Italian minister argues for cut in Polish aid

By The Associated Press
Polish Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski, meeting today with Western European diplomats in Warsaw, was expected to argue against the Western allies joining the United States in an economic squeeze on his martial law regime.
In Brussels, Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo today told his nine Common Market counterparts that they should be unified and end all but direct food assistance to the Polish people until Jaruzelski produces guarantees the "repression" of Poland's martial law will be lifted.
"Without this unity, we will confirm two very grave facts," Colombo said. "The indirect acceptance of the Polish repression and the division of the West." A text of his statement, for delivery at the closed door meeting, was released to the press.
Jaruzelski, head of the military council now ruling Poland, ordered martial law Dec. 13 in what he called an alternative to civil war. The regime moved swiftly to establish order in the workplaces, plagued by strikes since the independent trade union Solidarity was established in August 1980 and began demanding liberalization and reforms.
Radio Warsaw said all factories, administrative offices and public transport in the capital were operating normally today, the first work day of the new year. Broadcasts monitored in London also said most schools reopened "after 20 days' holiday."

Uncensored reports from Poland said 20 closed factories and industrial plants were to reopen today following attempts to purge unionists who led strikes in defiance of martial law.
There were no immediate reports on labor conditions outside the capital today.
Among plants the government hoped to get working again were the big Lenin shipyard in Gdansk, where Solidarity was born in the summer of 1980, and the Pafawag railroad car factory in Wroclaw, a center of labor unrest. It was the third attempt to reopen the shipyard.
Western response to Reagan's trade sanctions against Poland and the Soviets has been cool, although the allies have protested the military crackdown and suspension of civil liberties. Reagan claims the Soviets were the chief instigators behind the declaration of martial law and must be punished.
The allies have expressed concern that suspending officially sponsored aid to Poland and imposing other sanctions would jeopardize East-West relations and make Poland more reliant on the Soviet Union. NATO's foreign ministers plan to meet in Brussels next week, an official at the military alliance's headquarters announced today. Word that Jaruzelski wanted to meet the Common Market members' envoys in Warsaw was released by the West German Foreign Ministry.

Poland has reportedly lined up $350 million to avoid defaulting on its debt to Western governments and banks.
Uncensored reports from Poland said Western sources in Warsaw reported Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski assured West German officials last week his government has the $350 million needed to pay the rest of last year's interest on Poland's estimated $26 billion debt to the West. The sources said they assumed the Soviet bloc had provided the money because Western banks had refused.

Poland's cash reserves are exhausted because its economy has been crippled by years of mismanagement and recent labor unrest. Polish officials have been privately telling Western diplomats and journalists that cuts in Western aid will force the country to rely more heavily on the Soviets. The Kremlin has already supplied thousands of tons of food, medicine and fuel to support the military regime.
They have said the national security adviser, whoever fills the post, will be given increased authority and daily access to the president, something Allen has not had.
The aides also have said Deputy Secretary of State William P. Clark is the unanimous choice of Reagan's inner circle to replace Allen if he steps aside voluntarily upon completion of an internal White House investigation of possible ethics violations or is removed by Reagan.
While in California, Reagan met with Clark, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and deputy White House chief of staff Michael K. Deaver to review preparations for Schmidt's visit Tuesday.
The West German chancellor has expressed disagreement with Reagan's assessment that the Kremlin bears responsibility for the imposition of martial law in Poland.
But that Saturday afternoon meeting came amid a flurry of news leaks about Allen from well-placed administration sources who asked anonymity. Each new leak added validity to reports that Allen would be ousted.
Speakes said Reagan will meet with aides this week on a plan under study to send back to the states a share of federal tax revenues as a step in the president's efforts to reduce the scope of the federal government and increase the role of state and local authorities.

Officials meet today on employment office closing

State officials, Texas Employment Commission (TEC) officials, local business representatives and city and county officials were to meet at 2 p.m. today to discuss the recent closing of the Pampa TEC office and what can be done to reverse that action.
Officials slated to appear at the emergency meeting include Texas Congressman Jack Hightower, State Representative Foster Whaley, Area TEC Director Bill Day of Amarillo, TEC executive director Pat Joiner of Austin and a representative from State Senator Bill Sarpaulis's office.
Officials were informed Thursday that the local TEC office would close Jan. 4.
A meeting of officials and business representative was called Thursday to see if the closing of the TEC would affect Pampa. The business representatives concluded that the closing would indeed affect the community.

State Representative Foster Whaley said that $250 million was paid by the Texas employers to fund TEC offices in the state. However, the monies were sent to Washington and allocations were made from there.
"Texas has been receiving about $150 million back on its monies, but with the additional TEC office closings in the state, Texas will receive only $100 million. Where is our money going?" Whaley asked.
Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy and Whaley will travel to Austin on Tuesday to meet with the three-man TEC board to ask for reconsideration on the closing of the Pampa office.

Budget is top priority in Reagan's full schedule

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, back home in the White House after a week-long vacation in California, has a full work menu for the week ahead. Not all of it is tasty.
There is lunch with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, with whom Reagan has differed over the Soviet role in the Polish crisis.
There are some final decisions to be made on the 1983 fiscal budget.
There is a National Security Council meeting on Poland.
There is a likely meeting to discuss a proposal to return certain federal tax revenues to the states.
And there is a meeting with Richard V. Allen, who has shown no public sign of willingly giving up his job as national security adviser despite signals from White House aides that he is on the way out.
"He's got a lot to do when he gets back," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Sunday as the president flew home from his sixth vacation in California since taking office a little over 11 months ago.
The top priority items, Speakes said, are to "finish up the budget" that will be delivered to Congress soon and to keep abreast of developments in Poland.
But White House officials have made clear that overhauling White House foreign policy operations — with whatever that portends for Allen — also will be high on the list.

Six charged in beating, kidnap of alleged thieves

Six Pampa men have been charged with kidnapping, and one Pampa man and one Amarillo man have been charged with theft of $8,000 in a bizarre series of events involving the theft of money and an apparent attempt by the victims to seek revenge.
Pampa Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said today the series of events began Dec. 29, when Lisa Harvill, 20, and her husband, Darrell Ray Harvill, 22, of 1001 W. Bond reported the theft of $8,000 in cash which reportedly took place while they were called away from their residence.
Arrested on charges of theft of values over $200 were Jerry Edward Meathenia, 26, of 1601 Somerville, Pampa, and William Harold Ackers Jr., 24, of 4215 Western Amarillo. Both men were released on a $10,000 each after being held in Pampa City Jail. Partial recovery of the $8,000 was made. Ackers was arrested in Amarillo and returned to Pampa to face the theft charge here.

Pampa Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said that on Dec. 31, the Pampa Police Department was advised that the two men arrested on the theft charges, Meathenia and Ackers, had both been kidnapped and beaten.
According to Chief Ryzman, on Dec. 30, Meathenia was taken from his apartment in Pampa at gunpoint by two males who transported him to a house in Pampa where he was beaten by three males. He was allegedly then taken to Amarillo where he was beaten by two other males. Meathenia reportedly was returned to Pampa where his abductors released him about 7:30 p.m. the same day.
Also according to Chief Ryzman, on Dec. 31, Ackers was first severely beaten by three males at his apartment in Amarillo and then taken from his apartment at gunpoint at approximately 4 p.m. Ackers was able to escape from his captors by creating a disturbance in the parking lot of his apartment.

Upon completion of the investigation, District Attorney Harold Comer authorized the issuance of warrants for arrest, all on charges of kidnapping, for the six men all of Pampa.
Arrested Dec. 31 were Darrell Ray Harvill, 22, of 1001 Bond; Dale Lynn McClure, 22, of 1616 Hamilton; and Tim Paul Teague, 21, of 432 North Wayne. Arrested Jan. 1 were Jerel Thomas Edwards, 18, of 1044 S. Christy, and arrested on Jan. 3 was Randall Thomas Townsend, 26, of 320 Tignor.
The men were first held in Pampa City Jail on bonds of $10,000 each and then transported to Gray County Jail where Harvill, Teague and Edwards remain today.

Burned wall of Brunow building collapses into Lindsey Furniture

BY GAYLE REICHER
Staff Writer
Lindsey Furniture Mart, 501 S. Cuyler, became the latest business victim of the Christmas night fire at the Brunow Building, when the south remaining wall of the burned building fell into the Lindsey building, burying the store's furniture beneath the charred rubble.
Four persons, store owners Mr. and Mrs. Lige Lindsey, son Tommy Lindsey, and a daughter-in-law Mary Anna Lindsey, were in the store when the wall fell at about 1 p.m. Sunday, preparing for a fire sale today, and all escaped injury.
According to Tommy Lindsey, "The wall of the old Brunow building fell over on top of our building and completely collapsed about half of the ceiling, sounding like an explosion. Of course, our main thought was where was everybody. Fortunately, we were all in a place of safety."
Lindsey estimated damages of between $200,000 and $300,000.
Authorities have speculated that earlier removal of the damaged Brunow south wall could have prevented the accident. The wall had been left standing for over a week after fire gutted the Brunow Building, and police believe that high winds yesterday caused it to collapse.

According to Pampa Police Chief J. J. Ryzman, officials are now concerned about the possibility of the remaining east wall of the Brunow Building falling onto the U. S. Post Office building.
Ryzman said that City Attorney Don Lane is investigating the matter.
Eight businesses were destroyed in a spectacular blaze on Christmas night, which gutted the landmark building. The Brunow Building firewall had prevented the flames from spreading into the Lindsey Furniture Mart. Ironically, that same firewall is the wall which collapsed onto the furniture store causing thousands of dollars of damage Sunday.

Lindsey was not sure whether his insurance or the insurance of the Brunow Building, owned by area rancher Jerry Bond, would be responsible for the damages to the furniture store. Bond could not be reached for comment.
Three firefighters were injured during the Dec. 25 fire, and all but one have been released from the hospital. Firefighter Trent Bolin remains in Coronado Community Hospital with a fractured pelvis and internal injuries, while Capt. Don Hendricks is recovering at home from a chipped vertebra in his back.
A third firefighter, T. D. Snow, was treated and released for chest spasms.

Police seek link between Dozier kidnap, jailbreak

VERONA, Italy (AP) — Police are looking for links between the kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Dozier and an attack on a women's prison that freed four suspected terrorists.
Police said one of the escapees Sunday is believed to be a member of the Red Brigades, the urban terrorist organization that kidnapped Dozier from his Verona apartment Dec. 13. Two of the others are said to be former members.
The four escaped from the Rovigo women's prison, 55 miles southeast of Verona, after three or four accomplices on the outside blew a large hole in the prison wall, threw submachine guns to the four women inside and pinned down the prison sentries by automatic weapons fire, authorities said.
The wall was shattered by a bomb planted in a car parked outside. The blast, which hurled bricks 100 yards and shattered windows in nearby apartment buildings, killed 64-year-old carpenter Angelo Furlan as he walked his dog, and injured six other people, three of them seriously.
Police said the escape may have been an attempt by the Red Brigades to divert police forces from the Dozier kidnap investigation.

They said one of those who escaped, Loredana Biancamano, is a suspected member of the Red Brigades and two of the others, Susanna Ronconi and Marina Premoli, are former members. Miss Ronconi and the fourth escapee, Federica Neroni, are now members of the Front Line, another left-wing terrorist group.
"The ideological aims of the Red Brigades and the Front Line are the same," said a Verona police official who asked not to be identified. "But they haven't ever worked together. We have to wait for further details."
A series of Red Brigades communiques released since the kidnapping have said Dozier, the highest ranking American at the Verona NATO base, is being tried by a "proletarian" court. The terrorists have yet to announce terms for his release.
Italian authorities confirmed Sunday that "friends" of the general are offering a reward of 2 billion lira — $1.6 million at the current exchange rate — for information leading to Dozier's release. The friends have not been identified.

Eads confirmed as new PATCO president

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gary Eads, Kansas City leader of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, has confirmed that he has been chosen president of the decertified union.
A formal announcement of the election was scheduled to be made at a news conference later today in Eads' suburban Overland Park, Kan., office. He will succeed Robert E. Poli as president of the union.
Eads, 37, said Sunday that six of the union's nine executive board members voted for him to finish Poli's unexpired term "after a great deal of discussion."
George Brandon, a regional vice president in Dallas, confirmed the election results Sunday night.
"I prefer to keep a low profile," Eads said. "I am not looking to become a TV star. If I can get some jobs back, that will be enough. My primary goal is to get the 11,500 fired controllers back to work."
President Reagan fired the controllers last August, two days after they walked off the job in an illegal strike during a dispute with the Federal Aviation Administration over wages, benefits and working conditions.

Union officials later said the strike was a mistake, but were rebuffed in their attempts at reconciliation with the administration.
Poli said last week that he would resign Jan. 6, a further concession to the government, but White House spokesmen said it would not change their policy toward PATCO.
The FAA has been operating with supervisors, non-striking controllers and military personnel since August, and is replacing the fired controllers with new trainees.
Eads said that although most of the former controllers had found work, many still hoped to return to their old jobs.
He said he would contact administration officials this week and make a pitch for rehiring the controllers. Eads said the union would also continue to mount court challenges to the firings, including an argument before the Federal Merits Systems Protection Board that the controllers were denied due process when they were dismissed.

CITY ANSWERS TRASH COMPLAINT
 Regarding a trash complaint of residents of the 1100 and 1200 blocks of South Finley, Allan Vickery, superintendent of the City Sanitation Department, said today his department is checking to be certain there is a dumpster to every four residences.
 Vickery said the dumpsters, at a cost of about $250 each, were placed on the alley one to every two houses and two mobile homes, or four residences to each box, as is customary throughout the rest of the city.
 He said he felt complainants that trash was not picked up during Christmas week were untrue. He said his drivers chart their progress as they make their routes, and the driver's route showed the alley picked up.
 Vickery said he felt the large amount of trash during the week may have fostered the complaints. He said his drivers empty the dumpsters in that neighborhood either late Wednesday afternoon or early Thursday morning.
 He also said he had spotted four dumpsters going through the alley and felt this was the reason for the scattered trash down the alleyway.
 Residents had complained that trash was left in the alleys after sanitation workers emptied dumpsters, that dumpsters had gone unemptied for one week, and that there were not enough dumpsters in the area.

 The letter-writer said he stole the snakes because he took the creme de la creme of his collection.
 Zoo officials said the thief used a rope to get into the building.
 The Fort Worth Herpetological Association offered a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the thief.

CITY ANSWERS TRASH COMPLAINT
 Regarding a trash complaint of residents of the 1100 and 1200 blocks of South Finley, Allan Vickery, superintendent of the City Sanitation Department, said today his department is checking to be certain there is a dumpster to every four residences.
 Vickery said the dumpsters, at a cost of about $250 each, were placed on the alley one to every two houses and two mobile homes, or four residences to each box, as is customary throughout the rest of the city.
 He said he felt complainants that trash was not picked up during Christmas week were untrue. He said his drivers chart their progress as they make their routes, and the driver's route showed the alley picked up.
 Vickery said he felt the large amount of trash during the week may have fostered the complaints. He said his drivers empty the dumpsters in that neighborhood either late Wednesday afternoon or early Thursday morning.
 He also said he had spotted four dumpsters going through the alley and felt this was the reason for the scattered trash down the alleyway.
 Residents had complained that trash was left in the alleys after sanitation workers emptied dumpsters, that dumpsters had gone unemptied for one week, and that there were not enough dumpsters in the area.

SNAKES RETURNED BY THIEF
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Dave Body found 10 snakes at his front door and was delighted. But he was even happier if there had been 11.
 Body is a herpetologist at the Fort Worth Zoo and the reptiles were 10 of 11 non-poisonous snakes stolen from the zoo Wednesday. The snakes were placed in a box at Body's front door Saturday, along with an apologetic letter from the thief.
 The letter-writer said he stole the snakes because he took the creme de la creme of his collection.
 Zoo officials said the thief used a rope to get into the building.
 The Fort Worth Herpetological Association offered a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the thief.

Snow buries village economy

CALUMET, Mich. (AP) - The police chief and village manager of this old mining town have just been laid off, and some people say the economy of the four-by-six-block village is being buried under the 300 or so inches of snow it gets each year.
 "The snow is what really kills us," said John Vertin, a village trustee who owns the major store. "We have to keep the streets clean for shoppers."
 Calumet began as a town for shoppers - the commercial district for copper miners who lived a mile away in the village of Laurium. Despite the cold and difficult Upper Peninsula winters, it was a thriving business and cultural center in the early 1900s.
 But the last mine closed in 1967 and the miners and their families no longer came to Calumet. The population in the Calumet Township area plummeted from around 40,000 in the early 1900s to its present 8,000, and 1,018 people now live in Calumet itself.

Snow removal is the biggest item on the village budget, which officials are trying to trim by $40,000 to $50,000 from the $265,613 they had intended to spend for 1982. Among the village's few recent purchases was a new pickup truck for snow removal.
 Some residents say Calumet's tiny population is as much to blame as the snow for its fiscal problems.
 "Because of our size, and because we weren't that rich to begin with, we have suffered because of the national situation. The little guy always gets hurt the worst," said village trustee Peter Hill.
 Hill also pegs Calumet's problems partly on officials who "concentrated too much on providing day-to-day services. We spent every penny that came in and didn't do enough capital formation and expenditure."
 Whatever the cause, the sour economy forced 30-year-old Dan McCormick to lay himself off as village manager in November. He told town council members they could not afford to pay his $16,000 salary.

 On Friday, Police Chief Paul Baroni was laid off, and the street superintendent, Frank Beatty, went on partial retirement.
 Many of those who have weathered so many harsh winters in Michigan's northernmost Keewanaw Peninsula believe the village can survive.
 "They said this town would die when the mining companies left," village president Joe Ellenich said. "But we're still here."
 "We're not rich," Vertin said. "But we're paying our bills. Calumet is going to be here."
 But McCormick says the village needs to put as much as $3 million into capital improvements over the next three to five years.

Weather-related accidents blamed in at least 30 holiday deaths

By MASHA HAMILTON, Associated Press Writer
 A winter storm blanketed the nation's midsection with up to a foot of snow, tornadoes touched down in the South and fog shrouded the mid-Atlantic Coast - a potpourri of weekend weather that caused at least 30 deaths.
 In eastern Maine, 20,000 people spent the weekend in 10-degree weather without electricity after a raging snowstorm. Power was restored to all but the most isolated homes late Sunday and early today, utility officials said.
 Thousands of Idaho schoolchildren were told to stay home today as many roads were snowpacked and treacherous. Boise struggled out from under a foot of snow - its heaviest in 33 years.
 A line of storms stretching from the Missouri's Bootheel to Kansas City dumped a foot of snow in the northeastern town of Kirksville.
 A tornado flattened 20 homes, killed one person and injured 17 others in Newton, Miss., on Sunday. Trees blocked roads and volunteers searched house-to-house for more victims, but continued rain hampered cleanup operations in the east-central Mississippi town.

 Twisters also struck along the Mississippi River in Lee and Phillips counties in eastern Arkansas. No injuries were reported, but the high winds caused more than $120,000 in property damages.
 At least eight tornadoes touched down in central and southern Alabama, but no injuries were reported. A tornado watch also was issued through today for 25 northern and west-central Georgia counties, including part of metropolitan Atlanta.
 Trees were uprooted, power lines downed and two mobile homes overturned as hail and winds gusting to 60 mph struck Memphis and continued north to Dyer and Lauderdale counties in western Tennessee. The entire state also was under a flash flood watch.

 Trailer park residents in the northwest Georgia town of Ellijay fled their homes Sunday night as the rain-swollen Coosawattee River threatened to overflow. Flooding was reported over much of northern Georgia and a flash flood watch was issued.
 In Virginia's fog-shrouded Blue Ridge Mountains, two dozen people were injured in a 37-car pile-up on Afton Mountain.
 Storms since New Year's Eve caused at least 30 deaths, including seven people killed in four separate plane crashes in Colorado, New York, North Carolina and Florida.
 Traffic deaths attributed to the weather were reported in Indiana, Maine, Iowa, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Virginia and Washington.

There's good news at the grocery

By LOUISE COOK, Associated Press Writer
 The last month of 1981 brought only a small increase in grocery bills, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey which shows that prices at the end of the year were lower than at the beginning.
 The good news was tempered, however, by the fact that the drop was due mainly to a single item - sugar. When sugar was removed from the marketbasket totals, the AP found prices almost unchanged in 1981.
 Economists predict that food prices - which have risen less than most other items during 1981 - will continue to provide a bright spot in the inflation picture for 1982.

The AP survey covers 14 food and non-food products, selected at random. Prices were checked on March 1, 1973 at one supermarket in each of 13 cities, and have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. A 15th item - chocolate chip cookies - originally was included in the marketbasket, but was dropped when the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.
 Among the findings of the latest price check:
 - The marketbasket bill rose during December at the checklist store in seven cities and went down in six cities. Overall, the marketbasket bill increased an average of two-tenths of a percent last month. That compared with a rise of half a percent in November.
 - Comparing prices today with those a year ago, the AP found that the marketbasket bill at the checklist store - including sugar - dropped an average of 5.9 percent. Without sugar, the bill dropped an average of half a percent. In 1980 - when sugar prices were rising sharply - the marketbasket total rose 14.5 percent was sugar included and 8.2 percent when it was not. Because the AP survey results are not weighted to reflect actual family spending, a sharp increase or decrease in one item - like sugar - has more impact on the marketbasket totals than it does on family budgets.

 - The AP found prices for pork chops, coffee and detergent went up during December. Prices of chopped chuck and eggs generally declined. Beef prices generally have been stable this year because of large supplies which reflect a cyclical increase in cattle production.
 Over-all food prices had been expected to rise as much as 15 percent in 1981 because of 1980's drought. There were bumper corn and wheat harvests, however, as well as large supplies of meat. Now, the U.S. Department of Agriculture expects an 8 percent boost in food prices for 1981 followed by a rise between 5 percent and 9 percent in 1982.
 The day of the week on which price checks were made varied depending on the month.

Capitol birthday festivities will begin next month, last six years

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' old pink granite Capitol is about to have a 100th birthday that will last, off and on, for about six years.

The first centennial celebration comes Feb. 1 to mark the 100th anniversary of the ground-breaking in 1882.

The second centennial fete will mark the 100th year since the cornerstone was laid March 2, 1885.

And the third centennial celebration will mark the dedication of the building May 16, 1888.

All of the plans are in conjunction with Texas' big plans for a Sesquicentennial in 1986 to observe the 150th anniversary of Texas independence declared in 1836.

Big plans are being made by the Capitol Centennial Committee, headed by the governor's wife, Rita Clements, and by the Texas Sesquicentennial Commission.

The lord provost of Aberdeen, Scotland, Alexander Colijie, will be a guest of honor for the Feb. 1 along a troop of Scottish bagpipe players and dancers. Special honors will be paid the 62 masons who were imported from Scotland to shape the massive granite blocks.

The Texas Capitol, after 100 years, is still one of the top tourist attractions in the state. Several thousand Texans and out-of-state visitors flock through the corridors each month, often as many as 200 a day.

The legislative Tour Guide Service and the state highway department's travel service maintain permanent quarters in the Capitol providing information and tours, including Saturdays and Sundays.

A special exhibit of artifacts and articles connected with this Capitol and those that preceded it on display on the third floor of the Capitol.

Another display case just outside the door to the House reminds visitors of Texas' symbols — the state flower, bird, song, tree and seal. The state's official motto is "Friendship," coming from the Indian word "Tejas" which means friendship.

Although the groundbreaking was in 1882, the Capitol actually was provided for by a state constitutional convention in 1875. By a vote of 48 to 14, the convention set aside 3 million acres of state owned land to erect a new capitol.

The building contract was let in 1882 to a Chicago firm. Original plans to build with Texas limestone were changed when owners of Granite Mountain, near Marble Falls, offered the state all the granite it needed, free of charge. Five hundred convict laborers were furnished by the state prison system to build a railroad to the quarry.

The 16,000 pound conerstone was laid in 1885 but it was three more years before the building could be finished and dedicated.

At the dedication, state Sen. Temple Houston, son of the Texas revolutionary hero Sam Houston, accepted it for the people of Texas.

Two explosions fan flames; families not home, port traffic is closed

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Two small explosions, shooting flames about 50 feet in the air, has given new life to a smoldering fire on a barge that hit a drawbridge, a Coast Guard official said today.

The Coast Guard had hoped the fire would burn itself out sometime today, but the 4:30 a.m. explosions may leave the barge burning another 24 hours, the official said.

Duty Officer Lt. J.G. McHenry also said that the six to 12 families evacuated from their homes in Virginia Point because of toxic fumes from the fire have not been allowed to return to their homes.

Specialists from Monsanto Corp., owners of the barge, are on the scene monitoring air quality and say no toxic fumes pose a threat to the area.

Cmdr. Arthur Whiting said area boating traffic has been shut down and he advised port travelers to avoid the area.

"We have closed off marine traffic in the area of the burning barge...I strongly recommend any private boaters or aircraft pilots stay out of the area," he said.

The barge, carrying a toxic and corrosive chemical, ran into a drawbridge which apparently had not been raised, Whiting said.

Whiting, chief of port operations at the Coast Guard Marine Safety Office, said his office was investigating why the bridge had not been raised.

He said Coast Guard officials hoped the fire would consume most of the acrylonitrile, a flammable, thermally unstable, corrosive and poisonous chemical.

"The barge hit the railroad bridge and steel rubbing against steel causes sparks," Whiting said, adding that some explosions were reported in the 3 a.m. accident. The barge ran aground a mile north of the bridge.

Bridge operator Shannon Moffett was "shaken up" but not severely injured in the collision, day bridge operator Chester Barger said. Barger said officials expected the bridge, through which about 50 ships a day pass, to be closed until Tuesday morning.

The barge was carrying acrylonitrile from Chocolate Bayou to Deer Park when it struck the bridge. The barge and another that was towed to safety each contained about 400,000 gallons of the chemical, which is used in making synthetic fibers.

Whiting said the Federal Aviation Administration had ordered aircraft to stay out of the area.

Union reports 'no progress' as contract deadline approaches

DENVER (AP) — Agreement will not be reached on new two-year contracts for 55,000 oil refinery workers across the nation until the refiners address union demands for a no-layoffs guarantee and better pensions, says Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union President Robert Goss.

The contracts expire at midnight Thursday and no progress has been made toward resolving labor and management differences, Goss said in an interview Sunday.

"We'll be at the bargaining table all week and we'll see what happens," Goss said. "I'm certain it will go down until the last minute."

He said all of the more than half-dozen company proposals rejected by OCAW so far were turned down because they did not offer enough money in wages or medical benefits. More important, Goss said, they did not address the union's primary demands for no layoffs and no plant closures, and a large pension boost.

The union has not set a specific wage increase request, but plans to do so this week, Goss said. He has indicated it might be 11 percent or more.

About 400 contracts with 98 refiners — from the largest like Gulf Oil Corp.'s Port Arthur, Texas, operation to small independents — expire at midnight Thursday. OCAW has not granted contract extensions in the past, but union officials have said bargaining could continue past the deadline if settlement was imminent.

The contracts were forged in 1980 following a three-month nationwide walkout over a wage and benefits reopener clause in the 1979 contract. It was the first OCAW strike in 11 years and the longest in the union's history.

The walkout ended with a 10.5 percent increase that brought the average refinery worker's wage to $11.66 an hour and added a one-year extension to the two-year contract.

Under OCAW bargaining policy, contract proposals are approved or rejected by a 12-member committee meeting at union headquarters here. The trend has been for one of the larger companies to reach a settlement and set a pattern for the rest of the industry.

In late December, Goss and the National Oil Bargaining Policy Committee turned down contract proposals by Gulf, Texaco Inc., Amoco Oil Co., the refining arm of Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), and Shell Oil Co. as well as an unspecified number of independent refiners.

"We don't have any particular reaction" to the rejection of the contract, said Gulf spokesman Kirk Vogeley on Sunday. "No meetings have been scheduled at this time, but we would be available to meet with the union this week if something could be arranged."

Mother gives life-saving blood cells to son

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — For Christmas, Peggy Adcock of Texarkana gave her baby a new blood type and probably saved his life.

White blood cells from her bone marrow were transfused into her baby's bloodstream in a procedure at Arkansas Children's Hospital in Little Rock. Russell Steele calls the operation the most experimental procedure done in Arkansas.

Steele said there are only two or three known cases in the world involving successful transplants from mother to child. Steele is a pediatric immunologist who designed the life-saving treatment. The usual transplant donor is a brother or sister.

"It's a miracle from the Lord," said Steve Adcock, 27, of the surgery that saved his son's life.

Caleb Adcock, 10 months, was not expected to live to celebrate his first birthday. He suffers from a rare hereditary disorder called severe combined immunodeficiency disease.

It left his body with virtually no resistance to infection.

"He was born without functioning white blood cells," Steele said. He said the illness proved fatal to Mrs. Adcock's younger brother, who died in 1964 at 9 weeks of age.

White blood cells in healthy people produce antibodies to help fight infection. When those cells don't function, the individual is vulnerable and even the slightest infection can be fatal.

"This was done so that Caleb wouldn't have to be a bubble baby," Adcock said. "We didn't want that for him."

Steele has worked with a Houston child suffering from a similar disorder who has lived most of his life in a protective plastic bubble, isolated from the touch of even his family.

Most of the $100,000 surgery was paid by Arkansas Children's Hospital. One of 31 transplant centers nationwide, the hospital was the only one in the region that could perform the procedure because of its team of specialized pediatricians and nurses, Steele said.

"He seemed perfectly healthy until he was 4 months old," said Mrs. Adcock, 27.

Steele said Caleb looked like a frail little old man when he entered the hospital Oct. 21, 1981. At about 5 months, he began vomiting, coughing and panting for breath. He lost weight rapidly.

Blood tests at Arkansas Children's Hospital revealed the cause.

Before Caleb could undergo surgery, his body had to be built up nutritionally so he could survive the transplant. A central line was inserted through the jugular vein into the main vein near his heart so he could be fed a special formula. That line was later used for the white blood cell transfusions.

The treatment involved removal of 60 sections of bone marrow from Mrs. Adcock's pelvis.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A federal judge is expected to rule this week on whether Arkansas' creation-science law is constitutional.

Judge William Overton said last week that he would wait until after New Year's Day to rule on a lawsuit challenging the statute's constitutionality. The lawsuit, filed in May by the American Civil Liberties Union, was tried in U.S. District Court last month.

Attorneys for the ACLU filed the lawsuit on behalf of 23 plaintiffs — most of them religious leaders, scientists and educators.

The lawsuit says the statute, Act 590, is too vague, violates the constitutional separation of church and state and impinges on academic freedom.

The Arkansas Legislature approved the Balanced Treatment for Creation-Science and Evolution-Science Act with little debate during the waning days of the regular legislative session. In March, Gov. Frank White signed the bill into law. Later, he said, he had not read it but still supported it.

The statute, the first such law in the country, requires public schools teaching evolution to teach creationism as well. If upheld, it will take effect in September. The ACLU is challenging a similar law in Louisiana. That lawsuit is to be tried later.

Evolutionists say life developed slowly over millions of years. Creationists say a supernatural force formed the world suddenly and relatively recently. Although most creationists believe that force to be God, the law forbids the use of religious writings in the classroom.

Nevertheless, the ACLU, represented by Little Rock attorneys Philip Kaplan and Bob Cearley as well as New York attorneys, says the law is an attempt by fundamentalists to force a literal interpretation of Genesis into the public schools as science.

The state, represented by the attorney general's office, says there is scientific evidence to support creationism.

At the end of the nine-day trial, which began Dec. 7, Overton said constitutionality, not Scripture or evolution, was the issue in the case.

During the trial, antics outside the courtroom included clowns, jugglers, a man in a demon suit and a man in a monkey suit. Events in the courtroom, however, usually were orderly: often highly technical. About 250 people filled the room daily.

The ACLU, which presented 17 witnesses and 130 documents during the trial, said it would appeal if it lost the case. Attorney General Steve Clark, whose office presented 11 witnesses and 120 exhibits, said that if the state loses, he probably would appeal to the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis. But first, he said, he would have to see the judge's opinion.

Some creationists, including some who pushed for the enactment of the law, accused Clark of poor preparation for the trial. He denied the allegation.

Air search is underway for missing plane

TAOS, N.M. (AP) — An air and ground search was expected to resume today for a single-engine plane missing since Thursday with three Taos residents and a Boulder, Colo., man aboard, state police said.

The search got under way Sunday after being delayed by heavy snow and low visibilities Saturday.

"We've got seven fixed-wing airplanes in the air, and we've had three helicopters in and out," Raymond Piper, field coordinator for the state police, said Sunday.

Piper said ground crews in two four-wheel drive vehicles had checked out a couple of sightings of flares. "We're checking out every lead we can get."

Piper said the search Sunday included an area about 60 air miles from Santa Fe to north of Taos. "We may expand the area tomorrow (Monday)," he said.

Members of the Civil Air Patrol were flying the fixed-wing aircraft, and one helicopter was provided by the state police. The other two helicopters were from television stations, Piper said.

Piper said the missing plane, a four-seater, had an emergency locator transmitter, but no signal had been reported.

Those aboard the plane were three members of a Taos family and a Boulder, Colo., man, who was the pilot, Piper said.

He said the Colorado man had met the Taos family in Santa Fe with the airplane for a demonstration ride. They were considering purchasing the plane, Piper said.

He declined to identify those aboard.

The plane, he said, took off from Santa Fe at 5:30 p.m. Thursday, "and we have no idea where it's at." He said a flight plan was not filed.

Reggie strikes out on custom Corvette

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A Texas-sized bid of $550,000 was too much for New York Yankee slugger Reggie Jackson Sunday when a custom-built Corvette was auctioned in Phoenix.

Milton Verret of Beaumont, Texas, was the successful bidder on the gray and black, turbine-engine Corvette built by Vince Granatelli, son of racing great Andy Granatelli.

Jackson made the second-highest bid, $25,000, on the top attraction of the Southwestern International Collector Car Show and Auction.

Although his bid on the custom Corvette failed, Jackson brought a car of his own to put on the auction block. His 1974 Rolls-Royce Corniche Coupe sold for $43,000.

Bids during the three-day show totaled $11.5 million, and actual sales were between $5 million and $6 million, a spokesman said. The show ended Sunday evening at the Hilton.

The one-of-a-kind Corvette was owned by Herbert Orlovitz of Boca Raton, Fla. He originally paid $750,000 for the car in 1979, promoters of the auction said.

The Corvette is powered by a turbine engine — the kind used by Andy Granatelli in repeated but unsuccessful attempts to win the Indianapolis 500. But this Corvette was designed as a street vehicle, not a race car.

The second-highest price at the auction went for a 1934 Duesenberg owned by Dr. Ed Counselman of Topeka, Kan.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Risks and freedom instead of welfare

BY ROBERT WALTERS
DALLAS - The area's largest auto assembly plant is about to lay off 20 percent of its work force, other employers already have furloughed thousands of workers and housing starts have plunged to their lowest level in 20 years.
That dismal news comes not from Detroit or Dayton but from right here in Dallas - "Big D," the city that epitomized the surging growth and booming economy of the Sun Belt throughout the 1960s and 1970s.
Similar reports from across the nation suggest that the country is promoting a false dichotomy by contrasting the supposedly robust growth of the Sun Belt, encompassing the South and West, with the presumably stagnant economy of the Frost Belt, embracing the East and Midwest.
Accounts of a mass exodus of unemployed workers fleeing Detroit and relocating in Houston, where job opportunities are plentiful, tend to oversimplify a very complex situation. Because it is the center of the severely troubled automobile industry, Detroit currently is suffering under the most adverse economic conditions experienced in any major city.

Between those extremes, however, generalizations about a particular metropolitan area's potential for future growth based solely on geography can often be incorrect.
There is no doubt that the South and West continue to sustain long-term growth at a faster pace than the East and Midwest, but no region of the country is immune to the adverse impact of the current economic recession.
In addition, the halcyon period of spectacular growth has come and gone in many of the older Sun Belt cities, which now must be content with modest rate of growth at best or a sluggish economy at worst.
Item: Between 1970 and 1980, net population losses were recorded in Atlanta; New Orleans; San Francisco; Tampa, Fla.; Fort Worth, Texas; Columbia S.C.; Richmond, Va.; and dozens of smaller Southern and Western communities.

Item: The current three-year-long housing depression, according to the National Association of Realtors, has led to a loss of almost 2.7 million sales of existing homes with a value of $188.6 billion.
The three biggest Sun Belt states - California, Texas, and Florida - collectively account for more than one-third of all the country's lost sales and lost dollar volume.
Item: Construction of new homes also has been depressed to the lowest level since the end of World War II, according to the National Association of Home Builders, which notes that the unemployment rate in the construction industry now stands at a disturbing 18.2 percent.

Among the cities where the number of housing starts this year is expected to be even lower than the generally dismal 1980 levels are Daytona Beach, Tampa, St. Petersburg, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Riverside, San Bernardino, Ontario, Sacramento and Fresno, Calif.; Albuquerque, N.M.; Las Vegas and New Orleans.
Housing starts in San Diego, Calif., averaged 28,000 per year throughout the booming 1970s, but this year they will number only about 7,000. Construction of new homes in that city is down almost 60 percent compared with last year.
Here in Dallas, new housing starts have sunk to their lowest level in more than two decades and home construction activity is 24 percent slower than it was last year.
At the sprawling General Motors Corp. assembly plant in suburban Arlington, Texas 900 of the facility's 4,500 employees will be laid off on Jan. 4. (In early 1980, 2,000 of those employees were furloughed for three months.)
"We've gone along for so long saying the economic slump will never get to our area because we're blessed with such a robust economy," says Arlington Mayor S.J. Stovall. "But it is finally affecting us."

Natural gas for autos should be explored

One plan to get away from the gasoline crunch is the use of natural gas in autos and trucks.
Compressed natural gas is adaptable to motor vehicles; it's cheaper than gasoline, and it burns cleaner, creating less air pollution.
At the present time, in Hialeah, Fla., a natural gas firm is selling its product for 50 cents a gallon. The firm, City Gas, will help fleet owners convert their trucks or vans. Each conversion costs about $1,200, but many drivers could make up that amount in fuel savings over three years.
Natural gas also can save money in reduced maintenance costs. A vehicle running on natural gas can go 50,000 miles between oil changes. Spark plugs last up to 100,000 miles, and mufflers and exhaust systems last almost that long.
Most of the vehicles converted also can run on gasoline, and some fleet owners keep about five gallons of gasoline tanks for emergencies.

Natural gas is compressed and stored in cylinders, similar to Scuba tanks but somewhat larger. They are placed in the trunks of passenger cars and under the beds of most trucks.
City Gas officials say the best thing about natural gas is that the United States has enough prospective resources to last hundreds of years. They say if half the cars in the country were powered by natural gas, the United States could be selling oil abroad instead of importing it.
Use of natural gas is no new thing. The New Zealand government has converted some 3,000 post office vehicles, and Russia, with a wealth of untapped natural gas, has plans for 35,000 natural gas-powered vehicles.
There still are problems - the need for expensive compressors to fuel cars with natural gas and the need for more safety factors. But a fuel to reduce the use of gasoline is an idea well worth exploring.

An Uncle Sam garage sale

Two congressmen say the United States government can pick up somewhere between $30 billion and $50 billion by holding a garage sale.
Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., and Rep. Larry Winn Jr., R-Kan., introduced legislation calling on the federal government to take stock of its possessions and liquidate what is unneeded.
Among the unused goods are abandoned lighthouses, army bases, ammunition dumps, prisons, factories, post offices and airports.

These holdings are classified either as "excess," indicating they can be transferred from one agency to another, or "surplus," meaning no agency wants them.
The resolutions submitted by the congressmen seek public sale of this property with receipts used to reduce the national debt - now totaling a million dollars.
The Office of Management and Budget is setting up a high-level staff meeting to discuss the matter. Sale should be approved. Uncle Sam's garage needs cleaning.

Mail call for Mr. Segal

By D.R. SEGAL
A while ago I talked about my problems with Amtrak, my principal complaint being it was impossible to reach them at the 800 number or by their Tinker Toy computer system. Which got me in trouble with what seems to be a legion of Amtrak fans.
John Taylor of Yuba City, Calif., has offered to buy me lunch or dinner so we can explore, together, ways of improving and preserving our rail system. Best offer all week.
Also from Yuba City, Edward L. Cline assesses my efforts as "boring."

He comments: "May I suggest to you that I cannot think of a single essay of yours that mattered a doodly-squat to anyone." I guess one of them stirred him up enough to hand - write me a three-page letter.
From Robert Swan of Long Beach, several letters about how to deal with Amtrak and get the most out of your effort.
Bonnie Hahn of Marysville, Calif., like Mr. Swan in the travel business, says she'll help me deal with Amtrak. All hands told me the new Amtrak computer system - Arrow - will solve most everything.

Erick Meisser of Diamond Bar, Calif., says he enjoys my "exercises in minutiae" (ha! Edward L. Cline) and R.W. Pollak of Costa Mesa thinks maybe I should see about having school children participate in earthquake drills similar to fire drills.
V.B. Casey of Anaheim, a press operator for 20 years, agrees with my thesis that machinery began going to pot when it got to be so delicate you couldn't hit it with a hammer.
There is also a letter from Jim holding of Costa Mesa who writes: "I understand that at least one wrighter who wrote for the register, either during or just after the war, had been locked up for subversion, during the war." The people at the Register thought maybe I was the wrighter he had in mind but my wartime experiences did not include anything as exotic as getting thrown in the slam for subversion. I spent three years in uniform where, very likely, I did much to hinder the war effort, but not on purpose.
I hesitate to mention this, but I also have a letter from R. Reagan, the man who works for the gov't. I'd put it up on the wall except I didn't send a check to the Republican Party, as he asked, and so I guess I have no right to pretend we're good buddies. I wish, sometimes, I weren't so ethical.

Sun belt is not immune

The United States may be the first country to pay people for being poor - creating a class of professional poverty victims who pass their calling from generation to generation.
This one of the insights of George Gilder, author of "Wealth and Poverty," which expounds the orthodoxies that have dominated U.S. thought and policy on social and economic problems, and how to handle them, for many decades.
Social welfare spending from 1964 when the "War on Poverty" began has grown from $77 billion to more than $400 billion a year. Direct public aid has grown from $6 billion to more than $60 billion. Housing, food stamps, medical care and others phases of the endless and seemingly no-win "war" have cost more than a trillion dollars.
During the 1970s, Gilder observed, 44 welfare programs increased two and a half times faster than the Gross National Product, three times faster than wages. By 1979 the government was spending $18,000 a year to support the average welfare family of four. By now the emphasis was not on breaking the poverty cycle but on "out reach" - getting the most benefits possible for as many programs as possible. These programs, Gilder says, have surprisingly little beneficial effect, but they do have a dramatic negative impact on motivation and self-reliance.
A subtle undercurrent of racism is involved. As Gilder explains it, "The prevailing expressed opinion is that racism and discrimination still explain the low income of blacks.

This position is at once false and invidious. Not only does it encourage by its essential incredibility the alternate falsehood that blacks cannot make it in America without vast federal assistance, without, indeed, the very government programs that in fact account for the worst aspects of black poverty and promise to perpetuate it.
Gilder asserts: "The poor choose leisure not because of moral weakness but because they are paid to do so."
Is there a way out? Gilder believes that there is. It requires escaping from the chains of the welfare state with its penalizing of ingenuity, creativity and productivity.
Growing numbers of Americans seem to agree with Gilder's belief that the "attempt of the welfare state to deny, suppress and plan away the dangers and uncertainties of our lives - to domesticate the inevitable unknown - violates not only the spirit of capitalism but the nature of man."
Gilder pictures an alternative: "A society ruled by risk and freedom rather than by rational calculus, a society open to the future rather than planning it, can call forth an endless stream of invention, enterprise and art."
The proof? The story of the thriving, growing, amazing United States of America before it blundered into the swamp of distributionist stagnation.
Gilder is one of the growing number of Americans who think this country's greatness lies in the future, not the past, if it lives by the values that made it flourish.

About Poland

BY PAUL HARVEY
President Reagan is criticized from some quarters for not taking "a stronger stand" on Poland.
It's easy at times like this, confronted with a situation like this, to think with our emotions instead of our intellects.
The President has messaged support for the people of Poland in every way he can.
He has denounced their Communist government, has cut off its bank credit, its fishing rights, its airline rights.
The President has condemned the Soviet Union for its part in Poland's problems, calling the Soviet, "a force of tyranny."
Our President messaged Soviet President Brezhnev that Moscow will be made to pay for outrages committed under martial law in Poland.
Last Christmas Eve our President led us in burning candles in windows as beacons of support for Solidarity, the Polish trade union.
What more would the critics have us do?
We have to be very careful that we are not led more by politics than by principle lest we hypocritically react more when it's Poland and less when it's Afghanistan.
Why doesn't the U.N. "do something about Poland"?
In the first place, the toothless U.N. was unable even to do anything about Vietnam.

But in this instance, outgoing U.N. President Kurt Waldheim explains an internal matter.
Of course, that's the way Moscow sees it.
Moscow has been accusing the United States of an unscrupulous propaganda campaign, fanning the fire, prodding Poles to kill one another.
A consideration that few Americans stop to look at during a time of knee-jerk indignation is this: if any union or unions in the United States tried to take over the United States, we, too, would call out the troops.
The Warsaw government insists it can do no less and has done no more.
History is a source of some encouragement.
Twenty-five Christmases ago there was a comparable cataclysm.
Hungary's Janos Kadar was reviled as "a Soviet stooge."
Backed by Soviet tanks with ruthless efficiency, Kadar crushed the "freedom fighters" of Hungary.
But in the years since he has become a Hungarian national hero and Hungary has become a Soviet bloc showpiece of stability, tranquility and prosperity.
Our president's responses are carefully premeditated not to worsen the situation they are designed to improve.

Dear Abby

Moon-mad reader is going through a phase

By-Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think this plea for help is crazy. This problem is very real to me. No matter what the experts say, I really believe that the moon in its full phase adversely affects me. I've read about "moon madness" — and the theory is that a full moon affects one's mind. I believe it is true because whenever a full moon approaches, I feel it's at its peak and immediately after, I can't seem to control my temper, and I really get crazy!

Abby, I am convinced that a full moon affects my mind. I wonder if other people have had this experience.

LOONY IN L.A.

DEAR LOONY: "Loony" is slang for "lunatic," which translates into "made crazy by the moon." For centuries man has theorized that the phases of the moon affect one's mind, moods and behavior. Although there is no scientific evidence to support this age-old theory, those who are convinced that it's true can be physically affected to the point of looniness.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 20-year-old college student who is currently seeing a girl about twice a week. (I'll call her Cindy.)

However, Cindy has a close friend, Amy, whom I would like to date. Amy's been sending me subtle messages that lead me to believe that she would like to go out with me. My question is this: If I were to ask Amy out, do you think she'd keep her mouth shut, or do you think she'd tell Cindy? Cindy is very possessive. If she knew I saw Amy she would drop me, and I really don't want to stop seeing Cindy. How much do girlfriends tell each other? I would really like to see both of them, but I don't want to start in with Amy if there's a chance she'd tell Cindy. Please advise.

DON'T USE MY NAME

DEAR DON'T: From what you tell me about your relationship with Cindy, you've led her to believe that you are far more loyal than you really are. Don't play around with Amy. If you're out to get something from each, you're apt to end up with nothing from both.

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote that her fiance refused to have sex with her until after they were married. You told her how "lucky" she was. I have been thinking about that ever since, and want to tell you my experience. I was a divorcee making plans to marry. I thought I was lucky because he didn't persist when I said I wanted to wait until marriage.

After we were married I understood why he could be so "patient." Once or twice a year was enough for him. I was 36 when we were married, and it was a terrible shock and disappointment to me.

Now that we are in our 50s there is nothing at all. We have spent much time and money on therapy and counseling, but to no avail. I feel cheated. My personality has changed, and I feel like a vegetable. Nothing could be worse than living this way.

If I were that woman, I would insist on knowing her fiance sexually before marriage. Sign me...

I don't know how a car knows when you're ready to sell it... but it knows.

We bought a four-wheel drive about seven years ago and there is nothing you can say to me that will convince me that car didn't understand every word we said.

A lot of marriages between new cars and owners are made in heaven. Maybe that's why we couldn't get parts. The honeymoon lasted exactly three hours. Then the light knob fell off in our hand, the rear window went down automatically and stayed there, and floor burnt our feet up.

We didn't talk - in front of the car for almost a year. Then one day my husband said, "Maybe we should trade in this clunker while it is still running."

We climbed in the car and the motor refused to turn over.

After we bought the new battery, we figured we might as well use up our investment. So we hung in there until seven months later when my husband said, "As long as we've got the original tires, we might as well turn it in." At that precise moment, the left rear tire expired.

With four new tires, the car bought itself another year of residency. It was not ready to let us go. The least little thing could set it off. One day I just got out the side of the car in a parking lot and remarked what a good-looking compact was parked next to us. Our car would not go into reverse and we had it towed to a garage where they duly recorded on our bill, "Stubbornness: $65."

We never knew why the transmission went out suddenly the way it did. We had been very discreet in

Olivia enjoys life at home

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Some musicians and singers want to be touring and cutting records all the time. Others are happy taking time off.

Olivia Newton-John is one of the latter. She has a new album, "Physical," on MCA Records. The single, "Physical," is No. 26 and climbing on the best-selling chart of Oct. 24.

She says, "It has been two years, maybe three, I think, since I made an album. The 'Xanadu' album was after it but that wasn't strictly mine."

"I knew I was supposed to have done an album last year but I didn't do it. So this year I knew I had to do one. We started in March and it took a while, partly because the producer, John Farrar, was doing his own album."

"I haven't toured for three years now. I didn't feel like I wanted to. I don't miss it yet. I'm very fortunate I don't have to tour. I appreciate that."

"It's fun once you get going. But I've been having such a nice time being at home, I didn't want to leave for a length of time."

She lives on a small ranch near Malibu, Calif., and has five horses, eight dogs and a cat.

She wrote one song on the new album, "The Promise," subtitled "The Dolphin Song," to state her belief that dolphins shouldn't be caught in tuna nets and killed, in fact that man shouldn't destroy other species.

On an enjoyable day at home, Miss Newton-John says, she likes to make breakfast and take it back to bed with the newspaper. She swims, then deals with mail and phone calls. Then she rides, checks her property, picks fruit and generally putters around. Then she'll visit a friend or have someone over.

Choosing songs for an album, Miss Newton-John says, is a matter of listening to hundreds of tapes. "You usually end up with friends. You ring up friends and ask if they've written anything." The new album is her most rock oriented, to give the singer a change of pace.

John Farrar wrote or co-wrote five of the 10 songs on "Physical." Miss Newton-John says, "He has written most of my hits, 'You're the One That I Want,' 'Hopelessly Devoted to You,' 'Magic,' 'A Little More Love.'" She says that "You're the One That I Want" probably has been her biggest hit.

Miss Newton-John was born in Cambridge, England, and was 5 when her family moved to Australia. She thinks of herself as Australian and, she says, when she saw the movies "Breaker Morant" and "Gallipoli," she walked out saying proudly to herself, "I'm an Aussie."

She says, "I'm supposed to do a movie in Australia next year, a straight drama, based on a book D. H. Lawrence wrote when he was living in Australia."

Miss Newton-John's recording career started in England. She toured, early on, with Cliff Richard and became a regular on his TV show. She won her first Grammy Award in 1973. But her big career leap forward was starring in the movie "Grease."

"All I knew was I got sent a script," she says. "I did have an agent, but this came about another way. It happens like that sometimes. John Travolta now tells me he was plugging for me from the beginning, thinking I was a perfect Sandy."

"I thought John was going to be a big star. 'Saturday Night Fever' was not out yet, then, I saw he had charisma and knew he was going to make it. Acting was a big step for me. I'm glad I took it."

"But when I do something new, I'm a nervous wreck until it comes out. It was a year after we finished that film until it came out. It was a long wait." Both she and Travolta are scheduled for cameo parts in "Grease II."

Miss Newton-John also was in the movie "Xanadu." She says, "Cliff Richard and I did a duet, 'Suddenly,' on the soundtrack. He wasn't in the film. We had to think of someone for that song. He was my first choice. Since he gave me my start in England, really, it was nice to say to him that I was doing a movie over here and would he like to sing on the record. It was great."

She sang "You're the One That I Want" with Travolta and "I Can't Help It" with Andy Gibb.

"We did a big concert for UNICEF, where artists donated their royalties. Someone on the production staff for UNICEF suggested we sing that song that Barry Gibb wrote. We were both on the show. Then the record company said why didn't we record it. Andy was doing a new album and asked me down to Miami to record it with him. I didn't have an album currently."

Miss Newton-John adds, "There are a few people I would like to sing with, but I shouldn't name names. You might offend other singers. If I found the right song, I might ask somebody to sing it with me."

The singer doesn't have a fan club. She says, "When the kids write to me, wanting to send money and get a picture, I tell them to give money to a wildlife park or some organization helping endangered species."

One fan, Gina Moradi, has made a horse of brass for Miss Newton-John. She says, "It's touching. She won two talent contests singing my songs. Without knowing this girl, I'd figured in her life."

"You tend to forget. I think of myself as a regular person. I influence some lives some way. It is a bit awe-inspiring. You do realize what an importance what you do has on other people. You have to keep it in perspective. If you're too concerned about that, you won't live your life like you ought to, either."

Asked about the possibility of marriage, the singer says, "I've waited because I don't want to make a mistake. I guess it hasn't been right up to now, or I would have done it. I'm torn between the traditional idea that marriage is right and the new idea that it is not important in today's society."

"Commitment is hard in this society, too. It's a throw-away society. If something isn't easy, we can't be bothered. We'd rather give it up than suffer."

"Ideally, I would like to get married. I would like it to be for keeps."

During the 1800s, tightly laced corsets were a sign of affluence. Only the woman of leisure could wear the contraptions — they were so restrictive she couldn't bend at the waist and had to sit stiffly erect and take small steps when she walked.

New lunch favorite: BLP

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

The basic lunch counter favorite, the BLT (bacon-lettuce-tomato sandwich) is getting a run for its money from the BLP (bacon-lettuce-pear). This is a West Coast version of the standard using pear slices rather than tomato.

Those on the West Coast are most inventive when it comes to the use of fruits in cooking, in salads and sandwiches.

This is one to try. You'll be surprised at the pleasing taste the combination makes.

- BLP SANDWICH
- 1 fresh or canned Bartlett pear
  - 4 slices hot, buttered toast
  - Lettuces leaves
  - 5 slices crisply-cooked bacon
  - Dijon mustard

Core and slice pear or drain canned pear. To assemble sandwiches, top 2 slices of toast with lettuce leaves, bacon and pear slices. Top with remaining toast slices. If desired, decorative wooden picks may be used to secure sandwiches. Cut each sandwich into quarters. Serve with mustard. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 2 sandwiches.

Dr. Lamb

Troubled by sweating

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — It may seem like winter to you but it is summer all year around for me. I seem to perspire so much more since I've gotten older and I have a terrible odor under my arms. I have used every deodorant on the market but nothing helps. I asked my doctor and all he said was, "Have you tried Right Guard?" Someone said it could be medicine but I only take vitamins with iron. I also wear polyester blouses. Could this cause it?

DEAR READER — You would be surprised at the large number of letters I get asking about sweating and the often associated body odor. Some people have sweating so bad they have to shake hands with others or to dance. You are not as unusual as you think.

About the odor. Most sweat is really odorless until it is acted upon by bacteria. People naturally think that if they bathe frequently that they can get rid of the odor but it isn't that simple. The bacteria that cause the problem live within the layers of the skin. Most soap will not penetrate the skin so the bacteria live on.

The solution to this problem is to have your doctor give you a prescription for a pHisofex solution. You can use it as you do soap. After several days it will penetrate the skin and start getting rid of those beneath-the-surface bacteria. You will still have perspiration but the odor problem will begin to disappear.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 18-2, Sweating, Antiperspirants and Deodorants, for more details. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Excess sweating can often be controlled. Most antiperspirants you can buy have the same ingredients these days. Sometimes the same medicines used to decrease stomach acid help prevent sweating, such as Pro-Banthine or Prantal. You can use them on a short-term basis if you have an important social engagement.

In severe cases surgery can be done. The nerves can be cut out the sweating area or in some instances doctors have surgically removed the axillary hair area to control sweating there. Yes, synthetic clothing tends to trap moisture and make matters worse.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would appreciate some information about a tumor called a lipoma. My doctor says a lump I asked him about is a lipoma and he does not recommend surgery. He said it could be removed, but taking them out was sometimes difficult and they were usually benign. Why do such tumors form? Will they change at all over a long period of time? I have had this tumor for at least 20 years. It is just below my left rib cage, forming a lump that resembles a roll of fat between the rib and my natural waistline. I have absolutely no pain from it.

DEAR READER — These tumors are extremely common. They may be difficult to distinguish from normal fat tissue. The tumor is commonly encapsulated in a thin membrane and can be shelled out of the normal fat tissue. When you do that you may leave a depression — which is fine if it is not in an area that disturbs you cosmetically. They are benign and since you have had yours for 20 years plus it is not likely to cause you a problem. Like all other tumors no one really knows just why they develop.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS

Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

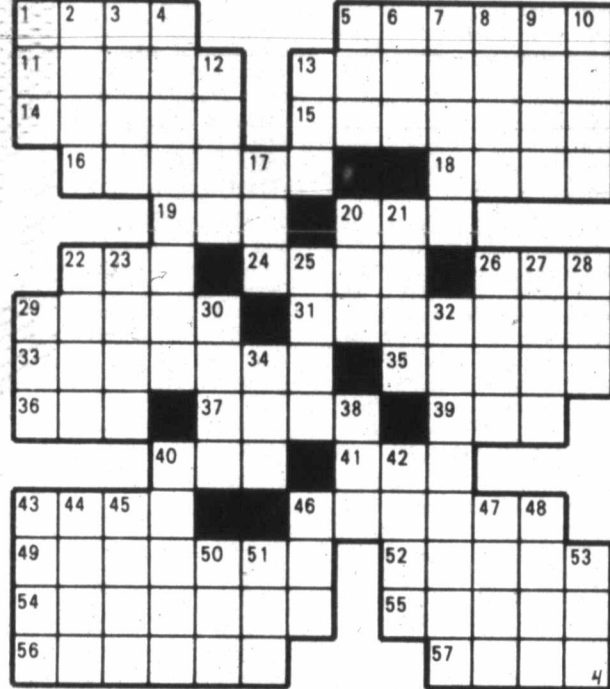

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals...call for in-Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Bengals, 49ers hang on for tough playoff wins

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Here's a tip on the National Football League playoffs. If the current pattern holds, the teams that score first will win next Sunday's championship games between the Cincinnati Bengals and San Diego Chargers in the American Conference and Dallas Cowboys and San Francisco 49ers in the National.

The first touchdown has been the tipoff to the eventual winner throughout the first six playoff contests — two wild-card games a week ago and four conference showdowns over the weekend.

Sometimes, though, it's not always a sure thing. Cincinnati blew an early two-touchdown lead against Buffalo Sunday, but recovered behind some pinpoint passing by Ken Anderson to beat the Bills 28-21.

San Francisco raced to a 24-7 lead behind quarterback Joe Montana against the Giants Sunday and then came within 4 yards of blowing all of that edge before recovering for a 38-24 victory.

The prime example, though, was the Chargers, who scored 24 points before the first quarter was over against Miami Saturday and barely survived with an exhausting 41-38 overtime victory on Rolf Benirschke's second-chance 29-yard field goal.

Dallas had no such problem. The Cowboys not only scored the first points, they scored all the points in a 38-0 wipeout Saturday of Tampa Bay.

So now San Diego and Cincinnati in the AFC and Dallas and San Francisco in the NFC are all one step away from Super Bowl XVI set for Jan. 24 in Pontiac, Mich. Three of those teams learned, however, that this road can get slippery sometimes.

Cincinnati, before the first period was over, had a 14-0 lead and it seemed Anderson and Company could do nothing wrong. But Joe Ferguson brought the Bills back on a couple of TD runs by Joe Cribbs and when he hit Jerry Butler for a 21-yard TD on the first play of the fourth quarter, it tied the score at 21. Anderson came right back with a 16-yard TD pitch to Cris Collinsworth and Ferguson, stripped of his main offensive weapons when both Cribbs and Roosevelt Leaks went out with injuries, couldn't rally the Bills again. A delay of game penalty stalled a Buffalo drive in the final three minutes and helped seal the Bengals' victory.

"The feeling is kind of beyond description," said Anderson, an 11-year veteran who threw for 169 yards and led the Bengals into the title game for the first time. "We are not really surprised that we're here. We thought we had a good team from the start."

"The reason we are where we are is No. 14 (Anderson)," said Coach Forrest Gregg, crediting the NFL's top-rated passer with Cincinnati's reversal from a 6-10 record last season.

Montana's 58-yard TD pass to Freddie Solomon was part of a 17-point San Francisco explosion within 4½ minutes of the second period that opened a 24-7 lead and seemed to bury the Giants. But the 49ers almost let New York off the hook.

The lead had dwindled to 24-17 by the third quarter and Scott Brunner, who threw three TD passes in the game, marched the Giants to the 4-yard line. But the drive stalled when Eric Wright stripped the ball from receiver Earnest Gray at the goal line. Joe Danelo then missed a 21-yard field goal try and the 49ers recovered.

Bill Ring climaxed a San Francisco drive with a 3-yard score and Ronnie Lott returned an interception 20 yards for another wrapup TD as the 49ers finished off the Giants.

Montana finished with 20 of 31 for 304 yards. Solomon caught six for 107 yards and Dwight Clark grabbed five for 104.

The 49ers, like the Bengals, were 6-10 last season and, also like Cincinnati, posted the best record in their conference this season, clinching the host role for the championship game.

The victory over the Giants came in San Francisco's first playoff contest since 1972.

The Chargers also looked like a sure thing against the Dolphins, racing to that big first quarter lead. But Don Strock came off the bench and brought Miami back. By the fourth quarter, the Dolphins had a 38-31 lead.

But San Diego wouldn't quit. Dan Fouts' third TD pass of the game, this one to James Brooks in the final minute, tied it again, setting the stage for some place kicking dramatics that left just about everyone in the Orange Bowl wiped out.

First Miami's Uwe von Schamann had a 49-yard field goal attempt blocked at the end of regulation time. Then San Diego's Benirschke missed a 27-yard attempt. Now it was von Schamann's turn again, and this time the Chargers blocked a 34-yard try. That put it back in Benirschke's lap and this time, the San Diego kicker connected.

Fouts, who set playoff records with 53 passes and 33 completions for 433 yards, promised Benirschke another chance after he had missed his first try in the extra period.

"You play this game until it's over," the quarterback said. "I just told him he was going to get one more chance."

"There was no way in the world he was going to miss two," Charger Coach Don Coryell said of Benirschke.

He didn't. Dallas, in its romp over Tampa Bay, was playing its 30th postseason game, a record, and handled the Bucs easily with a defense that bordered on awesome.

The Cowboys intercepted quarterback Doug Williams four times, three of the thefts leading to touchdowns. They also sacked him four times and pressured him into two intentional grounding penalties, completely dominating the Bucs.

The victory by San Francisco Sunday set up a rematch for Dallas, which lost to the 49ers 45-14 early in the season. Tony Dorsett was happy about playing them again.

"The 49ers humiliated us earlier in the year and we owe them one," he said.

Cowboys ready for 49ers 'payback'

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys figured they would be going back to Candlestick Park, the site of a 45-14 humiliation Oct. 11.

The San Francisco 49ers assured themselves of the homefield advantage in the National Conference title game Sunday with a workmanlike 38-24 thumping of the New York Giants.

"You had to figure the 49ers would win playing at home and all," said Dallas linebacker D.D. Lewis.

"Now, we've got to go back to California and that bad field."

"That's OK. We seem to play our best when we owe a team something and we certainly owe the 49ers a payback."

Dallas qualified for its 10th

NFC title game Saturday with a 38-0 rout of Tampa Bay in Texas Stadium.

The Cowboys had hoped for a Giant upset so they would get the homefield in the championship game.

"It would have been sweet," said Lewis.

"The field is treacherous but we've just got to get it out of our minds," said Lewis.

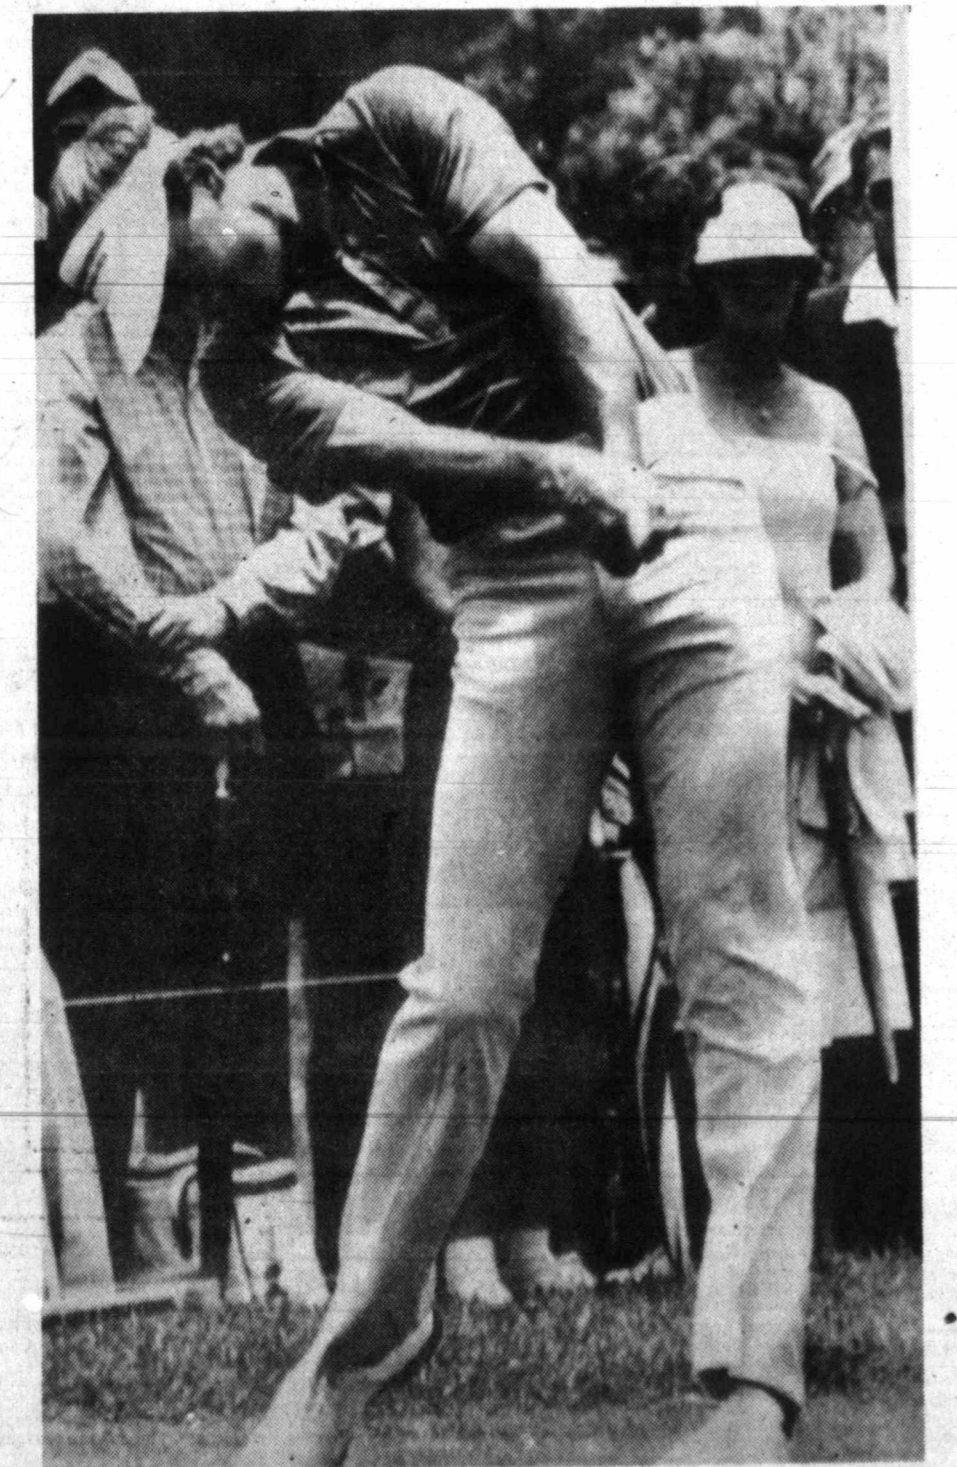

"The field didn't beat us the last time. We just flat weren't ready to play."

The Cowboys came on strong in the second half of the season after the 49er thrashing.

"The 49ers humiliated us earlier in the year and we owe them one," said tailback Tony Dorsett.

Dallas' defense devastated Buccaneer quarterback Doug Williams, who suffered four interceptions and four sacks.

Twice he grounded the ball and completed only 10 of 29 passes for 187 yards.

PUSHING FOR A SCORE. Cincinnati Bengals running back Charles Alexander (40) pushes ahead to score on a 20-yard gain against the Buffalo Bills in Cincinnati Sunday. Alexander scored two touchdowns as the Bengals won the AFC semifinal round playoff game 28-21. Bills defender Steve Freeman (22) moves in to tackle a teammate.

'Gridiron TVitis' takes its toll on football households

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Millions of people returned to the drudgery of every day existence Monday — countenances glazed, eyes looking like a road map, all mumbling in tongues of the devils, spewing strange words such as "blitz," "shotgun," "power I" and "Oh, them Dawgs."

Don't be alarmed. They haven't been mesmerized by an invasion from outer space. They're suffering a common American malady for this time of year — "gridiron TVitis."

It's contagious, and can be catastrophic. It's been known to break up happy households, send distraught mothers to institutions, make kids run away from home and otherwise turn normal, peace-loving individuals into raving, storming maniacs.

Mostly, and fortunately, though, it goes away after about 24 hours even without taking two aspirin and going to bed.

It so happens that this year, because New Year's Day fell on a Friday, we got such a heavy exposure to the infection in such a short space of time that recovery in most cases did not come so easily.

Look at what we were subjected to.

New Year's Eve: Three college bowl games, the Hall of Fame at Birmingham; the Peach at Atlanta; the Bluebonnet at Houston.

New Year's Day: Five more college bowls, all of major significance, the Fiesta at Tempe, Ariz.; the Orange at Miami; the Sugar at New Orleans; the Cotton at Dallas and the Rose at Pasadena.

This was followed by two National Football League games on Saturday and two more on Sunday.

Thus, an almost non-stop run on the big tube from late Thursday through Sunday afternoon — 72 hours of almost solid plunging, passing, kicking and body bumping, not to mention second-guessing — with hardly time for a paper plate washed down by handy six-packs of beer. But poor pop. He'll hardly get the glassiness removed from his eyes before he's back in his favorite chair again, cheering for his favorite team in the NFL league championship games Sunday and gridding for the piece de resistance two weeks later — the Super Bowl.

He has one consolation. All the hoopla of the college bowls is over, so now he can devote himself entirely to the equally passionate but less frenzied pursuit of an accepted national pro champion.

The colleges, which generate more enthusiasm than the pros, haven't worked out a scheme to do likewise. Some think this is good. Others think it is bad. Let the pros do it their way. Let the colleges continue the aged bowl tradition which doesn't always produce an accepted champion. It gives us a year-end of madness with people running around with their forefingers stuck in the air like a Chief Little, screaming "We No. 1."

This year there will perhaps less dispute between the Clemson Tigers. No. 1 the basis of the only record among major teams beat a powerful Nebraska team in the Orange Bowl.

22-15.

Miller wins top check in golf history

SUN CITY, Bophuthatswana (AP) — Johnny Miller took a look at the biggest prize in the history of golf, a $500,000 check, and offered a weary smile.

"Doing it this way is pretty close to earning it," Miller said after he'd struggled over seven hours and 27 holes Sunday — the last nine a sudden death playoff with Steve Ballesteros — before winning the Sun City Golf Challenge, the game's first $1-million event.

"I've got a little confession to make," he said. "When we were coming up to that last hole, I was hoping they'd come out and call it all even and split the money."

"Nobody deserved to lose that playoff."

But Ballesteros, a 24-year-old Spaniard who had led or shared the lead all the way, eventually lost it, 3-putting for a bogey from 50 feet while Miller made a routine par.

Then they went to the playoff, beginning on the par-3 16th hole. And it very nearly ended there. Miller hit to about four feet but faced a difficult, breaking putt.

Ballesteros responded with a magnificent shot that missed being an ace by six inches. Both made birdies.

Then they reeled off a string of seven consecutive pars in one of the game's great shootouts before Ballesteros finally made the mistake that let Miller claim the half-million dollar prize.

Jack Nicklaus just missed making it a three-man playoff. After making birdie on four of five holes on the back, he came to the 72nd hole needing only a par to join them. But he missed the green, chipped three-four feet past the hole and missed the comeback putt as an astonished gasp rose from the massed, mixed-race gallery.

Nicklaus finished with a 69 on the bright, sunny day and a 278 total. He won $130,000.

Lee Trevino and host Gary Player, the only others in the invitational five-man field weren't in the chase after second round. Trevino he closing 70 and a 289 total won $110,000.

Mail delivery enters electronic age

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service, ignoring opposition from the Justice Department, is going ahead with a new electronic mail service in which businesses can have computerized bills and messages delivered with the regular mail.

The Electronic Computer Originated Mail service will allow large-volume mailers to bypass traditional handling methods in which a letter is sorted by various postal clerks between the sender and the receiver.

Under the service starting today, a company's computer will send a message via a communications common carrier — such as long-distance telephone — to one of 25 specially equipped post offices around the country.

There, the message will be printed on paper, put in a distinctive blue-and-white E-COM envelope and delivered with regular mail.

The service is for those who send 200 or more computer-originated messages at one time. The Postal Service promises delivery within two business days.

The Justice Department asked for a restraining order to block the service New Year's Eve, but a federal court refused. The Justice Department contended the E-COM service threatens to divert taxpayer's money to subsidize a new service.

"Barring a court decision to the contrary, we intend to begin offering the service as we have planned," Postal Service spokesman Ron Powell said Sunday evening.

E-COM is the Postal Service's largest effort to harness computer technology to move the mail. The service is designed for first-class mail sent by businesses, which comprises the largest portion of mail volume.

The Postal Service expects a first-year volume of at least 20 million pieces, said Karen Uemoto, director of E-COM operations. Eventually, up to 500 million pieces of mail per year could move through the service, she said. That still would be less than 1 percent of the 60 billion pieces of first-class mail the service handled last year.

So far, 123 companies have asked for Postal Service certification to use E-COM. Powell said. These include such large firms as Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith, Inc., Shell Oil Co. and General Tire and Rubber Co.

Five telecommunications carriers have signed agreements with the Postal Service to provide the link between companies' computers and the Postal Service.

Businesses that want to use E-COM are required to pay a $50 annual fee plus 26 cents for the first page and five cents for the second page of a message. They will have to pay the common carrier separately. The Postal Service expects that to add between a penny and a dime to the cost of each transmission.

Millionaire wants job

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Like many other unemployed people trying to track down work, Paul Smolak resolved on New Year's Eve to find a job — even though he's a millionaire, set to receive $50,000 every July for the next 20 years courtesy of the Pennsylvania Lottery.

"I've been looking everywhere. But you know things are off when some places will take applications for one hour once a week," said Smolak, 31, who was laid off indefinitely in August from his job delivering beer.

"I'm not a brain surgeon or anything, but I've had two years of college," he said in an interview Sunday. "All I want is to make a living and be in a retirement fund."

Smolak, who lives with his parents in Creighton, just northeast of Pittsburgh, was laid off six weeks after coming up a big winner in the lottery. Although he had worked at the distributor for about five years, he had the least seniority.

"I felt bad about it (the layoff)," he said. "I've been laid off at all the companies I've been with. I've always been the last in and the first out."

The lottery payoff was a stroke of good luck. Smolak admits, but it occasionally worked against him during job interviews.

"Some of them know (about the winnings), and some of them don't," he said. "Some of the places I've gone, people look at me kind of funny."

Smolak, who is single, never considered an early retirement, even after he won last July 10.

U.S. hopeful of breakthrough in Namibia

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an era of heightening global tensions, one bright spot for the Reagan administration is the prospect that a painstaking U.S.-led effort to promote peace and stability in southern Africa finally may bear fruit in 1982.

If all goes well, American officials now can foresee an end to long years of warfare and colonial rule in the area, an easing of racial tensions and the removal of southern Africa from the arena of East-West competition.

The process has involved an extraordinarily complex diplomatic effort to bring about black majority rule and independence in the South African-controlled territory of Namibia and a related effort to induce the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola, Namibia's northern neighbor.

Participating in the effort have been the United Nations, the United States and four allied countries and a host of African nations with a stake in the outcome.

But the main actors have been South Africa and the United States, specifically President Reagan's assistant secretary of state for African affairs, Chester Crocker.

South Africa continues to administer Namibia, also known as South-West Africa, in defiance of U.N. resolutions. The counter-insurgency war South Africa has been waging against black nationalist Namibian guerrillas has spilled over into Angola, the principal base of operations for the insurgents.

Angola says the 15,000 to 20,000 Cuban troops deployed there are needed to help protect the country against South African raids. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. sees the Cuban presence as an indirect bid by the Soviet Union for influence in the area.
