Pampa High Will Be Featured on Program at WTSC

CANYON — (WTNS) — Pampa High School will be the featured school on the second "Buff Club" radio program emanating from the campus of West Texas State each Saturday morning at 9:30 and aired over Station KLYM.
Pampa High will be saluted on the morning of November 12. Several entertainers and outstanding students both from Pampa High and among Pampa area now attending WT will be featured in the 30-minute program.
An added feature of the show is that on the week when a certain school is saluted, a mystery record will be played. Only the high school students from that town may try to identify the record. Students may drop a card to the "Buff Club," West Texas State College. The prize each week will be a portable radio.
The program is being produced by Joe Bailey and Frances Lynn Townes, Amarillo Seniors, and Jim Bill Caldwell, Miami Senior, as a project in an advanced radio class.

Gold Flow Into U.S. Reversed

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The current world financial situation has caused a reversal in the 15-year flow of gold into this country and has brought a U.S. crack-down on dollar aid by the International Monetary Fund.
Both developments, disclosed over the weekend, apparently stem directly from the Western world's financial dependence on this country.
Officials said the U.S. raised a go-easy signal on the outlay of the fund's dollars through fear that the end of Marshall Plan aid in 1952 would find the 48-member organization without dollar resources.
While this was considered the more important of the two developments, the increase in U.S. gold sales, compared with purchases, was perhaps more startling. Officials said foreign countries have bought up enough gold from U.S. stocks to cause a $108,000,000 dip in the past seven weeks.
The major reason, they said, appears to be the persistent, repeatedly-denied rumor that the United States is planning to devalue the dollar — which would raise the dollar value of gold.
The International Monetary Fund is a pool in which members can exchange their own currency for an equal amount of another country's money in practice, dollars have proven to be the major currency in demand.
Of $787,300,000 drawn in the bank's three years, less than $250,000,000 has been repaid. That leaves $537,300,000, which holds the most powerful position in the agency, to propose that all future dollar applications include a specific repayment date.

Rank Threatens To Quit Movies

LONDON — (AP) — J. Arthur Rank, biggest operator in Britain's ailing movie industry, has reported heavy financial losses and has threatened to quit making films entirely.
The Yorkshire multi-millionaire said his group will make only six to 10 films in the six months ending June, 1950. And, he added, unless the government lowers its 40 percent tax on movie tickets he will pull out of the industry.
Already, the organization has sold two of its studios to the British Broadcasting Corporation for use in television.

Rent Controls May End Entirely

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Federal rent controls may end next summer as a result of booming home construction.
With new dwelling units going up at a million-a-year rate, some key lawmakers raised doubts that another rent control bill could be rammed through Congress when the present law expires June 30.
It is not yet clear whether the Truman administration will ask Congress to keep the rental lid clamped down when the expiration deadline nears.
Congress voted last March to continue controls in modified form for another 15 months.

Natural Gas Sales Said Invasion of Fuel Market

CHICAGO — (AP) — The effect of natural gas sales on the kerosene and fuel oil business has been termed "the greatest single invasion of any fuel market in history."

E. Holley Poe, a New York marketing consultant told oil men attending the 29th annual meeting of the American Petroleum Institute.

"This is no bad dream which will pass, come tomorrow's dawn. It is real competition; it will grow instead of diminish; and it will certainly have a profound effect on your own business — not only in marketing, but clear back to your refinery practices."

Poe cited an increase of 97 percent in market requirements for natural gas from 1938 to 1948, compared with 66 percent for fuel oil. Water power requirements for heating were up 77 percent, bituminous coal 50 percent and anthracite 11 percent, he said.

Despite the challenge of expansion in the natural gas industry, Poe said, the oil industry has "been one of anticipation, and adjustment to new conditions." He said adjustments could be made to meet the new competition.

Another speaker told the convention that business needs clarification by Congress of the intent of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act and the Patman act.

William Simon, a Chicago attorney, and counsel for the Capehart committee of the 80th Congress, said the oil industry and other businesses aren't sure now that if they obey one law they aren't violating the other.

"Rigid prices in any industry are generally used to prove violations of the Sherman act, which make sale price-fixing illegal," Simon said. "But, on the other hand, flexibility of price is almost certain to result in a violation of the price — discrimination provisions of the Patman amendment to the Clayton act."

He urged support of an amendment proposed by Sen. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo) to clarify the price philosophies of the laws.

Year-Round Camp for Crippled Children Goal of Lions Clubs

By TEX EASLEY

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The 40,000 members of 580 Lions Clubs throughout Texas are planning a year-round camp for crippled children. It will be near Kerrville on land owned by the government.

The success of the plan, according to W. F. Mickelsen of Kerrville, depends on whether the government donates 500 acres of partly wooded ranch land adjacent to the Legion Veterans Administration hospital.

He is very optimistic.

In fact, he hopes that the first of a cluster of ranch-style bunk houses will be built and echoing next summer with laughter of happy youngsters who have forgotten their physical handicaps.

Crippled boys and girls, 7 to 16 years of age inclusive, would be enrolled at the camp. There would be no charge. They would come to the camp for 90-day periods, with some remaining for one or more additional periods if their personal situation made this advisable.

Here for a week of conferences with various federal officials, Mickelsen headquartered at the office of Rep. Clark Fisher of San Angelo. Most of his conferences were at the Federal Security Administration.

The FSA, which includes the Public Health Service, was picked by the General Services Administration to handle the matter. The GSA handles disposition of surplus property, and the 500 acres in question already has been declared excess to the needs of the veterans administration.

The land sought originally was given to the American Legion by the Schreiner family of Kerrville shortly after World War I. It eventually became the property of the VA. The present hospital there, for treatment of tuberculosis, occupies only about 300 acres of the original tract of approximately 800 acres.

The initial cost of the crippled children rehabilitation center would be about $250,000, with an annual operating cost of $300,000. It might be expanded in future years.

Enrollment would be limited to 110 children. They would come from various parts of Texas, selected by local Lions clubs.

"The purpose of the camp," Mickelsen elaborated, "is to give these unfortunate boys and girls a fresh, healthy outlook on life. It is all too easy for a crippled kid to get a warped slant on things. He is usually forced to follow an isolated, or abnormal sort of existence.

"If a boy or girl of this kind can get a chance to spend a few months where they can forget their afflictions, or at least feel consciousness, it may mean whether they assume a normal role in society as adults."

Occupational therapy will be available, as well as regular school. Physiotherapy and medical care will be available for those who have been getting it, or those who want to take it up on the recommendation of their own doctors.

All buildings at the camp will have floors as near as possible to the ground, to avoid steps.

Horses, pony carts and even burros will be available for trails over the 500-acre tract and the nearby Texas state park along the Guadalupe River.

The children will be selected on the basis of their personal need for such rehabilitation, regardless of the financial ability of their parents, said Mickelsen.

He estimates the annual operating costs could be met with pledges averaging $800 each from 500 local clubs throughout the state. He figures that this average could be reached by large gifts from individuals of substantial means.

The project is sponsored by "The Texas Lions League for Crippled Children, Inc.," Mickelsen said. The president of the league is Jack Welch, a Brownsville attorney.

—Credit for originating the idea, according to Mickelsen, goes to the Kerr County director of the Texas Public Health Department, Jack Roe.

Texas Rises, Louisiana Falls In October Drilling Activity

AUSTIN — (AP) — A fast drilling pace was set in Texas oil fields last week as 202 wells were reported. The Railroad Commission reported.

This year's total completions shot up to 7,468, almost 1,000 ahead of the year ago figure of 6,466.

Completion of 18 gas wells brought the 1949 total to 583, slightly trailing a mark of 608 for the comparable 1948 period.

Seventy-six dry holes were reported. Nine wildcat oil wells, one gas and 24 dry holes were drilled.

Seventy-four dry wells and 29 oil wells were plugged.

Today's total average calendar day allowable was 2,308,785 barrels, an increase of 130,880 over last week.

BATON ROUGE — (AP) — Louisiana oil activity slackened in October but remained above the levels of early 1949, the Department of Conservation reported.

There were 200 drilling permits issued in October, compared with 275 the previous month and 185 in January. Exploratory wells accounted for 24 of the October permits.

The end of the month saw about 330 rigs active in the state.

There were 170 wells completed, compared with 274 in September and 146 in January. They included 101 producing oil wells, 31 gas wells and 38 non-productive drillings.

Thomas Trial Set for Monday

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The trial of Rep. J. Parnell Thomas (R-N.J.) was tentatively reset for next Monday. Thomas is accused of conspiracy to defraud the government by "padding" his office payroll.

William H. Collins, attorney for Thomas, asked the postponement because he is representing another client in a case now being tried.

Collins told reporters he doubted he would be free to appear for Thomas for two weeks. On next Monday he may ask another week's postponement.

Sunray Finals Ninth Well In Scurry

Sunray Oil Corp. completed its ninth well in Scurry County last week.

The latest completion was the company's R. B. Brown "B" No. 6 which produced on potential test at the rate of 1,200 barrels from the Canyon Reef. The company currently is drilling two additional wells on its Brown lease. In addition, three other wells are being drilled by Sunray on other Scurry County leases.

Previously the company had finished its Sentell No. 1 for a potential of more than 400 barrels daily on another lease.

Dealers See Latest Ford

Two members of Tom Rose, Ford dealer here, are in Oklahoma City for a two-day showing of Ford's 1950 model cars.

Jack Morgan, sales manager, and Tom Rose, manager, left Sunday night for Oklahoma City. They will return tonight.

Ford dealerships of Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle, comprising the Oklahoma City District, are viewing the new cars at the Municipal Auditorium there.

C. I. Kenney, district sales manager, and C. J. Robinson, assistant, are scheduled to speak at the meeting, it was announced.

Shell Starts Work on Field Gas Pipeline

Installation is underway on an intra-field gas pipeline in the Elk City field according to E. R. Shorey, district production superintendent for Shell in that area.

The line will tie in with Consolidated Pipe Line Co.'s line to the Carpenter Booster station.

Contracts for installation were let recently with Shell furnishing the pipe and materials. The entire project for the gathering system within the field has been estimated by Shell officials to cost in the neighborhood of $350,000.

The gas gathering system, barring unexpected delays due to extreme weather, should be completed and in operation within the next 30 to 45 days.

Tech Opens New Oil Fraternity

LUBBOCK — Texas Technological college's department of petroleum engineering is seeking further recognition in oil circles with an application for a campus chapter of Pi Epsilon Tau, national honorary petroleum fraternity.

Prof. W. L. Ducker said the Tech application for a local chapter has been approved by Pres. D. M. Wiggins. The society is the only one in the United States which gives scholastic recognition to undergraduates who plan a career in petroleum technology.

Paul S. Johnston, assistant professor of petroleum engineering at Tech, is a charter member of the mother chapter at the University of Oklahoma. The other national chapter is located at the University of Tulsa.

Hutchinson Member Of College Quartet

CANYON — (Special) — Bill Hutchinson, graduate student from Pampa, now is appearing with the West Texas State College male quartet as first bass.

The ensemble has made several appearances and will go to Pampa Nov. 15 with Dr. James V. Corlette as participants in the monthly brotherhood meeting of the First Baptist Church.

Other performances, including several numbers at ASMAR musical show, are being planned.

Family Night at Club Postponed

The Family Night party at the Pampa County Club, originally scheduled for tonight, has been postponed.

Tom Rose, chairman of the arrangements committee, said that because of a conflict in dates with the Knife and Fork Club, the Family Night will be held Sunday, Nov. 13.

Rocket Research Office Transferred

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Army announced it will transfer its rocket research and development suboffice from Fort Bliss, Texas, to Huntsville, Ala.

The announcement Friday said the transfer will involve 500 military personnel, 100 German scientists and 65 civilian employees.

The Army estimated a saving of approximately $4,500,000 will be made by the transfer.

Temporary buildings are now being used at Fort Bliss.

The last Indian war in Idaho territory, the Shoshone war, ended about 70 years ago.

WARREN'S WARMUP

By Warren Hesse—News Sports Editor

QUESTION: Who was the first player to hit a home run as a pinch hitter in the World Series?

MR. KNOX KINARD, Pampa superintendent of schools, stopped by the office yesterday to express the gratitude of the school for the fine behavior on the part of the huge crowd at the Pampa-Amarillo football game last Saturday. Despite the mob of about 12,000 fans, there was no bad congestion and no troubles arose.

Mr. Kinard said that he would like to thank all of the fans, the students, all of the ushers, ticket takers and policemen for the fine cooperation shown. This was probably one of the finest handled crowds to enter Harvester Park, and much of the credit can go to Mr. Kinard and Mr. Frank Wilson for seeing that such was the case. One thing that was brought to my attention was that the students were run out of their regular seats and stuffed into the end zone. That would seem like a mistake. The game is a High School activity. It is presented by the High School. Yet the students were given what are normally considered the worst seats in the field.

The purpose was, of course, to make more suitable seats available to the adult public. But all season long there was plenty of room for the students on the east side; they should have been permitted to remain there for this game. They say "every dog has his day." This was the day for the Pampa students. The adults all had "their day" some other time, though maybe not at Pampa High. You notice when you go out of town to games, college or high school, that the students aren't stuffed in a corner, out of the way. It's their project; their program; their event; let them be seen.

The West Texas League fell in line with the rest of the Class C minor leagues Sunday when it advertised that the National Association of Organized Baseball change the interpretation of a veteran, or class ballplayer. At the present a man needs three years of organized baseball and he is a veteran. Only a limited number of veterans are allowed on clubs, though each year many new men fall into this classification. The turnover of limited service men to veterans and the number of veterans does not balance out, thus forcing many class men out of baseball. Most teams would much rather have as a veteran player some fellow who has played higher ball than C in preference to the fellow who has become a class man while never getting above C. That is the fellow who is being forced out of the game, but who will be given some protection and consideration under the proposed change.

What a silly business sports would be if football's two-platoon system turned out to be contagious. Baseball teams would have one squad that did nothing but hit, another squad that did nothing but field. A guy who was tabbed as "good field, no hit," previously overlooked by the major leagues, would become a top star on the defensive unit. Can't you picture two-platoon baseball? As soon as one team lost possession of the ball, out it would trot and the defensive unit would come in. The way possession switches around in basketball, two-platoon players would be worn out trotting on and off the court. Hockey would fit in nicely to the two-platoon system. Each team would have a unit of six goalies and a unit of six forwards. The game would be a good bit different under those rules, of course. First team to score a goal wins the Stanley Cup. The offensive golfer hits the ball while the defensive player shouts disconcerting remarks at the opponent. The two-platoon system should especially effect in horse racing. While the offensive player looks over the form sheets, listens to the tips, and places the bets, the defensive player is continually whispering into his ear: "Come on, Joe, it's time to go home."

Duck Hunters Finding Full Flocks of Birds This Year

By JIM BECKER
Newspapers Sports Writer
NEW YORK — (AP) — There are more ducks this season.

Reports received by Ducks Unlimited here bear out earlier predictions that sportsmen's favorite waterfowl this fall are more plentiful throughout the nation than for some years.

Most spectacular increases are in Minnesota and North Dakota. Hunters in those states had little difficulty bagging a limit on opening days. However, the ducks became more wary as the season wore on.

In the Atlantic flyway, hunters in New Brunswick and Maine found a large increase in black duck.

With the waterfowl season continuing in the last group of states until Jan. 7, and well into December in many more, hunters have been cheered by news that black weather already has arrived in northern breeding grounds.

Weather is an important factor in duck hunting since the birds have a tendency to remain north until cold weather takes over. The birds also move about more in cold weather, giving more hunters a shot at them. For the last two years the weather has been mild in the breeding grounds area until very late in the campaign, which may have kept the birds warm but also heated up hunters' dispositions.

This year, blue-winged teal, the first species to migrate normally, were reported as far south as Memphis in mid-September.

The guy who bangs away at every black speck in the sky (and on his glasses) is running a lot of duck hunting trips for himself and others. And he wastes a lot of ammunition besides.

All because he can't judge distances. "These fellows think a game bird is within shooting range as long as they can identify it as such," says Henry P. Davis, who really should be happy about such things since he works for Remington Arms which makes much of the ammunition.

"When they see the bird they blast away until the gun is empty. Some duck hunters get excited and can't wait but most of them just can't judge distances. Besides wasting excellent chances by this shooting at impossible ranges, these hunters ruin shots for more experienced and efficient hunters who know enough to hold their fire until the game is well within range."

In addition to the completely wasted chances, a large percentage of the cripples which occur each season are due to this "straining the gun," points out Davis.

"Often the shot that strikes these cripples is not from the edge of a shot pattern nor a stray shot, but is a pellet that has traveled so far that it is shocking and penetrating power necessary for a clean kill has been lost," says Davis.

Toughest shots on which to judge distance are those over open water or when birds are flying directly overhead. A courtesy code for duck hunters has been prepared by the Badger State Sportsmen's Club of La Crosse, Wis. Here it is:

1. Be under cover when the shooting starts so you won't scare the birds.
2. Avoid bright colors and solid black in clothing and equipment.
3. If you find someone in the blind you fussed with all week, don't go to war. Remember, the first guy there gets the blind.
4. Stay at least 100 yards from the nearest hunter to avoid those open-forum discussions over who shot what bird.
5. If another hunter stops one of your crumples for you, thank him and pay him back the shells he spent on your bird.

Experience Aids Southwest Grid

DALLAS — (AP) — Grade of football in the Southwest Conference is pretty high this season. Considering the field as a whole it probably is the best of all time.

There's a reason for so much strength over the league. A check of the rosters shows 30 or 40 players who have been on varsity squads for four years. It was brought about by the war, when freshmen were allowed to play on the varsity.

Rice, for instance, has seven fellows seeking their fourth varsity letters. Texas has six who have been on the varsity four seasons. So has Southern Methodist.

But the veteran of veterans is in basketball. Texas Christian has a fellow named Gene Schmidt who this winter will be seeking his fifth varsity letter. If he gets it he will be the first athlete in conference history to win five varsity numerals in one sport.

West Texas Says Deer Hunt Good

EL PASO — (AP) — Good thing is the word from far West Texas. During the first two days of the deer season, an estimated 150 have been killed.

Two locker plants here checked in 110 bucks. G. O. Walker of El Paso shot the largest buck reported, a 10-point blacktail weighing more than 300 pounds.

Darrell York, 16-year-old Yaleta High School student, was the first reported to get his limit. He killed an eight-point blacktail and a five-point whitetail.

The best results have been reported from the flats South of the Guadalupe Mountains. Sure I'll be back next year, but if we lost I would have been gone.

Cappy Stengel, manager of world champion New York Yankees.

Why Get Excited About Irish Streak? Dobie Was Unbeaten for Nine Seasons

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor
CHICAGO — (NEA) — Why get excited about Notre Dame's "modern" unbeaten streak which was to be stretched to 34 at Michigan State?

Gilmour Dobie was unbeaten at Washington for nine years and in 61 games at Washington — 1908 through '16.

Football might have been on the primitive side when Michigan rang up a point-a-minute to be unbeaten in 56 engagements and into the final game of a fifth consecutive campaign — 1901-05.

But if Gloomy Gil — Dobie — Washington isn't "modern" enough, how a California Wonder Teams keeping the slate clean for 56 games—1920-25?

Don't tell us old-timers that the Golden Bears played antiquated football in those days. They're still debating the length of Brick Muller's pass against Ohio State in the Pasadena Rose Bowl, Jan. 1, 1921.

College football players are scouted more carefully than professional baseball prospects, and Harold Hill is the newest schoolboy phenomenon.

And why not? Sandy Hill of Class A Circleville, Ohio, High in seven starts tallied 212 points, gained 160 yards to be the leading scholastic scorer in Ohio, perhaps the nation. He has registered 33 touchdowns this fall.

The youngster carried only 10 times when Circleville romped to a 67-4 victory over Greenfield McClain, yet he gained 285 yards, scored five touchdowns. He passed for a sixth, kicked five extra points.

He is equally valuable as a passer, blocker and punter. Hill, an 18-year-old weighing 168 and ready for college next fall, paced the Roundtowners to the 16 straight, including a perfect nine-game season last autumn.

Circleville is a south-central Ohio community, situated about 40 miles from Columbus. It is advertised as the pumpkin capital of the world.

One thing is for sure. Sandy Hill is some pumpkin with that pumpkin under his arm. They're calling John Karas another Red Grange, and not without justification. . . . The Illinois sophomore promises to break the Big Ten rushing record set at 689 by Ohio State's Les Horvath in 1944. . . . Jim Tatum calls Ray Krouse of Maryland the best tackle he has ever coached, and Uncle Jim has been around . . . Explaining the rout by Tennessee, Carl Snively says injuries forced North Carolina to take many chances, and all of them backfired. . . . Maintaining Columbus' reputation as a football hot-bed, Ohio State will break its attendance record again this season. . . . Sophomores Donal Leamy quarterback Marquette. The youngster either is no relation to Frank, or not up to best tackle he has ever coached, Notre Dame standards.

Med Student Chollet, Cornell All-Time Grid and Court Great, Is Hero of Young Polio Victims

By JIM O'LEARY
NEA Staff Correspondent
ITHACA, N. Y. — (NEA) — Hillary Chollet is a players' player, at his best when the going is roughest.

The six-foot 185-pound half-back has not only established himself as one of Cornell's greatest all-time athletes by starring four seasons in football and basketball, but has proved to be one of the more popular lettermen.

As a pre-medical student, Chollet, a quiet, unassuming 23-year-old, has maintained a high average despite time-consuming athletic activities. He enters Cornell Medical College in September.

An orderly at the Reconstruction Home in downtown Ithaca the past two summers, Chollet is a hero in the eyes of young polio victims with whom he keeps in daily contact. He has a genuine fondness for children, especially the less fortunate. As a morale builder alone, he is of unlimited value to the youngsters.

In football, Chollet, classified as a power runner, is particularly outstanding as a safety man. He runs back punts spectacularly, has been labeled a one-man pass defense.

Princeton kept the Ivy League champions tied up pretty well before being shaded, 14-12, but one play they couldn't check was a Lynn Dorset short pass to Flanker Chollet, which set up the winning touchdown, got the Big Red moving again when stalled and in danger in the fourth period.

Basketball player Chollet is no mean hand at snagging passes, led the squad last year, with eight completed for 106 yards though playing in only six games due to an injury in the Army contest.

Holder of the all-time Cornell single-game record of 37 points, Hillary highlighted his basketball career opposing his brother Leroy of Canisius. At Holy Cross High in New Orleans, the two, plus a third brother, Al, played together on one of the most outstanding scholastic teams ever seen in Louisiana.

Captain Leroy of Canisius rubbed it in in the first meeting in Buffalo last winter, with Cornell on the short end of the score. But the teams met again in Ithaca, and this time it was Captain Hillary of Cornell who scored 19 points to lead the Big Red to an 18-point upset.

Disabled Vets Have Good Pheasant Hunt Season

MINNEAPOLIS — (AP) — Pheasant hunting in Minnesota this year was exceptionally good for disabled war veterans.

They "bagged" and "downed" 2,800 of the toothsome birds. The occasion was the annual pheasant feast engineered by Ed Shave, outdoor writer for the Minneapolis Morning Tribune with the help of Minnesota sportsmen, business houses, truckers and veterans organizations.

Hundreds of hunters from small communities throughout the pheasant country shared their game bags with the vets during the first few days of the season. The birds were trucked or flown from depots to Minneapolis where butchers for a chain store processed the birds.

Regular cooks at several veterans institutions prepared the pheasants to serve them with wild rice, cranberry sauce and a host of trimmings topped off by pumpkin pie and whipped cream. Seconds were in order. Helping pick the bones clean were veterans of three wars—Spanish-American, and World Wars I and II.

When the pheasant season was closed, Shave rounded up ducks. This year's bag of 2,500 pheasants was an all-time high. A league is about three million.

Well Filled House Receives
Columbia Trio With Enthusiasm

Pampa's music lovers gathered at the Junior High School at 8:30 last night to hear the first in a series of programs to be presented here this season by the Pampa Community Concert Association.

Opening the series of cultural programs was the Columbia Concert Trio, with Richard Gregor, pianist, Ariana Bronne, violinist, and Marcia Barbour, cellist, as the artists. In addition to the trio numbers each artist presented solo numbers.

The musicians performed smoothly and brilliantly at all times, rising to a musical apex with the exhilarating "Ritual Fire Dance" by Manuel de Falla.

All three of the young performers were called back for encore numbers. Miss Bronne, violinist, deviated slightly from the vein of the program by playing George Gershwin's popular "It Ain't Necessarily So."

Other numbers presented were "Paganella" by George Frederic Handel-Halvorsen; "Sonata in G minor, Op. 22 by Robert Schumann" played by Mr. Gregor; "Allegro" by Joseph Hector Plocco; "Nocturne, C-sharp minor," by Chopin-Milstein; and "Carmen" Fantasy by Sarasate Zimbalist, played by Miss Bronne and Mr. Gregor; "Trio in B-flat major" by Schubert, played by the trio.

After intermission the program continued with "Allegro" by Giovanni Battista Sammartini; "Slavonic Fantasy" by Antonin Dvorak-Kreisler; "The Little Shepherd" by Debussy; "Ritual Fire Dance" by Manuel de Falla, played by Miss Barbour, cellist, and Mr. Gregor; and "Fantasy on Three American Songs" by Robert Strassburg, played by the trio.

A well filled house received the musical program with enthusiasm.

Recently I spent an evening at the Cavendish Club in New York, where the greatest card players in the country assemble. After chatting with some of the players I gathered together enough hands for this week's articles. The first hand I heard discussed was a natural one for the lesson hand in the play which I am giving you today. Only 400 often, defensive players make the mistake of trying to stop the declarer from ruffing when forcing a ruff might be the only way to defeat the contract. In today's hand you can see that the declarer had a losing club and two losing diamonds. If he attempts to ruff his three losing spades that will establish a heart trick for the opponents.

It is easy for the declarer to read this situation. However, it is a little more difficult for the opponents, but West should reason as follows: "We are vulnerable and my partner has taken three to three spades. I do not think he can do this on just four trumps." Therefore, West, when he cashes the king of clubs and the nine spot drops from the South hand, he can only hope that his partner has the ace of diamonds. As there is a possibility of the dealer trying to set up the diamond suit in dummy, West should try to kill the entries in dummy.

When I saw this hand played West won the opening lead with the king of clubs. He then led the five of spades. East put on the queen and South won with the ace. South did not make the mistake of ruffing a spade. He led the deuce of diamonds which West won with the king. Now West made the mistake of leading a trump. The declarer won it with the queen and returned a small diamond which East won with the ace. He now was helpless.

The correct line of play is for West not to lead a heart when he wins the first diamond trick, but to return the jack of clubs. This forces the declarer to ruff in dummy with the deuce of hearts. Now, when East wins the next diamond trick with the ace, he can return another spade and it is impossible for declarer to make his contract.

The Plight of French Cabinets

FRANCE, which went over to a government from Oct. 6 to 27, finally has a new premier and cabinet. Georges Bidault, a Popular Republican and a former foreign minister, succeeded where two other leaders failed. Americans can be excused for being a bit baffled by the spectacle of an important European nation going through three cabinets in this critical age. It is apparent the French even now might lack working leadership, were it not for fears that their country would go unrepresented at international conferences starting this week. When Bidault at last managed to form a government, it was not because he offered anything unique in his program. His policy declaration differed little from that of Jules Moch, Socialist, Rene Mayer, Radical, the two who earlier tried unsuccessfully to put together acceptable cabinets. Bidault seems to have won approval from the French Chamber of Deputies because he juggled cabinet possibilities more shrewdly. He wound up with a coalition group representing seven separate French parties. Included were both Moch and Mayer and two former premiers, Henri Queuille and Robert Schuman. DURING the days without a leader, many French politicians and observers blamed the difficulty on the fact that France has not had a general election in some time. They argued that the chamber is out of touch with the people, that a new political alignment is needed to assure more stable government. Others felt, however, that an election at this moment might give too much strength to the more extreme parties such as the Communists and Gen. Charles de Gaulle's rightist followers. France's best hope, it was said, lay in maintaining the present dominant power of the more moderate parties. This view prevailed. It now appears unlikely there will be an election before 1951, the next date when one must be held in accordance with French law. To the outsider watching France's troubles, the problem looks deeper than just the holding of an election on this or that date. It appears to stem from the nature of French political organization. Unlike the United States, Britain, Australia and other English-speaking nations, France has a great number of parties. Many are the merest splinters, offshoots from bigger groups. They represent all shades of opinion. THIS SETUP gets away from the big complaint about America's major parties — that they are catchalls which try to be all things to all men. But as they have worked out in French history, these numerous parties are seldom if ever strong enough to command control of the Chamber of Deputies. As a result a government can be achieved only through a coalition of forces. Inevitably, these coalitions are unstable. They fall apart easily. The recent Queuille cabinet, which lasted a year, was virtually a record. A few months is the normal life of a French government, and often the end comes in a matter of weeks.

Washington.....by Dong Larsen

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Almost for the first time since the war this town resembles a normal community, what with Congress out of town and everything relatively peaceful. It seems like a good time to make a report on the status of the city for the benefit of the millions who passed through here in the process of winning the war, and who haven't been back since. You wouldn't recognize it as the same place. Start with Union Station, which you probably saw first unless you arrived by plane or hitch-hiked. Except for special holidays it was practically deserted. They've thrown away the heavy maroon cord that used to keep crowds out of the dining room and coffee shop. Almost nobody goes in the station bar. No MPs around. No Shore Patrol. No line for a show-bus. Only two show-bus boys. No fight for a taxi. Taxis. There's the big change. They're looking for customers instead of avoiding them. No seas all the way to your destination. No flat demand for a tip. Occasionally a thank you. Correct change. You can even ask the driver not to pick up extra fares along the way if you're in a hurry. CAN EVEN RENT A PLACE buildings would knock your eyes out. You wouldn't believe the number of

Turks Look to West for Agricultural Improvement

By JOHN FISHER
McClure Syndicate
The problem of Turkish security is giving Washington much concern in view of the tense situation between Yugoslavia and her neighbors, Albania, Bulgaria and Romania, egged on by Russia. Should fighting break out, the strength of the bastions which we have been building in Turkey and Greece will be severely tested. Turkey is our farthest Eastern outpost. Ankara has no illusions about Russia. Its alert police are frequently nipping plots among subversive elements to stir up the Eastern Armenians and Kurds. Stalin maintains a special bureau in Baku in the Caucasus to keep revolt alive among the wild Kurdish tribes. American military aid funds are well spent and Congress has just appropriated more. The Turks have modern equipment, to a large extent supplied by the United States. The 367-mile border with the Soviet Union. Russian troops, unlike in Northern Iran, are rarely able to creep through and kidnap soldiers. If they try they are likely to be shot. But to seal the order and maintain one of the largest standing armies in Europe take nearly 50 percent of the national budget. TURKS FLEE The Black Sea and the Bulgarian frontier are escape routes for refugees from the Iron Curtain. Many Turks of families settled for centuries in Bulgaria and Romania are coming home, telling stories about the Red terror from which they fled. In Ankara has a deep-seated suspicion of Russian motives. For years Moscow has turned covetous eyes toward the Dardanelles as a means of access to the Mediterranean. The Kremlin is even more eager to acquire the Strait of Bosphorus than was the czar because a great world power needs sea outlets for its submarines. The Turks primarily hate communism because it is atheistic. Mustafa Kemal Ataturk abolished the Khalifate, the state church which joined itself to the corrupt despotism of the sultan and made every government of social reform the equivalent of heresy. But modern Turkey, though maintaining separation of church and state, are devout Moslems and as such abhor the godless ideology of Russia. Moreover, a religious principle is that one's word must be as good as his. The Communists are constant liars. ENJOY NEW FREEDOM The Turkish democracy, liberated from the tyranny of the sultans, has no desire to take on a new Red yoke. Anti-communism is the chief concern of the Turkish people. Her danger comes not only from the Soviet Union but also from Bulgaria and Romania, whose radios constantly try to foment revolt. In the event of Stalin's death, these foes, now held in check by Stalin, might use their newfound freedom to try to seize Turkish territory. Turkey's ideal is tough, resilient Kemal. Armistice Day, Nov. 11, is also the anniversary of his death. Each Turk will pause five minutes in prayer and comment on the death of the national hero. Turkey will face the Communist menace, singing the national anthem to the Crescent flag. "Frown not, O Crescent benign, My life I give that you may shine."

Common Ground

By E. C. BOYLES
"Let's Teach Communism" — I am quoting further today from "Let's Teach Communism," which appeared in the September issue of Analysis: "...his brings us to the communist inherent power of capital to fix the level of wages will be used by its owners to defraud the laborer. They will see to it that the laborer receive just enough to keep them alive and on the job, retaining the surplus value for themselves. Here communism introduces the doctrine of natural rights, although it denies that doctrine vehemently later on; it says that the laborer has an absolute right in all that is produced by virtue of the energy put into production; energy is a private possession. If this is so, then what the capitalist does for himself amounts to robbery of the worker. Everything that is produced should be shared by the community as a whole (which, by the way, is a flat denial of the original right of the laborer to own the product), and the State, acting for the community, must be made sole owner and operator of all capital. The State, particularly when manned by communists, will have no interest in production and will pay wages in full.

FARMERS GET U S AID

To keep the peasant anti-Communist Economic Cooperation Administration has placed reorganization and development of agriculture production as the top goal of American economic aid to Ankara. "You have unlimited agricultural resources: Eric Johnston, the former head of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and recently in Ankara as an ECA consultant, told Turkish correspondents. "But output can easily be increased 80 percent." Turkey's farm belt has a climate like California. In Anatolia the soil is as rich as in our Middle West. But farmers lack tools. They are slow to adopt modern techniques and are handicapped by poor seed and inferior farm animals. In some areas half the crops spoiled this year for want of proper packaging and transportation. Washington has just announced that we will send teams of experts to give practical advice on vegetable culture, plant nutrition, soil conservation, irrigation, poultry and bee-keeping, cattle breeding and other modern agricultural methods. Turkish exchange technicians will come here in January to study our methods. IMPORTANT TO OIL Turkey raises wheat for home consumption. Our scientists found that the Anatolian plain is ideal for growing wheat in sufficient quantities for export to neighbors. We are setting up service stations and mobile repair units to teach peasants how to operate and repair them. Turkey exports tobacco, figs, raisins, filberts, walnuts and other crops. With machinery, fertilizers and skills, she can do even better. A strong Turkey will be a powerful arrow aimed not only at the Russian Caucasian oilwells and refineries but also at the Ploesti fields in Romania. Her danger comes not only from the Soviet Union but also from Bulgaria and Romania, whose radios constantly try to foment revolt. In the event of Stalin's death, these foes, now held in check by Stalin, might use their newfound freedom to try to seize Turkish territory. Turkey's ideal is tough, resilient Kemal. Armistice Day, Nov. 11, is also the anniversary of his death. Each Turk will pause five minutes in prayer and comment on the death of the national hero. Turkey will face the Communist menace, singing the national anthem to the Crescent flag. "Frown not, O Crescent benign, My life I give that you may shine."

QUICKIES

By Ken Reynolds
Brooklyn baseball game, says that what is needed is more music to soothe the savage diplomatic breasts. He thinks Americans ought to ship musical instruments and records to foreign countries to promote the cause of peace. War, I don't know if it will do to promote peace among foreign people, but if we shipped all our instruments abroad I know it would promote a lot of peace in my own neighborhood. And I'll bet a shipment of 100,000 assorted banjos and ukuleles to Marshal Tito would certainly drive the Russians away from the Yugoslav border quicker than a load of machine guns and bullets... but if the Russians should retaliate with the Volga Boat Song — ugh!

Success Secrets

By ELMER WHEELER
You don't have to be a genius to have million dollar ideas. Nor is it any sign your idea is no good just because other people think so or because it doesn't immediately pay off. Take the story of Coca Cola, for example. J. S. Pemberton, an Atlanta pharmacist, invented Coca Cola in 1886. During the first year a total of 25 gallons of the new drink was sold. Pemberton himself didn't have too much confidence in his product. In 1888 he sold a two-thirds interest in the business for $283.20. When Pemberton died in 1889, Asa G. Candler was one of the several persons who owned an interest in the drink. One man who owned an interest in the company quit cold because of an argument over a $2.08 drayage bill. Now the moral I want to emphasize is that what we call million dollar ideas and didn't know it. They had a fine product. But that wasn't enough. Even the best products have to be SOLD. Candler acquired full title in 1892. He began advertising and selling his product. By 1898 the company grossed $500,000. By 1902 $1,000,000. When Candler died he left and sold the company in 1915, it brought a neat $25,000,000. Why not learn a lesson from this five-cent drink? You too, regardless of who you are, can have a "million dollar" product. You've got something nobody else has. You can do a job nobody else can. You've got stuff in you you never dream of. But having it isn't enough. You've got to bring it out, advertise it, and sell it. Learn to sell your own abilities, your ideas, your personality.

A Shiny Dome Can't Hold Up The Building

National Whirligig

By RAY TUCKER
ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. — Although Southern Democrats will not align themselves with the Republicans in national political contests or even threaten their party's supremacy with an independent movement of the abortive Thurmond-Wright variety, they have now evolved a definite strategy for thwarting those portions of the Truman program which threaten to upset Dixie's social and economic system. Always assured of a comparatively conservative Senate representation of twenty or twenty-five members, the Southerners will rely on a loose but lively combination with at least that many Republicans, possibly more, to prevent the passage of any administration measures which they consider obnoxious. Nor will this alliance dedicate itself simply to defeat of so-called civil rights legislation. As heavily burdened by taxes as the rest of the nation, such leaders as George of Georgia, Holland of Florida, Byrd of Virginia and McKellar of Tennessee will lead the fight at the next session for a reduction of rates rather than the red reports suggest that the Truman has mentioned, albeit rather timidly. CREDIT — Former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes of South Carolina is given credit for suggesting this technique of loyal opposition. In announcing that he might run for governor, he made clear that he had no idea of sponsoring or planting the seed for a Thurmond-Wright revolt. His aim is to build a local backfire against an extension of federal power that strikes, not merely at the states' handling of their own social and economic difficulties, but at their authority as constitutionally independent commonwealths. If he would phrase it, he does not want the states to be "Balkan satellites of the federal government." And from his experience as one of the ablest Capitol Hill legislators in modern times, he knows that Congress can always throw a Notre Dame block against even a heavyweight president, and he does not believe that Mr. Truman belongs in that category. STATURE — The unrecognized fact is that the new, industrialized South has attained such stature that it no longer feels itself dependent upon the national Democratic Party or on a chief executive of that political faith. During World Wars I and II, when Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt, respectively, sat in the White House, Dixie grew to such maturity that it lost its historic, political and regional inferiority complex, as well as its sentimental attachment to questionable descendants of Thomas Jefferson at Washington. It may explain why Mr. Boyle, in his exuberant but confidential moments, says he intends to "build the kind of Democratic Party that can elect presidents without a single Southern, electoral vote." What he is building, however, in view of the Byrnes-Byrd strategy, is a complete stalemate between the White House and Congress, as demonstrated by the records of both the 80th and 81st sessions of Congress, when a Dixie-GOP coalition blocked every major Fair Deal proposal, and seriously modified those which became law. PRO-NAVY — Incidentally, in view of the Denfeld row, Mr. Truman may be interested to learn that Southern Democrats are extremely pro-Navy, traditionally and practically. The South has numerous large and small navy yards and stations, including those at Norfolk, Va., and Charleston, S. C., and the Marine base and training ground at Quantico, Va. It derives tremendous revenue and commerce and employment from the sale of "ship stores" to the fleet. It is no accident that five of the seven Democrats on the

Those First Long Pants

By GORDON MARTIN
When you're turning back the pages to compare your youthful days with the present generation and your ultra-modern ways, and you look at little Junior who is scarcely more than four, yet the kid is wearing trousers that are hanging to the floor; why, it's then you will remember that historic high school dance, when you shed your old knee britches and you first pulled on long pants. Then you said good-bye forever to the knickers "round your knees, which could often cause a fellow to feel mighty ill at ease. You got rid of long black stockings, often needing much repair, and which made your legs look frightful when britches liked to sag, and no longer did you worry 'cause your Mom to chew the rag. Then you sallied forth to glory, like a regular grown up chap, and not even girlish giggles proved to be a handicap. But no longer do the "longies" thrill our awkward growing boys, for they get 'em just about the time they yearn to play with toys. And it's sad enough to realize they'll never have the chance, to take off those knickerbockers and pull on their first long pants.

The Doctor Says

By Edwin P. Jordan, MD

Every so often it is necessary to repeat the warning that acute appendicitis is a serious disease and that there are still too many deaths resulting from it each year. Although modern, prompt treatment — usually by surgery — has greatly reduced the danger from appendicitis, the taking of cathartics or failing to bring a diagnosis early enough can bring serious results. The pain accompanying appendicitis is often not as severe as people expect it to be. This is particularly true in older people. The result is that people often ignore it for several days and by that time the appendix may have ruptured and caused peritonitis. Occasionally the appendix, instead of lying near the front of the abdomen on the right side, may be twisted towards the back so that the pain is felt on the left side. The appendix can lie in some other part of the abdomen and it is not safe, therefore, to think that pain which is on the lower right side is the only kind which can mean appendicitis. The use of cathartics or laxatives is dangerous. A laxative causes the wave-like motions of the intestines to increase. Large waves hasten the rupture of an acutely inflamed appendix. When this happens peritonitis develops — a very serious complication indeed. Laxatives should be avoided if there is the slightest suspicion of appendicitis. No chances should be taken with this important disease. In recent years penicillin has often been given before operation and afterwards and this seems to make the recovery somewhat easier. Recovery if operation is done promptly is almost certain. THE DOCTOR ANSWERS Question: What are the chief characteristics of a person addicted to the use of "dope"? Answer: I presume this question means narcotics of the opium family. The symptoms at first may be unobservable. Later, loss of weight and appetite, excessive sleepiness of the skin, nervousness, listlessness and other symptoms can develop.

Montgomery Clift

Montgomery Clift went to "The Heiress" premier in an $8.80 rented tuxedo and a rented car. He missed dinner so he munched on a hamburger enroute to pick up his date, Elizabeth Taylor. On the way to her home he confided to his driver that he had never before attended a Hollywood premiere and asked for advice on what would happen. The driver said it was simple: "They'll take care of you. Just tell them you're Cliff Montgomery."

The Nation's Press

ON THE ROAD TO WHAT? (The New Orleans Times-Picayune) Long after it became clear apparent that federal income had slipped and that anticipated revenues were already allotted, Congress continued to vote the federal government further into the red. Reports suggest that the deficit for the current fiscal year will amount to $5,000,000,000 & up. Military defense, veterans' benefits and military and economic aid to Europe take the biggest shares in the budget. But our government agencies — the Commodity Credit Corporation, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, veterans administration, and the post office department — are running more than $2,500,000,000 over the amount Congress said they could spend. Rather than censor these departments, Congress has just voted that federal income tax other civil service workers, and the armed forces pay increases amounting to an extra $723,000,000 annually. This amount is considerably more than the federal government spent for all purposes back in 1915. Few people will deny the necessity for adequate military defense. But at the same time few observers of the armed services' operations will deny that immense savings could be made without hampering defense activities in the least. In the face of the impending heavy deficit we cannot understand how any government official, including President Truman, can dare talk about greater expenditures for nonessential services of government at this time. In a study just published by the National City Bank, analysis of British taxes reveals that for the two years 1947 and 1948 the socialist state took 29 per cent of the national income. Even the United States was not far behind — with approximately 24 per cent of the national income being taken and spent by federal and local governments. This current fiscal year, with red ink on the books of the federal government as well as many state governments already, the tax take undoubtedly will be even larger in the United States. Already the President stressing the need for more money for government spending says he knows no way of obtaining it save by additional taxes.

FARM NEWS

Farm Cash Income Up

AUSTIN — (AP) — Cash income of Texas farmers increased 48 percent in September over August, and 10 percent over September of 1948.

The Bureau of Business Research reported total cash income was $235,107,000 for the month. The bureau also reported September cotton consumption at 12,288 bales, up five percent from August but down 18 percent in comparison with September of a year ago.

Livestock shipments were up 17 percent in September over August, but down 24 percent compared with September, 1948. Cotton was the greatest source of income, bringing farmers $183,980,000 in September. Income from cotton consumption totaled $22,855,000; and cattle, $18,991,000.

After adjustment for seasonal variation, the bureau's index of farm cash income rose to 677 percent of the 1935-39 base period in September from 672 in August and 569 in September 1948.

August - to - September declines were registered in the lower Rio Grande Valley, 95 percent; northern high plains, 41 percent; South Texas plains, 35 percent; and Southern Texas prairies, 25 percent.

Farming Aircraft Uses Increase

NEW YORK — The use of aircraft for agricultural purposes such as spraying, dusting, seeding and fertilizing has shown an increase of 3,000 in one year, according to Aviation Week.

This year approximately 8,000 aircraft are being used by commercial operators as compared with 5,000 in 1948, CAA estimates. A survey soon to be started in CAA regions is expected to provide more complete information concerning the number of operators and their planes by the end of this year.

Equipment used includes both high-powered aircraft — usually converted war surplus — training planes — and light planes.

Cattle Disease Outbreak Caught

MEXICO CITY — (AP) — Another small outbreak of cattle hoof and mouth disease in a quarantined area has been eliminated.

The joint Mexico-U.S. commission said 25 diseased or exposed cattle and 12 hogs were destroyed. Re-vaccination of the entire exposed area began.

The outbreak occurred on a farm at Tierra Blanca, about 50 miles south of Cordoba.

Commission officials said occasional outbreaks are expected. They do not indicate failure of the hoof and mouth vaccine. Like other serums it is effective in a high percentage of cases, but not in all.

The most serious outbreak, the commission said, was Oct. 17 near here. The disease was diagnosed as "Virus O" again at which the present vaccine does not protect.

Many years ago she moved to Laredo. Three sons, two daughters, 34 grandchildren and 70 great-grandchildren survive.

Soil Erosion Halted on Kite Farm

N. M. Kite has halted erosion damage on a steep 20-acre portion of his farm three miles northwest of Pampa, officials of the Gray County Soil Conservation District said.

He has an excellent stand of crested wheat grass that was planted Sept. 21.

This land was formerly used for wheat production but it was so steep that it was difficult to prevent water erosion. Kite planted the grass to prevent further erosion and to provide winter and spring grazing for his livestock.

Louis Behrens a neighbor of Kite's, also planted some crested wheat grass to prevent further erosion on some sloping land, and to provide a grassed outlet for some diversion terraces.

The grass was planted with the grass drill owned by the Gray County Soil Conservation District, and the work was done by these men as a part of an overall soil conservation program for both farms.

Their plans include construction of diversions and regular terraces on sloping land, planting grass on land which cannot be profitably kept in production, and the use of stubble and other crop residues in preventing wind erosion and keeping up productivity of the soil.

Farther north, Lee Smith has applied for assistance in carrying out a conservation plan on the old Hogan place near the Red Schoolhouse, the Roberts County Wind Erosion District announced.

The steps to be taken include a soil survey to map the different kinds of soil, and their depth and texture. A range survey showing the condition of the range will be made and a list of things to be done first will start Smith off on a long range conservation plan to stabilize his land and prevent erosion.

When making a complete conservation plan on a farm or ranch there is usually some cultivated land that needs terracing. But before terraces are constructed provision must be made

CHRISTMAS TRIMMING — Uncle Holly, character introduced by British to brighten this year's holiday season, presents gift to Roberta Flood in London store. Girl Scouters Get Instruction

Sixty-three Scouters of the Pampa Girl Scout Association participated in a two-hour music session yesterday. It was instructed by Miss Janet Tobitt, National Girl Scout music consultant.

Miss Tobitt explained various methods the leaders could use in training Scouts. Following her instruction she displayed several of the books she has written.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Frank Hogsett has announced a Scouters craft workshop. Girl Scout leaders, assistants and committee women will be given an opportunity for more instruction a week from Thursday. The workshop will be held at 9:30 at the Scout House.

Personnel will include: Perry O. Geut, woodcarving and soap-carving; Mrs. James A. McCune, basketry and raffia; Mrs. Burt Lewler, leather tooling; Mrs. Harold Osborne, textile painting; and Mrs. R. H. Nenniel, weaving.

70 MINERS DEAD — BERLIN — (AP) — A Western Zone newspaper reported Sunday that 70 East German miners died when the powder supply of a Soviet Zone uranium mine blew up. The mine, according to the newspaper Sozial Democrat, was near Zwickau, 60 miles southwest of Dresden in the Erz Mountains.

4-A Advertising Girl Is Weekend 4-H Milkmaid

NEW YORK — (EPA) — Shirley Everitt, a pretty maid with a career in the advertising business, was running for the 4-H one Friday afternoon.

"I'm going milking, sir," she said.

Those words no longer startle Miss Everitt's business friends. Five days a week she is an account executive for what is known in advertising circles as a 4-A agency. The other two days she's a farmer, a grown-up 4-H girl.

Raising prize cattle has been her hobby since Miss Everitt was 16, and she's still at it, from Friday night through Sunday, at her father's farm near Flemington, N. J., where she was born.

She owns four thoroughbred Ayrshires, a bull calf and three heifers, all of which came home with ribbons at a recent county fair, the bull taking first prize.

After riding herd on her advertising account all week, Miss Everitt gets up at 5:30 a.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

"I help with the milking of the 85 Ayrshire cows my father owns," she says. "This is nothing new to me. Then I turn my attention to my own herd. I brush them, wash them with soap and water, sandpaper their horns, and train them. You have to train them to show."

When she was 10, she entered a heifer, her father had given her in a 4-H show. It took the first of 35 ribbons and "lots of championships," Miss Everitt has won.

As a business girl, her father now comes under Miss Everitt's executive thumb — weekdays, anyway. He has to keep track of her prize cattle while the milkmaid works in the big city.

117-Year-Old Woman Buried

LAREDO — (AP) — A woman said to be 117 years old was buried here Saturday.

She was Mrs. Encarnacion Refugio de Garcia who died in her home Thursday.

A baptismal certificate found in her belongings stated she was born in Zapata County, March 28, 1832.

She was married there and later moved to Webb County where she lived for 84 years.

Three-Year Stock Feed Test Ends

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech's three-year project in steer feeding research on irrigated pasture land has ended following the final feeding period, Dean W. L. Stangel has announced.

Launched in 1947, the experiment was designed to establish the value of alfalfa and alfalfa mixtures as safe pasturage for cattle. The steers have been grazed on alfalfa and combinations of alfalfa and bromo or perennial rye grass.

The final phase began May 2 with nine steers placed on varied feeding schedules. The steers had an average weight of 678 pounds when feeding began; weighed 891 pounds when the experiment ended. The average gain was 218 pounds.

"These steers carry sufficient finish to yield good carcasses, but we are not selling them," Stangel explained. "We have placed them in a dry lot fattening pen and will feed them a ration of milo chop, cottonseed meal, alfalfa hay and sorghum silage."

The steers were exhibited at the South Plains Junior Fat Stock show in Lubbock last March and will be shown there again next March.

"We will have all feeding data available at the show next March — people can see what results our experiment has produced, and the steers also will have sufficient finish to yield choice carcasses when slaughtered," he said.

"At this stage, we believe our research has proved alfalfa feeding to be profitable," he said. The per acre production for the different pastures will be available and released at a later date, Dean Stangel added.

Tractor May Join Mule on Sideline

DALLAS — (AP) — The tractor may join the mule on the sidelines as farming becomes more progressive.

Gibb Gilchrist, chancellor of the Texas A&M college system, said yesterday that farmers may soon be using airplanes instead of tractors to plant their crops.

He said A&M is experimenting with designs for an agricultural airplane.

It is working toward a light plane that will be used particularly for dusting and seeding.

The CAMEO

By Virginia Teale

Copyright, 1949, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Martin Falter, one of the residents of the Dolores, N. M., art colony, appears at the Three Wishes Gift Shop, operated by Hagar Blair, with a carnelian cameo. Hagar, a collector of cameos, knows it is rare and valuable. As she examines it, they reveal a man, Stephen Smith, appears. At the sight of the cameo, she drops a vase. Hagar continues her examination of the cameo.

"YOUR common sense should tell you that any collector worth his salt would recognize a piece like this one. The only thing I don't know about it is how you happen to have it."

"Suspicion is unbecoming even to attractive women, my dear Hagar!" He bowed as she jerked indignantly. "I'll say once again that I came by it honestly. And now, the main point: I have it and you want it. I happen to know that you have sufficient means to meet my price, provided your well-known — ah — prudence in money matters doesn't overcome your collector's mania."

Hagar stood tense, her eyes gleaming. One fist was pressed tightly up under her nose, the pressure warping her angular face into gargoyle outlines. Falter ceremoniously returned the cameo to its box and offered it to Hagar. She shook her head: "Hah. The old brush salesman trick. Tell me first how much?"

"I suppose I should ask $15,000. But, to you only, I'll say $12,000. She stamped her feet: "You know darned well I can't afford any such price!"

He raised his eyebrows: "For what is probably the rarest cameo on the market? For the piece that would make your collection almost priceless? For the finest carnelian carving ever to come out of Italy?"

"Since when did you become an authority on cameos?"

Falter blew a plume of smoke toward the ceiling: "One learns what one may find profitable. I could tell you even more about this pin. About how it figured in Napoleon's war with Russia, how it was used as a pawn for freedom by a Russian archduke. And about how, finally, it got back into the hands of the collector you are most interested in. For the finest carnelian carving ever to come out of Italy?"

"You've boned up well, Falter. But, since I'm positive you didn't give the bread to the duchess, I still question where you got hold of the pin. I haven't got $12,000, or even $10,000 to buy it. She brushed her palms together with brisk finality. "You can take the pin and go up the street and sell it for $12,000! I've got an inventory to finish."

Falter shrugged, looked at the silver box regretfully and slipped it into his pocket:

"It seems I overestimated your good taste, Hagar, and underestimated your parsimony. Well, perhaps someday you may be able to feast your eyes on this cameo again—through the glass of some other collector's case."

As he sauntered toward the door, Stephanie dashed forward and pulled at his sleeve:

"No! Wait!"

Stephanie's face was turned up to his pleadingly. Her right hand fugged imploringly at his left elbow as she spoke:

"Come back tomorrow, Mr. Falter, will you? Come back tomorrow and bring the pin. Will you, please?"

He patted her shoulder. "I may stop in again—if I'm in the neighborhood."

He went out, closed the door quietly and walked away from the shop without a backward glance at the two staring women.

Hagar confronted Stephanie: "And what, may I ask, was the meaning of all that?"

The girl gave her a long, unwavering look, and Hagar drew back, startled, at the surface fire in the blue eyes.

"Hagar, Hagar, you must buy the cameo locket. You must!" Hagar laughed nervously. "At that price? What's come over you, girl? I can't afford the thing, and that's final."

Halfway to the back room, she stopped and pivoted slowly to face Stephanie:

"Why did you call it a locket? It's a pin. A brooch."

Stephanie was staring into space, she shook her head: "No. It's a locket. And you must buy it, Hagar. No matter what it costs, we must get it away from Martin Falter."

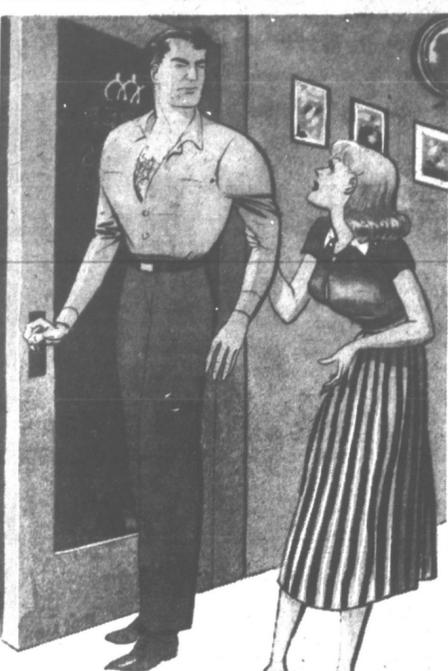

MARTIN FALTER made his way down the town's main thoroughfare. He passed a small building whose facade consisted of a blue door and a wide window in which a ceramic urn was displayed on a drape of tapestry—this was the studio of Nell and Tom O'Neill, art potters and people-about-town.

Somewhere behind it, probably, were the buxom and impulsive Nell, and her husband, Tom, whose alternate preoccupation with his clay and his bottle left Nell feeling neglected and receptive to sympathy and attention from a discreet and personable friend.

A sign farther up the street was Martin's goal today and he hurried toward it. He glanced up at the narrow platform jutting out over the top of the doorway—on the platform rested a weathered spinning wheel. He rattled the knocker impatiently.

Quick footsteps sounded on the bare floor inside. A small Judas window in the top section of the door was opened cautiously. A key turned in the lock and the door swung wide.

"Martin! I was afraid it was some more of those sighseers the art gallery sends down. I had four here yesterday. The next time they come I'm going to pretend I'm a Japanese houseboy and nobody else is at home. Come in, won't you?"

Stephanie's face turned to his pleadingly. "Come back tomorrow, Mr. Falter, will you?"

Martin stepped inside. "Greetings, Arnold. Hard at work?" Arnold Pfeiffer smiled and adjusted his blue linen smock. "Busy as a bee. Three more orders came in today and no price limit on any of them. Tapestry weaving, as an art, is really coming into its own again, you know."

He led the way through the empty hall. The corners of Martin's lips turned up mockingly as he followed the slender, swaying figure.

THEY entered a spacious, brightly lighted room. There were shelves from floor to ceiling honeycombed with cubicles containing yarns and threads of every available color and texture.

Arnold seated himself and fitted a cigaret into his meerschaum and amber holder; he lighted the cigaret and leaned back, his eyes expectantly on Martin's face.

"Well, Arnold," Martin began, "my expenses have been heavy lately, and I find I could use a little extra cash." He watched Arnold nod gravely.

Martin drew out the silver box from his pocket, opened it and pushed it across the table.

Arnold reached for it, giving a gasp of surprise and pleasure: "Good heavens! What a perfectly gorgeous thing! I've never seen anything like this—it's exquisite!"

"It's worth an exquisite sum, too," Martin said flatly.

"Oh, I can see it's a very rare old piece. What's it worth?" "I'm asking $10,000."

Unusual Civil Suit Trial on Texas City Disaster Near End

HOUSTON — (AP) — One of the most unusual federal court civil suit trials in history enters its final phase here this week.

Closing arguments will be held in the $200,000,000 mass trial of Texas City disaster damage suits. Background for the trial was laid by the Texas City waterfront disaster which killed over 500 people April 16-17, 1947.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 plaintiffs are demanding that the federal government pay them amounts ranging from $2 to $50,000 for personal and property damages suffered in the disaster.

The approximately 300 separate suits have been pooled into one mass trial to determine one point — whether or not the government is liable for damages.

Patently presiding over the case since it began April 24 has been 75-year-old Federal Judge T. M. Kennerly. It was he who arranged the combining of the suits for determination of the liability issue.

Should the plaintiffs eventually win the issue, each suit then would go before a federal judge to be determined on its merits.

It may be years, however, before final disposition of the liability question is made, and then probably by the Supreme Court.

Attorneys in the mass trial have left little doubt that, regardless of lower court decisions the case will be appealed to the Supreme Court.

Kennerly obviously has recognized this point. Only last week the testimony of one of the individual damage suits was entered into the trial's records on his suggestion.

He told the attorneys such a case probably would be needed to complete the trial's records for appeal to the Fifth Circuit Court.

Most of the testimony has centered around a chemical compound that has been blamed for the disaster — fertilizer grade ammonium nitrate.

The cargo of the French freighter Grandcamp, original vessel to explode in the disaster, included a shipment of the compound.

Briefly, the plaintiffs contend: 1. The Grandcamp's ammonium nitrate shipment was manufactured at government ordnance plants.

2. Government officials and bureaus failed to take action to assure proper handling of the explosive material.

3. Government agencies were aware of the compound as early as 1943.

Government attorneys, in reply, contended: 1. The disaster was an "unavoidable accident."

2. Responsibility for the disaster belongs to some or all of the agents that handled the inflammable cargo — steamship companies, longshoremen unions, stevedoring firms, and Texas City agencies and firms.

3. The government cannot be held responsible in that the charges of the plaintiffs involve discretionary acts of governmental representatives.

Attorneys involved consider the trial as one of the severest tests ever made of the comparatively new federal Torts Claims Act.

This law permits private individuals to sue the government without its consent.

Deadline for filing the damage suits against the government was April 17, 1948 — one year after the disaster.

Most individuals — those injured and survivors of those killed — filed their suits early. Many of the corporations which suffered heavy damages waited until early 1948.

Last April 12 Kennerly had all the plaintiffs in the mass trial file a $400,000,000 suit against the French government and the French line which owned the Grandcamp.

Kennerly acted here in order to keep the plaintiffs from being barred from doing so later by Texas' two-year statute of limitations.

The mass trial originally was set by Kennerly to begin Nov. 1 last year, but slow progress in obtaining depositions from hundreds of witnesses brought a postponement until Dec. 6.

The plaintiffs rested their case July 21, and defense testimony began Sept. 6.

A tentative schedule calls for final oral arguments for the trial the first four days next week. Each side will be permitted six hours.

Kennerly also has asked that concluding briefs be filed by each side. The plaintiffs' attorneys said they will need until Dec. 1 to prepare its brief, the government said it would have its completed by Dec. 15.

Auditor Would Collect Debts Or Cancel Same

AUSTIN — (AP) — State Auditor C. H. Cavness suggested that the Legislature either collect or cancel $70,287 in debts owed the state by 10 counties.

The suggestion was in an official audit of the state Treasury Department for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31.

In 1918 and 1919 the Legislature loaned from the general revenue fund various sums totaling $905,200 to various counties for drought relief.

Most of the counties repaid the advances in full. Eight counties, however, failed to complete payments and two others repaid nothing, his report showed.

The two counties making no payment were shown as Ochiltree, owing $30,000, and Farmer, owing $5,000.

Unpaid balances of other counties were listed as — Brown, $10,870; Fisher, $1,975; Kerr, $12,400; Kerr, $182; Lamb, $3,500; San Patricio $483; Scurry, $5,481; and Stonewall $950.

There were reports some days ago that the Navy's inspector general, Rear Adm. Allen R. McCahn, had seized the group's records and was investigating its activities.

"OP 23" was what the Navy called its Operations Division 23. Actually, its full title was Operational, Research and Policy Division of the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations. It was headed by Capt. A. A. Burke, who testified in Congress against pres-

140,000 Citizens To Take Census

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Want to join the army of 140,000 men and women who will take the nation's 1950 census? They'll start next April.

You'll need good health, mentally and physically, and will also have to have an automobile available in good condition.

The Census Bureau said that selection of enumerators for the bureau's field work will be made with extreme care, as these persons will be collecting confidential information.

Nobody should apply until after Jan. 1, the bureau said, because all census takers will be hired next year, and then only at local offices.

The rim of the steering wheel, rather than the spokes, should be held when driving an automobile. Hottentots are natives of South Africa.

Acheson Pleads for Better World Trade

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Secretary of State Acheson last week took a few sharp cracks at the trouble a foreigner runs into when he wants to ship goods into this country.

He made a speech which was a plea for better world trade. And he suggested very positively that the United States has to make some moves to help that trade by letting more goods from other countries come in.

As an example of the stumbling blocks set up by this country he cited the red tape that's been wound around world trade by the laws and regulations covering goods imported here.

The customs inspectors, in figuring out how much imported goods are worth and how much tariff should be placed on them, try to guide themselves by regulations (they fill a two-inch thick book) the tariff laws, and court decisions.

Said Acheson:

"Under present laws and procedures, it sometimes takes as long as three or five years before an importer knows exactly what amount of duty he will be required to pay on a given shipment. Sometimes the duty may after a lapse of years, amount to more than the whole amount of the shipment."

"An importer can't be sure whether a tire is going to be classified as a tire or an article (made) in part of carbon. He can't be sure whether one of those little pianos you see in night clubs is going to be considered a musical instrument or a toy."

"In order to get in gloves trimmed with bird feathers to meet a sudden feminine fancy in this country, he has to prove that the birds from which the feathers came were tame, not wild, a process which turns out to be very time-consuming."

"It has even been suggested, although I shall not guarantee the veracity of this statement, that there is some question whether a coffin containing a corpse should be dutiable as an article of merchandise or considered as the 'usual container' of its contents and hence be free of duty."

The Customs Bureau has been studying its procedures and regulations for a couple of years. And last week experts of the American, British and Canadian customs services have been going over the American set-up to see how they may be simplified so that more trade can flow in here.

Dallas Woman Finds Collector's Item

DALLAS — (AP) — A Dallas woman shopped for antiques on her vacation and came up with a find collectors dream about.

Near Centerville, Texas, Mrs. Knolan Bertucci visited Mrs. John Mol to look for an antique clock. A delicately carved powder table caught her eye and the two women examined it.

In a secret compartment Mrs. Bertucci found a deed, a death certificate and two marriage contracts hidden since the time of Napoleon.
