Blizzard dumps record snow on midwest, ice in the east

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

A record blizzard born in a historic winter buried parts of the Midwest in waist-deep snow and whipped up 9-foot drifts Saturday, while power lines and trees limbs snapped in an ice storm in the East.

Snowslides closed three main passes in the state of Washington and warm chinook winds gusted to 97 mph on the eastern slopes of the Colorado Rockies. Snowplows set out to try to clear the way for 2,000 people trapped by avalanches at Utah ski resorts.

Two deaths were blamed on the weather, one in Virginia and one in Indiana. More than 300 people were killed in a 10-day cold wave that eased up last week.

Meanwhile, a storm that trucked out of the Rockies late last week put the hammer down across much of North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa and Michigan with up to 20 inches of wind-blown snow on top of record amounts that fell earlier.

The Midwest was practically shut down, with thousands of travelers stranded and some missing. Snowmobiles went to the rescue of about 200 motorists trapped on a Michigan highway.

"There are all kinds of cars on the roads, and there's just no way to get to them," said police Sgt. Duane Girard in Calumet, Mich., as winds gusting to 65 mph piled deep drifts across highways.

In South Dakota, where up to 20 inches of snow fell, travel was banned in much of the central and eastern part of the state.

Accumulations ranged from 20 to more than 40 inches across Minnesota and many roads were blocked in the northern part of the state.

"They're recording snow up there over the hoods of cars," said Sgt. Donald Woodson of the Minnesota State Patrol's communications office in St. Paul.

The blizzard came on the heels of two previous weekends of record subzero cold in the Midwest, brought on by a different system of frigid and dry air swooping down from the polar regions.

"Along with the cold, this has been an extreme winter," said Mike Streib, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Kansas City. "We're talking about 100-year-old records being broken."

Forecasters predicted another three days of snow in Minnesota, where record snowfalls over the past three days had brought the total for January to 44.1 inches in Minneapolis, less than 6 inches shy of the city's average for an entire year.

The 17.4 inches of snow that had fallen at Fargo, N.D. in a 24-hour period ending at 6 a.m. Saturday was the second heaviest in history, just short of the 19.2 inches in December 1927. Officials were looking for about six travelers missing in North Dakota.

In Sioux City, Iowa, 17.6 inches of snow fell during the night, bringing the total for January to 28.8 inches and eclipsing the all-time snowfall record for a single month, 27.3 inches in March 1912.

The new storm system, which was controlling the weather over the eastern two-thirds of the nation, caused flooding of some roads in southern Illinois and southern Indiana, where a 16-year-old girl was swept to her death in a swollen stream.

Sleet, snow and freezing rain spread from northern Illinois, across Pennsylvania and New York into Massachusetts, where up to 12 inches of snow was expected. About 2,000 homes lost power in Waltham when a car slammed into a utility pole.

An ice storm knocked out power to thousands of residents of Erie and Crawford counties in western Pennsylvania and glazed Pittsburgh streets.

In Idaho, a blizzard with 40-mph winds dropped 18 inches of snow and pushed it into 4-foot drifts, blocking several north-south highways.

At Rexburg, Idaho, they had to cancel a Saturday night seminar on the state's "Worst Winter on Record," the winter of 1948-49.

Supermarkets and liquor stores were jammed with people stocking up for a weekend of blizzard parties and the Super Bowl.

Forecasters predicted snow showers with temperatures in the high teens in Pontiac, Mich., where Sunday's Super Bowl game between the Cincinnati Bengals and the San Francisco 49ers will be played in an enclosed stadium. Roads were described as "spotty with some icing."

In the 24 hours that ended at 2 a.m. Saturday, Minneapolis got 18.5 inches of snow to tie the all-time record of 17.1 inches for a day-long snowfall that had just been set on Wednesday.

In New York City, about 4 inches of snow fell before it changed to rain. Just across the Hudson River in Newark, N.J., weather forecaster Ben Scott said, "The temperature rose from 22 degrees to 36 degrees in about a 15-minute period."

ONE-LEGGED GYMNAST. Jamie McDaniell, a member of the O'Jays Gymnastics Team of Amarillo, displays perfect coordination on the balance beam despite having only one leg. The 13-year-old Miss McDaniell was one of several young gymnasts competing in a meet Saturday in Pampa. Miss McDaniell feels her handicap has made her a better gymnast. "The other girls tell me it's easier for me because I don't have to keep two legs together," she said. Miss McDaniell, who has been competing in gymnastics for a year and a half, won all-around honors at the Amarillo meet last year. She placed 10th on the balance beam and 15th on the uneven bars in state competition last year.

Congress returns to tough economic issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 97th Congress, with Republicans ruling the Senate and Democrats in shaky control of the House, is returning for an election-year session that will be dominated by economic issues and attempts to tackle thorny social measures.

Ending a six-week winter recess, lawmakers will be back on the job at noon Monday, with President Reagan's State of the Union address to a joint House-Senate session set for 9 p.m. EST on Tuesday.

The president's efforts to revive the nation's economy will again be the No. 1 agenda item, despite the earlier hopes of congressional leaders to get the bulk of his economic package behind them in 1981.

However, a number of "social issues" dear to conservatives also will be debated, after being largely postponed in 1981 to make way for the economic legislation.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said the Senate would spend time on issues like abortion, the federal death penalty, school prayer and busing.

On abortion, Thurmond said he supports a constitutional amendment — which his committee will probably act on in February — to permit state legislatures to enact tougher abortion rules than the federal government's.

Republican leaders say Reagan will have a harder time getting further budget cuts through Congress this year — cuts bound to slash into a number of so-called "entitlement" programs, automatic federal payments to citizens, like health and welfare benefits.

Many influential Republicans, especially those from urban states, are expressing reservations about deep cuts in such programs.

Leaders of both parties are in general agreement that some tax increases will be needed in 1982 — or perhaps at least a delay in the tax cut scheduled to take effect on July 1 — to help whittle away a U.S. deficit that could rise to $100 billion or more in fiscal 1983.

But few want to be in the forefront of any move for higher taxes in an election year that puts all 435 House seats and 33 Senate seats up for grabs.

The picture is complicated by mixed signals from the White House, with Reagan clearly reluctant to endorse major tax hikes after leading the charge last year for the largest single tax break in history.

After first advocating higher excise taxes on consumer goods like gasoline, cigarettes and liquor, Reagan last week expressed second thoughts after he met with business leaders. However, administration officials suggest some form of tax increase will be included in Reagan's 1983 budget plan.

That plan will be formally submitted to Congress on Feb. 8, touching off still another round of budget showdowns — with Democrats again expecting to offer alternatives at each major stage along the way.

"We have to revive the economy from the doldrums. We're developing constructive alternatives," said House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas.

But neither Wright nor other Democratic leaders can say at this point just what those alternatives will entail.

In 1981, even though Democrats retained majority control of the House, the Democratic chiefs lost to Reagan's forces on all key economic votes because of tight GOP unity and because many southern Democrats — the so-called "boll weevils" — voted along with the president.

This year, the split between southern conservatives and urban liberals remains, but Democrats should do better in offering alternatives "because of the manifest failure" of Reagan's economic program, Wright said.

He said that, while southern Democrats may still defect, urban Republicans in 1982 will be more prone to side with Democrats.

Little legislative action is planned for either chamber until after Reagan's budget is submitted.

Iran expands foreign trade

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Moslem fundamentalist regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, now in firm control of Iran after purging moderates within the government, has decided to expand its activities abroad.

On one hand, the Khomeini regime hopes to strengthen ties with friendly Western nations and rebuild much that has been destroyed in Iran's war with Iraq. But the Moslem Shiite clergymen in Iran also plan to continue exporting their version of proper Islamic rule to neighboring countries in the Middle East.

Bahrain, a tiny Persian Gulf island nation with a large Shiite population, has cut ties with Iran because of its involvement in last month's attempted coup. Bahrain has called for an Arab economic embargo of Iran, and it has joined with Saudi Arabia and other Persian Gulf states in a mutual defense pact to protect itself against Khomeini-style revolutions.

Taqi Banki, Iran's minister in charge of planning and the budget, was quoted by Tehran radio Saturday as saying trade with Italy would be expanded in the coming months.

Banki, who on Friday returned from a three-day tour of Italy, said oil sales to that country would be expanded in exchange for help with irrigation projects and completion of what was once said to be the Middle East's largest port facility at Bandar Abbas in southern Iran.

Began under the regime of the late Shah of Iran, the project came to a halt in 1979 during the Islamic revolution.

Banki said Saturday that Iran's comparative lack of activity beyond its borders was caused by "internal lack of cooperation." In recent months, the Khomeini regime has gotten rid of so-called moderates and increased its persecution of non-Moslems, such as members of the Bahai faith, and anti-Khomeini urban guerrillas such as the Mujahedeen Khalq.

Haig-Gromyko talks: arms control to Poland

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. flies to a Geneva meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko prepared to use Soviet interest in strategic arms control as a lever to try to wrest concessions on Poland from the Kremlin.

The meeting on Tuesday will be the second between the two in four months and takes place at perhaps the lowest point in U.S.-Soviet relations since President Reagan took office a year ago.

The Haig-Gromyko meeting in Switzerland immediately follows the Reagan administration's decision to downgrade the talks by cutting back their length from two days to one, and by shifting the focus from arms control to Poland.

This new assertion of U.S. determination to link arms control talks to Soviet behavior in the world was underscored late last week by State Department spokesman Dean Fischer.

Fischer said although President Reagan remains committed to "meaningful" arms control, the strategic arms reduction talks, "cannot be insulated from events."

The talks between the top Soviet and American diplomats is likely to be the highlight of Haig's trip, which also takes him to the Middle East.

He is to meet in Jerusalem with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and in Cairo with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak to explore possibilities of making progress in the stalled autonomy talks between Israel and Egypt.

There is no public sign Haig is bringing with him any firm suggestions to break the deadlock in the talks, which affect the future of the 1.3 million Palestinians living in the West Bank and Gaza Strip territories occupied by Israel since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

In explaining the U.S. position as Haig prepares to enter the meeting with Gromyko, Fischer noted Haig repeatedly has emphasized "that the continuing repression of the Polish people, for which Soviet responsibility is clear, obviously constitutes a major setback to the prospects for constructive East-West relations."

"There can be no question that the climate of East-West relations in turn has a serious effect upon the prospects for moving forward in arms control," Fischer said.

Several knowledgeable U.S. officials make clear that the administration is divided on the issue and that there is continuing pressure from U.S. allies in Europe to get on with the arms control process.

However, they also say that the long-anticipated effort to use the Haig-Gromyko talks to announce the date for opening strategic arms reduction talks has become untenable in light of the martial law crackdown in Poland and of criticism in the United States that the U.S. reaction has been too restrained.

Border tensions rising in Jordan

By The Associated Press
King Hussein of Jordan cut short a Persian Gulf tour at Bahrain, his first stop, and made plans to fly home Sunday, officials said. The Bahrain government gave no reason for the decision, but officials said privately it was related to increasing border tensions between Jordan and Syria.

Hussein also was to visit the United Arab Emirates, Qatar and Oman.

In Tunis, Tunisia, the Arab League postponed until Feb. 7 an emergency foreign ministers meeting scheduled for Sunday. League sources said Syria requested the postponement to avoid conflict with a U.N. Security Council meeting Thursday that is to schedule a special General Assembly session.

Syria asked for the Arab League and General Assembly sessions after the United States vetoed a Security Council resolution Wednesday approving voluntary sanctions against Israel. Syria wants the international community to force Israel to rescind its Dec. 14 annexation of the occupied Golan Heights, captured from Syria in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Diplomatic observers said the strained relations between pro-Soviet Syria and pro-Western Jordan lessen the chances of a productive Arab League session.

On Friday, Syria charged that gunmen protected by covering fire from the Jordanian army slipped into southern Syria and raided an army patrol, killing a Syrian officer and a soldier.

Jordan issued a formal denial Saturday. It quoted "travelers and eyewitnesses" as saying the gunbattle near the southern Syrian city of Deraa involved renegade Syrian soldiers fighting Syrian security forces.

Weather

The weather for Super Bowl Sunday will be fair and warm with high temperatures in the low 60s. Winds will be 15-25 mph and gusting.

Balanced budget backers are pinning their hopes on Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) - Backers of a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution say they are near victory in their campaign for a constitutional convention, but are pinning their real hopes on Congress.
 Their chief lobbyist says it may take some prodding from the voters to get Congress to act.
 "There is no question, politically, you aren't going to have a convention," George Snyder, president of the National Taxpayers Union, conceded in an interview.

But, he predicted: "As soon as we get another state - or it could happen any time now - the United States Senate will pass the resolution and send it to the House of Representatives."
 Snyder thinks Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, will block House action.
 "But the end of the scenario will be by the elections of 1982 every candidate running for Congress will have to take a position on this very vital issue," Snyder said.

The Constitution requires Congress to call a constitutional convention on the demand of two-thirds of the state legislatures, or 34 of them.
 Alaska became the 31st state when the House of Representatives in Juneau approved a resolution calling for a balanced budget convention by a vote of 27-12 on Jan. 18.
 "We are not giving odds on it, but I think we have a good chance of getting additional states this year," said David Keating, Washington, D.C. spokesman for the Taxpayers Union.

Last body recovered in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) - Divers recovered an infant's body - the last of 78 victims from an airliner crash 10 days earlier - from the Potomac River on Saturday.
 The baby, as expected, was identified by the District of Columbia Medical Examiner's office as 2-month-old Jason Tirado, son of Jose and Priscilla Tirado of Madrid. The mother was one of five survivors from the Air Florida plane that struck the 14th Street Bridge and plunged into the river shortly after takeoff from National Airport on Jan. 13. The father was killed.

 About 90 percent of the wreckage now has been brought to the surface. It has been taken to a Coast Guard hangar at National Airport where National Transportation Safety Board investigators were placing the pieces on the floor in the same position they would occupy on a real airplane, said NTSB spokesman Ira Furman.

"For practical purposes, we are looking for the rest of the landing gear and a portion of the right wing," Furman said.
 Divers planned to work at least part of Sunday, he said.
 Investigators want the gear to be able to answer the question of whether the wheels were up or down. Witness reports on that point are uncertain.
 Part of the right landing gear was found Saturday.

ABA panel endorses tough gun control laws

CHICAGO (AP) - Controlling handguns is the key to reducing crime in the United States, the head of an American Bar Association task force said Saturday.
 "We do not think that without effective gun control there can be any solution to the crime problem in the United States," said former Miami prosecutor Richard L. Gerstein.
 Gerstein, head of the ABA's Task

Force on Crime, said: "We regarded effective gun control as the most important recommendation we were making."
 He acknowledged that there is "emotional and organized" opposition to such restrictions.
 "Gun control is a very sensitive political issue," Gerstein said at a news conference at the mid-year meeting of the ABA, the nation's largest lawyers' group. But he maintained that "Effective gun control does not impinge on anyone's (constitutional) rights."
 Gerstein, now in private law practice after serving as Miami's chief prosecutor for 21 years, said that to be effective, gun control must come at both the "federal and local level."

The task force noted that FBI statistics show that about 50 percent of all murders in the United States in 1980 were caused by handguns.
 On other topics, Gerstein said a task force recommendation for "preventive detention" of some criminal suspects awaiting trial is constitutional. The Supreme Court is currently considering a Nebraska law barring bail for serious sex offenders, and a challenge to the District of Columbia's preventive detention law is pending before the justices.
 -Defended a rule barring the use of illegally seized evidence in criminal trials. The prohibition, known as the "exclusionary rule," has come under severe attack from conservatives, and several proposals are pending in Congress to modify it.

PAULA BROCK

Paula Brock seeks District Clerk post

Paula Brock is announcing her candidacy for District Clerk in the Democratic Primary to be held on May 1, 1982.

Mrs. Brock is currently a Deputy in the Gray County Clerk's Office where she has been employed for four years. Prior to that she was employed in the Gray County Tax Office for three years. She has worked with the public for the past 20 years.

Mrs. Brock is a native of Pampa and graduated from Pampa High School in 1962.
 She and her husband Eugene live south of Pampa with their three children. Kelli, a senior at Pampa High School, Kristi, a sixth grader at Pampa Middle School and Matt, a fifth grader at Woodrow Wilson Elementary School.
 "If elected I pledge to do the best of my ability to run the District Clerk's Office as efficiently and effectively as possible. I am willing to work hard with this community to make it a better place to live," she said.

CARL KENNEDY

Carl Kennedy seeks reelection

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy has recently announced his decision to seek re-election to the office.
 "I want to express my sincere appreciation to the people of Gray County, the County Commissioners and all elected officials and employees for their splendid cooperation during the past three years," Kennedy said.
 "It is because of this cooperation and the resulting accomplishments that I am encouraged to seek re-election."
 "With continuing support, both now and at election time, I will appreciate the opportunity to serve another four years as the County Judge for all of the people of Gray County," Kennedy said.

LINDA HAYNES

Linda Haynes is Demo candidate

Linda Haynes of McLean is announcing her candidacy for re-election to the post of Gray County Democratic Chairman.
 Mrs. Haynes was first appointed to the post in September of 1981 after the resignation of former chairman Mary Simpson.
 She is editor and publisher of the McLean News, vice president of the Panhandle Press Association, is on the board of directors of the Texas Press Association and is secretary of the McLean Chamber of Commerce.
 She has lived in McLean for 20 years and is married to rancher Sam Haynes.

Lengthy evidence confusing in Cauble trial

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors promised jurors at the onset of Rex Cauble's trial that evidence would prove the millionaire rancher knew of his employees' involvement in a marijuana smuggling ring, yet continued to help them.

But after many hours of confusing and sometimes contradictory testimony from some 30 witnesses and thousands of pages of documents, defense attorneys and courtroom spectators agreed it would be difficult to convict Cauble on the basis of the evidence presented thus far.

Prosecutors unexpectedly rested their case Thursday, the sixth day of the rancher's federal racketeering, drug smuggling and embezzlement trial.

Earlier in the day, U.S. District Judge William Steger and defense attorneys had discussed the probability of government attorneys presenting witnesses and evidence through Monday.

Some suggested prosecutors shut down after suffering a setback a day earlier, when Larry Dale Washington testified under cross-examination that federal agents had written his statement to indicate he knew of Cauble's involvement in a scheme to ferry 106 tons of marijuana in shrimp boats from Colombia to Texas in 1977 and 1978.

Washington told defense attorney G. Brockett Irwin that, in fact, he told FBI agents the statement did not reflect his belief that Cauble did not know of the smuggling ring. But, he said, the agents refused to retype it.

Assistant U.S. Attorney David Baugh refused to say why he decided to rest before presenting all of the government witnesses and evidence.

Defense attorneys, who moved for a directed verdict of acquittal immediately after prosecutors rested, said government attorneys had not followed through with a promise to present enough circumstantial evidence to show Cauble's knowledge of the illicit operation.

"The government promised the jury to produce a smoking gun," said Charles Burton, one of four attorneys defending Cauble who contended "the evidence is insufficient."

Outside the courtroom, spectators milled about and discussed the case among themselves.

"I've got my own personal opinion, but on the basis of the evidence they've presented this far I couldn't convict... if I was on that jury," said

Rickey Silvertooth, a former Texas Department of Public Safety narcotics officer.

Cauble, who has shown signs of strain throughout the trial, left the courthouse smiling.

The 67-year-old rancher is charged in a 10-count indictment with racketeering to help the smugglers bring marijuana into the country on five separate occasions during 1977 and 1978.

Prosecutors have tried to prove Cauble received income from the sale of the illegal weed and poured the profits into his businesses, including his oil and gas interests and Cutter Bill's Western World clothing stores.

Baugh contends Cauble got involved in the illicit operation because he had heavy debts and needed cash — liquid assets — to bolster his businesses.

The government fired its biggest gun with the testimony of convicted drug trafficker Raymond Eugene Hawkins. The bearded rancher testified that Cauble knew of the smuggling scheme all along.

He said he once paid $250,000 in smuggling profits to Cauble's ranch foreman as the millionaire looked on.

BLIND ART LOVER. Although blind, Lowell Lebermann, president of the board of Austin's Laguna Gloria Art Museum, has developed some definite ideas about what kind of paintings he likes. Austin man has love for art although he is blind

By KATHY BAKER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Lowell Lebermann is a wealthy enough Texan to indulge himself as a regular at the Metropolitan and the Guggenheim and the Museum of Modern Art in New York, and he has developed some very definite ideas about what kinds of paintings he likes.

"While I enjoy moderns, I am a good deal more comfortable with the more traditional kinds of art. But I have an abstract over my fireplace at home that looks like those mysterious runways in Peru in the Andes."

But while Lebermann can talk art, the 41-year-old businessman can't see the painting over his fireplace.

He is blind. "I had a gun accident when I was 13 — classic 'unloaded' gun," he said in a recent interview. "Kid shot me with ratshot when he was showing me the gun. Lost one eye right away and vision in the other eye deteriorated until I finally lost everything except light perception in that eye when I was 21 or 22."

His blindness has not deterred the independent investor from a distinguished career of civic involvement, which he added to last year when he took over as President of the Board of Austin's Laguna Gloria Art Museum.

"He has come to every exhibition," said museum director Lawrence Miller. "He has one of the museum staff take him around and describe the works of art to him. It's a great challenge to us to do that, because most of us are visually oriented and we have to translate those feelings into language."

"We had an exhibition called 'Five on Fabric' a while ago," Lebermann said. "These five artists essentially paint on tarps, quilts and all sorts of things, and they use the gamut — from paint to glue and glitter. I examined every piece. It was very tactile."

"You miss the color, but if you have memory of color and form, which I do — I didn't have my gun accident until I was 13 and didn't lose my sight entirely until I was about 21 — so if someone describes something to me, I can conceptualize it pretty well. Ifancy."

"But as you would expect, I enjoy sculpture more than anything, I mean, I enjoy having paintings. But I particularly enjoy wood sculpture and metal things — you know, 'touchy-feely' things."

Largely privately supported, Laguna Gloria resides at its original home, a lovely old tree-shaded, Spanish-style residence on Lake Austin once owned by Clara Driscoll, credited with saving the Alamo as a historical shrine.

"Back in '52, my mother was president of Texas Fine Arts and Laguna Gloria," Lebermann said. "As a pre-teenager, I used to play at the Clara Driscoll home on the lake, so I have an emotional attachment to the place."

But museum directors have always been frustrated by a lack of display space. So with Lebermann's help, the museum has begun negotiating acquisition of four large historic warehouse buildings in downtown Austin.

Without Lebermann's ties into an "old-boy network," said Miller, Laguna Gloria would be trapped within 2,500 square feet at the lake home.

Clint Freeman Seeks Reelection As Commissioner Precinct 4, Carson County

To announce his candidacy in the May 1 Democratic primary Clint said:

"I have lived in Carson County since 1926, have been a home-owner and business man here since 1935, and have been your commissioner for the past seven years."

"My wife, Mildred, and I have raised six children, of whom four now are residents of Carson County: Mrs. Charles Timmons, C.D. Freeman, and C.W. Freeman of White Deer, and Mrs. Rick Lowe of Skellytown. The others are Mrs. Ronnie Eade of Kilgore and Mrs. Hoyt Taylor of Dumas."

"In the coming term I will be able to do more for our precinct than in the past because of our better and newer equipment, good help, more money to work with, and with hard work."

"I will continue to listen to all our people, and to treat each one equally. I will do my best—that is all I can promise."

"Thank you for your continued support in the May 1 Democratic Primary."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Covering Commandment.

Freedom lost in '81

Alas, 1981 was not a good year for freedom in the world.

Each year Freedom House, a non-ideological organization headquartered in New York, undertakes an ambitious comparative survey of freedom in the world. The survey rates the status of political rights and civil liberties in 165 countries and 54 related territories on a scale of one (most free) to seven, and divides the countries into three categories: Free, Partly Free and Not Free. Any such system carries an element of subjectivity, of course, and Freedom

House is working, in many cases, with partial information. But the organization has consistently provided the most objective information available on the status of freedom. Its comprehensive survey includes supplementary information on economic freedom, though that information is not part of the basic assessment.

Freedom House had completed most of its survey before the imposition of martial law in Poland. As a consequence of that action, it was forced to move Poland (which had been the only communist country in the "partly free" category) over to the "not free" column. Before the Polish suppression, the survey had estimated that 2 billion people, or 44 percent of the world's population, lived in countries that were not free. With the addition of Poland's 36 million people, the percentage rose to 44.8.

Even before the crackdown in Poland, however, the percentage of the world's population living in relative freedom had dropped. Freedom House estimated that 1.63 billion people lived in 54 free nations and 27 related territories, or 35.1 percent of the world population. Some 916.5 million lived in 49 countries and 23 territories classified as partly free, amounting to 20.1 percent of the world's people. All told, about 325 million people around the world suffered a deterioration in human freedoms during 1981.

Besides the dramatic setback in Poland, the major shifts charted in 1981 were in South Africa, Iran and Guatemala, which were moved from the partly free to the not free category. All had been marginal in the past, but in all these countries the government became noticeably more repressive. In South Africa the black population has been increasingly concentrated into "homelands," with significant additional restriction on where individuals may choose to live. Iran, of course, has become increasingly tyrannical, with public executions and the complete silencing of anything resembling independent news media. The Guatemalan government has gone to extreme lengths to silence opposition forces.

Significant reductions in personal freedom were also reported in Chad, Djibouti, Egypt, Nicaragua, Libya, Sudan and Zimbabwe. The world had a few bright spots. Freedom House estimated that there were advances in freedom in Taiwan, Honduras, Ivory Coast, Tunisia and Mauritius.

While 1981 was a bleak year for freedom, Raymond D. Gastil, director of the survey, noted that the '70s were a decade of mixed signals and a few advances. Freedom House has been doing its comprehensive survey for 10 years, and in that time it estimates a slight net advance for freedom, even when the setbacks of 1981 are taken into account. "Most massive has been the turn of mainland China away from the anti-individualist totalitarianism of Mao," says Dr. Gastil. "This has not led immediately to freedom, but it has led to a widespread interest in freer institutions in China and to a worldwide disillusionment with the idyllic, antirepublican model that China had represented." China is still rated "not free," however.

The picture for the news media was even more depressing than for the public at large. According to Freedom House executive director Leonard R. Sussman, "News media were free in 24 percent of the countries, partly free in 20 percent and not free in 56 percent." At least 22 journalists were murdered in 1981 for the crime of being journalists. Fourteen other newsmen were assaulted, tortured or kidnapped by guerrillas or government forces. In Iran, India, Guatemala, Brazil and Argentina newspapers were bombed and newsmen harassed. Foreign correspondents were expelled from China, Egypt, El Salvador, Haiti, Iran, South Africa and Uganda.

This survey indicates that while this country is far from perfect, it is far superior to most of the world in leaving its citizens relatively free to pursue their own lives. The freedom that we have to criticize our government and our system, which we do with such relish, is a fragile and precious asset.

Those who value freedom, and who understand that freedom is something like love (in that it works best when it's shared with others) have their work cut out for them in this sad old world.

By ROBERT LEFEVRE
Insensibly, thanks to politics, the bulk of Americans have accepted one of the basic premises of Karl Marx. The premise is faulty and the price for accepting it is now being paid. The concept has been held for nearly half a century that if the government takes from the rich and gives to the poor everyone will be better off. This is the essential core of Marxism: "From each according to his ability, to each according to his need."

Currently, for example, the political cauldron is seething because of a few bleats from adversaries of the present administration that its economic left are aimed at what is called the "trickle-down" theory. Their objection is that whatever comes voluntarily from the rich is, in fact, no more than a trickle. The rich spend their time trying to block up the leaks so that nothing trickles. Then the rich can have it all to themselves, or so runs the argument.

Those who oppose "trickle-down" have universally favored governmental force used against the rich for the benefit of the poor. Since it is clear that Marx was in error in supposing that all human beings would love one another in a great society of equality (a point Marx, himself, finally admitted was in error), it seems only proper to those having internal hemophilia for them to rip off those who have and dole it out to those who haven't.

The difficulty is this: Those who have, in the form of wealth and money, are also the ones who have, in the form of ability. There are occasional exceptions, of course, but usually of brief duration.

A person having little or no ability who obtains wealth or money by luck, circumstance, gift or other non-productive effort, rarely keeps what he thus obtains. Those who excel in theft or who are smiled on by the gods of chance are rarely competent when it comes to production. There is small merit in weeping over this apparent injustice. Think of the benefits these lucky people provide when they throw around what dropped into their pockets by happenstance.

Enter the "trickle-down" theory again. The public believes that legalized thieves in government will provide a bigger "trickle" than those who function in the marketplace as producers of useful goods and services.

Reality bids us take a closer look. There are only four ways in which to acquire wealth or money. One must earn it, receive it as a gift, find it when it is unowned, or steal it. In any case, the holder of wealth or money is human. However he obtains it, he will act in such a way that it accrues to his interests, as he sees those interests.

Those who earn money or wealth by productive effort will most assuredly value what they receive at a higher level than all others. Why? Because it is human to value most highly those things which are hard to obtain. Earning takes effort and is difficult.

Those who obtain wealth or money as a gift will predictably try to encourage the giver to become more generous. But they will spend rapidly.

Those who are simply lucky, and thus find things, are so few in number as to deserve nothing but omission. Besides, they will spend more rapidly than all others.

The problem emerges with those who steal. It is predictable that such will always be interested in increasing the size and scope of the theft they practice. And if they are generous, such generosity is only possible when they have a confirmed and repeated ability to keep on stealing.

Thus, reality tells us that if obstacles are placed in the way of producers so that it becomes increasingly difficult to produce, less production will ensue. There will be less to trickle down. As for those who receive gifts and those who are fortunate, in terms of blind chance, they won't keep what they have long enough for a trickle to develop. They will splurge and be as poor tomorrow as they were yesterday. We need not concern ourselves with obstacles here. Reality itself is the principal obstacle.

We can also see that the greater the obstacles placed in the way of thieves, the more difficult it will be for thieves to practice any kind of trickle.

If this is not yet apparent in the political arena, take a good look. The political thief is now confronting the Marxian error. While it is true that nearly all of our major politicians are millionaires, either before they take office or shortly thereafter, I have yet to find one who proposes that his own holdings "trickle-down" to anyone. The political gambit it to tax, spend and spend, using money and wealth produced by others.

Reality bids us remember that one cannot take more water out of the bucket than the bucket contains. Taxes (legalized theft) cannot be increased when fewer and fewer goods and services are available. Less and less is in the bucket. Little will trickle from an empty pail.

The idea that producers will gladly produce an abundance for all, even if they are robbed, abused and obfuscated at every turn, is in error. It is not true. Producers must be rewarded. If not, production will decline, jobs will vanish and we will all be immeasurably poor together.

The politicians have lied. They have promised a paradise in which those who are infirm, aged, unskilled, young, incompetent and slothful, shall be rewarded with life support at the expense of the productive and that it can all be brought about by voting correctly. In the words of Mark Twain's "Connecticut Yankee," they are filled with "the juice of the prune."

The "plumb" of social equality of Marxian nurture is now showing its wrinkles. There will always be those who have more ability and those who have less. Everyone of us will benefit by virtue of "trickle-down" from those among us who have more ability than we do in any given area of production. The only real question relates to the source of the trickle. Should it come from production? Or, should it come through theft?

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Sunday, Jan. 24, the 24th day of 1982. There are 341 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Jan. 24, 1848, a gold nugget was found at the site of a sawmill near Coloma, Calif., touching off the California "Gold Rush."

On this date:
In 1798, the Irish Rebellion broke out.
In 1915, the German cruiser "Blucher" was sunk by the British fleet in the North Sea Battle of Dogger Bank during World War I.

In 1924, Petrograd was renamed Leningrad in honor of the Soviet Union's founder.
In 1965, former British Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill died in London at age 90.

Ten years ago, consumer advocate Ralph Nader filed suit against the Nixon administration, charging it raised price supports for milk in exchange for more than $300,000 in contributions to the Republican Party.

Five years ago, President Jimmy Carter rescinded predecessor Gerald Ford's order to end gasoline price controls.

One year ago, millions of Polish workers pressed their demand for a five-day work week by staging a one-day strike.

Today's birthdays: American diplomat Walter Stoesel Jr. is 62. Democratic Rep. Robert Kastenmeier is 58.

Question of Civil rights

There is a feeling by some people in the country that the present Justice Department is soft on civil rights, and is trying to turn back the clock on progress made in this field over the past 20 years.

This is not true. Just the other day a lawyer in the Justice Department went in to see his supervisor. "Sir, there seems to be a group of people in the South that is going to bring back slavery. I think we'd better get on it right away."

"What's the rush, Pettibone? There's no sense jumping into these things unless we know we're on solid legal ground. Now you say these people are going to bring back slavery. What side are you proposing the Justice Department take?"

"The anti-slavery side, sir. It's our duty to defend the Constitution which is the law of the land, and the Constitution says you can't have slaves."

"That's true, Pettibone, but there are other constitutional amendments which must be considered, such as states rights. Now don't get me wrong. I'm not for slavery. I abhor it and always have. But I cannot allow my personal feelings to get involved in a sensitive matter such as this. The legal question we must ask is, would slavery violate the civil rights of those who are being enslaved?"

"Of course it would. A slave doesn't have any rights."
"Is there anything in this Civil Rights Bill that specifically forbids someone from owning a slave?"

"No, because there was no question of slavery at the time it was passed."
"Well, perhaps this is not our case then. After all, we can't go prosecuting people willy-nilly if it is not concerned with our division. We are short on lawyers as it is, because we inherited all those bleeding heart civil rights cases from other administrations."
"But this is not just another civil rights case. This is the big enchilada. If we don't act immediately slavery could come back to the United States."

"I think you're overreacting, Pettibone. Every lawyer in Justice thinks his is the only case. But when you're sitting in this chair you have to be selective as to what cases the department should take and what ones we should ignore. The one thing this administration has pledged to do is not clog up the courts with a lot of petty matters that could be settled through reason."

"What do you suggest?"

"Why don't you draft a letter to the people who are going to bring back slavery and indicate we are taking an interest and we're willing to work out a settlement which would be satisfactory to both sides?"

"What kind of settlement did you have in mind?"

"We would require them to justify their reasons for needing slaves. If, for example, they could prove it would have a favorable economic impact on their community, then we might look the other way. But if they just want slaves to do their dirty work for them, then we might consider making a case against them."

"I can't write a letter like that. It's unconstitutional."
"Pettibone, I don't believe it's the Department of Justice's job to decide what is unconstitutional and what isn't."

"What is our job?"
"To see that the laws of the land are carried out as long as they don't offend the people who elected President Reagan. Can you imagine the political repercussions from the ultra-right wing if it got into the papers that we were thinking of suing people who wanted to bring back slavery?"
"If you don't do anything about this I'll go to the papers myself."

"All right, Pettibone, if you feel that strongly about it, get the evidence together."

"And the department will prosecute?"
"I didn't say we'd prosecute, but we might submit a brief as a 'friend of the court.'"

Public furor gripping Britain over the handling of rape cases

LONDON (AP) — Violent crimes such as rape are statistically rare in Britain, where most bobbies still patrol the streets unarmed. For every rape investigated in this country, three are reported in New York City.

Yet for the past three weeks, the news media, the courts and Parliament have riveted the public's attention on what Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher called the "violent, detestable and odious crime" of rape.

The government's solicitor-general for Scotland, Nicholas Fairbairn, resigned Thursday at Mrs. Thatcher's request. He told reporters why charges were dropped against three Glasgow teen-agers arrested in a rape case before he explained the matter to Parliament.

The victim of the rape, a 30-year-old woman, was slashed with a razor and required 168 stitches.

The case is at the center of the uproar because police reportedly had a confession, an eyewitness and technical evidence, but the prosecution dropped the charges because the victim was thought to be suicidal and unfit to take the witness stand.

Recently, lenient judges have been chastised publicly for their handling of rape cases.

Under the headline "Let's Castrate These Rapists," the 4-million-circulation tabloid Sun on Friday published an opinion poll which said 30 percent of women and 20 percent of men surveyed think rape offenders should be castrated.

Newspapers asked rape victims to write first-person accounts describing the attacks, and at the Rape Crisis Center in North London the number of calls from women reporting sexual assaults has doubled. Only a fourth of the callers say they will tell police.

The public outcry began with a rape trial at Ipswich Crown Court on Jan. 4 when Judge Bertrand Richards freed a confessed rapist after giving him a $3,800 fine. Richards ruled that the 17-year-old victim showed "contributory negligence" by hitching a ride home after a late-night dance.

"It was a bit of luck for me," 33-year-old defendant John William Allen, the father of two children, told reporters.

Nearly 50 outraged members of Parliament called on Lord Hailsham, England's Lord Chancellor, to ask Richards to resign.

Hailsham did not do so, but within days Lord Lane, the Lord Chief Justice, issued guidelines to judges saying that convicted rapists should always be jailed "other than in wholly extraordinary circumstances," which he did not define.

Home Secretary William Whitelaw pledged the government would act to make jail sentences compulsory for most convicted rapists, and Mrs. Thatcher welcomed the move.

Official Home Office statistics for 1980, the last year available, listed 1,225 rape cases investigated by police leading to 433 convictions. Despite the recent uproar over sentencing, almost all of those found guilty were jailed. In New York City last year, police investigated 3,325 rapes.

ROOSEVELT HOME FIRE. Fire heavily damaged the Franklin D. Roosevelt mansion in Hyde Park, N.Y., in the early morning hours Saturday. The roof, attic and third floor were extensively damaged. (AP Laserphoto)

FDR's mansion damaged by fire

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Fire badly damaged the gracious home of Franklin D. Roosevelt on Saturday, a week before the centennial of his birth, and restoration experts moved in to shore up walls and ceilings that threatened to collapse.

Dozens of National Park Service staff and volunteers plunged into the burning building to save paintings, furniture and other priceless artifacts in the lifelong home of the only U.S. president elected to four terms.

"We knew they were going to throw us out any minute. The fire was still going strong and the ceiling was about to collapse," said curator Emily Wright. "They told us not to go in there, but we had to." She said another rescuer moaned, "Oh my God, this would kill Sara Roosevelt if she could see this." The president's mother owned the 35-room house until her death in 1941.

Fire officials traced the blaze to outmoded electrical wiring in the third-floor nursery and attic, which electricians had been replacing on Friday. Ms. Wright described the wiring as "just ghastly."

Damage was worst in the central part of the home, built in 1826. The wings added in 1915, including the library and bedrooms of Roosevelt, his wife, Eleanor, and Sara Roosevelt, were largely spared.

The fire broke out shortly before midnight in the third floor. Most fire damage was confined to that floor, and the first and second floors were damaged by water.

About 250 firefighters from nearby communities, including many volunteers, fought the blaze. Firefighters were forced to chop through walls and ceilings to reach burning insulation, which continued to flare up long after the fire was brought under control about 4 a.m., Ms. Wright said.

Small holes were drilled into the floors to allow water to drain into the basement, where it was pumped out.

A team of National Park Service restoration experts arrived shortly before noon to brace walls and ceilings and to secure the house so repairs could begin.

The house is expected to be fully restored, Ms. Wright said. "These experts can work miracles," she said, "and this will take a miracle."

Roosevelt was born in the house in 1882 and lived there when he wasn't in Washington or Albany.

Workers to vote on Phillips contract

BORGER, Texas (AP) — Union members at the Borger Copolymer Plant will vote Tuesday on a tentative contract agreement with Phillips Petroleum Co.

The 350 local members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union reached the tentative settlement Friday. Phillips officials said their offer is final and is basically the same as that offered to all of the company's OCAW employees.

Jimmy Savage, chairman of the union local, said the two-year contract would grant a 9 percent pay raise the first year and a 7.5 percent raise the second year, with boosts in medical, insurance and pension benefits.

"I will neither recommend nor reject the contract to local members," Savage added.

The employees have worked without a contract since Jan. 7.

Students face charges

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — At least one of six Texas Christian University students suspected of planting a homemade bomb at a campus fraternity house will be charged, police say.

The six turned themselves in Friday afternoon after a tip led investigators to the suspects, said arson squad Capt. W.E. Dunkin.

Second-degree felony charges for possessing, transporting and placing a prohibited weapon will be filed this week against some or all six of the students, Dunkin said.

If convicted, the students could receive maximum penalties of 20 years in prison and $10,000 fines.

"They think it was a prank, but you can see by the penalty that it's not a prank," Dunkin said Friday. "We certainly don't consider it a prank."

Fire department investigator H.B. Owens said the prime suspect was a student who had been expelled from the fraternity earlier this school year.

A TCU senior told authorities he saw a man light the paper fuse to the homemade pipe bomb on the porch of the Phi Delta Theta house shortly after midnight Thursday.

Agriculture, Government and You

AUSTIN — Our good friend Congressman Kent Hance looked into the future of agriculture the other day in Hereford and he didn't like what he saw. Neither do we.

Kent saw low grain and cotton prices, overproduction and little government help. The best farmers are losing money right along with the not-so-good ones.

Some sort of set-aside program, he said, is essential to preserve our means of agricultural production. We don't know if this is the best solution, but the federal government needs to do something. Kent's best guess, though, was that the Reagan administration would not do anything.

"We hoped the Reagan administration would be better (than Carter), and they've been just as bad or worse," Kent said.

While we all would agree the current farm bill is a disaster, that is not the point of this column. The federal farm bill does not have much to do with the state legislature.

The point is the kind of people we elect to public office, or let other people elect for us. The small amount of tax money appropriated for farming in the federal farm bill reflects the amount of involvement in the political process that Congress perceives by farmers and ranchers. In other words, the squeaky wheel gets the grease, and agriculture doesn't squeak.

Nothing could be more important in times like these than knowing who is running for office, what they stand for and what they plan to do for agriculture. This is particularly true at the federal level, where agricultural policy, foreign trade policy and subsidy policy are decided.

We have a good friend in Kent Hance, but we must be aware of every candidate. Once a candidate is elected, we must follow his record closely and see if he is friend or foe to agriculture. In agriculture, nearly every elected official either is part of the solution or part of the problem.

At the state level, we have begun the first major interim study of agriculture that the state has undertaken in years. We hope this study will point out new areas for legislation to help agriculture at the state level.

Remember, our $9.8 billion a year Texas agriculture industry has been neglected for too long. You must become involved in the political process if you expect any help from the government. A good place to start would be to write us and tell us what we should do in the Texas legislature. Write to Senator Bill Sarpalius, P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711.

KEEPING UP WITH THE SNOW. Bruce Blocker of rural Ely, Minn., cleared his drive with a snowblower Saturday morning after a statewide blizzard left it's mark on Minnesota with more snow promised in some areas.

Three men convicted of charges in slavery trial

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In a judgment prosecutors hope will lead to more humane treatment of migrant labor, two men have been convicted of conspiring to enslave several workers, one of whom died as a result.

Dennis Warren and John Lester Harris also were convicted of aiding and abetting the holding of workers Craig Conners and Harvey Rutherford as slaves, but they were found innocent of enslaving laborer Alvin Rhodes.

In addition, Harris was convicted of kidnapping Joseph Simes from a Raleigh street and taking him to the labor camp to be held as a slave.

"It was evident from the start that they (the defendants) were using intimidation to reach their goal — intimidation and violent actions," said a member of the U.S. District court jury, who asked to remain anonymous. "When you subjugate somebody's will with threats or actions to make them afraid to leave, in essence I guess that does constitute slavery, whether you hold them physically or psychologically."

Defense attorney James Fullwood refused to comment on the case. He noted that the men still must be sentenced.

THE FIRST TEXAS IRA

Now you can beat the 80's while building for your future.

Now First Texas is offering an important new retirement plan for all working people: The First Texas IRA.*

A tax break now. A big bundle for the future.

With a First Texas Individual Retirement Account, you can deposit up to $2,000 a year into an 18-month certificate, $2,250 if your spouse doesn't work, or $4,000 if you're married and you both work. That money comes straight off your 1982 taxable income, helping you now. And because the interest you earn with a First Texas IRA is tax deferred, you'll accumulate more money for your retirement than you ever imagined. Check the chart to see how bright your future can be with a First Texas IRA.

IF YOU SAVE THIS MUCH EACH MONTH:	You'll Have This Much Saved At 65*
	25	30	35	40	45	50
$50	$594,121	$324,763	$176,496	$94,882	$49,957	$25,229
$100	1,188,242	649,527	352,991	189,764	99,915	50,458
$167	1,984,364	1,084,710	589,496	316,905	166,858	84,264
$333	3,968,728	2,169,420	1,178,992	633,810	333,716	168,528

*If you deposit the above monthly amounts into an IRA, Keogh, or Simplified Employee Retirement Plan, you will have accumulated the amount listed above at age 65, assuming a 12% interest factor. (The interest rate could be higher or lower depending on market conditions.)

Chart illustrates the accumulated savings for an individual, $167 per month or the maximum yearly contribution of $2,000. Employed married couples may deposit $333 per month or $4,000 per year. There are tax and interest penalties for early withdrawal.

protection is separate from any other insured First Texas account.

A special bonus: FREE CHECKING.

At First Texas, we think it's important that you start building your future today. So, to get you moving, we're offering three months' free checking to new customers that open an IRA. So come by the First Texas office nearest you today and open your IRA. After all, your future starts in the 80's.

*Starting January 1, 1982. If you are making a contribution for your 1981 tax year, your individual limit is $1,500. If you are making a contribution for your 1982 tax year, your individual limit is $2,000.

HOW TO WIN AT THE LOSING GAME

DIET CENTER®

When you decide to lose weight, COMPARE!

There are hundreds of fad diets, formal weight-loss programs and so-called miracle cures for the problem of excess weight. The problem with most of them is that they concentrate solely upon losing weight. If you rely upon prepackaged foods, shots, drugs or a severely reduced food intake to lose weight, what will you do once that weight is lost? The vast majority of people revert to the old eating habits that caused the problem in the first place, and excess weight soon returns. Not so at Diet Center!

OUR PROGRAM WORKS AND IT'S TOTALLY NATURAL

At Diet Center, weight is lost quickly and safely, but what's even more important, dieters are taught how to maintain ideal weight for a lifetime. Through private, daily counseling sessions and weekly classes in nutrition and behavior modification, Diet Center will teach you how satisfying a nutritionally balanced diet can be.

LOSE 17 TO 25 POUNDS IN JUST 6 WEEKS!

And, if necessary, that rate of reduction can be sustained until you have lost 50, 75 or even 100 pounds and more... without hunger, nervousness or loss of energy.

AND WE'LL TEACH YOU HOW TO KEEP IT OFF!

Overhaul of royalty system announced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, working to get government off the backs of business, has found one area where it feels the bureaucrats haven't been doing enough — the nation's oil royalty program.

Interior Secretary James Watt announced Thursday a major overhaul to correct what he called "20 years of mismanagement" in collecting royalty money due the government.

Watt said he will try to implement 60 different actions aimed at tightening inspections, audits and collection procedures for the 17,000 oil and gas leases held on federal and Indian lands in 27 states and off the U.S. coast.

The recommendations came from a special commission which conducted a six-month study and concluded that the current collection system is a "failure" that costs the government up to half a billion dollars a year in lost payments.

In agriculture

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent

CRUCIAL DECISIONS FACE AREA FARMERS:

Changes in agriculture present threats for some farmers and opportunities for others during 1982, economists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service warn. In either case, they caution, these changes will affect how farmers fare not only in 1982 but in years to come.

Suggestions for ways to make the most of these changes will be presented during a special one-day program at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 27, at the Texas A & M University Agricultural Research and Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd., West, Amarillo.

The program, "Profitable Decision Making in 1982," is especially tailored to the needs of Gray County producers.

A panel of Extension educators will spend the day addressing real-world problems of farming and ranching. They will cover farm policy, production and financial decisions, and marketing alternatives.

The Amarillo meeting will focus upon conditions and alternatives in wheat, corn and grain sorghum. It is one of eight such meetings being conducted across the state by the Extension Program.

Policy and marketing trends will be examined by Dr. Ron Knutson, economist and policy and marketing specialist, and Dr. Roald Smith, economist and marketing specialist. Knutson will discuss implications of the 1981 farm bill. Smith will discuss marketing outlooks for wheat, corn and grain sorghum.

The relationship of production and financial decisions will be covered by Dr. Wayne Hayenga, farm management economist. He will offer some suggestions ways to stretch credit, evaluating risk position, trade-offs between income and survival, crop insurance, spending money to make money, selecting the best crop from the standpoint of profit and risk, and the implications of such choices for the farmer, the landlord and the banker.

During the afternoon, Knutson will compare marketing options for risk and returns, evaluate marketing methods for 1982 and the future, and offer suggestions for developing a marketing plan.

Smith then will provide a detailed look at selection of selling prices, pricing versus delivery, and evaluating storage for three principal crops in the Panhandle: wheat, grain sorghum and corn.

Farmers and ranchers in the Panhandle have demonstrated their ability to produce. Their ability to survive in today's economy will depend upon their success in management and marketing.

This conference is designed to help our producers in these critical areas of management and marketing.

NEW AG YEARBOOK AVAILABLE:

The 1981 Yearbook of Agriculture published annually by the U.S. Department of Agriculture is off the press.

Titled "Will There Be Enough Food?" the yearbook addresses the concern of feeding a hungry world and the importance of safeguarding this nation's soil and water and other natural resources.

The 1981 yearbook shows how U.S. food production, besides filling our needs for good food, lines the pockets of countless U.S. citizens by providing more paychecks than any other industry, and how U.S. food helps ease hunger around the world.

Featured in the 344-page yearbook is a 32-page color section and more than 100 black and white photos.

"Will There Be Enough Food?" is the 82nd volume to carry the title, Yearbook of Agriculture.

Anyone interested in obtaining a copy of the yearbook may request one from their congressional representative or senator. The yearbook may also be ordered for $7 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

CARE OF HOUSEPLANTS:

Improper watering techniques are often the biggest problem factor in home plant failures.

Overwatering during periods of low growth creates a major problem.

This is especially true during winter months when plant growth is slow due to low light intensities. If the soil is kept saturated constantly, oxygen is unable to reach the plant. This results in loss of the small feeder roots and eventually death of the plant.

Do you have a television in your bedroom?

Or enjoy reading in bed?

Bedroom readers and TV watchers now have just the thing to make their lives more enjoyable. Sit up and watch your favorite program. You're in bed when the show's over! Steps underway to save farmers

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration farm officials say they are taking new steps to help save deserving farmers from financial ruin, including the enlistment of private banks to help coordinate the program.

The plan was described Thursday by Agriculture Secretary John R. Block who asked bankers to work more closely with the Farmers Home Administration, which makes loans to farmers who cannot qualify elsewhere.

Block said he thinks the situation may improve shortly, but admitted he had no specific evidence to back up his prediction.

For its part, FmHA — as the Agriculture Department agency is known — is taking as much leeway as it can to keep deserving farmers in business and, except in the most extreme cases, avoid foreclosures on loans, Block said.

"All of us agree that we're going to cooperate and work together to carry agriculture through these days," Block said at a news conference after meeting with the bankers.

Department economists say net farm income may decline again in 1982, the third successive year of depressed earnings. Rising costs, high interest rates, weak prices for some commodities and other factors have taken a severe toll.

Block, however, said the agricultural sector is basically in good shape and that he was optimistic for improvement.

"I think the situation has already started to turn around," Block said. "But I cannot predict precisely... when everything will get rosy again."

He was asked if there is a farm depression.

"No, I wouldn't call it a farm depression condition, although I would say that definitely we're living in stressful times in agriculture," Block said.

"I can't predict what turn of events is going to increase prices and, indeed, it may not happen," he said. "But traditionally our forecasters are lousy forecasters, and things change." Meanwhile, Block said FmHA field offices have been issued guidelines and told to confer with borrowers on problems they are encountering in making payments.

"We intend to be reasonable. Our objective is to keep the farmers in business," Block said. "That isn't to say there won't be some go out, because there will."

Bankers attending the news conference included: Alan R. Tubbs, DeWitt, Iowa, representing the American Bankers Association; Thomas H. Olson, Lisco, Neb., representing the Farm Credit Administration, Independent Bankers Association; and Donald E. Wilkinson, governor of the cooperatively owned Farm Credit System.

4-H WOOD SCIENCE MEMBERS

STRESS TOOL SAFETY:

Woodworking can be an interesting and challenging project for young people, but it's one that also demands safe practices.

Through the 4-H wood science program, 4-H members can learn to create decorative and useful items, such as easy-to-do puzzles, games and complicated furniture. They also learn to remodel rooms and assist in constructing buildings.

But, whether you're nine or 90, safe use of woodworking power tools is important. Boys and girls in the wood science program recommend the following safety tips when working with power tools:

— Always wear tight-fitting, comfortable clothes. Loose or dangling clothing or long hair may get caught in machines. Wear safety goggles to protect eyes from sawdust or wood chips.

— Don't operate power machines when you're tired or emotionally upset.

— Keep proper guard and protective shields on all machines, and always make sure equipment is in good working condition and receives regular maintenance care.

— Stop the machine when the job is completed or when an adjustment needs to be made.

— Do not force a tool or machine — it's designed to work at a certain speed depending on the material and type of cut being made.

— Be sure the machine is properly grounded or constructed to prevent electrical shock.

— When operating a tool, give your undivided attention to the task at hand.

Remember these safety tips and enjoy your woodworking projects.

Fitness First!

By Tim McGaughy
Pampa Youth Director
Aerobic Exercise

The word "aerobic" is a combination of two Greek words meaning "in the presence of oxygen." When Dr. Kenneth Cooper began a research for the Air Force to find a method for fitness testing, he discovered the relationship between oxygen consumption, and fitness and endurance. Aerobic exercise forces the heart to beat faster to increase the supply of oxygen to the muscles for an extended period of time.

Also during the research, it was discovered that a certain amount and type of exercise was a measurable way to determine fitness. Three factors will ensure that the exercise will improve aerobic capacity: the type of exercise, sufficient duration and frequency. The exercise must involve as much of the body as possible (eg. running, swimming, walker, jumping rope, stationary bike riding). It should be done for a minimum of twelve minutes, three times per week on alternating days. The participant must reach and maintain 70 percent of his maximum heart rate during the exercise. Seventy percent of 220 minus your age equals approximately 70 percent of your maximum heart rate.

Tennis Deadline

The deadline for the Tennis League was Jan. 23, but there are still a few openings. Call the Youth Center today if you would like to get in. The divisions include singles, doubles, mixed doubles and team tennis.

Calling All Runners

The Thousand Mile Runner's Club has opened for those interested. Included in the five dollar entry fee is a t-shirt and engraving upon completion of the thousand miles. Take as long as you need to finish, but set a goal.

Daily Fees Axed

Beginning tomorrow, Jan. 25, there will be no more daily fees to the Fitness Center. The overcrowding of the racquetball courts and weight room is forcing us to eliminate this fee until May 1. Only out of town guest fees will remain in effect. No student daily fees will be allowed so that we can better serve our members.

Questions

If you have any questions about the Pampa Youth and Community Center, call 665-0748 or come by 1005 W. Harvester.

Coaching prospects to receive applications

The search and screening committee, appointed to find a new Pampa High football coach, is expected to mail applications this week to persons interested in the job. Superintendent of Schools Bob Phillips said Friday.

"The committee hasn't yet set guidelines or due dates on the resumes," Phillips said.

Committee members include Dr. Robert Lyle, Darville Orr and Buddy Epperson. All are on the Pampa Independent School Board of Trustees.

Pampa High School Athletic Director Loyd Waters will be receiving the resumes, Phillips said.

Harvester head coach Larry Gilbert did not have his contract renewed during the school board's executive session two weeks ago. Gilbert was head coach of the Harvesters the past two seasons.

Sherrill picks top aides

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — If success breeds success, the Texas Aggies ought to be contending for a Top 20 finish in college football next year.

New A&M coach Jackie Sherrill announced the names of eight of his assistant coaches Friday, and six of them are from colleges that finished in the final Top 20 football poll.

"The only position still open is that of offensive line coach," said Sherrill, who left the University of Pittsburgh on Tuesday to become Aggie football coach and athletic director. In five years with the Panthers, Sherrill's teams won 50 games, lost nine and tied one.

Sherrill said Curley Hallman will come to A&M from national champion Clemson to coach the defensive secondary.

Two assistants from Sherrill's Pittsburgh staff will join him at A&M, he said — tight end coach George Pugh and defensive line coach Bob Matey. The Panthers finished No. 4 in the final Top 20.

Sherrill hired Jim Helms to coach the running backs. Helms was at No. 5 Southern Methodist.

In addition, Sherrill said, Jerry Pettibone will leave No. 11 Nebraska to coach the Aggie receivers and R.C. Slocum is departing No. 14 Southern Cal to be Sherrill's defensive coordinator and linebacker coach.

Others joining Sherrill's staff will be defensive end coach Bobby Roper from Oregon State and quarterback coach Greg Davis, a holdover from the A&M staff.

Sherrill also said Aggie assistants Paul Register and Dan LaGrasta will remain at A&M through recruiting before a final decision is made.

Second-quarter drought dooms Lady Harvesters

AMARILLO—Caprock took advantage of Pampa's low-scoring second quarter to defeat the Lady Harvesters, 43-34, Friday night in District 3-5A girls' action.

Pampa trailed by only one, 10-9, at the end of the first quarter, but scored only two points in the second quarter to fall behind by 11 at halftime.

"We got within one that third quarter, but we lost the momentum and Caprock picked it up," Pampa coach Jerry Johnson said. "What really hurt was the foul line. We hit only six of 23 shots."

Pampa outscored Caprock the second half, but the damage had already been done.

Lora Baca and Kim Strueber paced Caprock with nine and seven points respectively.

Keva Richardson, a 5-11 junior, was Pampa's top scorer with nine points and also pulled down 11 rebounds.

Fourth-quarter explosion lifts Harvesters past Caprock, 77-54

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Writer
Coyle Winborn and Charles Nelson sparked a fourth-quarter explosion to carry Pampa past Caprock, 77-54, Friday night in a District 3-5A opener at Harvester Fieldhouse.

Pampa lifted its overall record to 19-3, including 11 consecutive victories. Caprock didn't play like a 4-13 club...at least not until the fourth quarter. For three quarters Pampa couldn't get its free-wheeling offense working against a determined Caprock.

The Harvesters led by nine (37-28) at halftime, but canned only five of 15 floor shots the third quarter to allow Caprock to cut the margin to six, 48-42.

Pampa took control in the fourth quarter with its fullcourt press, forcing 11 Caprock turnovers. "It was one of those games that just drug on and on, but we picked it up in the last seven minutes," Pampa coach Garland Nichols said. "I think the kids just overlooked Caprock and were looking ahead toward Tascosa."

Winborn, a 6-5 1/2 sophomore, scored 12 of his team-high 18 points in the final period. Nelson, a 6-4 senior, added eight of his 12 total points.

Pampa outscored Caprock, 10-2, in the first three minutes of the fourth quarter. Winborn's three-point play with 3:25 to go gave the Harvesters a 20-point bulge, 68-48. It was Winborn's best scoring output of the season. He hit six of nine shots from the floor and was a perfect six of six from the foul line.

"It was Coyle's best game of the year," Nichols said. "He's a young player and we've been bringing him along slowly. He's ready to go now. He knows what he has to do now and he does a good job of it."

Pampa shot 53.4 percent (31-58) from the floor, compared to 43.6 percent (24-55) for Caprock. Pampa also shot well from the foul line, connecting on 15 of 18 tries for 83.3 percent. Caprock hit only six of 11 attempts for 54.5 percent.

The Harvesters had trouble keeping Caprock off the boards and had only one more rebound, 26-25, than the Longhorns. Faggins pulled down six rebounds while Charles Nelson and Mike Nelson had five and four respectively.

It was the mistakes (28 turnovers) that finally killed Caprock. Pampa had 17 miscues.

Mike Nelson and Terry Faggins contributed 13 and 12 points respectively to Pampa's scoring attack. Meryl Dowdy followed with nine, Phil Jeffrey, six, Jimmy Barker, five, and Danny Guerra, two.

Troy Fry, a 6-5 sophomore, led the Longhorns with 21 points. Todd Hunkapillar added 10.

"The kids performed well when they had to, and that's what counts," Nichols added.

Pampa also whipped Caprock, 73-66, in the junior varsity contest. Marty Cross tossed in 21 points for the Shockers.

Pampa hosts Tascosa at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday night in another district encounter. Tascosa is expected to be Pampa's toughest challenger for the district title.

"We started preparing for Tascosa Saturday morning," Nichols said. "We feel like their strength is their rebounding and inside game."

Coaches look for offensive explosion

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — On the eve of Super Bowl XVI, coaches Bill Walsh of the San Francisco 49ers and Forrest Gregg of the Cincinnati Bengals have found at least one thing on which they can agree.

Both figure it will take four touchdowns to win today's big game.

"I don't think 21 points will be enough to win," Gregg said. "I think it will take 28 or more points."

Walsh wasn't quarreling with that assessment. He had predicted that four TDs would be required to win the National Football Conference championship game against Dallas, and the final score was 28-27. He sees the same kind of wide-open contest for the Super Bowl.

"I expect one or the other to score four touchdowns," Walsh said. "It won't be a bitter defensive struggle with Ken Anderson and Joe Montana on the field."

Cincinnati's Anderson and

San Francisco's Montana, who led their conferences in passing during the regular season, will oppose each other in the Pro Bowl next week.

"I suspect both of us will be going for the big play," Walsh continued. "We will go with our usual style and I think the Bengals will do the same. As long as the issue is in doubt, I expect a wide-open game."

Walsh got some good news at the 49er workout Friday when wide receiver Freddie Solomon was able to practice. Solomon had left the field with a sprained left knee Thursday after colliding with cornerback Ronnie Lott during a passing drill.

"Freddie was running a Cincinnati pass pattern against our defense," Walsh said. "They collided and both went down. Freddie didn't get up. He twisted his knee as he fell. It was a routine play, something that's done nonchalantly."

After he was hurt, Solomon had been designated as "questionable" for the game. In the NFL injury lexicon, a player listed as "questionable" has only a 50-50 chance of playing.

Dr. Fred Behling examined Solomon's knee before the workout and said it was sore but that there was no evidence of any swelling. After he practiced, the 49ers upgraded the receiver's status to "probable," which means his availability for Sunday is 75-25.

Solomon's injury has not changed Cincinnati's preparations for the 49ers.

"Solomon didn't play against us the first time and they beat us 21-3," said Gregg. "He's a good football player, but I don't know how much of a difference his absence would make if he doesn't play. During the regular season, when a player is listed as questionable, he usually plays 90 percent of the time."

And that was before the 49ers upgraded Solomon's status to probable.

Meanwhile, visitors continued pouring into the Detroit metropolitan area for the first Super Bowl ever held in a northern city. Hotel space was at a premium and the party atmosphere so prevalent at every Super Bowl was taking hold.

The NFL's annual pre-game bash for 3,000 friends of football was held Friday night with the theme of "America on Wheels," saluting the auto industry.

TCU nips Mustangs

DALLAS (AP) — Junior guard Darrell Browder scored two baskets and two free throws in the final four minutes Saturday to lift Texas Christian to a 63-61 Southwest Conference basketball win over Southern Methodist.

TCU evened its SWC ledger at 3-3 while the Mustangs dropped into the cellar with a 1-5 mark. TCU is 8-8 for the year. SMU is 6-10.

The Mustangs jumped to a 30-26 halftime lead behind guard Dave Piehler, who scored all 10 of his points in the first 20 minutes.

Browder and junior guard Jeff Baker took control for TCU in the second half. Browder finished with 19 points and Baker scored eight of his 10 points in the second half.

The Horned Frogs, trailing most of the second period, caught the Mustangs with 5:37 to go on a Baker field goal. TCU then went into a four-corner delay offense and Browder scored two quick buckets.

Freshman Larry Davis had a game-high 20 points for the Mustangs but he went the final 7:49 without a field goal.

High-scoring Doug Arnold of TCU was plagued with foul trouble and managed only 12 points.

Delayed stress torments veterans of Vietnam war

A last moment for friends

Psychologist describes the war, the stress

Dr. Reagan Andrews, a psychologist at the VA Medical Center in Dallas, has worked with about 200 Vietnam veterans over the past seven years. His major role has been as a psychologist for psychiatric inpatient services. He received his Ph.D. in clinical psychology in 1975 from the University of Texas Health Science Center. Before that, he worked in corporate and industrial public relations for five years. He holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in journalism and a Master of Arts degree in psychology from Southern Methodist University.

He is now beginning research to update psychological testing and what responses may suggest the presence of Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder and is studying the incarcerated Vietnam veteran to see if this disorder played a role, resulting in this consequence.

Interviewer: I'm looking for some reason why we are seeing this phenomenon of delayed stress syndrome now. Why now that we're seeing this? Is this something new? Why?

Dr. Andrews: "Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder" is a new name for an old disorder. It's been called a number of things in the past. It's been called "shell shock." It's been called "battle fatigue." I have a journal article from shortly after the Civil War, in which it was called "irritable heart syndrome." There are historical references to this throughout history and literature. So first of all, this is not something new.

What tends to happen is that because it is a pretty specific disorder, in terms of what we see at the VA, that we tend to forget about it after every war, and that's our fault. That's not the individual's fault because we deal with other things. You have to realize that the science of psychology and psychiatry, in terms of being true scientific pursuits, are relatively new. So that we're caught up in a number of areas.

First of all, we're caught up in a constant drag and pull of theoretical nomenclature (names) which changes as theoretical orientations change. We're caught up in the problem of appropriate correct identification of difficulties. We're caught up in the problem of dealing with a disorder, which by and large, shares a number of characteristics with other disorders.

A large number of these men shortly after Vietnam and the years after that were sort of systematically misdiagnosed. A large number of them were diagnosed as chronic character disorders. A large number of them were diagnosed, when they presented themselves to the VA, the community mental health center and settings like that, as having schizophrenia or paranoid schizophrenia, which is a very, very common diagnosis because of the rage and the ability to give the impression not only that they were not in control of themselves but that their appreciation of reality was impaired.

So we've been seeing the men all along, and we've been treating them all along, but we've been calling them the wrong thing, and we may have been treating them inappropriately in some instances. Maybe not in others. This is still a matter of question.

Now the degree and texture that we're seeing may be a function of the age of the men, the type of war, the difficulty of the Occidental (Western) mind trying to deal with the Oriental culture. That certainly is all mixed up.

As to why we're seeing it now, 10 to 12 to 13 to 15 years down the road, part of the reason has been that the men themselves have been unwilling to really talk about the disturbance. They tried to hide it. Vietnam was not a particularly popular subject after '71 or '72. If you wanted to start a good argument at a party, you could take one side or the other, either pro or anti, and you would be guaranteed that there would be somebody there to argue with you about it, and it would probably get somewhat unpleasant. So a lot of it has to do with the ZeitGeist (the general intellectual, moral, cultural state of an era). A lot of it has to do with reordering how we look at emotional disorders and recognizing that this is different. This is not what we thought it was. Then going back and looking at history and looking at the past, and saying, "Hey, we saw this before. We saw it as different before and this is what we saw it before." There are a number of contributions to the delay. I think now if the Army were to publish a paper on it, I think now they would admit they made some large-scale blunders.

What we really did was we traded an immediate combat fatigue, which we saw in World War II, at a percentage of 20 to 30 percent of combat casualties, which were actually emotional casualties, to the point that we were talking about less than five percent of the combat theater were psychiatric casualties in Vietnam. What we really did was we traded one type (of emotional disorder) for another, although we didn't know that at the time.

In trying to reduce those numbers (of psychiatric casualties), we just made some really hideous mistakes, which are now recognized. The Army has gone back and looked at this and said, "Hey, we're not going to do that anymore."

WORLD WAR II

World War II. What we did was we had a man either enlist or volunteer for service or he was drafted. He was sent off and assigned to a basic training company. The basic training company was formed from the people who came in on the same day or the same two days. They stayed together in basic training. They went into advanced training together, if they were going to do that. Some individuals went on to other areas of training and there were replacements, but the bulk of them went into their advanced training together. They were assigned overseas as a unit, they went into combat as a unit, and the survivors came back as a unit. So that the individual had a chance to establish the esprit de corps (pride) and a unit identity. You'll still see 20 years, 30 years, 40 years later, groups of these various units get together for reunions. That's one of the indications of the tremendous esprit de corps this type of system built. You saw it after World War I, too.

VIETNAM WAR

In Vietnam, we operated differently. In Vietnam, a man went into basic training, unless it was very, very early in the Vietnam conflict, say '64 or '65 when we moved in divisions, regiments of unit strength, in groups. But he went into basic training, he went into advanced individual training, he may have gone to jump school or some other school after that, then he was assigned to Vietnam. He might be assigned to "in country." "In country" was kind of a cute way of saying everything was either "in country" or "out of country." If you're in Vietnam, you're "in country." If you're out of Vietnam, you're somewhere else, like in the world. But then he would be assigned to an existing field unit, so he would be a new guy in the squad. He'd be a green guy. There's a slang term for that. So he's by himself. He's not with his buddies. He's not with the guys he went through training with. He's probably 18 or 19 years old. He's in this situation where he doesn't know what's happening, doesn't know anybody around him, and he's at the mercy of these people to keep him alive. He's very frightened of what's going to happen to him, but he knows that he's going to be there for a year. It's a standard 12-month tour for the Army. It was 13 months for the Marines. He knows he has that much time "in country."

GAME OF SURVIVAL

More than ten years after serving a tour of duty in Vietnam, two Pampa residents are struggling to regain touch with their feelings and touch with their lives.

The veterans, who asked to remain anonymous, both have left their wives and families within the past two years, suffering from what they say are the effects of "delayed stress syndrome," or Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder, an emotional disorder only recently acknowledged as the root of many problems for unsettled, tormented Vietnam veterans.

The first veteran, whom we will call Joe, served from January 1968 through January 1969. He was 20 when he was about to be drafted and didn't want to serve in the infantry, so he enlisted. He eventually became a military adviser to Vietnamese troops, separate from other Americans.

The second veteran, whom we will call Gerald, served in the Fourth Infantry Division, August 1969 to December 1970. He, too, was 20 when he was drafted.

"I had a duty to do. I got drafted, went into the service. I knew when I went I was going to Vietnam. There wasn't no doubt in my mind. I said, 'Well, I'm going if that's what they say.' And when I got over there, all there was to do then was just try to survive. As far as what the purpose was, I don't have any idea," Gerald said.

"You know, it would have been a little bit different, and I think it would be different today, if there had been a purpose — for freedom or say that somebody was fixing to take over our country," he said.

"In fact, one of the things they did to us when I got there, was I went to a meeting to assign us our companies. This guy was up there telling us all this stuff, and another guy went up there, and that guy said, 'China has just invaded the United States, everybody meet in the building across the street.' And you have never in your life seen a bunch of guys move like they moved," Gerald said.

Joe said, "The people over there weren't supportive of it, anymore than they were over here."

"This all came down on me in the last year or so. One of my buddies said, 'Danny, you're having trouble with that, aren't you?' He seen something on it on TV. I said, 'No, it's not bothering me.' Six months later, I was in the hospital in Dallas," Gerald said.

Joe didn't discover that the war was his problem till he had left his wife and family for the third time.

"I always felt (when he would leave) that everything was closing in on me. A little stress is what pushes this thing over the edge. There'd always be something else going on, you know. I didn't know why I'd do it, but I'd always get out and start drinking and fighting," Joe said.

"Every time I came back to my senses, I always wanted to come back because my wife never did anything — I always did. I didn't understand why I wanted to do that. What really brought me around to this (Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder) causing it was that poem. I looked at that and I cried when I read it. And I cried every time I looked at it for two days. I couldn't even read it any more. It just hit home," Joe said.

"I got real suicidal. I had already planned my funeral, got all my insurance policies paid up. Just one policy I didn't have paid up to where if they proved I had killed myself they wouldn't pay off. I had to wait three weeks for it, and I felt good about it — I was ready," Joe said.

"One thing you'll find out about Vietnam veterans — death doesn't mean anything to them. They're not afraid to die," he said.

He said he had sought psychiatric treatment during separations but each time the psychiatrist would bring him back to the family or marital situation.

"Nobody wanted to talk about Vietnam. If I brought up Vietnam, they'd say, 'Let's talk about what's going on right now. Let's deal with the family situation.' Well, that's what was causing the family situation. I didn't know it, but neither had I thought about it an awful lot," Joe said.

Once he reached the United States after his military service was over, Joe could not recall any of his last four months in Vietnam.

Recently, Joe recalled the events of those four months. During that time, he accidentally shot his best friend, an American. He said he came into the compound, threw his rifle on the bunk, it misfired, shooting his best friend through the head at the base of the skull.

His trusted Vietnamese friend, whom he accompanied on night patrol, stepped on a land mine.

"It tore his arm and leg off and he asked me to kill him, and I did," Joe recalls.

During this time, the Vietnamese troop surrounded a village, containing 43 children who were killed.

"I didn't know the children were in there, but one of the Vietnamese did. He knew it," Joe said.

Another trusted Vietnamese, whom Joe was training for a search and destroy mission, fell in a hole "and got blown to bits. The biggest bit was his boot with a foot in it."

After two weeks in the Dallas VA hospital, three weeks at Oklahoma City, and numerous trips back to Dallas, Joe feels he is on the way to recovery.

"You know, it's really time that I put it past me. I don't really know how to do that. I went around putting on a big front, trying to be happy or trying to think that you're happy, and all the time on the inside you're about to explode. It's just like we just cut our feelings off. We were all real sensitive before this happened, and then we just shut it off, and now we're having to work to regain it. We want to be that way again," Joe said.

Gerald said, "I put a front up for 11 years because I really didn't want to let people know how that war had changed me. I kept this thing up. I know that's what I did, till I just couldn't hold it up any more."

"Let me just give you one little example," Gerald said, "satisfaction. I can't be satisfied with anything. I bet you in the last year I have traded pickups six times. Each time I have got a good pickup. It cost me money every time, but there's just something about it. I just can't stand not to have that different pickup."

Joe said, "If something happens, I call Gerald. If I can't get a hold of him, I have an anxiety attack is what happens."

"We hardly ever finish anything. Nothing retains my interest very long. Money don't have any relevance to us. Because once you see those people die, now that's got relevance. Death may not mean much to us, but we've seen enough of it that that was really relevant to us. And money and material things... just don't," Joe said.

"We get to where we're afraid to let anybody get close to us, and we know we're afraid to let them get close to us, and we could let them get close to us, if we wanted to, but we still have that fear, and it's hard to fight it. So we abuse them, more or less, really. We really abuse people if we're not careful. I think I could do better at it than I ever could, but I don't know. Hasn't been proven yet, has it? I hadn't had anybody that close yet. My daughter. And Gerald's close with his kids. That's something unusual for Vietnam vets, because they usually aren't close to their kids either," Joe said.

Gerald said, "I'm close to them. I just can't have them that long. But I love my momma and daddy, too, and I can't stay over there very long. I can go over there with somebody and sit down and visit, but I cannot go over there by myself. I'll stay five or ten minutes, and I'll be gone."

Now, Gerald says he wouldn't "give a million dollars" for his time in the service, "but I suffer for it now."

The two, now, are turning their energies to forming a chapter of the Vietnam Veterans Association here in Pampa and ultimately hope to start a veterans center here to treat and help other veterans.

"It's the only thing that's meaningful to us," Joe said. "Really, when we were in the service, we had a tremendous amount of responsibility, responsibility for people's lives and billions of dollars of machinery. After that, a job is no big deal."

These veterans with others interested in joining a local chapter will meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 27, in Room 530 of the Highes Building. All veterans of the area are invited to attend.

A veteran suffering effects of delayed stress would answer often or sometimes to the statements below:

- I get depressed and angry easily.
- I have flashbacks or nightmares over some of my experiences during the war.
- I feel guilty that I made it back when some of my buddies didn't.
- I have difficulty in expressing my thoughts and feelings to others.
- I have trouble holding down a job for any length of time.
- I find it hard to get close to my wife, children and other family members.
- I know something is bothering me, but can't put my finger on it.
- I think about my Vietnam war experiences just about every day.

Thoughts by a Young Veteran

The years others knew as youth,
I spent learning the meaning of Death.

The times others spent learning to love
I passed hoping to live through endless nights.

The moments others remember as laughs in classrooms
I remember as terror in the jungle.

The instants of pleasure taken for granted by others
I remember as forgotten hopes — long ago crushed by reality of war.

The unfulfilled dreams of others are yet to be thought by me
since I am in search of my elusive youth, looking for years lost in combat,
which are no more —
and will never be.

Pampa Fine Arts to present Schub in concert

French. His pianist mother began teaching him when he was 4 year old, and she noticed his special sensitivity to music. "My parents made it possible for me to have every advantage in musical education," said Schub. "whether taking me to lessons or concerts, or purchasing records."

Schub attended Princeton one year and was awarded a three - year scholarship at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. He went on to win the Avery Fisher Award and the Naumburg International Piano Competition.

Stores, and Gattis Shoe Store in the Pampa Mall.

The 11 - man jury selected him over 39 carefully chosen contestants from 17 countries. His award for the prestigious quadrennial competition was $12,000 in cash, a recording contract, and a guarantee of 2 years of important solo and orchestral appearances in the U. S., Europe, and the Far East.

My two weeks in Texas were the most trying in my life," he says of the contest period. He had been preparing for this for a year, putting in probably the most intense concentration and work of his whole life, he stated. During the 4 or 5 weeks before the concert he had to shut himself away from everything and everybody. He avoided scheduling public concerts during those last 2 months before the competition.

This year he will have over 100 solo and symphony appearances. He has been playing to sold - out audiences from the east to west coasts. He will be in Europe, including Amsterdam, London, Germany, eastern Europe, Finland. In 1983 he will the People's Republic of China with the Texas Little Symphony and will appear in Japan. Between September and May of this season he will have only 2 weeks at home, and there are periods of time he performs every day.

Schub was born in Paris of an American father and a French mother who were both studying at the Sorbonne. When 8 months old, he moved to New York City where his parents taught

ORIENTAL SALAD
Recommended highly by my friend, Christy Pines.

- 1 1/2 to 3/4 pound fresh snow peas, trimmed and strung
- 2 heads Bibb lettuce
- 1/2 ounce package enoki mushrooms, ends trimmed
- 2 tablespoons white wine vinegar

- 1/2 teaspoon light soy sauce
- 1/2 cup peanut oil
- 1/2 teaspoon Oriental sesame oil
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Blanch snow peas in a large saucepan of boiling water until no longer raw tasting but still crisp-tender - about 3 minutes; rinse immediately under cold running water and pat dry. Core lettuce and separate into leaves; rinse and pat dry. Gently rinse mushrooms in cold water and pat dry. To make Dressing, whisk together the vinegar, soy sauce, peanut oil, sesame oil, salt and pepper. Arrange lettuce on individual salad plates; top with snow peas and mushrooms; drizzle with Dressing. Serve at room temperature. Makes 4 servings. Adapted from the April 1981 issue of Cuisine magazine.

Couple united in traditional ceremony

Diane Marie Spencer and William Leon "Dub" Taylor were united in marriage on Jan. 16 at 5 p.m. in the Beautiful Savior Lutheran Church in Amarillo with Pastor Darrel Gilbertson officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Tom Johnson of Canyon and Mr. Robert Spencer of Denver.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Taylor of 701 Magnolia, Pampa.

The Lord's Prayer and The Wedding Song were sung by Mrs. Diane Turner of Amarillo who was accompanied by Dan Knight who also played before and during the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Terry Bass, Debbie Harriman and Leanne Nickerson, all of Canyon. Terry Bass was Matron of Honor.

The groom was attended by Bobby Taylor, Howard Lewis and Bobby Chance Bobby Taylor, brother of the groom, was best man.

The bride wore a formal length white gown of chantilly lace and organza with a modified Queen Anne neckline with seed pearl and sequin trim. The chapel train had a lace border. The full, long sleeves gathered onto a lace band. The fingertip illusion veil - band of lace all around the edge on caplet of lace trimmed in white pearl and sequins.

The reception was held in the Fellowship Hall of the Beautiful Savior Lutheran Church. Assisting with the reception were Mr. and Mrs. Ron Weiman and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Brunton.

The couple will make their new home in Pampa after a short wedding trip to Colorado.

The bride attended West Texas State University.

The groom attended Central State College in Edmond, Okla. and graduated from West Texas State in December of 1981. He is employed by Haliburton.

MRS. DUB TAYLOR

Bonsal, Hasha united in evening ceremony

The First Baptist Church in Hart, Texas was the scene of the wedding of Lu Donne Bonsal and Shanne Hasha on Jan. 23 at 6:30 p.m. Brother Jack Lee, pastor, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Jerry Bonsal of East Bernard, Texas and Mary Bonsal of Hart, Texas.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Hasha of Olton, Texas.

Music for the ceremony was provided by Mrs. Gaylia Davis, organist; Mrs. Margaret Rambo, pianist; Mrs. Vivian Bennett, vocalist; and Mr. Weldon Davis, vocalist.

The bride was attended by Pamela Bomar, maid of honor; and bridesmaids, Dora Bonsal, Grace Bonsal, Sherrie Hasha and Jill Shamburger.

The groom was attended by Robin Spain, best man; and groomsmen, Steve Hasha, Sam Walter, Marty Walters and David Leathers.

The bride wore a gown which was designed and made by her aunt, Shirley Greene of White Deer. The gown was a white chapel length gown with a bodice of white point de - spirit with rose pattern applique adorned with pearls and skirt of white satin with a pleated chantilly lace border and bishop sleeves.

The bride carried a bouquet made of silk flowers with her grandfather's, the late Gus Greene, Bible.

The reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Serving were Laurey Franks, Melanie Brown, Donna Reyna, Theresa Kittrell, Tawni Thompson, Tanya Morris and Cindy Brooks.

After a honeymoon trip to New Mexico to enjoy the mountain snow skiing, the couple will make their new home at 1310 South Main, Olton, Texas.

The bride graduated from Hart High School and attended Texas Tech University. She is the grand daughter of Mrs. Patsy Greene and the late Gus Greene of Pampa.

Peeking at Pampa

Heard that Dr. Roy and Mary Braswell gave a party last week that will long be remembered. Their beautiful solar home is spacious enough for the large group of friends who attended. Decorations were lovely and there was music by John Reynolds at the piano. The four Braswells were home. One of them (I think he's Roy Jr.) is now a doctor. And there was an adorable grandchild, adding to the wonderful family feeling in the home. Reminded guests of the years when the whole family used to get up early every morning and run long miles together. Seems to have made them all healthy and happy.

Mary had such a table of goodies, so decoratively arranged that it seemed a shame to disturb them. But the guests did, enjoying every delicious bite. So many charming people were there, too many to remember. Dr. Frank and Mary Ann Kelley were there with their daughter and son-in-law. Heard that Mary Ann said she's happy the young couple is now living in Pampa with a grandbaby for Mary Ann to spoil.

The Mohans were there. Dr. V. K. and wife. She wore a gorgeous green silk sari trimmed in silver, a distinctive creation. The Mohans spent eight years in New York City when they came to the U. S. from India, before they made Pampa their home. The doctor is an excellent speaker, impressed Rotarians when he presented their program not long ago.

Bill and Elaine Ledbetter were present and she was congratulated on her new honors in the scientific field. Such a bright, accomplished lady. Saw Margaret and Jimmie Thompson at the party, both so friendly and pleasant. She has the loveliest speaking voice as well as a sparkling personality. Does a lot of community work, much of it in her own church. Chris and Bill Campaigne added pleasure to the party. She has the nicest smile. Dozens of other guests graced the occasions. So nice to have a get-together after Christmas instead of competing with the countless pre-Christmas doings.

Heard that Evelyn Nace was overwhelmed by her birthday celebration early in January. Seems she didn't know anybody knew the date except husband, Otis—who, apparently put out the news. On their club table she found a corsage, a floral centerpiece and a birthday cake. Somebody said she told Otis, "Friends shouldn't have gotten me a cake." And he said, "Friends didn't, I did!"

Heard a clever story the other day. A lady said, "My husband and I have been married 45 years." A listener said, "That sounds like a sentence." A third party commented, "Well, life imprisonment is better than a death sentence!"

Always good to hear of community work done by our people. Just heard about Helen Hogan's special project for the folks in our nursing homes. When she was Helen Madiera, some years ago, she taught dancing in Pampa and put on excellent programs.

Some Pampans remember one Lions' Club production when she and Otto Mangold got a big applause for a dance they performed. Recently Helen started teaching "arm-chair ballet" to the nursing-home people—and they love it. They learn to do ballet movements with their arms. And Helen loves to work with them. Her eyes light up when she talks about the class. Heard that one older gentleman wanted Helen to jitterbug with him one day. She did—and the audience loved the show they gave.

Hope you noticed the unusual engagement picture of Wesley Glen Marlar and Tammy Nations in the News. Their casual clothes (blue jeans and plaid shirts) were most attractive and suitable to our area. They're to be married Feb. 6 in Levelland. That's the home of the bride. He's the son of Mrs. Don Hadley and the late Larry Marler of Pampa. They will live here.

Such an attractive photo of Linda Adams in the paper, wearing a beautiful picture hat. She's to marry Bruce Galbraith of Dallas on March 26. She's a Custom House Broker.

Healthier living

Surveys show that beefsteak remains the favorite food of many adult Americans. And hamburgers continue to be the entree of choice for their children. This is true despite the incredible prices being charged for steaks, chops and other animal protein, as well as the warnings from nutritionists about the dangers of excessive calories, fats and cholesterol. In short, many of us still eat too much animal protein. "I do not worry about Americans getting enough protein today," Dr. Mark Hegsted, acting chief nutrition scientist of the U.S. Agriculture Department,

GLAZED BACON
A favorite hors d'oeuvre at the Scioto Club in Columbus, Ohio. After tasting it, you may agree with us that it deserves its popularity.
1/2 pound bacon, sliced
1/2 cup light brown sugar, packed
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
2 tablespoons red or white wine
Put the bacon in a large cake pan and bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 10 minutes. Drain off the fat. At this point, before you add the glaze, the bacon should be almost crisp - be sure not to underbake it. In a small bowl, mix the sugar, mustard and wine until smooth. Pour half of this glaze over the bacon and return to the oven. Bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes. Turn the bacon; cover with the remaining glaze and continue to bake until golden brown. Remove and place on wax paper. Serve warm or cooled. From "Betty Groff's Country Goodness Cookbook" (Doubleday).

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

Several lessons you've learned from painful past experiences will be put to good use this coming year. Rather than repeat old mistakes, you'll turn losing conditions into winning ones.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Normally you're quite good at handling adverse situations, but today you may feel impelled to run for cover at the first sign of problems. Stand your ground. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in each of the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10101. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
You have more going for you today than you may realize, so don't let negative conditions intimidate you. Draw upon your hidden strengths for success.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Your ideas and concepts are likely to be better than those of your associates today, but unless they are presented skillfully it will be difficult to gain support for them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Coworkers could lack your optimism and drive today and cause frustrating delays. Try to be self-reliant and not too dependent on others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Today you must first show companions your willingness to be cooperative if you expect them to act likewise. You set the mood. They'll behave accordingly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
You're likely to be enthusiastic in beginning projects today, but you may wish should anyone question or criticize your efforts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Dealings with influential contacts should go off smoothly today, but there's a chance small-minded persons could cause you unnecessary headaches.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Don't let your enthusiasm for improving your surroundings cause you spend more than you should for items or materials, just because you want them now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Innately, you're quite creative today, but you may fail to use your bright ideas because it might interfere with the ways others are accustomed to doing things.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Something materially promising could unexpectedly develop today. For some reason you might not feel you're entitled to it, and fail to do anything about it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
If left to your own devices today you should be adroit at working out tricky financial situations. When others interfere, they'll dull your edge.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Be hopeful today, but keep your expectations within bounds. Your possibility for gains at this time have their limitations.

expected return from overseas). He knows the day he's going to leave. So the clock starts ticking. The first two or three months he's there, if he's assigned to a field unit, he's spending most of his time in the bush. It's going to take him a couple of months to three months to really become proficient at staying alive in the bush. The whole name of that particular game is survival. So they survive a year in spite of Vietnam.

When he first gets there, he's treated somewhat standoffish by the other people in his unit because they don't know him and they don't know how he's going to respond under fire. So there's a sort of separation and an isolating process that takes place.

After a while when they see how he reacts and they can predict whether he's going to be a good trooper or a bad trooper, whether he's going to be safe or dangerous to be around, then he'll be incorporated into the unit on an emotional level.

While he's there, he will probably see a number of people get killed, probably people he's been close to. He experiences some losses as well as the overriding fear of just being in Vietnam. There isn't any safe area. There isn't any rear area. In 1968, they found out that Saigon wasn't safe. The other big cities were prone to occasional rocket and mortar attacks so that it's really unlike World War II, where you were moved up to the front, you stayed at the front lines two to three weeks or a month to two months at most, and then were drawn back to the rear where it really was safe. The guy in Vietnam didn't have any front lines, so that the war was very indistinct, very unclear. He didn't know what he was fighting for.

WAR OF NUMBERS

The United States had always in the past fought geographic wars, that is, we fought for geographic territories, which we held onto. Or which we lost, but he could see a physical reason for what he was doing. Vietnam was a war of attrition. Our entire purpose there was to make the war so painful for the Vietcong and the North Vietnamese in terms of death and losses that they would quit fighting.

Well, what really happened was that we quit fighting. But a man might go and take the same hill in a year's time five or six times and watch a large number of his friends get killed taking this hill and maybe the next day be airlifted out by helicopters, giving it back to the Vietcong and the North Vietnamese. So this was very difficult for the participants to understand, which took away some of the supports that one might have for being in a war.

In World War II, we went to war because they bombed Pearl Harbor, and we felt threatened. We felt if we did not go to war, that bad things were going to happen to us.

Well, these guys have been taken thousands of miles away from home, into a country that is anything but modern, and this person could see no threat that these people posed to him or his home, so he had a very difficult time justifying his presence for being there, regardless of whether he had been anti-war or very pro war on arriving.

He stays "in country" for three, four or five months, and he probably gets wounded in this period. He may be wounded more than once. He'll be given the obligatory purple heart and whatever medical treatment is necessary and put out back in the bush.

Along toward the time he starts looking a couple of months down the road, he starts seeing himself as a short-timer, and he knows he's going to leave Vietnam along. And that the people he knows in his outfit are going to stay. So it's a situation where he doesn't see a beginning and he doesn't see an ending. All he sees is the middle part, where he was dropped in, does his share, and then he's jerked out.

He's dropped in very suddenly and they left Vietnam and within four days, they were out of the Army and back home. There was no decompression time, no troop stuff for three or four or five weeks in which you had an opportunity to talk about what you had done, who you had been, with your comrades and deal with some of the aspects of this which were disturbing. This wasn't there.

We had felt like that by telling a man exactly when he would be taken out of Vietnam that we would pick the stress of the fear of the unknown up off of him. It worked just the opposite — it put additional stress on him.

The nature of the war put additional stress on him. The age of the people (serving) in Vietnam put stress on him. The average of the combatant in Vietnam was 19 or 19½. The average age in World War II was about 26. And that's an important five to six years, it really is.

Interviewer: Did this occur in a part of the emotional growth time for these young men?

Dr. Andrews: Yes, this period of late adolescence, emerging early adulthood, is a period in which young men typically are trying to learn about intimacy. It sure did disrupt that.

This is one of the real complaints we get from Vietnam vets is the difficulty they have interacting with significant others in their families, whether it's children, whether it's wives or whether it's parents. A large number of them have significant difficulties dealing with the questions centered around intimacy. A very simple thing like being able to hug your girlfriend and tell her that you love her is excruciatingly difficult for these guys. One of the reasons for that is that they have learned to love people in Vietnam who got killed — buddies. So that they tend to interpret getting close to someone as endangering their life.

They see themselves as very dangerous people. They see that when they get angry and they get mad, they can remember a time when that was a lethal anger. That was a lethal rage and people died as a result of their anger. It makes it very difficult for them because they haven't really learned the intermediate stages of dealing with anger, and being assertive without being aggressive, which is extremely difficult for them in social settings.

NOT AFFECTED

This is not an indictment of everybody that went to Vietnam. I'm talking about the people that I see here at the hospital. I don't know if they are representative of the typical guy who came back from Vietnam. If someone were to take what I am saying and say, "Well, Cousin Joe went to Vietnam and he must have all these problems" — that probably isn't true. But a significant number of the young men who served in Vietnam do have emotional problems as a result of it, and they have not had good outlets for working with that in the past, or for processing information while they were there. It's just within the last two to three years that the VA and the DAV have really gotten very, very active in really trying to get to these young men and provide some assistance for them in making the adjustment and providing rehabilitation.

SUFFERED IN SILENCE

Most Vietnam vets suffered in silence for years because they are very fearful about the social stigma of an emotional disorder. They see themselves as spending the rest of the lives in psychiatric hospitals or jails or whatever as a result of this — and it doesn't have to be that way.

Interviewer: Some veterans say, "I'm going to get myself committed." Now I have problems, but I don't say that.

Dr. Andrews: Most Vietnam veterans have an acute and pervasive feel for social futility for protecting society against them. When a man says, "I'm going to go get myself committed," he's really saying, "I'm going to protect the people around me by removing myself from the position where I can harm them." As a group, even though they have a very pronounced flavor of some very anti-social behaviors, these are people who are extremely concerned about the well being of those around them — and they're very fearful of the consequences of their behavior.

Interviewer: Others say things like, "Everything hurts too much." Would this indicate some are regaining touch with their feelings?

Dr. Andrews: Yes. That numbing can be pretty selective, and it doesn't hold forever. Very often these men are trying to combat the numbing because there are times when it really gets in the way, particularly in area of intimacy.

Interviewer: Many of the problems they describe are like those that other have who have never fought in the Vietnam war. For instance, they say, "I can't feel anything. I never finish anything I start." That sounds like old so-and-so, someone who never fought in the war.

Dr. Andrews: You pointed out one of the distinctions without knowing it, and this is a man who is very disturbed that he's not doing that. He's aware that he's alienated, that he's isolated, that he's not finishing anything. He knows he's had 25 jobs in the last three years. He knows that he's had three marriages. He knows that he's been unable to form a really close relationship with another person, other than another Vietnam vet. He's aware that these are difficulties, that these are problems or shortcomings. I think that is a distinguishing characteristic. He knows he's not normal, and he wants to be normal and doesn't know how to get there.

Interviewer: The veterans say they want to be like me. I say, no, I would cry all the time.

Dr. Andrews: He probably would like to be able to cry.

Interviewer: What will the government do differently. You mentioned they would stop sending them over individually.

Dr. Andrews: The Army says they are going to stop that. There's still going to be some of that where you have people in highly skilled or technical positions. Or you have replacements, but as a whole the Army has said we're going to move in regimental-size units. We're not going to make this mistake anymore.

Another thing the Army has done has been a real strenuous attempt to beef up its own mental hygiene program. After Vietnam, which I don't know what the Army is doing now as far as now a typical Army base is run, but my understanding is that they are trying to become more attuned to and sensitized to these issues.

Interviewer: Decompression time after battle?

Dr. Andrews: That may be a problem. One thing they say in a lot of groups that I've run is, "Why wasn't someone like you here when I came back?" And I say, "Okay, remember the day that you came back for outprocessing. And if a guy tells you, we're going to hold you six more weeks, so you can go sit down with a group of people and a psychiatrist or a psychologist and talk about Vietnam, you would've gone AWOL. You didn't want that. You wanted to go home."

I think the Army will try to adopt a policy for some type of decompression, some type of working out. Perhaps something similar to the programs that they've worked out for the released hostages and POWs. I sure can't speak with any authority on that. We've seen this particular move done with hostages and POWs. It would be my assumption that that would be something they would want to do in case of some future combat involvement, to institute something like that. How successful that will be, I don't know.

Interviewer: Who were the heroes of Vietnam?

Dr. Andrews: That opens up a whole bucket of worms. What's a hero? I think there were young men who went to Vietnam and served admirably, who did what they believed to be the right thing to do at that time, who ten years down the road in retrospect looked at what they did and have said, "How could I do that? How could I be so cruel? How could I be so inhumane?" Who have judge an 18-year-old's behavior with the knowledge and insight that a 30-year-old has, and I think probably unjustifiably placed a lot of the blame and a lot of the guilt on themselves, as a result of having done that.

War is never a very pretty business. It doesn't matter whether you're talking about a gentleman's war — and Crimean War was suddenly the last of the gentleman's war, or at least that's when England found out that war had ceased to be a plaything for the gentry. We found out in our Civil War that war was a pretty foreign situation. And I think the behaviors that one has to indulge in in order to survive in a combat setting are always going to counter what society says appropriate behaviors are. I think that is more an indictment of society than it is of the individual because we certainly play two sides on that.

Interviewer: The veterans seem most mad about seeing protesters and hearing Woodstock songs upon their return.

Dr. Andrews: I don't think we have to go to protesters or Woodstock songs to say that the Vietnam veteran, by and large, was treated pretty shabbily on his return. And as a population, I think we have a corporate guilt in that. I don't know who is responsible for that, whether it's the media that's responsible for it, or the individual that's responsible for it. Nobody really knows. The fact that we lost the war probably has a great deal to do with how we treated the people involved with it.

I think it's pretty easy to say society is to blame for everything that's wrong. I also think it's pretty easy to do just the opposite and say it's all the individual's fault.

I was in the service before Vietnam. I got out of the service as Vietnam started to heat up a bit. And my initial response to Vietnam was pretty militaristic. That was, Jesus, this is a little two-bit country, why are we taking so long getting this task accomplished? And, I think, a large number of Americans were that way initially, which is absurd.

Logically, it was absurd if you understood anything at all about Vietnam, which most Americans don't — about the terrain and the political and geographical problems that are represented there. At one level, that may have been possible — if we had been willing to commit the resources to do it. Had we early on been willing to mobilize a million or two million people and stick them in that country at one time and say, "Go after it." We probably could have done that. And we probably would have had to leave that million to two million people there permanently to hold that country. I don't think this country was really willing to make that type of commitment at that time. Even outside of the ethical or moral issues.

Interviewer: What hope for these people? Can they look forward to having some semblance of a happy life?

Dr. Andrews: I think so. I think a couple of things have to happen. First of all, you're hearing a lot of people crying for help. Somewhere down the line, the individual has to make the decision that he is going to change, and he has to make the decision that he is going to put Vietnam into perspective and put it behind him. That sounds really simple, but it's an unbelievably difficult thing to do. The most important period of your life, when you really felt that you life had some meaning and some importance, to have someone tell you that you're going to have to put that in perspective and put it behind you. That's very difficult to do.

One thing that I've said over and over and over again, when these people get to the point where they can start working on their problems and start talking them out and start dealing with their problems, then we have a whole population of young men who have been tested under severe conditions and who have survived the test. And I don't think there's any limit to what they can do

Within a social setting or within the context of the problems this country has once they Vietnam in perspective and put the same energy, the same drive into appropriate directions that they put into Vietnam, I think we have a tremendous population resource there — in terms of capable, tested young men, who when they get their act together, are going to be very meaningful to this country.

Two costly nuclear plants abandoned

SEATTLE (AP) — A consortium of public utilities has scrapped plans to finish two nuclear power plants in Washington state, and one director of the consortium is suggesting a slowdown in construction of three other plants.

The vote Friday by 23 directors of the Washington Public Power Supply System came after they met earlier in executive session to discuss whether they could be held personally liable for terminating construction.

About the only smiles in the room came from members of the anti-nuclear Light Brigade, who broke out several bottles of champagne.

The $343 million cost of terminating the two plants, and paying off $2.25 billion that WPPSS already has borrowed, will be carried by about 2 million Northwest ratepayers.

There are no firm estimates on how much electric bills for consumers will increase. Financial experts have guessed a well-managed termination could double electric rates.

Roger Sparks, a WPPSS director from Kittitas County, suggested a slowdown on three other plants where work is continuing because the supply system is "flat on its back" and in a "precarious" financial situation.

The WPPSS nuclear program was the most costly publicly financed construction program in the United States, construction experts have said.

The two abandoned plants were closer to completion than any other nuclear projects that were previously terminated, a spokesman for the Atomic Industrial Forum said.

Super Bowl factor and the stock market

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street analysts, noted for their ability to turn up a financial angle in just about anything, have found one in the Super Bowl.

Even the most avid reader of charts and graphs in the financial community doesn't take it very seriously. But from the outcome of the football championship game, brokers say, it will be possible to infer a forecast of what the stock market will do in 1982.

If the San Francisco 49ers win, they say, it will be a favorable portent for stock prices. If, on the other hand, the Cincinnati Bengals prevail, a continued bear market may be in store.

This conclusion stems not from any sentimental preference for San Francisco, nor from any basic bias against the Bengals' home.

It derives from a pattern — for which no rational explanation has been offered — that has developed over the past 15 Super Bowl years.

With only one narrow exception, the stock market has declined in each year that the Super Bowl was won by a team that traced its origins back to the old American Football League. The market went up every time the football champion was a team that played in the National Football League before its 1970 merger with the AFL.

Cincinnati falls into the former group, San Francisco the latter. Hence the recommendation of William LeFevre, an analyst at Purcell, Graham & Co.: "Stock market bulls should root for the San Francisco 49ers."

Analysts' interest in such diversions is understandable, given the recent uninspired showing of all the markets. After staging a spirited, but brief, decline in autumn, interest rates are on the rise again.

And the stock market, which took a drop of close to 10 percent last year, has begun 1982 with further losses.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 2.57 to 845.03 in the past week, extending its loss since New Year's to 29.97 points.

Dear Abby
Middle-aged virgin has the first-night jitters

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, a 19-year-old college boy, signed "Never Been Kissed," was embarrassed because of his lack of experience with the opposite sex. He was a virgin and getting close to a sexual relationship with his girlfriend and didn't know how to handle it. You advised him to act as though he knew what he was doing, follow his natural instincts and bluff his way through.

Would you give the same advice to a man more than twice his age with the same problem? I am 40, normal and healthy in all respects, reasonably attractive and I am still a virgin. How do you suggest I handle a social situation with a woman in my age bracket who is sexually experienced and probably assumes that I am too?

This is no joke, Abby. Believe me, I wish it were. NEVER BEEN KISSED OR ANYTHING ELSE

DEAR NEVER: I wouldn't advise a 40-year-old male virgin to bluff his way with a sexually sophisticated woman.

If you are "healthy, normal and reasonably attractive" and desirous of a sexual relationship, I am wondering why you are still totally inexperienced. If you don't know either, you should see a competent sex therapist.

DEAR ABBY: Ever since reading the letter from "Long-time Pastor" regarding his refusal to allow an "obviously pregnant bride" to have "I'm Having His Baby" sung at her wedding, I have been on a slow simmer. He states, "I think it makes a mockery of the sacred vows when people say 'I do' after they have already done it."

I would like to ask the "Longtime Pastor" why he allowed an "obviously pregnant bride" to have anything but a very private, family-only wedding ceremony, sans soloist, fanfare, etc. I believe that anything else makes a mockery of the sacred vows and that it is the responsibility of not-so-open-minded pastors to maintain sacred standards for the sacred ceremonies they perform in their churches.

Thanks, Abby, I feel better. Sign me, LUTHERAN MOTHER OF FOUR DAUGHTERS

DEAR MOTHER: A pregnant bride is also entitled to a church wedding with a "soloist, fanfare, etc.," if that's what she wants. It is not the pastor's function to judge her. That's the Lord's job.

DEAR ABBY: When my nephew graduated from high school last June, I sent him a check for $100. Not too shabby for an uncle on a fixed and somewhat limited income. I have yet to receive an acknowledgment of my gift. The lad is now away at college.

I saw the father of this nephew recently, and I asked if his son ever received my graduation gift. The father said, "Yes, didn't you hear from him?" I told him I had not, whereupon he just shrugged his shoulders and replied, "Well, you know how kids are!"

Abby, I'm not sure I know "how kids are." Maybe you can tell me.

UNENLIGHTENED UNCLE

DEAR UNCLE: Some kids are well-mannered, appreciative and prompt with their thank-yous. Other are ill-mannered, unappreciative, lazy and procrastinating. Your nephew obviously belongs to the latter group.

NEW YEAR GREETING. Workers climb a bamboo scaffold in Hong Kong Friday to erect a huge billboard marking the lunar Year of the Dog, which begins Monday. Chinese characters at right read, "Profit, Year After Year," and at left, "Surpluses Every Year." The English characters at the bottom mean "Happiness and Prosperity" in Chinese. (AP Laserphoto)

Names in the news

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan's longtime political strategist, Lyn Nofziger, donned his Mickey Mouse tie and brought out his irreverent sense of humor to bid farewell to reporters as he left his White House job.

Nofziger, described by White House Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes as "the only member of the administration with enough guts to dress punk," left the White House Friday to make his living as a political consultant, writer and public speaker.

"My relations with the media have, I think, improved immensely over the last year as I've seen less and less of them," Nofziger said. "My relations with the White House, I hope, will improve on that same basis within the next year."

On the serious side, Nofziger said he could find little wrong with Reagan's first year in office. He finally came up with, "I think the president is too nice...not tough enough on those who work for him."

Reagan's chief spokesman in 1980, will still see the president regularly and "still be a part of all this," said Michael K. Deaver, Reagan's deputy chief of staff.

NEW YORK (AP) — Archie Outlaw, who argued his name would hurt his chances for acquittal on charges of possessing and selling heroin, had said he'd rather face the jury under the aliases of Eleanor Roosevelt, Reggie Jackson or Archie Inlaw, to name a few.

DRILLING FLUIDS REPRESENTATIVES

A Position That Adds Up To Responsibility and Challenge

Our IMCO sales and service representatives are known as Mud Engineers in the oilfield. Their job responsibilities include on-site well testing and analysis of drilling fluid preparation and maintenance. They are trained to respond to any drilling complications and recommend appropriate steps to take. It's a demanding job and the demand for Mud Engineers is growing all the time.

We have an immediate need for individuals interested in a career in this field. Qualified candidates should ideally have a college degree and rig experience as well as a desire to work outdoors. A HS diploma is required.

At IMCO, you will have a starting salary of $18,000 per year, a company car, a year-end performance bonus, plus a comprehensive benefits package. Upon completion of an 8-week training program, you will be relocated at company expense to one of our field locations within the continental 48 states.

We at IMCO are concerned about the future of talented college graduates as well as individuals presently considering a career change. If you would like further information about career opportunities with us, please send your resume including salary history to:

War on drugs being lead from El Paso office

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Arthur Fluhr and his staff of 120 are leading the fight in the war against drugs without leaving their quiet El Paso office.

Fluhr is the director of the El Paso Intelligence Center, or EPIC, the high-technology information center for the federal government's anti-drug efforts. EPIC is the "brains" of the operation, processing mountains of intelligence gathered by law enforcement officials and the electronic eyes and ears of the government.

"We're the one point that a law enforcement officer can call and get all the information possible," Fluhr said. "The idea of the program is to intercept the drugs before they come into this country and we've had some success at it."

In 1981, EPIC's actions resulted in the seizure of 460 ships loaded with more than 4 million pounds of marijuana and nearly 49,000 pounds of hashish. The agency also helped law enforcement authorities capture airplanes loaded with drugs and individuals trying to smuggle drugs through East Coast airports.

"It's taken us years to build the data base we have," Fluhr said. "It's the best that exists in the world."

EPIC's resources soon will be growing. President Reagan recently signed into law a bill that will allow the military to give EPIC information on smuggling suspects that its ships and planes spot while on maneuvers.

Attorney General William French Smith, in announcing the new program, said it is "exceptionally important and promising." Fluhr doubts whether the military can take enough time from its main mission of national defense to provide a lot of information, but he says every tidbit helps battle the smugglers.

EPIC was founded in 1974 as the Southwest Border Intelligence Service by the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Immigration and Naturalization Service. Its goal was to halt trafficking of drugs, guns and aliens across the Mexican border.

"In 1976 and 1977, when the problem with Mexico kind of wound down, we became an international organization with narcotics again the No. 1 concern," Fluhr said.

The concentration moved from Mexico to the Caribbean, the shipping lane for marijuana and cocaine shipped from Colombia and Jamaica, Fluhr said.

EPIC grew to include nine agencies — the DEA, INS, U.S. Customs, the Coast Guard, Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Marshals service and the FBI.

"You don't think that's a hell of a management job?" laughed Fluhr, a DEA agent who has headed EPIC since 1976. "It's really not that bad. What makes it work is the people assigned here by the administrators and commissioners of the nine agencies are really the cream of the crop."

The elite force also has access to information from the Federal Aviation Administration, the National Security Agency and, now, the armed forces.

EPIC also has agreements with state law enforcement officials in 45 states to exchange information both directions.

Now, a local law enforcement official with information about a smuggling suspect can call EPIC toll-free 24 hours a day and get all of the data on that suspect from EPIC's computer and document files. If EPIC knows that someone in another state is working on a related case, they will get the officers in touch with one another so they can pool their efforts.

"When you sit back here with all of the information, sometimes you can see a pattern developing," Fluhr said. "If you're assigned to a particular area, you're parochial in nature. It's really hard to see the big picture. That's where we come in."

The first year Fluhr directed EPIC, law enforcement officers made 14,000 requests for information. In 1981, EPIC handled 196,000 queries.

Fluhr said that when law enforcement officers call about a suspect, EPIC has the information they need about 35 percent of the time. "If you call on a vessel or an aircraft, it's probably way up around 70 percent," he said.

Knowledge about EPIC's activities during its seven-year existence generally has been limited to the law enforcement community, but Fluhr said congressional attention has made the agency more noticeable recently.

"I guess the thing that's put us on the map was the Posse Comitatus Act (allowing military participation)," he said. "Congress is extremely interested in this. We've been selling them that EPIC is something more than a telephone booth in El Paso."

Far from a phone booth, the strategy rooms at the center resemble a scene from "Dr. Strangelove."

The walls are covered by giant maps that bear blinking lights to show the movements of drug smuggling ships and airplanes. Chalkboards on the walls carry the information on suspected aircraft, including what kind of drugs they are carrying and their destinations. Virtually every desk holds a computer terminal to give agents access to the DEA's Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs Information System, FAA flight plans and aircraft identification and computer data on hundreds of thousands of suspects.

The information from every query that is called into EPIC by law enforcement officers is fed into the computers, producing an ever-growing data base.

EPIC also has access to intelligence gathered by the government's electronic surveillance, ranging from satellite spying to intercepting smuggler's radio messages.

By analyzing the data, EPIC is able to launch strikes against smugglers by mobilizing Coast Guard cutters, Customs aircraft and DEA agents at home and abroad.

"We don't want EPIC to be in the position where we tell anybody what to do," Fluhr said. "Our reputation has grown to the point where if EPIC calls a law enforcement agency with tactical information, they act on it."

EPIC's operation costs the taxpayers $1.4 million a year, but Fluhr said the expense for the high-technology center is necessary because smugglers are more sophisticated than they've ever been.

Fluhr, who worked on the French Connection case in the early 1960s, said that since that time, smugglers have begun using electronic equipment of their own and have learned such skills as dodging radar and buying agents with minor arrests while shipping larger amounts into the country.

"Now, you've got to have the cooperation of the whole law enforcement community to catch these people," he said.

Fluhr said most smugglers are organized into groups or syndicates so they can pool their resources and split the profits.

"There was one organization on the East Coast that had a charter," he said. "You weren't allowed to make more than $1 million.

Once you made a million, you had to get out. They can make a million so quickly that by the time we were on them, they were out of it. Legit."

Fluhr said some organizations now are even buying banks so they can launder the drug money easier.

"You're talking about heavy, heavy money," he said.

EPIC's data banks make it easier for agents to piece together the syndicates rather than arresting lone smugglers without stopping the operation, Fluhr said.
