Single case of deadly meningitis confirmed

Staff Writer

Local parents are being warned to · carefully watch their children with colds for signs of symptoms that that could develop into a very contagious. potentially fatal form of meningitis.

Dr. Fred Marasegan of Borger is currently treating a 5 - month - old Pampa boy. Danny McNabb Jr., for a case of neisseria meningitis.

The child is recovering extremely "well in the hospital here (Borger), and all members of the family have had the antibiotic shots for the disease. The hospital staff that was exposed to the child has also received the antibiotic shots," Dr. Marasegan said, "not only to be assured against the disease but to prevent carrying it to anyone else.

I suggest that any child who was exposed to the disease should be checked at their local physician's, if there are any symptoms." Dr. Marasegan said.

This can be a highly contagious disease and should be watched." he said

Tests administered to six - year - old . Donny McNabb were at first diagnosed as negative, but a few days later, new · tests were read as positive. The boy. who was attending St. Matthew's Day School, a private facility, had been receiving antibiotic shots before and while attending the school

St. Matthew's administrator Bunny Nichols said today that the 10 - day period of incubation for the potentially fatal meningitis was up, as of Tuesday. and we did not see any abnormal absences in the school. The type of meningitis the child was being treated for is especially virulant and the symptoms would have probably appeared within 24 hours to two days. We felt after speaking with two local pediatricians, the Department of Human Resources and the County Health Nurse that because the child with meningitis never attended our school it was not necessary to notify the parents to have their children tested. Dr. Marasegan explained the disease and the symptoms: What appears to be a simple cold could be more serious. A high temperature combined with symptoms associated with colds are secondary to infection that could develop into meningitis.

The incidence of bacterial meningitis is approximately one in 500 children younger than five years of age, which peaks in the neonatal period from four months to two years. Meningitis is especially prevalent in children of low socioeconomic status who experience crowding and are poorly nourished as well as in those with sickly cell or other underlying disease.

In older children, meningitis is caused by bacteria that invades the nasopharyngeal mucosa, causing bactermia which can migrate to other

Gilbert to be removed from head football coaching position

BY LYNN HUNTER

Managing Editor Larry Gilbert will not be head football coach for the Pampa Harvesters next year, after actions taken Tuesday night during an executive session of the Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees.

School Superintendent Bob Phillips said today the trustees renewed Gilbert's teaching contract for 1982 - 83. but failed to act on the head football coaching contract.

Phillips was asked if the board's failure to act meant Gilbert will not be coaching next year.

"He will not be head football coach. obviously." Phillips replied. "We do hope he will stay with us another year and teach.

Phillips said Gilbert's teaching contract expires this month and required board action now to finish out the current school year

In their annual personnel review, the board also extended the contracts of Superintendent Phillips and Deputy Superintendent James Trusty one year through June 30, 1985.

In other business, the trustees authorized Lubbock architect Herbert Brasher to proceed with preliminary plans for construction of the baseball field behind Harvester Stadium

The board granted leaves of absence to Debra Lombardozzi, first grade teacher at Baker, and Marlene Kyle. fifth grade teacher at Wilson. Resignations were accepted from Ron Pickard, health teacher and coach at Pampa High School, and Terry LaDuke, science teacher at Pampa High School.

Superintendent Phillips also said the school system deparately needs substitute teachers. He urged anyone interested in a substitute position to sign up at the school administration

TEC faces another $2 million in cuts and possible lawsuit

Employment Commission members facing even more budget cuts have adopted a method for selecting which employees to fire, but now they face a possible lawsuit by their own chairman.

After getting the word from Washington Tuesday that the agency would be $2 million worse off in fiscal 1982 than they had thought, the commissioners voted 2-1 to fire the last 500 employees hired. Chairman Nolan Ward voted no.

Laying off employees strictly by seniority would eliminate too many minority and female employees who only hired on in recent years because of earlier discrimination, said Ward

"I think it's wrong," he told reporters after the commission's meeting. "I think it's illegal discrimination. We're just compounding past discriminatory practices on the part of the agency. Ward earlier had threatened legal plan were adopted. But Tuesday, he said he expected Rep. Paul Ragsdale, D-Dallas, to file the lawsuit, which he would "certainly" join.

Ragsdale said Tuesday afternoon he would file suit "if it's possible for me to do it legally." The matter might be under the U.S. Justice Department's jurisdiction because of an investigation into state hiring practices three years ago, Ragsdale said.

Last week, the commissioners were told to expect a $10.5 million cut in addition to the $20 million already deducted from their 1982 budget. But when the firm figures came from Washington, there was another $2 million missing from Texas' share for a total reduction of over 30 percent from fiscal 1981. That news followed Administrator Ernie Tullis' report of some ironic figures: Washington officials reported a $100 million nationwide surplus in unemployment taxes paid in by employers. But the money will do Texas no good.

Officials identify missing and dead in California mudslide

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Officials have identified seven people, including a family of four, who may have been buried alive when tons of mud entombed several homes in the Santa Cruz area.

Interstate compact complicates El Paso's effort to get water is not mentioned in the document

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) - An interstate agreement is to be the topic today when El Paso, Texas, and New Mexico officials continue their arguments over the city's lawsuit to get water from its neighboring state.

Today is the third day of the U.S. District Court hearing on El Paso's lawsuit, which asks the court to find unconstitutional a 1953 New Mexico statute banning export of groundwater Although El Paso's attorneys say the issue is limited to the constitutionality of the statute, the Rio Grande Compact was the point of contention at the close of Tuesday's testimony. The compact is an interstate agreement that allocates Rio Grande water to the different states through which the river flows New Mexico officials contend that allowing El Paso to export the water would violate the compact because removal of the water would lead to depleted flows in the Rio Grande New Mexico State Engineer Steve eynolds testified Tuesday that the depletion would require him to retire water rights in some of his state's most productive agricultural land. Reynolds said the diminished flows also would result in the federal Bureau of Reclamation, which is in charge of the Rio Grande project, spreading the losses through New Mexico and "Obviously, the distribution of water under the compact would be to the disadvantage of New Mexico." he said "It would violate the intent of the Rio Grande Compact

El Paso's legal team contended the

Reynolds was the first defense witness. El Paso rested its case Tuesday after presenting testimony from two witnesses and depositions from three others. Cross-examination of Revnolds was to resume today

Most of the testimony in the case has concerned the amount of water in the Mesilla and Hueco bolsons and the implications for New Mexico if El Paso is allowed to pump water from the underground deposits

Reynolds testified Tuesday that New Mexico cannot meet its future water needs even if El Paso is not allowed to get the water.

He said New Mexico's water demands will reach at least 3.6 million acre-feet by the year 2020, while available water will total only 3.1 million acre-feet. An acre-foot equals 325.851 gallons He also said that some areas of the Mexico farmers who depend on the water because the effluent would be pumped into the river downstream from the New Mexico state line.

Would it be fair to reduce agriculture in New Mexico to supply the city of El Paso?" Lutz asked. "That's not the city's intention."

Wilson said. Testimony in the hearing continued to indicate that while El Paso's attorneys say the lawsuit focuses on a "narrow legal, constitutional issue." the reason behind the lawsuit is economic.

Winter storm kills eight in

Snow, sleet and freezing rain moved eastward across Texas early today on the heels of a death-dealing winter storm that glazed streets and highways from the Red River to the Rio Grande and caused at least eight deaths.

The latest storm had spread snow sleet and freezing rain from the New Mexico border eastward across North Texas and Central Texas into East Texas by dawn today Forecasters said the freezing precipitation would end from west to east by tonight with accumulations expected to range from 1-3 inches. A 9-year-old Alvarado boy drowned

Tuesday afternoon when he broke through ice covering a drainage ditch. The Johnson County medical examiners office said the body of Keith Allen Grimes was recovered from the numbing water 45 minutes later.

"I don't want to talk about it right now." said Mrs. Strain, reached by telephone at her room in Reese County Hospital. The unnamed infant is Mrs. Strain's fourth child, her first daughter. Witnesses said Mrs. Strain walked to an ambulance after giving birth.

Tuesday's hearing was to determine whether Mrs. Strain would continue as housing authority director, giving her the opportunity to answer questions about her management of the agency. Board members agreed to postpone the hearing until Mrs. Strain can return

The Houston Police Department reinstituted foot patrols downtown, the first time officers had walked a downtown beat since the 1950s.

No serious crimes were reported in Houston Monday, which officers attributed to the cold. Dallas Police Department spokesman Bob Shaw said records showed about a 20 percent decrease in crime from last year. partially credited to the chilly temperatures.

Interest rates lowered for commodity loans

Commodity Credit Corporation commodity loans disbursed in January will have a 12.25 percent interest rate. Everett Rank, executive vice president; of the corporation, announced recently.

The new rate, down from 14.5; percent, reflects the interest rate charged CCC by the U.S. Treasury in January, Rank said.

Rank also said that outstanding 1981 crop CCC loans will be adjusted to reduce the original 14.5 percent interest rate charge to 12.25 percent.

The 12.25 percent interest rate applies also to outstanding and new farm storage facility loans which are subject to the variable interest rate, Rank said.

1980 Christmas Day shooting of Mexican national of the Justice Department's civil rights division, Hector Santoscoy by a policeman comes under the scrutiny of a federal grand jury today.

The Bexar County grand jury twice cleared patrolman James Cammack of any state criminal charge in the killing, although it recommended that the police department reevaluate its procedures in

The police shooting touched off numerous protest marches and demonstrations by Mexican-American groups, complaints by Mexican Consul General Raul Gonzalez Galarza, and an appearance by Santoscoy's weeping mother and other family members before the city council.

Testimony begins in drug smuggling tria

TYLER, Texas (AP) — The first witness in Rex Cauble's drug smuggling trial says he paid the millionaire's ranch foreman $250,000 in drug money and that Cauble was present during the payment and took part of the money.

Convicted drug trafficker Raymond Eugene Hawkins testified Tuesday that he and foreman Charles "Muscles" Foster met Cauble at the rancher's Denton home and that he proceeded to count out $250,000 Hawkins owed Foster for a 1977 marijuana deal.

"I counted the money out on the floor and paid Muscles." Hawkins said.

When Assistant U.S. Attorney David Baugh asked Hawkins what Foster did after getting the money. Hawkins at first said the foreman gave Cauble the cash and said, "Here, keep this for me.

But after Baugh asked Hawkins to read his earlier statement to refresh his memory, Hawkins said Foster gave money to Cauble and said. "Here is your half. Mr. Cauble.

Attorneys say a key issue in the drug smuggling. conspiracy and embezzlement trial is whether Cauble knew his cowboys were involved in the elaborate dope ring.

Nobody is going to deny that smuggling did go on and was carried on by people who knew Mr. Cauble," lead defense attorney Roy Minton told jurors in opening remarks Tuesday.

Hawkins pleaded guilty last week to drug possession and Attorneys in Cauble's trial distribution charges and have described Foster as a agreed to testify for the . prosecution. Hawkins is to resume testimony Thursday when the trial resumes.

Hawkins testified that Mr. Foster - 'Muscles' was treated by Mr. Cauble in Foster set up the smuggling deal and arranged for trucks very much the same way a to transport the marijuana father would treat a son. from docked shrimp boats to Bosque. Leon. Crockett. Tarrant and Harris counties.

He said Foster told him Cauble knew about the smuggling operation from the start, but under cross-examination Hawkins said that as far as he knew Cauble had no knowledge of the first of several marijuana operations. Hawkins said he had told Cauble he made his money as a smuggler.

"I told him I smuggled pot." Hawkins said.

In opening remarks. Minton described Cauble as a businessman so busy he 'doesn't have time to look out the window.

Minton said Cauble had no idea that Foster was involved in drug smuggling, that he lent Foster money without question because he trusted him and considered him a good salesman capable of making the two men legitimate profit

Hawkins also testified he paid Cauble $100.000 for a ranch near Denton and $40,000 for a building. He testified that at a later time Cauble laundered $100,000 of Hawkins' smuggled money 1. during a trip he and Cauble made to Las Vegas. Nev.

Hawkins was convicted and sentenced to 20 years in prison in 1979, but that conviction was later overturned.

Minton confronted Hawkins with testimony he had given a Beaumont grand jury in 1979 that contradicted Tuesday's testimony. Minton asked Hawkins if he had always told the truth while testifying before the grand jury.

Not all the time Hawkins replied. "I had 20 years and was trying to do the best I could to help myself.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me
This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

ERA dealt two body blows

The Equal Rights Amendment. which has been on the ropes for some time is now down for what promises to be the final count. U.S. District Judge Marion Callister's recent ruling in a suit brought by Utah and Arizona all but ends any slim chance ERA may have had of winning ratification by next June.

The federal court dealt two paralyzing body blows to ERA: It said Congress lacked authority to extend the deadline of for ratification by three years as it did in 1978: And it upheld the decision of five states which had rescinded their previous approval of the ERA amendment.

When Congress yielded to ERA advocates, and for the first time ever, advanced the seven - year ratification deadline which expired on March 29, 1979, it permitted states that had rejected ratification to change their minds but it prohibited states that had ratified the right to rescind. Such manifestly unfair legislation invited litigation and the decision that has followed. Judge Callister said that when Congress established a seven - year time limit for ratification, it was binding on both federal and state governments and could not be changed. And he ruled that a state's right of rescission is as much a part of the Constitution's amendment provisions under Article V as is their original right to ratify

It was reprehensible for Congress to abuse the ratification process that ratified ERA did so within the first year after its submission. After 1973 only five additional states ratified and four states that originally approved the proposed amendment had rescinded their action at the time Congress granted the three year time extension: ratification requires 38 state approvals.

Fortunately, the Mormon Church as an issue in the ERA struggle has been resolved and properly should have no place in an appeal. The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco turned down ERA proponents in their earlier suit to disqualify Judge Callister because of his membership in the Mormon Church, which has vigorously opposed the amendment. Clearly we'll all be in trouble if judges must disqualify themselves because of their race, religion or creed.

Judge Callister's logic appears unassailable to us. We are confident his decision overturning Congress on this significant constitutional issue will be upheld by the Supreme Court

The cause of women's rights is going to have to find a new vehicle for expression. ERA is dead.

Polish struggle needs to survive

The news and communications blackout clamped over grieving Poland permits too few glimpses of the tragedy in progress there. A bit of censored Polish newsfilm. dispatches from most of Poland, and even interviews with weeping refugees arriving in Austria cannot convey the full depth of despair Poles must feel.

Consider what life is like today in Warsaw. Gdansk. or Krakow. A bitter cold compounds the usual discomfort in drafty, poorly constructed apartment buildings. Coal. Poland's primary fuel for heating, is in short supply. So too is food, and obtaining what little is available requires standing for hours in interminable lines.

A nationwide curfew compels ordinary citizens to remain indoors after 10 p.m. Travel between cities is virtually prohibited. Those with telephones cannot make long distance calls and local calls may be monitored by state security forces. Radio. television. and newspaper carry only the "news" approved by army and Communist Party censors. Rumors reign in place of any reliable sources of imformation — Poles have been forbidden to listen to the BBC or Voice of America on pain of Draconian penalties. Accordingly. the raw fear and physical deprivations of life under martial law are made that much worse by a terrible uncertainty. The average Pole knows little more than those in the West about what may be happening even a dozens miles from his flat. office. or factory

But far, far worse than all of this must be the death of hope.

Millions of Poles yearning for a taste of freedom; for a measure of control over their own lives and destinies, had rallied to Solidarity's banner. For 16 months, they had dared to hope that the future could be better than the past.

Today's the tanks and troops at every street corner mock that visions. In fact, the future for Poles seems more likely to be a slate - gray copy of the barren past and present. Hope, that savings grace for those in extremis, is itself receiving tha last rites in Poland.

The martial law crackdown planned and executed by Polish Quislings willing for whatever reasons to serve the interests of Moscow has been dishearteningly defeated and not to surrender, that's effective. Solidarity has been victory.

decapitated — its best leaders. Lech Walesa included, have been interned.

The tough shipyard workers in Gdansk. Solidarity's birthplace and bastion, have been dispersed, their srtike broken by truncheons, tear gas, and armored personnel carriers. Coal miners at the Wujek mine in southwestern Poland succumbed to an attack by security forces that left seven dead and scores injured. A traveler returning to Belgium reported that 30 strikers were killed eariler in an army helicopter assault on their factory in

Meanwhile. the toll of those arrested for real or imagined opposition to martial law continues to mount. By one account, nearly 50.000 persons have been packed off to government detention centers.

To parapharse Britain's Lord Grey on the eve of World War I, the lights are going out all over Poland. Whatever they are turned on again within our lifetime may well depend on how the West reacts.

The initial relief expressed by some in Washington and Western Europe over the fact that Solidarity is being strangled by Poles rather than Russians is, to put it charitably. misplaced. The point is, the Polish people's struggle for self determination deserves to live.

The Soviet Union is no disinterested bystander merely nodding approval as a Polish government crushes the aspirations of its own people. Moscow is, at the very least, an accomplice and co conspirator.

The West will want to help the Polish people without aiding their jailers. If the West takes its commitment to freedom seriously. there will be stringent political and economic sanctions applied against Moscow and Warsaw.

Let Polish Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski and his now pleased Soviet patrons figure out how to pay Poland's $27 billion in foreign debts without help from Western banks and governments.

And, above all, let the Polish people know that the West too subscribes to the words of Polish patriot Marshal Joseph Pilsudski. the hero who defended Warsaw against Soviet armies in 1920: "To be

It's not often that the minister plenipotentiary of a major power receives a dressing down such as Begin delivered to our man in Israel on the occasion of the embargoing of U.S. arms aid in response to Israeli annexation of occupied Syrian territory. In Israel's case, that is survival itself. Its existence will remain in question so long as the region remains perpetually in a pre - explosive state. For the United States, the advantage is greater resistance to Soviet penetration and less danger of regional animosities sparking an East - West conflagration.

Ideally, the interests of both are best served by a comprehensive Arab Israeli settlement.

Realistically, successive governments in both countries for decades have been prepared to make the most of much less. And they have been able to cooperate more or less effectively without benefit of formal alliance so long as each has a realis ic understanding of what the other criminals are made to pay their victims.

By PAUL HARVEY In some cities in the United States

The idea of letting non - violent criminals live in restitution centers at night and work by day began about four years ago. One of the first cities to adopt the program was Pascagoula, Mississippi. Let's see how it works

Historically, convicted criminals are expected to "pay a debt to society." Instead, they become a further burden on society. locked up and fed and clothed at a continuing cost to taxpayers averaging $17,000 a year: that's more than it costs to send a student through Harvard.

Nuts to that! In Pascagoula, Mississippi. instead of paying a "debt to society." they pay their own upkeep and repay their victims. Under this restitution program, a court may sentence a non - violent criminal to confinement at night and work by day. The work may be almost anything - from construction to food service to service station.

So successful was the program in Pascagoula that is quickly spread to other Mississippi cities: Hattiesburg. Brandon and Greenwood.

After the first 52 months of 'Operation Restitution' inmates have earned $1,677,000. They have repaid to victims of their crimes $215,000. They have paid $414,000 to the state for their own room and board THey have paid $145,000 in fines and court costs. They have paid $140,000 toward the upkeep of their own families.

And $315,000 has been placed in savings accounts for the men to collect when they are discharged. And they are allowed to keep and spend in the local economy $20 a week. Other Mississippi communities where jails are full are contemplating this alternative: Tupelo and Jackson.

Nationally, a curtailment of CETA funds from the federal governemnt should invite a proliferation of the program.

Mickey Chambers of the Mississippi Department of Corrections says, "In property crimes this program lets the victim feel that there is some real justice and it gives the offender a chance, if he wants to, to get himself

Inmates who do not have a high school education have a further opportunity to attend an adult learning center and work toward the equivalent of a high school diploma

And most significantly, recidivism nationally averages 74 percent - that is. 74 percent of released prisoners then commit other crimes.

But, among those released from restitution centers so far, the return rate is only 3 percent.

Concessions from auto workers will mean price cuts on cars

DETROIT (AP) - The United Auto Workers and General Motors Corp. have made progress in talks on contract concessions by agreeing that savings be passed directly to buyers. but the government cast a shadow on the talks, predicting a massive loss of auto jobs.

The union and the nation's biggest automaker agreed Tuesday that any cost savings that result from union sacrifices to make domestic vehicles more competitive with foreign models would be applied to car and truck

The union made the same proposal to bargainers for Ford Motor Co. late Tuesday afternoon, but Ford officials said they would not respond until today at the earliest. Union talks with both companies were to resume today.

Donald Ephlin, UAW vice president and head of the union's Ford department, said prices would drop by "more than $100" a vehicle once the expected worker concessions package

Robert Dederick. assistant secretary of commerce for economic affairs, said meanwhile the auto and auto-related industries that emerges in the next few years will have 550,000 fewer jobs than

About 214,000 autoworkers are now on indefinite layoffs. Asked by reporters what the outlook is for those now on the layoff rolls, Dederick replied: "Half will go into other jobs."

Ford and GM say they need substantial reductions in labor costs to become more competitive with foreign manufacturers. UAW President Douglas Fraser has said the union would seek its own concessions.

especially on job security. There will be no concessions to General Motors as such." Fraser said at a news conference at GM headquarters. "Any concessions will go to the consumer, not to the corporation. The talks, which began Monday come six months before traditional midsummer negotiations and during the worst industry slump in a half-century.

We are hopeful and confident that the lower prices will generate a significant amount of additional sales and result in the return to work of many of the 124,000 laid-off GM workers. Fraser said

GM Chairman Roger B. Smith said the automaker "welcomes the UAW's historic proposal.

Smith said the "heart of the problem" in the industry is non-competitive labor costs and inflated car and truck prices.

Smith said any cost savings from a new contract would be applied to all GM vehicles sold today or hereafter. The savings per vehicle sold would be returned to consumers, most likely in the form of rebates, after a final agreement between GM and the UAW is reached, he said.

In Washington, Dederick said Tuesday at a hearing of the Senate subcommittee on employment and productivity that since 1978, the auto industry itself probably had lost 100,000 jobs for good. The industry probably will lose another 100,000, he said, and the loss in related industries from 1978 should total about 350,000 jobs.

The industry and its satellites employed 2.8 million people in 1978.

In other economic developments

Tuesday: - An economist said that if the Reagan administration sticks with its three-part policy of slow monetary growth, tax cuts and increased defense spending, revitalizing the economy cannot be accomplished.

Lester Thurow, economics and management professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. told the House Task Force on Economic Policy and Productivity the administration's approach is partly self-defeating because defense spending inhibits economic growth by diverting part of the nation's gross national product from investment in other, more crucial areas.

States may limit jobs aliens can hold

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's ailing economy may have swayed the Supreme Court to allow more state-imposed limits on the kinds of public jobs resident aliens can hold, a lawyer in the case says

If the economic climate had been a healthier one I think at least one vote would have changed," said Peter Schey of Los Angeles, director of the National Center for Immigrants'

By a 5-4 vote Tuesday, the high court ruled that California may prohibit permanent resident aliens from holding jobs as state "peace officers

The state law includes such jobs as dental board inspector. fire warden. Parks and Recreation employee and messenger for the state treasurer in the legal definition of peace officer. The definition used to include such jobs as cemetery caretaker, bed inspector and toll-collector:

The exclusion of aliens from basic governmental processes is not a deficiency in the democratic system but a necessary consequence of the community's process of political self-definition." Justice Byron R. White wrote for the court's slender majority.

Schey, who helped challenge the law for three Los Angeles residents whose lack of citizenship made them ineligible for jobs as deputy probation officers, predicted that the ruling will fairly immediately result in thousands of legal immigrants being terminated from the public employment

His organization estimates that some 250,000 resident aliens now hold jobs in state and local governments.

It appears the overall result will be a significant increase in unemployment among legal immigrants." he said.

Generally, resident aliens enjoy all the constitutional rights and protections of citizens

In a 1973 decision, the Supreme Court barred states from imposing blanket bans on state employment for permanent resident aliens, stating that exceptions could be made for certain sensitive policy-making positions,

In 1978, the justices ruled in a New Jersey case that states may bar aliens from jobs as state policemen. And in 1979, another exception was found - the court said New York and other states could prevent aliens from becoming teachers at public schools.

Schey's reaction was far less impassioned than that of the four justices who voted to do away with the California law. Led by Justice Harry A. Blackmun, the four charged that the ruling "rewrites the court's precedents, ignores history, defies common sense and reinstates the deadening mantle of state parochialism in public employment.

Blackmun noted that California already allows resident aliens to head county probation offices or become lawyers, judges and eyen state Supreme Court justices.

Ohio takes licking in lottery

CLEVELAND (AP) — Three aces came up and the state of Ohio was $1,902,705 in the hole We really took a licking." lottery spokesman Robert came up Monday night - the 11th day of the first month of the year. So many people had picked the three digits because of the date that the state must pay $2,740,375. Only $837,670 was bet on the drawing.

Walczak said In its daily lottery game "The Number," the number 111

It will even out in the long run, "Walczk said Tuesday.

While this year is the 200th anniversary of the bald eagle as the centerpiece in the Seal of the United States - and has been designated the Year of the Eagle - the bird is an endangered species in most states.

The eagle has been an enduring symbol throughout time - of flight, freedom and courage - but it has been by no means universally loved.

Hunters shoot bald eagles, sometimes accidentally since the birds do not develop their characteristic white head feathers until they are 4 or 5 years old. The birds also are poisoned and starved from their habitats by sprawling development

Some ranchers kill the birds, too, mistakenly believing them threats to livestock. Actually, bald eagles generally eat fish or small animals. which they can spot with their "eagle eyes" up to a mile away.

Even Benjamin Franklin objected that the bald eagle was "a bird of bad moral character" after the Continental Congress, on June 20, 1782, adopted the white-headed bird, with its 71/2 foot wingspan, as the national symbol

Now, 200 years later, bald eagles unique to North America - are protected by federal law from birth to beyond the grave. Killing a bald eagle is punishable by up to a year in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Anyone who finds a dead bald eagle is legally required to turn it over to the government, which ships the bodies to a Fish and Wildlife Service laboratory in Madison, Wis. to be studied for a cause

The remains are either given to museums to be stuffed - a special federal permit is required - or shipped to a national repository in Pocatello,

Indians may apply to the repository to use the feathers and other parts in religious ceremonies, but it is illegal to trade in them.

Last February, the government arrested more than 30 dealers in such objects as Indian Kachina dolls containing illegal feathers, and Fish and Wildlife agent Bill Zimmerman said one man was sentenced to five years recently for dealing in such

Zimmerman added, however, that the number of people arrested for the actual killing of eagles is small. "The problem with the illegal shooting is the fact that these things occur where there aren't many people," he said. "Unless you have a witness, it's pretty hard to track them down." Sheila Schmeling said that of the 780 bald eagles turned over to the Fish and Wildlife lab in Madison in the last five years, 17 percent had been shot.

Other than "blunt trauma" - such as being hit by a car or accidentally flying into something — shooting was the largest single cause of death.

The lab found about 9 percent of the bald eagles were electrocuted, but Zimmerman said the Fish and Wildlife Service has been successful in forcing utilities to modify power lines and transformers to make that less likely.

Daniel James, a biologist with the federal office of endangered species, said the biggest threat to bald eagles and golden eagles, which also are protected by law, is loss of habitat and a consequent loss of food.

"They're not very tolerant," he said. When you put a roadway off a mile there's a pretty good chance that nest may be abandoned.

James said what most decimated the eagle population was DDT - which caused eggs with thin shells in which eaglets could not survive - but the problem has eased since the pesticide was banned in 1972.

The National Wildlife Federation, in its latest nationwide attempt at spotting bald eagles last year, counted 13,709, an increase of 5 percent over the number

Taiwan plane decision tips no military, diplomatic scales

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan's decision to deny about the man in the White House. Taiwan's request for advanced jet fighters may be of little diplomatic or military consequence but it says quite a bit

He will compromise. Peking has been on a peace offensive toward the island it considers a temporarily estranged province. A shot hasn't been fired in anger across the strait in years. In fact, Chinese leaders have returned to the admonition of the late, pragmatic premier. Chou En-lai, that the mainlanders "can learn from

Predictably, the Nationalist government in Taipei took exception to the decision to deny it some 150 Northrop F-5G

Just as predictably, a foreign ministry spokesman in Peking lodged a strong pretest against the president's approval of the cntinued sale of less sophisticated F-5E Tiger II jets to

But apparently bent on a nonviolent reunification - and lacking much in the way of a modern air force itself - China is not likely to launch a military offensive against Taiwan just because Reagan has held back Tigersharks.

And while Peking may draw some satisfaction from the rejection. Reagan's compromise decision to permit continued production on Taiwan of Tiger IIs under license from the Northrop Corporation prevents any gloating within the

After having Taiwan's request on his desk ever since he took office nearly a year ago - it was lodged in 1978 - Reagan struck the kind of compromise that has the practical effect of not tipping the military balance while disappointing some conservatives and others sympathetic toward the island.

Ray Cline, former deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency, called the decision a surrender to "blackmail." Cline is convinced that Reagan was persuaded by the State Department, and against his own convictions, that granting Taiwan's request for F-5Gs could imperil relations

He says the president chose to keep U.S. policy on an ambiguous course instead of treating Taiwan like any other friendly country with legitimate self-defense needs.

Suspect asks new lawyer

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) - A man facing capital murder charges in the death of a Los Fresnos policeman says he wants a new lawyer.

Leonel Herrera, 34, of Edinburg, told State District Judge Darrell Hester on Tuesday that he was displeased with defense lawyer Jim Bates and wanted to replace him Hester refused to allow Herrera to hire a new attorney. unless the change would not delay the trial. Testimony is scheduled to being today.

Herrera is charged in the Sept. 29 slaying of rookie. Patrolman Enrique Carrizales, who was shot in the chest after

He also is charged with capital murder in the death of a Department of Public Safety trooper but will be tried separately in that case.

The selection of 12 jurors and two alternates was completed

With all due respect to Mr. Bates. I have decided that the handling of my jury selection has been very unfair due to his actions and the state's as well, with all respect." Herrera

Determination lacking for U.S. turnaround

NEW YORK (AP) - As a turnaround situation, a term securities analysts use to describe a company seeking to reverse bad times, the United States has some ingredients for success but may lack the determination.

There's growing evidence the administration has failed to ake the necessary actions. says Donald Bibeault, a young turnaround manager who is aiding a troubled manufacturing giant return to profitability.

His verdict: When

Congress and the administration are willing to tolerate $100 billion-plus federal deficits: are not willing to take steps to divest unnecessary foreign policy commitments and to cut back unworthy domestic programs, there does not appear to be the necessary ingredients present to effect a national economic turnaround.

Bibeault, who has succeded with several troubled firms. believes that governmen: can be likened to a corporation. the president as chairman. Congress as directors and voters as shareholders or maybe customers.

He believes the Reagan administration is weak-kneed. Congress obstructionist." and voters perhaps not highly motivated to endure pain that comes with the course they mandated the president to

While the jury is still out." said Bibeault the other day from his San Francisco home. it appears that the direction. magnitude, and speed of action is far less than necessary to achieve a turnaround

In any turnaround, he said. at least four ingredients are required: A management and board willingness to take drastic action, a viable core to strip back to, availability of bridge financing and motivation of key personnel down to the firm's smallest

The viable core is there. Bibeault believes. By almost any measure of well-being except the obvious problem areas, he believes, there is a Bridge, or temporary, financing is available too. but here are problems. Government has a source of financing greater than any company, he observed. It is, of course, the taxing ability. Taxing. however, is also a source problems. Still, financing is available.

The remaining keys are management and motivation. and it is mostly in these areas that Bibeault, author of 'Corporate Turnaround.' expresses reservations and frustrations. He says that needed is tough Presidential leadership and a mandate from Congress to do what is needed to cut programs and bureaucracies.

Does the motivation exist? Bibeault isn't optimistic. The job can be done but isn't being done. And motivation is a reason, he said.

'At the moment," he says, the administration does not seem to have the backbone to stick to its guns and to do what is necessary to turn the United States around

CBS dominates ratings with Super Bowl ahead

NEW YORK (AP) - With the Super Bowl still ahead on Jan. 24. CBS continues to dominate prime time with a combination of championship sports and the two top-rated continuing series on TV - '60 Minutes" and "Dallas.

-CBS was a runaway winner in the week ending Jan. 10. thanks in large measure to a huge audience for the prime-time portion of the National Football Conference championship game between San Francisco and Dallas. The rating for the segment of the game broadcast after 7 p.m. was 47.2, the highest mark for any show this

The rating for the post-game show. No. 2 for the week, was 41, with '60 Minutes - on right after the football - third, and 'Dallas' fourth

CBS now has won the networks' three-way competition each of the last seven weeks. On all but four occasions this season, either "60 Minutes" or "Dallas" has been the No. 1 program, and on two of those, football on CBS won the race.

CBS can count on an even bigger audience for the Super Bowl between San Francisco and Cincinnati. most of which will be broadcast in prime

Nielsen says the rating for the game means of all the nation's homes with television. 47.2 percent saw at least part of the prime-time runover. "Dallas" recorded the season's previous high rating, 31.9, in the first week of the new TV year in

CBS' average rating for the week - with eight of the 10 highest-rated shows - was 21.9. with ABC second at 17.7

and NBC third at 16.7. The networks say that means in an average prime-time

Reagan's cuts: living with less federal school lunch program since last

Reagan and the educational establishment fought most of last year over proposed federal budget cuts. And educators see worse cuts this year. This third part of a four-part series examines what has been cut and what might be in the future

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - For months after President Reagan took office. educators issued daily, dire warnings that public schools would be severely damaged if the new administration succeeded in its wish to take giant whacks out of the federal education

Last March, and again in September. Reagan proposed cutting more than one-third from nearly all federal school

Reagan convinced Congress to stop many school programs from growing as planned by the Carter administration. But so far the budget ax has not fallen on the key federal programs that help pay for the instruction of millions of poor and handicapped children.

We're far better off than we thought we would be a couple of months ago. said one key lobbyist. August W Steinhilber, associate executive director of the National School Boards Association.

School lunches cost an average of 30 percent more, according to the Agriculture Department. Four million fewer children are buying them and 466 public schools have dropped out of the

And school districts entitled to impact aid." or federal reimbursement for the children of people who live or work on federal property, especially military bases, are facing sharp aid cuts.

But education groups and a sympathetic Congress so far have successfully resisted the sharpest education cuts sought by Reagan.

In particular, Reagan wanted to trim $600 million from the $3.1 billion Title I program of remedial education for the poor and the $1 billion program to help teach the handicapped. The handicapped program was not cut at all, and Title I was cut just $200 million.

We think we have turned the corner in terms of budget cuts. We have gotten to enough Republicans that (Reagan's proposal for) a 25 percent cut and 12 percent on top of that is not going to happen," Steinhilber said.

Still, educators warn that next September may be much tougher on school children. Most federal school programs are funded a year in advance so cuts made in the fiscal 1982 budget will not filter down to the classrooms until the 1982-83 school year begins.

And Reagan is certain to propose new cuts in education in the fiscal 1983 budget he sends to Congress next month

The Education Department, which got $14.9 billion in fiscal 1981, was cut to less than $13 billion for fiscal 1982 under the latest stopgap spending bill signed by Reagan in December: Its fiscal 1983 budget reportedly is set at $10.6 billion. But even that is more than the $7.7 billion that the Office of Management and Budget wanted to give to the

The federal government pays just 8 percent of all money spent on elementary and secondary schools. But in some cities with large numbers of disadvantaged, its share may run more than 20 percent.

Congress turned a cold shoulder to Reagan's request to fold the Title I and handicapped programs into block grants to states - an administration effort to save money and cut down on the federal government's involvement in local educational choices.

Thirty-three smaller education programs were converted into block grants and they are faring badly in the budget process these programs, passed in the 1960s and early 1970s, include, among others, aid for school libraries and desegregation, funds for metric education, consumer education, ethnic studies, and law-related education Separately, they were funded at $612 million in fiscal 1981. But the Senate has voted to spend only $350 million on the block grants in 1982.

The administration views the block grants only as an interim step. Ultimately, its goal is to end federally funded education programs entirely. while letting states keep more of their tax revenues and decide for themselves what services to pay for

The disease is treatable, but only 10 percent to 15 percent of patients survive because the cancer is usually widespread by the time most patients come to a doctor.

Austin residents vote on ordinance to legalize housing discrimination

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Residents of Austin, usually considered Texas' most liberal city, vote Saturday on a proposed ordinance that would legalize housing

The Austin Citizens for Decency, an anti-homosexual group, because of their "sexual orientation.

Dr. Steven Hotze. ACD's leader, said failure to approve housing discrimination against gays "would signal to those who practice sodomy across the country that Austin-approves

Hotze's opponents say the ACD proposal is a misguided attack on "a group of people they think are deviates and are going to burn in hell

When they used the words 'sexual orientation' on the proposal they included everyone that's walking around." said Robb Southerland, leader of the Citizens for a United Austin.

"If this one isn't unconstitutional, then we need to burn the Constitution," said Southerland, chairman of the board of an Austin music store.

The proposed ordinance - as written on the petitions gathered by Hotze - says it would "not be unlawful to deny housing on the basis of sexual orientation." City Councilman Roger Duncan said approval of the ordinance would cause "tremendous disruption" in Austin. "It legalizes discrimination. I wouldn't be surprised if the minority community, racial minorities, would get very nervous over the passage of a law like this," he said.

The furor over gays and housing began when the city's Human Relations Commission proposed revisions to the Fair Housing Ordinance. The changes would have made it illegal to deny housing to certain minority groups, including gays, the elderly, people with children. A majority of the city council favored the HRC proposal. But

Duncan said the council decided not to vote on it because Hotze had a petition drive going. Hotze was successful and the Jan. 16 election was set. Southerland says the proposal is riddled with legal and practical holes. How does a landlord decide who is gay? 'Does a landlord ask? Who is going to prove it? Is a landlord going to say. 'Oh good, you're a heterosexual, but we're going to be checking on you." said Southerland, who talked of "sexual orientation forms" to be filled out and "sexual review

"It's an invasion of privacy." he said. "What right does a landlord have to even ask that question?"

Privacy rights take precedence, in this case, over property rights, he added. A tenant has the responsibility of taking care of the property and paying rent. If you take it beyond that you are taking property rights and stomping on human rights. The next thing are ads that say. 'Jews need not apply' or 'Blacks can't apply." said Southerland.

To Hotze it's a referendum on homosexuals - "sodomites." "The issue is not housing. The issue is whether we allow our city council to grant public sanction to homosexual activity." said the physician. "The issue is whether we give public approval to homosexual activity in Austin."

Because Texas law makes it illegal to commit homosexual acts. Hotze said it's improper to protect gays from housing discrimination.

"It's like thieves or murderers trying to gain political power. The public ought to be outraged," he said. However, John Duncan, director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, says courts discern between the illegal practice of homosexual acts and a person who professes to be a homosexual. It is not illegal to profess homosexuality, Duncan

Stewart, center, and Dick Colfins. Inset shows Jeff

The chemotherapy treatments had caused Jeff's hair to fall out, and side effects of the treatment brought on nausea. An abdominal tumor made eating paintul, his mother says, and Jeff was given the drug methadone to control the pain.

Shortly after Jeff came home, his parents decided to let therapists try to hypnotize him mainly to lessen his fear of the pain involved in eating and to decrease the nausea. They also hoped it might decrease his dependence on methadone.

According to Dr. Gail Gardner, a Denver psychologist who has pioneered hypnotherapy with dying children, most work on hypnotherapy and cancer has been in the last 10 years.

Ms. Gardner described the ideal candidate for hypnotherapy as one who is "open to the idea, who wants to get well, who wants to alleviate pain, and who has some ability to use the imagination, which most children do.

With Jeff. the therapists - a child psychiatrist, a psychiatric social worker and Betty - had to be wary of the child's feisty nature during hynotherapy

"He was difficult, he was resistant, he didn't want other people messing with his life." says Paul Stewart, an Indianapolis psychiatrist who has used hypnosis on children in his private practice to curb nail-biting and other habits. "But I think it was effective

In August, Betty. Stewart and social worker Dick Collins attended the first hypnotherapy session, with Stewart doing most of the talking. A videotape of the session shows Jeff surrounded by the therapists in a hospital treatment room. Because he was so weak. Jeff sat in a small wheelchair. The video camera was unobtrusive.

"Do you want to learn how to use a special talent, a special power to make you stop hurting?" Stewart asks on the tape in a soothing monotone. "Maybe sometime when Mom talks to you like this, you'll feel better and be able to go to sleep. And maybe you'll be able to eat and know that you don't have to

Despite Jeff's minimal response during the session. Betty says she saw him improve over the next week.

When she heard him singing, for the first time in months, she knew the treatment was having some effect. I could see a difference from the first session," she says.

He would get frightened and his father and I would talk to nim in a soft monotonous voice about his 'special power would help ease his spirits

During the second session. Jeff resisted less, according to Collins, who did most of the talking.

The script was similar to the first session, but Jeff's responses were more relaxed; he would respond verbally instead of remaining silent, and picked up an imaginary fork in his hand and made eating-motions when Collins talked about using his 'special power' to make eating more pleasan:

Jeff died Sept. 10. about two weeks after the second session. His parents are convinced the treatments helped, even though Jeff was never able to hypnotize himself to lessen his own fear. My only regret is that we couldn't have done it earlier when

Jeff was more scared," says Betty, "Maybe he wouldn't have experienced quite so much pain.

Premarital sex may avert post-marital surprise

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Waiting Patiently," who couldn't convince her fiance to have sex with her before their marriage, reminded me of my first husband. He refused to have sex with me until our wedding night. Although I was not a virgin, I always believed that love and total commitment - not the marriage ceremony - should be the prerequisites for sex. But I did what you advised "Waiting Patiently" to do - I thanked my lucky stars that my fiance respected me enough to wait for our wedding

Well, there was no sex on our wedding night either. That's when he broke down and admitted that he was gay. I never

I am not saying that all men who want to wait until after marriage for sex are gay. I'm sure most of them are straight, but I think a woman (as well as a man) has the right to know all the facts about her intended's sexual preference. I am not trying to sell premarital sex, Abby. I feel that sex should not take place until a sincere commitment has been made, and to me, an engagement with intentions to wed is the ultimate commitment. The wedding is the confirmation and celebration of that commitment.

PREFERS A PREVIEW

DEAR PREFERS: Well said. I agree. Sex is not for children or experimenters. It's for mature people who regard it as a commitment.

DEAR ABBY: I married a divorced man who has custody of his two sons. I also have two sons from a former marriage The problem is that my husband's ex-wife has been making a habit of sending lavish Christmas gifts to her sons and totally ignoring my sons. When my boys see the expensive gifts their stepbrothers get, they feel very hurt and left out. This woman was told last year how bad my children felt, but apparently she doesn't care, or she enjoys Abby, am I out of line to demand that either all the children in my household or none receive gifts? Please print your opinion. She reads your column.

DEAR NO NAME: The woman cannot be faulted for sending her sons lavish Christmas gifts. And to expect her to treat your sons with equal generosity is unreasonable. However, modest Christmas gifts for your children would seem in order.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me if "Disturbed and Guilty," who's secretly in love with her brother-in-law, lives in Philadelphia? I am secretly in love with my sister-in-law. Maybe we can work something out. STILL SINGLE IN SACRAMENTO

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby: 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

It has taken years for people to understand what the attraction is in soaps.

I can't imagine what took'em so long. To me, soaps have always been the World Series of Sex. the love - in - the - afternoon Olympics, the perfect Ten of the Bored

I loved'em because it was so terrific to see men hanging around the house. Oh. sure now you've got Donahue, but back in my time, we had nothing. I loved the way husbands sat around the table and talked to their wives.

They never worked. I loved the way a woman was always dressed for an affair. With me, some days were better than others, but borrow something.

I loved the way the heroines were never happy. There's something depressing about women whose lives are going well and they have no problems. You could always count on the soaps. I could be sitting there with $200 worth

Herpes zoster (shingles) is caused by the chicken pox virus, usually still alive in your nerve roots after a childhood episode of chicken pox. That is why it follows the distribution of a nerve as in your case. It can follow whatever nerve is affected.

I do hope my readers learn the distinction between herpes zoster and herpes simplex I and II. There are a lot of people who develop zoster. That is bad enough without thinking it is V.D.

New Chinese discoveries

SIAN, China (AP) - China has unearthed two bronze chariots, complete with eight horses and two charioteers. close to the tomb of its first emperor, Chin Shih-huang ti.

The discovery has sent a thrill of excitement through this ancient Chinese capital. comparable to that of 1974 when peasants came across the shadowy underground pottery army created to guard the emperor in death as real armies had done in his turbulent lifetime.

Builder of the Great Wall. burner of books, and first # unifier of China, Chin died 2.191 years ago.

It is one of the most exciting discoveries in recent years. says Ma Kesun. deputy director of the Bureau of Cultural Relics here.

Word of the discovery has trickled out in bits and pieces Ma and Bureau Division Chief Chen Mengdong gave hitherto undisclosed details.

The horses, chariots and warriors are half life-size." says Ma. Funerary objects in bronze of this size have never been found before. In addition, they are very beautiful. The horses are running and each charioteer is sitting as he handles the bronze reins of his four-horse team. The ornaments on the horses are of gold and silver

Chinese archeologists are trying to piece together whether the bronze chariots are part of the life-size pottery army, estimated at 7,500 pieces. They are on the eastern side of the tomb complex, while the bronze chariots are on the west

Like the pottery figures. the bronze chariot sets were painted in different colors." says Ma. The two charioteers are mustached. dressed in short gowns and wear caps. They wear no armor but carry two-edged swords slung on their backs.

Like the pottery figures, the charioteers are identifiably different in dress, hair style and facial expression. Their attitude is one of intent seriousness. When discovered by archeological workers, the sets - which weigh 1.1 tons each - were lying loosely 23 feet deep in the earth. The pottery figures were 161/2 feet

Perhaps one reasons why the find has been surrounded in secrecy - the area has been sealed off - is that the sets were not intact.

Though basically perfect, they were in about 1.000 small pieces." says Ma. "They are being assembled by 10 people in special workshops. Also, there are many problems still to be solved. While we work on them, the digging has stopped. We now are making a survey of the entire area.

Digging has also halted under the huge vaulted museum which houses the pottery army. More than 2.5 million people, many from abroad, have visited the vast complex since it opened in 1979. About 600 of the 1.200 figures so far brought to light stand in erect solemnity, still faithful after two milleniums of vigilance.

The others are being put together in eight workshops while savants ponder the mystery of it all. Their conclusions on the life of military men in the Chin dynasty will be published in

We have enough work here to last us a hundred years." says the museum's chief archeologist. Yuan Zongyi, gesturing toward the tomb complex. "In the past year or so alone we have made four major discoveries

He listed these as the graves of conscripts forced to work on the tomb, a yard where the stones for the tomb were cut. a brick kiln and a massive dike to protect the tomb from underground flood

"It is said that Chin mobilized 200,000 men to construct his tomb, many of them criminals from other Chinese states," says Yuan. Until now there was no material evidence to back up this assumption. Thus, the conscript graves are of great historical importance.

WASHINGTON (AP) - An Agriculture Department official says the administration probably would favor a boost in timber sales from national forests as a way of raising more money.

Assistant Secretary John B. Crowell Jr., added, however, that he was unaware of any plan to increase timber sales to $3 billion over a two-year period.

The $3 billion figure was mentioned last week in connection with a number of possibilities being considered by the administration to raised federal revenues. Timber sales now total slightly less than $1 billion a
