering federal expenditures expired.

A bill concerning the appropriations was passed by the House Saturday night, Hightower said. However, President Reagan did not find the proposal acceptable, he said.

Linda Hill, press secretary for Texas Senator John Tower, R-Wichita Falls, said Senator Tower was in Dallas today, but has remained in close contact with Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn.

Commenting for Tower on Hightower's charge that the Senate was responsible for the delay in the budget, Hill said, "I think Senator Tower would think this is a most unfortunate thing. Rather than laying a finger on, or blaming each other, they (the Senate and House) should busy and get this budget passed."

Hill said in many cases the House's versions of the bill are above what the President is wanting and cannot be accepted for that reason.

Hightower said he could not understand why the Senate would not

Pampan injured in third weekend mishap

A Pampa woman remained in serious condition in an Amarillo hospital today after she was injured in a head-on collision south of the city Saturday.

Five other persons were less seriously injured in three separate auto accidents over the weekend.

Jean R. Smith, 50, of 2104 Lea, was reported in serious condition in the Intensive Care Unit of Northwest Texas Hospital, a hospital spokesman said today. Smith was admitted to the hospital Saturday suffering from a head injury and facial lacerations. Her condition has improved from critical as was reported Saturday.

Sunday night, Department of Public Safety troopers investigated the third in a series of auto accidents occurring near Pampa since Saturday.

An empty grain truck, driven by Edward Henry Brainard, 54, of 2125 Mary Ellen, struck a black heifer about 6.9 miles east of Pampa Sunday at 7 p.m. Trooper Johnny Carter said today. The accident occurred on U.S. 60 near the Hoover cut-off.

The collision caused the eastbound truck to run off the road on the north side of the highway and overturn.

Brainard was pinned in the cab of the vehicle, Carter said. Persons at the scene of the accident were able to free the man from the truck, before Pampa Fire Department personnel arrived with the Hurst rescue tool, he said.

The heifer was killed in the accident. Brainard was taken to Coronado Community Hospital where he was treated for scalp lacerations in the emergency room and released.

The first accident, a head-on collision in which Smith was injured, happened at 9 a.m. Saturday, one mile south of Pampa on Texas 70.

A late model Cadillac, driven by Smith, was traveling south on the highway, when it came into collision with a northbound, 1966 Chevrolet pickup truck, driven by George Foy, 50, of Pampa. Foy was treated and released at the Pampa hospital.

At 1:15 p.m. Saturday, a three-vehicle collision at U.S. 60 and Loop 171, injured three persons. Kenneth Wardrip, 35, of Odobott, Iowa, Virginia Harris, 70, of Shamrock, and Nettie Lee, 80, of Lefors, were all treated and released at Coronado Community Hospital, following the mishap.

Pre-summit speaker warns Europeans against Sinai force

FEZ, Morocco (AP) - The secretary-general of the Arab League warned against European participation in the Sinai peacekeeping force as Arab foreign ministers prepared for a summit meeting Wednesday to consider Saudi Arabia's plan for an Arab-Israeli peace agreement.
Secretary-General Chedli Klibi's warning came amid reports that Britain, Italy, France and the Netherlands would announce today their willingness to join the U.S.-led force. It will replace withdrawing Israeli troops in the Sinai Peninsula under terms of the Camp David accords.
"If the countries of the European Community want to contribute to the efforts for peace in the Middle East, it is necessary for them not to participate in the multilateral force to be established in the Sinai," Klibi said in a speech Sunday to the Arab foreign ministers.
He said it was "high time" West

European nations abandoned their "hesitant attitude" and gave full support to the Palestinian people's right to self-determination and Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.
The 2,500-man peacekeeping force is to patrol the eastern Sinai after Israeli withdrawal from Egyptian territory captured during the 1973 Mideast War is completed in April.
Spokesmen for the governments of Britain and France said there would be a joint announcement on the force today but refused to say in advance what it would be. But Egyptian Foreign Minister Butros Ghali said the four nations had agreed to participate in the peacekeeping force.
The Arab summit meeting opens Wednesday, and the Saudi foreign minister, Prince Saud al-Faisal, presented Saudi Crown Prince Fahd's eight-point peace plan to the foreign ministers, who were drawing up the agenda for their chiefs of state.

Col. Moammar Khadafy, the Libyan leader, has announced he would boycott the summit because he opposes the Saudi plan, and conference sources said his foreign minister, Abdelati Obeidi, was the only delegate to speak against the plan Sunday. The sources said he did not comment on the substance of the proposal but said it should not be on the agenda because it is controversial and the chiefs of state should not have to take a stand on it.
The plan calls for a Palestinian state made up of the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip with East Jerusalem as its capital. The plan also implies recognition of Israel by saying "all states" in the Middle East have the right to live in peace.
Most moderate Arab governments and Arafat have endorsed the plan, but the most militant Palestinian groups and Israel have rejected it.

Irish Protestants walk off jobs

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) - Thousands of Protestants walked off their jobs today in support of the Rev. Ian Paisley's call for a 12-hour general strike to protest British policy in Northern Ireland.
Most of the 7,000 workers left their jobs at Harland and Wolff shipyard in Protestant East Belfast, largest employer in the British-ruled province. About 250 workers at the province's largest power station also struck.
Many schools and offices shut, and towns in the Protestant heartland of the province were choked with car and tractor caravans as Northern Ireland's Protestant majority rallied to demand a British crackdown on the mostly Roman Catholic Irish Republican Army guerrillas.

As they did so, the IRA again struck at the British mainland with a booby-trapped bomb planted outside the British Army barracks at Woolwich, southeast London.
Disguised as a toy gun, the bomb injured two soldier's wives, one of whom lost part of her right foot. The IRA claimed responsibility, as it has done for several recent bombings in England aimed primarily at military targets.
Workers at three of the province's four power plants said they would join Paisley's strike. But officials of the government electricity board said senior engineers would keep the plants running.

Police granted permits for 40 major rallies and marches province-wide, including rival meetings in Belfast by Paisley and his Protestant opponents, who urged the public to ignore Paisley's strike call.
The fiery political-religious leader said he would block traffic in the towns and cities with motorcades of trucks, cars and tractors. He also planned to parade several hundred men from his "Third Force" private army tonight at Newtownards, a Protestant center 10 miles east of Belfast.

Despite money woes back home, GOP governors back budget cuts

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Most of the Republican governors here for their annual convention admit to serious economic problems back home, but they are united in their support of President Reagan.
The consensus emerging Sunday from the opening sessions of the Republican Governors' Association was that Republicans had better stick together as the economic crunch comes and Reagan's economic programs come under fire.
"I think the great majority of the American people are behind this program, and they recognize that in the states there will be some cutbacks and it's a necessary element for balancing the federal budget and getting our national fiscal house in order," said Gov. Dave Treen of Louisiana.

Gov. Lee Dreyfus of Wisconsin was somewhat less optimistic but said some Republican governors are willing to render themselves "unelectable" if necessary to help Reagan accomplish what's best for the country.
But Dreyfus also told his colleagues that when he met with Reagan at the White House last week, he tried to let Reagan know "the depth of the pain" that states are feeling.
"We're not just getting our teeth capped," Dreyfus said. "This is root canal work and we've run out of anesthetic."

Gov. James Thompson of Illinois said his state is losing $500 million in revenues because of the current recession and $50 million as a by-product of Reagan's tax cuts.
States are having to get by on less money from Washington as part of Reagan's efforts to hold down federal spending and shift programs and bills back to state and local governments.
"If the federal budget is cut more rapidly than the states' ability to recapture the means to provide the services, we will have broken a promise to the people."

Brezhnev talks with Schmidt begin

BONN, West Germany (AP) - Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, who takes credit for persuading President Reagan to propose a European missile ban, sat down today in Bonn with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev to urge Soviet acceptance of the nuclear arms reduction plan.
The West German and Soviet delegations got down to business at the chancellor's office beside the Rhine River. Later today, Schmidt and Brezhnev, accompanied only by translators, will meet at Schloss Gimnich, the ancient castle where Brezhnev is staying 20 miles northwest of the capital.
Before today's talks, the Soviet leader reviewed a West German honor guard in a nationally televised ceremony welcoming him to Bonn. The weather was unseasonably mild and Brezhnev wore only a suit as he walked slowly but steadily along the reviewing line between rows of troops.

Brezhnev arrived at the Bonn-Cologne airport Sunday evening and Schmidt accompanied him to Schloss Gimnich.
Schmidt later told a West German television interviewer he had a 20-minute impromptu talk with Brezhnev at Gimnich that touched on "the central themes" of the visit including arms control. He gave no other details.
Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said the two leaders had a brief talk in a "friendly atmosphere."
Schmidt has made it clear he will press Brezhnev to accept the Reagan proposal to forego the NATO deployment of U.S. cruise and Pershing II nuclear missiles in return for dismantling Soviet medium-range rockets aimed at Western Europe from bases in Western Russia.

Schmidt was said to doubt the Soviets would accept it without compromise. But he reportedly hoped for some sign that Brezhnev would not reject it.
Reagan's proposal, which he made in a speech last Wednesday, will be the opening American gambit in the Soviet-American arms reduction talks beginning next Monday in Geneva, Switzerland.

Ruiz says revenge was behind his arrest

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - David Ruiz says his arrest in connection with two robberies was an act of "retaliation" for his lawsuit which led to a federal order for sweeping reforms in the Texas prison system.
Ruiz, 39, who was paroled in June after serving 14 years of a 25-year robbery sentence, was charged Saturday with two counts of aggravated robbery stemming from holdups of an Austin tavern and grocery this fall.
He remained jailed Sunday in lieu of a total bond of $100,000.
"The only way they can connect me is if the witnesses were coached," Ruiz said. "It is retaliation."
But Austin Municipal Judge Steve Russell, who says he is sympathetic with Ruiz' prisoners' rights activities, denied that law enforcement authorities acted out of revenge.

Russell said he reviewed sealed affidavits police submitted for Ruiz' arrest warrant and thought police "had a pretty good case."
"I am in complete sympathy with the Ruiz case and if it didn't look like they had a good case, I'd spring him in a minute," Russell said.
Two of Ruiz' nephews also were charged with armed robbery. Alfredo Ruiz, 23, was charged in connection with both holdups, and Jeffrey John Ruiz was charged with the tavern robbery, in which patrons were beaten and robbed.
Police said they connected Ruiz with the robberies after a witness recorded the license number of an automobile seen near the scene. Russell said an informant also contacted police with additional information.

It was Ruiz' class-action lawsuit that led to U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's order for major changes in the Texas Department of Corrections.
Justice ordered prison officials to reduce overcrowding, improve medical care, hire more guards and solve other problems detailed in Ruiz' suit. The TDC agreed to some of the demands, but is appealing other parts of the order.

'Dogbrellas' help letter carriers avoid injuries

WASHINGTON (AP) - It was no contest when two dogs pounced on San Jose, Calif., mailman Durant Simon 2 1/2 years ago. But now the San Jose postmaster is trying to even the odds by equipping his letter carriers with "dogbrellas."
The postmaster, William J. Lawrence, was skeptical about the umbrellas at first. "But I've lived with this problem for 20 years and anything was worth a try," he said.
Simon suffered 12 puncture wounds and nearly lost an eye when the pit bulls jumped him. He says he's "terrified every time I see that kind of dog again."

Lawrence said in a recent interview that the small push-button umbrellas, which can be opened rapidly if an unfriendly canine approaches, are reducing by 35 percent the number of dog-related injuries suffered by letter carriers.
Some charging dogs turn around and run the other way when the umbrella pops open in front of them, he said, and others attack the umbrella rather than the mail carrier.
The attack on Simon was among 8,000 that occur every year, costing the government $7 million annually in medical treatment, disability payments and replacement carriers.

have several chewed up umbrellas, which is better than chewed-up carriers."
He said carriers in San Jose now carry both Halt and dogbrellas and "the letter carriers union is 100 percent behind the program."
The umbrellas also are being tested in Stockton, Calif., Louisville, Ky., Long Island, N.Y., Salt Lake City and Seattle. In addition, the British post office is trying them in London.
However, test results are not conclusive enough yet to equip all Postal Service carriers with the umbrellas, the agency says. And umbrellas frequently can't be opened quickly enough.

Mengden reception

The Gray County Republican Party is sponsoring a reception for State Senator Walter Mengden at 7 tonight in the Citizen's Bank and Trust Hospitality Room.
The public is invited to the reception and refreshments will be served.
Senator Mengden, Harris County, has announced that is a candidate for the U.S. Senate. He has served in the Texas Legislature for ten years.

The Postal Service equips most of its carriers with Halt, an aerosol product that stings the eyes temporarily. The agency also will stop deliveries to a house with a dog that it considers dangerous, or even to an entire block if the dog growls that far.
But the Postal Service decided to try the "dogbrellas" because those measures weren't cutting the injury toll.
"The umbrellas seem to be effective in preventing bites," Lawrence said. "I

That might have been the case with 95-pound Lourdes Hormilla of Miami, who suffered permanent neurological damage when a Doberman pinscher knocked her to the ground, ending her career as a letter carrier.
"I had no warning," said Mrs. Hormilla, who received a Postal Service award when she returned to work at a desk job after 1 1/2 months in bed.

State officials blame unrest in prisons on federal court order

Associated Press
The Texas Department of Corrections has been shaken by more violence in the last five months than in the past seven years because a federal judge's prison reform order has changed inmates' attitudes, state officials say.

The TDC has had to quell 11 disturbances since June, compared with six such outbreaks between then and 1973.

"We have a very serious and dangerous situation," Attorney General Mark White said. "We have been fortunate that there has been no loss of life."

"I feel this is directly attributable to the actions of the federal court that has given prisoners the mistaken notion that they do not need to obey the rules and regulations of the prison system."

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler last December ordered prison officials to solve immediately problems such as overcrowding, inadequate medical care and understaffing. The state agreed to make some of the changes, but has appealed the others.

But William Bennett Turner of San Francisco, the lawyer for the inmates who filed the class-action lawsuit that led to Justice's order, said state officials are using the court order as a scapegoat for their own failure to improve conditions.

"What causes the unrest is that the department of corrections will not comply with the order. If the system won't act like a law-abiding citizen, the prisoners don't see why they should," he said.

"The prison system has been thumbing its nose at the order ever since it was handed down."

In the most recent outbreak of violence, 50 inmates at the TDC's Eastham Unit, near Trinity in East Texas, threw rocks and burned the tents where they were housed to meet the judge's order against overcrowding.

The Friday night incident cost the system $100,000 in damages and 15 inmates remained hospitalized Sunday with minor injuries, TDC spokesman Rick Hartley said.

Asked whether the fact the prisoners were not in cells allowed the violence to get out of hand, Hartley replied: "That's certainly true."

The Eastham incident followed by two days a riot in which 500 inmates participated at the Darrington Unit, 150 miles away. Thirteen people were injured and $200,000 worth of property was damaged, TDC officials said.

Gov. Bill Clements, reached in New Orleans where he was attending the Republican Governors Conference, agreed with White that the court order was the root of the unrest.

Clements complained that the court-appointed "special master" assigned to oversee the reforms was "playing father confessor" to the inmates.

restlessness and turmoil we have not had before," he said.

At least two of the recent disturbances have been directly related to the court order.

In October, inmates refused to work or go into their cells at the Retrieve Unit and demanded to see the special master. Meanwhile at the Ramsey Unit, 160 inmates refused to work, complaining that the court order was not being obeyed. Several other work stoppages have been reported.

Clements said the corrections board and TDC Director W. James Estelle agree "that this is due to the special master and his staff circulating in the prisons and making themselves highly visible."

White said he met Friday with the special master, Nathan Vincent, to get him to recognize that the prisoners are using him as an excuse to rebel and be unruly.

"So far it seems that every one of these federal officials takes the side of the prisoners. I'm tired of our law enforcement people putting their lives on the line to arrest people only to find out that a federal judge wants them to all have private rooms," White said.

"Too many people are crying tears for the prisoners and not for the victims. They are not being treated badly. They have clean clothes every day and food better than most people get to eat and they are not abused."

"I'm sick and tired of hearing from the little whining devils."

Carbon monoxide kills two adults; sickens nine children

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Carbon monoxide fumes killed two adults and made nine children ill as they spent their first night in a house that police say was condemned less than a week before.

The house, near the business district, was declared unsafe last Wednesday by the Tulsa City-County Health Department due to "poor ventilation," said Tulsa police Detective Richard Bishop.

Authorities declined to name the home's owner. "We are on delicate ground, and some of this we'd rather not get into until the investigation continues," Bishop said.

The 11 people moved in Saturday night, and "when they got cold, they lit a floor furnace that was improperly vented," Bishop said. "Carbon monoxide fumes made everybody sick and caused the deaths."

The windows of the house were closed against the cold night air, Bishop said. Bishop said there was "no furniture" in the five-bedroom, two-story, white wood rental house, which he described as "real beat up," and the occupants were sleeping on mattresses laid on the floor. The house is situated in north Tulsa's historic Brady Heights neighborhood.

J.D. Roberts, assistant Tulsa fire marshal, said the floor furnace vent "was just going underneath the house. It didn't vent outside the house at all."

The children were apparently sleeping in the living room, where the floor furnace is, and the two adults who died were in a first-floor bedroom, Roberts said.

He said investigators could not explain why the gas killed two people in a separate room from the furnace, while those sleeping in the same room survived, but he said the vent "ran right underneath" the bedroom.

"They weren't supposed to take possession of it until next Friday," Roberts said.

Police identified the dead as Jerry

Lee Derrick, 36, and Elizabeth Anne Derrick, 37. They also said the house had been condemned Nov. 18 because of poor ventilation.

Mrs. Derrick was the mother of six of the children, police said. They were identified by police as Brandi Press, 15, Kimberly Press, 14, Laureen Eve Haskett, 12 — all hospitalized — and Victoria Press, 16, Donna Haskett, 10, and Gail Ward, 19.

Mrs. Derrick's two grandchildren, the sons of Mrs. Ward, were also in the house. One-year-old Brandon Ward was hospitalized and 2-year-old Christopher Ward was treated and released.

Lela Ward, 10, was also sleeping in the house and was hospitalized. She was described by police as a friend; it wasn't known whether she is related to Mrs. Ward.

Five of the children were in good condition at St. John Medical Center, and four were released after treatment, said Nursing Supervisor Kay Hutchinson.

Mixed reaction to coyote poisoning

DENVER (AP) — Animal-protection groups and livestock owners are at odds over the practice of killing coyote pups in their dens and a proposal to re-introduce the use of a poison to kill the predators.

The Interior Department's Fish and Wildlife Service on Thursday asked the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to register the highly toxic Compound 1080 for use against coyotes. The Fish and Wildlife Service also is applying for limited use of the poison in experiments in Montana and Texas.

In addition, the Interior Department has revised a 2-year-old policy that prohibited so-called "denning" on public lands — a practice that involved killing coyote pups in their dens. Under the revised policy, the cubs could be killed where damage to livestock has occurred or could be expected to occur.

Hank Fischer, a spokesman for the Defenders of Wildlife in Missoula, Mont., said his group opposed the use of Compound 1080 as well as the slaughter of coyote pups.

"The policy is so lax it gives them too much discretion to dispose of coyotes not causing any problems," and could lead to the widespread death of the animals, Fischer said recently.

He added that it would be difficult to control the use of the poison once it became available again.

The Denver-based American Humane Association also criticized the proposed policies. Dennis White, director of animal protection for the organization, called denning a "cruel, inhumane practice of destroying life."

On the other hand, some members of the livestock industry, which claims annual losses of $100 million because of coyotes, say the measures are not strong enough.

"We don't feel the new policies are going to have any effect on producing predation loss," said Ron Micheli of the National Cattlemen's Association.

Under the proposed predator-control program, the use of Compound 1080 would be allowed only in sheep collars. Most coyotes die within days of eating a sheep with a poisoned collar.

Micheli said his group favored the use of the poison in bait, as well as the killing of coyote pups on public lands.

But experimenters at the Fish and Wildlife Service's Denver Wildlife Research Center have shown the collars to be "selective" in killing only offending coyotes — instead of other domestic or game animals eating the poisoned bait.

Meanwhile, the American Sheep Producers Council in Denver hailed the proposed use of Compound 1080 — in any form.

"It's long overdue," said council spokesman Mike Monell. "It's a step in the right direction. We've been without effective control methods for 10 years. It gives us permission to protect our property."

The use of all predator pesticides, including 1080, was banned by the EPA in 1972.

Mother's search for son ends in prison

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Dallas woman's two-year search for the son she gave up for adoption in 1959 ended seven months ago when she found Riccardo Hernandez in a North Carolina prison.

Suzanne Raikes' elation was short-lived, as prison walls and her limited funds have kept the 21-year-old Hernandez from meeting his mother, his nearly blind father or his 105-year-old grandmother.

But Hernandez, who is serving a 16- to 25-year sentence for burglary and armed robbery, still savors the memory of their reunion by telephone.

"We had a conference call — my real father, my real mother and me, and my grandma, and my half brother, and my mother's husband — and it felt real good," Hernandez said in an interview last week at Odum Prison in Northampton County. "It was a feeling I'd never had, because I felt real whole."

Hernandez was a

19-year-old Fort Bragg, N.C., private when he and another soldier burglarized two Fayetteville homes in 1978.

Hernandez was arrested the next day, returned the loot and pleaded guilty in 1979 to two counts each of second-degree burglary, larceny and armed robbery.

Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey gave Hernandez a sentence of 16 years to life, later reduced to 16 to 25 years, which makes him eligible for parole in 1990.

Mrs. Raikes, who earns

$465 an hour working in a Dallas cafeteria, says her search cost $15,000. Now she is waging a vigorous mail-and-telephone campaign to free her son or reduce his sentence, which she considers harsh and excessive.

"He's had a raw deal since he was born," the 45-year-old woman said. "I'm not ever going to give up trying to get him out."

Sen. John G. Tower, R-Texas, and others have written Gov. Jim Hunt in her behalf. The governor has the statutory authority to pardon an inmate or commute his sentence.

Mrs. Raikes wants to see her son but she also is determined to win an audience with Hunt. Since she can afford only one journey to North Carolina, she has delayed her trip in hope that she can meet Hunt and her son.

Mrs. Raikes was 23 when she eloped with 40-year-old Daniel Zuniga. But when she learned she was pregnant she had lost touch with her husband.

Estranged from her family, she went on with her life after her baby's adoption and remarried in 1974.

Roses left on memorial

DALLAS (AP) — Eighteen years after John F. Kennedy was slain here, a steady stream of people visited the memorial in his honor, where a half dozen red roses lay with a card reading: "In memory of John F. Kennedy, 35th president of the United States."

But the crowds were sparse at the memorial near the spot where Lee Harvey Oswald is said to have fired the fatal shot as Kennedy's motorcade wound through downtown Dallas, Nov. 22, 1963.

No special events commemorated the assassination.

A few people took pictures and some visited the Kennedy Museum, featuring souvenirs and a film about the assassination.

In Arlington National Cemetery in the Virginia suburbs of Washington, the annual wreath-laying ceremony took place to mark

Kennedy's death. Oswald was accused of shooting Kennedy to death from a school book depository overlooking Dealey Plaza. But Oswald was slain two days later by nightclub owner Jack Ruby, and controversy over the identity and number of Kennedy assassins continues.

The body in Oswald's Fort Worth grave recently was exhumed at the request of the accused assassin's widow, who feared the body was missing.

Medical donations need new publicity

For most of modern history the idea of organ transplant for humans was restricted to the realm of superstition, science fiction or ghoulish literature. Since World War II, however, medicine has once again transformed fantasy into routine. For decades medical pioneers explored the frontiers of transplant technology. Every year a new barrier was eliminated and a new transplant perfected. The pinnacle was reached on Dec. 3, 1967. Dr. Christian N. Barnard and a team of South African surgeons that day performed the first successful human heart transplant. Today many transplant operations are considered acceptable treatment for chronic medical problems. Ironically, transplant medicine has become a victim of its own success. The supply of organs available for transplants is critically short of the need. In Los Angeles, for example, 3,000 people are on a waiting list for kidney transplants. Unfortunately the perception of the public contributes to the problem. Transplants are seen by many as a last ditch medical procedure when in fact they are a standard, but vital, alternative for thousands of patients. Information on donor programs is therefore scarce or often ignored. State Sen. Ollie Speraw is trying to remedy the problem. He is spearheading hearings aimed at amending the California Anatomical Gift Act. A primary purpose of the hearings is to get the word out to the general public and the medical community that transplant medicine has the tools, but not the means, with which to perform its miracles. We think the medical community should take the initiative in educating the public and streamlining donor programs. It would be a tragedy to allow transplant medicine to be wasted simply because the public never received the word on its needs as well as its potential.

Caution is needed on energy front

After two years of internal bickering and erratic pricing, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has reached an accord on a $34-a-barrel price for benchmark light crude. The agreement has been hailed by the oil companies and the Reagan administration as a welcome relief from the instability that has marked the oil market recently. Praise has been generous for Saudi Arabia, which finally won the unitary price it has wanted for years and promised, in return, to control its own oil output to maintain this price. However, there is good reason for the public to keep worrying. It was the recent glut of oil — caused by deliberate Saudi overproduction designed to subdue OPEC's price hawks — that was responsible for oil price drops over the last year. Conservation in the consuming countries, while important would not have been such an effective brake on prices if OPEC had been united in the way it now intends to be. And it was the competition among OPEC members that gave the oil companies the leverage they have recently had to cancel unfavorable long-term contracts and win better terms in new contracts.

A unified OPEC will certainly be more predictable — which is of some economic value — but it will also be tougher to bargain with. And while Saudi Arabia has promised that the new uniform price will last through 1982, OPEC analysts are predicting that with the production cuts the Saudis have also promised, world demand for oil will exceed supply within the next few months. This will make it considerably easier for OPEC members to begin stiffening contract terms and — unless the Saudis stick to their policy of price moderation — to begin raising prices again. In many ways, the disarray inside OPEC was good news for American consumers. If the cartel succeeds in its new effort to act in unison, the oil-consuming countries will find themselves in much the same position they were in the 1970s, when they were hit with one unified price increase after another. The need for concerted action by OPEC's customers is, if anything, stronger than ever, as is the need to encourage conservation at home and increased oil production by non-OPEC members. In this, the world is still waiting for the United States — far and away the world's biggest oil consumer — to take the lead.

Letter to the editor

Dear Editor:
On Nov. 17, 1981, there appeared in your newspaper an article concerning the closing of Sambo's Restaurant. The manager of that establishment expressed his opinion as to why they had to close. I wish to respond to his statements.
When Sambo's opened in Pampa, everyone was thrilled to have a nice place to eat and we were really getting to be a "big town." That feeling lasted only a short while as it became apparent that the service was very bad. The food was good, but you could not get waited on. It became a joke around town not to go there unless you had the entire day.
My family has patronized Sambo's from the beginning and only four days before they closed. Nov. 13, we were taking our grandchildren out to eat and they wanted pancakes. We went to Sambo's. We sat for 15 minutes with no one speaking to us, offering to help us or even apologizing for the slow service. There were four people at a table, two at the counter awaiting take-out food. One waitress should be able to handle ten people. After this length of time, we left and went to another restaurant where the waitress followed us to the table with a menu and water. We did have pancakes.

This is not the first time we have had this experience with this restaurant. I have seen the manager walk by patrons needing service without speaking to them, take his seat without any regard for the people need help. Perhaps it has not been the fault of the waitresses. They may not have been supplied with the incentive to do a good job, either by proper management, benefits, or salary.
The fact that Sambo's is leaving town does not bother me, but that they blame the people of Pampa for not producing a fitting work force, patrons that are not ready for fast food service, and for the lack of "class" in its clientele makes me angry. My family has been in several different businesses in Pampa for over 28 years and never have we had to close our doors for lack of customers or people willing to work. We have found out that if you provide a good service and a good product, people will come to you.
I am sending a copy of the newspaper clipping and my letter to the home office of Sambo's. Hopefully, some corporate officer will take notice and perhaps save another location from closing its doors.
Sincerely,
Mrs. W. P. (Susie) Cross

By WILLIAM STEIF
The nation's 7,000 hospitals have a surplus of beds, and most experts agree we have as many doctors as we need. Yet the U.S. health care bill shot up 15.2 percent last year over 1979 to $247 billion. Hospital costs rose even faster, 16 percent over 1979, to a total of $100 billion.
What's wrong with a free enterprise economy that produces such results?
The answer, a bit oversimplified, is that there's too little competition in the American health care business.
Every day in the newspapers and on TV you see auto dealers, clothiers and grocers advertising rebates and discounts. But you don't see health care bargains. If you're sick you pay the going price to a doctor or hospital or you disregard your illness. Often you can't, and shouldn't disregard illness.
So the free market hasn't worked well in the health care field. So far, at least.
There is hope for change, signaled by a recent, little-noticed Washington meeting. The meeting was called by the Health and Human Services Department to attract private capital into investing in Health Maintenance Organizations.

Profitable health care

The HMO is a prepaid health plan offering a comprehensive range of services to enrolled members for a monthly fee and, in some cases, nominal out-of-pocket expenses. Some are non-profit, some profit-making. There are two basic types:
— A staff organization that provides care at its clinics and employs doctors, with specialized care provided under contract.
— Individual Practice Associations, in which doctors band together and establish their own controls to keep costs down. IPAs have no central clinics; doctors work out of their own offices.
HHS Secretary Richard Schweiker told the Washington meeting: "Ten years ago there were only 30 prototype HMOs in 15 states. Today there are nearly 250 HMOs in 38 states. Enrollment in these plans has increased from 3 million in 1970 to almost 10 million today."
Some of this growth was stimulated by the federal government. Since 1974 the Office of HMOs in Schweiker's department has provided $205 million in grants and $145 million in loans to non-profit HMOs, on condition the money would be repaid in full if the HMOs converted to profit-making enterprises.

The non-profit concept has been only marginally successful. Stuggling, capital-short HMOs have gone broke. For-profit companies have shied away from buying non-profit HMOs because they didn't want to take on federal liabilities.
Now Schweiker has adopted a new policy to encourage for-profit companies to buy non-profit HMOs. The policy could mean giving away much of the $350 million the federal government has sunk into non-profit HMOs since 1974. But it should increase health care competition. Under the policy, HHS will permit:
— Depreciation of the value of equipment bought with federal grants.
— Administrative costs paid with federal grants can be authorized at 20 percent a year over five years.
— Investors buying non-profit HMOs set up with federal loans may "negotiate less than full value" for repayment, says Tony Masso of the Office of HMOs.

Some may call this giveaway big business. But the idea is to make it easier for capital-laden firms to move into the HMO field, and make a buck.
Some already are. Prudential Insurance Co. pioneered an HMO in Houston in 1975, now has 60,000 members there and has been in the black the last two years, says John Kittredge, Prudential's executive vice president. Since 1978 PruCare, Prudential's HMO at Evanston, Ill., Kittredge says, "We'll spend two years for the indefinite future. We don't think profit is a dirty word in the health business. It brings good management."
It also brings competition. Less than a year after PruCare opened in Austin and enrolled 18,000 members, an offshoot of the local medical society set up Central Texas Health Plan, an IPA in which half of Austin's 600 physicians invested their own money.
The HMO's annual number of costly hospital days per 1,000 enrollees is far less than for traditional health plans (412 vs. 715). And hospital costs are the place to start cutting down health care costs.

We are losing our cropland

By ROBERT WALTERS
MEMPHIS (NEA) — Casual observers watching the broad Mississippi River majestically surge past this city have no reason to suspect that they are witnessing an act of irreparable destruction.
Beneath the water's surface, however, approximately 40 tons of the country's most fertile topsoil is being carried down river every hour of the day, every day of the year.
North of here, Illinois farmers are losing two bushels of topsoil for every bushel of corn they produce. In Minnesota, 9 million acres of cropland suffer from wind and water erosion at a greater rate than can be sustained.
In Iowa, some farms are losing 50 to 60 tons of soil per acre each year, and soil scientists at Iowa State University fear that some portions of that especially bountiful state will become barren within the next several decades.
Because soil erosion threatens to deplete one of the nation's most precious and irreplaceable natural resources, it may be the country's most pervasive and persistent environmental problem. But it is seldom viewed as a crisis because of the gradual and subtle nature of the destructive process.
Topsoil erosion across the nation now exceeds 5 billion tons per year. More than 140 million acres of cropland — about 30 percent of the country's 470 million tillable acres — are losing soil at a rate that eventually will decimate agricultural productivity.

More than $15 billion has been spent to staunch soil erosion since the mid-1930s, but wind- and water-caused loss rates today are 25 percent to 35 percent higher than they were during the Dust Bowl days a half-century ago.
At a recent congressional hearing, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block portrayed a situation that has reached crisis proportions:
"Soil erosion is reducing productivity on one out of every four acres we farm. Upstream flood damage to cropland and pastures is increasing yearly, and on more than 60 percent of the nation's range land, erosion and other deterioration is cutting productivity capacity in half."
But Block offered a frugal and inadequate proposal to deal with the problem — drastic cuts in federal funding from the approximately $200 million to $300 million now being spent annually to about $30 million to $100 million per year in the future.
Even under the current system, both the executive and legislative branches of government encourage, through a system of elaborate price support mechanisms, the abuse of marginal land and the intensive cultivation that are leading causes of erosion.

According to David Sheridan, author of a report on the subject published earlier this year by the President's Council on Environmental Quality, Congress appropriates $5 to encourage exploitation of the land for every $1 it spends on conservation.
"When farmers receive federal support for farm operations and then fail to practice conservation, the federal government is financing soil wastage," says Thomas Barlow of the Natural Resources Defense Council.
Barlow proposes that guaranteed crop loans, target prices, crop insurance, storage payments and other forms of government support be provided to farmers only in return for their willingness to participate in conservation programs.
A survey conducted by agricultural economists in 10 major farm states and presented earlier this year to the House Agriculture Committee found that a majority of farmers endorsed the "cross compliance" concept of requiring adherence to conservation programs to qualify for federal support payments.
That approach received majority support in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Nebraska, Minnesota, Michigan and Oregon. Only in Texas was it rejected, while those surveyed in North Dakota and Washington were about evenly divided on the issue.
Others have suggested different approaches, such as amending the tax code to make soil conservation measures undertaken by farmers eligible for federal tax credits.
Some form of prompt and comprehensive action is certainly required — but the Agriculture Department's plan to slash public funding and dump virtually all future responsibility on the states is surely not the answer.

Reagan coattails,

By PAUL HARVEY
Early November's off-year elections demonstrated something else: President Reagan's personal following is not guaranteed deliverable to anybody else.
It may be that political coattail power has always been overestimated but while this President's gorgeous grin keeps the electorate firmly supportive of him, it cannot elect somebody else governor of Virginia.
From outside the White House and from inside I have observed most presidents since FDR.
This one has a personal magnetism that is incomparable.
The dogmatism of a Lyndon Johnson could never have disciplined a major union, reversed a Congress and rallied the electorate behind an austerity budget without engendering resentment, resistance, rejection.
Where the laid-back ease of this President's beautifully concealed stubbornness moves mountains.
Few Americans have suffered more from high interest rates than have farmers. Farmers live season to season on borrowed money. Yet, hard as they've been pinched, I find them firm supporters of the President.
Similarly, in the desperately depressed housing industry there remains an awareness that inflation must be brought under control and a willingness to give Reaganomics a chance to accomplish that.
U.S. News said it: "People are talking of hard times; some are hopeful; some are angry — but if the Presidential election were today they would vote for Reagan in even greater numbers than a year ago."

To describe his prescribed spending and tax cuts, this program is credited with coining the word "Reaganomics" on February 17, last.
The word might have become synonymous with "austerity," with "belt tightening," with "unemployment."
Instead the word is now headed for the dictionary as descriptive of the entire spectrum of "President Reagan's prescribed economic disciplines."
And though the media can seek and find vocal critics alleging that the President is "insensitive to poor people," it's difficult to convince even poor people that this naturally gracious President could or would be unnecessarily unkind to anybody.
If he can retain that image — and I see no reason why not — he will have time to prove or disprove his prescription for prosperity.
Already there are encouraging vital signs — less unemployment, higher household income, relaxed interest rates, the inflation fever subsiding.
But if this President should fall short of his goals, in his own words as they were recently applied to another showdown situation, "I'll lie down and bleed a while and then get up and try again."
And so will we.

Suspect arrested by FBI in $1.85 million Brink's theft

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An ex-Brink's guard charged with taking $1.85 million from his own armored van in the second-largest Brink's theft ever was quietly arrested by FBI agents near a busy San Francisco supermarket.

George Manuel Bosque, 26, the object of an intensive, international manhunt, was unarmed and offered no resistance Sunday night as he was arrested in the parking lot of one of the city's busiest markets, crowded with people doing their Thanksgiving shopping, the FBI said.

No further details of the arrest were given. Bosque was scheduled for arraignment today.

Bosque, on the run since Aug. 15, 1980, when he and the money disappeared, is charged in a federal grand jury indictment with larceny of bank funds and theft from interstate shipment. At the time of his indictment bail was set at $3 million.

The largest Brink's robbery netted $2 million at a Chase Manhattan Bank branch in New York City in 1979.

The nation's biggest robbery was in New York in 1978 when five masked men bound and manacled 10 employees and made off with $5 million in cash and some $800,000 in jewels from the Lufthansa cargo area at Kennedy International Airport.

Bosque had been employed by Brink's for 2½ years at the time of the theft, which occurred at San Francisco International Airport. The money had arrived from Honolulu, property of that city's First Hawaiian and Central Pacific banks, and was headed for the Federal Reserve Bank.

The FBI is known to have recovered only $30,000 of the loot, which was mailed to two parties within a few days after the theft.

The first package, with $20,000, went to a business associate of Bosque as payment of a debt, authorities reported. Another $10,000 was sent through the mail a couple of days later as a donation to the San Francisco Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals — from which Bosque was fired in 1977.

Because of his Cuban descent and fluency in Spanish, the search for Bosque spread to Central America and Cuba.

Bosque, who was known to suffer from epilepsy, was reported by his Daly City neighbor to be under stress because he feared he would be fired if his employers learned of his ailment.

Four years before the theft, Bosque was arrested in Washington, D.C., on a larceny charge. He was not convicted.

No plans to change Allen's status

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential counselor Edwin Meese III says he knows of no plans "at the present time" for national security adviser Richard V. Allen to leave his White House post.

"Until and unless there's some adverse information that comes to light, I think the situation will remain as it is," Meese said Sunday.

Meanwhile, it has been learned that Justice Department officials, although they doubt that Allen received $10,000 instead of $1,000 from two Japanese journalists, still are investigating that possibility.

Meese, interviewed on the CBS program "Face the Nation," said, "I don't see any plans at the present time for Mr. Allen to leave the White House" because he received the money as an expression of the journalists' gratitude for obtaining a Jan. 21 interview with first lady Nancy Reagan.

Allen has said he took the honorarium to spare Mrs. Reagan embarrassment and put it in his office safe, then forgot about it until the cash was discovered by someone else eight months later.

On the matter of how much money was involved, it was learned that Justice Department officials believe the possibility of a $10,000 payment will prove to be a dead end, but they are awaiting additional information from the FBI.

The New York Times quoted an unidentified administration official in its Sunday edition as saying the figure "$10,000" was written on both the envelope the money was in and "some kind of receipt" found in the safe.

Meese confirmed Sunday he had brought the FBI into the case when he learned that $1,000 had been discovered in a safe in one of Allen's offices. "It was my responsibility as a federal official to report that information to the FBI," he said.

Questioned about a telephone call to Allen by FBI Director William H. Webster earlier this month, Meese indicated it was routine. "Well, as far as Mr. Allen is concerned it was proper for (Webster) to talk to him, they were interviewing him as part of the investigation," Meese said.

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that another official, who asked not to be identified, said Webster had called Allen to say that Allen's version of the incident had been confirmed by others.

A major issue in the matter has been whether the investigation of the incident should be handled by the FBI or turned over to a special prosecutor. Attorney General William French Smith is to make the final decision on whether a special prosecutor needs to be named to pursue the Allen inquiry. Justice Department spokesmen have said.

RARE EYE DISEASE. Todd Cantrell, accompanied by his mother Betty, arrives at the Moscow airport Sunday. The 12-year-old from Dalton, Ga., flew to Moscow, on a trip made possible by a hometown radio station that raised $12,000, to receive treatment at a Moscow clinic for a rare eye disease. ## CIA chief's investments draw concern of Senate committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director William J. Casey's decision not to put his multimillion-dollar stock holdings in a blind trust is raising eyebrows among members of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Casey, who has nearly unparalleled access to the government's data on international economic developments, broke the precedent of the last two CIA directors and kept control over his personal investments.

Many of the companies in which Casey and his wife own stock are involved with oil, natural gas and strategic minerals and operate in nations of deep interest to U.S. intelligence.

"This is one more example of Casey skirting the edge," said one member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, which is investigating Casey's past business practices.

CIA general counsel Stanley Sporkin said Casey asked earlier this year whether he should create a blind trust and was told Feb. 3 by CIA deputy general counsel Ernest Mayerfeld that he did not need one.

Sporkin said Casey's longtime investment adviser has bought and sold stock on Casey's behalf since the 68-year-old former Wall Street lawyer took over at CIA in January.

Sporkin refused to give details on Casey's stock transactions, but noted that the law requires incumbent officials by May 15 of each year to disclose the value, within broad ranges, of each stock transaction during the previous year.

The senator, who asked not to be identified, said he expected that Casey's recent stock dealings would become part of the Intelligence Committee's ongoing review of the CIA director's fitness.

An aide to another Intelligence Committee member said Casey's lack of a blind trust "has been a concern up here for some time."

Casey's two predecessors at the CIA — Stansfield Turner and now-Vice President George Bush — established blind trusts to avoid a possible appearance of conflict of interest.

And in this administration, others with access to closely held economic secrets — including President Reagan, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and Bush — placed their holdings in blind trusts.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger divested his stock in companies that do business with the Pentagon, but he did not create a blind trust.

According to his 1981 financial disclosure statement, Casey and his wife own stock worth at least $1.8 million, and perhaps more than $3.4 million, in 27 corporations with major foreign operations.

The trading prices of many of the companies could rise and fall with international developments. For instance, Casey owns more than $250,000 in Superior Oil Co., which deals with Abu Dhabi oil in the Persian Gulf. Superior also has been negotiating with Thailand on the sale of natural gas, and the company has an interest in a South African platinum subsidiary.

A 1965 presidential order and existing regulations prohibit federal employees from using non-public information obtained through their government work "for the purpose of furthering a private interest."

Existing government-wide regulations on ethical conduct say "an employee shall avoid any action, whether or not specifically prohibited ... which might result in or create the appearance of using public office for private gain."

Shortly after becoming CIA director in 1976, Bush sold off nine stock holdings and created a blind trust for his investments.

Turner, whose investments totaled less than $350,000, said, "I knew I wasn't going to misuse any information, but the safest move for me to be sure that I didn't have an appearance of conflict was to put those holdings in a blind trust."

Statistics tell public what it already knows

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Hold onto your hats, the economic seers are telling you, the roller coaster is headed down. But of course you already know it: what's occurring is that the seers are just finding out.

How do they know? Well, they see that more than 8 percent of the work force is jobless, that industrial production plunged at an annual rate of 1.5 percent last month, that housing starts are close to their lowest in 30 years, that millions of people just can't afford a car and that business bankruptcies are running 40 percent above a year ago.

It's all there in the monthly statistics out of which seers love to make computations and correlations, but what's unfortunate from a forecasting viewpoint is that all those statistics represent history.

They represent, in effect, what you already know and have told the economic world, and now the analysts of that world are giving them back to you with all sorts of forebodings, forecasts and recommendations.

So what else is new? Recessions are old stories in recent U.S. economic history. This one is the second in as many calendar years, and the eight since World War II.

What is newsworthy — even if it isn't new — is that it takes those who should know so long to figure out when a major economic change is under way. Washington seems to have been surprised by the suddenness and sharpness of this downturn. So were most of your favorite forecasters.

One of them, the Morgan Guaranty Survey, was unusually candid in acknowledging this. "The pronounced sag in activity has once again caught the forecasting community by surprise," it said a few days ago. Six weeks ago, it said, "most analysts — including those at The Morgan Bank — expected that the economy would avoid a downturn."

The recession information now being offered to you is probably no surprise at all since, after all, it is based on nothing other than what the forecasters received from you.

Received from you, that is, in the form of decisions made or decisions delayed, on whether or not you were able to hold your job, buy a car, afford the rent, take a trip, save money, reduce your indebtedness.

You knew. All you're getting down is the statistical documentation.

And just when the emergence from recessions comes about will depend on you also. Not that the actions of the president and the Federal Reserve don't mean anything they do.

For the best in Thanksgiving dining, come with the family and experience a really special holiday treat.

Gift of health, best gift of all

WASHINGTON (AP) — A thoughtful selection of a "life-giving" gift can put meaning back into the tradition of holiday giving, a nursing professor at the Catholic University of America believes.

Mary Walsh, professor in the university's School of Nursing, suggests that concerned shoppers consider a "gift of health" for their loved ones. For example, she says, why not give an enrollment in a CPR (cardiac pulmonary resuscitation) course, in a health spa or exercise clinic, a subscription to a nutrition or health magazine, or even a basket of assorted health foods?

"I would suggest a very careful selection based on your feeling of the person as a friend and associate," says Mrs. Walsh. "If someone has been talking about joining a stop-smoking clinic, or a weight-control program, the gift of enrollment or the initial fee might be the motivating factor for a person who's on the fence."

"However, some people might also be offended if you gave them such a gift," she warns. "Your decision should be based on how well you know them and how you think they would accept the gift."

A jogging suit, tennis shoes, lessons for a sport, barbells, a bicycle or exercise equipment are all gifts that would be good for many people, says the nursing professor, adding that the price range of such items is usually wide enough to fit most budgets.

"Select your gift with the needs of the person in mind," she advises. For instance, if the recipient is elderly or physically unable to undergo strenuous exercise, then sports lessons or jogging clothes would be inappropriate, but maybe a certificate for green fees at a local golf course would be appreciated.

Gifts of health foods or even a certificate for a health-food store would not be enjoyed by everyone. However, almost anyone would relish a fruit basket or enrollment in a "fruit of the month" program. "With the price of food today, most people are grateful to get a gift like this," says Mrs. Walsh.

For people on a salt-restricted diet — who must use herbs to season their food — pots, seeds and instructions on how to make an herb garden would be a gift that could be enjoyed year-round.

Another gift, perhaps for a person with high blood pressure, might be a kit with a blood-pressure gauge, sold specifically for at-home use. Those allergic to insect stings would appreciate a first-aid kit containing materials to self-administer the proper antidote.

Another idea is a general first-aid kit, either bought or "handmade," especially for families with children. Also, enrollment in a first-aid course would be a gift that could be of enormous benefit. For expectant parents, a book on baby care would be welcome.

There are also other types of "health" gifts that are less directly related to one's physical health, adds Mrs. Walsh. These would be gifts that help a person fight stress and meet what she describes as the "human needs" — psychological-spiritual-recreational needs.

For example, she recommends such gifts as "relaxation" tapes or books which explain, in lay terms, how to reduce stress. "In this day of 'burnout,' the psychological health of a person is important and can affect one's physical health," explains the nursing professor.

The relaxation tapes are played under one's pillow at night to help teach a person to relax. Mrs. Walsh suggests contacting your community health clinic or a local nursing clinic for information on where to purchase such tapes.

Another gift she recommends for fighting stress and meeting the human needs is simply a gift of time. The person who daily cares for an elderly person in the home, a sick spouse, a new baby or even a houseful of children might appreciate a day alone, perhaps for shopping, a movie, or just to sleep uninterrupted and unworried.

This gift could be given by offering to attend to the duties yourself, or by a cash gift to pay for the services of another person, perhaps through a visiting nurses association. Or you could provide a housecleaning service for a day or more, to give the recipient time to relax, stress-free, and to meet his or her other needs while someone else attends to the housework.

At Wit's End

Erma Bombeck

I have spent the greater part of my life trying to figure out what kind of people scrape the icing off their cake, heap it in a little mound to one side of the plate, eat the dry cake and then eat the icing slowly, after I have eaten all of mine.

They have to be sick!

Do you know what would happen if I saved my icing? The diner next to me would crush his cigarette out in it. The waiter would remove my plate while my head was turned, or I'd find a fly in it.

People who save their icing until last are born that way. They're the children who put their toys away before someone breaks their leg on them. They brush their teeth before they go to bed. They save the ribbons and the paper from their Christmas presents and they read their birthday cards BEFORE they open the present.

I had a girlfriend once... for about 15 minutes... whom I met one night after school at an ice cream parlor. From all appearances, our friendship was made in heaven. We were in the same grade, lived in the same neighborhood, our mothers worked, we both hated True - and - False questions, and we both wore bangs because our foreheads broke out.

We ordered the same flavor of ice cream. My mouth closed in over the cone so fast, my glasses frosted up. Just the tip of the cone stuck to my lip and was the only evidence there had been a cone at all.

I looked over at Gloria. Her little tongue licked at that cone for 55 minutes. I wanted to smash it into her face.

We never spoke again.

Icing - savers never change. Not really. They grow up to be adults who put the pimentos out of olives into a little stack on their plate and lick the chocolate off chocolate-covered strawberries instead of popping them into their mouths.

Well, I can't change either. I have to follow my philosophy for living: "Eat! Drink! Be merry, for tomorrow your husband (wife) may find out." I have to grab all the gusto I can get. I have to believe you only go around once in life, but if you play your cards right, it's enough.

Like taxes, the icing-savers will always be with us, but rejoice in the knowledge that aboard every Titanic is a woman who foolishly saved the maraschino cherry on her icebox cake!

LIFESTYLES

FRIED APPLE PIES are an all-American specialty that Southern cooks prepare especially well.

Fried pies, a southern specialty

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

For a long time cooks in the South have excelled in making fried pies — delicious fruit-filled pastries. Many recipes for the pies are in cookbooks devoted to soul food. In looking over half a dozen of these cookbooks I discovered that the covering for the fried pies could be made two ways — with pastry or biscuit dough.

To prepare Fried Apple Pies the easy way we used half a package of pie crust mix and rolled it extremely thin; then we made the filling from that delicately flavored apple, the Golden Delicious. With the leftover pastry we fashioned a dozen cheese straws. The fried apple pies were an irresistible dessert; the cheese straws a lovely lagniappe.

FRIED APPLE PIES
1 cup peeled, diced (about 1/2 inch) Golden Delicious

- apples
- 1 teaspoon grated orange rind
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 3 tablespoons orange juice
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch blended with 4 tablespoons orange juice
- 1/2 of an 11-ounce package pie crust mix
- Fat for deep frying
- Confectioners' sugar

over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and clear — a minute or so. Cool.

Make up pastry according to package directions. On a pastry cloth with a stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out the pastry to a 16-by-14-inch rectangle. With a 5-inch round cutter (we used the top of a stainless steel bowl), cut out 6 rounds. (See Note for using remaining pastry.) Place a generous tablespoon of the apple filling on each round; moisten edges with water, fold in half and seal edges well with fork Prick tops in several places with the fork tines. Deep-fry in fat heated to 375 degrees until golden — about 3 minutes. Drain on brown paper. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar; serve hot. Makes 6.

Note: If you wish to use the remaining pastry as we did to make cheese straws, work into the pastry 2 tablespoons of grated cheddar cheese and roll out into a 6-inch square. With a pastry wheel, cut in 1/2-inch wide strips. Place slightly apart on a small, ungreased cookie sheet. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until golden brown — 8 minutes. Makes 12.

BANANA COOKIES

We've updated this recipe, from the 1950s, asked for by a reader.

1 cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
6-inch-long banana (5 to 6 ounces), ripe and brown-flecked
1-3rd cup butter, soft
1/2 cup sugar
1 large egg
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon sugar mixed with 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon

On wax paper or in a bowl, stir together the flour, baking powder and baking soda. In a medium bowl with an electric beater, beat the banana until pureed — there will be 1/2 cup. Add the butter, sugar, egg and vanilla; at medium or high speed beat until blended. Add flour mixture; at low speed beat until blended. Drop by level tablespoons, a few inches apart, onto greased cookie sheets. Sprinkle with sugar — cinnamon mixture. Bake in a pre-heated 400-degree oven until lightly browned — 12 minutes. With a wide metal spatula remove at once to wire racks; cool completely. Store between sheets of wax paper or saran, tightly covered. Makes about 3 dozen.

Dear Abby

Not-so-merry woman wants some Christmas rest

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How do you go about putting a stop to exchanging Christmas gifts with people you hardly ever see? I don't mean relatives, I mean out-of-towners who used to be neighbors and whose children were friendly with our children (all grown now), and folks we are no longer close to. Shopping, wrapping and mailing Christmas presents have gotten to be a real chore, and I am not as young as I used to be. It's also expensive. I would like to get off a lot of people's lists and take them off mine, too. I'm sure they feel the same way about it, but don't know how to get off ours. So how do I get off this merry-go-round, Abby? I would prefer to send Christmas cards to a number of people who are still on my Christmas gift list. Thanks from ...

CUTTING CORNERS IN CHICAGO

DEAR CHICAGO: Early in December write a note to those you'd like to take off your gift list and put on your card list, saying you are "thankful" for friends with whom you can be perfectly frank. Explain that this year, along with trimming your Christmas tree, you're trimming your gift list and sending cards instead. I'll wager they'll appreciate your practical approach and will cheerfully reciprocate.

DEAR ABBY: My cousin recently lost her baby daughter. The baby died a few hours after she was born. It's been only three weeks, and already three women have asked me whether my cousin intends to return the baby gifts she received at her baby shower!

I find it hard to believe anyone could be so small as to be concerned about whether her baby gift will be returned or not.

What do I tell these women? I certainly do not want to approach my cousin with such pettiness. She's having a hard enough time as it is.

CAN'T BELIEVE IT

DEAR CAN'T: I suggest that you tell these petty, insensitive women that you wouldn't consider approaching your cousin with such a painful question.

FOOTPRINTS IN THE SAND

One night a man had a dream. He dreamed he was walking along the beach with the Lord. Across the sky flashed scenes from his life. For each scene, he noticed two sets of footprints in the sand: one belonging to him, and the other to the Lord.

When the last scene flashed before him, he looked back at the footprints and noticed that many times along the path there was only one set of footprints in the sand. He also noticed that this happened during the lowest and saddest times in his life.

This really bothered him, so he questioned the Lord. "Lord, you said that once I decided to follow you, you would walk with me all the way, but I noticed that during the most troublesome times of my life, there was only one set of footprints. I don't understand why, when I needed you the most, you deserted me."

The Lord replied, "My precious, precious child, I love you and would never leave you. During your times of trial and suffering, when you see only one set of footprints, it was then that I carried you."

New birth control method

By C.W. MIRANKER
Associated Press Writer
PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — A flexible, threadlike rubber plug is proving to be a safe, effective, and perhaps reversible method of sterilization for women, a researcher says.

"The results are extremely encouraging," said Dr. A.J. Kresch of Stanford University, who is testing the method in California. "There have been no failures (pregnancies) with normally formed plugs" among the 500 most recent volunteers.

The half-hour procedure, offered to carefully selected women at 11 centers in 10 cities, is done in a doctor's office with a local anesthetic, at about half the cost of other types of sterilizations, according to statements from RSP Laboratories of Stamford, Conn., which sponsored the trials. The other cities involved in the trials are New York, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Washington, Houston, Phoenix, Wilmington, Del., Hartford, Conn., and Reading, Pa.

The procedure involves squirting a few drops of liquid silicone rubber into each fallopian tube with a thin instrument inserted through the vagina into the uterus.

The rubber gels quickly, forming a thin, flexible strand about 3 inches long that fits the Fallopian tube exactly. An X-ray detects whether the plug is "good."

By blocking passage of the egg from ovary to uterus, the plug provides contraception. The procedure involves no incision, no stitches, no general anesthetic or hospital stay, and none of the risks or discomforts of abdominal surgery. More than 600 women have undergone "tubal occlusion" since 1978, when clinical trials began, with no serious side effects, said Sandra Powers, an RSP spokeswoman.

Data on the safety and effectiveness of the first 1,000 experimental sterilizations will be sent to the Food and Drug Administration next spring. The agency will decide whether the method can be licensed for widespread use.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

Tuesday, November 24

This coming year you're likely to take on a few more responsibilities and duties than you have in the past. Some of these assignments may not be of your own choosing, but the results will be gratifying.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be kind to those who need your help today, but also be careful that a greedy acquaintance doesn't take advantage of you. Be generous, but selective. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you fail to acknowledge persons who have helped you recently, they may not be willing to aid you again when you need them. Saying "thanks" means a lot.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're good at getting what you go after today, but you may not be overly pleased with the fruits of your victory. Keep your expectations within limits.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you have any problems in your love life today, iron things out with your romantic partner. Bringing a third party into the picture will muddy the water.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be extremely careful in business dealings today. Misunderstandings could arise if all aspects are not properly spelled out in advance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Persons whose help you need work-or-careerwise could take positions contrary to yours today. Try to reason things out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Treat serious situations with the respect they deserve today, but don't become negative to the extent where it may impede your progress.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Look out for those in your charge today, but try not to be too possessive, or to lay down conditions they may find oppressive. Be firm, but fair.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's best to postpone projects today if you feel going in you'll not be able to conclude them properly. Reschedule events to when time will be your ally.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you hope to get today, you must first be a giver. Others won't treat you generously when they feel you've been a trifle stingy with them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your possibilities for material gains are good today, but don't do anything at the expense of others. Cut your profit a bit if it will keep your reputation intact.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're very capable today, provided you don't assign undue importance to negative thoughts. Why worry about what may never happen?

Cowboys can lead in Eastern Division with Thanksgiving win

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys can take the lead Thanksgiving Day in their National Conference Eastern Division game of one-upmanship with the Philadelphia Eagles.

Dallas's 24-10 victory over the Washington Redskins and the New York Giants' 20-10 upset of the Eagles threw the wild, wild NFC East into another tie Sunday.

"It's a great feeling," said Dallas wide receiver Drew Pearson. "We had hoped for someone to upset the Eagles. It's great to be able to control your own destiny."

Dallas beat the Eagles earlier in the year and meets Chicago in four days. The showdown second game with Philadelphia comes Dec. 13 in Texas Stadium.

Pearson said the victory over the Redskins would keep the Cowboys pumped up for Thursday's visit by the Bears.

"I enjoy the Thanksgiving Day games," he said. "If we can beat Chicago, then we can sit back and watch Philadelphia struggle to keep up."

Dallas quarterback Danny White threw touchdown passes of 28 yards to Butch Johnson and 10 yards to Doug Cosbie to seal a game that assured the (9-3) Cowboys their 16th consecutive winning season.

The loss dropped the Redskins to 5-7. "It was a tough afternoon," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry, who gave the team a new computer analysis of Washington's offense.

"The computer analysis really helped," said safety Charlie Waters. "We were in great position all day. The coach is something."

Landry said "Right now I can't worry about Philadelphia... they will show up down the line... Right now it will be tough getting ready for Chicago on three days rest."

Washington Coach Joe Gibbs was impressed with the Dallas defense. "They can tee off on you," said Gibbs.

Washington was handicapped by the loss of halfback Joe Washington, who had 84 yards rushing in the first half before he suffered a rib injury and never returned to the game.

"That hurt us," said Gibbs. "We had to play Nick Giaquinto and he has only been with us two weeks.

"It's a painful injury for Joe. He tore a piece of cartilage that sticks out between his ribs."

Pearson said the Eagles upset fired up the Cowboys.

"We learned about it in the first quarter," he said. "They put the score up on the scoreboard... it gave us a big boost. We knew we had a chance to tie it up again."

Dallas led the Redskins 10-7 at halftime on the Johnson scoring pass and Rafael Septien's 25-yard field goal.

The only Washington score came on a 7-yard touchdown pass to Giaquinto from quarterback Joe Theismann.

Mark Moseley's 26-yard field goal tied the game early in the third period before the Cowboys took command.

Cosbie's third period touchdown catch and Ron Springs' one-yard touchdown run with less than a minute to play put away the Redskins.

"We won't have much time to prepare for the Bears but there is a plus side to playing so soon," said Dallas end Ed Jones. "The 10-day layoff after the Thanksgiving game with the Bears should go a long way in getting us all ready for the final run."

QUICK STOP. Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett (33) puts the brakes on and tries to cut back against a hard Washington Redskins rush by linebacker Monte Coleman (51) in second half action Sunday in Texas Stadium. Dorsett broke back to the inside for a short one-yard gain. The Cowboys defeated the Redskins 24-10.

Phillips cheered by Houston fans as Saints tromple Oilers at home

HOUSTON (AP) — It was an emotional and confusing afternoon for Houston Oilers fans. They tried to cheer for both sides.

They cheered when the opposing coach, New Orleans' Bum Phillips, led his team onto the field before the game. They cheered Phillips again as he left, after the Saints had embarrassed the Oilers 27-24 Sunday.

What happened between Phillips' two standing ovations was not very pleasant for the Houston team. The fans tried to cheer for the hometown Oilers, but aside from a brief fourth quarter rally, there was little to admire about the struggling former Super Bowl contender.

So Phillips, the man who led the Oilers to three straight playoff appearances before he was fired late last December by Oiler owner Bud Adams, was his wise-cracking old self following the game. But this time, there was a twinge of regret.

"It's the biggest victory I've ever had in this building," Phillips said of the AstroDome. "I wish there was some way both teams could have won. But when the whistle blows, you've got to root for one side or the other, and I just worried about the Saints."

Phillips strode into the AstroDome wearing an Oiler blue shirt and acknowledged the scores of banners and cheers welcoming him back to the city.

"My wife mentioned this morning my choice of shirt colors," Phillips said. "Heck, I just wake up in the morning and put on what's clean."

While Phillips dominated the attention, the Saints players took control on the field. Saints rookie George Rogers outgained fellow Heisman trophy winner Earl Campbell 142 yards to 96 yards, and the Saints allowed Houston only two sustained drives in the game.

New Orleans took a 10-3 halftime lead on the first of two touchdowns runs by Jack Holmes and Denny Ricardo's 46-yard field goal. Houston's Toni Fritsch booted a 49-yard field goal.

A mishandled punt by New Orleans' Russell Erxleben gave Houston possession at the Saint 2-yard line in the third quarter. Campbell scored on a 1-yard plunge to tie the game.

The Saints then drove 74 yards with the aid of 57 yards on two pass interference calls and took the lead for good on Holmes' 2-yard touchdown run. New Orleans made it 24-10 on quarterback Archie Manning's 22-yard touchdown pass to Wayne Wilson, a former Oiler.

Houston scored twice in the fourth quarter on a 50-yard pass from Ken Stabler to rookie Mike Holston and Campbell's 1-yard run, but Ricardo's 42-yard field goal proved to be the difference.

"I wanted to prove to all those players that I brought to Houston that I was still a good coach," Phillips said.

Cowboys tie Eagles in Eastern Division

By JOHN NELSON

Dallas didn't exactly bend, fold, spindle or mutilate the Washington Redskins, but computer cards did come into play as the Cowboys helped forge one of three division ties created this weekend in the National Football League.

The Cowboys' computer, a well-known tool of Coach Tom Landry, apparently spotted a flaw or two in the Redskins offense during the week, and Landry used the information to beat the Redskins 24-10 on Sunday. The victory, coupled with the New York Giants' 20-10 upset of Philadelphia, left the Cowboys and Eagles tied for the National Conference Eastern Division lead with 9-3 records.

The New York Jets also figured in a division tie, beating Miami 16-15 and moving into a deadlock with the Dolphins in the American Conference East. Each team has a record of 7-4-1.

The third tie was formed when the Cincinnati Bengals powered past Denver 38-21 and Kansas City blasted Seattle 40-13. That left the Broncos and Chiefs each at 8-4 atop the AFC West.

In other games Sunday, it was San Francisco 33, Los Angeles 31; San Diego 55, Oakland 21; Pittsburgh 32, Cleveland 10; Detroit 23, Chicago 7; Tampa Bay 37, Green Bay 3; New Orleans 27, Houston 24; St. Louis 35, Baltimore 24; and Buffalo 20, New England 17.

The Minnesota Vikings, who lead the NFC Central by 1 1/2 games over Detroit and Tampa Bay, play at Atlanta tonight.

Dallas quarterback Danny White threw for a pair of touchdowns, including a 10-yarder to tight end Doug Cosbie, late in the third quarter that broke a 10-10 tie. Drew Pearson set up the final Dallas score when he ran 25 yards on a double reverse to the Washington 1, and Ron Springs scored with 52 seconds left.

The Redskins' game was weakened when running back Joe Washington left the game late in the second quarter. Washington, who had rushed for 84 yards, sustained torn cartilage in his rib cage and did not return to the game.

With four weeks left in the season, only one division title appeared in the bag. That was the NFC West, where San Francisco, now 9-3, led Atlanta by 3 1/2 games and Los Angeles by four. Cincinnati also was 9-3 after the weekend's play, and the Bengals had a two-game lead over the Steelers, 7-5.

Buffalo, at 7-5, and San Diego, also 7-5, also were in contention for AFC wild card playoff berths. The Giants, Detroit and Tampa Bay all had 6-6 marks in the NFC and were not entirely out of the chase.

yards to the Philadelphia 32, and six plays later, Danelo kicked his winning field goal. Terry Jackson put the game away when he intercepted a Ron Jaworski pass on the Eagles' next possession and returned it 32 yards for a touchdown.

Jets 16, Dolphins 15

Jets quarterback Richard Todd, playing despite a fractured rib, tossed an 11-yard scoring pass to Jerome Barkum with 16 seconds to play, capping a 10-play winning drive.

New York got the ball with 3:10 left, after Uwe von Schamann had given Miami a 15-9 lead with a 23-yard field goal.

The victory was the Jets' fourth straight. The Jets' first game with Miami this year ended in a 28-28 tie, giving New York the edge in head-to-head competition should the AFC East end deadlocked.

total of the season against the Broncos.

Anderson's TD strikes included a 65-yard pass play to running back Charles Alexander in the fourth quarter.

Chiefs 40, Seahawks 13

Bill Kenney threw for a pair of touchdowns, and rookie Billy Jackson scored twice on short runs for Kansas City. The Chiefs scored two touchdowns in a 36-second span in the second quarter to take a 20-6 lead.

Kenney hit J.T. Smith with a 14-yard scoring pass, capping a 73-yard drive, with 1:07 left in the half, and on Seattle's next possession, Lloyd Burruss intercepted a Jim Zorn pass and returned it 46 yards for a touchdown.

Votes pouring in for Heisman Trophy winner

By WILL GRIMSLEY

AP Special Correspondent

The polls are open and votes are already coming in for college football's coveted Oscar — the Heisman Trophy. As in any election where the stakes and regional pride are so high, an intense lobbying campaign is under way.

The 46th winner will be announced by the Downtown Athletic Club on the evening of Dec. 5. Many votes already have been cast. Thus performances in the last weeks of the campaign probably will have little impact on the outcome.

Most voters — writers and broadcasters — have made up their minds.

It's one of the most hotly contested competitions in years with five players standing out. They are:

Marcus Allen, University of Southern California tailback, who set nine NCAA offense records, becoming the first in history to run for more than 2,000 yards. His total of 2,342 eclipsed the records of outstanding USC predecessors such as Mike Garrett, O.J. Simpson, Anthony Davis, Ricky Bell and Charles White. Although he was guilty of three costly fumbles Saturday against UCLA, he ran for 219 yards.

Herschel Walker, Georgia tailback, a devastating runner who was sensational as a freshman on the Bulldogs' national championship team last season, finished third in the 1980 Heisman voting. His statistics, 1,666 yards and 15 touchdowns, are not as impressive as Allen's, but he has pro-

Dan Marino, Pittsburgh quarterback, whose rifle arm has carried the unbeaten Panthers to the No. 1 position in The Associated Press poll. For most of the year he has led the nation in passing efficiency, compiling 2,348 total yards and 32 touchdowns. His coach, Jackie Sherrill, tabs him "the greatest college quarterback I've ever seen."

Jim McMahon, Brigham Young University quarterback, a 6-foot-1, 180-pound passing phenom who, after being red-shirted in 1979, replaced Marc Wilson and threw for 4,918 yards in the first in the NCAA to go over the 4,000-yard plateau. This year, even though he missed two games and part of a third because of a knee injury, he has thrown for 3,555 yards — a phenomenal exhibition — and finished his regular-season career at BYU with an NCAA record 9,536 yards.

Art Schlichter, Ohio State quarterback, a double threat at 6-3 and 200 pounds, has been college football's "bridesmaid" for four years, tabbed as a Heisman prospect since he broke in as a freshman. He approached 10,000 yards in total offense, this year passing for 2,492 yards and 15 touchdowns. He scored two touchdowns in Saturday's victory over Michigan.

So, in the 1981 Heisman Sweepstakes, it's yuh gives the wheel a spin and takes yer chance. All five of these leading candidates, as unmentioned others, are worthy of the honor. It's just a question of which falls more solidly within the framework of Heisman voting habits.

Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse, the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals...call for in Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Officials told to develop nuclear waste site

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The message to the nuclear engineers and scientists at the annual National Waste Terminal Storage Conference was clear: get on with developing methods and procedures to store wasted radioactive fuel.

President Reagan has said the nation's energy future depends on further development of nuclear power. Although he admits government has shirked responsibility on developing a waste system, he wants the work to proceed swiftly.

Scientists say technology exists for safe disposal of nuclear waste, but that the biggest problems are social and political. The public must be convinced disposal is safe, and politicians must be persuaded that accepting a disposal site isn't career suicide, they say.

Federal officials made it clear they are fed up with states trying to get out of hosting the first disposal site. Somebody, said Deputy Energy Secretary W. Kenneth Davis, will soon have to bite the bullet.

Carl R. Cooley, acting director of the Office of Waste Isolation, said studies of potential sites likely will focus increasingly on two government-owned sites, one in Nevada and the other in Washington, plus a salt dome area in either Mississippi, Louisiana or eastern Texas.

Once a test site is chosen, Davis said a state should not have the power to veto it, although some argue that the states should have a right to appeal to one or both houses of Congress.

Several speakers at the meeting insisted that site development should go forward with cooperation from the host state or states. Holmes Brown, liaison for the National Governors Association, said states recognize they should not have absolute veto rights.

Discussions about financial aid for the host site ranged from outright bribery to a plea that the government at least pay its own way.

"Some members of the public and elected officials fear that payments which are not specifically targeted for measurable impacts may be interpreted as bribes," Brown said. "We're not all opposed to that, but it is a policy issue. It may complicate the political problems in a community."

Juline Christofferson, aide to the governor of Utah, said her state has had bad experiences with such federal projects as the MX missile system and leaking nerve gas bombs. She urged that if Utah is chosen, the federal government come prepared to pay its own way.

Two speakers said that after 30 years of consideration, Congress is beginning to grapple seriously with the problem of waste disposal. They were hopeful the Senate might adopt definitive legislation on nuclear energy by Christmas, but said the House appears less stable.

Several bureaucrats indicated the government wants out of the business of storing commercially produced nuclear

Four charged with clubbing doe to death

NORTH ATLEBORO, Mass. (AP) — Four men went into a park, clubbed to death a tame deer named Babe in her pen and then butchered her for a pre-Thanksgiving meal because they felt hungry, police said.

"I've been here 28 years and we've had all kinds of stuff out at the park — rapes, child molestation and attacks," Police Chief John Coyle said. "But this has made the community very angry. This is the first time I've seen a real expression of fear."

Detective Sgt. Brian F. Coyle, the police chief's brother, said the four men who entered Memorial Park before dawn Nov. 11 skinned the sickly, 150-pound white-tailed doe and ate a "pre-Thanksgiving meal."

Police arrested the four men Wednesday on a tip after the town selectmen put up a $500 reward.

Police said the four men were charged with larceny over $100, conspiracy to commit larceny, cruelty to animals and destroying a park animal. They were identified as Richard J. Paul, 18, and Tracy Penny, 18, both of North Attleboro, William T. Davis, 28, of Hyannis, and Ralph F. Door, 22, of Provincetown.

The were released on their own recognizance.

Police said one man said in a statement that the four went to the park because they were "hungry." While two stood guard, two others leaped into the pen and clubbed the 4-year-old doe. She had been separated from the park's three other deer because of a possible skin and bone problem.

News in Briefs

GARDENA, Calif. (AP) — A Buddhist church that had been nearly rebuilt after an arson fire 16 months ago has been burned again, and this time churchgoers are offering a reward to catch the arsonist.

After the first fire, the Gardena Buddhist Church raised $800,000 in addition to insurance money to duplicate the 20-year-old building. It was 70 percent complete when most of the work was destroyed Friday.

The 800 members of the church decided to delay announcing the size of the reward until one of their group, Gardena Councilman

Mas Fukai, asked the City Council to offer its own reward. But the congregation decided Friday it would more than match whatever the city offers.

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — About 300 people came to the city dock to place a second plaque at the spot where author Alex Haley says his African ancestor stepped off an English slave ship in 1767.

Haley, author of "Roots," helped dedicate the original plaque in September, but it was stolen two days later. His brother, Julius, was present Sunday for the second dedication of the plaque honoring Kunta Kinte, a slave ancestor described in the book.

This ceremony underscores our desire to fight bigotry, hatred and racism," said Carl Snowden of the county chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which raised $3,000 for the new plaque.

CENTRAL CITY, Pa. (AP) — A fire that swept through a family's living quarters in a four-family house killed three children, their mother and an uncle, police said. The children's father escaped.

The two-story structure was fully ablaze when firefighters arrived at 6 a.m. Sunday, said police chief Larry Wechenhiser.

The victims of the fire were identified as Pamela Collins, 26, her brother, Lance Hartman, 24; and Mrs. Collins' three children, Richard Jr., 8, Sherry, 5, and Shannon, 4. Richard Collins, 30, the father, leaped to safety through a second-floor window. He was in satisfactory condition at Windber Hospital.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting this week, travelers wanting to know the weather forecast for many of the nation's major cities will be able to get the information by telephone.

The National Weather Service is providing the two-day forecasts for direct-dial callers from across the nation. The calls will cost 50 cents each, added to the regular telephone bill of the caller.

Initially, the plan is scheduled to operate for 90 days for the benefit of Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year travelers, but will be made permanent if there is sufficient interest.

Callers dialing 900-976-EAST will be able to hear forecasts for Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, Detroit, Little Rock, Miami Beach, Minneapolis, New Orleans, New York and Washington.

By dialing 900-976-WEST callers will be able to get forecasts for Bismarck, N.D.; Dallas, Denver, Great Falls, Mont.; Kansas City, Las Vegas, Los Angeles, Phoenix, Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Seattle.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court next month will take up a case that could lead to a ruling on how accurate the U.S. Census Bureau must be in counting the nation's population every 10 years.

At issue is the 1980 census and how it affects the distribution of federal dollars and seats in Congress. More than 60 lawsuits have been filed alleging "undercounting" and other irregularities in the latest census.

The court will begin hearing oral arguments on a preliminary issue in the matter on Dec. 2.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Formal Complaint seeking discipline of James G. Baker, an attorney at law in Texas, which alleges that the Defendant has neglected to carry out legal tasks that he had agreed to do, failed to keep his clients informed of the status of their cases, and failed to maintain communications with his clients.

The above-described Formal Complaint seeks the reprimand, suspension or disbarment of the Defendant attorney.

All of which more fully appears from Plaintiff's Original Petition on file in this office, and which reference is here made for all intents and purposes.

If this citation is not served within 90 days after date of its issuance, it shall be returned unserved. WITNESS, JOHN DICKSON, Clerk of the District Court of Travis County, Texas, issued and given under my hand and the seal of said Court at office in the City of Austin, this 27th day of October, 1981.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Jean Harris cries privately in her cell for Dr. Herman Tarnower, the millionaire diet author she was convicted of murdering, and reminisces about the good times they shared, a fellow prisoner says.

"She plays the music she used to listen to with him, like 'Hello Dolly,' on a little stereo she has, and she goes back and back over the fun they had together," said Adela Holzer, a former Broadway producer convicted of investment fraud.

Mrs. Harris, former headmistress of a girls' school, is serving 15 years to life for murdering Tarnower in March 1980. She is appealing the conviction.

During her incarceration, Mrs. Harris has become an "inmates' champion." Ms. Holzer said, and has been elected to the prisoners' grievance committee at the prison.

Mrs. Harris also cleans her cell constantly and has pasted olive-green and rust-brown paper over the cell furniture.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bryant Gumbel is expected to become the host of NBC's "Today" show, replacing Tom Brokaw on Jan. 4.

Gumbel, 33, a sportscaster for NBC since 1975, said Sunday he agreed to a contract and expects to sign it "in the next day or two."

Under the three-year agreement, Gumbel will work in New York with co-host Jane Pauley. Sources at NBC expect Chris Wallace to join the show, providing news reports and interviews from Washington.

LONDON (AP) — A British newspaper said today that Prince Charles, bowing to pressure from Princess Diana and his mother, Queen Elizabeth II, has given up steeplechasing.

The 33-year-old heir to the British throne has sold his regular mount, Good Prospect, and has no plans to buy any more race horses, the tabloid Daily Express reports.

The paper said the prince will continue, however, to pursue his other horseback sports — hunting, cross country and polo.

VIENNA (AP) — Conductor Zubin Mehta says the renowned Austrian orchestra leader Karl Boehm told him two years ago, in a New York hotel room, that he planned to bequeath Mehta a ring honoring another eminent conductor.

And on Sunday, in a ceremony at Vienna's Musikverein concert hall, the request that Boehm made in his will was granted — the Arthur Nikisch ring changed hands. Boehm, considered among the world's foremost conductors, died Aug. 14 in Salzburg, Austria, at age 86.

Boehm's son, Karl Heinz, presented the ring to Mehta during a brief festive event organized by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra.

TRAVELING AGAIN. Pope John Paul II, left, descends the steps of the Sanctuary of the Italian village of Collevaenza, north of Rome, Sunday. The pontiff, making his first pilgrimage since he was shot May 13, was under guard of anti-terrorists police in Italy's largest security operation ever for a papal visit. (AP Laserphoto)

George Wallace on the verge of political rebirth

By KENDAL WEAVER
Associated Press Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — George Corley Wallace left the Alabama statehouse three years ago, a small man in a wheelchair, ready to find his place in the history books.

It was quite a history — once a jut-jawed, fist-shaking firebrand of a segregationist, four times Dixie's wild card candidate for president, a battler for "the little guy, the average American," then a crumpled victim of a would-be assassin at a Maryland shopping center.

When he left office in January 1979, he had dominated Alabama politics for 14 of the previous 16 years. To some, he said quietly, "I'm through."

He wasn't. Wallace, at 62, is now on the verge of a political rebirth, emerging this time as a mild and healing man for all seasons — and, some say, of all races.

He says he will decide early next year if he will run for governor in 1982. Already he has begun assembling the framework of a campaign, meeting with longtime Wallace loyalists, who are urging him to run, and peppering his schedule with numerous public appearances.

Wallace is hardly the near-unconquerable figure he was when he ran for governor his last time, in 1974. But there are no dominating campaign personalities on the Alabama scene, at least not yet, and the idea of a Wallace candidacy is viewed with more than a little gravity by his opponents.

The man who succeeded Wallace — Gov. Fob James — could seek re-election in 1982, but as yet hasn't said what he will do.

James won in 1978 on the slogan "It's Time for a New Beginning," a veiled call for Alabama to leave the Wallace political era. A millionaire sporting goods manufacturer, James promised to run Alabama like a business, not a political machine.

Unlike Wallace, he has not used the governor's office to lay the groundwork for a long-term feign.

Out of office for three years, Wallace no longer has instant clout in all the counties. But he has the remnants of his old organization. And he has something of a new coalition, which could include blacks.

On his speaking itinerary today was the keynote address to the Alabama Conference of Black Mayors, a group of 20 black mayors holding a weekend meeting in Tuskegee.

The president of the conference, Tuskegee Mayor Johnny Ford, said the group wasn't endorsing any candidate. But, he said, Wallace was invited "because he has always been a friend of our conference."

Ford, once a campaign worker for the late U.S. Sen. Robert Kennedy of New York, said he personally hopes Wallace runs for governor. But he said he will eventually go along with the final endorsement of the Alabama Democratic Conference, the black political wing of the state Democratic Party.

Wallace's appearance in Tuskegee comes on the heels of a virtual endorsement by E.D. Nixon, an 82-year-old black who is the patriarch of the civil rights movement in Montgomery, a man instrumental in Martin Luther King Jr.'s rise to prominence.

"Wallace has done more for blacks than any other governor in the last 20 years," said Nixon. If Wallace runs, he said, "I certainly wouldn't be against him."

Wallace shed his segregationist stand years ago. When he ran in 1974, he was the incumbent, a man who had faced death while campaigning for president in 1972. No possible heavyweight candidates opposed him, and in his status as a shoo-in, he won endorsements from black leaders and got a significant number of black votes.

Last April, a University of Alabama poll showed again that Wallace is hardly the nemesis of the black community. Among blacks responding to the poll, Wallace was the favorite gubernatorial candidate of 44 percent. The next closest candidate got 31 percent. James got 8 percent.

Wallace also enhanced his standing among some Alabama Democratic party leaders when he stuck by President Carter in 1980. James, a former Republican, was the only Democratic governor in the country who refused to endorse Carter.

However, a campaign could alter his place in Alabama history, leaving him with something of a Jim Folsom stigma. Folsom, the colorful 6-foot-8 "Big Jim" who won two terms as governor, lost on history for a third term and later turned into a perennial loser with repeated campaigns for one office or another.

A campaign also would raise Wallace's "health factor" to the level of public debate.

Wallace, who was left paralyzed by an assassin's bullet in 1972, is confined to a wheelchair and has repeatedly sought to ease the periodic pain he suffers in his midsection. But his health appears to be no different than it was when he held office, and, as before, campaigning seems to be his best medicine.

Then there's his personal life. He recently married for a third time, exchanging vows with a 32-year-old former country music singer, Lisa Taylor, the daughter of a wealthy coal miner. Their public appearances have been rare. A campaign might prompt a change.

Before his recent spate of speaking engagements, Wallace kept a low profile, working out of a Montgomery office as director of rehabilitation resources for the University of Alabama at Birmingham.
