Jaruzelski lifts foreign censorship, sees Glemp

Wojciech Jaruzelski lifted censorship for foreign correspondents and met with Archbishop Jozef Glemp Saturday in what appeared to be a dramatic sign that the Polish crisis was easing after four weeks of martial law

But the communist regime said President Reagan's sanctions made it "still more difficult to overcome the crisis" and termed the economic situation "fatal." It said Poland's foreign debt had risen to $28.5 billion and appealed for $6 billion in import credits and a Western bridge for Government press spokesman Jerzy Urban said foreign correspondents accredited in Warsaw could now file uncensored stories, but only through Telex at the government's foreign press center, which is only open during regular business hours. It was not known if other transmission facilities for foreign correspondents would be opened soon

Urban told a news conference that foreign correspondents may be allowed to travel outside Warsaw soon, that telephone service will be restored · across the country Sunday, and that Parliament will meet Jan. 20 to discuss martial law and other issues. Radio Warsaw. in another sign of apparent easing of the situation, said Theaters, movies, concert halls, art galleries and other "cultural and cultural-educational establishments" will reopen in the capital and Warsaw province Friday, but that the nightly meeting between Jaruzelski, the martial law chief, prime minister and Communist Party head, and Glemp, Poland's Roman Catholic primate. It apparently was their first meeting since Jaruzelski declared martial law Dec. 13 and suspended the independent union Solidarity.

Radio Warsaw said that during the meeting "intentions aiming at the normalization of life in Poland were. expressed" but said no more.

Jaruzelski and Glemp last met Nov. 4 in a session with Solidarity chief Lech' Walesa that launched talks on a "front of national agreement." But on Dec. 12 Solidarity leaders called for a national referendum on whether Poland should remain communist and martial law was declared the next day.

Walesa, head of the first union free of party control in the Soviet bloc, is said to be sequestered in or near Warsaw and has not been heard from since martial law was imposed. The government acknowledges about 5.000 other Poles have been interned in camps around the country.

Janusz Obodowski, deputy prime minister in charge of economic reform. also addressed the news conference. and termed Poland's hard currency balance and its level of production at the start of the new year "fatal." He said the foreign debt increased to $28.5

billion due to increased food imports. About $2 billion of the debt was owed to the Soviet bloc. and the rest to Western nations and commercial. creditors. Obodowski said. He appealed for $6 billion in import credits to help to now Poland's foreign debt had been pegged at $26 billion

Obodowski, described by Urban in his introduction as "a strong man of our weak economy." said Poland last year suffered a 14 percent decline in revenue with a 16 percent decline in industrial production and building. At the same time. he said. salaries increased 25

There is a great decrease in export." he said. "The only good result we can speak about now is agriculture. But the purchase of meat is still fatal. meaning supplies were in desperate Obodowski also criticized Reagan's decision to cut aid to Poland as a move that made it "still more difficult to overcome the crisis.

"For example, without corn, which we used to import from the United States, there will be no chickens soon. he said. "Fourteen thousand people who work on chicken farms will lose their jobs.

Obodowski said economic reforms would be implemented despite martial law, and added "we want to realize reforms, point by point Finance Minister Marian Krzak, who also addressed the press conference. said Poland's economic balance would improve now that Poland has "no strikes now, no anarchy, no chaos.

Radio Warsaw said Poland's coal exports, the nation's chief source of foreign capital. plummeted to 15 million tons during last year's labor unrest from a previous annual average of more than 40 million tons

NATO plans Poland declaration

States and its NATO allies plan to issue · a joint declaration Monday that will unequivocally "point the finger at the Soviet Union" for the martial law - crackdown in Poland.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who was scheduled to leave Sunday, will attend the special NATO foreign ministers meeting in Brussels where the declaration will be issued

 The statement "will send a very strong political signal" to the Soviets, a State Department official said in an ' interview. NATO wants to discourage the Polish and Soviet governments from further repression, while insisting on lifting of existing repressive measures in Poland.

But, said the official who declined to be named, it is unlikely NATO will endorse new sanctions against Poland or the Soviets since differences remain between the United States and its allies over whether more sanctions will do

On Tuesday. Haig plans to make a speech in Brussels. discussing Poland and western relations with the Soviets. The State Department official said Haig will take "the high road," supporting "a balanced approach to relations with the Soviets. Haig plans to meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Geneva on Jan. 27, unless there is a new outbreak of violence in Poland, the official said. Haig will also visit Cairo on Tuesday and Wednesday and stop in Jerusalem Thursday before returning

In the Middle East. Haig will discuss the U.S. displeasure over Israel's annexation of the Golan Heights as well as the status of the Palestinian autonomy negotiations between Israel

But an informed diplomatic source here said both Israeli and Egypt are pessimistic that significant progress can be made in achieving Palestinian autonomy before the scheduled April withdrawal of Israel from the Sinai. The source, who did not want to be identified, said there is an informal understanding in both nations that they are unable, for rd in the political reasons, to make enough concessions to achieve a compromise on autonomy before the April withdrawal date.

But a U.S. official disputed that notion and said there is reason to think progress toward autonomy is likely before April. The latest round of autonomy negotiations, scheduled this week in Israel, has been postponed

The State Department official said preliminary wording of the NATO declaration on Poland has already been worked out. While Haig and the other NATO ministers will draft the final wording, there is little doubt it will hold

Pampa chemist explores research frontiers

BY ELAINE LEDBETTER Guest Writer

Martha J. Colville is uniquely combining her experience as a practicing chemist with the frontiers of modern research and Mrs. J.L. Colville of 1824 Beech. Since October. 1980. Ms. Colville has been employed as a new products representative by the Celanese Chemical Company. Inc.

She is a 1972 graduate of Pampa High School and the daughter of Mr.

She lives in the Dallas area and maintains an office in the headquarters building of Celanese Chemical Company. However, most of her time is spent in travelling most of the eastern two - thirds of the United States Celanese has ten geographic sales districts and Ms. Colville is representative to five of

Her responsibilities do not lie in sales per se. She maintians regular contact with research people who are working at the forefront of the chemical industry in developing new products for a variety of companies She learns what they are doing and suggests ways in which Celanese products can be useful to them in their own products.

Ms. Colville said. "The market for new products is growing, especially in the area of multifunctional monomers. Printed electrical circuits are in great demand at the present time and our products are used in the dry film photo - resist process which is

This is a process much like developing a photograph. In one type of the process a chemical coating is placed on a board which has the electrical circuit outlined on it. This coating covers the board except for the circuit outline. Then the circuit is plated with a copper. After the plating process another chemical is used to remove all previous coatings leaving only the copper circuit.

That new Celanese products are increasingly in demand as technology grows is evidenced by the fact that in 1980 sales in many areas exceeded projections, some by more than 300 percent

To be able to discuss the variety of types of research with which she comes in contact on a daily basis requires a broad knowledge of chemistry plus practical laboratory expertise. In addition. Ms. Colville must be thoroughly familiar with Celanese products and currently aware of their potential uses in many different areas. Her background has prepared her quite well for her present assignemnt

From the fall of 1976 until October of 1980, she was employed at the Pampa Celanese plant as a special problems chemist. There she gained invaluable experience in simulating conditions of production units. She was also involved in trouble - shooting within the actual plant and assisted in scaling up the production of the multifunctional monomers that have become so popular.

Upon graduation from Pampa High School, she entered East Texas State University for her freshman year There her chemistry professor. Dr Bone, provided a great impetus in further stimulating her interest in chemistry.

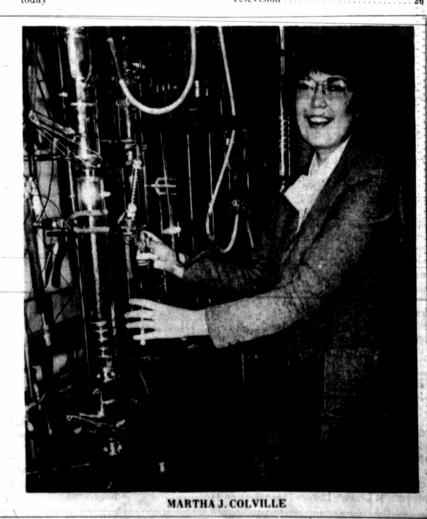

Ms. Colville spent her sophomore year at the University of Texas at El Paso a in the fall of 1974 she transferred to North Texas State Unviersity in Denton. She received her B.S. degree i chemistry in the spring of 1976.

Ms. Colville normally spends Monday in her Dallas office. The other four days of each week are spent travelling. Some of the major cities which she visits regularly include Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis - St Paul. Boston. Atlanta and Houston

When asked to relate an experience that stands out in her mind. she replied. "One afternoon I was driving from eastern Massachusetts to Nashua. New Hampshire which is just outside Boston. Normally the trip takes about three hours, but that day I was caught in a blizzard and it took over seven hours. I did not have a reservation and as I approached the country hotel where I hoped to stay. I noted that there were few cars. The only lights visible in the hotel were in the lobby and they were very dim.

She continued. "Upon entering the hotel I found that the storm had cut off. all electricty. However, I was given a room and some matches. After entering the room I struck a match to get my bearings and noticed a card on the desk. When I read the message, it said. 'Guests are requested NOT to leave the premises'. First I thought it was because of the storm and then I realized that it was a printed card. I began to think I was caught up in an Agatha Christie novel. But upon lighting another match and turning the card over. I found that it was an advertisement urging all guests to eat in the hotel restaurants!

Ms. Colville devotes part of her time to recruiting on college campuses. She See PAMPA CHEMIST, Page 2

Artic deepfreeze stuns Midwest

DAVID L. LANGFORD Associated Press Writer

A blast of "extremely dangerous" Arctic air stunned the Midwest with wind chills reaching 70 degrees below zero Saturday, and foot-deep snows fell on some cities as the deep freeze spread eastward.

"Prepare for the worst." warned Jack May of the National Weather Service in Cleveland where up to 10 inches of new snow had fallen as the mercury plummeted.

On the bright side, forecasters said there would be sunny skies in San Francisco for Sunday's National Football Conference title game between the San Francisco 49ers and the Dallas Cowboys.

Elsewhere in the West, road crews were trying to reach the remainder of about 3.000 people who had been stranded a week by a snowfall up to 10 feet deep in the Sierra Nevada south of Lake Tahoe. But authorities abandoned a search for a 23-year-old man believed buried by an avalanche in the area five days earlier.

Guest speaker for the meeting is Herbert W. Grubb, director of planning and development of the Texas Department of Water Resources.

Grubb will explain the projected future water requirements and projected available water supplies for Texans as well as a number of other subjects. He was the chief drafter of the water ammendment defeated in the recent state elections.

He has also worked with the Economics Analysis Section of the governor's office and was a faculty member of Texas Tech University.

Segregation widespread, paper says

EDITOR'S NOTE - A Dallas Times Herald reporter spent three months traveling to all 13 of the Old South states to research the effectiveness of desegregation laws.

DALLAS (AP) - Two decades after American blacks won what was supposed to be the final war for freedom, racism and segregation remain widespread throughout the South, the Dallas Times-Herald reported Sunday. The newspaper. in a three-month-long inquiry in 13 states. found blacks remain on the sidelines of political and economic power and are victims of a racism that continues to be expressed in primitive ways.

Outside the South's largest cities, segregation is widespread in restaurants, bars and doctors' offices, the newspaper said. "The people in charge knew that segregation is illegal but also knew how to avoid trouble with the law." the Times Herald reported.

- The newspaper also noted a resurgence of the Ku Klux Klan and increasing violent incidents "after which blacks seem to

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) - Stephan Peter Morin, under investigation for a series of crimes against young women in nine states, has been indicted in the abduction of a hotel secretary who later was found strangled.

Nueces County grand jurors returned the indictment Friday accusing Morin of abducting 21-year-old Jana Bruce of Corpus Christi. But no indictment was returned in connection with the death of the woman. whose body was found at Padre Island

Morin, a 34-year-old native of Providence, R.I., remains jailed without bond

He also has been arraigned in connection with the Nov. 30 abduction of another Corpus Christi woman.

Morin has been charged with slaying a San Antonio woman and wounding another, killing two Las Vegas. Nev. women in Utah and slaying a woman in Golden, Colo. Authorities have said he also is wanted for questioning about a series of abductions, rapes and slayings in nine states.

New mayor declines raise

HOUSTON (AP) - Saying she didn't think getting a raise the first week on the job was proper. Mayor Kathy Whitmire has turned down a $13.670 pay increase.

The raise, which would have hiked her annual salary from $81.880 to $95,550, was automatic because of an ordinance four years ago that tied the mayor's salary to that of state district judges. The ordinance stipulates that after each city election the salary of the mayor and members of the City Council shall be set at 150 percent and 40 percent respectively. Judges were given a raise by the Legislature that became effective last September.

"I do not think pay raises should be automatic." Mrs. Whitmire said in a statement released by her office

The oath reads. in part: "All white high schools will write up as many suspensions on Negroes as they occur ... will send Negroes home for any little thing they do ... Nigger is not a bad word to call Negroes. so use the name at will ... K.K.K. are doing a thing too, so together we will have Niggers in a turmoil.

The newspaper also cited the case of a Jackson, Miss. police officer who fired five shots into a pregnant young black woman who was drunk and firing a pistol into the air. The officer killed her after she refused to drop the weapon.

According to witnesses who were interviewed by the Mississippi Legal Services Coalition, the officer refused to let the woman's sister try to talk her into dropping the gun.

The officer was cleared of all charges. Local blacks made an issue of the case because of an earlier incident in which a white teen-ager had barricaded himself in his house after shooting to death his parents and brother. Police patiently talked the youth into surrendering.

In some instances, the Times Herald found small successes by blacks laced with irony

OCAW, Shell resume negotiations

By The Associated Press

In a last-minute attempt to avert a walkout by 2,100 members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union at a Shell Oil Co. refinery, company and union representatives resumed negotiations Saturday.

But employees continued to picket outside two Port Arthur refineries and informational pickets were set up outside a Texaco plant in that industrial community. Representatives of the Oil. Chemical and Atomic Workers Union met at 10 a.m. CST with officials at Shell's Deer Park refinery to decide whether to continue contract talks or to issue a 48-hour strike notice.

Shell OCAW representative Ed Watson said his union had not issued a strike notice Saturday, pending results of the

Criticized judge sets another trial for man

HOUSTON (AP) - A local distorted the facts to generate judge who faced sharp criticism after the sentencing of a man involved in a fatal traffic accident has thrown out the man's guilty plea and ordered him to stand trial.

"I have a good client caught in bad politics." attorney H. Wayne Gilles said of Jeff Morris, 49, who is charged with criminally negligent homicide.

On Dec. 14, after Morris pleaded guilty in the July 20 death of 60-year-old Willie Lincoln. County Court at Law Judge Neal Richardson assessed the punishment at 20 days in jail and $500 fine. Although there was no evidence that Morris was drunk when he rammed his lumber company truck into Lincoln's car. investigators said Morris told them he drank a half-pint of whiskey several hours before the accident

After Morris' sentence was reported in the local media. the judge received letters and phone calls criticizing him for imposing a "light" sentence on Morris, who previously had been convicted three times for drunken driving.

"Public reaction has called my attention to the fact that there was an implication" by prosecutors that Morris was a drunken driver in the accident and should have received a heavier sentence. Richardson said.

The judge then withdrew Morris' sentence and ordered him to stand trial Feb. 8 to see if prosecutors can back up their "implication.

Assistant District Attorney Nick Vincent was the chief prosecutor in Richardson's court when the judge imposed the sentence. After Vincent talked to reporters about the case. Richardson charged privately that Vincent

Richardson said in court

The judge also said if prosecutors had wanted him to treat the case as one involving a death caused by a drunken driver, they shouldn't have charged Morris with criminally negligent homicide.

"We are still far apart on a number of issues - pay being one - but as long as the meetings continue and as long as there is give and take, that leaves the possibility of good talks." said company spokesman Bill Gibson

Gulf Oil Corp. in Port Arthur also resumed talks today. In Port Arthur, about 4,000 union members walked off their jobs Friday at the nation's largest Texaco plant and 500 employees of American Petrofina went on strike after their two-year contract expired and talks stalled on the issue of pension rights, said union spokesman R.C. Graffagmine. Union negotiators walked away from the bargaining table Thursday after Texaco officials refused demands for a helw?

pension plan and a contract extension.

Texaco spokesman Charles Rentz said plant operations were continuing "as usual." however, with supervisory and technical personnel working in three shifts around the clock.

Union members, working in groups of three and four, braved windy, chilly weather and continued to walk picket lines Saturday at the two refineries.

Law enforcement authorities, who monitored the plants during shift changes, said picketing was peaceful and orderly. Informational pickets appeared Friday at the Texaco plant in Port Neches. 15 miles from Port Arthur. One union official predicted the union would have pickets "in front of everything with a Texaco sticker" within two weeks.

Also on Friday, a Beaumont judge lifted an injunction issued to halt violence during the 1980 OCAW strike after several automobile smashings.

they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

is negative towards the superintendent. the school board members, and, namely, the entire school board. The impression I get is that the school board is corrupt and that the board members are a bunch of crooks who have nothing else to do except hold executive sessions with the specific purpose of exchanging opinions and influencing decisions behind the public eye or intentionally seeing how they (the school board) can figure out ways to break the law.

Oh, Pampa. To be slapped so by this one so opinionated writer!

One of his rationale against executive sessions is that "the Open Meetings Law prohibits public bodies from making decisions in exeuctive sessions in the sense that they are not allowed to take an official 'yea' or 'nay' vote"; that because opinions are exchanged and actions are influenced, that decisions are formed. Is the writer so naive as to believe that the members need an executive session to exchange opinions and influence actions? Any classroom, the bowling alley, the football stadium, or the Sunday school class is a good enough place for me.

Also the writer uses the clout of a spokesman for the Attorney General's office who says that the Open Meetings Law does not address the problem of what public officials can say about what happened during the executive session. The writer concludes that to mean that the board members are not prohibited from talking about what took place. Now it seems to me that if during an executive session the school board is prohibited from voting "yea" or "nay" actions, what action is there to report for the public to need to know? And if the Open Meetings Law does not prohibit them from talking about what took place during the executive session, then the same Law says the board is not compelled to talk about it.

The other rationale the writer uses is that the public has a right to know. And the public does know, when the board meets in regular session. If the public is suppose to know all the time, then let's do away with executive sessions at election time. But let's not take it out on our Pampa School Board. They did not pass the Open Meetings Law. The people of Texas did. Our school board system is simply applying the law. Why does the writer want to punish good intentioned people who desire to perform a good public service for the benefit of all Pampan and especially our young people. Is it not enough that these dedicated servants must bear the tensions and strains of their service. receive no pay, and little public recognition for their good work, and then have the media harrass them to the point that future good intentioned citizens might be discouraged to serve?

Now what about this specific executive session? Probably in this particular case of the disciplinary action the student, the parents of student, and the teachers involved appreciated the privacy and even more the fact that their good names were not vainly advertised across the page of a newspaper. We, the public, know the case was resolved as we have not heard nor read anything else about it.

The final point is that our school board system acted within their legal rights and that the Pride of Pampa reflects its support.

Sincerely. Guillermo Jaramillo Pampa

Return to captivity

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN A year ago, the people of Poland believed they were emerging from communist thralldom. They had hope of a better material life and a gradual return to freedom. Today, those hopes are shattered.

Poland is in the iron grip of totalitarian communist rule. Thousands of Poles are under arrest. The dark night of Stalinism has returned.

These tragic events are a fresh, albeit cruel, reminder of the nature of communism. The system permits no

For 15 or more years Westerners have persuaded themselves that communism comes in many forms. some of them less oppressive than others. A few years ago, there was academic talk of Euro - Communism, a variant that allegedly retained Marxist

Revealing report on reports

It might be called the report to end all reports. The only trouble is, it probably won't.

The report in question is the General Accounting Office's most recent report on the federal government reports. The GAO report questions the government's thousands of reports.

According to the GAO's findings. while the federal government spends more than $80 million sending 4.000 reports about itself to Congress, no one in government has an overall fix on who is supposed to report to whom about what.

The GAO, which itself spends some $5 million annually sending about 1.000 reports to Capitol Hill, said the confusion stems in part from the variety of agencies that share responsibility for tracking reports. and in part from the statutes passed by Congress that call for reports but give only vague deadlines like "from ime to time.

The GAO said the problem is exacerbated by the tendency of reports to mulitply: Congress sent out a modest 197 reporting requirements in 1930; by 1960 the figure was 470; by 1980 it had grown

The numbers." reports the GAO. appear to correspond closely to the growth in federal government programs and activities . . . (and) the desire of Congress to hold agencies accountable.

The GAO's report on reports gets better. Not only are many of the reports late, the watchdog agency notes, but Congress can't even determine whether all required reports are submitted "because it does not have a complete or central listing of all the reporting requirements.

It has no complete list, the GAO added, because three separate organizations develop their own lists the GAO itself, the clerk of the House and the secretary fo the Senate. And the three do not always

One solution to the problem, the GAO says, would be for these three groups to decide together what reports are needed and when they are due, and to determine whether the reports were useful. That determination alone most likely would slow the flow to a trickle. End of report.

When Ms. Heil finally brought Nhanny home in October 1974, the girl was 3 years old. She weighed only 12 pounds and was unable to sit up. And her years in the box had left an ugly depression in the left side of her skull - a depression which has since disappeared.

Ms. Heil later learned that Nhanny had holes in her eardrums. And during her early days with the Heils. Nhanny never slept for more than 15 minutes without waking during a violent nightmare.

"She'd make these animal screams ... and sweat would be pouring off her." said the divorced mother of three other children. "I'm sure something terrifying had to have happened to her sometime when she was sleeping."

When Ms. Heil came here in 1977, she-took Nhanny to a specialist who replaced her right eardrum. A little more than a year ago, the child began hearing well for the first time in her life.

Then. Ms. Heil tried to have Nhanny taken out of 'classes for educable mentally retarded and placed in a regular classroom. But she met resistance and decided to teach her in her own school.

Union starts landmark contract talks Monday

By STEPHEN JONES Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - A decision by United Auto Workers bargainers to open talks with the nation's two largest carmakers leaves some UAW officials worried that big contract losses are ahead.

"We think early talks mean concessions and we're not ready for that." said Don Douglas, president of UAW Local 594 at General Motors Corp.'s Truck and Coach division plant in Pontiac. Mich.

The union's bargaining councils for General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. authorized the negotiations in separate meetings Friday. Both councils planned to meet with the automakers Monday, and UAW President Douglas Fraser said the councils could be discussing tentative new contracts when they reconvene Jan. 23 in Washington.

"If you don't do something reasonably quickly, what's the point?" Fraser said. The contracts expire Sept. 14.

Ford and GM hailed the union's decision. but some bargaining council members complained that their union had been railroaded and company threats of layoffs and the movement of jobs ov 🍃 — amounted to "blackmail"

"We don't think we should bow under to the theat of blackmail." said Douglas, adding that his local membership strongly opposes renegotiation.

Officials of both companies, plagued by slumping sales for nearly three years, have insisted for 11 months that the UAW must gran! concessions to make the companies competitive with foreign automakers. Year-end reports this week showed further decline in domestic sales.

UAW negotiators were to meet with Ford priests who were abducted by bargainers in Detroit at 10 a.m. Monday, followed by a 2 p.m. meeting at GM headquarters here

Union leaders refused to call the negotiations a reopening of the contracts, but acknowledged that the process eventually could lead to changes in the pacts.

"We're not willing to commit ourselves to any proposal before we enter into negotiations." Fraser said.

Bargaining on a new contract ordinarily

The resolutions adopted by the bargaining councils left open the question of whether the contracts will be altered or bargainers would try to negotiate a new pact.

In a statement issued from Detroit, the GM vice president for industrial relations. Alfred Warren Sr., praised the union's decision. calling it "both realistic and appropriate."

AT&T, IBM settlements end an era

AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The dismissal of an antitrust suit against IBM, coupled with a settlement that will break up AT&T, ends an era that saw the government largely fail in efforts to restructure major industries.

Beginning in the late 1960s. the Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission set out to break up dominant firms in industries ranging from oil to breakfast cereals.

'It looked like a very significant challenge." said Harvey Goldschmid, a law professor at Columbia University.

Encouraged by the apparent trend, numerous private suits were filed by small competitors against such dominant companies as International Businss Machines Corp., Xerox Corp. and Eastman Kodak Co.

Now all the government's cases have been settled or dismissed, with the dominant companies winning in every case except American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and generally prevailing in private cases.

"In terms of the bottom line, these cases have produced a very limited return," said Goldschmid after Friday's actions were announced.

an industry by one company or a handful of companies. particularly if that domination was acquired

Court decisions starting in the mid-1940s and continuing through the 1960s held that a company with monopoly power could take few actions to protect that position without running afoul of the antitrust laws.

In one case, Alcoa's monopoly in aluminum. which had been obtained through a patented process and sustained through techniques that a lower court said were normal business pactices, was ruled illegal.

The idea was that normal practices, such as price cutting or building new plants to meet anticipated demand. might be reasonable in a competitive industry but could be used to drive competitors out of business or keep them from entering if used by a monopoly.

But beginning in the 1970s. the courts moved away from that position, particularly in a case involving Kodak and Berkey Photo, a small competitor. Berkey lost most major issues on appeal.

Assistant Attorney General William F. Baxter, the head of the antitrust division, cited the Berkey case in dropping the 12-year-old suit against At the heart of the cases IBM: "You can't bring (the

'There's far more freedom now for a company, once it obtains a monopoly, to defend that position, 'said Georgetown University professor Robert Pitofsky. who approved of the move away from the Alcoa decision but feared the administration may have gone too far.

"Bigness is an opportunity for abuse." he said, "and the same practice used by a small company can be an abuse in the hands of an IBM.

A major reason for the trend away from the harsh attitude toward monopolies was a feeling that antitrust action was making American business less competitive in international markets. "It's part of a realization that we can't afford to hurt our companies anymore. said George C. Thompson, a business professor at Columbia and co-author of a text on antitrust law. "If IBM were severely handicapped. they'd lose out very rapidly to the Japanese, who are half-unregulated company

Some think the opposite might be true, and point to studies indicating that most innovations come not from big companies but from smaller entrepreneurs.

over the long run four or five IBMs would be more efficient than one," said Goldschmid. Neither the AT&T nor the IBM actions set a precedent that will be binding on future administrations, since there was no judicial decision.

Goldschmid said he thinks the IBM case probably should have been allowed to go to a decision, since the trial had been completed and a decison by the trial judge was expected within a few months. But Baxter said the appeals would have taken vears, and that the government was all but sure to lose

In the AT&T case, the lack of a precedent may be less important. "This case will never be matched." said Gary Wilson, who teaches antitrust law at Stanford "You have a half-regulated.

The long-range effects of the AT&T case, in which the company agreed to divest itself of 22 local Bell companies in order to settle the 7-year-old battle, remain to be seen. Some Wall Street "It's perfectly possible that analysts think the company is giving up its least attractive parts and that the resulting AT&T will be a stronger company IBM, in fact, may find the net result of Friday's actions is to give it more competition because AT&T is being freed of restrictions placed on it in 1956 as the result of an earlier antitrust suit.

While the IBM dismissal marks the end of an era of trying to break up companies with dominant market positions, it coincides with an indication that the courts are getting tougher in the area of mergers between competitors, one way for a company to get such a dominant position.

The Supreme Court earlier in the week refused to block appeals court orders stopping Mobil Corp. from going after Maratathon Oil Co.

Alpine gets its own nightclub

ALPINE. Texas (AP) - In the beginning, there was Gilley's in Pasadena. Then came Billy Bob's Texas in Fort Worth. Now, there is Chute No. 1 in Alpine.

That's right. Alpine - a picturesque town of about 6.000 people with a nightclub that could hold one-sixth of its population

"In Midland-Odessa or even El Paso, there is not a place like Chute No. 1 in the West Texas area." said club manager Linda McKenna "We know we're offering something that people really want. People can really get out and dance and have a good time. We want it to be West Texas'

Alpine, with its 5,917 people, is the largest town for more than 100 miles in any direction. Its nearest neighbors are Marfa, with a population of less than 3,000 and Fort Davis and Marathon, each with less than a 1,000 people, in an area dominated by ranchland and mountains.

Odessa is more than 100 miles away. El Paso is more than 200 miles away

"Two hundred miles is just a hop, skip and a jump for people in West Texas," Ms. Ivey said. "These people are used to driving long distances

She may be right. When the club opened Dec. 4, more than 900 people packed into the

"We had to turn people away after 9 p.m.," said John Davis of Houston, a financial consultant helping get the club under way. "The people in all these outlying areas don't have any place to go. West Texas is not necessarily the easiest place in the world to find something to do.

Davis works for Joe R. Brown of Houston, who owns vast oil and ranch holdings in West Texas. The club was Brown's idea. Ms. Ivey said.

Ms Ivey a former Miss El Paso who moved to Alpine in 1976, was finishing her master's degree at Sul Ross State University here when she went looking for odd jobs to earn extra money. She found a job on one of Brown's ranches - washing his helicopter.

"It took eight hours with no breaks each time." she said. "It was a job. I had to wash everything by hand, from the rotors to the landing gear. Mr. Brown came to town one and he said I want to meet the lady helicopter tan-and-orange lumber warehouse in downtown Alpine and asked her, "Do you think you could turn this place into a nightclub?

Brown took Ms. Ivey to a depend on the people who are

"At first. I thought they were teasing me or something." she said

Once they decided to embark on the project. everything went quickly. Ms. Ivey said. The construction contracts were all let the

'We've invested a great deal in this business." Ms. Ivey said. "We'll make it back, but it will take a while. We tried to do everything the

The result is a huge club with a dance floor 50 feet by 60 feet and terraces full of tables on either side. On the highest terrace on each side is a 50-foot bar that is computerized to dole out the proper amount of liquor for each drink

Ceiling fans hang from the high ceiling above a decor done mostly in Texas burnt orange and natural wood

At one end of the dance floor is a raised stage with a custom sound system. The sound and light systems can be operated from a disc jockey's booth that looks down on the dance floor from the other end of the room.

"I was very fortunate." Ms. Ivey said. "I got to pick the colors and the furniture and everything. The whole thing is set up for entertainers.

The club has a live band three nights a week and, once a month or so, brings in a well-known country artist to perform. Johnny Duncan was there on New Year's Eve. Johnny Rodriguez is coming later in January. Ironically. the band on opening night was the Gilley's band.

To see those name acts, customers must buy a 'membership' in the club.

"The club is a private club." Davis said. "It has to be because of the Texas liquor laws. There are no mixed drink sales in this

"It's really kind of an archaic law, but we have to go with it right now." Ms. Ivey said. "We want everybody to be able to come so we put a very minimal charge on memberships. You can buy a life membership for $35. You can get a temporary membership at the door for $2. It's good for three and you can bring three

The cheap rates are attractive to students at Sul Ross, a small college located on a hillside in town.

"Sul Ross naturally helps (business), but it only has about 1,700 students," Davis said. "You can't really depend on college kids because they are limited in their funds. You've got to

Those people are bound to make the comparison between Chute No. 1 and Gilley's and Billy Bob's, but the management brushes the comparisons off.

Billy Bob's is a completely different situation." Ms. Ivey said. "Billy Bob's can afford to bring in five bands because they're in a big enough area to support them. Gilley's is a honky-tonk on a very huge scale. This place is not based on Gilley's at all. They're fun places. They're just different.

nightclub." she said, with the emphasis on "nightclub."

"Everybody asked if we were going to have a mechanical bull and I said. No." she said. "They're dangerous. People get drunk and, get on those bulls and hurt themselves. I don't want that kind of wildness here. If they want to get wild. they can go to the Sul Ross arena and ride rough stock."

Ms. Ivey said she and bouncer Frank Blizzard have made it clear no rough stuff will be tolerated

"We had some people get rowdy on the first night," Ms. Ivey said. "I walked them out the door and tore up their membership card right there in front of them.

"At the first sign of trouble. we tell them to leave and they won't be allowed back in.' Blizzard, a former blacksmith, said, "We deal with the guys in business suits as well as the cowboys who come in off the ranch.

"The thing we hear from people who come here for the first time is that it's like stepping into another world.

Candidates taught how to campaign

Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Shake voters' hands, send them letters, hand them "push cards," but don't feed them or argue with them.

These are among the political tidbits offered by teachers at $50-a-head three-day campaign schools run by the Texas Republican Party for its candidates and their staffs.

Looking forward to a year when every statewide office and legislative seat is on the ballot, the GOP got the jump on the Democrats by running campaign schools in October and December at the Driskill Hotel here. Tom Hockaday, state GOP political director, says there will be several more. The Democrats are planning similar schools, but Joe Gagen, primary director, said no dates have been selected.

The GOP schools are closed to the media. Hockaday said the classes "are not a real appropriate place for (reporters) to be." Gagen said the Democratic schools probably would be open to the press.

Representatives from about 20 campaigns — including some announced and unannounced candidates — have attended, Hockaday said. Most have been from local campaigns.

The classes go into all phases of vote-chasing. 'We even give suggestions on color schemes," Hockaday said. The orange and blue used by Gov. Bill Clements in 1978 and again in his current campaign is very "appealing." according to studies, he noted.

The advice on telephone banks is changing this year. When it was a novelty it was very useful and very good, Hockaday "No doubt about it, phone systems elected Bill Clements and re-elected (U.S. Senator) John Tower. But now that many candidates are using the phones, the effect can be numbing. "I don't see phoning used that extensively this time. It can be very effective, but it's very time consuming," he said. A campaign worker who attended the school, but asked not to be identified, said he was taught that a bunch of phone calls to a voter can backfire.

"Lots of people get irritated," he said.

voter's mind. To sit there and argue is futile," he said.

Personal contact with voters is important. "Those who walk do better at the polls," he said. The worker said he was told. "The Republicans say, 'If you walk it. you win it." Hockaday said candidates are taught to avoid trying to win a vote from an obviously hostile voter. "You never should argue. Determine early what you are standing for and stick with it. You shouldn't try to change a

Three Texas Democrats were among Reagan's strongest allies

By CHARLES RICHARDS Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) -President Reagan drew his strongest congressional Democratic support from the South last year, with three Texans among the top 10, an annual survey by Congressional Quarterly

Charles Stenholm of Stamford and Phil Gramm of College Station backed the president 75 percent of the time and Kent Hance of Lubbock supported Reagan on 71 percent of the roll call votes in 1981, according to the

On the other end of the scale. Jim Mattox of Dallas backed the president least frequently, voting with him on only 29 percent of the issues. Close behind in frequence of opposition were Mickey Leland of Houston (30 percent), and Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio and Martin Frost of Dallas (34 percent

But only two other Democrats. House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth and Jack Brooks of Beaumont, voted with Reagan less than half the time. Wright backed Reagan views 49 percent of the time while Brooks, dean of the 24-member Texas delegation. supported the president on 42 percent of the votes.

In the Senate, Lloyd Bentsen of Texas backed the president 70 percent of the time, third highest among Democrats. Republican John Tower of Texas gave the president his vote on 75 percent of the issues

While the study reflects Reagan's first-year success on Capitol Hill, it is not a measure of how much of his program was approved, and should be used with caution as a measure of an individual lawmaker's loyalty, the publication said, because:

- the study counts only issues that reach a roll-call vote on the House or Senate floor. Elements of the White House agenda that are abandoned or defeated before they reach the floor, that are quietly compromised, or that breeze through on a voice vote are not counted:

- the study counts votes only on issues where the president has indicated clear. personal support or opposition, usually in messages to Congress, press conference remarks or other public statements; and

- all votes are given equal weight, with the same emphasis given major and minor votes and no distinguishment made between close calls and lopsided decisions or between administration initiatives and proposals born on Capitol

Broken down by region, Congressional Quarterly said, the presidential support scores illustrate the impact of two growing intra-party factions, the conservative Southern "Boll Weevils" and the Republican moderate "Gypsy Moths" of the Northeast and Midwest.

The Boll Weevils, which Stenholm heads, gave Reagan his strongest Democratic backing. Of the 22 most supportive Democrats, 21 came from the

Gramm. co-sponsor of Reagan's budget bill, and Stenholm tied for fourth among Reagan's staunchest supporters, the study showed. while Hance. co-sponsor of the president's tax bill, tied for ninth.

Among Texas' five Republican congressmen, the most supportive of Reagan was Tom Loeffler of Hunt, the deputy minority whip of the House, who voted with him on 79 percent of the roll call votes. Next were Jack Fields of Humble. 76 percent: Jim Collins of Dallas, 71 percent: Bill Archer of Houston, 67 percent: and Ron Paul of Lake Jackson. 59 percent.

Besides Stenholm, Gramm and Hance, five other Boll Weevils are Texans, and they also backed Reagan most of the time. CQ said.

Marvin Leath of Marlin was supportive on 68 percent of the votes, followed by Jack Hightower of Vernon (67), Richard White of El Paso (67). Sam B. Hall of Marshall (66) and Ralph Hall of Rockwall (61).

Other Texas Democrats with Reagan half the time or more were Jake Pickle of Austin (61), Abraham Kazen of Del Rio (58). Charlie Wilson of Lufkin (57). Kika de la Garza of Mission (57) and Bill Patman of Ganado (50)

a negative standpoint, Gonzalez led all Texans. disagreeing with Reagan positions 64 percent of the time. Leland 53 percent and Mattox 51 percent

Associated Press Writer HOUSTON (AP) - South Texans thought in the early 1970's they had found a solution to the energy shortage brought by the Arab oil embargo - a nuclear power plant

Fuel was cheap and plentiful and none of it came from the Middle East.

Now many are having serious doubts about whether the plant will ever be completed and if it is. whether it will be worth the

The problems here are not unique. They reflect a national disenchantment among utility executives as well as consumers with the concept of nuclear power.

Work is not expected to resume for another six months, by which time Austin and San Antonio may have pulled out.

Enough people share Graham's opinion that Austin' voters told city officials in November to try to sell their town's 16 percent share. The mayor of another project partner. Henry Cisneros of San Antonio, has said he wants to quit paying into the plant and has organized atask force to look into alternative power sources.

The four partners building the project - Houston Lighting & Power, Austin, San Antonio and Corpus Christi's Central Power & Light - have filed suit against Brown & Root for breach of contract, saving that firm violated its agreement by resigning as construction contractor after being fired as design engineer. The plant has become increasingly unpopular as delays have postponed the start-up date from 1980 to 1986 and raised the price from below $1 billion to the most recent estimate of $4.4 billion to $4.8 billion.

At one point, complaints about safety-related welding and concrete pours and charges of company-backed intimidation of quality control employees from a fired inspector led the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to spend thousands of man-hours investigating the site. Based on the team's findings, the NRC levied a $100.000 fine and ordered controlling partner HL&P to 'show cause' construction should be allowed to continue.

'This plant has become one of the examples everyone points to to show that the nuclear industry is not what it's supposed to be," said Lanny Sinkin, chairman of a group that is one of two intervenors asking the NRC to deny HL&P an operating license for the project.

The most recent construction permit for a plant was issued four years ago by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

A consortium of utilities in the state of Washington recently postponed work on two of five plants it was building because the estimated cost of completing the project had soared from $6.5 billion to about $25 billion.

Carolina Power & Light canceled two units of a four-reactor plant for economic reasons in December

The industry is crippled by three problems, said Scott Peters, media relations manager for the Atomic Industrial Forum:

- Slower-than-expected growth in power demand.

 A complex and changing set of NRC construction specifications, and Higher interest rates. Peters said before 1973 the average utility in the nation could count on a demand growth of about 7 percent per year. "After the oil embargo. it dropped to 0 percent before bouncing back up to 2 to 3 percent," he said.

"Add to that the uncertainty over the increasing cost of money And on top of that, add the regulatory problems.

The regulatory policies are what nettle the Brown & Root senior vice president.

"For instance, we knew that the regulations affecting electrical systems in plants would change due to a fire at the Browns Ferry plant" in Decatur Ala he said "But it was years before we even got a document that said. 'This is what's going to be acceptable in the regulations."

Sinkin contends the

"This is a reflection of the fact that nuclear power plants were turned over to private enterprise long before very serious problems in the technology were solved." he said. "As these appear and are resolved. the technology has to change.

Broom says the fact that his company was fired as chief engineer and resigned as chief contractor at the South Texas project is not the reason for his pessimistic predictions for the industry.

"If you can show me changing regulations are to . anybody in the world who be expected considering the wants to build a nuclear establishment of a windbreak planting is dependent upon advanced planning in regard to site preparation and the expected results of the species present, according to Lee McDonald, district conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service.

Site preparation important for planting of windbreaks

Adequate site preparation is beneficial in reducing competition and preparing the soil for planting. It also serves to catch and store moisture. Without this preparation, the young plant would have little chance for

According to McDonald. the type of preparation done depends on the soil type. Medium to heavy soils can be summer fallowed to gain a better soil moisture relationship. It is essential to fallow sod or alfalfa sites before planting trees.

Sandier soils that are subject to wind or water erosion need to have a cover crop planted during the summer before the trees are to be planted.

Additional water can be added to the soil by irrigating the summer before planting. McDonald said that water can also be applice by drip irrigation. Drip irrigation directly places water at the root zone of the plants, thus making it one of the most efficient means of adding water.

Trees planted on the windward side and at least 100 feet out will prevent snow or sand from drifting into a driveway or against a house.

McDonald stated that an effective windbreak would be composed of a shurb row or two or three rows of hardwoods and two or three rows evergreens. If space is limited two or three rows of evergreens they will provide more protection than will two or three rows of hardwoods.

SAFETY OF KEROSENE Dramatic increases inhome heating costs have developed a demand for small portable heaters to provide spot heating. However, many challenging questions are being asked by consumers about the safety of the kerosene type heating units. Hazards associated with kerosene heaters include: 1. The lowering of available oxygen and a possible increase in carbon monoxide. 2. The threat of burns from direct contact with the unit.

3. An increase in the risk of fires. These hazards will vary according to the heater design and the use of good judgment regarding its operation Users should use kerosene heaters only during waking hours and always have a window open about one inch or keep a door ajar during operation Only clear white kerosene should be used in kerosene heaters. Other fuels including regular yellow kerosene should not be used as these fuels will smoke and interfere with Users are further cautioned that heaters should always be placed away from curtains and other combustibles and the use of smoke detectors in areas where heaters are used is Consumers wanting more information about the hazards of kerosene heaters and recommended safe operating procedures can request the data sheet entitled "Portable Kerosene Heaters" by writing or calling the Gray County Extension Office. 669-7429.

administration might yet ban grain shipments to the Soviet

A national farm organization leader said Reagan told him Wednesday that a total embargo on exports to the Soviet Union was one of his last i ions in trying to gain relaxation of martial law in Poland. Asked if he thought Reagan was close to taking such a step.

Robert Delano replied, "I don't think he is." Delano, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, based his assessment on a brief meeting with Reagan at the White House.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, who accompanied Delano, said the Reagan administration "doesn't even talk" about applying an embargo selectively on grain.

Last week. Reagan halted shipment to the Soviet Union of high-technology items. including computers, and machinery used in gas pipeline construction. It was his first step in what aides described as an escalating response to Soviet involvement in the military crackdown in Poland.

Delano, asked whether grain shipments would be cut off to the Soviet Union within three months, replied: "I would bet they would not be shut off." The federation chief told reporters at the White House that he and the president discussed a total embargo, but "that is one of the last options he'd use. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said later that "the president's general position is that selective r embargoes are not the way to operate. Speakes said he had not heard any mention of an across-the-board trade embargo. Last April, the president lifted the embargo on grain shipments to the Soviet Union that was imposed by President Carter in retaliation for the Soviet military occupation of Afghanistan two years ago.

Although Reagan did not impose a total trade embargo — which would have included grain — he did suspend negotiations with the Soviets on a new long-term grain agreement The current agreement, which calls for minimum and maximum purchases of U.S. corn and wheat by the Soviet Union, will expire Sept. 30. Under the current pact, the Soviets must buy at least 6 million metric tons of wheat and corn annually and can buy an additional 2 million, if they want, without further negotiations with the United States.

But if more than 8 million metric tons are wanted, the United States must give its approval. The Soviets were told more than three months ago they could buy up to 23 million tons in the year that began Oct. 1 - 15 million more than the agreement guarantees.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn

Dear Farmers:

You and any decision makers are invited to eat a good hot meal with us. For entertainment there will be a fifteen minute slide presentation on my 1981 Yukon moose hunt. You will see pictures of caribou, grizzly bear, timberwolf, dall sheep and moose. You will see them before and after the kill. This was a two hundred mile horseback hunting trip all captured on film. Whether you hunt or not the scenery pictures are worth seeing. This three week trip took me north about fifty miles below the arctic circle.

Also, we will show you the New Hybrids for 1982--Corn and Sorghum. We have four new corns G-4733, G-4673A, G-4522, and G-4438. Not new, but did very outstanding this year was our Silo Mix 200 corn at $22.50 per unit. For sure, that is the best price on corn seed.

For Sorghum we have six New Hybrids of which five are greenbug resistant to Bio-type E greenbugs. In Bio-type E hybrids they range from 100 to 125 days in maturity.

We have some good information for you so you can cut corners on your 1982 farming expenses. Come get the details.

Here is where, when, and the time.

Tar Heels turn back Virginia

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) - James Worthy hit a turnaround jumper that gave North Carolina its first lead in the second half, with less than four minutes to play, and the top-ranked Tar Heels clawed their way to a 65-60 basketball victory Saturday over No.2 Virginia.

Worthy's short jump shot fom the left baseline put the Tar Heels ahead 55-54 with 3:47 to play and capped a comeback that saw undefeated North Carolina erase a nine-point deficit. The teams traded advantages in the closing minutes until two foul shots by Sam Perkins with 1:48 to play gave North Carolina the lead for good. 59-58. and the Tar Heels held on for their 11th victory this season by going into their famed four corners offense

Ralph Sampson, Virginia's 7-foot-4 center. led all scorers with 30 points, but it was his North Carolina counterpart. 6-9 Sam Perkins, who put the finishing touches on the victory. On the ensuing inbounds play. Perkins got behind the Virginia layup that helped hand Virginia its first loss in 13 games this season.

Worthy led the Tar Heels with 17 points, freshman Michael Jordan had 16 and Perkins, who played much of the game in foul trouble, had 12.

Virginia forged a 32-28 halftime lead with Sampson providing much of the firepower, and the Cavaliers stretched that lead to seven, 39-32, 3:24 after intermission when Sampson sent home a finger roll shot from about six feet.

The Cavaliers then led 47-38. grabbing their largest lead of the game. when Sampson took a rebound with one hand and slammed it home.

"It's great." said Donna A. Lopiano. AIAW president and women's athletic director at the University of Texas-Austin. "Every athlete is now guaranteed due process under the

The assembly also passed a motion which allows institutions to impose more restrictive rules than those specified by the AIAW, excluding those provisions covered by the bill of rights.

Most of Friday's discussion centered on the provisions themselves rather than the bill of rights concept.

The bill certifies that athletes shall be afforded on-campus review of grievances on both scholarship and personal issues and guarantees that athletes will be afforded equal rights with other students regarding participation in other campus

The bill clarifies existing AIAW policy, including contractual protection for athletes under scholarship.

The assembly agreed that athletes should be permitted absences from practice or competition for religious holidays and should have a reasonable opportunity to spend major holidays with their families.

Flava Galbreath. AIAW national student representative and a senior at Ball State University, said she was particularly pleased that the bill requires athletes to be advised of medical treatment options in event of illness or injury.

Dear Abby

Readers: Carpe Diem! By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Remember this?

"Dear Abby: I work for a travel agency and love it. But the one aspect of my job that saddens me is seeing so many widows booking tours, hoping to meet others in the same

"The most common remark I hear is, 'How I wish my dear departed husband could have lived to take this trip with me! He worked so hard all his life, and just when he could have relaxed and enjoyed life, he dies.

"So, Abby, tell your readers not to put off those vacation trips too long. Take a trip, and make some memories -

MEMORY-MAKER IN MILWAUKEE

"DEAR MEMORY-MAKER: Thanks for a timely reminder that it's always later than we think. Women, urge your men to enjoy the fruits of their labor now! And if they resist, tell 'em it's no time for a widow to see the world alone on her husband's insurance money.

Abby, your readers might appreciate a follow-up story on the above article that appeared in our Philadelphia Bulletin several years ago. Hazel, my wife of 42 years, cut it out and showed it to me. Because it made sense to us, we took a longdreamed-of Caribbean cruise - something we always wanted to do, but never found the time.

Abby, we had the time of our lives! And I'm glad we went, because Hazel's health began to fail last year, and after a long and painful illness, a merciful Lord took my beloved wife home to her eternal rest. I found this clipping in her Bible. Thanks for the memories, Abby!

HAZEL'S MAC

DEAR ABBY: My fiance has been working in another state for the last three months. He's 31 and stands 6-foot-1. He came home a few days ago, and when we hugged hello I noticed that he seemed to have "shrunk." He told me that he thought I had grown taller. I'm 25, and have been 5-foot-4 since the age of 14. After a lot of kidding around about it, we decided to measure each other to find out whether he had shrunk or I had grown, and we were surprised to find that I am now 5-foot-5 and he is still 6-foot-1.

Abby, I thought people stopped growing after they reached the age of 21. Is it possible that I could have grown at my age? My clothes still fit and I don't feel any taller. I am on the pill. Would that have anything to do with my growing taller? My whole family has called me "Shorty" for years, so please sign this . . .

SHORTY NO MORE

DEAR SHORTY: It is indeed possible to continue growing after age 21. And the pill has nothing to do

DEAR ABBY: Who started that old superstition, "Thirteen at a dinner table is bad luck"?

DEAR WONDERING: Probably the hostess who had service for 12 in her good dishes, silver and stemware, only 12 placemats and napkins in her company linen, and a dining room set with only 12 chairs. She planned a lovely sit-down dinner for 12, then a guest called her at the last minute and asked if she could bring a friend.

DEAR LOUISE: Land I are about to retire, al we want our retirement to be as happy as possible. We'reairly healthy. have enough to take trips if we want to. We're dy 65 years old so should live another 20 years at least.

We're reasonably close, although our friendare in different groups in town and some of them don't like eacother.

It's going to be difficult to stay togethe and still have friends. Wkhat should our priorities be in planing our future?

DEAR F. F.: Top billing, for every coue but expecially those facing retirement, should be hapy marriage. To achieve this. you and L should get closer, dl out friends who could cause friction between you, have reflar check - ups to maintain your good health and take freque trips for renewal of your personal relationship and enjoymer of new scenery.

In my opinion, everything in older mriage depends on contentment with each other. If you tve that beautiful attribute, you can endure all else.

Your finances can dwindle or disappearFriends can leave you for more congenial company. Childrennd grandchildren can move a thousand miles away and seldn come to see you. Your health can deteriorate.

But if you and your mate have absolute tist in each other, if you enjoy the assurance that the two of you'ill stand together. no matter what befalls you, nothing can desoy you.

Over and over I have heard the sad coment that you can't trust anybody these days. I don't believe th. I think there are many relatives and friends we can believen. But we need to be on our guard - except with our mates in older husband and - wife team should be able to know the can always come home, or stay at home, in understanding nd appreciation, in deep and lasting affection.

There were a lot of rules and regulations to follow for New Years Eve party goers this year. The sign at the M. K. Brown Auditorium read "No Jeans": the sign at St. Vincents read "No Hats": the sign at the 7 - 11 read "No Shoes, No Shirt, No

Beng some udied over 1000 couples in varying age levels. The young couples, married three years or so, reported the most unhappiness in marriage. The middle - aged pairs, wed around 20 years, showed different feelings about marital happiness maybe good. maybe poor, too busy to do more than accept what life dealt them.

But the oldest group polled reported the greatest happiness in marriage. One of the writers suggested that long - married couples are mature and thus have learned to appreciate the contented - marriage lifestyle.

So, F. F., cling to your marriage above everything else. I say again - make it closer and keep it that way.

DEAR LOUISE: Now that we're retired, my wife is killing me with what she calls culture. I never cared about concerts or art exhibits or museums or lectures about the universe. But sh eats that stuff up. Now she says I've got to 'share her interests' and keeps needling me to.

"I'd rather play dominoes or pitch horse shoes or just sit and gab. I'm getting awful fed up with her trying to change me. I wish you'd tell her. in your answer to this letter in your column, to leave me alone. W. W.

DEAR W. W.: I'll do no such thing - because I don't believe it would solve your problem. You can't expect your wife to-give up her dream of a cultural retirement, any more than she can hope you will change your love of recreation completely. As I've written many times, compromise can, should and will resolve most difficulties for older couples. There seems no doubt you and your wife love each other. To keep that love alive and well as long as you both shall live. you must both give a little and get a little. Ask her to give equal time to your separate interests. Attend a concert a week with her. Teach her to play dominoes - or make your gab interesting enough that she'll enjoy it. At first you may have to pretend to like what each other likes. But if you make believe long enough and strong enough. it quite likely will become reality.

Above all other efforts, stay together. Nothing is worth a marriage break up, especially at our age. Write DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

HE MAKES WINE TOO. Mery Griffin, veteran talk show host, has a chuckle with a rubber mask of horror actor Bela Lugosi which sits on his office shelf in Hollywood. Griffin also runs an empire of game shows, a production company, radio stations and a closed - circuit TV system at 80 race tracks around the country. Oh yes, he is also into making his own brand of wine at his ranch on the Monterey Peninsula. It's called "Mont Merveille.

By JERRY BUCK AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Merv Griffin's talk show has lost its vintage look, but his wine is aging nicely, thank Griffin's streamlined one-hour show, cut down from 90 minutes, is now coming at you only days - and sometimes only hours - after taping. Prior to the first of the year it took 24 days to get a show on the air.

We can acknowledge the things going on in the world," says Griffin. We can be in the mainstream of television again thanks to the satellite.

"If something happens, now we can get a guest on the same day and have it out to the stations. I have felt for the past seven years that I've been on the fringe. It's been driving me crazy because I love the topical aspects of these shows. That's when they're exciting.

"Up to now we haven't been able to acknowledge, for instance, that the hostages were taken. If you watched my show you'd never know that we had a hostage in Iran.

"The Mery Griffin Show" went to satellite transmission at the beginning of the new year. The five weekday shows are taped over a three-day period and sent out immediately by satellite for telecast by more than 100 stations

Griffin spends only three or four days a week in Los Angeles, where he also runs an entertainment empire of game shows, a production company, radio stations, communications facilities and a closed-circuit television system at 80 race tracks across the country. It was NBC which first put Griffin into the game show business as compensation for canceling his afternoon talk show on the network

on the Monterey Peninsula, where he raises grapes and bottles his own brand of wine

"When I was in France," he says, 'someone said to me one day. 'merveilleux!' I thought they were doing a build-up on my name. But I learned that's French for marvelous. And 'merveille' means marvel. So I call my wine 'Mont Merveille.

Television talk shows are changing. Griffin needed topicality to keep the show from going stale with celebrity interviews and other dated material. Mike Douglas, faced with competition from not only the national shows but 466 local talk shows, converted his 90-minute talk show into a one-hour variety show. The granddaddy of them all. NBC's "Tonight Show." recently cut back to one hour at the request of

Broadway's new smash hit

By David Handler

At last it has happened. Broadway, which has been thirsting for a good new musical all season long, has opened its arms to a solid gold smash hit. It's called Dreamgirls." This is the one people will be talking about for years. And years.

Deservedly so. "Dreamgirls," a smart, funny and blistering backstage musical, suggested more than a little by the rise and lemise of The Supremes, is total excitement. Music. dance, costumes and staging blend to form a rare and delicious whole. "Dream-girls" is the most original and electrifying musical to hit Broadway since "A Chorus Line," which won nine Tonys and a Pulitzer six years ago and is still running strong.

Michael Bennett, the man who conceived, choreographed and directed "A Chorus Line," directed and choreographed this one, too. Take your hat off to the man he knows what he's doing.

Like "A Chorus Line "Dreamgirls" will leave its mark. Its songs will be played and played. Its stars, particularly Jennifer Holli-day and Cleavant Derricks, will become major forces in show business. Miss Holliday's performance is so incredible that she receives a standing ovation at inter-

"Dreamgirls" opens in the early '60s at a singing contest at Harlem's Apollo Theater. We meet up backstage with three giggly black girls in matching homemade costumes who've come all the way from Chicago to enter the contest They dream of being the Chiffons or the Marmalettes or the Supremes. They call themselves the Dreamettes. There's Deena Jones

the pretty one; Lorrell Rob-inson (Loretta Devine), the sweet one; and Effie White (Miss Holliday), who weighs more than the other two put together, and also has more than twice the talent. The Dreamettes lose the contest - it's rigged. But they do meet a sharp, ambitious car salesman named Curtis Taylor Jr. (Ben Harney) who wants into the business and smells talent. Taylor decides to manage them and lands them a job on the road singing back-up to James "Thunder" Early (Derricks), a fading soul shouter from the '50s in sequined tuxedo and slickedck hair who reminds you of James Brown. Effie is against the idea — she doesn't want to sing back-up for anyone. But Curtis makes eyes at her, sweet love with him. Neither pop music nor their lives will ever be the same

"Dreamgirls" takes us to the birth of the Motown sound. Curtis, you see, has a dream — to "smooth out" the blackness of soul music and make it appealing enough to whites so that it can crack the pop charts.

When his first stab at a pop tune for Jimmy and the Dreamettes — "Cadillac Dreamettes — "Cadillac Car" — is ripped off by a sugary white trio, he wades into payola. Jimmy and Dreamettes finally hit it big with "Steppin' to the Bad Side," a song that alludes to Curtis' descent while it forms the basis for one of the truly great musical numbers in recent memory.

Jimmy and Dreamettes are on their way. They're the first black group to play Miami. But that's not enough for Curtis - he has bigger dreams still. He turns Jimmy "Thunder" Early into a romantic solo

Christie Hefner no swinging single

By Joyce Jurnovoy and David Jenness

NEW YORK (NEA) - To find the perfect heir to the multi-million dollar Playboy empire, Hugh Hefner didn't have to look very far. His 29-year-old daughter, Christie Ann Hefner, has been representing the corporation for the past six years.

"I never planned to work for the company. I didn't know I would be good at it, nor did my father. But problem solving is part of my personality," says the daughter of the publisher of the world's most famous sex magazine.

On a recent visit to New York, Miss Hefner spoke about her current responsibilities and future plans in the Playboy Suite at the posh Drake Hotel. Looking cool and crisp in a gray skirt and sweater, she is the perfect image of a young corporate executive.

Miss Hefner's executive and public-relations ability makes her position as corporate vice president of Playboy Enterprises more than a figurehead job. She's also adviser to the philanthropic Playboy Foundation, pub lisher of the Playboy Guides and active on the lecture circuit.

In contrast to her father's image as the quintessential Playboy, Miss Hefner is anything but a swinging single. But daughter and dad do have a few things in

"We are both incurable romantics, but I tend to limit and protect myself," she I have one relationship that's important to me at a time, and it tends to last awhile. I don't spend time with men who are threatened by me or my position.

Instead, I'm drawn to men who think I'm more interesting because I work."

When asked about her love life, Miss Hefner shylv admits that she is dating a film producer but will not reveal his name. She says that the men in her life have several things in common: "They've all been intelligent and had a sense of joy and honesty, which is an important virtue for me.'

Though there was little emphasis on traditional religion in her house, Miss Hefner says that she was brought up with a sense of ethics. "Both my parents are down-to-earth people whose priorities are on personal relationships and treating people well. I think my family is Christian in the truest sense of the word,'

she says proudly. Hugh and Millie Hefner separated when Christie was 2 and divorced a few years later. Her mother remarried, and Christie used her stepfather's name, Gunn, until her junior year at Brandeis University.

"My mother's second marriage was breaking up, and I wasn't very close with my stepfather," she recalls. "I had just been elected Phi Beta Kappa, and I wanted to see the name 'Hefner' on that special piece of paper."

After she graduated sum-ma cum laude in 1974, she worked briefly for a progressive Boston newspaper until her father suggested she come to work for Playboy as his "special assist-

"I was affected by how much family life my father gave up to get the magazine and the company started," she says. "I missed time with him because he was always at the office."

Yet, she remains extremely loyal and proud of his accomplishments From her vantage point. Hugh Hefner serves as a good role model who uses power wisely. "He's living proof that you don't have to use people to get ahead,'

Although business dominates her life, she tries to maintain a balance between the corporate and the personal. Except for a small circle of friends, very few people get to know her. Among them is Patty Hearst, with whom she recently spent time in California

Miss Hefner has chosen a quiet lifestyle. She pursues "wholesome" sports — tennis, skiing and bowling and plays the piano for her own enjoyment. She likes to relax with old friends, some from her high-school days in Chicago.

"I prefer giving small din-

'You can't care about political and personal change as much as I do and not be hurt by the people who should be your allies being your critics," she says defensively. "They choose to ignore all that the magazine has done to open things up in this country. It's difficult because they are attacking not only my employer but my father.

Miss Hefner sees her future role as a unique challenge. "I am fortunate that I am anticipating managing the company and, I hope, expanding it," she says. On the personal side, she's interested in having her own

AP Newsfeatures Writer NEW YORK (AP) - Somebody finally took Cy Coleman's yes for an answer, and "Little Me." for which he wrote the music nearly 20 years ago. will reopen on Broadway on Jan. 21. "It seems to me the idea has been around ever since we closed the last time," Coleman says. "Joe Levine bought it for a movie and every year he'd take out a double-page ad in Variety: 'This year, "Little Me' is coming.' They'd get in touch with me to work on it every year and I answered every year. 'Certainly.' Then I'd quote. 'These people can't take yes for an

it about five years ago, so this idea started with him. And Manny Azenberg, the producer, who has had such a nice long association with Neil Simon, pushed it along."

"Little Me" played 259 performances on Broadway from November 1962 to June 1963. The new one isn't a revival. The songs "I've Got Your Number" and "Real Live Girl" are still in, of course. Coleman says, "Carolyn Leigh and I have written two new songs. They came out of new scenes Doc has written. The opening scene has a new song. 'Don't Ask a Lady. The second act has a new scene, a new character and a new song. 'I Want To Be Yours."

Comparisons of cast are made by enormously talented people before, but now I think we've cast it more accurately, according to the writing. Sid Caesar played all the men's parts before. Now we have James Coco and Victor Garber. I think there's a little more emphasis on the girl than there was in the last one. "We had a 25-piece orchestra before: now we have 10 including the conductor. We had close to 40 in it originally; now we have close to 20. Years ago, we had a dancing chorus and a singing chorus. Today to get a job they have to be able to do both brilliantly and be able to act bit parts. He does say rehearsals "have been going so smoothly it is almost scary. I'm usually cautious and guarded and

"Then, Doc Simon decided to rewrite" Coleman with tact. "We had highly superstitious. Priscilla Barns in 'Threes Company'

The NRW Co. was looking for a replacement last summer for Suzanne Somers, who had left the show in a salary dispute. "They told my agent I was too sophisticated." she said. "Not many people hire a girl with a face like this. I usually play rich girls. They won't even let me play prostitutes unless it's a very high-class prostitute. The audience doesn't laugh at pretty girls - unless she's the butt of the joke," the actress said. "When I started I only got some half-hearted laughs and I was getting worried. Then the laughs began to come. So it's wonderful to play against Needless to say. Miss Barnes was hired to play Terri in the comedy series now in its sixth season. She joined John Ritter and Joyce DeWitt, the two remaining roommates.

"The show's changing." she said. "I'm pretty straight and not a caricature. I'm not a dumb blonde. Terri reacts in a comedic way, but it's also a real way. I think they've hired a

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Priscilla Barnes, the newest grownup person. They're still doing sight gags and running into walls, but it is changing.

Miss Barnes previously starred in the CBS series "The American Girls" - briefly, as it turned out, since the show was on the air only two months.

"I feel very fortunate." she said. "It's very difficult to get into a show or get a show onto the air. 'The American Girls' had only a short life. So I feel fortunate. Still, it's not like I just stepped off the bus. I've been around for a while.

Besides her previous series. Miss Barnes was in "The Last Married Couple in America" and "Sunday Lovers." Since her first role on an episode of "Columbo" she's had numerous guest star roles in various series.

WASHINGTON (AP) -Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., says a Reagan administration decision to ease pollution limits on trucks is in "clear defiance" of a position taken last month by the Senate Environmental Committee.

Hart made the comment Friday after Anne Gorsuch administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, announced the decision. She said complying with stricter standards would unreasonably raise costs to vehicle manufacturers.

The senator pointed out that the committee has approved a revision to the act that would abolish the EPA's authority to change truck rules. Hart said the EPA was going along with industry efforts to "decimate the Clean Air Act."

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - As earthlings venture into outer space, they'll take along with them an invisible but inescapable cargo - politics. says an assistant professor at the University of Texas.

Nathan Goldman is preparing his students for what he sees as a brave new world outside the earth's atmosphere with an innovative course called The Politics of Outer Space.

The 31-year-old Goldman first taught the course in the spring of 1981. It attracted about 280 students. He's teaching the course again this year, and enrollment is up to about 360 students ready to study space politics as a legitimate science. The whole world is being drawn into an international web of interdependence." Goldman said in an interview, "and it's being re-emphasized by space. There are half a dozen treaties and a lot of agreements that create a body of law for space.

Goldman said his course outline starts with current policy toward space, covers the increasing efforts of countries other than the United States and Soviet Union to get there, and then goes into his projections for the future.

"The first part of the course is really an American government course" that describes the agencies. interest groups and processes of the U.S. space program. Goldman said.

Private industry is wed to the idea of capitalism in outer space, he said, and that creates a need for a coherent national space policy.

Once Goldman convinces his students that it's only a matter of time before "space politics" becomes a common subject. he moves on to every science fiction buff's favorite subject - the future.

Emphasizing the caveat "if things continue as they are Goldman predicted. "the Russians will have a permanent space station by the mid-to-late 80s. And I believe the Russians will be on Mars by the year 2000. Where we will be, there's no way to know, because we don't have a policy."
