Military attache killed outside Paris apartment

PARIS (AP) — An assistant U.S. military attache, Lt. Col. Charles Robert Ray, 43, was killed outside his Paris apartment today by a waiting gunman who fired a single shot into his head, police said.

The new U.S. ambassador to France, Evan Griffith Galbraith, issued a statement saying he was "revolted by the news of Colonel Ray's cold-blooded murder."

"Just think what these cowards have done to his family."

In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "we strongly deplore" Ray's slaying, calling it "a tragic outcome of the spread of terrorism throughout the world."

Police said Ray left his house in civilian clothes, crossed the street and walked in front of the Italian Consulate toward his car on the Boulevard Emile Augier in the fashionable 16th District.

The attacker came from the opposite direction, shot Ray once in the head, and fled on foot, police said.

Police Commissioner Marcel Leclerc told reporters at the scene that Ray died instantly.

The U.S. Embassy said Ray, married and the father of two teen-age children, had been a U.S. Army attache since mid-1980.

The Rev. Keith Ramey, a Roman Catholic priest who described himself as "the best of friends" with the Ray family, said Ray's distraught wife, Sharon, called him at 5 a.m. EST in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where he was vacationing. Ramey identified the couple's children as Julie, 17, and Mark, 15.

Last Nov. 12, an unidentified gunman emptied a semi-automatic pistol at U.S. Charge d'Affaires Christian Chapman as he walked to his car from his Paris apartment. Chapman ducked behind the car and escaped unharmed. The attacker was never found.

Police sources said there was very little evidence to help trace Ray's killer, but they noted the similarity with the attack on Chapman, also by a lone gunman with a similar weapon.

Authorities were questioning at least one witness who reported hearing a shot and then seeing a man run away.

President Francois Mitterrand, in an official telegram to Galbraith, expressed his sorrow and said he was asking the government to take all possible steps to try to solve the killing.

The attack came only a few hours before Galbraith and Mitterrand were scheduled to lunch together at the Elysee Palace. The subject of the security of Embassy personnel was expected to be discussed. An Embassy spokesman said the meeting took place as scheduled.

When Chapman was attacked in November, French sources said the Embassy had received threats after U.S. Navy jetfighters shot down two Soviet-made Libyan air force warplanes that opened fire on them last Aug. 19 over the disputed Gulf of Sidra off the Libyan coast.

Chapman would not confirm the threats or reports that he had declined extra protection.

All victims but one died of crash impact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Divers have recovered the bodies of more than half the people on the Air Florida jetliner that crashed into the ice-filled Potomac River and autopsies show all but one of them died from the impact of the crash rather than drowning.

Autopsies on the 46 bodies raised speculation that the drowning victim, Arland D. Williams of Atlanta, could be the man who sacrificed himself during rescue efforts by helping five other victims onto a line dropped by a hovering helicopter.

That speculation was shared by some federal and local investigators, said a federal source who asked not to be identified.

Dr. Brian Blackburn, chief deputy coroner for the District of Columbia, said Williams died from exposure and drowning.

Blackburn told reporters the possibility that Williams was the unknown hero would be pursued, although there is no definitive evidence he was the one who sank into the frigid waters before the helicopter could return to get him.

His body was among the eight recovered Friday and it was reported at the time that all eight had been strapped in their seats. However, that report could not be confirmed Sunday night after the autopsy reports raised the possibility he could have been the middle-age, balding man described by the crew of the U.S. Park Police rescue helicopter.

Paramedic Gene Windsor, who said he was within 10 or 15 feet of the mystery man, said he had a heavy mustache and silver hair above his ears. Williams had a silver beard and mustache and silver hair over his ears.

Park Police officials say they will make every effort to make a positive identification of the man, but have instructed Windsor and the helicopter pilot not to cooperate directly with the news media in attempting to identify him by viewing file photographs shown them by news organizations.

There was no indication whether the five survivors who were in the water beside the man have been asked for their recollection of him.

Bitter cold — the high was 10 degrees — and strong winds kept the salvage operation to a crawl Sunday, although authorities said the 46th body was found before diving was halted because of the weather.

Divers also placed rigging around the tail section of the plane, which holds the recorders that investigators hope will provide clues as to why the jet crashed Wednesday, killing 78 people, including four on the bridge the plane hit.

Francis McAdams, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board, said efforts would be made today to raise the tail section, which already has been cleared of bodies. He said the flight recorders would be taken to the NTSB laboratory for analysis within hours after they are recovered.

Weather

The forecast calls for fair conditions today through Tuesday with high temperatures reaching the mid 60s. Winds will be 15-20 mph and gusting both days. The high for Sunday reached 61 degrees with the low recorded at 22 degrees.

pit opened by heavy earth-moving machinery. The well blew out last Oct. 4 and was recapped by Cudd Pressure Control on Oct. 30. On Nov. 3, the well blew again and earth moving crews have been digging since to find the surface pipe which dropped in the blow-out. The well was producing at 18,000 feet when the blow-out occurred. An Apache

Polish primate agrees to act as mediator

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — In his third public attack on the martial law regime, Poland's Roman Catholic primate accused it of making more arrests and appealed again for negotiations to end the crisis.

"Brothers of the broken nation," Archbishop Jozef Glemp cried in St. Andrew's Church in Warsaw, "get together, for we have to defend ourselves by ourselves, because no one is going to help us!"

"But to do this we need a climate of cooperation, and for that we need dialogue. The authorities should try to win people."

Renewing his earlier offer to mediate between the government and the independent labor union Solidarity, he recalled a monument to workers shot during the 1970 food price riots in the Baltic city of Elblag, a large rock broken in two with a cross joining the halves.

"Today, we still have before our eyes this broken stone," Glemp said. "We still can get together. The church wants to be in the middle — just like this cross connecting the broken parts."

In its press review today, the official PAP news agency quoted the daily newspaper Rzeczpospolita as saying cooperation between the church and the state "is of basic importance."

It said the church's "important social role" is "largely connected with action toward normalization of social moods, and cooperation in creating a climate in which the common and even the most difficult problems will be solved through persuasion, mutual understanding and accord."

The article said the state "is still striving to assure all citizens of the freedom of conscience and faith."

"The basis for state-church cooperation is a common concern for the destiny of the Polish nation and the desire to resolve the present situation. This concern is stronger than the differences separating the state and the church. Thus, martial law has not stopped discussion of national accord between the Poles. The Roman Catholic Church and the other churches can play an important role in achieving that accord."

Glemp, renewing his earlier offer to mediate between the government and the independent labor union Solidarity, recalled a monument to workers shot during the 1970 food price riots in the Baltic city of Elblag, a large rock broken in two with a cross joining the halves.

But he said there "are still more and more people being arrested, and so many internees are waiting to be released. The circle of broken people or those being broken is spreading."

He also renewed his condemnation of forced loyalty oaths renouncing Solidarity which the government requires members of the union to sign to keep their jobs.

Many people who cannot sign the document in good conscience are being fired, he said, while others who sign do so against their true beliefs. Coercing people to sign the oaths only increases

Philippines says tanker ignored orders to halt

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government said today Philippine warplanes strafed a Japanese tanker off Mindanao island because the ship ignored orders to stop and was suspected of carrying arms and anti-government guerrillas.

Breaking a three-day silence on Friday's shooting, Foreign Minister Carlos P. Romulo said in a statement that the strafing was carried out as "a legitimate exercise of our right to protect our national security and territorial integrity."

Mindanao island is the battlefield in a nine-year-old Moslem separatist rebellion against the Philippines government.

Romulo claimed the 5,307-ton chemical tanker Hegg ignored challenges and warning shots from a Philippine naval vessel and started evasive maneuvers, prompting air force planes to attack about 10 hours after the first warning.

The Hegg's captain, Hideo Takakuwa, said unmarked propeller-driven fighters fired more than 100 shots without warning at the ship, which carried a volatile cargo of methanol, about 40 miles east of Mindanao, punching seven holes in its hull above the waterline.

One of the crewmen, a South Korean cook, was seriously wounded in the shooting, the captain said. He was reported in "fair condition" Sunday.

The vessel was not disabled and was continuing on its way to Pusan, South Korea.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Deputy Foreign Minister Manuel Collantes informed Japanese Ambassador Hideho Tanaka of the Philippine side of the incident during a meeting at the ministry today. Earlier, the Japanese Embassy had asked the ministry for information about the incident.

In Tokyo, Japan's Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa said today that government officials will question Takakuwa later this week and will ask Manila for further clarification to "learn the facts."

President Chikazo Suzuki of Kita-Nihon Oi Kaiun Co., owner of the Hegg, denied in a telephone interview that the tanker carried weapons for anti-government guerrillas.

Chinook winds blast Colorado

By ERIC KRAMER
Associate Press Writer

Winter blew viciously hot and cold as warm chinook winds gusting to 137 mph tore apart homes in Colorado, while a 10th day of a record-setting freeze wearied emergency crews in the East and Midwest and raised the death toll to 267.

Power outages forced Ohio residents to head for emergency shelters, homes near Superior, Wis., were without heat when fuel oil congealed in outdoor tanks, and water supplies were threatened in Kingston, Tenn., when intake pipes froze. Highways were slippery throughout the Midwest.

Milwaukee posted its coldest reading ever Sunday with a 26 below zero mark Sunday. In Buffalo, N.Y., it was minus 15, also the coldest January reading ever. Pittsburgh's wind-chill index plunged to 60 below.

New York City's temperature dropped to minus 1 early today, with high winds making it feel as if it were 40 below.

Firefighters watched an ice jam near Poughkeepsie, N.Y., today, fearing it might cause a flood that would sweep toxic chemicals from a destroyed dye factory into the Hudson River.

Seventeen people were injured and several homes demolished in Boulder, Colo., on Sunday when chinook winds raised the temperature 20 degrees in half an hour, ripping roofs off houses and blowing out windows, doors and walls.

Dave Peterson of Hyperion Aviation at Boulder Municipal Airport estimated 20 small planes were destroyed at a cost of $4 million.

"Planes were pulled out of their tie-downs, took off and landed by themselves," said Peterson. "Several planes flew over me and it was lucky no one got killed."

Streets were littered with foot-thick power poles, snapped like twigs by the chinooks, which were triggered by air rushing from a high-pressure center in the mountains to fill a low-pressure trough over the western Great Plains.

Don Morgan, who planned to spend the night with friends, said the wind stripped the roof from his home and dumped debris on his sleeping 14-year-old daughter.

"She was screaming and I had to run in and pull the ceiling off of her,"

blast Colorado

Morgan said "My son was sleeping on his stomach and said he thought the covers got awfully heavy all of a sudden."

Boulder City Manager Robert Westdyke said he would ask for state disaster assistance, but Gov. Robert Lamm's emergency fund has dwindled to $40,000 after weeks of severe weather.

Winds up to 100 mph were recorded in Wyoming and gusts of 70 mph reached into western Nebraska.

The continued low temperatures in the East and Midwest were just a matter of bad luck, said Sylvia Graff, a National Weather Service meteorologist in Ann Arbor, Mich. She said chunks of cold air have unexpectedly dropped from an arctic air mass in Hudson Bay, Canada, and moved south, just as the ball on a roulette wheel drops into a numbered slot.

"It is only coincidental" the cold air has come south on two successive weekends, but it could happen again, she said.

Emergency workers also had bad luck. "You don't know Saturday from Sunday or Monday or Tuesday," said Ted Patchett, a state highway employee who has worked every day for three weeks from his post near Kankakee, Ill. "You just come in and put in your 12 hours and hope there is a bar open when you get off."

"We've probably run 1,300 calls today," said Bill Benton, of the AAA in Columbus, Ohio. "It's largely stranded motorists. People don't know enough to stay home."

Portage County, Ohio, residents were forced to keep warm in a school building in Kent after a 69,000-volt line failed Sunday morning. About 12,000 Mentor residents lost electricity during the noon hour.

In Akron, Ohio, it was 22 below Sunday, the coldest ever recorded there. In Embarrass, Minn., the thermometer broke at 44 below and officials guessed it was actually eight degrees colder.

California had different problems. Fog-closed Los Angeles International Airport and Lindbergh Field in San Diego for a time Sunday.

White House: no attempt to control information

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's spokesman denied today that the White House was trying to control the flow of information to reporters.
Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes acknowledged that Chief of Staff James A. Baker had written a memorandum to try to "coordinate" appearances by administration officials on broadcast programs.
But Speakes said the White House was not trying to dictate whether or not officials could do such programs. And he said the memo did not apply to interviews with newspaper reporters.

In addition, Speakes said the public information officers of government departments and agencies were called to the White House last week for a briefing on new guidelines on talking to reporters about classified information. The guidelines were announced early last week.

Speakes said the White House wanted to clear up a misunderstanding that the rules pertained to all information when, in fact, they only pertain to classified information.

The rules state that officials who plan to discuss classified information with reporters must get prior approval and must later file a memo about the conversation.

The rules were Reagan's attempt to stem a tide of leaks.

Factory roof collapses, 10 reported dead

MOSCOW (AP) — The roof of a precision machine tool factory here collapsed during a blizzard earlier this month, and 10 workmen were killed, Soviet sources said today. Some of the victims died of exposure while trapped in the rubble, they said.

A factory spokesman, the Moscow mayor's office, police and fire officials all denied knowledge of the accident, which the sources said occurred Jan. 8. Western reporters who visited the Ordzhonikidze Machine Tool Plant site today saw the rubble from the collapsed roof and front and side walls, which had been about 70 feet high.

An area of about 150 square feet was fenced off, and workmen were still clearing debris. Twisted pieces of machinery, some of it scorched, lay in front of the plant.

BRIDGE COLLAPSE. At least 40 people drowned Sunday when a footbridge at one of the waterfalls in Brazil's southwestern Sete Quedas National Park collapsed. Rescue teams used improvised chairlifts to remove more than 1,000 people who were stranded on an island when the bridge gave way. (AP Laserphoto)

Forty dead in bridge collapse; overloading, horseplay blamed

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Horseplay, overloading and neglect were blamed today for the collapse of a suspended footbridge over one of the Sete Quedas Falls that plunged at least 40 sightseers to their death in the churning waters of the Parana River 50 feet below.
Most of the people on the narrow suspension bridge were swept away by the swift current, but seven managed to grab onto the bridge cables or rocks near the water's edge and were rescued, said army Sgt. Celio Kempf, head of one of the first rescue teams to arrive Sunday at the scene of the tragedy on the Brazil-Paraguay border about 700 miles west of Rio de Janeiro.
All of those on the bridge were believed to have been Brazilians.
"There were people fooling around, making the bridge sway. The cables broke right in the middle of the bridge and people started falling into the torrent," Kempf said in a telephone interview.

He said there were about 50 people on the bridge, and their weight may have caused the cables to snap.
"But the maintenance of the bridge was not good," he added. "That must have had some influence in the breaking of the cables."
A woman interviewed on a television newscast said she saw "some people saving themselves, others screaming, others tumbling over and over in the current."
"My son was on the bridge. Now he has disappeared," she said.
None of the bodies had been recovered by late Sunday night, said another member of the rescue team, Sgt. Durival Oliveira. He said an entire family of eight was among those swept away.
The search for victims was to continue today.
The bridge was a narrow, 100-yard-long wooden gangplank supported by overhead cables from the riverbank to one of many islands dotting the river. It was part of a chain of eight bridges connecting islands across the two-mile-wide river.

The collapse of the bridge stranded more than 1,000 other holidayers on one of the islands. The air force, the Guaira fire department and civilian volunteers worked for eight hours to remove them by helicopter and improvised chairlifts.
Sete Quedas, Portuguese for "Seven Waterfalls," is one of Brazil's best-known tourist attractions. Located just below Porto Guaira, there are actually 18 falls, the largest 100 feet high.
The falls are doomed. The world's largest hydroelectric plant will go into operation next year at the Itaipu dam farther down the Parana, and the dam's reservoir will submerge the falls by the end of the decade.

Japan doubles U.S. trade surplus

By The Associated Press
Japan posted a record $13.41 billion trade surplus with the United States in 1981, almost double the previous year's figure, the Japanese government said today.
Meanwhile, gold prices plunged today to a 28-month low in Europe, while the dollar strengthened against all key foreign currencies.
The trade figures announced by the Japanese Finance Ministry in Tokyo appeared certain to kindle new economic frictions between the United States and Japan. There has been talk in Congress of implementing a protectionist policy unless Japan opens its markets to more U.S.-made goods to stem the trade imbalance. Japan had a $6.959 billion trade advantage in 1980.

Gold opened sharply lower today at $366.50 an ounce in London and Zurich but rallied in later dealings.
A London bullion dealer said gold was under pressure from the dollar, which has been strengthened by expectations that the U.S. Federal Reserve will force up interest rates to curb a new surge in the growth of the American money supply reported on Friday.
Higher U.S. interest rates make the dollar more attractive to investors.
The dealer predicted gold prices could go as low as $350 an ounce before the dive, which began last week, is halted.

In other economic news:
—Market conditions may force Ford Motor Co. to lower its car prices, even if price reductions are not tied to contract concessions in current bargaining with the United Auto Workers, UAW President Douglas Fraser said Sunday.
"It might take a different form than a General Motors agreement," Fraser said on the ABC-TV program "This Week with David Brinkley."
—Interest rates will climb higher this week following a Federal Reserve report of a surge in the nation's basic money supply, said Thomas Thomson, economist at Crocker National Bank, San Francisco.

More frigid weather is predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even more frigid weather may be in store, with the National Weather Service's 30-day forecast calling for below-normal temperatures in the eastern two-thirds of the nation.
The outlook through mid-February calls for above-average readings in California, Nevada and Arizona. Normal temperatures for this time of year are expected in Maine, southern Florida, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Utah and New Mexico. All other areas should anticipate cooler than usual temperatures.

Turning to precipitation, heavy snow or rainfall is expected in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, northern Nevada, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky and all of the Gulf and Atlantic Coast and northeastern states.

Navy divers drown, had no warning

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The five divers who drowned in a chamber aboard the submarine U.S.S. Grayback had no warning that the tank was not filling with oxygen as it should have when the water drained out, a U.S. Navy spokesman said today.
"It can happen very, very suddenly," said Navy spokesman Fred Leeder, at the Subic Bay Navy Base, 50 miles northeast of Manila, where the incident early Sunday is being investigated.
He said there was no warning bell or other device to signal a lack of oxygen in the chamber.

The men had followed proper procedure in taking off their diving equipment when it should have been safe to do so, Leeder said.
"It was routine. They had all been through it several times before," he said, adding they were unable to get their gear back on before the lack of oxygen knocked them out.
Four enlisted men and an officer slipped under the water remaining in the chamber and drowned, Leeder said.
A sixth man survived because his arm draped over a valve as he fell unconscious, keeping his face out of the water, Leeder said.
The man was listed in good condition, he added.
Leeder said crewmen monitoring the draining process realized something was wrong when they lost communication with the divers.

A doctor was rushed into the chamber and found the five victims without vital signs, said an official statement.
Leeder said it was only "a few minutes" before the chamber was opened to release the men, but he said there was some delay because water had to be drained out and pressure equalized before the door could be opened.

State watchdogs going to work

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' much talked-about watchdog committee to oversee the conduct of state officials and employees is about to get down to business.

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, announced last week that his Public Servant Standards of Conduct Advisory Committee will have its public hearing Feb. 26.

After six months of hearings and several more of subcommittee and staff work, the ethics committee will make a report in November telling the 1983 Legislature what should be done about state government ethics.

"We're not looking for people who get up and say 'All politicians are crooked.' That's no good to us," said Schlueter. "We're looking for areas of true concern, not just emotionalism."

The 15 members of the committee have been appointed by the governor, lieutenant governor and speaker. Chief Justice Joe Greenhill of the Texas Supreme Court, Justice John Onion, presiding judge of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals and Travis County District Judge Earle, head of the state's Public Integrity Unit, are ex-officio members.

Ethics law for state officials and employees was scarce until 1973 when a number of statutes were passed as a result of the 1971 Sharpstown scandals. The new laws concerned financial disclosure and standards of conduct, regulation of lobbyists and open meetings.

The 1981 Legislature passed two laws designed to strengthen some weak spots found in the 1973 legislation. One was aimed at removing ambiguities in the Texas campaign and finance disclosure acts and the other set up the ethics committee to study all existing law and make recommendations to future legislatures on how to make statutes "more clear and reasonable."

Both the 1981 acts were sponsored by Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton, who brought them up after being acquitted of charges he took a payoff from an informant posing as an insurance man seeking state group insurance business. Clayton said he was the victim of an FBI "sting" operation known as Brilab.

The new ethics committee also was instructed to issue guidelines "to aid public servants in the day-to-day application of these laws."

The committee automatically will disband Aug. 31, 1983, unless renewed by the new Legislature.

Membership of the committee includes senators, representatives, elected statewide officials, state employees, lobbyists and citizen members.

"Our staff has been at work for some time," Schlueter said. "I have written to all states having ethics or elections commissions and we have material from about 30 states to compare with our Texas law."

But much of the committee's information will come from testimony given at the public hearings.

The Feb. 26 hearing will consider conflicts of interest including nepotism and business dealings of public servants, along with public employee restrictions such as prohibitions on political activity.

Later, hearings will touch on local and state government purchasing practices, political funds, the House speaker race, lobby registration and reporting, and the punishment for any violations.

Battle moves to city council

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The battle over housing rights for Austin homosexuals moves to the city council now that voters have overwhelmingly rejected a proposal to legalize discrimination against gays.

By a 36,239 to 20,997 margin, Austin voters said Saturday they did not want to allow landlords to discriminate against buyers and renters because of their "sexual orientation."

The proposed amendment to the city's Fair Housing Ordinance was petitioned onto the ballot by the Austin Citizens for Decency, a local anti-homosexual group.

The petition drive kicked off in August when the city council appeared ready to approve an amendment specifically barring discrimination against gays and other minority groups.

When the vote was counted Saturday, City Councilman Roger Duncan said he is ready to propose the anti-discrimination ordinance to the council.

"The voters spoke very clearly today. I'm ready to act as soon as possible to make sure the ordinance is very clear," Duncan said.

ACD leader Dr. Steven Hotze said, "We're back at square one. The ball's in (the council's) court. We'll see if they are going to pass a law giving public approval to homosexuals."

Hotze told 150 supporters who gathered for a post-election "Thanksgiving Feast" that the battle is not over.

"This is just the first step of the fight and I hope people will realize that we won't stop here," he said.

Hotze led a singing of "American the Beautiful" and "Onward Christian Soldiers."

"Some people question the role of Christians should have in politics. But politics simply determines governmental policies, and Christians and law-abiding citizens have every right to voice their input," he said.

Robb Southerland, the music store owner who led the Citizens for a United Austin campaign against the amendment, said voters "sent a message to the rest of the country that (Austin) is made up of open-minded and fair people who don't want anybody to be denied housing."

"When we start singling out groups of people to discriminate against, who's next? Next might have been the Jews of Catholics or blacks or browns," he said.

Southerland said he was pleased with the 27 percent voter turnout and the margin of victory.

"It makes me feel proud to be an Austinite. I didn't want to just win it. I wanted to win it big and we did," he said.

More than 300 people crowded into Palmer Auditorium as the vote totals were posted.

"Thank you for voting for freedom, justice and the American way," shouted a bearded young man wearing a Citizens for United Austin button.

Attorneys paint different pictures of rancher charged with crimes

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Defense attorneys planned to continue cross-examining a key government witness today in the trial of millionaire Rex Cauble, who is accused of financing and profiting from the biggest marijuana smuggling ring uncovered in Texas.

Cauble's racketeering, conspiracy and embezzlement trial got underway last week. But after a few hours of testimony, U.S. District Judge William Steger postponed proceedings until this morning because of an icy winter storm.

During cross-examination Tuesday, lead defense attorney Roy Minton questioned inconsistencies in statements by key government witness Raymond Eugene Hawkins.

Hawkins testified Tuesday that Cauble knew all along his ranch foreman was heading up a major smuggling ring, which brought 106 tons of marijuana from Colombia into Texas, via shrimpboats, during 1977 and 1978.

But Minton pointed out a transcript of earlier testimony in which Hawkins told a grand jury in Beaumont that Cauble had no knowledge of the smuggling venture.

Hawkins also testified Tuesday that he once paid Foster $250,000 in smuggling profits as Cauble looked on. He vividly described counting the money out on the floor of Cauble's bedroom and said Foster immediately turned the cash over to Cauble.

However, during cross-examination Hawkins became confused as to the date of the transaction and where the $250,000 had come from.

Minton also pointed out that Hawkins had agreed to plead guilty to drug trafficking charges and testify for the government after authorities said they would let him keep his Denton ranch.

Federal jury reviews witness statements

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A federal court jury began reviewing statements today from a key witness in the police brutality trial of a former McAllen officer.

Jurors told U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela Friday that they wanted statements from the witness repeated before they could reach a verdict in the trial of former McAllen police Lt. Roberto Ramos. Vela ordered the testimony transcribed over the weekend.

Ramos is charged with ordering subordinates to beat a prisoner on Sept. 24, 1977.

The misdemeanor charge of depriving a person of his civil rights under color of law carries a maximum punishment of one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Jurors deliberated almost two hours Friday before saying they wanted to review statements of witness Willie Forester. Forester was the first McAllen policeman to arrive at an open field where Rene Escamilla had led officers on a high-speed chase.

Forester, a defense witness, recalled under cross-examination that Ramos later arrived and told him, "You won't say anything, will you?"

Forester said he turned away because he did not want to see what would follow.

Brown & Root gets county extension

HOUSTON (AP) — A state district judge has granted a 10-day extension on its temporary court order stopping Harris County from collecting an estimated $5.6 million in supplemental taxes on various ships owned by Brown & Root.

Judge Anthony J.P. Farris said the county's request to have the city of Houston joined into a Brown & Root lawsuit against the county will have to be heard by State District Judge Arthur C. Lesher Jr. this week because of rules that apply to local district courts.

The judge said Saturday that he was granting the extension with the provision that it would not prejudice the county's claims for back taxes on the Houston-based construction company's vessels through 1978.

Tax Assessor-Collector Carl S. Smith earlier had recommended that 110 Brown & Root vessels, valued in 1981 at $871,676,510, be added to the county's supplemental tax roll.

Back-tacking the ships through 1978 would cost Brown & Root more than $19.2 million, Smith said.

Brown & Root filed suit against Harris County and got a temporary court order stopping county officials from putting the vessels on the supplemental 1981 tax rolls.

However, the company has not filed suit against the city since it still has administrative appeals over the taxes.

Despite weather, inmates like tents

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Camping out during the winter is not a recreational activity for some Texas Department of Corrections inmates. But they apparently consider tenting in the cold an acceptable trade for cell bars.

The use of the tents was a temporary solution for the TDC to a federal judge's order that overcrowding be eased. Before the tents were erected, many cells had three prisoners in spaces intended for no more than two.

The cold appeared to have caused little discomfort for inmates, prison officials said, pointing out the tents are kept warm by natural gas heaters.

TDC Director W.J. Estelle Jr. reported that there have been no problems related to the cold — even after last week's record low temperatures.

For the 2,600 inmates currently housed in 14 tent units, the freezing temperatures and rain seemed to be a small price to pay for the freedom from TDC cellblocks. Inmates can walk around and visit friends in distant tents, a freedom they didn't have inside the cellblocks.

Howard Mitchell, Central Unit warden, said the first week tents were used produced an almost festive atmosphere among the prisoners.

"The first week we had them all out here, that weekend they had a party. It looked like a bunch of kids out at a party," he said.

Mitchell noted there are only three guards for 320 inmates in the tent compound, which is closed by a fence.

He said inmates selected for the tents generally are well behaved and trustworthy, lessening the need for constant surveillance.

"The tents are all right. You have a lot more freedom than in the building," said Albert Fernandez, 26, serving a 10-year sentence at the Central Unit.

There are also no building tenders in the tent areas and few correctional officers guarding the inmates, affording them a freedom that is unusual in the TDC system.

However, officers said they still are somewhat hesitant about security in the tent areas because it is difficult to see inside.

One TDC official said officers found that tent-dwelling inmates in some units were hiding knives for their counterparts in cells by sticking them in the ground. Officials countered that by periodic sweeps with metal detectors.

Shell votes on contract

DEER PARK, Texas (AP) — About 2,100 members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union at the Shell Oil Refinery in Deer Park planned to vote today on a new two-year pact with the oil company.

Some 250 OCAW members in Texas City ratified a contract with Marathon Oil Sunday, and about 1,200 members of local 4-243 in Beaumont approved an agreement with Mobil Oil Co.

The Marathon agreement was approved by a substantial majority of the members, according to OCAW local 4-449 representative Billie Jones. Terms were not disclosed.

No details were available on the Mobil Oil pact.

Nearly all of the 55,000 OCAW members nationwide continued working under a contract extension since the union's old contracts expired Jan. 8.

The union has about 19,000 members in Houston and 6,000 in Port Arthur.

Shrimper gives up business, opens laundry

HOUSTON (AP) — He had to give up his home and his business, but Nguyen Van Nam refused to break his promise.

Nguyen, the president of the Vietnamese Fisherman's Association in the Gulf Coast towns of Seabrook and Kemah, vowed last year he and other refugee fishermen would sell their boats and leave Galveston Bay where overcrowding had sparked violence.

"I am a man of my word. I wanted to keep my promise," said the 48-year-old former colonel in the Vietnamese army.

He now manages a coin-operated laundry in southwest Houston.

Though he has given up the fishermen's life for some 100 hours a week in the laundry, the refugee fishermen still look to Nguyen as their leader.

"I still speak for them. Another leader has not come forward," he said.

Still the president of the fisherman's group, Nguyen says he will give up his position when the shrimpers meet in April, before the beginning of the bay shrimping season.

"I can be president because I still own a boat, but I plan to resign in April when we gather to vote for a new president."

Nguyen said that though he loves the sea, he is happier now that he's left the area.

"It's better for me not to be involved," he said. "I'm much happier now. My family lead a quiet and relaxed life."

What he misses least is the time spent trying to run his fishing business and, at the same time, prevent violence between his people and native fishermen in Seabrook and Kemah.

Tensions built over three years as refugee fishermen settled in the area and Americans contended they were adding to the problems of an already overfished Galveston Bay.

The dispute intensified when the Ku Klux Klan entered the conflict on the side of the native fishermen. Two boats owned by Vietnamese fishermen were burned, cross burnings were reported in the area and the Klan held several rallies in Galveston County in support of the American fishermen.

The refugees filed a suit before the beginning of the bay shrimping season last year seeking an end to the violence and intimidation.

U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald ordered an end to the violence and prohibited cross burnings, boat burnings and armed boat patrols.

"All she said is that there will be no bloodshed. Each side respects the other now, and we all realize there will be no more boats in Galveston Bay," Nguyen said of the judge's ruling.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

War game agreement needed

The North Koreans were playing with fire when they launched large-scale war games without advance warning last month.

It turns out U.S. troops and naval vessels went on a full-scale alert. Warships of the Seventh Fleet in the Sea of Japan steamed toward the Korean peninsula.

The matter was brought to the attention of the Korean truce village of Panmunjon. The U.S. representative, Rear Adm. James G. Storms, proposed that the North Koreans provide prior notice in the future, and they chose to ignore the advice.

The North Koreans are making a mistake. The United States and most all European countries, including East Germany and the Soviet Union, agreed at Helsinki in 1975 that 21 days' advance notice must be given for large military maneuvers. This agreement is of importance to the countries of Europe.

The North Korean maneuvers included joint air, ground and naval operations. There were parachute drops and amphibious landings. The maneuvers were picked up by satellite and monitored by AWAC reconnaissance planes based in Okinawa.

Adm. Storms said the war games dramatically increased tension throughout the Korean peninsula. "As a result, our side naturally became seriously concerned about your side's intentions."

The North Korean callousness could have easily brought catastrophe. A prior notice agreement like the one for military maneuvers in Europe should be negotiated for Asia.

UNICEF's line

UNICEF has probably cleaned up its act over the past 35 years. Once considered by some to be little more than a funneling agency of United Nations monies to communist regimes in trouble (Castro, for instance, allegedly took $125,000 in UNICEF funds in 1964 to buy military vehicle parts), the organization has been sticking pretty much to its humanitarian job as a provider of food and medicine to needy children the past decade or so.

Last month, UNICEF spotlighted its role among the world's hungry with its annual "State of the World's Children" report. The report, grim as ever, painted the familiar story of malnutrition (one billion children), inadequate health care (800 million), lack of education (400 million between the ages of 4 and 11), and inadequate water or sanitation (800 million).

Hoping to reach as much of the world's media as possible, UNICEF even hired a London-based writers group (the New Internationalist Publications Cooperative) to get the message out. Presumably, the co-op's effort accurately portrayed the problem. However, we share columnist Joan Beck's criticism of the report. She contended that if money alone would solve the problem, "caring Americans would raise the money between now (Christmas) and New Year's."

Beck was especially nettled — and so were we — by the overly simplistic, headline-grabbing nature of the report which began,

"A child's life is worth less than $100, according to this year's State of the World's Children report from the United Nations Children's Fund. Spent on each of the world's poorest children, says the report, such a sum could have provided the basics of life and prevented the deaths of 17 million young children during 1981."

In short, for the lack of $1.7 billion last year, 17 million children died. Oh, if it were only that simple to save an innocent's life.

The problem of starving, illiterate children in the world can never be eliminated or even greatly answered by UNICEF. The problem isn't cost. The problem is that the cause of the starvation and deprivation lies in economic and social policies in at least half the world which guarantee a perpetuation of poverty.

Perhaps it is that knowledge that has made many Americans skeptical of UNICEF's annual pleas for money on "National UNICEF Day," which coincides with Halloween. While it might be imagined that "trick or treat" programs generate fabulous sums for UNICEF, the national annual collection actually stands at about $3 million. UNICEF's annual budget, meanwhile, currently totals about $243 million. Considering UNICEF's goals and the states purposes of the U.N., that figure might seem astonishingly low. But perhaps, again, it may be a reflection of how the biggest fillers of U.N. coffers feel about the effectiveness of UNICEF, given the realities of government in the neediest nations.

That children by the millions starve in the world is tragic beyond words. That organizations — UNICEF included — exist to combat the problem is a blessing. But until the root causes of hunger and poverty (repressive and corrupt government and economic philosophies that thwart initiative and enterprise) are addressed, the food and medicine is just a Band-Aid over a wound that cannot heal.

Full employment becomes fetish

By OSCAR COOLEY
"We have never had a full employment program in this country," complained a discussant on Dick Cavett's TV show.

He meant we have never required the taxing public to pay enough money to the U.S. Treasury, to be passed on to the unemployed, to enable them to eat three square meals a day, dress respectably and live in comfort. We have never set up an unmistakably welfare state.

Would this initiate permanent full employment? Everybody working and earning who wants to work and earn? A perpetual economic boom? The discussant believes it would.

I doubt it. Such a policy would establish socialism, the system of Soviet Russia. That country is not utopia. John Dornberg, an American correspondent in Munich, says Russia faces its worst food shortage in 20 years. It lacks grain to feed its livestock. One result has been a sharp drop in milk and meat production. It has a high rate of suicide. The workers' state is not one to be copied. If it has full employment, it is the kind where people are forced to work and to accept whatever reward the government wants to allow them.

It is hardly true to say the United States has never had a full employment program. It had one when it maintained a society in which everyone was free to employ himself at any work he chose, to work or not work, to go and come, to choose his own way of life, to speak his mind, to write freely and to print his views and circulate them at will, to worship God as he wished or not worship at all. In a free society, everybody is fully employed. Free employment is synonymous with full employment.

If we tax enough money from people to eliminate others' poverty — assuring we can agree on what constitutes poverty — the taxpayers will be impoverished. We will have robbed Peter to pay Paul.

We should first ask, why are some people poor? The American people as a whole are not poor. Many are rich. Even more are in middling circumstances. If the non-poor are so much more numerous than the poor, there must be a reason. Chance misfortune such as sickness or accident accounts for some poor but surely not all. The difference must be internal. Some are smarter, or more energetic, or both, than others.

According to an old adage, "Necessity is the mother of invention." When one has to exert himself, he will. When this necessity is not upon him, when he can get by fairly well without exertion, he is inclined to take his ease. This is natural.

Charity is good, but within limits. Anybody can be corrupted by sufficient free lunch. This is a main weakness in our affluent society.

Nations react like persons. The foreign aid program of the United States by which in the last 40 years we have given billions to poorer countries, has been liberal and it has tended to spoil some of the recipients. They now complain if it is not forthcoming. They have come to feel we owe them this dole, and they foresee dire results if it is not continued.

The old empires — British, French, Dutch — are gone. Their parts have become independent countries. They have received aid from the wealthier countries, but they need more than money. They are their own managers now and they need to know how to manage. Are they learning this, or are we aiding them to death? Some of them complain of unemployment. Is it employment they lack, or freedom?

Full employment is a state of mind, and it is not a state that can be instantly conferred.

A not-so-schmaltzy tribute to my friend

By D.R. SEGAL

This one is for, and about, my friend Clarence Hoiles. I'll try to write something that wouldn't have made him sore if he'd been here to read it. The surest way to get his goat was to wax flowery or embarrass him saying how smart and important he was. Of course, he was both smart and important but it made him mad if anybody mentioned it. I guess he figured that if you really thought he was smart you'd pay attention to what he said and it wasn't necessary to mention it. Most of the time we did pay attention and most of the time he was right. We were smart enough to know that.

He was to be sure, a good businessman. He was, beyond doubt, an intensely modest, decent, fair and humble man. He was congenial, easy to know, painfully honest. You'd have liked him. Just about everybody did. Which is getting pretty close to flowery and let's close that out.

The thing that I will never forget about Clarence Hoiles is the amazing and — to me — unsuspected agility of his mind. He was more than 70 years old when he accepted and then initiated drastic and substantial changes in the business which had, to a great extent, been fashioned by his hand and in his image. I know how difficult it is to accept the possibility that there is a better way of doing things and how resistant all of old doggers are to change. But he accepted change, even participated in it. And toward the end, he did an even more exceptional thing: he voluntarily gave up much of the authority he had for so long exercised. He said he had come to realize it was not good for any man to have that much power in an organization.

I suggest to you that the list of men who have laid down a large measure of their authority while still mentally and physically capable is an exceedingly short one. Clarence Hoiles is on it. And he did it because he thought it was the right thing to do, the fair thing to do, the proper thing to do.

I worked closely with Clarence Hoiles during those latter years of change. He didn't always like what was happening, but he never wavered from his commitment to pass along some of his authority to others. He let us know when he wasn't pleased; but he never took back any authority he had given away.

In our many hours of conversations — business and personal — we talked of death and taxes and families and each was the other's sounding board. He was a tower of strength when I needed it. He once told me his philosophy was to make the tough decision according to his own lights — and then forget it. And he advised me to do the same. I was lucky. He made some of the tough decisions for me. But that part about not letting it bother him — I'm not sure it went that way.

Clarence Hoiles was the eldest son and the heir to the leadership of a company founded by his father, the late R.C. Hoiles. R.C. Hoiles was as flamboyant as Clarence was retiring. But the obsessively modest Clarence Hoiles guided the company into an organization of 31 daily newspapers, six weekly papers, a large shopper and a television station. He worked quietly, usually in the background, always avoiding the limelight. But there was no doubt where the leadership of the company lay.

Very likely many of the business practices Clarence Hoiles put into effect, and those he preserved from the long regime of his father, will survive. But he had said that businesses cannot be run from beyond the grave; and only a few weeks ago he told me the next generation soon must step up to the plate and take its turn at bat, making its own mistakes and counting its own triumphs. A lot of the good stuff will be what they learned from him. I'm glad I was around to know both R.C. and Clarence Hoiles. Each of them was a real piece of work!

Now, that wasn't too flowery, was it, Clarence? I tried to keep it down, old friend, but I really wanted to say a lot more that would have embarrassed both of us.

Vale!

Petting pets lowers blood pressure

By PAUL HARVEY

Housepets can create many problems. They are increasingly costly to feed properly. They spot carpets and soil furnishings. They may bring fleas into the house and irritate human eyes by shedding dander.

Some pets require frequent tedious grooming. The sickness of a loved pet is worrisome and its death devastating. Then why are we willing to endure all this just to have a pet to pet?

The early October international conference in Philadelphia was the first of its kind — devoted entirely to the companion bond between humans and animals.

Four hundred fifty physicians, psychologists, anthropologists and other scholars converged on the University of Pennsylvania where the Veterinary School includes the world's only "Center for the Interaction of Animals."

Worldwide research was reported and evaluated.

Including statistical evidence that petting pets may lengthen your life. Indeed, even observing a tankful of fish can lower blood pressure and increase a heart patient's chance of survival.

Since the earliest recorded history some pets have been "spiritualized," even "diefied" — as were the pet cats of early Egypt.

The image of pets in Arctic, Polynesian, American Indian, Australian, African and Western societies is highly variable.

In some societies, strangely, abuse and reverence appear to coexist. This seems less strange when one realizes that American custom is likely to profess love for birds — yet cage them — even shoot them.

One research project revealed that 70 percent of the dreams of children are about animals.

Eighteenth and nineteenth century Crow Indians of North America were nomadic equestrians. Horses became their most valued possessions profoundly influencing their culture. In addition to being useful, the horse acquired psychological, spiritual and aesthetic significance.

When the Plains Indians were "unhorsed" during the early 1900s, the result was cultural disintegration.

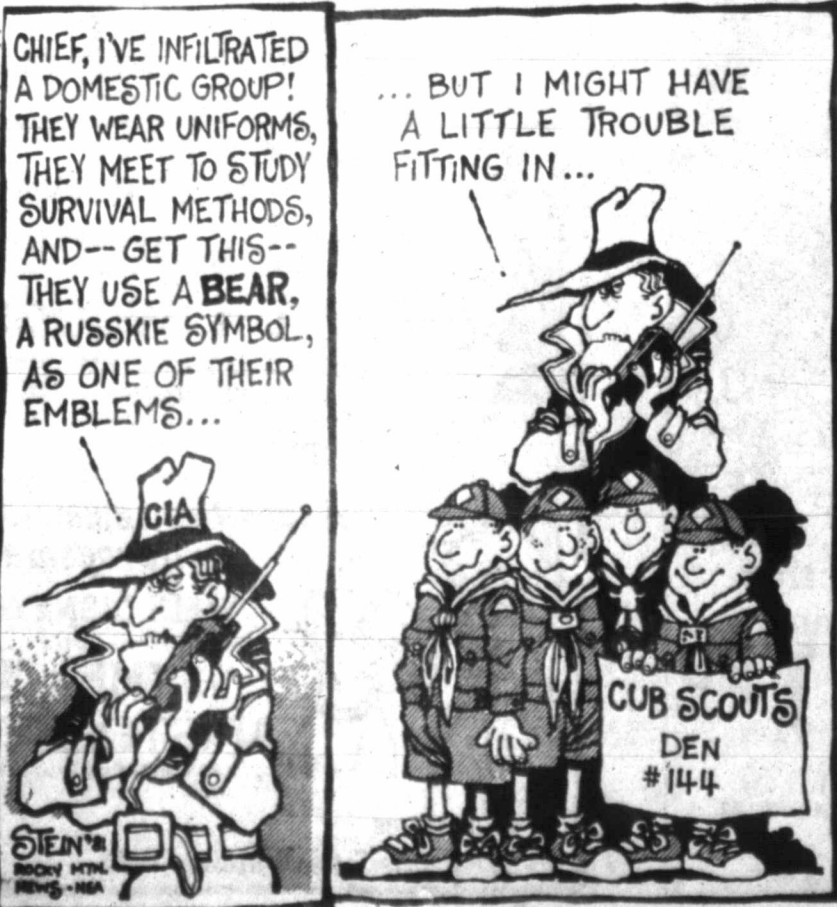

Recently the Crows have brought horses back to their reservations and with measurable revitalization of reservation life.

In modern society horses are favored as pet by more women than men; this may have to do with the degree of "equality" which women have been able to enjoy on horseback — competing with men on equal footing — expressing less feminine traits such as assertiveness, aggression and the mastery of a powerful force.

Why do Americans keep pets? 70.5 percent say for companionship, 52.2 percent say for pleasure, 36 percent for protection.

Observing my own family and our barnlot cats suggests that the cruelty we hear and read about motivates a counteraction.

Old Morry, the much abused stray we adopted, gets lots more lovin' than the cuter kittens.

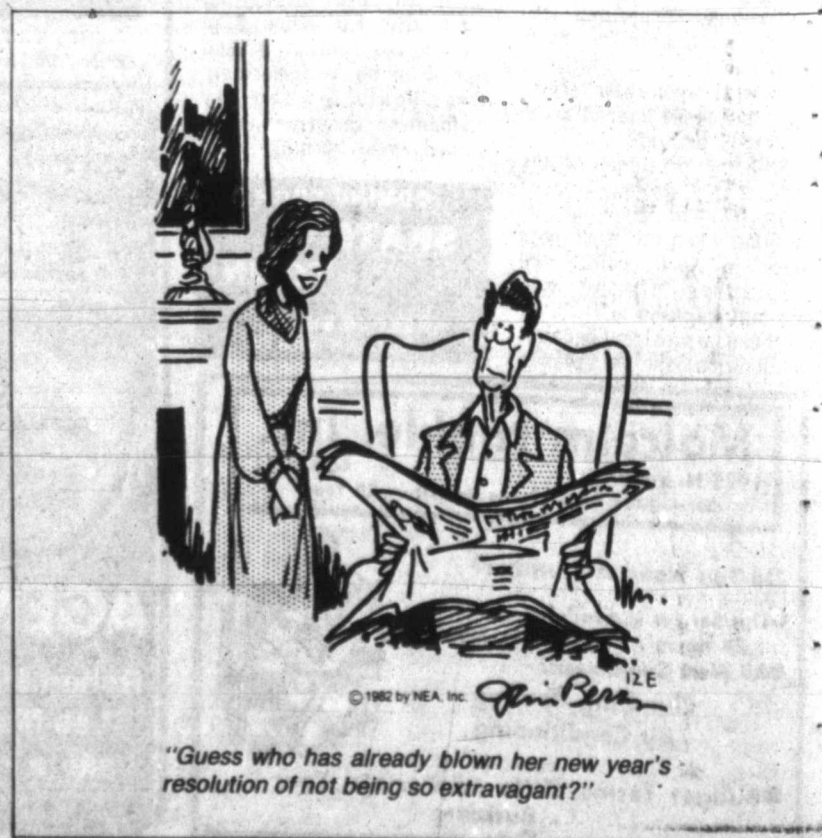

CHIEF, I'VE INFILTRATED A DOMESTIC GROUP! THEY WEAR UNIFORMS, THEY MEET TO STUDY SURVIVAL METHODS, AND-- GET THIS-- THEY USE A BEAR, A RUSSKIE SYMBOL, AS ONE OF THEIR EMBLEMS...

... BUT I MIGHT HAVE A LITTLE TROUBLE FITTING IN...

The Stones bandwagon rolled in '81

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer
The Rolling Stones rolled across America in 1981, in the biggest tour in the history of rock. They broke attendance and money records, were acclaimed once again as the world's greatest rock 'n' roll band. The Stones' 25th album, "Tattoo You," was its hottest selling ever.

The year began with the singing and playing of "Tie a Yellow Ribbon 'Round the Ole Oak Tree" as the hostages came home from Iran. Two single records sold platinum, meaning 2 million copies or more, in 1981, compared with three the year before. They were "Celebration" by Kool and the Gang and "Endless Love" by Lionel Richie and Diana Ross.

Top LPs of the year, according to Billboard magazine, were "Hi Infidelity" by REO Speedwagon, "Double Fantasy" by John Lennon, "Greatest Hits" by Kenny Rogers, "Christopher Cross" and "Crimes of Passion" by Pat Benatar. Billboard's top singles were "Bette Davis Eyes" by Kim Carnes, "Endless Love" by Diana Ross and Lionel Richie, "Lady" by Kenny Rogers, "Starting Over" by John Lennon and "Jessie's Girl" by Rick Springfield.

Dear Abby

TV turns off host's hospitality

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What can be done about TV-addicted husbands? My sister and her family made a 600-mile trip to be with us for Thanksgiving. Her husband doesn't care much for sports, and I think it was extremely rude of my husband to spend Thursday through Sunday glued to the TV while his brother-in-law looked for something to read. We teach our children to put the wishes of their guests before their own, but what's to be done about a husband who violates that basic rule of good manners? It's embarrassing for me and sets a poor example for our children.

TV reigns as a "god" in many homes. One friend told me, "I knew my husband would spend the whole day in front of the TV, so I served Thanksgiving dinner at halftime!" Another friend said she invited two lonely strangers for Thanksgiving, and her husband kept the football game on during the meal and peered around the guests so as not to miss a play.

Sure, we tell our husbands how we feel, but they don't believe in compromising. I know it's nothing to divorce a man over, but it sure does spoil the holidays. Any suggestions?

FED UP WITH FOOTBALL

DEAR FED UP: You have several choices: You can yell, scream, threaten, berate and criticize your TV-addicted husband in an effort to get him to sacrifice watching his beloved game in favor of being a good host. Or you can make a trade-off and agree to do something for him if he does something for you. You can also refrain from inviting guests for Thanksgiving if you don't want to entertain them alone. Do whatever works best at your house.

DEAR ABBY: I feel wonderful this morning! This is the first Christmas that I actually felt that my gifts were really appreciated.

Do you know what I did? Instead of giving gifts to ungrateful relatives and fair-weather friends, I took the $300 I had set aside for Christmas gifts, went to a discount liquor store and bought 150 bottles of wine. I tied a red ribbon around each bottle, drove down to skid row and passed out my gifts to the bums.

Abby, you wouldn't believe the thanks I got! Every one who got a bottle shook my hand, wished me a merry Christmas, and asked God to bless me! You could tell it was straight from the heart.

Most people would condemn me for this, but, Abby, many organizations hand out food baskets, toys and gifts to the orphans and poor people at Christmastime, but nobody thinks about the homeless, down-and-out drifters on skid row. They are the forgotten men nobody cares about.

Now I know what the joy of giving means.

DON

DEAR DON: Far be it from me to judge anyone for his brand of generosity. But since your motive in giving this year was to be "thanked and blessed," you certainly found a way to get your money's worth.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I received a Christmas card with the following message: "Seasons Greetings from Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Smith and Richard."

Abby, Richard is their 33-year-old, unmarried son who lives at home. He is mentally competent and gainfully employed. My husband says that as an adult, Richard should send his own Christmas card instead of taking a free ride with Mom and Dad.

I say, as long as they all live in the same house, it's perfectly proper. What do you say?

FRIENDS

DEAR FRIENDS: Why analyze or judge? Accept "seasons greetings" from all three, and be glad somebody thought you were worth 20 cents.

Dr. Lamb

Loss of blood may cause low hemoglobin

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently my husband had a chest up at the hospital and had hemoglobin of only five. They gave him four pints of blood. They examined his stomach, bowel and kidneys and diagnosed his condition as bleeding from internal hemorrhoids. I would like to know if it is possible to have a hemoglobin that low from bleeding hemorrhoids.

His stomach acid was 700 times what it should be but his stomach does not bother him. His bleeding is occasional, on and off with bowel movements. He is taking iron tablets and must check back in two months for more blood work.

DEAR READER — Obviously if you bleed enough your hemoglobin can go to zero. The interesting point is that your husband apparently did not notice anything wrong other than his hemorrhoids before having an examination. You can lose a lot of blood from internal hemorrhoids and have no symptoms except the bleeding.

If a person is not checking carefully he might not realize how much blood is passing. The steady loss of significant amounts of blood can mount up.

Your husband's doctors did the right thing to check other possible sources of bleeding. Some people bleed silently from the digestive tract and the digested blood is not noticed.

The iron is essential to forming enough new red blood cells. Of course it is important to stop or control the source of bleeding which caused the iron loss in the first place. If hemorrhoids are the cause these may need to be corrected before his anemia stabilizes.

There are many factors related to anemias. As the bone marrow is called upon to form more and more blood cells for whatever reason, such as loss of blood, the marrow will literally become exhausted. Then you have a failure of cell production as well as increased loss.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-3, Understanding the Anemias, to give you a clearer understanding of the factors involved. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Be sure your husband gets plenty of protein. He will need protein as well as iron to build new hemoglobin. After all, it is a blood protein which contains iron.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am told we should drink eight to 10 glasses of water a day. Does that mean that much water in addition to other liquids we drink, such as milk and fruit juices, coffee, tea?

DEAR READER — I favor drinking water but the hard and fast rule of eight glasses a day leaves a lot to be desired. A good guide is how much urine your kidneys form. If you are not drinking enough fluids your urine will be concentrated and you will not pass urine frequently or in large amounts. You might drink eight glasses of water a day and if you work hard and sweat a lot eight glasses may not be enough water to form sufficient urine. How much urine should you form? Probably at least a quart each day.

You can count any fluid as a source of water. Obviously, milk contains a lot of water. In addition your cells release water from food. Table sugar, for example, which is very dry breaks down into carbon dioxide and water.

Mariachi band involves kids

By MARK TURNER
The Arizona Daily Star
TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) —

Before some members of El Mariachi Juvenil de San Xavier were born, an Anglo man promised himself that he was going to help children learn Mexican music.

In fulfillment of that promise, the harmony of youngsters swinging and playing mariachi music resounds through San Xavier Mission on most Sundays.

Most of the musicians, who range in age from 7 to 15, will tell you they "became it's fun."

The group's 30-year-old founder and director, Ralph Hinton, has another purpose: to spread the spirit of festivity and develop a sense of pride in their cultural heritage.

The group's conception goes back to Hinton's childhood when, in 1959, his family moved from the Great Lakes area to a low-income barrio in Tucson.

He soon found himself playing mariachi music, and when he was a teen-ager, Hinton joined Los Chanquitos Feos (The Ugly Little Monkeys).

It was then he learned to relish the music's range from rich gaiety to gentle sadness. Hinton joined Mariachi Guadalajara, a local adult band.

That led to his decision to help involve youngsters in mariachi music, and in 1974 he organized El Mariachi Juvenil de San Xavier.

It disbanded in 1979 when Hinton moved temporarily to the Philippines, though some of the original members now play in adult mariachi groups.

After returning to Tucson, Hinton resumed teaching mariachi music to youngsters in January 1980. Ten months later, he revived El Mariachi Juvenil.

Range war over snow

MESA, Colo. (AP) — The Grand Mesa, at 10,500 feet the world's largest flat-top mountain, is a winter sports paradise in the rarified air of western Colorado.

On a clear day, with the snow sparkling under a bright sun and the air so sharp the world seems new again, a cross-country skier can cover miles effortlessly and a snowmobiler can glide like an airplane.

"It could not be better designed for winter sports," says Dale Bittle, a U.S. Forest Service worker.

But this idyllic winter scene is home to a modern-day range war.

Cross-country skiers and snowmobilers have crossed paths — sometimes violently — in the rolling hills and high timber of the mesa. And like the cattlemen and sheepherders of 80 years ago, these 20th century combatants are being forced — albeit reluctantly — to learn to live with each other.

Across northwestern Colorado in the 1890s, sheep ranchers sought to establish a place for themselves, contending there was enough land for everyone. The cattlemen tried to force them out, saying sheep ruined the range by destroying the grass.

It took time and Forest Service action to separate the warring groups and bring peace to the range early this century, according to a local historian, Dave Fishell of Grand Junction.

Ironically, the Forest Service today is using the same argument — who uses the public lands. It hasn't been easy.

"There's enough room for everyone" on the Grand Mesa, said Gary Hunt, co-owner of Grand Junction's largest snowmobile dealership.

"But you hear complaints about them tearing up ski tracks," said Eric Oakley, a cross-country skier and owner of a ski shop.

Two years ago, fistfights broke out between snowmobilers and cross-country skiers on the Grand Mesa, which at 547 square miles is half the size of Rhode Island. There were rumors among snowmobilers — never proved — that skiers were stringing piano wire between trees.

The skiers, meanwhile, denounced their snowmobiling foes as "drunk, obnoxious and rude," and complained that noise and exhaust from their machines had destroyed skiing on the mesa.

"We had some incidents," Bittle said. "We had a gun pulled once, and there was a fellow who ended up with a concussion."

The conflict was inevitable, some state officials say, especially with the growing popularity of both activities. People who cross-country ski do so because of "the quiet, pristine environment, while snowmobilers can destroy tracks and they're noisy," says Bill Haggerty of the state Division of Wildlife.

Snowmobilers point out the Grand Mesa is public land. They also say that skiers who want truly isolated trips can use the Western Slope's wilderness areas, where machines of all types are banned.

Eighty years ago, the Forest Service defused the range war by creating the Uncompahgre National Forest and doling out grazing permits that served to keep the sheep away from the cattle.

Today, the Forest Service, in concert with the Colorado Parks and Recreation Department, has designated certain areas and trails for the use of each separate group.

Signs on 15-foot poles mark the different areas. Maps, showing separate trails for snowmobilers and skiers have been printed and will be available next week at area gas stations, convenience stores, bars, and Forest Service stations.

The move has gone a long way toward defusing the issue.

"I got together the various ski clubs and snowmobilers' groups," said Bittle, who has taken charge of marking trails to separate the sportsmen. "We cussed and discussed and finally worked out courtesy closures to satisfy as many people as we could."

It was a move popular with sportsmen in both groups.

Shuttle will carry school science projects

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Darth Vader, Mr. Spock and other mythical space characters are about to lose their monopoly on space experimentation.

And the invasion won't be led by Clingons or extraterrestrial humanoids — it will be led by a beer distributor and a dozen El Paso-area high school students.

The beer distributor, Richard Azar of El Paso, has made a down payment for three five-cubic-foot canisters that will be carried aboard a future Space Shuttle Columbia flight. The canisters will carry science experiments designed by high school students from El Paso and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

"Space is a challenge; always has been," Azar said. "The canisters offered us an opportunity to challenge young minds."

Azar got the idea for participation in the space shuttle program in 1977 when he read a magazine article about the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's offer to let private individuals send experimental projects into space aboard what was then called the "space truck" Columbia.

Azar contacted NASA and made a down payment of $500 each for three canisters. Each capsule has a price tag of $10,000.

One canister was set aside for the twin cities of El Paso and Juarez, another for the University of Texas at El Paso and the third was designated for projects developed by high school students.

Azar put Suzie Gardy, his company's community relations director, in charge of the project, including fundraising to pay the rest of the rent.

"We've talked to groups at the schools to make them feel like it's something that's really going to happen," Ms. Gardy said. "I'd say over 150 students have submitted ideas."

The canisters — cylinders about the size of 55-gallon drums — will be placed in the large cargo bay of the Columbia. They will experience all of the phenomena of space flight, including zero gravity and exposure to the sun's cosmic rays.

Ms. Gardy keeps a full-scale model of the canister in her office.

"You can see how nicked and scratched it is because we've carried it all over the place showing it to people," she said.

"We give every student a No. 10 vegetable can and they have to design the projects for this big can within the parameters of a vegetable can," Ms. Gardy said. "We can shelve the capsule so they can put between 10 and 12 student projects in one of these cans and then use a micro-processing system that will integrate all the projects."

So far, few of the students have given much information about their proposed projects to the 35-member volunteer panel which will pick the projects.

But on Jan. 27, students will bring their cans to a meeting with the panel, where they will give presentations on their plans.

"By May, the panel will have selected the projects, and the kids will know, whether they'll fly," Ms. Gardy said. "During the summer, they'll figure out how they're going to fit and in the fall they will actually build their projects. The projects will be turned in to NASA by the end of the first semester."

Ms. Gardy said the canister should ride the Columbia into orbit sometime between April and December of next year.

One project Ms. Gardy says is almost sure to make it is being submitted by Clay Casarez of El Paso. Casarez, a high school senior, wants to test the changes in liquid laser functions under space conditions.

"His parents have bought him about $600 worth of equipment already," Ms. Gardy said.

Several proposals to study crystal growth have been submitted.

"We know that crystals grow faster and bigger in space," she said. "I think about the silicon crystals in photovoltaic cells (used to generate electricity from the sun).

This coming year you are likely to develop more fun outside interests than in the past. Enjoy yourself, but don't become so involved that you may begin to spend beyond your means.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to steer clear of persons today who tend to be tight or think small. Their pettiness is likely to be more offensive to you now than usual. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in each of the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Weigh your words carefully today if you are in a discussion with one who has some influence over your career. Your remarks will be critically evaluated.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You enjoy dealing in a friendly, open manner, but today it's best you be careful about discussing confidential matters with persons who are not directly involved.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It might prove unwise today to seek counsel from one who is your friend, yet who lacks expertise in a matter which concerns you. Seek a specialist.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Progress could be impeded today by an associate who doesn't fully understand your ideas or views. Be sure to state your positions as clearly as possible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Unless you are very careful today you may overlook some important details where your work is concerned. Have a co-worker check what you do.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In business matters today small points should not be taken for granted. They could later prove to be a thorn in the lion's paw.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Strive to find things about which to praise family members today rather than to criticize them. Cutting comments could provoke problems.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If someone goes out of his or her way to be helpful to you today, be sure to acknowledge those efforts. A "thank you" means a lot.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A number of small extravaganzas today could add up to a shocking accumulative total. Be cognizant of every penny you spend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be careful how you phrase your comments to family members today. You could say something which might sound far more intense than you intended.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Others appreciate your frankness, but from time to time you may say things a bit too bluntly. This could be the case today, so think before speaking.

Hasse becomes 58th member of Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame

Popular sports announcer Warren Hasse of Pampa was inducted Sunday as the 58th member of the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame.

Hasse was inducted along with Jewell McDowell, a former Amarillo High basketball star, and Pat Gerald, one of the Panhandle's winningest coaches, during ceremonies in Ordway Auditorium on the Amarillo College campus.

Hasse came to the Pampa News as sports editor in 1948 and became a broadcaster for KPND, a Pampa radio station owned by the newspaper. He did play-by-play coverage of football, basketball and baseball games and became the "voice" of the West State University Buffaloes in football and basketball in 1953.

Hasse purchased the radio station in 1952, and after nearly 30 years of successful operation sold the station and announced his retirement. He will continue to do the broadcasts of the Buff games and other special events.

Hasse has been recognized many times for his civic work in Pampa and has probably served as master-of ceremonies at more athletic banquets than anyone else in this area.

Hasse, 58 years old, expressed his appreciation to West Texas State University officials and Coy Palmer (former KPND owner) for giving him the opportunity to be a sports announcer. He also thanked his family for allowing him to be away so much covering sports and he also thanked the fans for their support of West Texas State University athletics.

Hasse congratulated the outstanding coaches and athletes of 1981 being honored on the program with him.

McDowell was the first high school all-state basketball player from Amarillo in 1947, as he paced the Sandies to the state semifinals. He was twice an All-Southwest Conference first team choice as he sparked the Texas Aggies in 1950-51 and 1951-52.

Gerald, who was a football and basketball standout at Canyon High School and West Texas State, coached winning teams at Panhandle, Vernon and Sweetwater High Schools.

Other awards presented Sunday are as follows:

Coaches of the Year:
Baseball: Dick Jones, Amarillo High.
Basketball: Kelly Chadwick, Amarillo College.

Athletes of the Year:
Football: Don Cumpton, Hereford.
Golf: Mike Martin, Farwell.
Tennis: Brenda Schulte, Nazareth.
Track: Jo Meaker and Duane Huey, Tascosa.

Overall coach of the year: Cumpton.
Athletes of the Year:
Baseball: Freddie Sanchez, Amarillo High.
Basketball: Terry Adolph, West Texas State.

Football: Brad Beck, Eastern New Mexico University.
Golf: Jerry Boeka, Amarillo.
Tennis: Brett Maxfield, Booker.
Track: James Mays, Texas Tech.
Overall athlete of the year: Mays.

Leslie Cazzell Memorial Award: Ronald Baston, Clovis High School.

Dee Henry Memorial Award: Scott Tankersley, Caprock High School.

Special Achievement Awards: Lisa Martinez, Amarillo Aquatic Club; Steve Elliott, Amarillo and University of Amarillo; Danny Andrews, Plainview; Carl Birdsong, Amarillo.

HASSE HONORED. Warren Hasse (far right) of Pampa receives a plaque from master of ceremonies Steve Oakley and applause from fellow honorees after being named as the 58th member of the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame during induction ceremonies Sunday in Amarillo. Hasse, former owner of KPND radio in Pampa, has been the sports broadcaster of the West Texas State football and basketball games since 1953. Hasse is a well-known civic leader in Pampa and has been master of ceremonies at numerous athletic events across the Panhandle.

Missouri routs Louisville

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The last time Missouri played Louisville in basketball, the Tigers were embarrassed.

They wanted to make sure that wouldn't happen again.

"I felt everyone would play a little above themselves because of last year's game," said Missouri Coach Norm Stewart after Sunday's 69-55 triumph over the Cardinals. "I thought that we attacked them this time, rather than playing it cautious, and we played defense, too."

The second-ranked Tigers, who were humiliated 71-49 last year in their first meeting ever with Louisville, overcame a slow start by outscoring the Cardinals 22-4 over the last nine minutes of the first half. That gave them a 38-24 halftime lead, the same 14-point margin as the final score.

"They played 40 minutes and we played 32 or 33," said Denny Crum, coach of the 17th-ranked Cardinals. "I knew they'd be very good. They didn't do much I didn't expect. When you play on the road, you have to play 40 minutes."

Ricky Frazier led Missouri with 22 points, while Michael Walker had 14 and sparked the Tigers' big splurge in the closing minutes of the first half. Their efforts helped the Big Eight Tigers improve their record to 14-0, the school's best start in 60 years.

Lancaster Gordon scored 14 points for the Cardinals, who lost their fourth game in 15 this year.

The victory was Missouri's second over the weekend. The Tigers edged Nebraska 44-42 Saturday night, Louisville was also in action Saturday night, beating Cincinnati 74-58.

In other games Sunday, third-ranked Virginia whipped Clemson 89-68 and

No. 8 Georgetown was upset by Syracuse 75-70.

In Saturday's other action, No. 1 North Carolina defeated Duke 73-63; Virginia walloped Georgia Tech 79-60; No. 4 DePaul whipped Old Dominion 70-60; No. 5 Iowa trounced Wisconsin 78-62; No. 6 Kentucky routed No. 13 Alabama 86-69; No. 7 San Francisco hammered Loyola (Calif.) 108-74; No. 9 Arkansas was upset by No. 19 Texas 87-73; SMU shocked 10th-ranked Houston 67-66; 11th-ranked Minnesota defeated Michigan 67-58; No. 12 North Carolina State nipped Wake Forest 52-50; No. 14 Idaho defeated Weber

State 59-44; No. 15 Oregon State crushed Oregon 76-61; No. 18 Tulsa beat No. 16 Wichita State 99-88 and Florida State edged No. 20 Virginia Tech 69-65.

Prince Bridges' layup at the buzzer gave Missouri a victory over Nebraska Saturday night. A basket by Nebraska's Jack Moore had tied the game at 42 with 14 seconds to play, the first Cornhuskers' points in eight minutes.

Boosters will meet tonight

Harvester Booster Club will meet at 7 p.m. tonight in Pampa High football fieldhouse.

The main discussion topic will be the 1981-82 basketball banquet.

All parents and the general public are invited to attend the meeting.

8th graders win tourney

DUMAS—Pampa Blue downed Dumas Orange, 44-37, Saturday to win the championship of the Dumas Eighth-Grade Basketball Tournament.

Pampa Blue, now 11-2 overall, was led in scoring by Donovan Lewis with 16 points and Paul Simpson with 13 points.

Pampa opened the tournament with a narrow 33-31 win over Boys Ranch. Brent Cryer tossed in 19 points for Pampa.

Pampa routed Borger White, 41-15, in the semifinals with Cryer and Lewis scoring 11 and 10 points respectively.

"We had three hard tough games," Pampa coach Jimmy Lanning said. "The team played real good for me."

Pampa girls place fourth at Midland Invitational

MIDLAND—Pampa High girls placed fourth last weekend in the two-day Midland Invitational Swim Meet, which was won by Midland girls and El Paso Eastwood boys.

Pampa's Cindy Raymond took first in two events—the 100 freestyle (61.1) and the 200 Intermediate (2:37.0).

Amy Raymond took third in the 200 freestyle (2:07.53) and second in the 100 backstroke (69.3) for Pampa. Julie Turner took fourth in the 200 intermediate (2:37.0) and sixth in the breaststroke (1:21.2) and 500 freestyle (1:21.2).

"The girls had a real good meet," Pampa coach Jackie Stephens said. "Everybody did as well or better than they had in previous meets."

Pampa didn't make the top four in the boys' division, but the 200 medley team, Clay Douglass and Cody Moore placed for the Harvesters.

Pampa's 200 medley team (Reid Steger, Richie Hill, Clay Douglass and Cody Moore) was clocked at 1:54.2 to place sixth.

Douglass took fifth in the 200 IM (2:11.8) and eighth in the 100 butterfly (61.6) while Cody Moore placed eighth in the 50 freestyle (24.6).

"The boys had some real tough breaks," coach Stephens said. "It's the worst they've ever done at an invitational."

Richie Hill would have made the finals in the 200 IM, but was disqualified, while a member of the 400 freestyle became ill and was eight seconds off his usual time.

Seventeen teams in each division were entered in the meet.

Pampa enters the Amarillo Invitational Feb. 5-6.

JULIE TURNER of the Pampa High girls' team placed in three events during the two-day Midland Invitational Swim Meet held Friday and Saturday. Miss Turner took fourth in the 200 IM and eighth in both the 500 freestyle and breaststroke. As a team, Pampa placed fourth in the girls' division. Pampa boys failed to place among the top four in the 17-team meet.

49ers first arrivals for Super Bowl

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers, anxious to get started on the biggest week of their football lives, were in town early as the Super Bowl XVI countdown began in sub-zero temperatures.

The National Football Conference champion 49ers arrived Sunday night, nearly 24 hours ahead of the Cincinnati Bengals. The winners of the American Conference were due to arrive tonight.

The media blitz for the two teams begins in full force Tuesday with photo day in the Silverdome, where both clubs will practice for the Sunday showdown.

This will be the first Super Bowl not anchored to a warm-weather site, and early arrivals Sunday had an instant reminder of that when they were greeted by temperatures that hovered around minus-8 degrees with a wind chill of about minus-45.

The Bengals, of course, will feel right at home in that climate. They battled even more brutal cold and wind — the wind-chill factor was minus-59 — when they eliminated San Diego in the AFC title game eight days ago. The 49ers joined them in the Super Bowl by staging a brilliant 89-yard march in the final minutes of the NFC championship game for the winning touchdown to eliminate Dallas.

The weather won't be a factor for either the Super Bowl practices or the game, though, because the Fibreglas-covered Silverdome is climate-controlled. It's always 72 degrees and dry inside.

Besides being the first Super Bowl to be played in the north, the Cincinnati-San Francisco match marks the first time that two teams came from losing records one year to challenge for the NFL championship the very next season. Both the Bengals and 49ers posted 6-10 records in 1980 but staged remarkable turnarounds this season, finishing with the best records in their respective conferences.

San Francisco's 13-3 regular-season record included a 21-3 decision over the Bengals, who finished the year at 12-4. That would seem to be a good omen for the 49ers, who also had regular-season victories over both the New York Giants and Dallas, the two teams they beat in playoff games en route to their Super Bowl date with the Bengals.

In their victory over the Bengals, the 49ers got a pair of touchdown passes from Joe Montana, hero of the late drive that beat the Cowboys in the NFC title game. Montana won the NFC passing title. He had 311 completions on 488 attempts for 3,565 yards and 19 touchdowns.

Cincinnati counters with Ken Anderson, the NFL's Most Valuable Player, who led the league in passing by hitting 300 of 479 for 3,754 yards and 29 TDs.

Michigan, excited about hosting the big game, has an exciting week planned for visitors. There are concerts by Frank Sinatra, Diana Ross and Rod Stewart scheduled, a couple of National Hockey League games, tennis featuring John McEnroe and Guillermo Vilas, and some important boxing and college basketball. And there are the usual parties, a routine part of the Super Bowl scene.

No wonder the 49ers came in early.

Tulsa win highlights MVC action

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Paul Pressey's elastic antics and solid scoring from teammates Mike Anderson and Greg Stewart helped No. 18 Tulsa stun No. 16 Wichita State to highlight Missouri Valley Conference weekend basketball action.

Meanwhile, Mitchell Anderson scored 25 points as Bradley throttled tough West Texas State 92-69 Saturday to remain atop the Valley standings.

Tulsa kept pace with the Braves by swarming past Wichita State, 99-88, in the nationally televised game.

Bradley is 5-0 in the league and 11-6 for the season after winning five games straight. Tulsa is second with a 4-1 league mark and 12-2 season record.

New Valley member Illinois State is the only other conference team with a single loss, standing at 3-1 after the Redbirds handled New Mexico State 72-58 Saturday.

Wichita State is fourth at 2-2 and Southern Illinois, after easing past Indiana State 83-74, is in a three-way tie for fifth with New Mexico State and Creighton. All have 2-3 league marks.

Bradley's Anderson increased his career point output to 2,079 — fourth best in Valley history — with his performance Saturday.

Although Stewart and Anderson led Tulsa with 26 points apiece, Tulsa Coach Nolan Richardson noted it was floor leader Paul Pressey who "does whatever it takes to win."

Pressey collected 20 points, 7 rebounds, 7 steals and 7 assists in the upset of Wichita State, which was placed on three-year probation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association earlier in the week.

Tulsa trailed by 15 midway through the first half, but scored 67 points in a torrid second half which saw the Hurricane connect from the field at a 74 percent clip.

Tulsa used a tenacious defense and a transition attack to blow past the Shockers. A record crowd of 9,119 saw Tulsa win its 26th straight at home.

Freshman guard Aubrey Sherrad bombed 27 points for the Shockers while forward Antoine Carr, playing with a pulled leg muscle, had 25.

League-leading scorer Jaime Pena, who was averaging 19 points a game for New Mexico State, had just four points against Illinois State. The Redbirds were led by junior center Rick Lamb's career-high 25 points.

Ken Byrd had 17 points to lift Southern Illinois to its win over Indiana State, which stayed in the league cellar with an 0-4 record. Indiana State center Ken Bannister finished with 21 points.

In a nonconference game Saturday, Creighton lost an 82-61 regionally televised contest to Marquette.

Drake, 1-2 in the Valley, was idle Saturday.

Among Valley leaders, Bradley risks its unblemished record at Drake and Creighton next week while Tulsa is at Southern Illinois and Indiana State. Illinois State hosts West Texas State, then travels to Creighton and Drake in the coming week.

Better things to do with their snow shovels than shovel snow

ONOMY, Pa. (AP) — For about 50 years, the combination of snow and wind didn't add up to an aching back. The hardy souls who braved the zero temperatures Sunday wielded snow shovels in a different way than — by turning the flat side down, leaning on the back and gliding down a gentle slope.

The event was the 19th annual world championship snow shovel races, sponsored by the Beaver County Historical Promotion Agency. It's called "old fashioned" because it's thought to be the only official snow shovel race in existence.

"There are better things to do with a shovel than shovel snow," said Len Jaryn, the agency administrator, who dreamed up the event when he saw a 7-year-old son playing in the snow. "Everybody thought we were crazy when we started. But it caught on."

The races are held at Old Economy Park, just up the Ohio River from Pittsburgh, where the temperature hit a record minus 18 Sunday morning. In Economy, thermometers read 4 below zero when contestants showed up at the 153-foot downhill course for test runs.

"The secret is to have a good shovel," said Mary Knox, 21, who participated in her 16th consecutive shovel race. "It's a lot of fun. It's something weird that we all look forward to. One year, I came all the way back from Florida just to race."

Her brother, P.J. Bucuren, 23, won the open class with a time of 7.5 seconds — one second off the all-time record. And he did it with the same shovel the family has used for the last 16 years.

Racers wax their blades to generate the highest-possible speeds. They compete against time, with officials using stop watches to determine winners.

The event even has a modified class, won this year by a hometown boy — Robbie Gregory, 18, who took the division with a sporty model with two chrome exhaust pipes welded onto the blade.

One of the more popular entries was actually not a shovel at all, but the hood of a compact car sporting a wooden handle. One year, a racer had an 8-foot paper mache shark attached to his shovel.

The racers use different styles: Some sit on the shovel, extending their arms like airplane wings for steering and balance, while others prefer a kneeling position. One racer opted to slide down backwards.

"These guys can really handle a shovel," said Szafaryn. "They've mastered this thing. They can fly down the hill."

An intermission was scheduled so participants and fans could sip coffee, hot chocolate or steaming cups of soup served by the Salvation Army in a nearby warming hut.

The housing haves and havenots

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The haves and the havenots are always fighting, and for a good old American reason: The haves want to keep what they've won, and the havenots just as eagerly try to win what they haven't.

Ill in all, it has been a decent battle so long as the economy is expanding and making room for more people.

Under such conditions, the two didn't need to fight. The havenots, that is, could get theirs without having to grab it in the haves. The haves, secure in their property, could act magnanimously to newcomers.

In a shrink economy, however, the mood changes. The haves are clearly to what they have lest it be taken from them, which is why the very thing the havenots have in mind. The haves are marked: they are enemy.

You can see it happening in housing, which used to be the American pastime — the buying, expanding, tending of it, as a symbol of accomplishment. If you had a house you felt you had a have. You felt you belonged.

Now houses now cost about 3.5 times the median household income, a rise in price that produces a two-faced results that is up to conflict. It makes the haves smile over their success: it makes the havenots frown because it shuts them out of the great American dream and pasture.

The haves are mostly older, the havenots younger, which makes the problem even worse. Check who are the leaders of rent control drives, who are the authors of proposals to deny homeowners the right to deduct interest costs from income taxes, and who leads the fight for getting tax breaks for renters and you'll find a lot of people under age 35.

Perfectly understandable behavior, because the very factors (inflation especially) that have made homeowners rich are the factors that make it all but impossible for many young families to own a home of their own.

Understandable, but not necessarily charitable, reasonable or wise.

A now familiar if not hoary proposal, for example, would limit or take away the income tax deductibility of interest paid on home mortgages. That deductibility is generally sizable, because of growth in the size of mortgages and because of the high level of interest rates charged.

Polish people.

But Pressler, just back from a four-day visit in Poland, said he still supports President Reagan's decision to cut off off about $750 million worth of direct food credits to the military government in Warsaw.

"I'm afraid we have to stick with the decision on the credit sales...to keep the pressure on the government for a while," the South Dakota Republican said Sunday night in a telephone interview.

"The area we could look at is through the charitable grants," he said.

Despite Reagan's decision Dec. 14 to suspend direct food assistance to Poland, the United States is continuing to provide about $47 million worth of food to CARE Inc. and Catholic Relief Services for distribution in Poland.

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "A sense of politics is luck" says Edmund G. Brown Jr., who's feeling so lucky at the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate he's not even planning campaigning.

Instead, Brown will save nearly $2 million he has set aside for the November general election, his campaign director Jodie Lewski said.

The plans are just for him to continue to run the state as usual and not have any political activity in the primary," she said.

Opponents in the Democratic primary — state Sen. Paul Carpenter of Cypress and Fresno Mayor Daniel Whitehurst — to be serious competition. The Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, who will be the first reigning pontiff to visit Britain when he travels there in May, has prayed for closer understanding between the Roman Catholic Church and the Anglican Communion, and of accelerating their much-desired union," he said.

Noting that today begins the annual week of prayer for Christian unity, the pontiff said, "Division contradicts the desires of God for his church, and the divine project of his announced (strengthen the faith of) the humanity.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Larry Pressler, warning of a looming catastrophe in Poland, says the Reagan administration should consider increasing aid to charitable institutions that give food and clothing to the Polish people.

But Pressler, just back from a four-day visit in Poland, said he still supports President Reagan's decision to cut off off about $750 million worth of direct food credits to the military government in Warsaw.

"I'm afraid we have to stick with the decision on the credit sales...to keep the pressure on the government for a while," the South Dakota Republican said Sunday night in a telephone interview.

Posse still rides in Dallas County

By JERRY NEEDHAM
Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS (AP) — There is a farmer, a rancher, a service station owner, a mechanic, a carpenter, a dentist, a restaurateur, a pharmacist, a supermarket manager and three doctors.

There are about 25 sorrel quarterhorses, 15 hands high, with white blazes on their faces and required "mild dispositions." In a glass-and-chrome-building town that doesn't really need them, these men and their horses make up the Dallas County Sheriff's Posse.

Although Dallas County undoubtedly had its early-day posses that gathered spontaneously when the public order was threatened by criminals such as bank robbers, the county's current and permanent posses was started in the early 1950s under former Sheriff Bill Decker.

While posses used to ride through thickets to catch desperados and cattle rustlers — some of whom they would hang — today they ride in Christmas parades, round up loose cattle on the freeways and guard county facilities from college students during the Texas-Oklahoma football weekend.

They also look for children lost in the woods.

And they still wear star-shaped badges. "We can do a good job, but in the Dallas area, there's so much city and so many peace officers that we're not called on very often," said 63-year-old J.P. Jones, who runs a local security firm and has served as a posse lieutenant during most of his 21 years in the organization.

"They don't use us near like they do in some of the West Texas counties, where the sheriffs really depend on their posses."

"There's some fine boys in the posse," 65-year-old Cotton Marriot said in a telephone interview from his ranch north of Seagoville.

"I enjoy riding a horse and, in fact, I'm sitting on one right now. I work on a horse all day and I got so tired of getting off to answer the telephone that I had one put up on the wall here in the barn so I can just ride up to it," he said.

Posses have their roots in Anglo-Saxon law and have been part of Western U.S. folklore for more than 100 years. They formed when able-bodied townsmen — the legal definition of posse — banded together at the call of the sheriff or marshal to chase criminals.

The taming of the frontier combined with technological advances and career specialization have all but eliminated the need for posses in modern urban areas, but the desire for the camaraderie and usefulness lives on.

Marriot, a cattle and horse rancher, is the eldest of the posse members, whose average age is in the 40s, said Sheriff's Capt. Bob Kennedy, coordinator for the unit and the only paid deputy working with the organization.

The volunteer posse members are deputized by the sheriff and issued badges and identification. They supply their own horses, gear, firearms and uniforms, which are Western-style.

Grain talks suspension is 'informal' embargo

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's decision three weeks ago to suspend grain talks as part of the sanctions against the Soviet Union for its role in the military crackdown in Poland amounts to an "informal" embargo, says one major farm organization.

George W. Stone, president of the National Farmers Union, said American farmers are beginning to feel the effects of the sanctions against the Soviet Union and Poland.

Reagan also halted shipments to the Soviet Union of high-technology items, including computers and machinery used in gas pipeline construction.

But in a recent speech to the Texas Farmers Union, Stone said "farmers will take the brunt of this foreign policy decision" because the overwhelming portion of trade with the Soviet Union involves agricultural products.

Stone called on the administration to take "strong measures" to offset the decline in grain prices caused by the U.S. economic sanctions.

No grain sales were halted by Reagan's order. An existing long-term agreement calling for minimum and maximum sales of wheat and corn to the Soviets is in effect. However, it expires Sept. 30 and talks on a new agreement were to begin soon.

It was that round of discussion that Reagan suspended. Meanwhile, the Soviets have bought slightly less than half of the 23 million metric tons of grain they were told they could buy in the final year of the agreement.

If no further action is taken, the Soviet Union will be free after Sept. 30 to buy on the U.S. market the same as any other foreign purchaser because it will have no agreement controlling purchase volume.

If talks on a new agreement do commence, the basic question arises: What kind of agreement should be sought?

The current one, which took effect Oct. 1, 1976, is quite specific as to how much wheat and corn the Soviet Union must buy each year.

An official of Cargill, Inc., Minneapolis, Minn., raised the possibility recently that more flexibility should be sought in any new long-term grain agreement with the Soviet Union. Cargill is a major exporter of U.S. agricultural products, including grain to the Soviets.

Robbin S. Johnson, assistant vice president and manager for public affairs, said some features of the current agreement — referred to as an LTA — should be retained, such as specified regular consultations between the two countries.

"From a purely economic perspective, there may not be a need to include economic provisions" such as clauses on commodity coverage, quantities and similar details, he said.

Loophole closed on benefits for children who killed parents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Social Security Administration is plugging a loophole that made it possible for juveniles who killed their parents to collect survivor's benefits.

The tightening of procedures was ordered Sunday by Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker, who was responding to reports of two such cases in California. Social Security spokesman Jim Brown said.

A defendant sentenced as a felon in a slaying is prohibited under Social Security law from getting survivor's benefits based on a relative's contributions to the system.

However, in the two California cases the beneficiaries apparently escaped that restriction because they were sentenced as juveniles.

"I'm not going to stand by and let a juvenile delinquent get money out of the Social Security fund because he killed his parent," Schweiker said in a statement issued Sunday.

One of the California youths, who killed his mother and sister five years ago, reportedly reaped $21,500 in survivor's benefits upon being paroled by the California Youth Authority.

A second juvenile, who killed his father in 1977, reportedly received $8,000 in benefits.

Brown said the agency has the authority to issue rules to bar payments to youthful offenders "and we can stop the checks of anyone who is now collecting."

But he said he doubts the agency will be able to recover any payments that already have been made.

As a result of Schweiker's order, Brown said, Social Security offices around the country have been told not to process claims from survivors who may have intentionally killed a parent.

Brown said he did not know how many people would be affected by the action.

Congress ordered Social Security to suspend disability benefits to about 4,000 prisoners in October 1980.

Socialists suffer non-fatal court and election setbacks

PARIS (AP) — It was a bad weekend for President Francois Mitterrand and his ruling Socialists. Conservative candidates won back three National Assembly seats and retained a fourth one, and the constitutional court ordered the government to amend its new nationalization law.

The setback to Mitterrand's eight-month-old regime was not even crippling, let alone fatal. The Socialists still have a 75-seat majority in the assembly, the lower house of the French parliament. And the court decision will delay — not block — the nationalization of 35 banks, two investment companies and five industrial groups. It will also force the government to pay more for them.

But the special assembly elections Sunday were the first test of the Socialists' popularity since the landslide in June that gave them control of the 491-member assembly. Conservative leader Jacques Chirac, the mayor of Paris, termed the outcome "a superb victory for the opposition."

"After only eight months in power for the Socialists and Communists, the French people have realized that the policies followed by the government will bring no concrete solution to the serious problems France now faces," he claimed.

"The opposition is always favored in special elections," said the national secretary of the Socialist Party, Jean Poperen. "The voters were not motivated enough. They thought we didn't need them, but they were wrong."

The voter turnout in the four districts was about 10 percent less than in the national election in June.

The election then of three Socialists and a conservative in the four districts — two in Paris and two near the capital — were declared invalid by the Constitutional Council because of technical violations of campaign laws. Political observers had expected the races to be close.

Instead all four conservative candidates won between 51.49 and 57.18 percent of the vote, canceling the runoff that would have been held next Sunday in the districts where no one got a majority.

Three of the winners were members of Chirac's Rally for the Republic (RPR), the Gaullist party. The fourth was from former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's Union for French Democracy.
