Projectile strikes Bush limousine, no one hurt

WASHINGTON (AP) — An armored limousine carrying Vice President George Bush to work was hit by an unknown object early this morning but no one was injured.

Secret Service spokesman Jim Boyle said agents had not found anything at this time to indicate there was a bullet involved.

He said the car could have been hit by a rock. District of Columbia police spokesman Joseph Gentile said police "still don't know" what hit Bush's car.

Secret Service spokesman Jack Warner said the motorcade proceeded to the White House, where Bush went to his office and took part in what an aide called a "routine meeting."

Warner said agents and experts were going over the car. Speculation is that it was a gunshot, but we have not definitively concluded that.

A congressional source who demanded anonymity said Bush believed the object was a bullet.

Gentile, who earlier said there had been an unconfirmed report of a man with a rifle on a rooftop, said police and Secret Service agents were launching a building-by-building search along two blocks of L Street, where the incident occurred. The search was concentrated on building rooftops.

Asked if the car could have been hit by a rock or by a projectile fired from a gun used to imbed nails in concrete, Gentile said, "We're checking into every possibility." A new condominium-office complex is being built nearby.

Gentile said the car's driver "heard a thump" and, when he arrived at the White House, discovered a V-shaped dent in the rear roof of the car.

Earlier, Warner said, "As far as we can tell at this time, the vice president's limousine was hit by some sort of a projectile. It was hit in the left rear in the roof area."

Bush spokesman Shirley Green said Bush "heard a loud noise." But Bush's press secretary, Pete Teeley, said the vice president did not realize his limousine had been hit.

Two Secret Service agents were in the car with him, Ms. Green said.

Warner said the agents said the noise "sounded like a gunshot" but that they could not be sure.

"Nobody was injured, everybody is safe. The only harm was to the limousine and at this time we're not sure what type of projectile it was," Warner also said.

Warner said metal fragments presumed to have come from the projectile were recovered from underneath the vinyl on the car roof. But it was not immediately clear what the metal came from or even whether it could be part of the armored roof itself, he said.

Gentile said shortly after the incident that what sounded like gunshots had been heard in the area.

The incident occurred on L Street NW between 21st and 22nd streets, about eight blocks from the White House, just as dawn broke over the city.

"The vehicle has been impounded and the incident is being investigated," Weinberg said.

Early rush-hour traffic was backed up for blocks as police blockaded L Street and several cross streets. Scores of Secret Service agents and city policemen were at the scene and police helicopters hovered overhead checking rooftops.

TAKE THIS SNOW, AND SHOVEL IT! It took some conditions, got to their destinations. A 30 percent chance extra effort today, but area residents and students, of additional snow is expected today. undaunted by the five inches of snow and blizzard - like (Staff Photo by John Wolfe)

Five-inch snowfall wreaks havoc on drivers

Compiled from staff and Associated Press reports

A winter storm dumped up to five inches of snow on the Texas Panhandle this morning, reducing visibility to near zero, slicking highways with a dangerous layer of ice and stalling cars.

The National Weather Service said additional snowfall up to two inches was possible in the Panhandle today. Weather forecasters issued a travelers' advisory for the entire Texas Panhandle. The storm was expected to march into North Texas later this afternoon, with two to four inches of snow possible.

In the Pampa area snowfall, which began about 9:30 p.m. Monday, had dumped about four inches of the fluffy white stuff by morning. While snowfall ended early this morning, additional snow began falling in Pampa about mid-morning.

But winds, ranging from 15 to 25 mph this morning, were creating numerous problems with blowing snow blocking visibility of motorists and causing large drifts.

All roads in the Pampa area were reported snow packed, icy and slick, by law enforcement officials, and travel was being discouraged today.

But, while motor vehicle travel was being discouraged, numerous motorists were attempting travel this morning and many were finding it difficult. Locally, police were reporting many vehicles stuck on icy streets, especially on those with uphill grades.

The Highway Patrol also reported numerous accidents along Interstate 40 in the southern part of Gray, Wheeler and Carson Counties as icy pavement sent vehicles into skids.

Snow drifts were blocking many rural roads, authorities said, with only one lane open to traffic on Price Road at 23rd Street. One of the local Texas Department of Public Safety units became stuck in a snowdrift near the Highway Patrol office on Perryton Parkway.

With this morning's low temperature of 19 degrees, after Monday's high temperature of 47 degrees, this morning's blustery winds made the temperature feel like 15 degrees below zero, due to the wind chill index.

The blowing snow and hazardous snow conditions closed some area schools and delayed others. Officials of the Pampa Independent School District decided to delay opening of local schools until 9:30 a.m. They planned to operate school buses wherever road conditions permitted.

Both St. Vincent De Paul Catholic School and the Grandview - Hopkins School delayed start of classes for one hour today. Officials decided to close the White Deer - Skellytown Schools and the St. Matthew's Day School.

The Pampa Center of Clarendon College also cancelled classes for today and this evening.

The four inches of snow which fell on Pampa overnight amounted to 25 inch of moisture.

Unofficially, snowfall at Wheeler, where it was still snowing with blowing snow at mid-morning, totaled four inches.

Canadian reported three inches of snowfall this morning, with snow still falling and drifting due to strong winds. Only one inch of snow was reported at Shamrock.

Blowing snow also hampered visibility from Amarillo northward to the Oklahoma border and westward stretching into New Mexico.

"We've got a lot of accidents and stranded cars," said Mabel Abernathy, a deputy in the Potter County Sheriff's Department in Amarillo. "The roads are very slick and dangerous, and with the blowing snow, the visibility is very poor."

Thundershowers clustered along the Texas coast, and fog clouded parts of South Central Texas. Skies were clear only in West Texas.

Early morning temperatures were in the 20s in the Panhandle and West Texas, reaching the 50s and 60s in South Texas. The morning extremes ranged from 21 degrees at Amarillo to 68 degrees at Brownsville.

Forecasters predicted the snow in the Panhandle would spread to North and South Texas this afternoon in the form of snowfall and showers. Temperatures were expected to get even colder statewide tonight.

Groundhog Phil sees shadow, more winter

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP) — Punxsutawney Phil, the underground oracle named for this town, saw his shadow when he peered from his groundhog burrow this morning and tradition says that means six more weeks of the calamitous Winter of '82.

Charles M. Erhard, president of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club, roused the slumbering rodent from his electrically heated burrow.

The long-range forecast issued by the National Weather Service concurred with Phil's findings in a year that has seen record cold temperatures nationwide.

"The National Meteorological Center checked with Uncle Phil before they put out their extended forecast, and they agree with his prognosis," said meteorologist Frank Lucadamo in Pittsburgh.

According to myth and legend, spring would have been right around the corner if Phil had not seen his shadow. The rodent has predicted an extended winter every year but two since 1960.

Similar events were planned across the state in Quarryville, Pa., and Sun Prairie, Wis. But townspeople here insist that Phil, who has been making forecasts since 1877, is a peerless prognosticator.

The groundhog lives in a glass-enclosed pen with his mate, Phyllis, in the center of town. They eat a diet recommended by a zookeeper, of dry dog food, animal vitamins, apples and carrots.

Phil is put into his burrow on Gobbler's Knob just before the big event on Groundhog Day.

There is no scientific evidence that any animal can forecast the weather. And the National Geographic Society once pointed out that groundhogs normally hibernate until March, not early February.

But this town of 7,792, located 80 miles north of Pittsburgh and named by the Delaware Indians for a vicious species of black flies that once thrived here, has cultivated international fame by promoting a myth that can be traced back to ancient Scotland.

To mark the occasion, the local high school crowns a groundhog king and queen. And the town honors its man and woman of the year at a Groundhog Day banquet, held after Phil's prediction, which is duly recorded in the Congressional Record.

"It's a fun thing. It's the holiday that if it didn't exist, we'd have to invent it. What else would you do on Feb. 2?" said Elaine Light, a historian and former reporter who has written two books about Punxsutawney and Groundhog Day.

Basketball games canceled

Pampa's District 3-5A games with Amarillo High tonight have been postponed due to heavy snowfall.

Both games have been rescheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday night.

Snow today, tornado tomorrow for local emergency personnel

BY SHEILA ECCLES
Staff Writer

City and county officials, law enforcement agencies fire department officials and representatives of the public utility companies have been briefed — there will be a tornado in Pampa on Wednesday at 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The destructive tornado is part of the civil defense emergency operations drill to test the communications abilities between different agencies in the event of a real emergency.

Civil Defense Coordinator Steve Vaughn said that the drill will not be a mass casualty drill, and there will be no transportation of bodies and injured persons to the hospital as in previous drills held in the city.

"The main concentration of this drill will be on those involved in the emergency decision-making process," Vaughn said.

"We have tested the transportation of people to hospitals in prior years and found that end of the disaster drill to be well handled. The only thing that we hadn't tested was the communications end of things," Vaughn said.

"On Wednesday, we will meet with all the officials plus the ministerial alliances. The ministerial alliances will be included because in case of a real emergency, churches would be used for shelters. The churches are the second most appropriate shelters after the county and city-owned facilities because they offer set up kitchens for mass food preparation," Vaughn said.

"We are also including all the volunteer operations such as the Red Cross and Salvation Army," he said.

"What will basically happen is that the warning will be sounded, and all the persons involved will meet in the Pampa Police Department Training Room, which will be the communications center," he said.

"This communications center will take care of all the information coming in and all the necessary people will be available to make key decisions," he said.

"We cannot allow time for duplication when lives and property are at stake," he said.

The operation includes many Gray County REACT volunteers and volunteer ham radio operators who will make information from outlying areas readily available to the communications center.

"In the event of a real emergency, we will have runners available to be dispatched to the two local radio stations with immediate answers and information from the communications room," Vaughn said.

"The public would be warned in a real emergency by a continuous blast from the outdoor warning sirens. The sirens will not be sounded Wednesday to avoid confusion," Vaughn said.

"Residents would be urged to turn on their radios or cable television. We have a special communication that allows us to break in on the cable and talk directly to the local residents," Vaughn said. "That would be the main way we could reach those residents without scanners or portable radio equipment."

"All necessary officials will remain in the communications room until the disaster is under control," Vaughn said.

"In the event of a real disaster in Pampa, the National Guard will be activated and will be dispatched to the scene for security control. Local law enforcement will be handling saving lives and property," he said.

Local residents are invited to listen to their scanners to monitor the drill and review the procedure.

"I imagine the communications room will look like a site of mass confusion, however, out of the confusion — the control will come," he said.

Dozier says he ignored warnings before kidnap

VICENZA, Italy (AP) - Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier today said he ignored warnings by Italian authorities and failed to take adequate precautions to prevent his kidnapping by the terrorists of the Red Brigades.

"You are looking at an embarrassed guy...I take full responsibility," the 50-year-old American general told his first question-and-answer news conference since his rescue last Thursday from an apartment in Padua where he was held captive for 42 days. "I was warned, but the warnings said the terrorists did not have U.S. personnel in mind...and I was so busy." Dozier said he spent most of his time in captivity playing cards, reading, dozing and doing exercises.

"My problem was to fight excruciating boredom...My life changed abruptly from supersonic existence to subsonic existence," he said.

Texas political scene changes rapidly

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Peyton McKnight's early-starting campaign fizzled out Monday and Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple barely beat the deadline to get in the Democratic scramble for a gubernatorial nominee.

Oil millionaire McKnight, who announced his campaign back in October, gave up. No money, said the Tyler oil millionaire.

Moments after McKnight withdrew, Temple, a millionaire whose fortune is built on the pineywoods of East Texas, walked into Democratic headquarters and beat the filing deadline by 25 minutes.

Temple said the other major Democratic contenders — Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong and Attorney General Mark White — have drawn "yawns" around the state with their campaigns.

So Temple, a Diboll native and son of timberman Arthur Temple Jr., stepped in and proclaimed himself the man who can oust Republican Gov. Bill Clements.

"I have toyed with the idea for some time. In the last few weeks more and more people told me they didn't see the present Democratic candidates capturing the imagination and support of Democrats around the state."

he said.

Skip Holcombe, Armstrong's deputy campaign director, said, "Basically, we replaced one East Texas millionaire with another East Texas millionaire."

Temple, 39, was elected to the Railroad Commission in 1980, ousting incumbent John Poerner in the primary. He said he talked with McKnight earlier Monday, and was told that McKnight was having second thoughts about the race.

But Temple insisted he was going to file regardless of what McKnight decided. He said he did not know McKnight was out when he stepped into the race.

McKnight's campaign started early and quickly, but faded in recent weeks.

"At this point, it does not appear that my political contributions will meet these early spending demands," he said in a release. "I am faced with the prospect of immediately borrowing a million dollars in addition to the loans I have already personally made to the campaign."

McKnight loaned his campaign $492,000 of the $527,000 it recently reported.

"It would not be fair to my family to commit more of our resources and go deeply in debt," he said Monday.

White said he hoped to pick up most of McKnight's supporters. The attorney general said his political philosophy and McKnight's are similar.

"I hope our mutual friends will feel welcome to continue the race with my campaign," he said.

Speaker Bill Clayton said the McKnight withdrawal "certainly improves Mark's hand."

Temple, like the other Democratic contenders, chose to complain about Clements, rather than his May 1 primary opponents.

"A high percentage of the people in this state don't like him. They are tired of his bullying tactics. They are tired of his war on state employees and unfortunate people. They are tired of his arrogant attitude," he said.

Temple, who said he would not resign his Railroad Commission seat, had not set a campaign budget.

"I expect I will put in some of my own money," he said. Behind the scenes, White and Armstrong campaign workers were surprised by the final-day flurry.

"I don't like the idea of these two millionaires sitting around and divvying up Texas," said Dwayne Holman, director of the White campaign.

Holcombe refused to concede the McKnight vote to White.

"We think the race revolves around the jobs they've done in office," he said.

Birthday observed for 'magnificent building'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Capitol that Gov. Bill Clements says is "without peer" among the states was designed by a Michigan architect and built by an Illinois contractor using Scottish stone cutters.

On Monday, when Texans celebrated the 100th anniversary of the groundbreaking for the Capitol, an Ohio native gave the keynote speech and a former Kansan baked a Capitol-shaped cake.

Clements described the pink granite structure as a "magnificent building" and said "there is no better feeling than to walk through these doors every day and to work in the Capitol."

Allen McCree, an Austin architect who narrated a Capitol slide show for visitors, said architect E.E. Myers of Detroit was so proud of his Capitol design that he carried it on his office stationery.

Ground was broken on Feb. 1, 1882, and the cornerstone was laid on March 2, 1885. Abner Taylor of Chicago built the Capitol, and it was occupied in September 1888.

"It's bedrock solid and will last another 400 years," McCree said.

The centennial party started on the south steps and, after an hour, moved inside, where Texans lined up for slice of the cake baked by chef Steve Mannion, 26, who moved here from Wichita, Kan., four months ago.

Outside, a brisk wind made the weather so cold that keynote speaker William Livingston of the University of Texas and others wore topcoats, and girls in the Conroe High School choir hugged their bare arms and shivered.

The closed offices covered a cross-section of the state in cities such as San Marcos, Waco, Bay City, Crystal City, Lufkin, Jasper, Beeville, Robstown, Paducah, Muleshoe, Borger and Hereford.

Among the closed offices were 31 "sub-offices" that had been set up in small towns and, in some instances, shopping centers of metropolitan areas to make the job service offices more accessible to the people. All of them were closed, Tullis said.

"We tried to still cover a geographical area in the offices we left open. A lot of small towns still have offices, but we closed some if there was another town nearby where they could go. We had to cut back substantially in the large cities even," Tullis said.

Wright had criticized Reagan after his State of the Union message last week for ignoring the nation's unemployment problem in the speech.

The president's request includes $1.9 billion to maintain employment compensation payments through the fiscal year that ends next Sept. 30.

Wright says some TEC offices may stay open

WASHINGTON — Rep. Jim Wright has expressed optimism that President Reagan's request for an additional $2.3 billion to cope with the rising number of unemployed workers could keep some Texas Employment Commission offices open.

Already, 71 TEC job service offices have been shut down because of dwindling funds.

Wright, a Fort Worth Democrat and the House Majority Leader, said he was heartened by Reagan's request. A House appropriations subcommittee has scheduled hearings today on the proposal.

But Ernie Tullis of Austin, the TEC's administrator, told the Associated Press that Reagan's action came too late to save many of the closed Texas offices — which represent about half of the commission's job service offices across the state. More than 800 TEC employees have already been laid off, he said.

The president's request includes $343 million to help finance the operations of various states in providing regional offices and personnel to find jobs for the unemployed.

Reagan's recommendation was almost identical to an emergency supplemental bill introduced Friday on behalf of the House Democratic leadership by Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

"I am delighted that President Reagan has reversed the earlier position of the administration and agrees with the imperative necessity for this action in view of the worsening economic situation," Wright said.

"I fully expect... that most, if not all of the offices that have been closed can be reopened and the valuable service that they provide speedily resumed in the interest of getting unemployed Americans back to work," Wright added.

Tullis said that even if enough money is restored, operating costs already have soared.

"We closed out some telephone lines, and to put them back in will cost us money. We may not be able to get back in some of the offices we moved out of, some of the landlords may want to renegotiate their leases for more money, and some of our best employees, that we didn't want to lose and won't be able to replace, have already taken other jobs," Tullis said.

The Texas Employment Commission announced several weeks ago that two severe budget cuts since Oct. 1, reducing funding for more than 1,000 positions statewide, left no option but to close job service offices statewide.

"We had to go out and notify landlords we were closing, so we've been in the process since early January getting out, getting the furniture moved so we could close," Tullis said in a telephone interview.

"If this money is restored, it's not going to get where we can draw more money until late February, and we don't know what our status is going to be on some of our lease. Maybe we would be able to get back in on our same leases, and maybe they'd want to renegotiate. And it would take time to get our people back in those offices."

Besides the 800 workers already laid off, another 435 jobs are in jeopardy if funds aren't restored, Tullis said.

"They're on hold for the moment," he said.

Preacher: records hide evil messages

By MARILYN MORITZ
Lufkin News

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — You've heard of reading between the lines. But what about listening between the lyrics?

A Kaufman preacher thinks messages of evil and wrongdoing on rock 'n' roll records may be affecting listeners on a subconscious level, and a Lufkin teacher agrees.

They are particularly concerned with a subliminal technique called backward masking whereby messages that cannot be heard when played forward are implanted in the song.

James Gilbert, a Church of Christ minister in Kaufman, southeast of Dallas, says he's trying to find out how it's done and why, and what effect it is having on the young people who listen to it.

And they are listening to it, he says, every time they turn on the radio or phonograph and hear Led Zeppelin's "Stairway to Heaven" or Queen's "Another One Bites the Dust," among others.

Backward masking is apparent to the conscious-level mind only when the record is played backward. These masked messages cannot be heard by the conscious mind when played forward, but the mind is able to retain, unscramble and understand it, Gilbert said.

"So I was talking with some of my kids about it and some rumors we'd heard about some songs containing backward satanic messages and I decided to get some of these albums and see for ourselves what they had to say," Gilbert said.

"We listened to these backwards segments by putting the record on a neutral turntable and then spinning it by finger backwards at approximately the right speed," he said. "It surprised us... These rumors seemed clearly to be true."

A Lufkin News reporter who listened to the records Gilbert and others have pointed out found in "Stairway to Heaven," when played backward, a segment says, "My sweet Satan. The one will be the sad one who makes me sad, whose power is Satan." Forward the lyrics are, "Yes, there are two paths you can go by, but in the long run there's still time to change the road you're on."

Although some words are not clearly discernable, the word Satan is, the reporter found.

Gilbert says the two messages, the conscious and the subliminal, together can influence the listener to believe Satan's path is the path to follow.

When Frank Latimer Jr., television lab instructor and drama teacher at Lufkin High School, read about backward masking, he decided to do some research on it with the help of his students.

"I have the neutral turntable and the kids have these records," he said, "so we turned them backwards by hand just to see if we could hear something being said."

Led Zeppelin's "Stairway to Heaven" was again the target of the experiment. "Most of us could hear something, but not entire sentences," Latimer said. "We could hear words and phrases here and there."

Some students said they could clearly hear the satanic message, but others were skeptical.

Rock songs that seem to contain masked messages, according to Gilbert and Latimer, include Queen's "Another One Bites the Dust," and the Beatles' "Revolution No. 9."

Played in reverse, the segment at the end of the Queen song that repeats the line, "Another one bites the dust," again and again, says, "Decide to smoke marijuana," over and over.

"Revolution No. 9" contains a segment that, played backward, has another message. The repetition of "number nine, number nine..." in reverse says, "turn me on, dead man, turn me on, dead man..."

Gilbert says he has listened to these selections and has heard rumors of others. But, he says, he doesn't point out a particular song until he's heard it for himself. Gilbert says a Black Oak Arkansas song, "The Day Electricity Came to Arkansas," contains the backward message, "Satan. Satan. Satan. He is God. He is God. He is God."

Electric Light Orchestra not only backward masked a segment of lyrics, but an entire song, "Fire on High" on their "Face the Music" album. When played forward, a garbled voice can be heard just before the music begins. When played in reverse, the voice can clearly be understood to say, "The music is reversible, but time is not. Turn back. Turn back. Turn back. Turn back." Then the music begins.

Latimer, a Sunday school teacher at First Baptist Church, says there are two questions to answer: "First, is there something there or isn't there? Second, is the $64,000 question — is it affecting and how is it affecting the mind?"

Answering his first question, Latimer says, "I heard it. Others heard it, and record producers say backtracking is done. So, yes, I say something is there."

Latimer and some area disc jockeys say they know that the backward masking technique is used in recording studios. Efforts to reach some of these record producers were unsuccessful; they all failed to return calls from the News.

"Can the mind interpret or understand these lyrics backwards?" Latimer asks. "I don't know, but I'd like to know."

At least two psychologists say they do not know of any data on the subject.

"I don't know of any experiments being done to prove if a sequence of words played forward on the conscious level, can have an unconscious effect of the words embedded backward, without them, in fact, being played backward," says Dr. Hal Becker, president of Behavioral Engineering Corp. in Metairie, La.

Congressional redistricting no GOP bonanza

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Congressional redistricting is failing to turn into the bonanza that Republican leaders once predicted, forcing GOP strategists to lower their expectations and re-examine their computer programs.

But Democrats are troubled as well. The snail's pace with which states are redrawing congressional boundaries is frustrating

efforts by both parties to plan sophisticated campaigns for the upcoming elections.

A year ago, Republican officials were boasting that population shifts away from the cities of the Northeast and

GOP-populated Sun Belt could bring them 17 or 18

seats.

Bell going to court

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Southwestern Bell is going to court to try to get another $89 million out of Texas ratepayers.

The telephone company, unsatisfied with the record $243.7 million hike granted by the Public Utility Commission in December, filed an appeal Monday in state district court here. Bell wanted a $469.7 million hike.

A company news release issued after the suit was filed said PUC "arbitrarily and erroneously" disallowed certain expenses claimed by Bell. If the expenses had been allowed, Bell would have been entitled to $89 million more, according to a company release.

"The PUC disallowances guaranteed that the company will not be able to earn the rate of return authorized by the PUC," the release said.

Bell also wants the court to look at the $21 million in refunds PUC ordered the company to pay. The refunds were a result of bonded rates Bell put into effect while the commission was considering the rate hike.

The bonded rates were based on a $246.8 million rate hike. Bell claims the PUC-ordered refunds would "overpay" customers.

But it doesn't seem to be working out that way. As state legislatures slowly report in with their new congressional maps, GOP leaders are conceding that redistricting may put fewer than a half dozen new seats in their column.

"At this point, it's probably a wash," with neither party gaining much from the process, said Rich Bond, deputy chairman of the Republican National Committee.

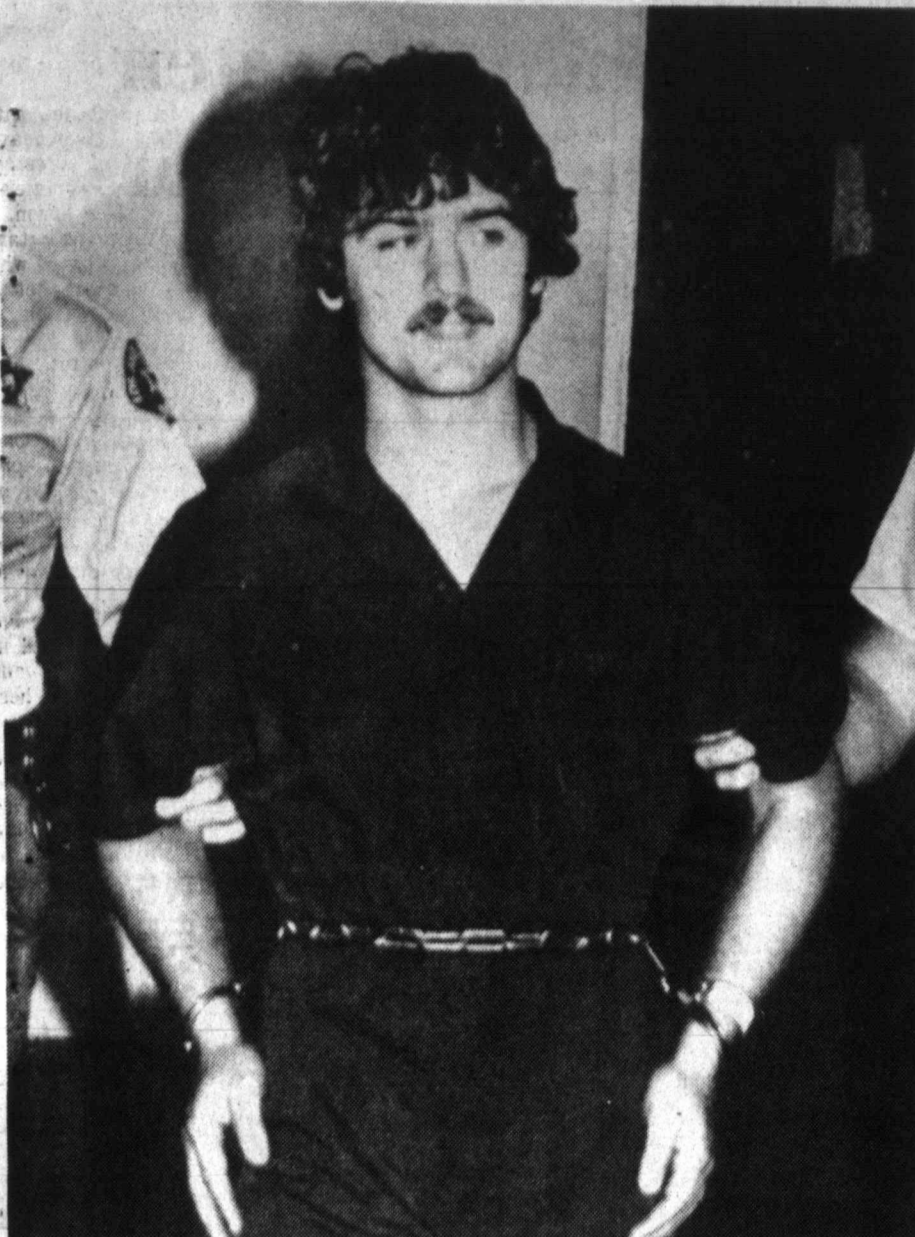

And, while Republicans are still speaking confidently of cashing in on President Reagan's popularity to help them buck history and pick up House seats in this mid-term election, they're no longer talking seriously of wresting control from the Democrats.

"I think you must bear in mind that if we gain one seat, it would only be the second time this century that the party that seized the White House did so," said Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee.

The other time was 1934, when Democrats picked up congressional seats midway into Franklin Delano Roosevelt's first presidential term.

But Democrats are also frustrated by state delays in final boundaries. Party leaders are eager to pin down congressional campaign strategy, and are trying to copy the high-technology tactics used successfully by Republicans in 1980 — including heavy reliance on television ads and on computerized direct-mail lists.

Officials of both parties are now generally discounting the effect reapportionment will have on the outcome of the

ARRAIGNED ON MURDER CHARGE. Armenian teen-ager Hampig "Harry" Sassounian, 19, of Pasadena, Calif., is led by sheriff's deputies from the Los Angeles Criminal Courts building Monday after his arraignment on murder charges stemming from last week's shooting of Turkish Consul General Kemal Arkanian in Los Angeles. (AP Laserphoto)

Youth pleads innocent in shooting of consul

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An Armenian-immigrant charged with murdering the Turkish consul general could receive the death penalty if a jury finds him guilty of ambushing and killing the man because of his nationality.

Hampig "Harry" Sassounian pleaded innocent in Municipal Court on Monday to charges of murder and using a handgun while committing a felony.

Los Angeles County District Attorney John Van de Kamp filed the complaint Monday alleging the slaying had two special circumstances which permit the death penalty under California law.

Sassounian, a teen-ager whose relatives have said he was raised with a heritage of bitterness against the Turks, was ordered held without bail because of those circumstances.

He is charged in connection with the shooting death of Consul General Kemal Arkanian at a busy intersection Thursday. Authorities are still seeking another "suspect or suspects" in the slaying.

When asked if the search for additional suspects might mean an eventual conspiracy prosecution, FBI agent Edgar Best replied: "An assassination of this nature takes some planning, and obviously some overt acts. All of those could be construed to form the basis of a conspiracy count."

Best said no links have been discovered between Sassounian and any Armenian nationalist organizations.

Sassounian, 19, of Pasadena, stood with his hands jammed in the pockets of his blue jail-issue jumpsuit during the five-minute arraignment. He spoke only to answer "yes" when asked if he waived reading of the complaint and agreed with the innocent plea entered by his lawyer, Paul Geragos.

Geragos, one of three lawyers representing the youth, told Judge Samuel Mayerson that Sassounian, who was born in Lebanon of Armenian parents, has a language problem and will need an interpreter to translate future proceedings into Armenian.

"We think the case is strong," Assistant Police Chief Wes Harvey said at a news conference Monday. "We do have some physical evidence, some witness descriptions, and this morning we had some favorable witness response as a result of a lineup."

Former commissioner enters guilty plea

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A former Gregg County commissioner has pleaded guilty to accepting a kickback in connection with a federal investigation into corruption among county officials that has netted more than 20 convictions.

Bill Owens, a commissioner for 23 years, pleaded guilty Monday to taking two $1,000 bribes from a Longview heavy equipment dealer for help in securing county contracts.

Under a plea bargain with federal prosecutors, Owens resigned as commissioner and pleaded guilty to one kickback charge. The second charge against him was dropped, and Owens also has agreed to assist federal authorities with their investigation.

U.S. District Judge William Steger deferred sentencing pending a presentencing investigation. Owens was released on a $1,000 personal recognizance bond.

Owens, who had been scheduled to go on trial Monday,

Inflation exploiters are disappearing

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The sober economic outlook has produced an effect that in other times might be considered un-American, but which some think is welcome today. It has undermined some of our great expectations.

Not all of them. The technologists are still drawing up the future on their planning boards, and the think tanks are bursting with innovative concepts. But the inflation exploiters are disappearing like medflies.

What has happened to the sellers of inflation, the people who sent you form letters saying that if you really wanted to be rich quickly you should buy diamonds or gold, or antiques, prints or other collectibles?

Some of them are around still, remaining certain that inflation is inevitable and that it will make them wealthy, and you too, if you'd only listen. But people aren't listening as they did a few years ago, when the rising consumer price index lent credibility to the peddlars.

Some of those who write get-rich newsletters find circulation is down. Some are finding inflated postage costs too much to contend with. Many have been forced to lay low until inflation hysteria is resurrected.

Where are all these new stock issues that double in price before the week and sometimes before the day is out? You don't hear much about them. Promoters of such issues know how hard it is to attract money.

And what happened to that old staple of cocktail parties, the line that began "Do you know what I was offered for my house the other day?" How smoothly it was slipped into the conversation. How practiced the indifference with which the owner dropped the question. What triumph as he witnessed the envy of his listeners. Too bad; no more.

What became of the arrogance of the seller who used to say "That's the price, take it or leave it?" Recently somebody told him "forget it." He'll never get over it. No longer does he maintain even the pose. No longer is he confident he can get his price. Just witness the behavior of automakers. Or real estate agents. Or diamond merchants.

Where are the boasts from labor? Gone. You can't make demands unless someone is buying the goods. Instead, labor negotiators today are often found working with management on the problem of raising productivity, and they are even willing to give back benefits in order to help.

Quick action expected on unemployment funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate leaders say Congress will act swiftly to approve President Reagan's request for $2.3 billion to maintain unemployment benefits for workers victimized by the recession.

But at the same time, the administration says it will fight a move by House Democrats to spend another $123 million on low-income energy assistance.

A House appropriations subcommittee scheduled a session today on both proposals, with a vote expected late in the day. Floor action in the House could come as early as next week.

On the request for $2.3 billion for unemployment costs, one House GOP aide said Monday, "That's in good shape," and should pass quickly. Other Republican and Democratic aides agreed.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the money is needed because "the unemployment rate has risen to a rate higher than assumed."

Joblessness has risen from 7.4 percent a year ago to 8.9 percent last December, and is expected to go higher. Last month, officials estimated that 9.5 million workers were unemployed.

Second venue change sought

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The lawyer who said Rep. Mike Martin needs to get "as close to Alaska as possible, or maybe Hawaii," has filed for a second change of venue in Martin's trial for aggravated perjury.

At lawyer Frank Maloney's request, the Martin trial was moved from Austin to Fredericksburg, 80 miles away, and now Maloney has asked the court to move the trial again.

"Fredericksburg was not a good choice initially," Maloney said Monday.

He said the Austin media, especially television, "had penetrated" the Fredericksburg area. "They (Fredericksburg residents) are really quite sophisticated," he said.

Maloney's motion for another change of venue is expected to be heard at the pre-trial hearing in Fredericksburg on March 15.

Martin, R-Longview, faces an aggravated perjury indictment charging he lied to Travis County grand jurors when he denied staging his own shooting.

Maloney said the decision to ask for another change of venue was made after a survey was taken in Fredericksburg of the possible effects of pre-trial publicity.

Rising interest rates threaten to prolong nation's recession

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A resurgence in interest rates has sent the prime rate climbing and heightened concern that the recession will worsen.

Citibank, the nation's second-largest bank, raised its prime lending rate to 16.5 percent Monday from the 15.75 percent rate that had prevailed in the industry since Dec. 1. No. 12 Crocker National Bank followed Citibank's lead.

Interest rates rose for the fourth straight week at the Treasury Department's weekly auction of three- and six-month bills, climbing to their highest levels since Oct. 5, 1981. The Treasury auctioned about $10 billion in bills Monday and is scheduled to auction $10 billion in notes and bonds later this week to help finance the federal deficit.

On the New York Stock Exchange, interest rate jitters sent prices tumbling, with the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks plummeting 19.41 points to close at 851.69, the steepest one-day slide in more than five months. Bond and gold bullion prices fell and the dollar soared.

The prime rate, the base upon which banks compute interest charges on short-term business loans to their most credit-worthy borrowers, reached a record 21.5 percent in December 1980. It stood as high as 20.5 percent between July and September of last year before falling as low as 15.5 percent at two banks last November.

One reason for Monday's jump in the prime rate was a persistent increase in the interest on federal funds, the overnight loans of uncommitted reserves among financial institutions and an important source of money for banks. Federal funds traded at an average 12.04 percent in the week ending Dec. 9, 1981, climbed to an average 13.98 percent in the week ending last Wednesday, and traded as high as 15.75 percent on Monday.

Concern over the course of interest rates has heightened as the Federal Reserve Board continues to report greater-than-desired growth of the nation's money supply and the U.S. Treasury steps up its borrowing to finance a record-high government deficit.

The Fed seeks to provide enough money to stimulate economic growth without fueling inflation. Its policymaking arm is to meet in Washington today to review targets for monetary growth amid concern that it will take a more restrictive stance to curb the growth of the money supply. The central bank does not make its decisions public for more than a month.

New area phone codes for Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — Rapid population growth in the Houston area has forced Southwestern Bell to create a new telephone area code in southeastern Texas, officials said.

The change, which will affect only customers now in the 713 area code, will become effective in March 1983, said telephone company spokesman Ken Brasel.

Houston and 29 nearby cities will keep the 713 area code, while the much larger surrounding area will be assigned the new area code 409, Brasel said.

"If we hadn't done this we would have flat run out of numbers," he said.

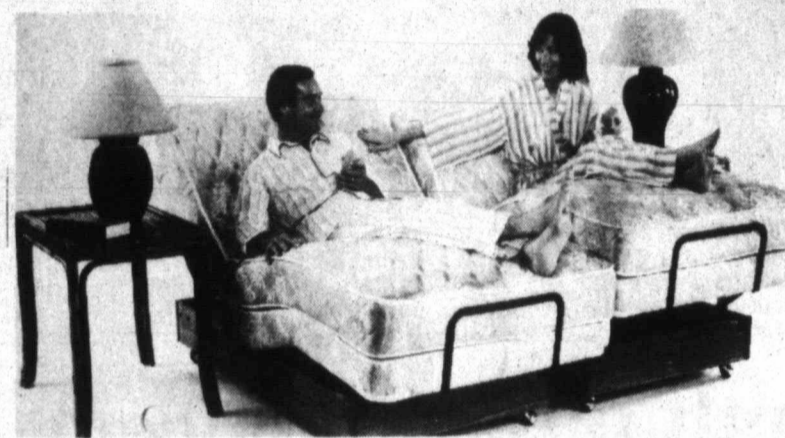

The new 409 code will be assigned to about 180 cities outside the metropolitan Houston area, leaving a 713 area code "island" with Houston at its center.

The change will leave about 400,000 telephone numbers in the 409 area, with more than a million in the scaled-down 713 code.

Brasel said the change will not affect any seven-digit local telephone numbers.

The growth we have experienced in the past few years and that we expect in the future is going to create the need for new telephone numbers," he said.

Prince to testify as trial begins

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The jury sitting in judgment on Claus von Bulow is beginning his trial fresh from a tour of the seaside mansion where the wife he is accused of trying to kill was found in a deep coma, lying on a marble bathroom floor.

The newly sworn-in jurors walked past sparkling snow into the house Monday, more solemn than tourists, and were shown the rooms where the state alleges von Bulow tried to inject Martha "Sunny" von Bulow with a fatal dose of insulin and barbiturates.

The prosecution and the defense were to present their opening arguments today, and then the state planned to call as its first witness Prince Alexander G. von Auersperg, von Bulow's stepson.

Von Bulow, a Danish-born financial consultant, is accused of twice trying to kill his wife out of love for another woman and greed for his wife's $35 million fortune. The alleged attempts on his wife's life came during Christmas visits to Newport in 1979 and 1980, prosecutors say.

Von Auersperg has said that during a night search of his stepfather's locked closet, he and a private investigator found a black bag containing an insulin-tainted hypodermic needle.

The state claims an insulin injection caused Mrs. von Bulow's blood sugar to fall to a dangerous level, leaving her in a coma from which she is not expected to recover.

The defense claims she brought on the coma herself by ignoring medical advice to abstain from sweets and alcohol.

The gates of the von Bulow mansion, Clarendon Court, were battened down for the winter with green-painted plywood when the seven men and five women of the jury arrived for their tour of the mansion, which was built at the turn of the century and stands beside other luxurious homes in Millionaires' Row. Jurors used a side entrance in the vine-covered, 8-foot wall to get inside for the 25-minute tour.

Reagan takes over O'Neill's office

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan wasn't content with just trying to win over House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill's Democratic troops for his economic program. He wanted to use O'Neill's office as well.

Reagan borrowed the room last week for 20 minutes while he awaited his cue to enter the House chamber to deliver his State of the Union address.

O'Neill was presiding over the House at the time, so Reagan ended up presiding over a room full of O'Neill aides and their spouses.

O'Neill aide Chris Matthews gave this account: "This is the room from which we fought against you, Mr. President." Reagan was informed.

The chief executive grinned and responded, "Not after six."

He reminded O'Neill's staff of the speaker's oft-repeated claim that in Washington, battling Democrats and Republicans become social friends each day after 6 p.m.

Then after some banter with the O'Neill aides, Reagan did what their boss often does in the same office — recited Irish poetry and told Irish jokes.

Some of the jokes were ones O'Neill tells regularly himself.

But the president put on a brogue. He sounded very Irish. O'Neill doesn't talk with a brogue," Matthews said.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., has a new idea for saving tax dollars: Do away with middle initials in government publications.

"I have not calculated the potential savings but it could be significant," he said.

Baker joked about the proposal after the Senate's year-end report came out the other day with the notation on the cover that it was submitted by "the Honorable Howard N. Baker."

MAKING BREAD — In the 1900s girls in household science classes learned to bake bread from a basic recipe; today's yeast loaves have many variations. Illustration from the culinary collection of Cecily Brownstone, Associated Press Food Editor.

Dr. Lamb

Infant can be affected by smoke

DEAR DR. LAMB — My daughter-in-law gave birth to a beautiful daughter, but I am concerned about the baby. My daughter-in-law is nursing her. I'm worried because she smokes. Doesn't this affect the baby? She also smoked when she was pregnant.

DEAR READER — In general, I believe a healthy mother is more apt to have a healthy child. Healthy includes not smoking. Studies do show that as a group babies born to smoking mothers have lower birth weight and a higher percentage have convulsions, which, of course, does not mean that all babies born to smoking mothers will have a problem.

Many things an adult smokes and tolerates cannot be tolerated as well by the immature defense mechanisms of the still developing baby. In addition smoking may damage the placenta that provides circulation to the baby.

After birth, the baby has the same problem as other nonsmokers forced to breathe a smoker's polluted air. It is roughly equivalent to being a mild smoker yourself. And milk does concentrate some substances in it. Cow's milk in the United States today contains lots of iodine because the iodine is in the cow's food and then is concentrated in the milk.

Don't overreact, as your granddaughter will probably grow up beautiful and healthy. But she would be better off not exposed to cigarette smoke.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can you please explain pericarditis, its causes, treatment, cure and can it leave damage or recur? Are drugs used to treat this useful or do they leave side effects?

DEAR READER — Keep in mind that "itis" means inflammation. The pericardium is the sac-like structure around (peri) the heart (cardia). It looks a lot like plastic wrap from the kitchen. When this membrane is inflamed, it is pericarditis.

Actually the inflammation does involve the surface of the heart muscle beneath the pericardial membrane. So it is also a myocarditis. The extent of muscle involvement may determine how severe a problem it is. Fluid may accumulate in the sac and can cause pressure on the heart.

There are many causes for such an inflammation. It usually occurs over the area of muscle injury after an acute heart attack. It can occur from a viral infection. And in some cases the cause of the inflammation is not known.

Treatment depends upon what the cause is. Since we do not have medicines that are really effective against all viruses, it is clear we are limited in what can be done. Most milder cases recover without complications. It can recur but often does not. Again it depends a lot on the cause of the inflammation. If cortisone is used to control the inflammation, you may have temporary complications from cortisone.

Low-Sodium Cheese Bread

Associated Press Food Editor
About a year ago Mrs. Mary Greene, the chief recipe tester in my kitchen, suggested we work out a really good recipe for a low-sodium yeast bread. Fortunately we were able to do just that and to pass along the recipe in this column.

Recently Mrs. Greene and I decided to work out a formula for a low-sodium cheese yeast bread. If you try the following recipe for these loaves we hope you will be as satisfied with them as we are. They have an open texture and make very crisp toast.

Two notes. If the unsalted Gouda-style cheese is unavailable in your markets, try using any other unsalted semisoft bland cheese that is available. In buttering the loaf pans for use in the recipe, we used unsalted butter not only for its flavor but because it helps the bottom and sides of the loaves brown.

LOW-SODIUM CHEESE BREAD
2 envelopes dry yeast
2 teaspoons sugar
1 cup warm (105 to 115 degrees) water
4 ounces unsalted Gouda-type or similar cheese (1 cup loosely packed)
5 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup ice-cold water
In a pint measure dissolve the yeast and sugar in the warm water. In a food processor bowl (5-cup capacity) with the medium shredding disc, shred the cheese; remove the disc and insert the dough-kneading blade. Add 4 cups of the flour; process for 20 seconds. With the machine running, through the feed tube, pour the yeast mixture, then the ice-cold water, in a steady stream so that the flour mixture absorbs the liquids in 25 to 30 seconds. Uncover and add the remaining cup of flour; process for 45 to 60 seconds to knead dough. Remove dough to a greased bowl; turn to grease top; cover bowl with saran; let rise in a draft-free 80-degree place until doubled — 1 hour.

BEDWETTER
LET THEM HAVE A DRY BED

The greatest gift you can give a bedwetter and the rest of the family, too, is an end to this serious problem, and make no mistake, bedwetting is serious. It can cause complicated psychological problems that last a lifetime. It's so needless because bedwetting, when not caused by organic defect or disease, can be ended. Send for our free brochure, "Bedwetting — What It's All About and How To End It", a report by two medical doctors. No obligation.

Cat's hair covers gourmets' flair

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A charming young married couple we know well are both gourmet cooks, college graduates and from well-to-do families. They enjoy entertaining and do it with great style — setting their table with the finest china, crystal and silver.

The problem: They have two long-haired cats who have the run of the house. I have seen these cats walk all over the countertops in the kitchen, sniffing the food, lying down and shaking themselves while this couple prepares the food. Naturally, an occasional cat hair is found in the food. We find this most unappetizing, and so do others who have eaten there.

Many of their friends are beginning to decline their invitations. It is so sad to see an intelligent couple with so much to offer losing friends by such carelessness.

Isn't this unhygienic? Or are we being too finicky?
CARING FRIENDS

DEAR CARING: Although I doubt if a cat hair (or a human hair, for that matter) ever killed anybody, the appearance of same could easily kill one's appetite. As good friends, you should be able to talk candidly to them about their carelessness. Speak up, and don't pussyfoot around.

...

DEAR ABBY: I'm 39, divorced, have four kids, am on welfare and I think I'm pregnant again. That's bad enough, but what's really bothering me is my hair won't hold a perm. Can you please advise me?
ELAINE IN LOUISVILLE

DEAR ELAINE: First, see a doctor. It could be due to your physical condition. If it's not that, inquire at a beauty parlor that specializes in hair care.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the letter from "Confused in Indiana": She complained that some people "have so little respect for the dead that they would bury a spouse in the afternoon and dance the same evening."

Abby, there are many reasons why the widowed woman would "celebrate" the death of her husband. One may be that she hated his guts for a long time but couldn't divorce him because of her religion.

Personally, I think the death of a loved one is a time to celebrate, not a time to cry from selfish grief if the person who dies is out of pain and misery at last.

Incidentally, I am 13, and my folks agree with my views. They both want big parties after their funeral services.
KATY

DEAR KATY: Thanks for writing. I wish more young people would express their views.

...

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for sending the booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know." It was the best $2 I ever spent. I have already witnessed a miracle. My 15-year-old son not on... read it, but passed it around in a class at school.

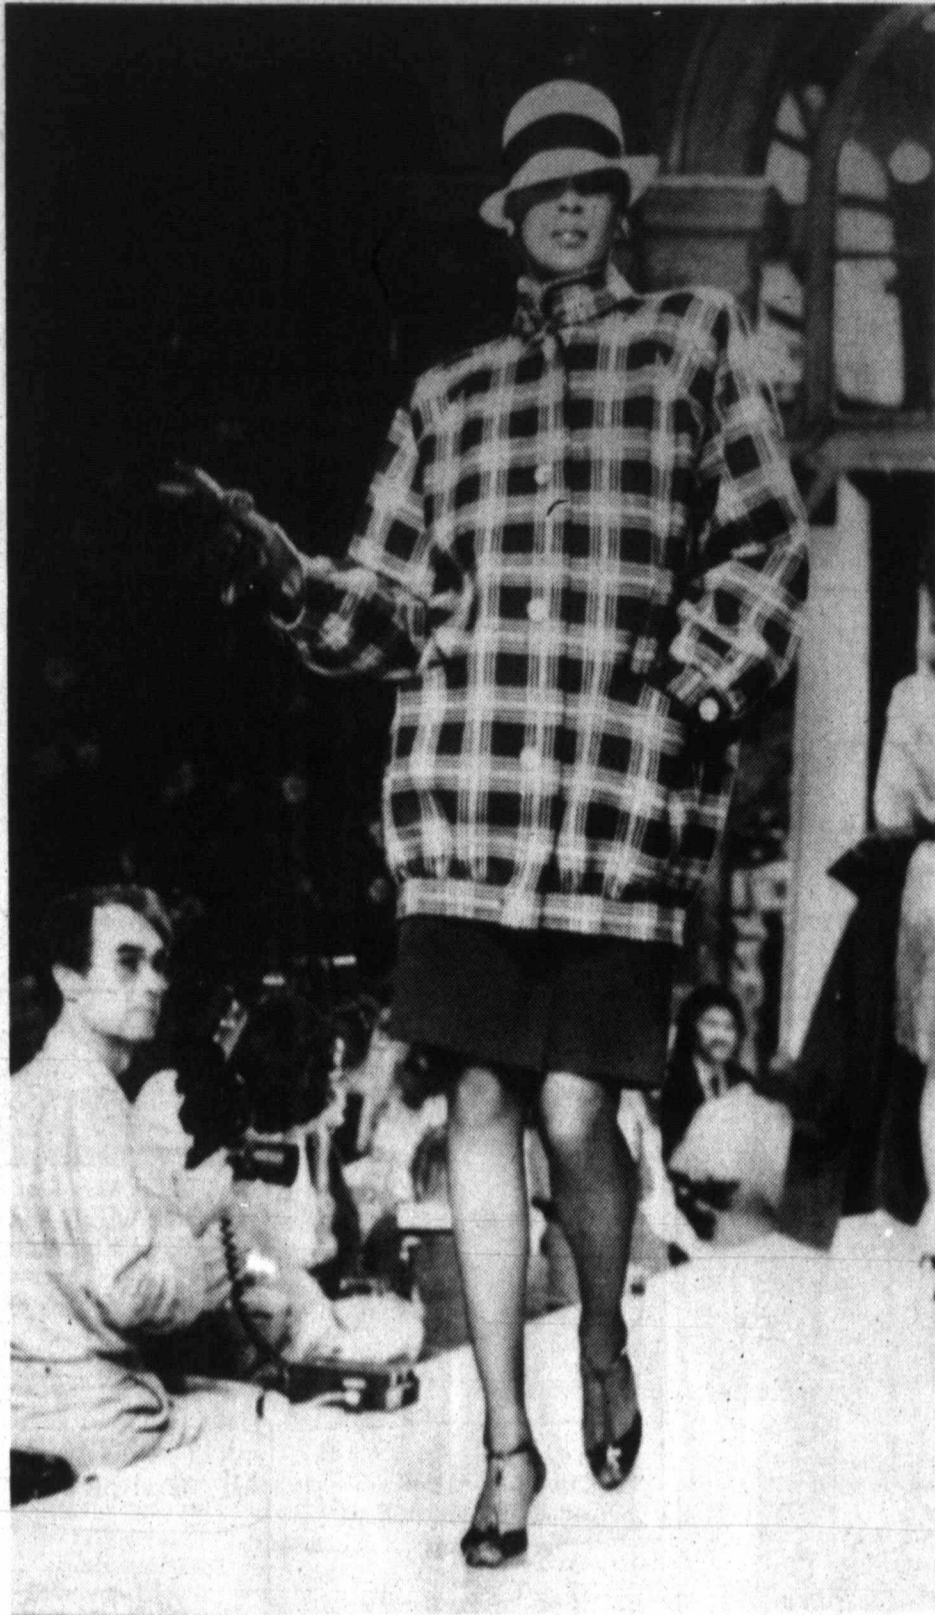

Normally he reads only under duress from parents or the night before finals. Now his secret is out. At least one teacher and about 15 kids know he can read.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

Astro-graph
by bernice bede osol

This could be a very exciting year for you socially. You are likely to enlarge your circle of friends or become involved with a brand new group.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't let serious matters overwhelm you today. By the same token, don't treat them frivolously. Going overboard in either direction could cause failure. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in each of the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're basically very kind and helpful, and an associate who is aware of this may try to use you today to advance his or her purposes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be wary of the topics you choose in discussions with friends today. Politics or religion are among the sensitive issues which might lead to heated debate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be sure you have the best counsel available if you have to make important legal or financial decisions today. Wrong advice could prove costly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) One-to-one relationships could be filled with more stress than usual today. Keep this in mind so that you don't get off on the wrong foot, either with your mate or coworkers.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be helpful to others today, but by the same token, don't get too deeply involved in their complicated affairs. It may be difficult to extricate yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If two friends have a disagreement today, be careful you're not caught in the middle or put in a position where you have to choose a side.

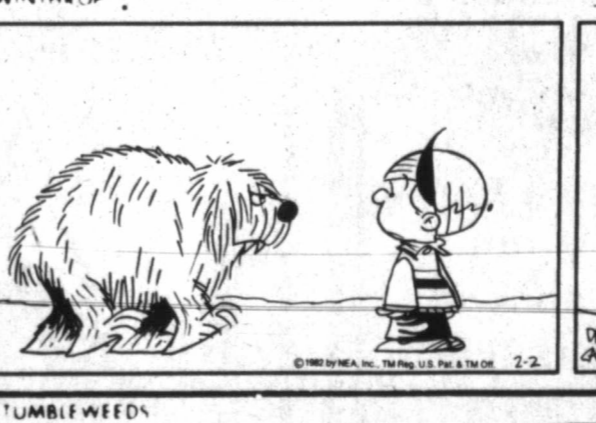

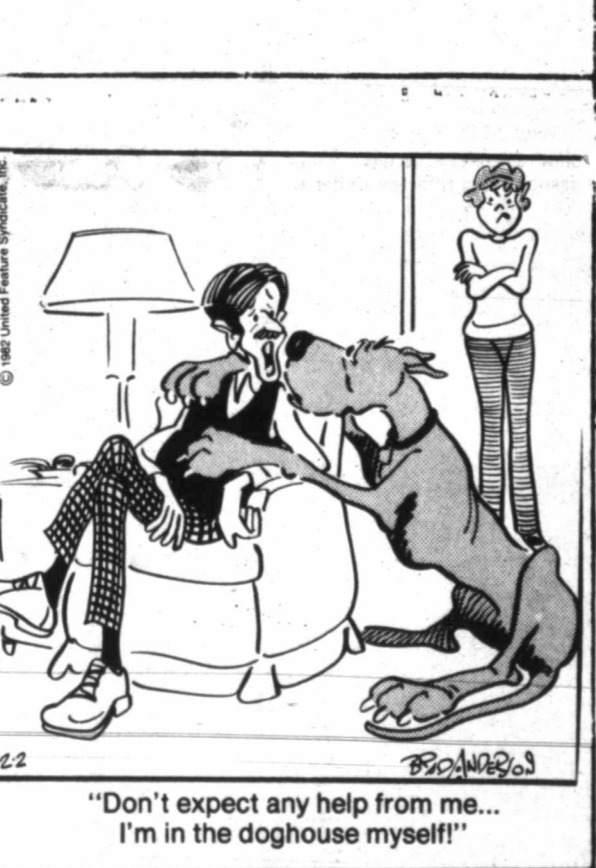

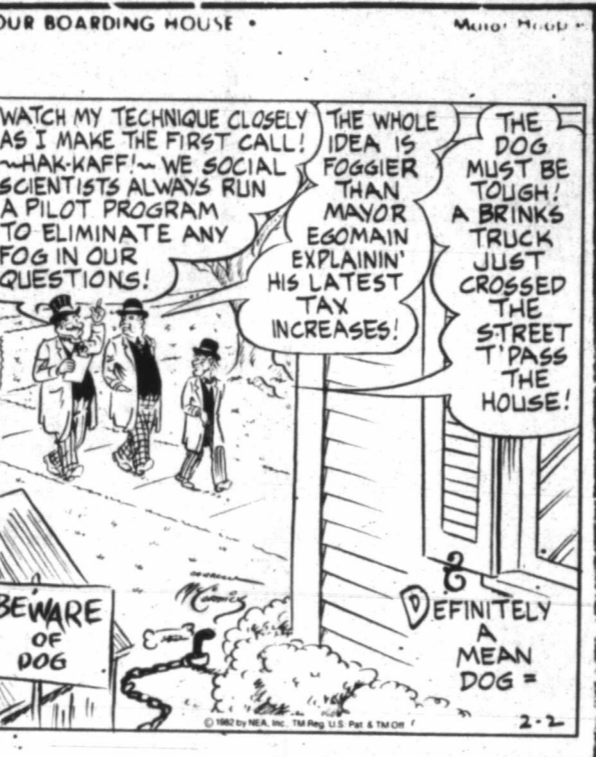

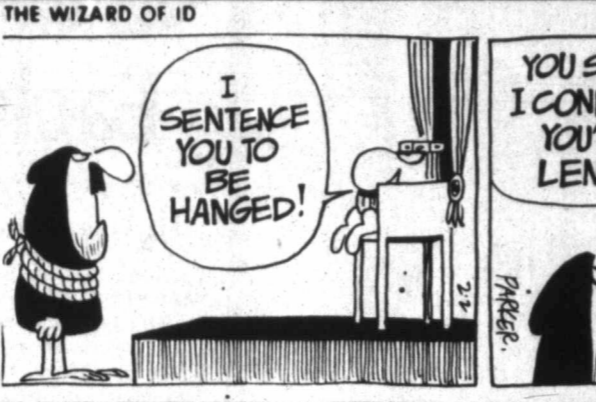

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Normally, when you promise others you're going to do something your word can be relied upon. Today, you might make commitments which you could fail to fulfill.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your sales resistance could be rather high today. There's a possibility you might be talked into something which won't serve your best interests.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Beware of a tendency today to see things as you would like them to be rather than as they really are. This outlook could cause you to make costly mistakes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Important decisions should not be based upon hunches or intuition today. Weigh every aspect before rendering a judgment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Uncharacteristically, today you may look to reap a harvest from areas in which you have not sown. This is not a day for getting something for nothing.

Problems for Japanese youth returning home

By DEBORAH SMITH
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — The estimated 7,700 Japanese children who return each year from living abroad often find themselves misfits in their own country. Some are unable to communicate well enough in Japanese to enter the most competitive schools.

Criticized abroad as being clannish, the Japanese come home to discover that their foreign experience isolates them from neighbors, classmates and business associates — leading them to feel like aliens despite Japan's vigorous "internationalization" campaign.

Some 30,000 Japanese youngsters yearly live abroad with their families. Back home, they face educational and social barriers, largely brought about by limited language ability and differences in the way they think, scholars say.

One repatriated mother said her children came home from school in tears, upset at being called "foreigners" and laughed at by their classmates. Another said returnees "must discard their uniqueness" to be accepted.

Michiko Yawata, who returned with her husband and two children after three years in California, said, "The children lose their identity. It's sad because they grew up (in America) to be very individual and free. But once back in Japan you must disappear, lose yourself."

The problem is not confined to students. Entire families face sometimes difficult social adjustments on re-entry into Japan's homogeneous society, with its stress on group action and peer pressure, says Dr. Hiroshi Inamura, a psychiatrist and university professor.

Higher prices, lower salaries without overseas allowances and smaller living quarters in Japan contribute to the frustration, he said. A returning businessman must regain his colleagues' trust, drinking with them after work — which in turn strains the family relationship — while a wife may miss the personal interests she had while living abroad.

Abroad, "The way of thinking, expression is different," Inamura said in an interview. "The face is Japanese but the way of thinking is not. In Japanese companies cooperation is valued. Everyone works together. Japanese want to feel as if they share one heart."

Inamura noted that in Japan, a university degree largely determines the course of a person's life: employment, even marriage, and Japanese companies generally hire only graduates of Japanese universities.

Thus for returning students, school is especially hard. Written Japanese — with more than 2,000 characters in daily use — is often an obstacle to passing vital, and tough, entrance exams to prestigious universities that virtually guarantee employment security.

A steady rise in the number of Japanese going abroad has led scholars to question the fairness of the exam-oriented system which begins as early as grammar school. A few universities have revised entrance procedures; others have created special programs.

Worried that prolonged stays abroad hurt their children's chances to compete, some parents choose to live apart, keeping their children, especially sons, in school here.

"Usually parents who go abroad are intelligent, graduates of good universities, and want their children to enter the same level universities so they try to enroll them in good high schools," Inamura said. "But no matter how hard the child studies abroad, he is not prepared for the exams."

Anne Murase, a university lecturer, said, "It is a real problem for most of the families from the Foreign Ministry or big trading companies who are well-educated and socially aggressive. If the child does not get into a good university, it is a setback for the family."

Inamura said, "If the child goes through high school abroad, his life — university education, employment, marriage — becomes centered abroad. For the sake of internationalism,

Spring won't bring economic recovery

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Spring, when the first crocuses of business recovery were supposed to peak through the ice and snow of recession, is only seven weeks away by the calendar, but not by the economic forecasters.

"They are postponing the recovery, pushing it back into summer and maybe beyond," observes Edward Yardeni, the E.F. Hutton Co. economist, in a comment that isn't entirely about the Chinese new year. "We no longer expect an economic recovery starting in early spring," he told customers of the securities firm in a dispatch dated Jan. 29.

Allen Sinai, economist at Data Resources, the Lexington, Mass. numbers factory, sees a clash resulting from a tight federal reserve policy, a very weak economy and a potentially stimulative fiscal policy.

"The prime rate must now certainly rise again," he said on Jan. 25. Within the next week, he said, it will rise probably to 16 1/4 percent, and maybe higher, "unless the monetary aggregates begin to decline again, quickly."

Aggregates? Call them the money supply numbers.

On the same day, economists at the Bank of New York advised their customers that "recent projections of a bottoming in the current recession seem premature." Almost nobody but the federal government, they said in effect, is able to spend money to keep things going.

State and local governments, "are not expected to produce much of a stimulus," according to the bank economists. Neither are consumers, who "are still suffering from a negative wealth effect." And the same, they say, is true for industry, where plant utilization rates are too low and interest rates too high for any help to be forthcoming.

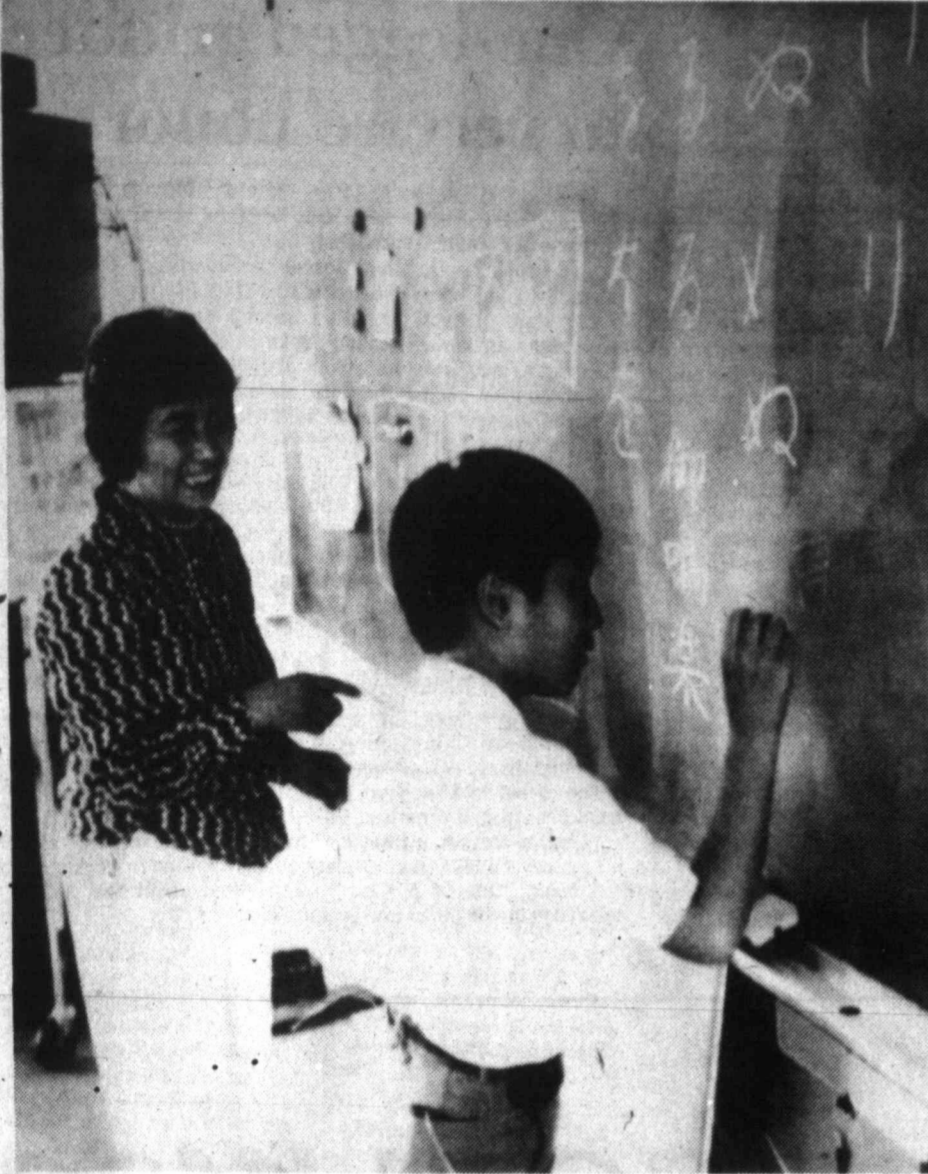

Much of the feeling about a slow recovery arises from assumptions that the Federal Reserve will pursue tight money. Mixed attitudes result: A steady money supply is felt to be necessary if economic health is to be restored; but it also creates worries that pressure on the economy while it is already in recession might bring on depression.

costs $12,000 to $20,000 to set up a blackjack operation. The state allows the groups 35 percent for operating costs and collects a 5 percent tax which goes into the general revenue fund.

Some operators say 35 percent is not enough and others would like to see the 2 limit increased. Meanwhile, Comy said he's received calls and letters from people who wonder whether the state has gone too far.

State Attorney General Robert Wefald knows of four violations. One club manager misused money and two other clubs ran gambling activities not specified under the law. A Fargo man was charged in December with keeping around $5,000 from a tip jar and bingo operation.

PROBLEMS IN RETURNING. A young Japanese, who recently returned home from abroad, learns Japanese writing at a special classroom in Tokyo. Each year an estimated 7,700 Japanese children return home from living abroad to face educational and social barriers brought about by limited language ability and differences in the way they think, scholars report.

Blackjack fever in North Dakota

By PHYLLIS MENSING
Associated Press Writer
FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Swearing is discouraged, the music is likely to be a local band, and the drinking is controlled, but on most nights, the blackjack tables are crowded in North Dakota bars and motels.

The betting limit is $2 a hand. If you lose, the money goes to charity.

Since the state put blackjack on its charitable gambling list in July, more than 300 playing sites have been opened across the state by service groups ranging from a community theater to the state's public television network to the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Fargo, a city of 62,000 on the Minnesota border, is suddenly seeing tourists from neighboring Minneapolis and Winnipeg, Manitoba come to play blackjack. "It's cheaper than Las Vegas," said one customer.

Bar sales are climbing and at least one motel has built a new addition just for blackjack tables.

North Dakota lawmakers are surprised at its success. "We were looking for a way to allow people to do legally what they will do anyway — gamble — and for a way to help out the charities," said state Rep. Pat Comy, a co-sponsor of the blackjack law. "We didn't think blackjack would be so popular. We were awfully naive."

The bars and motels lease sections of their establishments to the service groups. Larger motels have from six to 15 tables in the bar area, where players trade names and make small talk as the cards fall. Profanity is frowned upon, and pit bosses firmly escort those who have had too much to drink away from the table.

"You can maybe win $100 or $200, but with a $2 betting limit you have to play quite awhile," said Duane Hoppe, who drops into a local tavern three or four times a week to play blackjack.

"I just play for the heck of it, not to win a bunch of money," said the tall bar manager from Moorhead, Minn.

He says bars in Moorhead, across the Red River from Fargo, have lost business because of blackjack, although they still get the college crowd because Minnesota's drinking age is 19 and North Dakota's is 21.

"It's still too early to tell how much it's increased our business. But we are seeing a number of people staying longer," one Fargo motel manager said.

Bob Myers, general manager of the Fargo-Moorhead Community Theater, said the theater's decision to sponsor gambling at a motel was based on economics.

"We realized federal cutbacks were on the way and that our public sources were drying up," he said. "We felt our ability to deliver services would be severely hampered — especially our children's theater — and that we might be forced to raise ticket prices to the point where they would not be affordable."

With only a month's experience, the theater can't say yet how successful its gambling operation has been. Myers said, but "the trend is good."

Dave Drenth, who manages the theater's tables at the Doublewood Inn, said even casino operators from Las Vegas were curious. "I think they expected wooden floors and spittoons," Drenth said. "They said it looked nice, but they didn't seem worried about too much competition from us."

Roxanna Clower, who runs a dealers school in Fargo, estimates 350 people have taken the 32-hour course since it started in May. She's taught many college students, a few lawyers and several grandmothers.

"People need jobs and the hours are flexible," she said. Starting salaries vary, but dealers can make $8 or $9 an hour including tips. They work an average of 30 hours a week.

Fargo Chamber of Commerce Director Ken Larsen said he has no direct figures, but "I suppose when you consider the number of tables and the people needed for each table, it does add up to quite a few part-time jobs."

Charitable gambling brought in $3.5 million in gross receipts last year between July and September. That compares with $4.9 million during the first half of 1981, before blackjack was legal. Bingo, raffles, and sports pools were allowed earlier.

Pampa can claim first-half loop championship tonight

Pampa and Amarillo High, both unbeaten in District 3-5A play, could decide the first-half championship at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Sandies' gym.

Pampa owns a 21-3 overall mark and is 3-0 in district play while Amarillo High is 17-5 and 2-0. A Pampa win would give the Harvesters the first-half crown outright. An Amarillo High win would give the Sandies a share of the first-half title and a win Friday night over Palo Duro would give them the undisputed crown.

The Sandies use accurate shooting and balanced scoring attack to offset a height disadvantage. Their tallest player is listed at 6-2.

"Shooting has been their strongpoint," Pampa coach Garland Nichols said. "We're just going to go out and play our game and hope for the best."

Pampa's game consists of a fast break offense, deadeye shooting and awesome rebounding. Those assets have helped the Harvesters climb to a No. 7 ranking in this week's Class 5A state schooboy poll.

Most of Pampa's scoring attack has been carried by the threesome of 6-3 junior Mike Nelson (20.6 ppg), 6-4 senior Charles Nelson (17.9 ppg) and 6-4 senior Terry Faggins (13.4 ppg). But 6-6 sophomore Coyle Winborn is starting to come into his own, especially on the boards. Winborn, who is averaging 7.4 ppg, pulled down 16 rebounds in Pampa's 70-52 district win over Palo Duro to go along with 13 points.

An Amarillo High threesome—guards Lance Simpson and Raynard Scott and 6-2 forward Tony Gilbreath—could pose problems for the Harvesters.

"These three are their main players," Nichols said. "We'll have to stop them to win."

In girls' district action, Pampa (4-21) plays host to first-half champion Amarillo High (23-0) at 7:45 p.m. tonight in Harvester Fieldhouse.

Pampa wins two games in Optimist girls tourney

By BOB DIXON
Pampa News Correspondent

Competition got underway Monday night at Optimist Gym in the grade school girls' basketball tournament with three games being played.

The evening was highlighted by a closely-played game between Pampa Maroon and Amarillo Puckett. The Maroon trailed throughout the contest until early in the fourth quarter when they pulled ahead on a field goal and a converted foul shot by Keitha Clark and the Maroon went on to post a 16-14 victory.

The game was close throughout as Puckett held a 6-4 first-quarter lead and then held the Maroon scoreless in the second frame to take an 8-4 halftime lead. The Maroon outscored Puckett, 6-4, the third stanza and only trailed by two going into the fourth.

With only 15 seconds gone by in the fourth, Deanya Waters hit two foul shots to tie the contest. Puckett's Michelle White hit a goal to give the visitors the lead once more, making the score, 14-12, in favor of Puckett. Waters hit another foul shot cutting the lead to one, then Clark hit a foul shot with 2:45 to go, then won the game with a field goal with less than one minute remaining in the contest.

Clark led all scorers with nine points, followed by Waters with seven. White, with six points, led Puckett in the scoring column.

In earlier contests, Borger beat Pampa, 21-10. The leading scorers were Sandy Flue with 10 for Pampa, while Leslie McQueen had nine for the Red.

Pampa Green won over Amarillo, 27-10, with Hope Henson leading the way with 13 points. Kristi Roe had eight points for the Green also. Toni Garcia had seven for Amarillo.

Tonight's games will start at 5:45 p.m. with Pampa Blue tangling with Pampa Gold. At 7 p.m., Pampa Red will meet Amarillo in a loser's bracket game, then at 8:15 p.m., Pampa Green will play Borger in a winner's bracket contest.

The double-elimination tournament will continue throughout the week and will conclude Saturday night with the championship contest.

One-legged gridder to receive honor

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — As a boy playing football in Florida, Carl Joseph says kids used to complain that his artificial leg would scratch them up.

"So I took it off," said Joseph, a month shy of his 21st birthday. "And I played better with it off than with it on."

Last year, Joseph logged the second-most game action of any freshman on the Bethune-Cookman College football team. He did it as a reserve linebacker, playing on one leg.

On Monday night, the 78th annual Philadelphia Sports Writers' Association presented him with the Most Courageous Athlete Award.

"I guess if they say I'm courageous, then I am," said the soft-spoken and shy Joseph. "But I don't want what people will give me. I want to get it myself."

In high school, Joseph — born without a left leg — earned 13 letters. He high-jumped 5 feet, 11 inches to win a meet, though he'd never tried the sport before.

He can dunk a basketball, bench-press 350 pounds and run a mile in under six minutes. Even so, he has to keep proving himself on the football field.

"When I got there," he recalled of his first practice at the Daytona Beach, Fla., college, "the team took it light on me. But I told them I came to play football, not to jive around."

The 6-foot-2, 220-pound Joseph says he got no special treatment from his mother.

"I had to treat him just like I treated my nine others," said his mother, Gladys Davis. "I let him know he had to work."

A book, "One Of A Kind," was written about him and a television movie about him is being shot.

Monday's sports in brief

DETROIT (AP) — Dianne Fromholtz of Australia easily beat Sandy Collins 6-4, 6-1 in a first-round match in the $150,000 Avon Tennis Championships of Detroit.

In other first-round matches, 12th-ranked Virginia Ruzici of Romania defeated Glynis Coles of England 6-4, 6-1; Yvonne Vermaak of South Africa outlasted Andrea Leand 4-6, 7-6, 7-6, and JoAnne Russell battled back to beat Duk Hee Lee of South Korea 4-6, 6-2, 6-0.

HOCKEY
MONTREAL (AP) — Center Pierre Larouche of the Hartford Whalers edged high-scoring Wayne Gretzky and six other candidates to win the National Hockey League's Player of the Week award for the period ending Jan. 31.

Georgia cager leads nation in scoring

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — In the lesser-known world of small-college basketball, Ray Smith is quietly writing the 1981-82 record book.

A junior college standout, the 6-foot-7 power forward from Greer, S.C., is leading the nation in scoring in all college divisions. He was averaging 30.9 points per game for the 13-10 Armstrong State Pirates before he was held to just 22 points in an 89-77 victory over Hartwick College of Oneonta, N.Y., Monday night.

His 15.3 rebounds per game is third in the nation and he wants to be first in that category. He's scored 30 points 13 times and no team has held him to fewer than 20 points and only once to fewer than 10 rebounds.

The powerful inside performer from Florida's Pensacola Junior College picked Armstrong State, enrollment about 2,800, over the major colleges such as Auburn and Clemson.

"What I want most out of the season is to get to the playoffs and play well," Smith said. "If we do that, I'll be pretty satisfied. I just want to go through the season where I average 17 or 18 rebounds and get my share of points."

"Really, the rebounding means more to me than the scoring," he said. "I'd like to lead the nation in rebounding."

Armstrong State is a member of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, which does not require junior college transfers to carry a 2.0 grade point average or to sit out a year as does the National Collegiate Athletics Association.

"I didn't want to sit out," Smith said. "I think it would have been the worst thing ever for me to be sitting around while knowing I could be playing somewhere. I couldn't have done it."

"We recruited him all season," said Auburn Coach Sonny Smith. "We thought he was an outstanding player. He is a Division I talent. We just couldn't get him in school. I thought he could contribute at any major college. He would have been an excellent major-college player."

Armstrong Coach George Bianchi saw Smith in a tournament last year in Florida.

"We sent him some things about our program, but figured a major college would grab the powerful inside enforcer," Bianchi said. But last September, Bianchi got a phone call from a friend in Florida telling him Smith would be ineligible for the NCAA this season.

"I called him and told him about Armstrong and then went up to Greer to talk to him and his mother. I tried to sell him on the idea that he could play here this year and on our style of play," which presents opportunities for high scoring, Bianchi said. "We've turned out some pro prospects, that might have made him choose us over some other NAIA school."

Aggies roll past hapless Houston, 95-77

By The Associated Press
Texas A&M rode the hot hand of Claude Riley to an easy win over Houston and share of the Southwest Conference basketball lead on a night when the injury-troubled Texas Longhorns dropped their third game in a row.
Riley pumped in 38 points as the Aggies handed Houston its fifth loss in six games with a 95-77 decision Monday night.
Texas Christian nudged Baylor 83-80 Monday night, but the surprise was the way unheralded Rice manhandled the fifth-ranked Longhorns 80-49.
"This is not the first time we've played this well," said Rice Coach Tommy Suits. "We played some other games on the road but this is just the first time the home crowd has seen it."
Texas Coach Abe Lemons said he was not embarrassed by the season's worst defeat for the Longhorns, who are trying to recover from the loss of forward Mike Wacker.

"I've never been humiliated over a basketball game. Turning against your country might be humiliating, but not losing a basketball game," said Lemons.
"Things are so different now, you just can't put a team together overnight, it just doesn't work that way," Lemons said.
The Owls hit 80 percent of their shots in the first 10 minutes of the game and the stunned Longhorns could never recover.
"Any time you play Texas you've got to make some outside shots," Suits said. "Before the game, I was worried about our scoring but it turned out differently, didn't it?"
Rice's Rickey Pierce, the nation's No. 2 scorer, led the assault with 32 points. But the Owls also got 18 points from Bobby Tudor.
The Longhorns were led by Denard Holmes with 19 points and LaSalle Thompson with 13.

Riley got 14 of his points in the first half as the Aggies broke open a close game and took a 44-35 lead at intermission.
"Claude Riley was just tremendous tonight," said Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf. "He did everything right. ... There are a lot of peaks and valleys in this game, but tonight we climbed the peak."
Rudy Woods added 15 points for the Aggies and the Cougars could draw no closer than eight points in the second half.
The win was the sixth in the last seven games for the Aggies and their 6-2 SWC record put them in a first place tie with Arkansas.
"We were completely outplayed tonight. Our big men were dominated for the first time all year," said Houston Coach Guy Lewis.

NEA award

Ken Anderson is top NFLer

By Murray Olderman
CINCINNATI (NEA) — Ken Anderson, the quarterback of the Cincinnati Bengals, was today acclaimed the outstanding player of the 1981 National Football League season, the winner of the 27th annual Jim Thorpe Trophy.

The award by Newspaper Enterprise Association is based on a collective vote of the head coaches, team captains and player representatives of all 28 NFL squads.

The chief challengers for Anderson in this year's balloting were running back Tony Dorsett of the Dallas Cowboys and quarterback Joe Montana of the San Francisco 49ers.

The Jim Thorpe Trophy was inaugurated by NEA in 1955. Its recipients read like a roll call of the game's greats — eight of them are now enshrined in the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Last year's winner was Earl Campbell of the Houston Oilers. It was the third season in a row that he had been named Player of the Year.

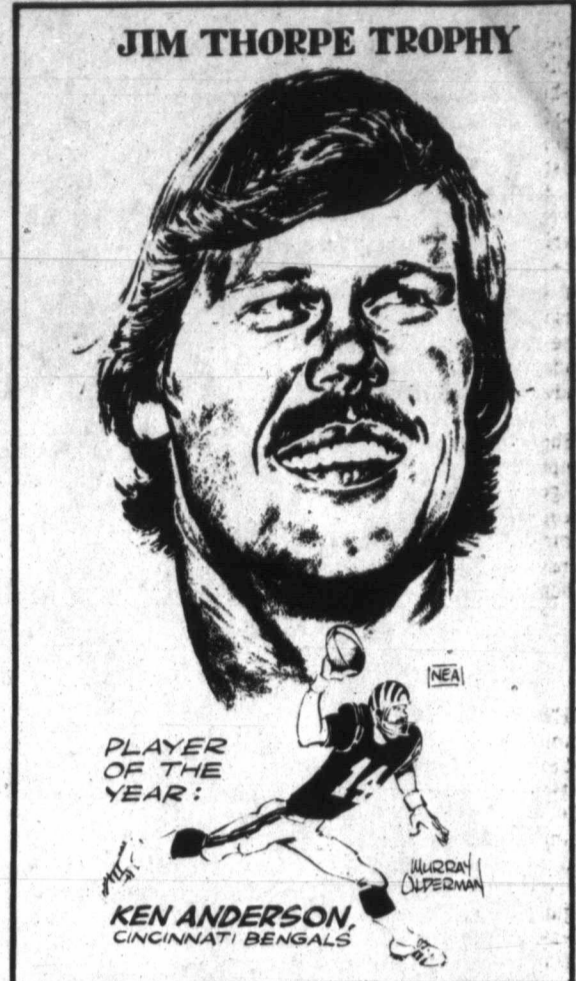

For Anderson, it was a triumph of perseverance and talent.

For a full decade, Anderson, who came out of little Augustana College in Illinois, a second-round draft choice in 1971, was among the premier passers in the NFL. In fact, he led the league in passing in 1974 and 1975. His name is in the record book for completing 20 of 22 passes against the Pittsburgh Steelers on Nov. 10, 1974, the highest completion percentage (90.91) in a game in NFL history.

But both the Bengals and Anderson declined in the three years before 1981, the team finishing last in the AFC Central Division and Anderson suffering through a series of injuries — knee, sternum, ankle — that impaired his productivity, imperiled his job and even threatened to curtail his career.

Ken had an alternative. Last July, he received his degree in law from Chase College of Law, Northern Kentucky University. (He also grew a mustache.)

More important to his football career, though, he reported to the Bengals for his 11th season in top shape, managed to avoid major injuries and emerged from the 16-game ordeal as the Player of the Year.
He led the surprising Bengals to the division championship with a 12-4 record, and he led the entire NFL in passing with an impressive rating of 98.5. Included in his statistics were career highs for pass completions (300), yards gained (3,754) and touchdown passes (29). His completion percentage (62.6) and interception ratio (2.1) were also the best in the league.

Anderson, a fine athlete with a limber arm and good mobility, exuded the confidence of experience and achievement in this phenomenal season, which propelled him to pro football's highest honor.
Previous winners of the NEA Jim Thorpe Trophy include:
1980-79-78 — Earl Campbell, rb, Houston; 1977 — Walter Payton, rb, Chicago; 1976 — Bert Jones, qb, Baltimore; 1975 — Fran Tarkenton, qb, Minnesota; 1974 — Ken Stabler, qb, Oakland; 1973 — O.J. Simpson, rb, Buffalo; 1972 — Larry Brown, rb, Washington; 1971 — Bob Griese, qb, Miami.

1970 — John Brodie, qb, San Francisco; 1969 — Roman Gabriel, qb, Los Angeles; 1968 — Earl Morrall, qb, Baltimore; 1967 — John Unitas, qb, Baltimore; 1966 — Bart Starr, qb, Green Bay; 1965 — Jim Brown, rb, Cleveland; 1964 — Lenny Moore, rb, Baltimore; 1963 — (tie) Jim Brown, rb, Cleveland; and Y.A. Tittle, qb, N.Y. Giants; 1962 — Jim Taylor, rb, Green Bay; 1961 — Y.A. Tittle, qb, N.Y. Giants.

BYU's McMahon receives O'Brien award

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Senior Jim McMahon capped his career at Brigham Young University by winning the Davey O'Brien award as the nation's outstanding quarterback.
But McMahon is looking forward — not back. He wants a career in the National Football League.
McMahon, who broke 55 NCAA records while at BYU and tied another, accepted the O'Brien award Monday night during a banquet at The Fort Worth Club, along with a $10,000 scholarship for his school.
The award is named after the late Heisman Trophy winner, who was also an

All-America at Texas Christian University.
McMahon said that NFL teams readying for the April draft have contacted him, and that he is definitely interested.
"I've had 20 doctors check out my knee (which was hyper-extended midway through his senior year), but they say that it is fine. I really don't care where I play, but I just don't intend to sit on the bench very long. I want to play," he said.
"Baltimore, Chicago and Houston seem the most interested in me," he said. "I've spoken with Ron Meyer (the new coach of the New England Patriots, who has the number one pick), but he said nothing about drafting me first."

McMahon said that of all his NCAA records, he was most proud of his 84 touchdown passes.
"That is the record that I cherish the most because when you get the ball into the end zone you have accomplished something," he said. "There are a lot of quarterbacks who can get yardage but can't score the touchdowns."
"I think an award like this honoring the quarterbacks is really great," said McMahon. "It's nice to get a national award that a Southern California tailback doesn't win."

BYU Coach Lavell Edwards praised McMahon as the most intelligent quarterback he had ever coached.
"I have not had any other quarterbacks with as strong an arm or as quick a release. If a team wants to go to the Super Bowl, they should draft Jim McMahon," he said.
"This is going to become one of the three great honors for college football players in the future ... the Heisman, the Outland and the Davey O'Brien — and not necessarily in that order," Edwards said.

"The quarterback on a football team is like the center in basketball and the pitcher in baseball and it's good that they now have an award. In the recent years, it seems like the Heisman has gone to the top runningback in the country," he said.
Congressman Jack Kemp, R-New York, who once quarterbacked the Buffalo Bills, gave the main address at the fifth awards dinner.
Previously, the O'Brien award went to the outstanding player in the country. Winners include Earl Campbell, Billy Sims and Mike Singletary.

Too Tall Jones on list of free agents

NEW YORK (AP) — The best example of an immovable object in the National Football League is a free agent.
Baltimore Colts quarterback Bert Jones and Atlanta Falcons wide receiver Alfred Jenkins were among 149 NFL players who became free agents Monday. They are the last crop of free agents under the collective bargaining agreement between the NFL Players Association and the league.

That league and its players must negotiate a new contract this year, and free agency is bound to be an issue.
As far as the players are concerned, free agency is an illusion because of the heavy compensation a team must pay to the club losing a free agent. Only Norm Thompson has managed to take advantage of the NFL's free-agent rule since the contract went into effect in 1977. Thompson, a defensive back, went from St. Louis to Baltimore after the 1977 season.

"It's no big deal," said Cincinnati center Dave Lapham, one of the 149 free agents. "It won't be newsworthy. It's very overrated."
But a talented array of free agents will be available this year, including seven Pro Bowlers — Jenkins, defensive end Ed Jones of Dallas, linebacker Bob Swenson and defensive back Bill Thompson of Denver, tackle Leon Gray and wide receiver-kick returner Carl Roaches of Houston, and linebacker Ted Hendricks of Oakland.

Also available are quarterbacks Craig Morton of Denver and Joe Theismann of Washington; wide receiver Charlie Joiner of San Diego; running backs Roland Hooks and Roosevelt Leaks of Buffalo, and Rob Carpenter of the New York Giants, and kickers Nick Mike-Mayer of Buffalo and Efen Herrera of Seattle.
Herrera seemed disappointed that the Seahawks allowed him to become a free agent.
"I don't know if it is strictly dollars and cents, trying to get rid of veterans to save money and forget about winning," he said. "We don't have too many veterans on this team. As soon as players get there, they get rid of them somehow."

Herrera said an offer received from the Seahawks two weeks ago simply was meant to retain the club's right of first refusal.
"I'm not going to accept," Herrera said. "I'm going to test the market. I've been sending letters to all the teams in the league. We're trying to find hope, somebody can call me."
"A lot of teams need a good reliable kicker. I consider myself one of the top," he said. "I'm not talking too much money. I just want to be one of the best paid kickers."
The NFL said the New York Jets were the only team in the league without a free agent.

Record high jumper to be honored

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
How high can man soar? To the moon, if he's an astronaut, maybe some day to 20 feet if he's a pole vaulter and would you believe eight feet on a running high jump?
"Why not?" surmises John Thomas, the first to break the seven-foot barrier. "It has been shown that a man can go over a bar a foot above his height."
"Athletes are getting taller, faster, more agile, more mobile. A guy will come along, like Wilt Chamberlain, and go over eight feet. The ultimate height? There's no such thing as long as the physical assets change in human beings."
Thomas was a 17-year-old Boston University freshman when he sailed over the bar at seven feet on Jan. 31, 1959 in the Millrose Games, establishing a new standard for all high-jumpers. In the ensuing 10 years, he was to attain and exceed that mark 191 times while winning medals in two Olympics and building on his series of world records.

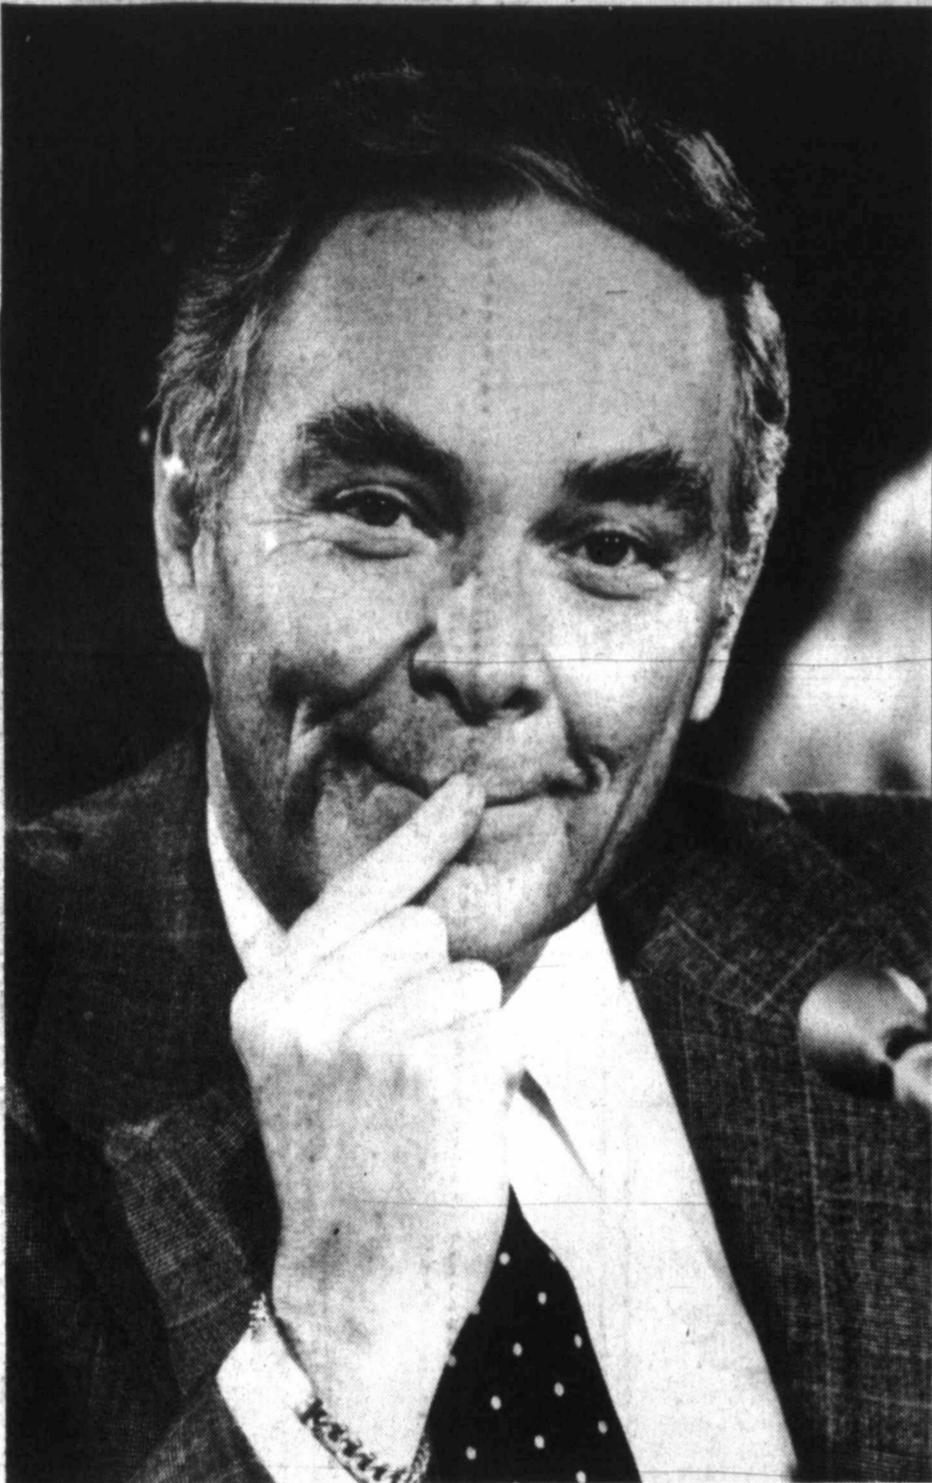

Thomas, who retired in 1968 after knee trouble kept him off his third U.S. Olympic team, is now a successful 40-year-old Boston businessman. There are light specks of white in his hair. His once stringbean frame has filled out to a robust 6-foot-6, 235 pounds.
"I didn't stop growing until I was 31," the onetime prodigy confessed during a brief visit to New York Monday.
Thomas is returning to the scene of some of his greatest triumphs Feb. 12 when the Wanamaker-Millrose Games will bestow on him the highest honor in its history by citing his seven-foot leap 23 years ago as the event's "Most Memorable Moment."
"When I jumped seven feet, I thought that would be the highlight of my career," Thomas said. "Then I began to set other world records. I twice made the Olympic team. Then, more recently, I was sure that I had hit the peak when Boston, celebrating its 350th anniversary, included me among the 27 athletes cited for contributions to the city over that long period."
"Now comes this. There is great satisfaction and pride in knowing that only one man has this honor — and it's me."

Thomas leaves another imperishable spike-sprint on this traditional Garden track and field extravaganza. The high jump is called the John Thomas High Jump and Thomas returns every year to make the presentation of the trophy carrying his name.
There was a time when it appeared this career would never reach full fruition.
A month and a half after his sensational seven-foot jump, Thomas got his left foot caught in an elevator shaft and first prognoses were that he may never be able to jump again.
The accident occurred March 24, 1959, less than two months after he had broken the seven-foot barrier. Thomas credits Dr. Chester Howe, chief surgeon at Massachusetts General Hospital, with restoring his injured foot.
Skin was taken from his thigh and grafted onto his damaged foot. To improve his mobility, he took two years of ballet lessons at the Boston Conservatory of Music.
Thomas made the 1960 U.S. Olympic team, winning the bronze medal in Rome. Four years later, he gained a silver medal at Tokyo, both times tying with his longtime Russian rival, Valery Brumel.

Sliker leads BPAA open

HOUSTON (AP) — Gil Sliker has never won a professional bowling tournament title. But he got off to a good start in the Bowling Proprietors Association of America U.S. Open.
Sliker, of Nashua, N.H., rolled an 1,818 series for eight games to take the lead Monday in the first round of the BPAA.
Sliker finished ahead of defending champion Marshall Holeman, who struggled through the first round, averaging 196 and finishing with 1,573.
A total of 240 professional bowlers are competing in the tournament, which concludes Saturday.
Sliker averaged 227, including games of 278 and 255. Joe Hutchinson, of Scranton, Pa., was second with 1,762 and a 722 series.
Don Genalo of North Merrick, N.Y., came in third with 1,753, followed by Jeff Morin of Cleveland with 1,734, and Mike Cox, of Angleton, Texas, with 1,715.
Sliker finished ninth in the 1981 PBA money standing with $64,185.

LIGHT MOMENT. Gen. Alexander Haig, President-elect Ronald Reagan's choice for Secretary of State back in January, 1981, manages to smile during questioning by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Capitol Hill during his confirmation hearings. Haig's peculiar manner of speaking, which has become famous since the hearings, is now called "Haig-speak."

Vicar of foreign policy

EDITOR'S NOTE — The title is secretary of state. The role is chief diplomat of the United States. The man is Alexander M. Haig Jr., creator of "Haig-speak," vicar of American foreign policy. Controversy is his frequent companion.

R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alexander Meigs Haig Jr., whose mandate was to be the vicar of American foreign policy, considers his signal accomplishment something considerably more humble: "I survived."

Much of his first year was tough and go. "Dicey," to use one of his favorite words.

With the new year, maybe, just maybe, the secretary of state has seen the last of the White House guerrilla fighter he thinks tried to undermine him. That would be a relief for Haig, who at times has seemed to worry more about his relations with the White House than about American relations abroad.

As the nation's top diplomat, Haig has revived a form of brinkmanship, rhetorically at least, and he has found a short route to the center of controversy. He makes clear he likes it there.

And he has introduced Haig-speak into the English language, a way of communicating in which verbs become nouns and nouns become verbs. It is bureaucratic smoking.

"I want to caveat that," he'll say. "Let me context that for you."

Poland to Alexander Haig has been one of a number of watch-pots. China he calls a demographic asset. He thinks terrorism is hemorrhaging.

This is the public Al Haig, the one who tries to stare down a congressman who asks a question he doesn't like, who outraged church leaders by suggesting that three American Catholic nuns and a fourth churchwoman killed by security forces in El Salvador may have tried to run a military roadblock.

This is the square-jawed Haig who looks and acts tough, who talks as if he had an MX missile in his pocket ready for use against Khadafy, Castro, or anyone else who crosses him.

There is also a Haig of calm, reasoned diplomacy: the Haig who apparently held a secret meeting with Cuba's vice president in Mexico City in late November at a time of mounting unpleasantness with the Communist island government.

The tough Haig goes to the edge of conflict, then gives way to the diplomatic Haig.

When the crisis is really serious, as it was in Poland, this Haig cautioned against harsh rhetoric to avoid aggravating matters.

This Haig relaxes easily. He was in Brussels at a NATO conference and preparing to go to six other countries when the Polish government declared martial law. Crisply, Haig canceled the rest of his trip, made plans to come home — and went out to play tennis first.

A lot of Haig's bluster, aides say, is calculated. For instance, in his statements about Nicaragua he felt he could induce its government to think twice about aiding guerrillas in San Salvador by hinting at reprisals. "He likes to keep them guessing," as one aide put it.

Controversy is Haig's frequent companion; he makes news. During Watergate, when he acted as a buffer between a hostile world and Richard Nixon, Haig insisted in court that "a sinister force" was responsible for the 18½-minute erasure of a crucial Nixon tape.

More recently, his public complaint that a high White House official was conducting a "guerrilla campaign" against him drew skepticism even from President Reagan. Haig never identified the guerrilla, but all of Washington seized on one man: National Security Adviser Richard Allen, finally ousted by Reagan.

Haig's relationship with Allen was nothing less than open warfare. Things got so unruly that finally Reagan summoned both men and told them to cut it out.

This month, Clark replaced Allen as national security adviser

Indians argue against state game laws on reservation

INDIAN VILLAGE, Texas (AP) — The Alabama and Coushatta Indian tribes have hunted the dense forests of their East Texas reservation for almost 130 years without interference from the state of Texas.

But now the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is trying to strip them of their traditional hunting rights and force them to comply with state game laws.

Boyd Johnson, counsel for the Parks and Wildlife Department, claims Indians are not exempt from state law and he has asked state Attorney General Mark White for an opinion on whether the wildlife code can be enforced on the 4,600-acre reservation.

Roland Poncho, superintendent of the 500-member Polk County reservation, said he is enraged at the state's attempt to wrest management of the reservation's wildlife from the tribal council, which he claims is given the right to control hunting by tradition and state law.

"Our people have hunted in these woods since coming here long ago," Poncho said. "It's a traditional thing. Not everybody hunts, but those who do might kill seven or eight deer, then distribute the meat to elderly tribe members of others who can't hunt."

Texas law requires all hunters to be licensed and limits the number of game an individual can kill during a season.

So when game wardens Robert Hall, of Livingston, and Donald Robertson, of Blanchard, spotted Lyndon Alec, 19, butchering a doe outside his reservation home last November, they asked to see his hunting license.

He didn't have one. Neither did Clayton "Smiley" Sylestine, 49, former chairman of the Alabama-Coushatta Tribal Council and a forester Hall and Robertson discovered a few minutes later butchering two does and a duck.

"We were just driving down the road when we saw them cleaning those deer. It didn't enter my mind at the time that the Indians might be different from anybody else," Hall said.

After checking with a supervisor, the officers arrested Alec and Sylestine, even though both men insisted they had hunted all their lives on the reservation and had never needed a license.

The game wardens took the pair before Polk County Justice of the Peace Doris Armstrong.

Mrs. Armstrong said she believed the Indians' story and agreed to release Alec and Sylestine on their own recognizance until the legal question could be answered.

Parks and Wildlife officials dropped the charges against the pair a few days later, and after meeting with tribal leaders agreed to allow the Indians to hunt as they had done for years — without supervision — until Jan. 3 when the hunting season closed.

But the conflict in state law remains, and Johnson said he expects the attorney general to rule that hunting laws apply to the reservation.
